PLAYS

By JOHN GALSWORTHY

This volume, containing all the plays Mr. Galsworthy has written up to the present time—including "Escape"—is uniform with "The Forsyte Saga" and "Caravan," and bears the same extraordinarily low price for a volume of its size.

John Galsworthy as a dramatist commands an audience quite as large and enthusiastic as that which reads his novels and short stories. A Galsworthy play is always an event of the theatrical season. "The Pigeon," "The Silver Box," "Justice," "Loyalties," "Escape"—but to name the plays by John Galsworthy that have been outstanding successes would be to give in detail the contents of this book. Here they are gathered together for the first time, twenty-five in all, nineteen long dramas and six one-act plays, all just as appealing to the reader as they were to the listener in the theatre. For students of the drama, for theatre-goers who wish to recapture in the library the swift action and brilliant dialogue of the stage, and for lovers of good literature in general this volume is indispensable.

THE SILVER BOX

A COMEDY IN THREE ACTS

ACT I

SCENE I

curtain rises on the BARTHWICK'S dining-room, modern, and well furnished; the window curtains drawn. Electric light is burning. On the large round dining-table is set out a tray with whisky, a syphon, and a silver cigarette-box. It is past midnight.

umbling is heard outside the door, which is opened suddenly; and JACK BARTHWICK seems to fall into the room. He stands holding by the door knob, staring before him, with a beatific smile. He is in evening dress and opera hat, and carries in his hand a sky-blue velvet lady's reticule. His boyish face is freshly coloured and clean-shaven. An overcoat is hanging on his arm.

ACK. Hallo! I've got home all ri——triantly] Who says I sh'd never've med th' door without 'sistance. [He ggers in, fumbling with the reticule. lady's handkerchief and purse of mson silk fall out] Serve her joll' ll right—everything droppin' out. Th' . I've scored her off—I've got her g. [He swings the reticule] Serves joll' well right. [He takes a cigate out of the silver box and puts it his mouth] Never gave tha' fellow ything! [He hunts through all his ckets and pulls a shilling out; it drops d rolls away. He looks for it] Beastly lling! [He looks again] Base ingratide! Absolutely nothing [He laughs] us' tell him I've got absolutely nothg.

He lurches through the door and down a corridor, and presently returns, followed by JONES, who is advanced in liquor. JONES, about thirty years of age, has hollow cheeks, black circles around his eyes, and rusty clothes. He looks as though he might be unemployed, and enters in a hang-dog manner.

JACK. Sh! sh! sh! Don't you make a noise, whatever you do. Shu' the door, an' have a drink. [Very solemnly] You helped me to open the door—I've got nothin' for you. This is my house. My father's name's Barthwick; he's Member of Parliament—Liberal Member of Parliament: I've told you that before. Have a drink! [He pours out whisky and drinks it up] I'm not drunk—— [Subsiding on a sofa] Tha's all right. Wha's your name? My name's Barthwick, so's my father's; I'm a Liberal too—wha're you?

JONES. [In a thick, sardonic voice] I'm a bloomin' Conservative. My name's Jones! My wife works 'ere; she's the char; she works 'ere.

JACK. Jones? [He laughs] There's 'nother Jones at college with me. I'm not a Socialist myself; I'm a Liberal—there's ve'lill difference, because of the principles of the Lib—Liberal Party. We're all equal before the law —tha's rot, tha's silly. [Laughs] Wha' was I about to say? Give me some whisky.

JONES gives him the whisky he desires, together with a squirt of syphon.

JACK. Wha' I was goin' tell you was —I've had a row with her. [He waves the reticule] Have a drink, Jones—sh'd never have got in without you—tha's why I'm giving you a drink. Don' care who knows I've scored her off. Th' cat! [He throws his feet up on the sofa]

Don' you make a noise, whatever you do. You pour out a drink—you make yourself good long, long drink—you take cigarette—you take anything you like. Sh'd never have got in without you. [Closing his eyes] You're a Tory—you're a Tory-Socialist. I'm Liberal myself—have a drink—I'm an excel'nt chap.

His head drops back. He, smiling, falls asleep, and JONES stands looking at him; then, snatching up JACK'S glass, he drinks it off. He picks the reticule from off JACK'S shirt-front, holds it to the light, and smells at it.

JONES. Been on the tiles and brought 'ome some of yer cat's fur.

[He stuffs it into JACK'S breast pocket.

JACK. [Murmuring] I've scored you off! You cat!

JONES looks around him furtively; he pours out whisky and drinks it. From the silver box he takes a cigarette, puffs at it, and drinks more whisky. There is no sobriety left in him.

JONES. Fat lot o' things they've got 'ere [He sees the crimson purse lying on the floor] More cats' fur. Puss, puss! [He fingers it, drops it on the tray, and looks at JACK] Calf! Fat calf! [He sees his own presentment in a mirror. Lifting his hands, with fingers spread, he stares at it; then looks again at JACK, clenching his fist as if to batter in his sleeping, smiling face. Suddenly he tilts the rest of the whisky into the glass and drinks it. With cunning glee he takes the silver box and purse and pockets them] I'll score you off too, that's wot I'll do!

He gives a little snarling laugh and lurches to the door. His shoulder rubs against the switch; the light goes out. There is a sound as of a closing outer door.

The curtain falls.

The curtain rises again at once.

SCENE II

In the BARTHWICK'S dining-room. JACK is still asleep; the morning light is coming through the curtains. T time is half-past eight. WHEELE brisk person, enters with a dus pan, and MRS. JONES more slow with a scuttle.

WHEELER. [Drawing the curtain That precious husband of yours w round for you after you'd gone ye terday, Mrs. Jones. Wanted your mone for drink, I suppose. He hangs abo the corner here half the time. I sa him outside the "Goat and Bells" whe I went to the post last night. If I we you I wouldn't live with him. I wouldn live with a man that raised his hand t me. I wouldn't put up with it. Wh don't you take the children and leav him? If you put up with 'im it'll onl make him worse. I never can see wh because a man's married you, he shoul knock you about.

MRS. JONES. [Slim, dark-eyed, an dark-haired; oval-faced, and with smooth, soft, even voice; her manne patient, her way of talking quite imper sonal; she wears a blue linen dress, an boots with holes] It was nearly two las night before he come home, and h wasn't himself. He made me get u and he knocked me about; he didn seem to know what he was saying o doing. Of course I would leave him, bu I'm really afraid of what he'd do t me. He's such a violent man when he' not himself.

WHEELER. Why don't you get hi locked up? You'll never have any peac until you get him locked up. If I wer you I'd go to the police court to-mor row. That's what I'd do.

MRS. JONES. Of course I ought to g because he does treat me so badly whe he's not himself. But you see, Bettina he has a very hard time—he's been ou of work two months, and it preys upo his mind. When he's in work he be haves himself much better. It's whe he's out of work that he's so violent.

WHEELER. Well, if you don't take an steps you'll never get rid of him.

MRS. JONES. Of course it's very wea ing to me; I don't get my sleep a night. And it's not as if I were gettin help from him, because I have to do fo children and all of us. And he ws such dreadful things up at me, s of my having men to follow me ıt. Such a thing never happens; no . ever speaks to me. And of course just the other way. It's what he does 's wrong and makes me so un- py. And then he's always threatenin' ut my throat if I leave him. It's all drink, and things preying on his d; he's not a bad man really. Some- :s he'll speak quite kind to me, but stood so much from him, I don't it in me to speak kind back, but just) myself to myself. And he's all t with the children, too, except when not himself.

VHEELER. You mean when he's nk, the beauty.

IRS. JONES. Yes. [Without change of e] There's the young gentleman ep on the sofa.

They both look silently at JACK.

IRS. JONES. [At last, in her so't e] He doesn't look quite himself.

VHEELER. He's a young li ab, that's at he is. It's my belief he was tipsy night, like your husband. It's an- er kind of bein' out of work that him to drink. I'll go and tell Mar- . This is his job. [She goes.

MRS. JONES, upon her knees, begins a gentle sweeping.

ACK. [Waking] Who's there? What t?

IRS. JONES. It's me, sir, Mrs. Jones.

ACK. [Sitting up and looking round] ere is it—what—what time is it?

IRS. JONES. It's getting on for nine ock, sir.

ACK. For nine! Why—what! [Ris- and loosening his tongue; putting d to his head, and staring hard at S. JONES] Look here, you, Mrs.— s. Jones—don't you say you caught asleep here.

IRS. JONES. No, sir, of course I 't, sir.

ACK. It's quite an accident; I don't w how it happened. I must have for- en to go to bed. It's a queer thing. got a most beastly headache. Mind don't say anything, Mrs. Jones.

Goes out and passes MARLOW in the doorway. MARLOW is young and quiet; he is clean-shaven, and his hair is brushed high from his forehead in a coxcomb. Incidentally a butler, he is first a man. He looks at MRS. JONES, and smiles a private smile.

MARLOW. Not the first time, and won't be the last. Looked a bit dicky, eh, Mrs. Jones?

MRS. JONES. He didn't look quite himself. Of course I didn't take notice.

MARLOW. You're used to them. How's your old man?

MRS. JONES. [Softly as throughout] Well, he was very bad last night; he didn't seem to know what he was about. He was very late, and he was most abusive. But now, of course, he's asleep.

MARLOW. That's his way of finding a job, eh?

MRS. JONES. As a rule, Mr. Marlow, he goes out early every morning looking for work, and sometimes he comes in fit to drop—and of course I can't say he doesn't try to get it, because he does. Trade's very bad. [She stands quite still, her pan and brush before her, at the beginning and the end of long vistas of experience, traversing them with her impersonal eye] But he's not a good husband to me—last night he hit me, and he was so dreadfully abusive.

MARLOW. Bank 'oliday, eh! He's too fond of the "Goat and Bells," that's what's the matter with him. I see him at the corner late every night. He hangs about.

MRS. JONES. He gets to feeling very low walking about all day after work, and being refused so often, and then when he gets a drop in him it goes to his head. But he shouldn't treat his wife as he treats me. Sometimes I've had to go and walk about at night, when he wouldn't let me stay in the room; but he's sorry for it afterwards. And he hangs about after me, he waits for me in the street; and I don't think he ought to because I've always been a good wife to him. And I tell him Mrs. Barthwick wouldn't like him coming about the place. But that only makes him angry, and he says dreadful things about the gentry. Of course it was through me that he first lost his place, through his not treating me right; and that's made him bitter against the gentry. He had a very good place as groom in the country; but it made such a stir, because of course he didn't treat me right.

MARLOW. Got the sack?

MRS. JONES. Yes; his employer said he couldn't keep him, because there was a great deal of talk; and he said it was such a bad example. But it's very important for me to keep my work here; I have the three children, and I don't want him to come about after me in the streets, and make a disturbance as he sometimes does.

MARLOW. [Holding up the empty decanter] Not a drain! Next time he hits you get a witness and go down to the court——

MRS. JONES. Yes, I think I've made up my mind. I think I ought to.

MARLOW. That's right. Where's the ciga——?

He searches for the silver box; he looks at MRS. JONES, who is sweeping on her hands and knees; he checks himself and stands reflecting. From the tray he picks two half-smoked cigarettes, and reads the name on them.

MARLOW. Nestor—where the deuce ——?

With a meditative air he looks again at MRS. JONES, and, taking up JACK'S overcoat, he searches in the pockets. WHEELER, with a tray of breakfast things, comes in.

MARLOW. [Aside to WHEELER] Have you seen the cigarette box?

WHEELER. No.

MARLOW. Well, it's gone, I put it on the tray last night. And he's been smoking. [Showing her the ends of cigarette] It's not in these pockets. He can't have taken it upstairs this morning! Have a good look in his room when he comes down. Who's been in here?

WHEELER. Only me and Mrs. Jones.

MRS. JONES. I've finished here; shall I do the drawing-room now?

WHEELER. [Looking at her doubtfully] Have you seen—— Better do the boudwower first.

MRS. JONES goes out with pan and brush. MARLOW and WHEEL look each other in the face.

MARLOW. It'll turn up.

WHEELER. [Hesitating] You do think she—— [Nodding at the do

MARLOW. [Stoutly] I don't—I nev believes anything of anybody.

WHEELER. But the master'll have be told.

MARLOW. You wait a bit, and see if don't turn up. Suspicion's no business ours. I set my mind against it.

The curtain falls.

The curtain rises again at once.

SCENE III

BARTHWICK and MRS. BARTHWICK a seated at the breakfast table. He a man between fifty and sixt quietly important, with a bald for head, and pince-nez, and t "Times" in his hand. She is a la of nearly fifty, well dressed, wi greyish hair, good features, and decided manner. They face ea other.

BARTHWICK. [From behind his pape The Labour man has got in at the b election for Barnside, my dear.

MRS. BARTHWICK. Another Labour? can't think what on earth the count is about.

BARTHWICK. I predicted it. It's not matter of vast importance.

MRS. BARTHWICK. Not? How c you take it so calmly, John? To me i simply outrageous. And there you s you Liberals, and pretend to encoura these people!

BARTHWICK. [Frowning] The repr sentation of all parties is necessary f any proper reform, for any proper s cial policy.

MRS. BARTHWICK. I've no patien with your talk of reform—all that no sense about social policy. We know pe fectly well what it is they want; th want things for themselves. Those S cialists and Labour men are an abs lutely selfish set of people. They've sense of patriotism, like the upp classes, they simply want what we' got.

ARTHWICK. Want what we've got! e stares into space] My dear, what you talking about? [With a contor-] I'm no alarmist.

IRS. BARTHWICK. Cream? Quite un-icated men! Wait until they begin to our investments. I'm convinced that en they once get a chance they'll tax rything—they've no feeling for the intry. You Liberals and Conserva-s, you're all alike; you don't see an h before your noses. You've no im-nation, not a scrap of imaginati n be-een you. You ought to join hands and it in the bud.

ARTHWICK. You're talking nonsense! w is it possible for Liberals and Con-vatives to join hands, as you call it? at shows how absurd it is for men—— Why, the very essence of a beral is to trust in the people!

IRS. BARTHWICK. Now, John, eat ur breakfast. As if there were any il difference between you and the nservatives. All the upper classes ve the same interests to protect, and e same principles. [Calmly] You're ting upon a volcano, John.

BARTHWICK. What!

MRS. BARTHWICK. I read a letter in e paper yesterday. I forget the man's me, but it made the whole thing per-ctly clear. You don't look things in e face.

BARTHWICK. Indeed! [Heavily] I am Liberal! Drop the subject, please!

MRS. BARTHWICK. Toast? I quite gree with what this man says: Educa-on is simply ruining the lower classes. unsettles them, and that's the worst ing for us all. I see an enormous dif-erence in the manner of servants.

BARTHWICK. [With suspicious em-hasis] I welcome any change that will ead to something better. [He opens a tter] H'm! This is that affair of Mas-er Jack's again. "High Street, Oxford. ir, We have received Mr. John Barth-rick, Senior's, draft for forty pounds." Oh! the letter's to him! "We now en-lose the cheque you cashed with us, which, as we stated in our previous let-er, was not met on presentation at your ank. We are, Sir, yours obediently, Moss and Sons, Tailors." H'm! [Star-ing at the cheque] A pretty business al-together! The boy might have been prosecuted.

MRS. BARTHWICK. Come, John. you know Jack didn't mean anything; he only thought he was overdrawing. I still think his bank ought to have cashed that cheque. They must know your posi-tion.

BARTHWICK. [Replacing in the enve-lope the letter and the cheque] Much good that would have done him in a court of law.

He stops as JACK comes in, fasten-ing his waistcoat and staunching a razor cut upon his chin.

JACK. [Sitting down between them, and speaking with an artificial joviality] Sorry I'm late. [He looks lugubriously at the dishes] Tea, please, Mother. Any letters for me? [BARTHWICK hands the letter to him] But look here, I say, this has been opened! I do wish you wouldn't—— BARTHWICK. [Touching the envelope] I suppose I'm entitled to this name.

JACK. [Sulkily] Well, I can't help having your name, Father! [He reads the letter, and mutters] Brutes!

BARTHWICK. [Eyeing him] You don't deserve to be so well out of that.

JACK. Haven't you ragged me enough, Dad?

MRS. BARTHWICK. Yes, John, let Jack have his breakfast.

BARTHWICK. If you hadn't had me to come to, where would you have been? It's the merest accident—suppose you had been the son of a poor man or a clerk. Obtaining money with a cheque you knew your bank couldn't meet. It might have ruined you for life. I can't see what's to become of you if these are your principles. I never did anything of the sort myself.

JACK. I expect you always had lots of money. If you've got plenty of money, of course——

BARTHWICK. On the contrary, I had not your advantages. My father kept me very short of money.

JACK. How much had you, Dad?

BARTHWICK. It's not material. The question is, do you feel the gravity of what you did?

JACK. I don't know about the gravity. Of course, I'm very sorry if you think it was wrong. Haven't I said so; I should never have done it at all if I hadn't been so jolly hard up.

BARTHWICK. How much of that forty pounds have you got left, Jack?

JACK. [Hesitating] I don't know—not much.

BARTHWICK. How much?

JACK. [Desperately] I haven't got any.

BARTHWICK. What?

JACK. I know I've got the most beastly headache.

[He leans his head on his hand.

MRS. BARTHWICK. Headache? My dear boy! Can't you eat any breakfast?

JACK. [Drawing in his breath] Too jolly bad!

MRS. BARTHWICK. I'm so sorry. Come with me, dear; I'll give you something that will take it away at once.

They leave the room; and BARTHWICK, tearing up the letter, goes to the fireplace and puts the pieces in the fire. While he is doing this MARLOW comes in, and, looking round him, is about quietly to withdraw.

BARTHWICK. What's that? What d'you want?

MARLOW. I was looking for Mr. John, sir.

BARTHWICK. What d'you want Mr. John for?

MARLOW. [With hesitation] I thought I should find him here, sir.

BARTHWICK. [Suspiciously] Yes, but what do you want him for?

MARLOW. [Offhandedly] There's a lady called—asked to speak to him for a minute, sir.

BARTHWICK. A lady, at this time in the morning. What sort of a lady?

MARLOW. [Without expression in his voice] I can't tell, sir; no particular sort. She might be after charity. She might be a Sister of Mercy, I should think, sir.

BARTHWICK. Is she dressed like one?

MARLOW. No, sir, she's in plain clothes, sir.

BARTHWICK. Didn't she say what she wanted?

MARLOW. No, sir.

BARTHWICK. Where did you lea her?

MARLOW. In the hall, sir.

BARTHWICK. In the hall? How do y know she's not a thief—not got desig on the house?

MARLOW. No, sir, I don't fancy sir.

BARTHWICK. Well, show her in her I'll see her myself.

MARLOW goes out with a privo gesture of dismay. He soon r turns ushering in a young pe lady with dark eyes and pret figure, in a modish black, b rather shabby dress, a black a white trimmed hat with a bun of Parma violets wrongly place and fuzzy-spotted veil. At t sight of MR. BARTHWICK she e hibits every sign of nervousnes MARLOW goes out.

UNKNOWN LADY. Oh! but—I b pardon—there's some mistake—I—

[She turns to f

BARTHWICK. Whom did you want see, madam?

UNKNOWN. [Stopping and lookir back] It was Mr. John Barthwick wanted to see.

BARTHWICK. I am John Barthwic madam. What can I have the pleasu of doing for you?

UNKNOWN. Oh! I—I don't——

She drops her eyes. BARTHWIC scrutinises her, and purses h lips.

BARTHWICK. It was my son, perhap you wished to see?

UNKNOWN. [Quickly] Yes, of cours it's your son.

BARTHWICK. May I ask whom I hav the pleasure of speaking to?

UNKNOWN. [Appeal and hardine upon her face] My name is—oh! it doe n't matter—I don't want to make a fuss. I just want to see your son for minute. [Boldly] In fact, I must s him.

BARTHWICK. [Controlling his u easiness] My son is not very we If necessary, no doubt I could atter to the matter; be so kind as to let n know——

JNKNOWN. Oh! but I must see him
've come on purpose—— [She bursts nervously] I don't want to make any s, but the fact is, last—last night r son took away—he took away my — [She stops.
BARTHWICK. [Severely] Yes, madam,
at?
JNKNOWN. He took away my—my cule.
BARTHWICK. Your reti——?
JNKNOWN. I don't care about the icule; it's not that I want—I'm sure lon't want to make any fuss—[Her e is quivering]—but—but—all my ney was in it!
BARTHWICK. In what—in what?
JNKNOWN. In my purse, in the reti-
e. It was a crimson silk purse. Really, vouldn't have come—but I must get money back—mustn't I?
BARTHWICK. Do you tell me that my t——?
JNKNOWN. Oh! well you see, he was-quite—I mean he was——
[She smiles mesmerically.
BARTHWICK. I beg your pardon.
UNKNOWN. [Stamping her foot] Oh!
n't you see—tipsy! We had a quar-
BARTHWICK. [Scandalised] How?
here?
UNKNOWN. [Defiantly] At my place.
e'd had supper at the —— and your n—— BARTHWICK. [Pressing the bell] May ask how you knew this house? Did give you his name and address?
UNKNOWN. [Glancing sidelong] I got out of his overcoat.
BARTHWICK. [Sardonically] Oh, you t it out of his overcoat. And may I k if my son will know you by day-ht?
UNKNOWN. Know me? I should jolly
I mean, of course he will!
MARLOW comes in.
BARTHWICK. Ask Mr. John to come wn.
MARLOW goes out, and BARTHWICK walks uneasily about.
BARTHWICK. And how long have you joyed his acquaintanceship?
UNKNOWN. Only since—only since od Friday.

BARTHWICK. I am at a loss—I repeat I am at a loss——

He glances at this unknown lady, who stands with eyes cast down, twisting her hands. And suddenly JACK appears. He stops on seeing who is here, and the unknown lady hysterically giggles. There is a silence.

BARTHWICK. [Portentously] This young—er—lady says that last night—I think you said last night, madam—you took away——

UNKNOWN. [Impulsively] My reticule, and all my money was in a crimson silk purse.

JACK. Reticule. [Looking round for any chance to get away] I don't know anything about it.

BARTHWICK. [Sharply] Come, do you deny seeing this young lady last night?

JACK. Deny? No, of course. [Whispering] Why did you give me away like this? What on earth did you come here for?

UNKNOWN. [Tearfully] I'm sure I didn't want to—it's not likely, is it? You snatched it out of my hand—you know you did—and the purse had all my money in it. I didn't follow you last night because I didn't want to make a fuss and it was so late, and you were so——

BARTHWICK. Come, sir, don't turn your back on me—explain!

JACK. [Desperately] I don't remember anything about it. [In a low voice to his friend] Why on earth couldn't you have written?

UNKNOWN. [Sullenly] I want it now; I must have it—I've got to pay my rent to-day. [She looks at BARTHWICK] They're only too glad to jump on people who are not—not well off.

JACK. I don't remember anything about it, really. I don't remember anything about last night at all. [He puts his hand up to his head] It's all—cloudy, and I've got such a beastly headache.

UNKNOWN. But you took it; you know you did. You said you'd score me off.

JACK. Well, then, it must be here. I remember now—I remember something. Why did I take the beastly thing?

BARTHWICK. Yes, why did you take the beastly——

[He turns abruptly to the window.

UNKNOWN. [With her mesmeric smile] You weren't quite—were you?

JACK. [Smiling pallidly] I'm awfully sorry. If there's anything I can do——

BARTHWICK. Do? You can restore this property, I suppose.

JACK. I'll go and have a look, but I really don't think I've got it.

He goes out hurriedly. And BARTHWICK, placing a chair, motions to the visitor to sit; then, with pursed lips, he stands and eyes her fixedly. She sits, and steals a look at him; then turns away, and, drawing up her veil, stealthily wipes her eyes. And JACK comes back.

JACK. [Ruefully holding out the empty reticule] Is that the thing? I've looked all over—I can't find the purse anywhere. Are you sure it was there?

UNKNOWN. [Tearfully] Sure? Of course I'm sure. A crimson silk purse. It was all the money I had.

JACK. I really am awfully sorry—my head's so jolly bad. I've asked the butler, but he hasn't seen it.

UNKNOWN. I must have my money

JACK. Oh! Of course—that'll be all right; I'll see that that's all right. How much?

UNKNOWN. [Sullenly] Seven pounds—twelve—it's all I've got in the world.

JACK. That'll be all right; I'll—send you a—cheque.

UNKNOWN. [Eagerly] No, now, please. Give me what was in my purse; I've got to pay my rent this morning. They won't give me another day; I'm a fortnight behind already.

JACK. [Blankly] I'm awfully sorry; I really haven't a penny in my pocket.

[He glances stealthily at BARTHWICK.

UNKNOWN. [Excitedly] Come, I say you must—it's my money, and you took it. I'm not going away without it. They-'ll turn me out of my place.

JACK. [Clasping his head] But I can't give you what I haven't got. Don't tell you I haven't a beastly penny?

UNKNOWN. [Tearing at her handkerchief] Oh! do give it me! [She puts her hands together in appeal; then, with sudden fierceness] If you don't I'll summons you. It's stealing, that's what it is!

BARTHWICK. [Uneasily] One moment please. As a matter of—er—principle I shall settle this claim. [He produces money] Here is eight pounds; the extra will cover the value of the purse and your cab fares. I need make no comment—no thanks are necessary.

Touching the bell, he holds the door ajar in silence. The UNKNOWN LADY stores the money in her reticule, she looks from JACK to BARTHWICK, and her face is quivering faintly with a smile. She hides it with her hand, and steals away. Behind her BARTHWICK shuts the door.

BARTHWICK. [With solemnity] H'm! This is a nice thing to happen!

JACK. [Impersonally] What awful luck!

BARTHWICK. So this is the way that forty pounds has gone! One thing after another! Once more I should like to know where you'd have been if it had n't been for me! You don't seem to have any principles. You—you're one of those who are a nuisance to society; you—you're dangerous! What your mother would say I don't know. Your conduct as far as I can see, is absolutely unjustifiable. It's—it's criminal. Why, a poor man who behaved as you've done . . . d'you think he'd have any mercy shown him? What you want is a good lesson. You and your sort are—[he speaks with feeling]—a nuisance to the community. Don't ask me to help you next time. You're not fit to be helped.

JACK. [Turning upon his sire, with unexpected fierceness] All right, I won't then, and see how you like it. You wouldn't have helped me this time, I know, if you hadn't been scared the thing would get into the papers. Where are the cigarettes?

BARTHWICK. [Regarding him un- ily] Well—I'll say no more about [He rings the bell] I'll pass it over this once, but——

MARLOW comes in.

BARTHWICK. You can clear away.

[He hides his face behind "The Times."

ACK. [Brightening] I say, Marlow, ere are the cigarettes?

MARLOW. I put the box out with the isky last night, sir, but this morn- I can't find it anywhere.

ACK. Did you look in my room?

MARLOW. Yes, sir; I've looked all r the house. I found two Nestor ends the tray this morning, so you must e been smokin' last night, sir. [Hesi- ing] I'm really afraid some one's pur- ed the box.

ACK. [Uneasily] Stolen it!

BARTHWICK. What's that? The ciga- te box! Is anything else missing?

MARLOW. No, sir; I've been through plate.

BARTHWICK. Was the house all right s morning? None of the windows en?

MARLOW. No, sir. [Quietly to JACK] u left your latch-key in the door last ght, sir.

[He hands it back, unseen by BARTHWICK.

JACK. Tst!

BARTHWICK. Who's been in the room is morning?

MARLOW. Me and Wheeler, and Mrs. nes is all, sir, as far as I know.

BARTHWICK. Have you asked Mrs. rthwick? [To JACK] Go and ask your other if she's had it; ask her to look d see if she's missed anything else.

JACK goes upon this mission.

BARTHWICK. Nothing is more dis- ieting than losing things like this.

MARLOW. No, sir.

BARTHWICK. Have you any suspi- ons?

MARLOW. No, sir.

BARTHWICK. This Mrs. Jones—how ng has she been working here?

MARLOW. Only this last month, sir.

BARTHWICK. What sort of person?

MARLOW. I don't know much about r, sir; seems a very quiet, respectable oman.

BARTHWICK. Who did the room this morning?

MARLOW. Wheeler and Mrs. Jones, sir.

BARTHWICK. [With his forefinger up- raised] Now, was this Mrs. Jones in the room alone at any time?

MARLOW. [Expressionless] Yes, sir.

BARTHWICK. How do you know that?

MARLOW. [Reluctantly] I found her here, sir.

BARTHWICK. And has Wheeler been in the room alone?

MARLOW. No, sir, she's not, sir. I should say, sir, that Mrs. Jones seems a very honest—— BARTHWICK. [Holding up his hand] I want to know this: Has this Mrs. Jones been here the whole morning?

MARLOW. Yes, sir—no, sir—she stepped over to the greengrocer's for cook.

BARTHWICK. H'm! Is she in the house now?

MARLOW. Yes, sir.

BARTHWICK. Very good. I shall make a point of clearing this up. On principle I shall make a point of fixing the re- sponsibility; it goes to the foundations of security. In all your interests——

MARLOW. Yes, sir.

BARTHWICK. What sort of circum- stances is this Mrs. Jones in? Is her husband in work?

MARLOW. I believe not, sir.

BARTHWICK. Very well. Say nothing about it to any one. Tell Wheeler not to speak of it, and ask Mrs. Jones to step up here.

MARLOW. Very good, sir.

MARLOW goes out, his face con- cerned; and BARTHWICK stays, his face judicial and a little pleased, as befits a man conduct- ing an inquiry. MRS. BARTHWICK and her son come in.

BARTHWICK. Well, my dear, you've not seen it, I suppose?

MRS. BARTHWICK. No. But what an extraordinary thing, John! Marlow, of course, is out of the question. I'm cer- tain none of the maids—— As for cook!

BARTHWICK. Oh, cook!

MRS. BARTHWICK. Of course! It's perfectly detestable to me to suspect anybody.

BARTHWICK. It is not a question of one's feelings. It's a question of justice. On principle——

MRS. BARTHWICK. I shouldn't be a bit surprised if the charwoman knew something about it. It was Laura who recommended her.

BARTHWICK. [Judicially] I am going to have Mrs. Jones up. Leave it to me; and—er—remember that nobody is guilty until they're proved so. I shall be careful. I have no intention of frightening her; I shall give her every chance. I hear she's in poor circumstances. If we are not able to do much for them we are bound to have the greatest sympathy with the poor.

MRS. JONES comes in.

BARTHWICK. [Pleasantly] Oh! good morning, Mrs. Jones.

MRS. JONES. [Soft, and even, unemphatic] Good morning, sir! Good morning, ma'am!

BARTHWICK. About your husband—he's not in work, I hear?

MRS. JONES. No, sir; of course he's not in work just now.

BARTHWICK. Then I suppose he's earning nothing?

MRS. JONES. No, sir, he's not earning anything just now, sir.

BARTHWICK. And how many children have you?

MRS. JONES. Three children; but of course they don't eat very much, sir.

[A little silence.

BARTHWICK. And how old is the eldest?

MRS. JONES. Nine years old, sir.

BARTHWICK. Do they go to school?

MRS. JONES. Yes, sir, they all three go to school every day.

BARTHWICK. [Severely] And what about their food when you're out at work.

MRS. JONES. Well, sir, I have to give them their dinner to take with them. Of course, I'm not always able to give them anything; sometimes I have to send them without; but my husband is very good about the children when he's in work. But when he's not in work of course he's a very difficult man.

BARTHWICK. He drinks, I suppose?

MRS. JONES. Yes, sir. Of course I can't say he doesn't drink, because he does.

BARTHWICK. And I suppose he takes all your money?

MRS. JONES. No, sir, he's very good about my money, except when he's no himself, and then, of course, he treats me very badly.

BARTHWICK. Now what is he—your husband?

MRS. JONES. By profession, sir, of course he's a groom.

BARTHWICK. A groom! How came he to lose his place?

MRS. JONES. He lost his place a long time ago, sir, and he's never had a very long job since; and now, of course, the motor-cars are against him.

BARTHWICK. When were you married to him, Mrs. Jones?

MRS. JONES. Eight years ago, sir—that was in——

MRS. BARTHWICK. [Sharply] Eight! You said the eldest child was nine.

MRS. JONES. Yes, ma'am; of course that was why he lost his place. He didn't treat me rightly, and of course his employer said he couldn't keep him because of the example——

BARTHWICK. You mean he—ahem——

MRS. JONES. Yes, sir; and of course after he lost his place he married me.

MRS. BARTHWICK. You actually mean to say you—you were——

BARTHWICK. My dear——

MRS. BARTHWICK. [Indignantly] How disgraceful!

BARTHWICK. [Hurriedly] And where are you living now, Mrs. Jones?

MRS. JONES. We've not got a home sir. Of course, we've been obliged to put away most of our things.

BARTHWICK. Put your things away? You mean to—to—er—to pawn them?

MRS. JONES. Yes, sir, to put them away. We're living in Merthyr Street—that is close by here, sir—at No. 34. We just have the one room.

BARTHWICK. And what do you pay a week?

MRS. JONES. We pay six shillings a week, sir, for a furnished room.

BARTHWICK. And I suppose you're bed in the rent?

MRS. JONES. Yes, sir, we're a little ind in the rent.

BARTHWICK. But you're in good rk, aren't you?

MRS. JONES. Well, sir, I have a day in amford Place Thursdays. And Mon-ys and Wednesdays and Fridays I ne here. But to-day, of course, is a lf-day, because of yesterday's Bank oliday.

BARTHWICK. I see; four days a week,
d you get half a crown a day, is that

MRS. JONES. Yes, sir, and my dinner;
t sometimes it's only half a day, and it's eighteenpence.

BARTHWICK. And when your husband rns anything he spends it in drink, I ppose?

MRS. JONES. Sometimes he does, sir, d sometimes he gives it to me for the ildren. Of course he would work if he uld get it, sir, but it seems there are great many people out of work.

BARTHWICK. Ah! Yes. We—er—on't go into that. [Sympathetically] nd how about your work here? Do u find it hard?

MRS. JONES. Oh! no, sir, not very rd, sir; except of course, when I don't t my sleep at night.

BARTHWICK. Ah! And you help do l the rooms? And sometimes, I supse, you go out for cook?

MRS. JONES. Yes, sir.

BARTHWICK. And you've been out is morning?

MRS. JONES. Yes, sir, of course I had go to the greengrocer's.

BARTHWICK. Exactly. So your hus-nd earns nothing? And he's a bad naracter.

MRS. JONES. No, sir, I don't say that,
r. I think there's a great deal of good him; though he does treat me very ad sometimes. And of course I don't ke to leave him, but I think I ought , because really I hardly know how to ay with him. He often raises his hand me. Not long ago he gave me a blow ere [touches her breast] and I can feel now. So I think I ought to leave him, on't you, sir?

BARTHWICK. Ah! I can't help you there. It's a very serious thing to leave your husband. Very serious thing.

MRS. JONES. Yes, sir, of course I'm afraid of what he might do to me if I were to leave him; he can be so very violent.

BARTHWICK. H'm! Well, that I can't pretend to say anything about. It's the bad principle I'm speaking of——

MRS. JONES. Yes, sir; I know nobody can help me. I know I must decide for myself, and of course I know that he has a very hard life. And he's fond of the children, and it's very hard for him to see them going without food.

BARTHWICK. [Hastily] Well—er—thank you, I just wanted to hear about you. I don't think I need detain you any longer, Mrs.—Jones.

MRS. JONES. No, sir, thank you, sir.

BARTHWICK. Good morning, then.

MRS. JONES. Good morning, sir; good morning, ma'am.

BARTHWICK. [Exchanging glances with his wife] By the way, Mrs. Jones—I think it only fair to tell you, a silver cigarette box—er—is missing.

MRS. JONES. [Looking from one face to the other] I am very sorry, sir.

BARTHWICK. Yes; you have not seen it, I suppose?

MRS. JONES. [Realising that suspicion is upon her; with an uneasy movement] Where was it, sir; if you please, sir?

BARTHWICK. [Evasively] Where did Marlow say? Er—in this room, yes, in this room.

MRS. JONES. No, sir, I haven't seen it—of course if I'd seen it I should have noticed it.

BARTHWICK. [Giving her a rapid glance] You—are sure of that?

MRS. JONES. [Impassively] Yes, sir. [With a slow nodding of her head] I have not seen it, and of course I don't know where it is.

[She turns and goes quietly out.

BARTHWICK. H'm!

The three BARTHWICKS avoid each other's glances.

The curtain falls.

ACT II

SCENE I

The JONES' lodgings, Merthyr Street, at half-past two o'clock.

The bare room, with tattered oilcloth and damp, distempered walls, has an air of tidy wretchedness. On the bed lies JONES, half-dressed; his coat is thrown across his feet, and muddy boots are lying on the floor close by. He is asleep. The door is opened and MRS. JONES comes in, dressed in a pinched black jacket and old black sailor hat; she carries a parcel wrapped up in "The Times." She puts her parcel down, unwraps an apron, half a loaf, two onions, three potatoes, and a tiny piece of bacon. Taking a teapot from the cupboard, she rinses it, shakes into it some powdered tea out of a screw of paper, puts it on the hearth, and sitting in a wooden chair quietly begins to cry.

JONES. [Stirring and yawning] That you? What's the time?

MRS. JONES. [Drying her eyes, and in her usual voice] Half-past two.

JONES. What you back so soon for?

MRS. JONES. I only had the half-day to-day, Jem.

JONES. [On his back, and in a drowsy voice] Got anything for dinner?

MRS. JONES. Mrs. Barthwick's cook gave me a little bit of bacon. I'm going to make a stew. [She prepares for cooking] There's fourteen shillings owing to rent, James, and of course I've only got two and fourpence. They'll be coming for it to-day.

JONES. [Turning towards her on his elbow] Let 'em come and find my surprise packet. I've had enough o' this tryin' for work. Why should I go round and round after a job like a bloomin' squirrel in a cage. "Give us a job, sir" —"Take a man on"—"Got a wife and three children." Sick of it I am! I'd sooner lie here and rot. "Jones, you come and join the demonstration; come and 'old a flag, and listen to the ruddy orators, and go 'ome as empty as you came." There's some that seems to lik that—the sheep! When I go seekin' fe a job now, and see the brutes lookir me up an' down, it's like a thousan serpents in me. I'm not arskin' for an treat. A man wants to sweat hissel silly and not allowed—that's a rur start, ain't it? A man wants to sweat hi soul out to keep the breath in him an ain't allowed—that's justice—that freedom and all the rest of it! [H turns his face towards the wall] You'r so milky mild; you don't know wha goes on inside o' me. I'm done with th silly game. If they want me, let 'er come for me!

MRS. JONES stops cooking an stands unmoving at the table.

JONES. I've tried and done with it, tell you. I've never been afraid o what's before me. You mark my word —if you think they've broke my spirit you're mistook. I'll lie and rot soone than arsk 'em again. What makes yo stand like that—you long-sufferin Gawd-forsaken image—that's why can't keep my hands off you. So nov you know. Work! You can work, bu you haven't the spirit of a louse!

MRS. JONES. [Quietly] You talk mor wild sometimes when you're yourself James, than when you're not. If yo don't get work, how are we to go on They won't let us stay here; they'r looking to their money to-day, I know

JONES. I see this Barthwick o' your every day goin' down to Pawlymen snug and comfortable to talk his silly soul out; an' I see that young calf, hi son, swellin' it about, and goin' on th razzle-dazzle. Wot 'ave they done tha makes 'em any better than wot I am They never did a day's work in thei lives. I see 'em day after day——

MRS. JONES. And I wish you wouldn come after me like that, and hang abou the house. You don't seem able to kee away at all, and whatever you do it fo I can't think, because of course the notice it.

JONES. I suppose I may go where like. Where may I go? The other day went to a place in the Edgware Road "Gov'nor," I says to the boss, "take m on," I says. "I 'aven't done a stroke o

-k not these two months; it takes heart out of a man," I says; "I'm to work; I'm not afraid of anything can give me!" "My good man," 'e s, "I've had thirty of you here this rning. I took the first two," he says, d that's all I want." "Thank you, n rot the world!" I says. "Blas-min'," he says, "is not the way to a job. Out you go, my lad!" [He ghs sardonically] Don't you raise ır voice because you're starvin'; ı't yer even think of it; take it lyin' vn! Take it like a sensible man, n't you? And a little way down the eet a lady says to me: [Pinching his ce] "D'you want to earn a few pence, man?" and gives me her dog to 'old side a shop—fat as a butler 'e was ons o' meat had gone to the makin' him. It did 'er good, it did, made 'er l 'erself that charitable, but I see 'er kin' at the copper standin' alongside me, for fear I should make off with bloomin' fat dog. [He sits on the ge of the bed and puts a boot on. en looking up] What's in that head yours? [Almost pathetically] Carn't u speak for once?

There is a knock, and MRS. SEDDON, the landlady, appears, an anxious, harassed, shabby woman in working clothes.

MRS. SEDDON. I thought I 'eard you me in, Mrs. Jones. I've spoke to me sband, but he says he really can't afrd to wait another day.

JONES. [With scowling jocularity] ever you mind what your 'usband ys, you go your own way like a oper independent woman. Here, nny, chuck her that.

Producing a sovereign from his trousers pocket, he throws it to his wife, who catches it in her apron with a gasp. JONES resumes the lacing of his boots.

MRS. JONES. [Rubbing the sovereign ealthily] I'm very sorry we're so late ith it, and of course it's fourteen illings, so if you've got six that will right.

MRS. SEDDON takes the sovereign and fumbles for the change.

JONES. [With his eyes fixed on his boots] Bit of a surprise for yer, ain't it?

MRS. SEDDON. Thank you, and I'm sure I'm very much obliged. [She does indeed appear surprised] I'll bring you the change.

JONES. [Mockingly] Don't mention it.

MRS. SEDDON. Thank you, and I'm sure I'm very much obliged.

[She slides away.

MRS. JONES gazes at JONES, who is still lacing up his boots.

JONES. I've had a bit of luck. [Pulling out the crimson purse and some loose coins] Picked up a purse—seven pound and more.

MRS. JONES. Oh, James!

JONES. Oh, James! What about Oh, James! I picked it up I tell you. This is lost property, this is!

MRS. JONES. But isn't there a name in it, or something?

JONES. Name? No, there ain't no name. This don't belong to such as 'ave visitin' cards. This belongs to a perfec' lidy. Tike an' smell it. [He pitches her the purse, which she puts gently to her nose] Now, you tell me what I ought to have done. You tell me that. You can always tell me what I ought to ha' done, can't yer?

MRS. JONES. [Laying down the purse] I can't say what you ought to have done, James. Of course the money wasn't yours; you've taken somebody else's money.

JONES. Finding's keeping. I'll take it as wages for the time I've gone about the streets asking for what's my rights. I'll take it for what's overdue, d'ye hear? [With strange triumph] I've got money in my pocket, my girl.

MRS. JONES goes on again with the preparation of the meal, JONES looking at her furtively.

JONES. Money in my pocket! And I'm not goin' to waste it. With this 'ere money I'm goin' to Canada. I'll let you have a pound. [A silence] You've often talked of leavin' me. You've often told me I treat you badly—well I 'ope you'll be glad when I'm gone.

MRS. JONES. [Impassively] You have treated me very badly, James, and of course I can't prevent your going; but I can't tell whether I shall be glad when you're gone.

JONES. It'll change my luck. I've 'ad nothing but bad luck since I first took up with you. [More softly] And you've 'ad no bloomin' picnic.

MRS. JONES. Of course it would have been better for us if we had never met. We weren't meant for each other. But you're set against me, that's what you are, and you have been for a long time. And you treat me so badly, James, going after that Rosie and all. You don't ever seem to think of the children that I've had to bring into the world, and of all the trouble I've had to keep them, and what'll become of them when you're gone.

JONES. [Crossing the room gloomily] If you think I want to leave the little beggars you're bloomin' well mistaken.

MRS. JONES. Of course I know you're fond of them.

JONES. [Fingering the purse, half angrily] Well, then, you stow it, old girl. The kids'll get along better with you than when I'm here. If I'd ha' known as much as I do now, I'd never ha' had one o' them. What's the use o' bringin' 'em into a state o' things like this? It's a crime, that's what it is; but you find it out too late; that's what's the matter with this 'ere world.

[He puts the purse back in his pocket.

MRS. JONES. Of course it would have been better for them, poor little things; but they're your own children, and I wonder at you talkin' like that. I should miss them dreadfully if I was to lose them.

JONES. [Sullenly] An' you ain't the only one. If I make money out there—— [Looking up, he sees her shaking out his coat—in a changed voice] Leave that coat alone!

The silver box drops from the pocket, scattering the cigarettes upon the bed. Taking up the box she stares at it; he rushes at her and snatches the box away.

MRS. JONES. [Cowering back against the bed] Oh, Jem! oh, Jem!

JONES. [Dropping the box on to the table] You mind what you're sayin'! When I go out I'll take and chuck it in the water along with that there purse. I 'ad it when I was in liquor, and for what you do when you're in liquor you're not responsible—and that's Gawd's truth as you ought to know. I don't want the thing—I won't have it. I took it out o' spite. I'm no thief, I tell you; and don't you call me one, or it'll be the worse for you.

MRS. JONES. [Twisting her apron strings] It's Mr. Barthwick's! You've taken away my reputation. Oh, Jem, whatever made you?

JONES. What d'you mean?

MRS. JONES. It's been missed; they think it's me. Oh! whatever made you do it, Jem?

JONES. I tell you I was in liquor. I don't want it; what's the good of it to me? If I were to pawn it they'd only nab me. I'm no thief. I'm no worse than wot that young Barthwick is; he brought 'ome that purse that I picked up—a lady's purse—'ad it off 'er in a row, kept sayin' 'e'd scored 'er off. Well, I scored 'im off. Tight as an owl 'e was! And d'you think anything'll happen to him?

MRS. JONES. [As though speaking to herself] Oh, Jem! it's the bread out of our mouths!

JONES. Is it then? I'll make it hot for 'em yet. What about that purse? What about young Barthwick?

MRS. JONES comes forward to the table and tries to take the box; JONES prevents her.

JONES. What do you want with that? You drop it, I say!

MRS. JONES. I'll take it back and tell them all about it. [She attempts to wrest the box from him.

JONES. Ah, would yer?

He drops the box, and rushes on her with a snarl. She slips back past the bed. He follows; a chair is overturned. The door is opened; SNOW comes in, a detective in plain clothes and bowler hat, with clipped moustaches; JONES drops his arms, MRS. JONES stands by the window gasping; SNOW, advancing swiftly to the table, puts his hand on the silver box.

NOW. Doin' a bit o' skylarkin'? cy this is what I'm after. J.B., the y same. [He gets back to the door, tinising the crest and cypher on the To MRS. JONES] I'm a police offi- Are you Mrs. Jones?

IRS. JONES. Yes, sir.

NOW. My instructions are to take on a charge of stealing this box n J. Barthwick, Esquire, M.P., of 6, kingham Gate. Anything you say be used against you. Well, missis? IRS. JONES. [In her quiet voice, still of breath, her hand upon her breast] course I did not take it, sir. I never e taken anything that didn't belong ne; and of course I know nothing ut it.

NOW. You were at the house this ning; you did the room in which the was left; you were alone in the m. I find the box 'ere. You say you n't take it?

IRS. JONES. Yes, sir, of course I say d not take it, because I did not.

NOW. Then how does the box come e here?

IRS. JONES. I would rather not say thing about it.

NOW. Is this your husband?

IRS. JONES. Yes, sir, this is my hus- d, sir.

NOW. Do you wish to say anything ore I take her?

JONES remains silent, with his head bent down.

NOW. Well then, Missis. I'll just uble you to come along with me etly.

IRS. JONES. [Twisting her hands] course I wouldn't say I hadn't taken f I had—and I didn't take it, indeed idn't. Of course I know appearances against me, and I can't tell you what lly happened. But my children are at ool, and they'll be coming home— l I don't know what they'll do with- me!

NOW. Your 'usband'll see to them, n't you worry. [He takes the woman tly by the arm.

ONES. You drop it—she's all right! ullenly] I took the thing myself.

NOW. [Eyeing him] There, there, it es you credit. Come along, Missis.

JONES. [Passionately] Drop it, I say, you blooming teck. She's my wife; she's a respectable woman. Take her if you dare!

SNOW. Now, now. What's the good of this? Keep a civil tongue, and it'll be the better for all of us.

He puts his whistle in his mouth and draws the woman to the door.

JONES. [With a rush] Drop her, and put up your 'ands, or I'll soon make yer. You leave her alone, will yer! Don't I tell yer, I took the thing myself!

SNOW. [Blowing his whistle] Drop your hands, or I'll take you too. Ah, would you?

JONES, closing, deals him a blow. A Policeman in uniform appears; there is a short struggle and JONES is overpowered. MRS. JONES raises her hands and drops her face on them.

The curtain falls.

SCENE II

The BARTHWICKS' dining-room the same evening. The BARTHWICKS are seated at dessert.

MRS. BARTHWICK. John! [A silence broken by the cracking of nuts] John!

BARTHWICK. I wish you'd speak about the nuts—they're uneatable. [He puts one in his mouth.

MRS. BARTHWICK. It's not the season for them. I called on the Holyroods.

BARTHWICK fills his glass with port.

JACK. Crackers, please, Dad.

BARTHWICK passes the crackers. His demeanour is reflective.

MRS. BARTHWICK. Lady Holyrood has got very stout. I've noticed it coming for a long time.

BARTHWICK. [Gloomily] Stout? [He takes up the crackers—with transparent airiness] The Holyroods had some trouble with their servants, hadn't they?

JACK. Crackers, please, Dad.

BARTHWICK. [Passing the crackers] It got into the papers. The cook, wasn't it?

MRS. BARTHWICK. No, the lady's maid. I was talking it over with Lady Holyrood. The girl used to have her young man to see her.

BARTHWICK [Uneasily] I'm not sure they were wise——

MRS. BARTHWICK. My dear John, what are you talking about? How could there be any alternative? Think of the effect on the other servants!

BARTHWICK. Of course in principle —I wasn't thinking of that.

JACK [Maliciously] Crackers, please, Dad.

BARTHWICK is compelled to pass the crackers.

MRS. BARTHWICK. Lady Holyrood told me: "I had her up," she said; "I said to her, 'You'll leave my house at once; I think your conduct disgraceful. I can't tell, I don't know, and I don't wish to know, what you were doing. I send you away on principle; you need not come to me for a character.' And the girl said: 'If you don't give me my notice, my lady, I want a month's wages. I'm perfectly respectable. I've done nothing.' "—Done nothing!

BARTHWICK. H'm!

MRS. BARTHWICK. Servants have too much license. They hang together so terribly you never can tell what they're really thinking; it's as if they were all in a conspiracy to keep you in the dark. Even with Marlow, you feel that he never lets you know what's really in his mind. I hate that secretiveness; it destroys all confidence. I feel sometimes I should like to shake him.

JACK. Marlow's a most decent chap. It's simply beastly every one knowing your affairs.

BARTHWICK. The less you say about that the better!

MRS. BARTHWICK. It goes all through the lower classes. You can not tell when they are speaking the truth. To-day when I was shopping after leaving the Holyroods, one of these unemployed came up and spoke to me. I suppose I only had twenty yards or so to walk to the carriage, but he seemed to spring up in the street.

BARTHWICK. Ah! You must be very careful whom you speak to in these days.

MRS. BARTHWICK. I didn't answer him, of course. But I could see at once that he wasn't telling the truth.

BARTHWICK. [Cracking a nut] There one very good rule—look at their eye

JACK. Crackers, please, Dad.

BARTHWICK. [Passing the crackers] If their eyes are straightforward sometimes give them sixpence. It against my principles, but it's most diff cult to refuse. If you see that they' desperate, and dull, and shifty-looking as so many of them are, it's certain t mean drink, or crime, or somethin unsatisfactory.

MRS. BARTHWICK. This man ha dreadful eyes. He looked as if he cou commit a murder. "I've 'ad nothing t eat to-day," he said. Just like that.

BARTHWICK. What was Willia about? He ought to have been waitin

JACK. [Raising his wine-glass to h nose] Is this the '63, Dad?

BARTHWICK, holding his wine-gla to his eye, lowers it and pass it before his nose.

MRS. BARTHWICK. I hate people th can't speak the truth. [Father and s exchange a look behind their port] I just as easy to speak the truth as n I've always found it easy enough. makes it impossible to tell what is gen ine; one feels as if one were continual being taken in.

BARTHWICK. [Sententiously] T lower classes are their own enemies. they would only trust us, they wou get on so much better.

MRS. BARTHWICK. But even then i so often their own fault. Look at t Mrs. Jones this morning.

BARTHWICK. I only want to do wha right in that matter. I had occasion see Roper this afternoon. I mentio it to him. He's coming in this eveni It all depends on what the detect says. I've had my doubts. I've b thinking it over.

MRS. BARTHWICK. The woman i pressed me most unfavourably. S seemed to have no shame. That af she was talking about—she and the m when they were young, so immor And before you and Jack! I could h put her out of the room!

BARTHWICK. Oh! I don't want to them, but in looking at these mat-one must consider——

S. BARTHWICK. Perhaps you'll say nan's employer was wrong in disng him?

RTHWICK. Of course not. It's not that I feel doubt. What I ask lf is——

CK. Port, please, Dad.

RTHWICK. [Circulating the decan-n religious imitation of the rising setting of the sun] I ask myself her we are sufficiently careful in ng inquiries about people before ngage them, especially as regards il conduct.

CK. Pass the port, please, Mother!

RS. BARTHWICK. [Passing it] My boy, aren't you drinking too much?

JACK fills his glass.

ARLOW. [Entering] Detective Snow
e you, sir.

ARTHWICK. [Uneasily] Ah! I say
)e with him in a minute.

RS. BARTHWICK. [Without turning] him come in here, Marlow.

SNOW enters in an overcoat, his bowler hat in hand.

ARTHWICK. [Half rising] Oh! Good ning!

NOW. Good evening, sir; good eve-g ma'am. I've called round to report t I've done, rather late, I'm afraid nother case took me away. [He takes silver box out of his pocket, causing nsation in the BARTHWICK family]
s is the identical article, I believe.

ARTHWICK. Certainly, certainly.

NOW. Havin' your crest and cypher, ou described to me, sir, I'd no hesi-
on in the matter.

ARTHWICK. Excellent. Will you have lass of—[he glances at the waning t]—er—sherry—[pours out sherry] k, just give Mr. Snow this.

JACK rises and gives the glass to SNOW; then, lolling in his chair, regards him indolently.

SNOW. [Drinking off wine and put-g down the glass] After seeing you I nt round to this woman's lodgings,
. It's a low neighbourhood, and I ought it as well to place a constable low—and not without 'e was wanted, things turned out.

BARTHWICK. Indeed!

SNOW. Yes, sir, I 'ad some trouble. I asked her to account for the presence of the article. She could give me no answer, except to deny the theft; so I took her into custody; then her husband came for me, so I was obliged to take him, too, for assault. He was very violent on the way to the station—very violent—threatened you and your son, and altogether he was a handful, I can tell you.

MRS. BARTHWICK. What a ruffian he must be!

SNOW. Yes, ma'am, a rough customer.

JACK. [Sipping his wine, bemused] Punch the beggar's head.

SNOW. Given to drink, as I understand, Sir.

MRS. BARTHWICK. It's to be hoped he will get a severe punishment.

SNOW. The odd thing is, sir, that he persists in sayin' he took the box himself.

BARTHWICK. Took the box himself! [He smiles] What does he think to gain by that?

SNOW. He says the young gentleman was intoxicated last night—[JACK stops the cracking of a nut, and looks at SNOW. BARTHWICK, losing his smile, has put his wine-glass down; there is a silence—SNOW, looking from face to face, remarks]—took him into the house and gave him whisky; and under the influence of an empty stomach the man says he took the box.

MRS. BARTHWICK. The impudent wretch!

BARTHWICK. D'you mean that he—er—intends to put this forward tomorrow——

SNOW. That'll be his line, sir; but whether he's endeavouring to shield his wife, or whether [he looks at JACK] there's something in it, will be for the magistrate to say.

MRS. BARTHWICK. [Haughtily] Something in what? I don't understand you. As if my son would bring a man like that into the house!

BARTHWICK. [From the fireplace, with an effort to be calm] My son can speak for himself, no doubt.—Well, Jack, what do you say?

MRS. BARTHWICK. [Sharply] What does he say? Why, of course, he says the whole story's stuff!

JACK. [Embarrassed] Well, of course, I—of course, I don't know anything about it.

MRS. BARTHWICK. I should think not, indeed! [To SNOW] The man's an audacious ruffian!

BARTHWICK. [Suppressing jumps] But in view of my son's saying there's nothing in this—this fable—will it be necessary to proceed against the man under the circumstances?

SNOW. We shall have to charge him with the assault, sir. It would be as well for your son to come down to the Court. There'll be a remand, no doubt. The queer thing is there was quite a sum of money found on him, and a crimson silk purse.

BARTHWICK starts; JACK rises and sits down again.

SNOW. I suppose the lady hasn't missed her purse?

BARTHWICK. [Hastily] Oh, no! Oh! No!

JACK. No!

MRS. BARTHWICK. [Dreamily] No! [To SNOW] I've been inquiring of the servants. This man does hang about the house. I shall feel much safer if he gets a good long sentence; I do think we ought to be protected against such ruffians.

BARTHWICK. Yes, yes, of course, on principle—but in this case we have a number of things to think of. [To SNOW] I suppose, as you say, the man must be charged, eh?

SNOW. No question about that, sir.

BARTHWICK. [Staring gloomily at JACK] This prosecution goes very much against the grain with me. I have great sympathy with the poor. In my position I'm bound to recognise the distress there is amongst them. The condition of the people leaves much to be desired. D'you follow me? I wish I could see my way to drop it.

MRS. BARTHWICK. [Sharply] John! it's simply not fair to other people. It's putting property at the mercy of any one who likes to take it.

BARTHWICK. [Trying to make signs to her aside] I'm not defending h not at all. I'm trying to look at the m ter broadly.

MRS. BARTHWICK. Nonsense, Jo there's a time for everything.

SNOW. [Rather sardonically] I mi point out, sir, that to withdraw charge of stealing would not m much difference, because the facts m come out [he looks significantly JACK] in reference to the assault; as I said that charge will have to forward.

BARTHWICK. [Hastily] Yes, oh! actly! It's entirely on the woman's count—entirely a matter of my private feelings.

SNOW. If I were you, sir, I should things take their course. It's not lik there'll be much difficulty. These thi are very quickly settled.

BARTHWICK. [Doubtfully] You th so—you think so?

JACK. [Rousing himself] I say, w shall I have to swear to?

SNOW. That's best known to yours sir. [Retreating to the door] Better ploy a solicitor, sir, in case anyth should arise. We shall have the bu to prove the loss of the article. Yo excuse me going, I'm rather pressed night. The case may come on any t after eleven. Good evening, sir; g evening, ma'am. I shall have to prod the box in court to-morrow, so if yo excuse me, sir, I may as well tak with me.

He takes the silver box and lea them with a little bow. BAR WICK makes a move to fol him, then dashing his hands neath his coat tails, speaks v desperation.

BARTHWICK. I do wish you'd le me to manage things myself. You put your nose into matters you kn nothing of. A pretty mess you've m of this!

MRS. BARTHWICK. [Coldly] I d in the least know what you're talk about. If you can't stand up for y rights, I can. I've no patience with y principles, it's such nonsence.

BARTHWICK. Principles! Good he ens! What have principles to do wit goodness' sake? Don't you know Jack was drunk last night!

CK. Dad!

RS. BARTHWICK. [In horror rising] :!

CK. Look here, Mother—I had sup- Everybody does. I mean to say— know what I mean—it's absurd to it being drunk. At Oxford every- gets a bit "on" sometimes——

RS. BARTHWICK. Well, I think it's t dreadful! If that is really what do at Oxford——

CK. [Angrily] Well, why did you me there? One must do as other ws do. It's such nonsense, I mean, all it being drunk. Of course I'm ully sorry. I've had such a beastly dache all day.

ARTHWICK. Tcha! If you'd only had common decency to remember what pened when you came in. Then we uld know what truth there was in it this fellow says—as it is, it's all most confounded darkness.

ACK. [Staring as though at half-med visions] I just get a—and then 's gone——

IRS. BARTHWICK. Oh, Jack! do you an to say you were so tipsy you 't even remember——

ACK. Look here, Mother! Of course remember I came—I must have ne——

ARTHWICK. [Unguardedly, and king up and down] Tcha!—and that ernal purse! Good heavens! It'll get the papers. Who on earth could e foreseen a thing like this? Better have lost a dozen cigarette boxes, said nothing about it. [To his wife] all your doing. I told you so from first. I wish to goodness Roper uld come!

IRS. BARTHWICK. [Sharply] I don't w what you're talking about, John.

ARTHWICK. [Turning on her] No, —you—you don't know anything! arply] Where the devil is Roper? he can see a way out of this he's a ter man than I take him for. I defy one to see a way out of it. I 't.

ACK. Look here, don't excite, Dad— an simply say I was too beastly tired, and don't remember anything except that I came in and [in a dying voice] went to bed the same as usual.

BARTHWICK. Went to bed? Who knows where you went—I've lost all confidence. For all I know you slept on the floor.

JACK. [Indignantly] I didn't, I slept on the—— BARTHWICK. [Sitting on the sofa] Who cares where you slept? What does it matter if he mentions the—the—a perfect disgrace?

MRS. BARTHWICK. What? [A silence] I insist on knowing.

JACK. Oh! nothing——

MRS. BARTHWICK. Nothing? What do you mean by nothing, Jack? There's your father in such a state about it——

JACK. It's only my purse.

MRS. BARTHWICK. Your purse! You know perfectly well you haven't got one.

JACK. Well, it was somebody else's—it was all a joke—I didn't want the beastly thing——

MRS. BARTHWICK. Do you mean that you had another person's purse, and that this man took it too?

BARTHWICK. Tcha! Of course he took it too! A man like that Jones will make the most of it. It'll get into the papers.

MRS. BARTHWICK. I don't understand. What on earth is all the fuss about? [Bending over JACK, and softly] Jack, now, tell me, dear! Don't be afraid. What is it? Come!

JACK. Oh, don't, Mother!

MRS. BARTHWICK. But don't what, dear?

JACK. It was pure sport. I don't know how I got the thing. Of course I'd had a bit of a row—I didn't know what I was doing—I was—I was—well, you know—I suppose I must have pulled the bag out of her hand.

MRS. BARTHWICK. Out of her hand? Whose hand? What bag—whose bag?

JACK. Oh! I don't know—her bag—it belonged to—[in a desperate and rising voice] a woman.

MRS. BARTHWICK. A woman? Oh! Jack! No!

JACK. [Jumping up] You would have it. I didn't want to tell you. It's not my fault.

The door opens and MARLOW ushers in a man of middle age, inclined to corpulence, in evening dress. He has a ruddy, thin moustache, and dark, quick-moving little eyes. His eyebrows are Chinese.

MARLOW. Mr. Roper, sir.

[He leaves the room.

ROPER. [With a quick look round] How do you do?

But neither JACK nor MRS. BARTHWICK make a sign.

BARTHWICK. [Hurrying] Thank goodness, you've come, Roper. You remember what I told you this afternoon; we've just had the detective here.

ROPER. Got the box?

BARTHWICK. Yes, yes, but look here—it wasn't the charwoman at all; her drunken loafer of a husband took the things—he says that fellow there [he waves his hand at JACK, who with his shoulder raised, seems trying to ward off a blow] let him into the house last night. Can you imagine such a thing?

ROPER laughs.

BARTHWICK. [With excited emphasis] It's no laughing matter, Roper. I told you about that business of Jack's too—don't you see?—the brute took both the things—took that infernal purse. It'll get into the papers.

ROPER. [Raising his eyebrows] H'm! The purse! Depravity in high life! What does your son say?

BARTHWICK. He remembers nothing. D——n! Did you ever see such a mess? It'll get into the papers.

MRS. BARTHWICK. [With her hand across her eyes] It's not that——

BARTHWICK and ROPER turn and look at her.

BARTHWICK. It's the idea of that woman—she's just heard——

ROPER nods. And MRS. BARTHWICK, setting her lips, gives a slow look at JACK, and sits down at the table.

BARTHWICK. What on earth's to be done, Roper? A ruffian like this Jones will make all the capital he can out of that purse.

MRS. BARTHWICK. I don't believe t Jack took that purse.

BARTHWICK. What—when the wom came here for it this morning?

MRS. BARTHWICK. Here? She had impudence? Why wasn't I told?

She looks round from face to f —no one answers her, there pause.

BARTHWICK. [Suddenly] What's be done, Roper?

ROPER. [Quietly to JACK] I supp you didn't leave your latch-key in door.

JACK. [Sullenly] Yes, I did.

BARTHWICK. Good heavens! W next?

MRS. BARTHWICK. I'm certain never let that man into the house, Ja it's a wild invention. I'm sure the not a word of truth in it, Mr. Roper

ROPER. [Very suddenly] Where you sleep last night?

JACK. [Promptly] On the sofa, th —[hesitating] that is—I——

BARTHWICK. On the sofa? D'y mean to say you didn't go to bed?

JACK. [Sullenly] No.

BARTHWICK. If you don't remem anything, how can you remember th

JACK. Because I woke up there in morning.

MRS. BARTHWICK. Oh, Jack!

BARTHWICK. Good gracious!

JACK. And Mrs. Jones saw me. I w you wouldn't bait me so.

ROPER. Do you remember giving one a drink?

JACK. By Jove, I do seem to reme ber a fellow with—a fellow with— [He looks at ROPER] I say, d'you w me——?

ROPER. [Quick as lightning] Wit dirty face?

JACK. [With illumination] I do distinctly remember his——

BARTHWICK moves abruptly; M BARTHWICK looks at ROPER grily, and touches her s arm.

MRS. BARTHWICK. You don't reme ber, it's ridiculous! I don't believe man was ever here at all.

BARTHWICK. You must speak truth, if it is the truth. But if you ember such a dirty business, I shall h my hands of you altogether.

ACK. [Glaring at them] Well, what devil——
[RS. BARTHWICK. Jack!
ACK. Well, Mother, I—I don't know
t you do want.
[RS. BARTHWICK. We want you to lk the truth and say you never let low man into the house.
ARTHWICK. Of course if you think you really gave this man whisky in : disgraceful way, and let him see t you'd been doing, and were in such isgusting condition that you don't ember a word of it——
OPER. [Quick] I've no memory my-—never had.
ARTHWICK. [Desperately] I don't
w what you're to say.
OPER. [To JACK] Say nothing at all!
n't put yourself in a false position.
e man stole the things or the woman
e the things, you had nothing to do h it. You were asleep on the sofa.
IRS. BARTHWICK. Your leaving the h-key in the door was quite bad ugh, there's no need to mention any-ng else. [Touching his forehead
tly] My dear, how hot your head
ACK. But I want to know what I'm do. [Passionately] I won't be bad-ed like this.
MRS. BARTHWICK recoils from him.
ROPER. [Very quickly] You forget all ut it. You were asleep.
ACK. Must I go down to the Court morrow?
ROPER. [Shaking his head] No.
ARTHWICK. [In a relieved voice] Is t so?
ROPER. Yes.
ARTHWICK. But you'll go, Roper.
ROPER. Yes.
ACK. [With wan cheerfulness] anks, awfully! So long as I don't ve to go. [Putting his hand up to his d] I think if you'll excuse me—I've d a most beastly day.
[He looks from his father to his mother.
MRS. BARTHWICK. [Turning quickly]
od-night, my boy.
ACK. Good-night, Mother.

[He goes out. MRS. BARTHWICK heaves a sigh. There is a silence.
BARTHWICK. He gets off too easily. But for my money that woman would have prosecuted him.
ROPER. You find money useful.
BARTHWICK. I've my doubts whether we ought to hide the truth——
ROPER. There'll be a remand.
BARTHWICK. What! D'you mean he'll have to appear on the remand?
ROPER. Yes.
BARTHWICK. H'm, I thought you'd be able to—— Look here, Roper, you must keep that purse out of the papers.
ROPER fixes his little eyes on him and nods.
MRS. BARTHWICK. Mr. Roper, don't you think the magistrate ought to be told what sort of people these Joneses are; I mean about their immorality before they were married. I don't know if John told you.
ROPER. Afraid it's not material.
MRS. BARTHWICK. Not material?
ROPER. Purely private life! May have happened to the magistrate.
BARTHWICK. [With a movement as if to shift a burden] Then you'll take the thing into your hands?
ROPER. If the gods are kind.
[He holds his hand out.
BARTHWICK. [Shaking it dubiously] Kind—eh? What? You going?
ROPER. Yes. I've another case, something like yours—most unexpected.
He bows to MRS. BARTHWICK and goes out, followed by BARTHWICK, talking to the last.
MRS. BARTHWICK at the table bursts into smothered sobs. BARTHWICK returns.
BARTHWICK. [To himself] There'll be a scandal.
MRS. BARTHWICK. [Disguising her grief at once] I simply can't imagine what Roper means by making a joke of a thing like that!
BARTHWICK. [Staring strangely] You! You can't imagine anything! You've no more imagination than a fly!
MRS. BARTHWICK. [Angrily] You dare to tell me that I have no imagination.

BARTHWICK. [Flustered] I—I'm upset. From beginning to end, the whole thing has been utterly against my principles.

MRS. BARTHWICK. Rubbish! You haven't any! Your principles are nothing in the world but sheer—fright!

BARTHWICK. [Walking to the window] I've never been frightened in my life. You heard what Roper said. It's enough to upset anyone when a thing like this happens. Everything one says and does seems to turn in one's mouth—it's—it's uncanny. It's not the sort of thing I've been accustomed to. [As though stifling, he throws the window open. The faint sobbing of a child comes in] What's that?

They listen.

MRS. BARTHWICK. [Sharply] I can't stand that crying. I must send Marlow to stop it. My nerves are all on edge.

[She rings the bell.

BARTHWICK. I'll shut the window; you'll hear nothing. [He shuts the window. There is silence.

MRS. BARTHWICK. [Sharply] That's no good! It's on my nerves. Nothing upsets me like a child's crying.

MARLOW comes in.

MRS. BARTHWICK. What's that noise of crying, Marlow? It sounds like a child.

BARTHWICK. It is a child. I can see it against the railings.

MARLOW. [Opening the window, and looking out—quietly] It's Mrs. Jones's little boy, ma'am; he came here after his mother.

MRS. BARTHWICK. [Moving quickly to the window] Poor little chap! John, we oughtn't to go on with this!

BARTHWICK. [Sitting heavily in a chair] Ah! but it's out of our hands.

MRS. BARTHWICK turns her back to the window. There is an expression of distress on her face. She stands motionless, compressing her lips. The crying begins again. BARTHWICK covers his ears with his hands, and MARLOW shuts the window. The crying ceases.

The curtain falls.

ACT III

Eight days have passed, and the scen is a London Police Court at a o'clock. A canopied seat of Justi is surmounted by the lion and un corn. Before the fire a worn-loo ing MAGISTRATE is warming h coat-tails, and staring at two litt girls in faded blue and orange rag who are placed before the clot Close to the witness-box is a R LIEVING OFFICER in an overcoat, a a short brown beard. Beside t little girls stands a bald POLI CONSTABLE. On the front bench a sitting BARTHWICK and ROPER, a behind them JACK. In the railed e closure are seedy-looking men a women. Some prosperous constabl sit or stand about.

MAGISTRATE. [In his paternal and f rocious voice] Now let us dispose these young ladies.

USHER. Theresa Livens, Maud Li ens.

The bald CONSTABLE indicates t little girls who remain silent, di illusioned, inattentive.

USHER. Relieving Officer!

The RELIEVING OFFICER steps in the witness-box.

USHER. The evidence you give to t Court shall be the truth, the who truth, and nothing but the truth, so he you God! Kiss the book!

The book is kissed.

RELIEVING OFFICER. [In a monoton pausing slightly at each sentence e that his evidence may be inscribe About ten o'clock this morning, yo Worship, I found these two little gir in Blue Street, Pulham, crying outsi a public-house. I've made inquiries, yo Worship. The wife has broken up t home and gone on the streets. The hu band is out of work and living in co mon lodging-houses. The husband's si ter has eight children of her own, a AGISTRATE. Very well; then let us im.

There are cries of "LIVENS." The MAGISTRATE leans forward, and stares with hard compassion at the little girls. LIVENS comes in. He is quiet, with grizzled hair, and a muffler for a collar. He stands beside the witness-box.

AGISTRATE. And you are their fath- Now, why don't you keep your lit- irls at home? How is it you leave to wander about the streets like AGISTRATE. Then what was it—did drink?

VENS. Yes, your Worship.

AGISTRATE. Was she loose in her be- our?

VENS. [In a low voice] Yes, your ship.

AGISTRATE. And where is she now?

VENS. I don't know, your Worship. went off with a man, and after that —

AGISTRATE. Yes, yes. Who knows hing of her? [To the bald CON- BLE] Is she known here?

ELIEVING OFFICER. Not in this district, your Worship; but I have ascertained that she is well known——

MAGISTRATE. Yes—yes; we'll stop at that. Now [To the Father] you say that she has broken up your home, and left these little girls. What provision can you make for them? You look a strong man.

LIVENS. So I am, your Worship. I'm willin' enough to work, but for the life of me I can't get anything to do.

MAGISTRATE. But have you tried?

LIVENS. I've tried everything, your Worship—I've tried my 'ardest.

MAGISTRATE. Well, well——

There is a silence.

RELIEVING OFFICER. If your Worship thinks it's a case, my people are willing to take them.

MAGISTRATE. Yes, yes, I know; but I've no evidence that this man is not the proper guardian for his children.

[He rises and goes back to the fire.

RELIEVING OFFICER. The mother, your Worship, is able to get access to them.

MAGISTRATE. Yes, yes; the mother, of course, is an improper person to have anything to do with them. [To the Father] Well, now, what do you say?

LIVENS. Your Worship, I can only say that if I could get work I should be only too willing to provide for them. But what can I do, your Worship? Here I am obliged to live from 'and to mouth in these 'ere common lodging-houses. I'm a strong man—I'm willing to work —I'm half as alive again as some of 'em—but you see, your Worship, my 'air's turned a bit, owing to the fever— [Touches his hair]—and that's against me; and I don't seem to get a chance anyhow.

MAGISTRATE. Yes—yes. [Slowly] Well, I think it's a case. [Staring his hardest at the little girls] Now, are you willing that these little girls should be sent to a home?

LIVENS. Yes, your Worship, I should be very willing.

MAGISTRATE. Well, I'll remand them for a week. Bring them again to-day week; if I see no reason against it then, I'll make an order.

RELIEVING OFFICER. To-day week, your Worship.

The bald CONSTABLE takes the little girls out by the shoulders. The Father follows them. The MAGISTRATE, returning to his seat, bends over and talks to his CLERK inaudibly.

BARTHWICK. [Speaking behind his hand] A painful case, Roper; very distressing state of things.

ROPER. Hundreds like this in the Police Courts.

BARTHWICK. Most distressing! The more I see of it, the more important this question of the condition of the people seems to become. I shall certainly make a point of taking up the cudgels in the House. I shall move——

The MAGISTRATE ceases talking to his CLERK.

CLERK. Remands.

BARTHWICK stops abruptly. There is a stir and MRS. JONES comes in by the public door; JONES, ushered by policemen, comes from the prisoner's door. They file into the dock.

CLERK. James Jones, Jane Jones.

USHER. Jane Jones.

BARTHWICK. [In a whisper] The purse—the purse must be kept out of it, Roper. Whatever happens you must keep that out of the papers.

ROPER nods.

BALD CONSTABLE. Hush!

MRS. JONES, dressed in her thin, black, wispy dress, and black straw hat, stands motionless with hands crossed on the front rail of the dock. JONES leans against the back rail of the dock, and keeps half turning, glancing defiantly about him. He is haggard and unshaven.

CLERK. [Consulting with his papers] This is the case remanded from last Wednesday, sir. Theft of a silver cigarette box and assault on the police; the two charges were taken together. Jane Jones! James Jones!

MAGISTRATE. [Staring] Yes, yes; I remember.

CLERK. Jane Jones.

MRS. JONES. Yes, sir.

CLERK. Do you admit stealing a silver cigarette box valued at five pounds, ten shillings, from the house of J Barthwick, M.P., between the hours 11 P.M. on Easter Monday and 8.45 on Easter Tuesday last? Yes or no

MRS. JONES. [In a low voice] No, I do not, sir.

CLERK. James Jones? Do you ad stealing a silver cigarette box val at five pounds, ten shillings, from house of John Barthwick, M.P., tween the hours of 11 P.M. on Ea Monday and 8.45 A.M. on Easter T day last? And further making an sault on the police when in the exe tion of their duty at 3 P.M. on Ea Tuesday? Yes or no?

JONES. [Sullenly] Yes, but I've a to say about it.

MAGISTRATE. [To the CLERK] Ye yes. But how comes it that these people are charged with the same fence? Are they husband and wife?

CLERK. Yes, sir. You remember ordered a remand for further evide as to the story of the male prisoner.

MAGISTRATE. Have they been in c tody since?

CLERK. You released the woman her own recognizances, sir.

MAGISTRATE. Yes, yes, this is the c of the silver box; I remember n Well?

CLERK. Thomas Marlow.

The cry of "THOMAS MARLOW" repeated. MARLOW comes in, steps into the witness-box, is sworn. The silver box handed up, and placed on the CLERK. [Reading from his pape Your name is Thomas Marlow? you butler to John Barthwick, M.P. 6, Rockingham Gate?

MARLOW. Yes, sir.

CLERK. Did you between 10.45 and o'clock on the night of Easter Mon last place a silver cigarette box o tray on the dining-room table a Rockingham Gate? Is that the box

MARLOW. Yes, sir.

CLERK. And did you miss the sam 8.45 on the following morning, on ing to remove the tray?

MARLOW. Yes, sir.

CLERK. Is the female prisoner kn to you?

MARLOW nods.

CLERK. Is she the charwoman employed at 6, Rockingham Gate?

Again MARLOW nods.

CLERK. Did you at the time of your ...sing the box find her in the room ...e?

MARLOW. Yes, sir.

CLERK. Did you afterwards commu...ate the loss to your employer, and ... he send you to the police station?

MARLOW. Yes, sir.

CLERK. [To MRS. JONES] Have you ...thing to ask him?

MRS. JONES. No, sir, nothing, thank ..., sir.

CLERK. [To JONES] James Jones, have ... anything to ask this witness?

JONES. I don't know 'im.

MAGISTRATE. Are you sure you put ... box in the place you say at the time ... say?

MARLOW. Yes, your Worship.

MAGISTRATE. Very well; then now ...us have the officer.

MARLOW leaves the box, and SNOW goes into it.

USHER. The evidence you give to the ...rt shall be the truth, the whole truth, ... nothing but the truth, so help you ...d.

The book is kissed.

CLERK. [Reading from his papers] ...ur name is Robert Snow? You are a ...ective in the X. B. division of the ...tropolitan police force? According ...instructions received did you on Eas... Tuesday last proceed to the prison... ...s lodgings at 34, Merthyr Street, St. ...ames'? And did you on entering see ... box produced, lying on the table?

SNOW. Yes, sir.

CLERK. Is that the box?

SNOW. [Fingering the box] Yes, sir.

CLERK. And did you thereupon take ...session of it, and charge the female ...soner with theft of the box from 6, ...ckingham Gate? And did she deny ... same?

SNOW. Yes, sir.

CLERK. Did you take her into cus...dy?

SNOW. Yes, sir.

MAGISTRATE. What was her behav...ur?

SNOW. Perfectly quiet, your Worship. She persisted in the denial. That's all.

MAGISTRATE. Do you know her?

SNOW. No, your Worship.

MAGISTRATE. Is she known here?

BALD CONSTABLE. No, your Worship, they're neither of them known, we've nothing against them at all.

CLERK. [To MRS. JONES] Have you anything to ask the officer?

MRS. JONES. No, sir, thank you, I've nothing to ask him.

MAGISTRATE. Very well then—go on.

CLERK. [Reading from his papers] And while you were taking the female prisoner did the male prisoner interpose, and endeavour to hinder you in the execution of your duty, and did he strike you a blow?

SNOW. Yes, sir.

CLERK. And did he say, "You let her go, I took the box myself"?

SNOW. He did.

CLERK. And did you blow your whistle and obtain the assistance of another constable, and take him into custody?

SNOW. I did.

CLERK. Was he violent on the way to the station, and did he use bad language, and did he several times repeat that he had taken the box himself?

SNOW nods.

CLERK. Did you thereupon ask him in what manner he had stolen the box? And did you understand him to say that he had entered the house at the invitation of young Mr. Barthwick [BARTHWICK, turning in his seat, frowns at ROPER] after midnight on Easter Monday, and partaken of whisky, and that under the influence of the whisky he had taken the box?

SNOW. I did, sir.

CLERK. And was his demeanour throughout very violent?

SNOW. It was—very violent.

JONES. [Breaking in] Violent—of course it was. You put your 'ands on my wife when I kept tellin' you I took the thing myself.

MAGISTRATE. [Hissing, with protruded neck] Now—you will have your chance of saying what you want to say presently. Have you anything to ask the officer?

JONES. [Sullenly] No.

MAGISTRATE. Very well then. Now let us hear what the female prisoner has to say first.

MRS. JONES. Well, your Worship, of course I can only say what I've said all along, that I didn't take the box.

MAGISTRATE. Yes, but did you know that it was taken?

MRS. JONES. No, your Worship. And, of course, as to what my husband says, your Worship, I can't speak of my own knowledge. Of course, I know that he came home very late on the Monday night. It was past one o'clock when he came in, and he was not himself at all.

MAGISTRATE. Had he been drinking?

MRS. JONES. Yes, your Worship.

MAGISTRATE. And was he drunk?

MRS. JONES. Yes, your Worship, he was almost quite drunk.

MAGISTRATE. And did he say anything to you?

MRS. JONES. No, your Worship, only to call me names. And of course in the morning when I got up and went to work he was asleep. And I don't know anything more about it until I came home again. Except that Mr. Barthwick—that's my employer, your Worship—told me the box was missing.

MAGISTRATE. Yes, yes.

MRS. JONES. But of course when I was shaking out my husband's coat the cigarette box fell out and all the cigarettes were scattered on the bed.

MAGISTRATE. You say all the cigarettes were scattered on the bed? [To SNOW] Did you see the cigarettes scattered on the bed?

SNOW. No, your Worship, I did not.

MAGISTRATE. You see he says he didn't see them.

JONES. Well, they were there for all that.

SNOW. I can't say, your Worship, that I had the opportunity of going round the room; I had all my work cut out with the male prisoner.

MAGISTRATE. [To MRS. JONES] Well, what more have you to say?

MRS. JONES. Of course when I saw the box, your Worship, I was dreadfully upset, and I couldn't think wh he had done such a thing; when th officer came we were having word about it, because it is ruin to me, you Worship, in my profession, and I hav three little children dependent on me.

MAGISTRATE. [Protruding his neck Yes—yes—but what did he say t you?

MRS. JONES. I asked him whatev came over him to do such a thing—an he said it was the drink. He said tha he had had too much to drink, an something came over him. And o course, your Worship, he had had ver little to eat all day, and the drink doe go to the head when you have not ha enough to eat. Your Worship may no know, but it is the truth. And I woul like to say that all through his mar ried life I have never known him to d such a thing before, though we hav passed through great hardships an [Speaking with soft emphasis] I a quite sure he would not have done it i he had been himself at the time.

MAGISTRATE. Yes, yes. But don't yo know that that is no excuse?

MRS. JONES. Yes, your Worship. know that it is no excuse.

The MAGISTRATE leans over an parleys with his CLERK.

JACK. [Leaning over from his sea behind] I say, Dad——

BARTHWICK. Tsst! [Sheltering h mouth he speaks to ROPER] Roper, yo had better get up now and say that con sidering the circumstances and the po erty of the prisoners, we have no wis to proceed any further, and if the ma istrate would deal with the case as of of disorder only on the part of——

BALD CONSTABLE. Hssshh!

ROPER shakes his head.

MAGISTRATE. Now, supposing wh you say and what your husband says true, what I have to consider is—ho did he obtain access to this house, a were you in any way a party to his o taining access? You are the charwom employed at the house?

MRS. JONES. Yes, your Worship, a of course if I had let him into the hou it would have been very wrong of m and I have never done such a thing

· of the houses where I have been ployed.

Magistrate. Well—so you say. Now us hear what story the male prisoner kes of it.

ones. [Who leans with his arms on dock behind, speaks in a slow, sullen ce] Wot I say is wot my wife says, e never been 'ad up in a police court ore, an' I can prove I took it when iquor. I told her, an' she can tell you same, that I was goin' to throw the ig into the water sooner than 'ave n my mind.

Magistrate. But how did you get into house?

ones. I was passin'. I was goin' 'ome m the "Goat and Bells."

Magistrate. The "Goat and Bells," vhat is that? A public-house?

ones. Yes, at the corner. It was nk 'oliday, an' I'd 'ad a drop to drink. ee this young Mr. Barthwick tryin' ind the keyhole on the wrong side of door.

Magistrate. Well?

ones. [Slowly and with many uses] Well—I 'elped 'im to find it—nk as a lord 'e was. He goes on, an' nes back again, and says, "I've got 'hin' for you," 'e says, "but come in an' e a drink." So I went in just as you ght 'ave done yourself. We 'ad a nk o' whisky just as you might have , an' young Mr. Barthwick says to , "Take a drink 'nd a smoke. Take vthing you like," 'e says. And then he nt to sleep on the sofa. I 'ad some re whisky—an' I 'ad a smoke—and I some more whisky—an' I carn't tell · what happened after that.

Magistrate. Do you mean to say you re so drunk that you can remember thing?

Jack. [Softly to his father] I say, it's exactly what—— Barthwick. Tssh!

Jones. That's what I do mean.

Magistrate. And yet you say you le the box?

Jones. I never stole the box. I took it.

Magistrate. [Hissing, with pro-ded neck] You did not steal it—you k it. Did it belong to you—what is at but stealing?

Jones. I took it.

Magistrate. You took it—you took it away from their house and you took it to your house——

Jones. [Sullenly breaking in] I ain't got a house.

Magistrate. Very well, let us hear what this young man Mr.—Mr. Barthwick—has to say to your story.

Snow leaves the witness-box. The Bald Constable beckons Jack, who, clutching his hat, goes into the witness-box. Roper moves to the table set apart for his profession.

Swearing Clerk. The evidence you give to the Court shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God. Kiss the book.

The book is kissed.

Roper. [Examining] What is your name?

Jack. [In a low voice] John Barthwick, Junior.

The Clerk writes it down.

Roper. Where do you live?

Jack. At 6, Rockingham Gate.

All his answers are recorded by the Clerk.

Roper. You are the son of the owner?

Jack. [In a very low voice] Yes.

Roper. Speak up, please. Do you know the prisoner?

Jack. [Looking at the Joneses, in a low voice] I've seen Mrs. Jones. I— [In a loud voice] don't know the man.

Jones. Well, I know you!

Bald Constable. Hssh!

Roper. Now, did you come in late on the night of Easter Monday?

Jack. Yes.

Roper. And did you by mistake leave your latch-key in the door?

Jack. Yes.

Magistrate. Oh! You left your latch-key in the door?

Roper. And is that all you can remember about your coming in?

Jack. [In a loud voice] Yes, it is.

Magistrate. Now, you have heard the male prisoner's story, what do you say to that?

Jack. [Turning to the Magistrate, speaks suddenly in a confident, straightforward voice] The fact of the matter is, sir, that I'd been out to the theatre that night, and had supper afterwards, and I came in late.

MAGISTRATE. Do you remember this man being outside when you came in?

JACK. No, sir. [He hesitates] I don't think I do.

MAGISTRATE. [Somewhat puzzled] Well, did he help you to open the door, as he says? Did any one help you to open the door?

JACK. No, sir—I don't think so, sir—I don't know.

MAGISTRATE. You don't know? But you must know. It isn't a usual thing for you to have the door opened for you, is it?

JACK. [With a shamefaced smile] No.

MAGISTRATE. Very well, then——

JACK. [Desperately] The fact of the matter is, sir, I'm afraid I'd had too much champagne that night.

MAGISTRATE. [Smiling] Oh! you'd had too much champagne?

JONES. May I ask the gentleman a question?

MAGISTRATE. Yes—yes—you may ask him what questions you like.

JONES. Don't you remember you said you was a Liberal, same as your father, and you asked me wot I was?

JACK. [With his hand against his brow] I seem to remember——

JONES. And I said to you, "I'm a bloomin' Conserva*tive*," I said; an' you said to me, "You look more like one of these 'ere Socialists. Take wotever you like," you said.

JACK. [With sudden resolution] No, I don't. I don't remember anything of the sort.

JONES. Well, I do, an' my word's as good as yours. I've never been had up in a police court before. Look 'ere, don't you remember you had a sky-blue bag in your 'and——

BARTHWICK jumps.

ROPER. I submit to your Worship that these questions are hardly to the point, the prisoner having admitted that he himself does not remember anything. [There is a smile on the face of Justice] It is a case of the blind leading the blind.

JONES. [Violently] I've done no more than wot he 'as. I'm a poor man. I've got no money an' no friends—he's a toff—he can do wot I can't.

MAGISTRATE. Now, now! All this won't help you—you must be quiet. You say you took this box? Now, what made you take it? Were you pressed for money?

JONES. I'm always pressed for money.

MAGISTRATE. Was that the reason you took it?

JONES. No.

MAGISTRATE. [To SNOW] Was anything found on him?

SNOW. Yes, your Worship. There was six pounds twelve shillin's found on him, and this purse.

The red silk purse is handed to the MAGISTRATE. BARTHWICK rises from his seat, but hastily sits down again.

MAGISTRATE. [Staring at the purse] Yes, yes—let me see—— [There is a silence] No, no, I've nothing before me as to the purse. How did you come by all that money?

JONES. [After a long pause, suddenly] I declines to say.

MAGISTRATE. But if you had all that money, what made you take this box?

JONES. I took it out of spite.

MAGISTRATE. [Hissing, with protruded neck] You took it out of spite! Well now, that's something! But do you imagine you can go about the town taking things out of spite?

JONES. If you had my life, if you'd been out of work——

MAGISTRATE. Yes, yes; I know—because you're out of work you think it's an excuse for everything.

JONES. [Pointing at JACK] You ask 'im wot made 'im take the——

ROPER. [Quietly] Does your Worship require this witness in the box any longer?

MAGISTRATE. [Ironically] I think not; he is hardly profitable.

JACK leaves the witness-box, and hanging his head, resumes his seat.

JONES. You ask 'im wot made 'im take the lady's——

But the BALD CONSTABLE catches him by the sleeve.

BALD CONSTABLE. Sssh!

MAGISTRATE. [Emphatically] Now en to me. I've nothing to do with at he may or may not have taken. ıy did you resist the police in the cution of their duty?

ONES. It warn't their duty to take my e, a respectable woman, that 'adn't ıe nothing.

MAGISTRATE. But I say it was. What de you strike the officer a blow?

ONES. Any man would a struck 'im low. I'd strike 'im again, I would.

MAGISTRATE. You are not making ır case any better by violence. How you suppose we could get on if rybody behaved like you?

ONES. [Leaning forward, earnestly] ll, wot about 'er; who's to make up er for this? Who's to give 'er back good name?

MRS. JONES. Your Worship, it's the ldren that's preying on his mind, be- se of course I've lost my work. And e had to find another room owing to scandal.

MAGISTRATE. Yes, yes, I know—but he hadn't acted like this nobody uld have suffered.

ONES. [Glaring round at JACK] I've ne no worse than wot 'e 'as. Wot I nt to know is wot's goin' to be done 'im?

The BALD CONSTABLE again says "Hssh!"

ROPER. Mr. Barthwick wishes it own, your Worship, that considering poverty of the prisoners he does not ss the charge as to the box. Perhaps ır Worship would deal with the case one of disorder.

ONES. I don't want it smothered up, vant it all dealt with fair—I want my hts——

MAGISTRATE. [Rapping his desk] Now u have said all you have to say, and u will be quiet.

There is a silence; the MAGISTRATE bends over and parleys with his CLERK.

MAGISTRATE. Yes, I think I may discharge the woman. [In a kindly voice addresses MRS. JONES, who stands unmoving with her hands crossed on the rail] It is very unfortunate for you that this man has behaved as he has. It is not the consequences to him but the consequences to you. You have been brought here twice, you have lost your work—[He glares at JONES] and this is what always happens. Now you may go away, and I am very sorry it was necessary to bring you here at all.

MRS. JONES. [Softly] Thank you very much, your Worship.

She leaves the dock and, looking back at JONES, twists her fingers and is still.

MAGISTRATE. Yes, yes, but I can't pass it over. Go away, there's a good woman.

MRS. JONES stands back. The MAGISTRATE leans his head on his hand; then raising it he speaks to JONES.

MAGISTRATE. Now, listen to me. Do you wish the case to be settled here, or do you wish it to go before a Jury?

JONES. [Muttering] I don't want no Jury.

MAGISTRATE. Very well then, I will deal with it here. [After a pause] You have pleaded guilty to stealing this box——

JONES. Not to stealin'——

BALD CONSTABLE. Hssshh!

MAGISTRATE. And to assaulting the police——

JONES. Any man as was a man——

MAGISTRATE. Your conduct here has been most improper. You give the excuse that you were drunk when you stole the box. I tell you that is no excuse. If you choose to get drunk and break the law afterwards you must take the consequences. And let me tell you that men like you, who get drunk and give way to your spite or whatever it is that's in you, are—are—a nuisance to the community.

JACK. [Whispering] Dad! that's what you——!

BARTHWICK. Tsst.

There is a silence, while the MAGISTRATE consults his CLERK; JONES leans forward waiting.

MAGISTRATE. This is your first offence, and I am going to give you a light sentence. [Speaking sharply, but without expression] One month with hard labour.

He bends, and parleys with his CLERK. The BALD CONSTABLE and another help JONES from the dock.

JONES. [Stopping and twisting round] Call this justice? What about 'im? 'E got drunk! 'E took the purse—'e took the purse but [In a muffled shout] it's 'is money got 'im off—Justice!

The prisoner's door is shut on JONES, and from the seedy-looking men and women comes a hoarse and whispering groan.

MAGISTRATE. We will now adjour for lunch!

[He rises from his sea

The Court is in a stir. ROPER ge up and speaks to the reporte JACK, throwing up his hea walks with a swagger to the co ridor; BARTHWICK follows.

MRS. JONES. [Turning to him with humble gesture] Oh! Sir!——

BARTHWICK hesitates, then yieldin to his nerves, he makes a sham faced gesture of refusal, and hu ries out of Court. MRS. JON stands looking after him.

The curtain falls.

TIME: The present. The action passes throughout midsummer day on the lawn of Colonel Hope's house, near the Thames above Oxford.

JOY

A PLAY ON THE LETTER "I"

IN THREE ACTS

ACT I

e time is morning, and the scene a level lawn, beyond which the river is running amongst fields. A huge old beech tree overshadows everything, in the darkness of whose hollow many things are hidden. A rustic seat encircles it. A low wall clothed in creepers, with two openings, divides this lawn from the flowery approaches to the house. Close to the wall there is a swing. The sky is clear and sunny. COLONEL HOPE is seated in a garden-chair, reading a newspaper through pince-nez. He is fifty-five, and bald, with drooping grey moustaches and a weather-darkened face. He wears a flannel suit, and a hat from Panama; a tennis racquet leans against his chair. MRS. HOPE comes quickly through the opening of the wall, with roses in her hands. She is going grey; she wears tan gauntlets, and no hat. Her manner is decided, her voice emphatic, as though aware that there is no nonsense in its owner's composition. Screened by the hollow tree, MISS BEECH is seated; and JOY is perched on a lower branch, concealed by foliage.

MRS. HOPE. I told Molly in my let-r that she'd have to walk up, Tom.

COLONEL. Walk up in this heat? My ar, why didn't you order Benson's fly?

MRS. HOPE. Expense for nothing! Bob n bring up her things in the barrow. ve told Joy I won't have her going wn to meet the train. She's so ex-ted about her mother's coming there's doing anything with her.

COLONEL. No wonder, after two months.

MRS. HOPE. Well, she's going home to-morrow she must just keep herself fresh for the dancing to-night. I'm not going to get people in to dance, and have Joy worn out before they begin.

COLONEL. [Dropping his paper] I don't like Molly's walking up.

MRS. HOPE. A great strong woman like Molly Gwyn! It isn't half a mile.

COLONEL. I don't like it, Nell; it's not hospitable.

MRS. HOPE. Rubbish! If you want to throw away money, you must just find some better investment than those wretched three per cents of yours. The green-fly are in my roses already! Did you ever see anything so disgusting? [They bend over the roses they have grown, and lose all sense of everything] Where's the syringe? I saw you mooning about with it last night, Tom.

COLONEL. [Uneasily] Mooning! [He retires behind his paper. MRS. HOPE enters the hollow of the tree] There's an account of that West Australian swindle. Set of ruffians! Listen to this, Nell! "It is understood that amongst the shareholders are large numbers of women, clergymen, and Army officers." How people can be such fools!

Becoming aware that his absorption is unobserved, he drops his glasses, and reverses his chair towards the tree.

MRS. HOPE. [Reappearing with a garden syringe] I simply won't have Dick keep his fishing things in the tree; there's a whole potful of disgusting worms. I can't touch them. You must go and take 'em out, Tom.

In his turn the COLONEL enters the hollow of the tree.

MRS. HOPE. [Personally] What on earth's the pleasure of it? I can't see! He never catches anything worth eating.

The COLONEL reappears with a paint pot full of worms; he holds them out abstractedly.

MRS. HOPE. [Jumping] Don't put them near me!

MISS BEECH. [From behind the tree] Don't hurt the poor creatures.

COLONEL. [Turning] Hallo, Peachey? What are you doing round there?

[He puts the worms down on the seat.

MRS. HOPE. Tom, take the worms off that seat at once!

COLONEL. [Somewhat flurried] Good gad! I don't know what to do with the beastly worms!

MRS. HOPE. It's not my business to look after Dick's worms. Don't put them on the ground. I won't have them anywhere where they can crawl about.

[She flicks some green-fly off her roses.

COLONEL. [Looking into the pot as though the worms could tell him where to put them] Dash!

MISS BEECH. Give them to me.

MRS. HOPE. [Relieved] Yes, give them to Peachey.

There comes from round the tree MISS BEECH, old-fashioned, barrel-shaped, balloony in the skirts. She takes the paint pot, and sits beside it on the rustic seat.

MISS BEECH. Poor creatures!

MRS. HOPE. Well, it's beyond me how you can make pets of worms—wriggling, crawling, horrible things!

ROSE, who is young and comely, in a pale print frock, comes from the house and places letters before her on a silver salver.

MRS. HOPE. [Taking the letters] What about Miss Joy's frock, Rose?

ROSE. Please, 'm, I can't get on with the back without Miss Joy.

MRS. HOPE. Well, then you must just find her. I don't know where she is.

ROSE. [In a slow, sidelong manner] If you please, Mum, I think Miss Joy's up in the——

[She stops, seeing MISS BEECH signing to her with both hands

MRS. HOPE. [Sharply] What is it Peachey?

MISS BEECH. [Selecting a finger] Pricked meself!

MRS. HOPE. Let's look!

[She bends to look, but MISS BEECH places the finger in her mouth.

ROSE. [Glancing askance at the COLONEL] If you please, Mum, it's—below the waist, I think I can manage with the dummy.

MRS. HOPE. Well, you can try. [Opening her letter as ROSE retires] Here's Molly about her train.

MISS BEECH. Is there a letter for me?

MRS. HOPE. No, Peachey.

MISS BEECH. There never is.

COLONEL. What's that? You got four by the first post.

MISS BEECH. Exceptions!

COLONEL. [Looking over his glasses] Why! You know, you get 'em every day!

MRS. HOPE. Molly says she'll be down by the eleven thirty. [In an injured voice] She'll be here in half an hour. [Reading with disapproval from the letter] "Maurice Lever is coming down by the same train to see Mr. Hentz about the Tocopala Gold Mine. Could you give him a bed for the night?"

Silence, slight but ominous.

COLONEL. [Calling in to his aid hi sacred hospitality] Of course we must give him a bed!

MRS. HOPE. Just like a man! What room I should like to know!

COLONEL. Pink.

MRS. HOPE. As if Molly wouldn't have the pink!

COLONEL. [Ruefully] I thought she'd have the blue.

MRS. HOPE. You know perfectly well it's full of earwigs, Tom. I killed ten there yesterday morning.

MISS BEECH. Poor creatures!

MRS. HOPE. I don't know that I approve of this Mr. Lever's dancing attendance. Molly's only thirty-six.

COLONEL. [In a high voice] You can't refuse him a bed; I never heard of such a thing.

MRS. HOPE. [Reading from the let

r] "This gold mine seems to be a plendid chance. [She glances at the OLONEL] I've put all my spare cash into . They're issuing some Preference iares now; if Uncle Tom wants an ivestment." [She pauses, then in a hanged, decided voice] Well, I suppose shall have to screw him in somehow.

COLONEL. What's that about gold ines? Gambling nonsense! Molly ught to know my views.

MRS. HOPE. [Folding the letter away ut of her consciousness] Oh! your iews! This may be a specially good iance.

MISS BEECH. Ahem! Special case!

MRS. HOPE. [Paying no attention] I'm ck of these 3 per cent dividends. When ou've only got so little money, to put all into that India Stock; it might be arning 6 per cent at least, quite safely! here are ever so many things I want.

COLONEL. There you go!

MRS. HOPE. As to Molly, I think it's igh time her husband came home to ook after her, instead of sticking out iere in that hot place. In fact——

MISS BEECH looks up at the tree and exhibits cerebral excitement.

MRS. HOPE. I don't know what Geoff's out; why doesn't he find something England, where they could live to-ether.

COLONEL. Don't say anything against Iolly, Nell!

MRS. HOPE. Well, I don't believe in usband and wife being separated. hat's not my idea of married life.

The COLONEL whistles quizzically.

MRS. HOPE. Ah, yes, she's your niece, ot mine! Molly's very——

MISS BEECH. Ouch!

[She sucks her finger.

MRS. HOPE. Well, if I couldn't sew t your age, Peachey, without pricking y fingers! Tom, if I have Mr. Lever ere, you'll just attend to what I say nd look into that mine!

COLONEL. Look into your grand-nother! I haven't made a study of eology for nothing. For every ounce ou take out of a gold mine, you put an unce and a half in. Any fool knows iat, eh, Peachey?

MISS BEECH. I hate your horrid mines, with all the poor creatures underground.

MRS. HOPE. Nonsense, Peachey! As if they'd go there if they didn't want to!

COLONEL. Why don't you read your paper, then you'd see what a lot of wild-cat things there are about.

MRS. HOPE. [Abstractedly] I can't put Ernest and Letty in the blue room, there's only the single bed. Suppose I put Mr. Lever there, and say nothing about the earwigs. I daresay he'll never notice.

COLONEL. Treat a guest like that!

MRS. HOPE. Then where am I to put him for goodness' sake?

COLONEL. Put him in my dressing-room, I'll turn out.

MRS. HOPE. Rubbish, Tom, I won't have you turned out, that's flat. He can have Joy's room, and she can sleep with the earwigs.

JOY. [From her hiding-place upon a lower branch of the hollow tree] I won't.

MRS. HOPE and the COLONEL jump.

COLONEL. God bless my soul!

MRS. HOPE. You wretched girl? I told you never to climb that tree again. Did you know, Peachey?

MISS BEECH smiles.

MRS. HOPE. She's always up there, spoiling all her frocks. Come down now, Joy; there's a good child!

JOY. I don't want to sleep with earwigs, Aunt Nell.

MISS BEECH. I'll sleep with the poor creatures.

MRS. HOPE. [After a pause] Well, it would be a mercy if you would for once, Peachey.

COLONEL. Nonsense, I won't have Peachey——

MRS. HOPE. Well, who is to sleep there then?

JOY. [Coaxingly] Let me sleep with Mother, Aunt Nell, do!

MRS. HOPE. Litter her up with a great girl like you, as if we'd only one spare room! Tom, see that she comes down—I can't stay here, I must manage something.

[She goes away towards the house.

COLONEL. [Moving to the tree, and looking up] You heard what your aunt said?

JOY. [Softly] Oh, Uncle Tom.

COLONEL. I shall have to come up after you.

JOY. Oh, do, and Peachey too!

COLONEL. [Trying to restrain a smile] Peachey, you talk to her. [Without waiting for MISS BEECH however, he proceeds] What'll your aunt say to me if I don't get you down?

MISS BEECH. Poor creature!

JOY. I don't want to be worried about my frock.

COLONEL. [Scratching his bald head] Well, I shall catch it.

JOY. Oh, Uncle Tom, your head is so beautiful from here!

[Leaning over, she fans it with a leafy twig.

MISS BEECH. Disrespectful little toad.

COLONEL. [Quickly putting on his hat] You'll fall out, and a pretty mess that'll make on—[he looks uneasily at the ground]—my lawn!

A voice is heard calling "Colonel! Colonel!"

JOY. There's Dick calling you, Uncle Tom. [She disappears.

DICK. [Appearing in the opening of the wall] Ernie's waiting to play you that single, Colonel! [He disappears.

JOY. Quick, Uncle Tom! Oh! do go, before he finds I'm up here.

MISS BEECH. Secret little creature!

The COLONEL picks up his racquet, shakes his fist, and goes away.

JOY. [Calmly] I'm coming down now, Peachey. [Climbing down] Look out! I'm dropping on your head.

MISS BEECH. [Unmoved] Don't hurt yourself!

JOY drops on the rustic seat and rubs her shin.

MISS BEECH. Told you so! [She hunts in a little bag for plaster] Let's see!

JOY. [Seeing the worms] Ugh!

MISS BEECH. What's the matter with the poor creatures?

JOY. They're so wriggly!

She backs away and sits down in the swing. She is just seventeen, light and slim, brown-haired, fresh-coloured, and grey-eyed; her white frock reaches to he ankles, she wears a sunbonnet

JOY. Peachey, how long were yo Mother's governess?

MISS BEECH. Five years.

JOY. Was she as bad to teach as me

MISS BEECH. Worse!

JOY claps her hands.

MISS BEECH. She was the worst gir I ever taught.

JOY. Then you weren't fond of her?

MISS BEECH. Oh! yes, I was.

JOY. Fonder than of me?

MISS BEECH. Don't you ask such a lo of questions!

JOY. Peachey, duckie, what wa Mother's worst fault?

MISS BEECH. Doing what she knev she oughtn't.

JOY. Was she ever sorry?

MISS BEECH. Yes, but she alway went on doin' it.

JOY. I think being sorry's stupid!

MISS BEECH. Oh, do you?

JOY. It isn't any good. Was Mothe revengeful, like me?

MISS BEECH. Ah! Wasn't she?

JOY. And jealous?

MISS BEECH. The most jealous gir I ever saw.

JOY. [Nodding] I like to be like her.

MISS BEECH. [Regarding her intently] Yes! you've got all your troubles befor you.

JOY. Mother was married at eight een, wasn't she, Peachey? Was she— was she much in love with Fathe then?

MISS BEECH. [With a sniff] About a much as usual.

She takes the paint pot, and walk ing round begins to release th worms.

JOY. [Indifferently] They don't get o now, you know.

MISS BEECH. What d'you mean b that, disrespectful little creature?

JOY. [In a hard voice] They haven' ever since I've known them.

MISS BEECH. [Looks at her, and turn away again] Don't talk about suc things.

JOY. I suppose you don't know M Lever? [Bitterly] He's such a coc beast. He never loses his temper.

Miss Beech. Is that why you don't ke him?

Joy. [Frowning] No—yes—I don't now.

Miss Beech. Oh! perhaps you do
ke him?

Joy. I don't; I hate him.

Miss Beech. [Standing still] Fie! aughty temper!

Joy. Well, so would you! He takes up
I Mother's time.

Miss Beech. [In a peculiar voice]
h! does he!

Joy. When he comes I might just as ell go to bed. [Passionately] And now e's chosen to-day to come down here, hen I haven't seen her for two ionths! Why couldn't he come when lother and I'd gone home. It's simply rutal!

Miss Beech. But your mother likes im?

Joy. [Sullenly] I don't want her to
ke him.

Miss Beech. [With a long look at oy] I see!

Joy. What are you doing, Peachey?

Miss Beech. [Releasing a worm]
etting the poor creatures go.

Joy. If I tell Dick he'll never forgive ou.

Miss Beech. [Sidling behind the wing and plucking off Joy's sunbonnet.
With devilry] Ah-h-h! You've done our hair up; so that's why you ouldn't come down!

Joy. [Springing up and pouting] I idn't want anyone to see before lother. You are a pig, Peachey!

Miss Beech. I thought there was omething!

Joy. [Twisting round] How does it ok?

Miss Beech. I've seen better.

Joy. You tell anyone before Mother
omes and see what I do!

Miss Beech. Well, don't you tell bout my worms, then!

Joy. Give me my hat! [Backing hast- y towards the tree, and putting her nger to her lips] Look out! Dick!

Miss Beech. Oh! dear!

She sits down on the swing concealing the paint pot with her feet and skirts.

Joy. [On the rustic seat, and in a vio- lent whisper] I hope the worms will crawl up your legs!

Dick, in flannels and hard straw hat comes in. He is a quiet and cheerful boy of twenty. His eyes are always fixed on Joy.

Dick. [Grimacing] The Colonel's getting licked. Hallo! Peachey, in the swing?

Joy. [Chuckling] Swing her, Dick!

Miss Beech. [Quivering with emo- tion] Little creature!

Joy. Swing her!

Dick takes the ropes.

Miss Beech. [Quietly] It makes me sick, young man.

Dick. [Patting her gently on the back]
All right, Peachey.

Miss Beech. [Maliciously] Could you get me my sewing from the seat?
Just behind Joy.

Joy. [Leaning her head against the tree] If you do, I won't dance with you to-night.

Dick stands paralysed. Miss Beech gets off the swing, picks up the paint pot and stands concealing it behind her.

Joy. Look what she's got behind her,
sly old thing!

Miss Beech. Oh! dear!

Joy. Dance with her, Dick.

Miss Beech. If he dare!

Joy. Dance with her, or I won't dance with you to-night.

[She whistles a waltz.

Dick. [Desperately] Come on then, Peachey. We must.

Joy. Dance, dance!

Dick seizes Miss Beech by the waist. She drops the paint pot.
They revolve.

Joy. [Convulsed] Oh, Peachey, oh!

Miss Beech is dropped upon the rustic seat. Dick seizes Joy's hands and drags her up.

Joy. No, no! I won't!

Miss Beech. [Panting] Dance, dance with the poor young man! [She moves her hands] La la—la la la—la la la!

Dick and Joy dance.

Dick. By Jove, Joy! You've done your hair up. I say, how jolly! You do look——

JOY. [Throwing her hands up to her hair] I didn't mean you to see!

DICK. [In a hurt voice] Oh! didn't you? I'm awfully sorry!

JOY. [Flashing round] Oh, you old Peachey!

[She looks at the ground, and then again at DICK.

MISS BEECH. [Sidling round the tree] Oh! dear!

JOY. [Whispering] She's been letting out your worms.

MISS BEECH disappears from view.

JOY. Look!

DICK. [Quickly] Hang the worms! Joy, promise me the second and fourth and sixth and eighth and tenth and supper, to-night. Promise! Do!

JOY shakes her head.

DICK. It's not much to ask.

JOY. I won't promise anything.

DICK. Why not?

JOY. Because Mother's coming. I won't make any arrangements.

DICK. [Tragically] It's our last night.

JOY. [Scornfully] You don't understand! [Dancing and clasping her hands] Mother's coming, Mother's coming!

DICK. [Violently] I wish—— Promise, Joy!

JOY. [Looking over her shoulder] Sly old thing! If you'll pay Peachey out, I'll promise you supper!

MISS BEECH. [From behind the tree] I hear you.

JOY. [Whispering] Pay her out, pay her out! She's let out all your worms!

DICK. [Looking moodily at the paint pot] I say, is it true that Maurice Lever's coming with your mother? I've met him playing cricket, he's rather a good sort.

JOY. [Flashing out] I hate him.

DICK. [Troubled] Do you? Why? I thought—I didn't know—if I'd known of course, I'd have——

He is going to say "hated him too!" But the voices of ERNEST BLUNT and the COLONEL are heard approaching, in dispute.

JOY. Oh! Dick, hide me, I don't want my hair seen till Mother comes.

[She springs into the hollow tree.

The COLONEL and ERNEST appear in the opening of the wall.

ERNEST. The ball was out, Colonel.

COLONEL. Nothing of the sort.

ERNEST. A good foot out.

COLONEL. It was not, sir. I saw the chalk fly.

ERNEST is twenty-eight, with a little moustache, and the positive cool voice of a young man who knows that he knows everything. He is perfectly calm.

ERNEST. I was nearer to it than you.

COLONEL. [In a high, hot voice] I don't care where you were, I hate a fellow who can't keep cool.

MISS BEECH. [From behind the hollow tree] Fie! Fie!

ERNEST. We're two to one, Letty says the ball was out.

COLONEL. Letty's your wife, she'd say anything.

ERNEST. Well, look here, Colonel, I'll show you the very place it pitched.

COLONEL. Gammon! You've lost your temper, you don't know what you're talking about.

ERNEST. [Coolly] I suppose you'll admit the rule that one umpires one's own court.

COLONEL. [Hotly] Certainly not in this case!

MISS BEECH. [From behind the hollow tree] Special case!

ERNEST. [Moving chin in collar—very coolly] Well, of course if you won't play the game!

COLONEL [In a towering passion] If you lose your temper like this, I'll never play with you again.

To LETTY, a pretty soul in a linen suit, approaching through the wall.

COLONEL. Do you mean to say that ball was out, Letty?

LETTY. Of course it was, Father.

COLONEL. You say that because he's your husband. [He sits on the rustic seat] If your mother'd been there she'd have backed me up!

LETTY. Mother wants Joy, Dick, about her frock.

DICK. I—I don't know where she is.

MISS BEECH. [From behind the hollow tree] Ahem!

LETTY. What's the matter, Peachey? MISS BEECH. Swallowed a fly. Poor eature!

ERNEST. [Returning to his point] hy I know the ball was out, Colonel, as because it pitched in a line with at arbutus tree——

COLONEL. [Rising] Arbutus tree! [To s daughter] Where's your mother?

LETTY. In the blue room, Father.

ERNEST. The ball was a good foot it; at the height it was coming when passed me——

COLONEL. [Staring at him] You're a— ou're a—a theorist! From where you ere you couldn't see the ball at all. [To LETTY] Where's your mother?

LETTY. [Emphatically] In the blue oom, Father!

The COLONEL glares confusedly, and goes away towards the blue room.

ERNEST. [In the swing, and with a mile] Your old Dad'll never be a portsman!

LETTY. [Indignantly] I wish you ouldn't call Father old, Ernie! What me's Molly coming, Peachey?

ROSE has come from the house, and stands waiting for a chance to speak.

ERNEST. [Breaking in] Your old ad's only got one fault; he can't take impersonal view of things.

MISS BEECH. Can you find me any ne who can?

ERNEST. [With a smile] Well, eachey!

MISS BEECH. [Ironically] Oh! of ourse, there's you!

ERNEST. I don't know about that! ut——

ROSE. [To LETTY] Please, Miss, the Missis says will you and Mr. Ernest ease to move your things into Miss eachey's room.

ERNEST. [Vexed] Deuce of a nuisance avin' to turn out for this fellow Lever. What did Molly want to bring him for?

MISS BEECH. Course you've no per- onal feeling in the matter!

ROSE. [Speaking to MISS BEECH] he Missis says you're to please move our things into the blue room, please, Miss.

LETTY. Aha, Peachey! That settles you! Come on, Ernie!

She goes towards the house. ERNEST, rising from the swing, turns to MISS BEECH, who follows.

ERNEST. [Smiling, faintly superior] Personal, not a bit! I only think while Molly's out at grass, she oughtn't to——

MISS BEECH. [Sharply] Oh! do you?

She hustles ERNEST out through the wall, but his voice is heard faintly from the distance: "I think it's jolly thin."

ROSE. [To DICK] The Missis says you're to take all your worms and things, Sir, and put them where they won't be seen.

DICK. [Shortly] Haven't got any!

ROSE. The Missis says she'll be very angry if you don't put your worms away; and would you come and help kill earwigs in the blue——?

DICK. Hang! [He goes, and ROSE is left alone.

ROSE. [Looking straight before her] Please, Miss Joy, the Missis says will you go to her about your frock.

There is a little pause, then from the hollow tree JOY'S voice is heard.

JOY. No—o!

ROSE. If you didn't come, I was to tell you she was going to put you in the blue——

JOY looks out of the tree.

ROSE. [Immovable, but smiling] Oh, Miss, Joy, you've done your hair up!

JOY retires into the tree.

ROSE. Please, Miss, what shall I tell the Missis?

JOY. [JOY'S voice is heard] Anything you like!

ROSE. [Over her shoulder] I shall be drove to tell her a story, Miss.

JOY. All right! Tell it.

ROSE goes away, and JOY comes out. She sits on the rustic seat and waits. DICK, coming softly from the house, approaches her.

DICK. [Looking at her intently] Joy! I wanted to say something——

JOY does not look at him, but twists her fingers.

DICK. I shan't see you again you know after to-morrow till I come up for the 'Varsity match.

JOY. [Smiling] But that's next week.

DICK. Must you go home to-morrow?

JOY nods three times.

DICK. [Coming closer] I shall miss you so awfully. You don't know how I——

JOY shakes her head.

DICK. Do look at me!

JOY steals a look.

DICK. Oh! Joy!

Again JOY shakes her head.

JOY. [Suddenly] Don't!

DICK. [Seizing her hand] Oh, Joy! Can't you——

JOY. [Drawing the hand away] Oh! don't.

DICK. [Bending his head] It's—it's—so——

JOY. [Quietly] Don't, Dick!

DICK. But I can't help it! It's too much for me, Joy, I must tell you——

MRS. GWYN is seen approaching towards the house.

JOY. [Spinning round] It's Mother—oh, Mother! [She rushes at her.

MRS. GWYN is a handsome creature of thirty-six, dressed in a muslin frock. She twists her daughter round, and kisses her.

MRS. GWYN. How sweet you look with your hair up, Joy! Who's this?

[Glancing with a smile at DICK.

JOY. Dick Merton—in my letters you know.

[She looks at DICK as though she wished him gone.

MRS. GWYN. How do you do?

DICK. [Shaking hands] How d'you do? I think if you'll excuse me—I'll go in. [He goes uncertainly.

MRS. GWYN. What's the matter with him?

JOY. Oh, nothing! [Hugging her] Mother! You do look such a duck. Why did you come by the towing-path, wasn't it cooking?

MRS. GWYN. [Avoiding her eyes] Mr. Lever wanted to go into Mr. Henty's.

[Her manner is rather artificially composed.

JOY. [Dully] Oh! Is he—is he really coming here, Mother?

MRS. GWYN. [Whose voice has hardened just a little] If Aunt Nell got a room for him—of course—wh not?

JOY. [Digging her chin into he mother's shoulder] Why couldn't h choose some day when we'd gone? wanted you all to myself.

MRS. GWYN. You are a quaint chil —when I was your age——

JOY. [Suddenly looking up] Oh Mother, you must have been a chook

MRS. GWYN. Well, I was about twic as old as you, I know that.

JOY. Had you any—any other offer before you were married, Mother?

MRS. GWYN. [Smilingly] Heaps!

JOY. [Reflectively] Oh!

MRS. GWYN. Why? Have you bee having any?

JOY. [Glancing at MRS. GWYN, an then down] N—o, of course not!

MRS. GWYN. Where are they all Where's Peachey?

JOY. Fussing about somewhere; don let's hurry! Oh! you duckie—duckie Aren't there any letters from Dad?

MRS. GWYN. [In a harder voice] Ye one or two.

JOY. [Hesitating] Can't I see?

MRS. GWYN. I didn't bring them [Changing the subject obviously] Hel me to tidy—I'm so hot I don't kno what to do.

[She takes out a powder-puff bag with a tiny looking-glass.

JOY. How lovely it'll be to-morro —going home!

MRS. GWYN. [With an uneasy look London's dreadfully stuffy, Joy. You only get knocked up again.

JOY. [With consternation] Oh! bu Mother, I must come.

MRS. GWYN. [Forcing a smile] Oh well if you must, you must!

JOY makes a dash at her.

MRS. GWYN. Don't rumple me again Here's Uncle Tom.

JOY. [Quickly] Mother, we're goin to dance to-night, promise to dance wi me, there are three more girls tha men, at least, and don't dance too muc with—with—you know—because I'm- [dropping her voice and very still]- jealous.

MRS. GWYN. [Forcing a laugh] You re funny!

JOY. [Very quickly] I haven't made ny engagements because of you.

The COLONEL approaches through the wall.

MRS. GWYN. Well, Uncle Tom?

COLONEL. [Genially] Why, Molly! He kisses her] What made you come y the towing-path?

JOY. Because it's so much cooler, of ourse.

COLONEL. Hallo! What's the matter ith you? Phew! you've got your hair p! Go and tell your aunt your mother's n the lawn. Cut along!

JOY goes, blowing a kiss.

COLONEL. Cracked about you, Molly! imply cracked! We shall miss her hen you take her off to-morrow. [He laces a chair for her] Sit down, sit own, you must be tired in this heat. 've sent Bob for your things with the heelbarrow; what have you got—only bag, I suppose?

MRS. GWYN. [Sitting, with a smile] hat's all, Uncle Tom, except—my unk and hat-box.

COLONEL. Phew! And what's-his-ame brought a bag, I suppose?

MRS. GWYN. They're all together. I ope it's not too much, Uncle Tom.

COLONEL [Dubiously] Oh! Bob'll anage! I suppose you see a good deal f—of—Lever. That's his brother in the uards, isn't it?

MRS. GWYN. Yes.

COLONEL. Now what does this chap o?

MRS. GWYN. What should he do, Uncle Tom? He's a director.

COLONEL. Guinea-pig! [Dubiously] our bringing him down was a good idea.

MRS. GWYN, looking at him side-long, bites her lips.

COLONEL. I should like to have a look t him. But, I say, you know Molly—ines, mines! There are a lot of these haps about, whose business is to cook eir own dinners. Your aunt thinks——

MRS. GWYN. Oh! Uncle Tom, don't ell me what Aunt Nell thinks!

COLONEL. Well—well! Look here, old irl! It's my experience never to—what I mean is—never to trust too much to a man who has to do with mining. I've always refused to have anything to do with mines. If your husband were in England, of course, I'd say nothing.

MRS. GWYN. [Very still] We'd better keep him out of the question, hadn't we?

COLONEL. Of course, if you wish it, my dear.

MRS. GWYN. Unfortunately, I do.

COLONEL. [Nervously] Ah! yes, I know; but look here, Molly, your aunt thinks you're in a very delicate position—in fact, she thinks you see too much of young Lever——

MRS. GWYN. [Stretching herself like an angry cat] Does she? And what do you think?

COLONEL. I? I make a point of not thinking. I only know that here he is, and I don't want you to go burning your fingers, eh?

MRS. GWYN sits with a vindictive smile.

COLONEL. A gold mine's a gold mine. I don't mean he deliberately—but they take in women and parsons, and—and all sorts of fools. [Looking down] And then, you know, I can't tell your feelings, my dear, and I don't want to; but a man about town'll compromise a woman as soon as he'll look at her, and [Softly shaking his head] I don't like that, Molly! It's not the thing!

MRS. GWYN sits unmoved, smiling the same smile, and the COLONEL gives her a nervous look.

COLONEL. If—if—you were any other woman—I shouldn't care—and if—if you were a plain woman, damme, you might do what you liked! I know you and Geoff don't get on; but here's this child of yours, devoted to you, and—and don't you see, old girl? Eh?

MRS. GWYN. [With a little hard laugh] Thanks! Perfectly! I suppose as you don't thi k, Uncle Tom, it never occurred to you that I have rather a lonely time of it.

COLONEL. [With compunction] Oh! my dear, yes, of course I know it must be beastly.

MRS. GWYN. [Stonily] It is.

COLONEL. Yes, yes! [Speaking in a surprised voice] I don't know what I'm talking like this for! It's your aunt! She goes on at me till she gets on my nerves. What d'you think she wants me to do now? Put money into this gold mine! Did you ever hear such folly?

MRS. GWYN. [Breaking into laughter] Oh! Uncle Tom!

COLONEL. All very well for you to laugh, Molly!

MRS. GWYN. [Calmly] And how much are you going to put in?

COLONEL. Not a farthing! Why, I've got nothing but my pension and three thousand India Stock!

MRS. GWYN. Only ninety pounds a year, besides your pension! D'you mean to say that's all you've got, Uncle Tom? I never knew that before. What a shame!

COLONEL. [Feelingly] It is—a d—d shame! I don't suppose there's another case in the army of a man being treated as I've been.

MRS. GWYN. But how on earth do you manage here on so little?

COLONEL. [Brooding] Your aunt's very funny. She's a born manager. She'd manage the hind leg off a donkey; but if I want five shillings for a charity or what not, I have to whistle for it. And then all of a sudden, Molly, she'll take it into her head to spend goodness knows what on some trumpery or other, and come to me for the money. If I haven't got it to give her, out she flies about 3 per cent, and worries me to invest in some wild-cat or other, like your friend's thing, the Jaco—what is it? I don't pay the slightest attention to her.

MRS. HOPE. [From the direction of the house] Tom!

COLONEL. [Rising] Yes, dear! [Then dropping his voice] I say, Molly, don't you mind what I said about young Lever. I don't want you to imagine that I think harm of people—you know I don't—but so many women come to grief, and—[hotly]—I can't stand men about town; not that he of course——

MRS. HOPE. [Peremptorily] Tom!

COLONEL. [In hasty confidence] I find it best to let your aunt run on. If she says anything——

MRS. HOPE. To-om!

COLONEL. Yes, dear!

He goes hastily. MRS. GWYN sits drawing circles on the ground with her charming parasol. Suddenly she springs to her feet, and stands waiting like an animal at bay. The COLONEL and MRS. HOPE approach her talking.

MRS. HOPE. Well, how was I to know? COLONEL. Didn't Joy come and tell you?

MRS. HOPE. I don't know what's the matter with that child. Well, Molly, so here you are. You're before your time—that train's always late.

MRS. GWYN. [With faint irony] I'm sorry, Aunt Nell!

They bob, seem to take fright, and kiss each other gingerly.

MRS. HOPE. What have you done with Mr. Lever? I shall have to put him in Peachey's room. Tom's got no champagne.

COLONEL. They've a very decent brand down at the George, Molly, I'll send Bob over——

MRS. HOPE. Rubbish, Tom! He'll just have to put up with what he can get!

MRS. GWYN. Of course! He's not a snob! For goodness' sake, Aunt Nell, don't put yourself out! I'm sorry I suggested his coming.

COLONEL. My dear, we ought to have champagne in the house—in case of accident.

MRS. GWYN. [Shaking him gently by the coat] No, please, Uncle Tom!

MRS. HOPE. [Suddenly] Now, I've told your uncle, Molly, that he's not to go in for this gold mine without making certain it's a good thing. Mind, I think you've been very rash. I'm going to give you a good talking to; and that's not all—you oughtn't to go about like this with a young man; he's not at all bad looking. I remember him perfectly well at the Fleming's dance.

On MRS. GWYN'S lips there comes a little mocking smile.

COLONEL. [Pulling his wife's sleeve] Nell!

MRS. HOPE. No, Tom, I'm going to ılk to Molly; she's old enough to know etter.

MRS GWYN. Yes?

MRS. HOPE. Yes, and you'll get your-elf into a mess; I don't approve of it, nd when I see a thing I don't approve f——

COLONEL. [Walking about, and pull-ıg his moustache] Nell, I won't have , I simply won't have it.

MRS. HOPE. What rate of interest are ıese Preference Shares to pay?

MRS. GWYN. [Still smiling] Ten per ent.

MRS. HOPE. What did I tell you, om? And are they safe?

MRS. GWYN. You'd better ask Iaurice.

MRS. HOPE. There, you see, you call im Maurice! Now supposing your un-le went in for some of them——

COLONEL. [Taking off his hat—in a igh, hot voice] I'm not going in for nything of the sort.

MRS. HOPE. Don't swing your hat by ıe brim! Go and look if you can see im coming!

The COLONEL goes.

MRS. HOPE. [In a lower voice] Your ncle's getting very bald. I've only houlder of lamb for lunch, and a salad. t's lucky it's too hot to eat.

MISS BEECH has appeared while she is speaking.

MRS. HOPE. Here she is, Peachey!

MISS BEECH. I see her.

[She kisses MRS. GWYN, and looks at her intently.

MRS. GWYN. [Shrugging her shoul-ers] Well, Peachey! What d'you make f me?

COLONEL. [Returning from his search] There's a white hat crossing the second tile. Is that your friend, Molly?

MRS. GWYN nods.

MRS. HOPE. Oh! before I forget, Peachey—Letty and Ernest can move heir things back again. I'm going to ut Mr. Lever in your room. [Catching ight of the paint pot on the ground] There's that disgusting paint pot! Take t up at once, Tom, and put it in the ree.

The COLONEL picks up the pot and bears it to the hollow tree followed by MRS. HOPE; he enters.

MRS. HOPE. [Speaking into the tree] Not there!

COLONEL. [From within] Well, where then?

MRS. HOPE. Why—up—oh! gracious!

MRS. GWYN, standing alone, is smiling. LEVER approaches from the towing-path. He is a man like a fencer's wrist, supple and steely. A man whose age is difficult to tell, with a quick, good-looking face, and a line between his brows; his darkish hair is flecked with grey. He gives the feeling that he has always had to spurt to keep pace with his own life.

MRS. HOPE [Also entering the hollow tree] No—oh!

COLONEL. [From the depths, in a high voice] Well, dash it then! What do you want?

MRS. GWYN. Peachey, may I introduce Mr. Lever to you? Miss Beech, my old governess.

They shake each other by the hand.

LEVER. How do you do?

His voice is pleasant, his manner easy.

MISS BEECH. Pleased to meet you.

[Her manner is that of one who is not pleased. She watches.

MRS. GWYN. [Pointing to the tree—maliciously] This is my uncle and my aunt. They're taking exercise, I think.

The COLONEL and MRS. HOPE emerge convulsively. They are very hot. LEVER and MRS. GWYN are very cool.

MRS. HOPE. [Shaking hands with him] So you've got here! Aren't you very hot?—Tom!

COLONEL. Brought a splendid day with you! Splendid!

As he speaks, JOY comes running with a bunch of roses; seeing LEVER, she stops and stands quite rigid.

MISS. BEECH. [Sitting in the swing] Thunder!

COLONEL. Thunder? Nonsense, Peachey, you're always imagining something. Look at the sky!

MISS BEECH. Thunder!

MRS. GWYN'S smile has faded.

MRS. HOPE. [Turning] Joy, don't you see Mr. Lever?

JOY, turning to her mother, gives her the roses. With a forced smile, LEVER advances, holding out his hand.

LEVER. How are you, Joy? Haven't seen you for an age!

JOY. [Without expression] I am very well, thank you.

She raises her hand, and just touches his. MRS. GWYN'S eyes are fixed on her daughter. MISS BEECH is watching them intently; MRS. HOPE is buttoning the COLONEL'S coat.

The curtain falls.

ACT II

It is afternoon, and at a garden-table placed beneath the hollow tree, the COLONEL is poring over plans. Astride of a garden-chair, LEVER is smoking cigarettes. DICK is hanging Chinese lanterns to the hollow tree.

LEVER. Of course, if this level [pointing with his cigarette] peters out to the West we shall be in a tightish place; you know what a mine is at this stage, Colonel Hope?

COLONEL. [Absently] Yes, yes. [Tracing a line] What is there to prevent its running out here to the East?

LEVER. Well, nothing, except that as a matter of fact it doesn't.

COLONEL. [With some excitement] I'm very glad you showed me these papers, very glad! I say that it's a most astonishing thing if the ore suddenly stops there.

A gleam of humour visits LEVER'S face.

COLONEL. I'm not an expert, but you ought to prove that ground to the East more thoroughly.

LEVER. [Quizzically] Of course sir, if you advise that——

COLONEL. If it were mine, I'd no more sit down under the belief that the ore stopped there, than I'd—— There's a harmony in these things.

LEVER. I can only tell you what our experts say.

COLONEL. Ah! Experts! No faith in them—never had! Miners, lawyers, theologians, cowardly lot—pays them to be cowardly. When they haven't their own axes to grind, they've got their theories; a theory's a dangerous thing. [He loses himself in contemplation of the papers] Now my theory is, you're in strata here of what we call the Triassic Age.

LEVER. [Smiling faintly] Ah!

COLONEL. You've struck a fault, that's what's happened. The ore may be as much as thirty or forty yards out; but it's there, depend on it.

LEVER. Would you back that opinion, Sir?

COLONEL. [With dignity] I never give an opinion that I'm not prepared to back. I want to get to the bottom of this. What's to prevent the gold going down indefinitely?

LEVER. Nothing, so far as I know.

COLONEL. [With suspicion] Eh!

LEVER. All I can tell you is: This is as far as we've got, and we want more money before we can get any further.

COLONEL. [Absently] Yes, yes; that's very usual.

LEVER. If you ask my personal opinion I think it's very doubtful that the gold does go down.

COLONEL. [Smiling] Oh! a personal opinion—on a matter of this sort!

LEVER. [As though about to take the papers] Perhaps we'd better close the sitting, Sir; sorry to have bored you.

COLONEL. Now, now! Don't be so touchy! If I'm to put money in, I'm bound to look at it all round.

LEVER. [With lifted brows] Please don't imagine that I want you to put money in.

COLONEL. Confound it, sir! D'you suppose I take you for a Company promoter?

LEVER. Thank you!

COLONEL. [Looking at him doubtfully] You've got Irish blood in you—um? You're so hasty!

LEVER. If you're really thinking of taking shares—my advice to you is don't!

COLONEL. [Regretfully] If this were n ordinary gold mine, I wouldn't ream of looking at it, I want you to nderstand that. Nobody has a greater bjection to gold mines than I.

LEVER. [Looks down at his host with alf-closed eyes] But it is a gold mine, olonel Hope.

COLONEL. I know, I know; but I've een into it for myself; I've formed my inion personally. Now, what's the rea-n you don't want me to invest?

LEVER. Well, if it doesn't turn out as ou expect, you'll say it's my doing. I now what investors are.

COLONEL. [Dubiously] If it were a Vestralian or a Kaffir I wouldn't touch with a pair of tongs! It's not as if were going to put much in. [He sudnly bends above the papers as though agnetically attracted] I like these riassic formations!

DICK, who has hung the last lantern, moodily departs.

LEVER. [Looking after him] That oung man seems depressed.

COLONEL. [As though remembering s principles] I don't like mines, never ave! [Suddenly absorbed again] I tell ou what, Lever—this thing's got tre-endous possibilities. You don't seem believe in it enough. No mine's any ood without faith; until I see for my-lf, however, I shan't commit myself eyond a thousand.

LEVER. Are you serious, sir?

COLONEL. Certainly! I've been think-g it over ever since you told me enty had fought shy. I've a poor opin-n of Henty. He's one of those fel-ws that says one thing and does an-her. An opportunist!

LEVER. [Slowly] I'm afraid we're all at, more or less.

[He sits beneath the hollow tree.

COLONEL. A man never knows what e is himself. There's my wife. She inks she's—— By the way, don't say ything to her about this, please. And, ever [nervously], I don't think, you ow, this is quite the sort of thing for y niece.

LEVER. [Quietly] I agree, I mean to et her out of it.

COLONEL. [A little taken aback] Ah!
You know, she—she's in a very delicate position, living by herself in London.

LEVER looks at him ironically.

COLONEL. You [very nervously] see a good deal of her? If it hadn't been for Joy growing so fast, we shouldn't have had the child down here. Her mother ought to have her with her. Eh! Don't you think so?

LEVER. [Forcing a smile] Mrs. Gwyn always seems to me to get on all right.

COLONEL. [As though making a discovery] You know, I've found that when a woman's living alone and unprotected, the very least thing will set a lot of hags and jackanapes talking.
[Hotly] The more unprotected and helpless a woman is, the more they revel in it. If there's anything I hate in this world, it's those wretched creatures who babble about their neighbours' affairs.

LEVER. I agree with you.

COLONEL. One ought to be very careful not to give them—that is [checks himself confused; then hurrying on]—
I suppose you and Joy get on all right?

LEVER. [Coolly] Pretty well, thanks.
I'm not exactly in Joy's line; haven't seen very much of her, in fact.

MISS BEECH and JOY have been approaching from the house. But seeing LEVER, JOY turns abruptly, hesitates a moment, and with an angry gesture goes away.

COLONEL. [Unconscious] Wonderfully affectionate little thing! Well, she'll be going home to-morrow!

MISS BEECH. [Who has been gazing after JOY] Talkin' business, poor creatures?

LEVER. Oh, no! If you'll excuse me,
I'll wash my hands before tea.

He glances at the COLONEL poring over papers, and, shrugging his shoulders, strolls away.

MISS BEECH. [Sitting in the swing]
I see your horrid papers.

COLONEL. Be quiet, Peachey!

MISS BEECH. On a beautiful summer's day, too.

COLONEL. That'll do now.

MISS BEECH. [Unmoved] For every ounce you take out of a gold mine you put two in.

COLONEL. Who told you that rubbish?

MISS BEECH. [With devilry] You did!

COLONEL. This isn't an ordinary gold mine.

MISS BEECH. Oh! quite a special thing.

COLONEL stares at her, but subsiding at her impassivity he pores again over the papers. ROSE has approached with a tea cloth.

ROSE. If you please, sir, the Missis told me to lay the tea.

COLONEL. Go away! Ten fives fifty. Ten 5-16ths, Peachey?

MISS BEECH. I hate your nasty sums!

ROSE goes away. The COLONEL writes. MRS. HOPE'S voice is heard, "Now then, bring those chairs, you two. Not that one, Ernest." ERNEST and LETTY appear through the openings of the wall, each with a chair.

COLONEL. [With dull exasperation] What do you want!

LETTY. Tea, father.

[She places her chair, and goes away.

ERNEST. That Johnny-bird Lever is too cocksure for me, Colonel. Those South American things are no good at all. I know all about them from young Scrotton. There's not one that's worth a red cent. If you want a flutter—— COLONEL. [Explosively] Flutter! I'm not a gambler, sir!

ERNEST. Well, Colonel [with a smile], I only don't want you to chuck your money away on a stiff 'un. If you want anything good you should go to Mexico.

COLONEL. [Jumping up and holding out the map] Go to——[He stops in time] What d'you call that, eh, M-E-X——

ERNEST. [Not to be embarrassed] It all depends on what part.

COLONEL. You think you know everything—you think nothin's right unless it's your own idea! Be good enough to keep your advice to yourself.

ERNEST. [Moving with his chair, and stopping with a smile] If you ask me, I should say it wasn't playing the game to put Molly into a thing like that.

COLONEL. What do you mean, sir?

ERNEST. Any Juggins can see tha she's a bit gone on our friend.

COLONEL. [Freezingly] Indeed!

ERNEST. He's not at all the sort o Johnny that appeals to me.

COLONEL. Really?

ERNEST. [Unmoved] If I were yo Colonel, I should tip her the wink. H was hanging about her at Ascot all th time. It's a bit thick!

MRS. HOPE followed by ROSE ap pears from the house.

COLONEL. [Stammering with passion Jackanapes!

MRS. HOPE. Don't stand there, Tom clear those papers, and let Rose lay th table. Now, Ernest, go and get anothe chair.

The COLONEL looks wildly roun and sits beneath the hollow tre with his head held in his hand. ROSE lays the cloth.

MISS BEECH. [Sitting beside th COLONEL] Poor creature!

ERNEST. [Carrying his chair abou with him] Ask any Johnny in the Cit he'll tell you Mexico's a very trick country—the people are awful ro ters——

MRS. HOPE. Put that chair dow Ernest.

ERNEST looks at the chair, puts down, opens his mouth, and goe away. ROSE follows him.

MRS. HOPE. What's he been talkin about? You oughn't to get so excite Tom; is your head bad, old man? Her take these papers! [She hands th papers to the COLONEL] Peachey, go i and tell them tea'll be ready in a minut there's a good soul! Oh! and on th dressing-table you'll find a bottle o Eau de Cologne——

MISS BEECH. Don't let him get in temper again! That's three times t day!

[She goes towards the hous

COLONEL. Never met such a fellow my life, the most opinionated, narro minded—thinks he knows everythin Whatever Letty could see in him I ca think. Pragmatical beggar!

MRS. HOPE. Now Tom! What ha you been up to, to get into a state li this?

COLONEL. [Avoiding her eyes] I shall se my temper with him one of these ays. He's got that confounded habit thinking nobody can be right but mself.

MRS. HOPE. That's enough! I want talk to you seriously! Dick's in love. m perfectly certain of it.

COLONEL. Love! Who's he in love ith—Peachey?

MRS. HOPE. You can see it all over m. If I saw any signs of Joy's breakg out, I'd send them both away. I simy won't have it.

COLONEL. Why, she's a child!

MRS. HOPE. [Pursuing her own oughts] But she isn't—not yet. I've en watching her very carefully. She's ore in love with her mother than any e, follows her about like a dog! She's en quite rude to Mr. Lever.

COLONEL. [Pursuing his own oughts] I don't believe a word of it.

[He rises and walks about.

MRS. HOPE. Don't believe a word of iat?

The COLONEL is silent.

MRS. HOPE. [Pursuing his thoughts ith her own] If I thought there were ything between Molly and Mr. Lever, you suppose I'd have him in the use?

The COLONEL stops, and gives a sort of grunt.

MRS. HOPE. He's a very nice fellow; d I want you to pump him well, Tom, d see what there is in this mine.

COLONEL. [Uneasily] Pump!

MRS. HOPE. [Looking at him curisly] Yes, you've been up to someing! Now what is it?

COLONEL. Pump my own guest! I ver heard of such a thing!

MRS. HOPE. There you are on your gh horse! I do wish you had a little mmon sense, Tom!

COLONEL. I'd as soon you asked me sneak about eavesdropping! Pump!

MRS. HOPE. Well, what were you oking at these papers for? It does rive me so wild the way you throw way all the chances you have of mak g a little money. I've got you this opportunity, and you do nothing but rave p and down, and talk nonsense!

COLONEL. [In a high voice] Much you know about it! I've taken a thousand shares in this mine!

[He stops dead. There is a silence.

MRS. HOPE. You've—WHAT? Without consulting me? Well, then, you'll just go and take them out again!

COLONEL. You want me to——?

MRS. HOPE. The idea! As if you could trust your judgment in a thing like that! You'll just go at once and say there was a mistake; then we'll talk it over calmly.

COLONEL. [Drawing himself up] Go back on what I've said? Not if I lose every penny! First you worry me to take the shares, and then you worry me not—I won't have it, Nell, I won't have it!

MRS. HOPE. Well, if I'd thought you'd have forgotten what you said this morning and turned about like this, d'you suppose I'd have spoken to you at all? Now, do you?

COLONEL. Rubbish! If you can't see that this is a special opportunity!

He walks away followed by MRS. HOPE, who endeavors to make him see her point of view. ERNEST and LETTY are now returning from the house armed with a third chair.

LETTY. What's the matter with everybody? Is it the heat?

ERNEST. [Preoccupied and sitting in the swing] That sportsman, Lever, you know, ought to be warned off.

ROSE has followed with the tea tray.

LETTY. [Signing to ERNEST] Where's Miss Joy, Rose?

ROSE. Don't know, Miss.

[Putting down the tray, she goes.

LETTY. Ernie, be careful, you never know where Joy is.

ERNEST. [Preoccupied with his reflections] Your old dad's as mad as a hatter with me.

LETTY. Why?

ERNEST. Well, I merely said what I thought, that Molly ought to look out what she's doing, and he dropped on me like a cartload of bricks.

LETTY. The dad's very fond of Molly.

ERNEST. But look here, d'you mean to tell me that she and Lever aren't—— LETTY. Don't! Suppose they are! If Joy were to hear it'd be simply awful. I like Molly. I'm not going to believe anything against her. I don't see the use of it. If it is, it is, and if it isn't, it isn't.

ERNEST. Well, all I know is that when I told her the mine was probably a frost she went for me like steam.

LETTY. Well, so should I. She was only sticking up for her friends.

ERNEST. Ask the old Peachey-bird. She knows a thing or two. Look here, I don't mind a man's being a bit of a sportsman, but I think Molly's bringin' him down here is too thick. Your old dad's got one of his notions that because this Josser's his guest, he must keep him in a glass case, and take shares in his mine, and all the rest of it.

LETTY. I do think people are horrible, always thinking things. It's not as if Molly were a stranger. She's my own cousin. I'm not going to believe anything about my own cousin. I simply won't.

ERNEST. [Reluctantly realising the difference that this makes] I suppose it does make a difference, her bein' your cousin.

LETTY. Of course it does! I only hope to goodness no one will make Joy suspect——

She stops and puts her fingers to her lips, for JOY is coming towards them, as the tea-bell sounds. She is followed by DICK and MISS BEECH with the Eau de Cologne. The COLONEL and MRS. HOPE are also coming back, discussing still each their own points of view.

JOY. Where's mother? Isn't she here?

MRS. HOPE. Now Joy, come and sit down; your mother's been told tea's ready; if she lets it get cold it's her lookout.

DICK. [Producing a rug, and spreading it beneath the tree] Plenty of room Joy.

JOY. I don't believe mother knows, Aunt Nell.

MRS. GWYN and LEVER appear in the opening of the wall.

LETTY. [Touching ERNEST's arm Look, Ernie! Four couples! ar Peachey——

ERNEST. [Preoccupied] What co ples?

JOY. Oh! Mums, here you are!

Seizing her, she turns her back LEVER. They sit in various seat and MRS. HOPE pours out the te

MRS. HOPE. Hand the sandwiches Mr. Lever, Peachey. It's our own jar Mr. Lever.

LEVER. Thanks. [He takes a bite Splendid!

MRS. GWYN. [With forced gaiety It's the first time I've ever seen you e jam.

LEVER. [Smiling a forced smile Really! But I love it.

MRS. GWYN. [With a little bow You always refuse mine.

JOY. [Who has been staring at he enemy, suddenly] I'm all burnt up Aren't you simply boiled, Mother?

[She touches her mother's fore head.

MRS. GWYN. Ugh! You're quit clammy, Joy.

JOY. It's enough to make anyon clammy.

[Her eyes go back to LEVER's fac as though to stab him.

ERNEST. [From the swing] I say, yo know, the glass is going down.

LEVER. [Suavely] The glass in th hall's steady enough.

ERNEST. Oh, I never go by that; that' a rotten old glass.

COLONEL. Oh! is it?

ERNEST. [Paying no attention] I'v got a little ripper—never puts you i the cart. Bet you what you like w have thunder before to-morrow nigh

MISS BEECH. [Removing her gaz from JOY to LEVER] You don't thin we shall have it before to-night, d you?

LEVER. [Suavely] I beg your pardon did you speak to me?

MISS BEECH. I said, you don't thin we shall have the thunder before to night, do you?

[She resumes her watch on Jo

LEVER. [Blandly] Really, I don't se any signs of it.

JOY, crossing to the rug, flings herself down. And DICK sits cross-legged, with his eyes fast fixed on her.

MISS BEECH. [Eating] People don't ften see what they don't want to, do ey?

LEVER only lifts his brows.

MRS. GWYN. [Quickly breaking in] Vhat are you talking about? The eather's perfect.

MISS BEECH. Isn't it?

MRS. HOPE. You'd better make a good a, Peachey; nobody'll get anything l eight, and then only cold shoulder. ou must just put up with no hot din- r, Mr. Lever.

LEVER. [Bowing] Whatever is good ough for Miss Beech is good enough r me.

MISS BEECH. [Sardonically—taking nother sandwich] So you think!

MRS. GWYN. [With forced gaiety] on't be so absurd, Peachey.

MISS BEECH grunts slightly.

COLONEL. [Once more busy with his apers] I see the name of your engineer Rodriguez—Italian, eh?

LEVER. Portuguese.

COLONEL. Don't like that!

LEVER. I believe he was born in England.

COLONEL. [Reassured] Oh, was he? h!

ERNEST. Awful rotters, those Portuuese!

COLONEL. There you go!

LETTY. Well, Father, Ernie only said hat you said.

MRS. HOPE. Now I want to ask you, Ir. Lever, is this gold mine safe? If it n't—I simply won't allow Tom to take ese shares; he can't afford it.

LEVER. It rather depends on what you ll safe, Mrs. Hope.

MRS. HOPE. I don't want anything exavagant, of course; if they're going to ay their 10 per cent regularly, and om can have his money out at any me——

There is a faint whistle from the swing.

MRS. HOPE. I only want to know that 's a thoroughly genuine thing.

MRS. GWYN. [Indignantly] As if Maurice would be a director if it wasn't?

MRS. HOPE. Now Molly, I'm simply asking——

MRS. GWYN. Yes, you are!

COLONEL. [Rising] I'll take two thousand of those shares, Lever. To have my wife talk like that—I'm quite ashamed.

LEVER. Oh, come, sir, Mrs. Hope only meant——

MRS. GWYN looks eagerly at LEVER.

DICK. [Quietly] Let's go on the river, Joy.

JOY rises, and goes to her mother's chair.

MRS. HOPE. Of course! What rubbish, Tom! As if anyone ever invested money without making sure!

LEVER. [Ironically] It seems a little difficult to make sure in this case. There isn't the smallest necessity for Colonel Hope to take any shares, and it looks to me as if he'd better not.

[He lights a cigarette.

MRS. HOPE. Now, Mr. Lever, don't be offended! I'm very anxious for Tom to take the shares if you say the thing's so good.

LEVER. I'm afraid I must ask to be left out, please.

JOY. [Whispering] Mother, if you've finished, do come, I want to show you my room.

MRS. HOPE. I wouldn't say a word, only Tom's so easily taken in.

MRS. GWYN. [Fiercely] Aunt Nell, how can you?

JOY gives a little savage laugh.

LETTY. [Hastily] Ernie, will you play Dick and me? Come on, Dick!

All three go out towards the lawn.

MRS. HOPE. You ought to know your uncle by this time, Molly. He's just like a child. He'd be a pauper to-morrow if I didn't see to things.

COLONEL. Understand once for all that I shall take two thousand shares in this mine. I'm—I'm humiliated.

[He turns and goes towards the house.

MRS. HOPE. Well, what on earth have I said? [She hurries after him.

MRS. GWYN. [In a low voice as she passes] You needn't insult my friends!

MISS BEECH. Molly!

MRS. GWYN looks up startled.

MISS BEECH. Take care, Molly, take care! The child! Can't you see? [Apostrophising LEVER] Take care, Molly, take care!

LEVER. [Coming back] Awfully hot, isn't it?

MISS BEECH. Ah! and it'll be hotter if we don't mind.

LEVER. [Suavely] Do we control these things?

MISS BEECH looking from face to face, nods her head repeatedly; then, gathering her skirts she walks towards the house. MRS. GWYN sits motionless, staring before her.

LEVER. Extraordinary old lady! [He pitches away his cigarette] What's the matter with her, Molly?

MRS. GWYN [With an effort] Oh! Peachey's a character!

LEVER. [Frowning] So I see!

There is a silence.

MRS. GWYN. Maurice!

LEVER. Yes.

MRS. GWYN. Aunt Nell's hopeless, you mustn't mind her.

LEVER. [In a dubious and ironic voice] My dear girl, I've too much to bother me to mind trifles like that.

MRS. GWYN. [Going to him suddenly] Tell me, won't you?

LEVER shrugs his shoulders.

MRS. GWYN. A month ago you'd have told me soon enough!

LEVER. Now, Molly!

MRS. GWYN. Ah! [With a bitter smile] The Spring's soon over.

LEVER. It's always Spring between us.

MRS. GWYN. Is it?

LEVER. You didn't tell me what you were thinking about just now when you sat there like stone.

MRS. GWYN. It doesn't do for a woman to say too much.

LEVER. Have I been so bad to yo that you need feel like that, Molly?

MRS. GWYN. [With a little war squeeze of his arm] Oh! my dear, i only that I'm so—— [She stop

LEVER. [Gently] So what?

MRS. GWYN. [In a low voice] I hateful here.

LEVER. I didn't want to come. I dor understand why you suggested [MRS. GWYN is silent] It's been a mi take!

MRS. GWYN. [Her eyes fixed on t ground] Joy comes home to-morrow. thought if I brought you here—I shou know—— LEVER. [Vexedly] Um!

MRS. GWYN. [Losing her contro Can't you see? It haunts me? How a we to go on? I must know—I mu know!

LEVER. I don't see that my coming—

MRS. GWYN. I thought I should hav more confidence; I thought I should able to face it better in London, if yo came down here openly—and now— feel I mustn't speak or look at you.

LEVER. You don't think your aunt—

MRS. GWYN. [Scornfully] She! It only Joy I care about.

LEVER. [Frowning] We must be mo careful, that's all. We musn't give ou selves away again, as we were doin just now.

MRS. GWYN. When anyone says any thing horrid to you, I can't help it.

[She puts her hand on the lapel o his coat.

LEVER. My dear child, take care!

MRS. GWYN drops her hand. Sh throws her head back, and h throat is seen to work as thoug she were gulping down a bitt draught. She moves away.

LEVER. [Following hastily] Don dear, don't! I only meant—— Com Molly, let's be sensible. I want to te you something about the mine.

MRS. GWYN. [With a quaverin smile] Yes—let's talk sensibly, and wa properly in this sensible, proper plac

LEVER is seen trying to soothe he and yet to walk properly. As the disappear, they are viewed b JOY, who like the shadow parte from its figure, has come to join it again. She stands now, foiled, a carnation in her hand; then flings herself on a chair, and leans her elbows on the table.

Joy. I hate him! Pig!

Rose. [Who has come to clear the tea ings] Did you call, Miss?

Joy. Not you!

Rose. [Motionless] No, Miss!

Joy. [Leaning back and tearing the wer] Oh! do hurry up, Rose!

Rose. [Collects the tea things] Mr. ick's coming down the path! Aren't going to get you to do your frock, iss Joy?

Joy. No.

Rose. What will the Missis say?

Joy. Oh, don't be so stuck, Rose!

Rose goes, but Dick has come.

Dick. Come on the river, Joy, just r half an hour, as far as the king-hers—do!

Joy shakes her head.

Dick. Why not? It'll be so jolly and ol. I'm most awfully sorry if I wor-ed you this morning. I didn't mean to. won't again, I promise.

Joy slides a look at him, and from that look he gains a little courage.

Dick. Do come! It'll be the last time. feel it awfully, Joy.

Joy. There's nothing to hurt you!

Dick. [Gloomily] Isn't there—when u're like this?

Joy. [In a hard voice] If you don't ve me, why do you follow me about?

Dick. What is the matter?

Joy. [Looking up, as if for want of r] Oh! Don't!

Dick. Oh, Joy, what is the matter? Is the heat?

Joy. [With a little laugh] Yes.

Dick. Have some Eau de Cologne. ll make you a bandage. [He takes the au de Cologne, and makes a bandage ith his handkerchief] It's quite clean.

Joy. Oh, Dick, you are so funny!

Dick. [Bandaging her forehead] I n't bear you to feel bad; it puts me f completely. I mean I don't generally ake a fuss about people, but when it's ou——

Joy. [Suddenly] I'm all right.

Dick. Is that comfy?

Joy. [With her chin up, and her eyes fast closed] Quite.

Dick. I'm not going to stay and worry you. You ought to rest. Only, Joy! Look here! If you want me to do anything for you, any time——

Joy. [Half opening her eyes] Only to go away.

Dick bites his lips and walks away.

Joy. Dick—[softly]—Dick!

Dick stops.

Joy. I didn't mean that; will you get me some water-irises for this evening?

Dick. Won't I? [He goes to the hollow tree and from its darkness takes a bucket and a boat-hook] I know where there are some rippers!

Joy stays unmoving with her eyes half closed.

Dick. Are you sure you're all right, Joy? You'll just rest here in the shade, won't you, till I come back; it'll do you no end of good. I shan't be twenty minutes.

[He goes, but cannot help returning softly, to make sure.

Dick. You're quite sure you're all right?

Joy nods. He goes away towards the river. But there is no rest for Joy. The voices of Mrs. Gwyn and Lever are heard returning.

Joy. [With a gesture of anger] Hateful! Hateful! [She runs away.

Mrs. Gwyn and Lever are seen approaching; they pass the tree, in conversation.

Mrs. Gwyn. But I don't see why, Maurice.

Lever. We mean to sell the mine; we must do some more work on it, and for that we must have money.

Mrs. Gwyn. If you only want a little, I should have thought you could have got it in a minute in the City.

Lever. [Shaking his head] No, no; we must get it privately.

Mrs. Gwyn. [Doubtfully] Oh! [She slowly adds] Then it isn't such a good thing! [And she does not look at him.

Lever. Well, we mean to sell it.

Mrs. Gwyn. What about the people who buy?

Lever. [Dubiously regarding her] My dear girl, they've just as much chance as we had. It's not my business to think of them. There's your thousand pounds——

MRS. GWYN. [Softly] Don't bother about my money, Maurice. I don't want you to do anything not quite——

LEVER. [Evasively] Oh! There's my brother's and my sister's too. I'm not going to let any of you run any risk. When we all went in for it the thing looked splendid; it's only the last month that we've had doubts. What bothers me now is your uncle. I don't want him to take these shares. It looks as if I'd come here on purpose.

MRS. GWYN. Oh! he mustn't take them!

LEVER. That's all very well; but it's not so simple.

MRS. GWYN. [Shyly] But, Maurice, have you told him about the selling?

LEVER. [Gloomily, under the hollow tree] It's a Board secret. I'd no business to tell even you.

MRS. GWYN. But he thinks he's taking shares in a good— a permanent thing.

LEVER. You can't go into a mining venture without some risk.

MRS. GWYN. Oh, yes, I know—but—but Uncle Tom is such a dear!

LEVER. [Stubbornly] I can't help his being the sort of man he is. I didn't want him to take these shares, I told him so in so many words. Put yourself in my place, Molly, how can I go to him and say—"This thing may turn out rotten," when he knows I got you to put your money into it?

But JOY, the lost shadow, has come back. She moves forward resolutely. They are divided from her by the hollow tree; she is unseen. She stops.

MRS. GWYN. I think he ought to be told about the selling; it's not fair.

LEVER. What on earth made him rush at the thing like that? I don't understand that kind of man.

MRS. GWYN. [Impulsively] I must tell him, Maurice; I can't let him take the shares without——

[She puts her hand on his arm. JOY turns, as if to go back whence she came, but stops once more.

LEVER. [Slowly and very quietly] didn't think you'd give me away, Moll

MRS. GWYN. I don't think I quite u derstand.

LEVER. If you tell the Colonel abo this sale the poor old chap will thi me a man that you ought to have not ing to do with. Do you want that?

MRS. GWYN, giving her lover a lo look, touches his sleeve. JOY, sli ping behind the hollow tree, h gone.

LEVER. You can't act in a case like th as if you'd only a principle to conside It's the—the special circumstances—

MRS. GWYN. [With a faint smil But you'll be glad to get the mone won't you?

LEVER. By George, if you're going take it like this, Molly!

MRS. GWYN. Don't!

LEVER. We may not sell after a dear, we may find it turn out trumps.

MRS. GWYN. [With a shiver] I don want to hear any more. I know wome don't understand. [Impulsively] It's on that I can't bear anyone should thin that you——

LEVER. [Distressed] For goodnes sake, don't look like that, Molly! C course, I'll speak to your uncle. I'll st him somehow, even if I have to make fool of myself. I'll do anything yo want——

MRS. GWYN. I feel as if I were bein smothered here.

LEVER. It's only for one day.

MRS. GWYN. [With sudden tende ness] It's not your fault, dear. I ough to have known how it would be. We let's go in!

She sets her lips, and walks t wards the house with LEVER fo lowing. But no sooner has sh disappeared than JOY comes ru ning after; she stops, as thoug throwing down a challenge. H cheeks and ears are burning.

JOY. Mother!

After a moment MRS. GWYN r appears in the opening of th wall.

MRS. GWYN. Oh! here you are!

JOY. [Breathlessly] Yes.

MRS. GWYN. [Uncertainly] Whereve you been? You look dreadfully t; have you been running?

Joy. Yes—no.
Mrs. Gwyn. [Looking at her fixedly] hat's the matter—you're trembling!
oftly] Aren't you well, dear?
Joy. Yes—I don't know.
Mrs. Gwyn. What is it, darling?
Joy. [Suddenly clinging to her] Oh!
ther!
Mrs. Gwyn. I don't understand.
Joy. [Breathlessly] Oh, Mother, let go back home with you now at ce——
Mrs. Gwyn. [Her face hardening] hy? What on earth——
Joy. I can't stay here.
Mrs. Gwyn. But why?
Joy. I want to be with you—Oh!
ther, don't you love me?
Mrs. Gwyn. [With a faint smile] Of rse I love you, Joy.
Joy. Ah! but you love him more.
Mrs. Gwyn. Love him—whom?
Joy. Oh! Mother, I didn't—— [She es to take her mother's hand, but ls] Oh! don't.
Mrs. Gwyn. You'd better explain at you mean, I think.
Joy. I want to get you to—he—he's—s—not——!
Mrs. Gwyn. [Frigidly] Really, Joy!
Joy. [Passionately] I'll fight against n, and I know there's something ong about—— [She stops.
Mrs. Gwyn. About what?
Joy. Let's tell Uncle Tom, Mother,
d go away.
Mrs. Gwyn. Tell Uncle Tom—what?
Joy. [Looking down and almost ispering] About—about—the mine.
Mrs. Gwyn. What about the mine?
hat do you mean? [Fiercely] Have u been spying on me?
Joy. [Shrinking] No! oh, no!
Mrs. Gwyn. Where were you?
Joy. [Just above her breath] I—I ard something.
Mrs. Gwyn. [Bitterly] But you were t spying?
Joy. I wasn't—I wasn't! I didn't want o hear. I only heard a little. I could-help listening, Mother.
Mrs. Gwyn. [With a little laugh]
uldn't help listening?

Joy. [Through her teeth] I hate him. I didn't mean to listen, but I hate him.
Mrs. Gwyn. I see. [There is a silence] Why do you hate him?
Joy. He—he—— [She stops.
Mrs. Gwyn. Yes?
Joy. [With a sort of despair] I don't know. Oh! I don't know; But I feel——
Mrs. Gwyn. I can't reason with you. As to what you heard, it's—ridiculous.
Joy. It's not that. It's—it's you.
Mrs. Gwyn. [Stonily] I don't know what you mean.
Joy. [Passionately] I wish dad were here!
Mrs. Gwyn. Do you love your father as much as me?
Joy. Oh! Mother, no—you know I don't.
Mrs. Gwyn. [Resentfully] Then why do you want him?
Joy. [Almost under her breath] Because of that man.
Mrs. Gwyn. Indeed!
Joy. I will never—never make friends with him.
Mrs. Gwyn. [Cuttingly] I have not asked you to.
Joy. [With a blind movement of her hand] Oh, Mother!
Mrs. Gwyn half turns away.
Joy. Mother—won't you? Let's tell Uncle Tom and go away from him?
Mrs. Gwyn. If you were not a child, Joy, you wouldn't say such things.
Joy. [Eagerly] I'm not a child, I'm —I'm a woman. I am.
Mrs. Gwyn. No! You—are—not a woman, Joy.

She sees Joy throw up her arms as though warding off a blow, and turning finds that Lever is standing in the opening of the wall.

Lever. [Looking from face to face] What's the matter? [There is no answer] What is it, Joy?
Joy. [Passionately] I heard you, I don't care who knows. I'd listen again.
Lever. [Impassively] Ah! and what did I say that was so very dreadful?
Joy. You're a—a—you're a—coward!
Mrs. Gwyn. [With a sort of groan] Joy!
Lever. [Stepping up to Joy, and standing with his hands behind him— in a low voice] Now, hit me in the face—hit me—hit me as hard as you can. Go on, Joy, it'll do you good.

Joy raises her clenched hand, but drops it, and hides her face.

Lever. Why don't you? I'm not pretending!

Joy makes no sign.

Lever. Come Joy; you'll make yourself ill, and that won't help, will it?

But Joy still makes no sign.

Lever. [With determination] What's the matter; now come—tell me!

Joy. [In a stifled, sullen voice] Will you leave my mother alone?

Mrs. Gwyn. Oh! my dear Joy, don't be silly!

Joy. [Wincing; then with sudden passion] I defy you—I defy you! [She rushes from their sight.

Mrs. Gwyn. [With a movement of distress] Oh!

Lever. [Turning to Mrs. Gwyn with a protecting gesture] Never mind, dear! It'll be—it'll be all right!

But the expression of his face is not the expression of his words. The curtain falls.

ACT III

It is evening; a full yellow moon is shining through the branches of the hollow tree. The Chinese lanterns are alight. There is dancing in the house; the music sounds now loud, now soft. Miss Beech is sitting on the rustic seat in a black bunchy evening dress, whose inconspicuous opening is inlaid with white. She slowly fans herself.

Dick comes from the house in evening dress. He does not see Miss Beech.

Dick. Curse! [A short silence] Curse!

Miss Beech. Poor young man!

Dick. [With a start] Well, Peachey, I can't help it.

[He fumbles off his gloves.

Miss Beech. Did you ever know any one that could?

Dick. [Earnestly] It's such awfully hard lines on Joy. I can't get her out of my head, lying there with that beastly headache while everybody's jiggin round.

Miss Beech. Oh! you don't mi about yourself—noble young man!

Dick. I should be a brute if I didn mind more for her.

Miss Beech. So you think it's a hea ache, do you?

Dick. Didn't you hear what Mr Gwyn said at dinner about the sur [With inspiration] I say, Peache couldn't you—couldn't you just go t and give her a message from me, ar find out if there's anything she want and say how brutal it is that she's seedy it would be most awfully decent o you. And tell her the dancing's no goo without her. Do, Peachey, now do! Ah and look here!

He dives into the hollow of the tre and brings from out of it a po of water, in which are placed tw bottles of champagne, and son yellow irises—he takes the irise

Dick. You might give her these. I g them specially for her, and I haven had a chance.

Miss Beech. [Lifting a bottle What's this?

Dick. Fizz. The Colonel brought from the George. It's for supper; I put it in here because of—— [Smilin faintly] Mrs. Hope, I think. Peache do take her those irises.

Miss Beech. D'you think they'll d her any good?

Dick. [Crestfallen] I thought she like—— I don't want to worry her- you might try.

Miss Beech shakes her head.

Dick. Why not?

Miss Beech. The poor little creatu won't let me in.

Dick. You've been up then!

Miss Beech. [Sharply] Of cours I've been up. I've not got a stone fo my heart, young man!

Dick. All right! I suppose I shall jus have to get along somehow.

Miss Beech. [With devilry] That what we've all got to do.

Dick. [Gloomily] But this is too bru tal for anything!

Miss Beech. Worse than ever hap pened to anyone!

DICK. I swear I'm not thinking of ›self.

MISS BEECH. Did y'ever know any- dy that swore they were?

DICK. Oh! shut up!

MISS BEECH. You'd better go in and : yourself a partner.

DICK. [With pale desperation] Look ·e, Peachey, I simply loathe all those ls.

MISS BEECH. Ah—h! [Ironically] or lot, aren't they?

DICK. All right; chaff away; it's good ı, isn't it? It makes me sick to dance en Joy's lying there. Her last night, !

MISS BEECH. [Sidling to him] You're good young man, and you've got a ›d heart.

[She takes his hand, and puts it to her cheek.

DICK. Peachey—I say Peachey— ou think there's—I mean d'you think re'll ever be any chance for me?

MISS BEECH. I thought that was com- ! I don't approve of your making e at your time of life; don't you nk I'm going to encourage you.

DICK. But I shall be of age in a year; money's my own, it's not as if I had ask anyone's leave; and I mean, I know my own mind.

MISS BEECH. Of course you do. No- ly else would at your age, but you

DICK. I wouldn't ask her to promise, wouldn't be fair when she's so young, : I do want her to know that I shall er change.

MISS BEECH. And suppose—only sup- e—she's fond of you, and says she'll er change.

DICK. Oh! Peachey! D'you think re's a chance of that—do you?

MISS BEECH. A—h—!

DICK. I wouldn't let her bind herself, wear I wouldn't. [Solemnly] I'm not h a selfish brute as you seem to nk.

MISS BEECH. [Sidling close to him l in a violent whisper] Well—have a

DICK. Really? You are a brick, achey! [He kisses her.

MISS BEECH. [Yielding pleasurably; then remembering her principles] Don't you ever say I said so! You're too young, both of you.

DICK. But it is exceptional, I mean in my case, isn't it?

The COLONEL and MRS. GWYN are coming down the lawn.

MISS BEECH. Oh! very!

[She sits beneath the tree and fans herself.

COLONEL. The girls are all sitting out, Dick! I've been obliged to dance myself. Phew!

DICK swinging round goes rushing off towards the house.

COLONEL. [Looking after him] Hallo! What's the matter with him? Cooling your heels, Peachey? By George! it's hot. Fancy the poor devils in London on a night like this, what? [He sees the moon] It's a full moon. You're lucky to be down here, Molly.

MRS. GWYN. [In a low voice] Very.

MISS BEECH. Oh! so you think she's lucky, do you?

COLONEL. [Expanding his nostrils] Delicious scent to-night! Hay and roses —delicious. [He seats himself between them] A shame that poor child has knocked up like this. Don't think it was the sun myself—more likely neuralgic —she's subject to neuralgia, Molly.

MRS. GWYN. [Motionless] I know.

COLONEL. Got too excited about your coming. I told Nell not to keep worrying her about her frock, and this is the result. But your aunt—you know—she can't let a thing alone!

MISS BEECH. Ah! 'tisn't neuralgia.

MRS. GWYN looks at her quickly and averts her eyes.

COLONEL. Excitable little thing. You don't understand her, Peachey.

MISS BEECH. Don't I?

COLONEL. She's all affection. Eh, Molly? I remember what I was like at her age, a poor affectionate little rat, and now look at me!

MISS BEECH. [Fanning herself] I see you.

COLONEL. [A little sadly] We forget what we were like when we were young. She's been looking forward to to-night ever since you wrote; and now to have to go to bed and miss the dancing. Too bad!

MRS. GWYN. Don't, Uncle Tom!

COLONEL. [Patting her hand] There, there, old girl, don't think about it. She'll be all right to-morrow.

MISS BEECH. If I were her mother I'd soon have her up.

COLONEL. Have her up with that headache! What are you talking about, Peachey?

MISS BEECH. I know a remedy.

COLONEL. Well, out with it.

MISS BEECH. Oh! Molly knows it too!

MRS. GWYN. [Staring at the ground] It's easy to advise.

COLONEL. [Fidgeting] Well, if you're thinking of morphia for her, don't have anything to do with it. I've always set my face against morphia; the only time I took it was in Burmah. I'd raging neuralgia for two days. I went to our old doctor, and I made him give me some. "Look here, doctor," I said, "I hate the idea of morphia, I've never taken it, and I never want to."

MISS BEECH. [Looking at MRS. GWYN] When a tooth hurts, you should have it out. It's only puttin' off the evil day.

COLONEL. You say that because it wasn't your own.

MISS BEECH. Well, it was hollow, and you broke your principles!

COLONEL. Hollow yourself, Peachey; you're as bad as anyone!

MISS BEECH. [With devilry] Well, I know that! [She turns to MRS. GWYN] He should have had it out! Shouldn't he, Molly?

MRS. GWYN. I—don't—judge for other people.

[She gets up suddenly, as though deprived of air.

COLONEL. [Alarmed] Hallo, Molly! Aren't you feeling the thing, old girl?

MISS BEECH. Let her get some air, poor creature!

COLONEL. [Who follows anxiously] Your aunt's got some first-rate sal volatile.

MRS. GWYN. It's all right, Uncle Tom. I felt giddy, it's nothing, now.

COLONEL. That's the dancing. [He taps his forehead] I know what it when you're not used to it.

MRS. GWYN. [With a sudden bitt outburst] I suppose you think I'm very bad mother to be amusing myse while Joy's suffering.

COLONEL. My dear girl, whatever p such a thought into your head? We know if there were anything you cou do, you'd do it at once, wouldn't sh Peachey?

MISS BEECH turns a slow look MRS. GWYN.

MRS. GWYN. Ah! you see, Peach knows me better.

COLONEL. [Following up his thought I always think women are wonderfu There's your aunt, she's very funn but if there's anything the matter wi me, she'll sit up all night; but wh she's ill herself, and you try to do an thing for her, out she raps at once.

MRS. GWYN. [In a low voice] There always one that a woman will do an thing for.

COLONEL. Exactly what I say. Wi your aunt it's me, and by Georg Molly, sometimes I wish it wasn't.

MISS BEECH. [With meaning] But it ever for another woman!

COLONEL. You old cynic! D'you me to say Joy wouldn't do anything earth for her mother, or Molly for Jo You don't know human nature. Wh a wonderful night! Haven't seen su a moon for years, she's like a gre great lamp.

MRS. GWYN hiding from M BEECH'S eyes, rises and slips arm through his; they stand gether looking at the moon.

COLONEL. Don't like these Chin lanterns, with that moon—tawdry! By Jove, Molly, I sometimes think humans are a rubbishy lot—each of talking and thinking of nothing but own potty little affairs; and when see a great thing like that up there— [Sighs] But there's your aunt, if I w to say a thing like that to her she' she'd think me a lunatic; and vet, know, she's a very good woman.

MRS. GWYN. [Half clinging to h Do you think me very selfish, U Tom?

COLONEL. My dear—what a fancy! 'hink you selfish—of course I don't; vhy should I?

MRS. GWYN. [Dully] I don't know.

COLONEL. [Changing the subject ner-ously] I like your friend, Lever, Molly. Ie came to me before dinner quite dis-ressed about your aunt, beggin' me not o take those shares. She'll be the first o worry me, but he made such a point f it, poor chap—in the end I was bliged to say I wouldn't. I thought it howed very nice feeling. [Ruefully] t's a pretty tight fit to make two ends neet on my income—I've missed a good ning, all owing to your aunt. [Dropping is voice] I don't mind telling you, Iolly, I think they've got a much ner mine there than they've any idea f.

MRS. GWYN gives way to laughter that is very near to sobs.

COLONEL. [With dignity] I can't see hat there is to laugh at.

MRS. GWYN. I don't know what's the natter with me this evening.

MISS BEECH. [In a low voice] I do.

COLONEL. There, there! Give me a iss, old girl! [He kisses her on the row] Why, your forehead's as hot as re. I know—I know—you're fretting bout Joy. Never mind—come! [He raws her hand beneath his arm] Let's o and have a look at the moon on the iver. We all get upset at times; eh! [Lifting his hand as if he had been ung] Why, you're not crying, Molly! say! Don't do that, old girl, it makes ne wretched. Look here, Peachey. [Holding out the hand on which the ear has dropped] This is dreadful!

MRS. GWYN. [With a violent effort] 's all right, Uncle Tom!

MISS BEECH wipes her own eyes stealthily. From the house is heard the voice of MRS. HOPE, calling "TOM."

MISS BEECH. Someone calling you!

COLONEL. There, there, my dear, you ust stay here, and cool yourself—I'll ome back—shan't be a minute.

[He turns to go.

MRS. HOPE'S voice sounds nearer.

COLONEL. [Turning back] And Molly, ld girl, don't you mind anything I said. I don't remember what it was—it must have been something, I suppose.

[He hastily retreats.

MRS. GWYN. [In a fierce low voice] Why do you torture me?

MISS BEECH. [Sadly] I don't want to torture you.

MRS. GWYN. But you do. D'you think I haven't seen this coming—all these weeks. I knew she must find out some time! But even a day counts——

MISS BEECH. I don't understand why you brought him down here.

MRS. GWYN. [After staring at her, bitterly] When day after day and night after night you've thought of nothing but how to keep them both, you might a little want to prove that it was pos-sible, mightn't you? But you don't un-derstand—how should you? You've never been a mother! [And fiercely] You've never had a lov——

MISS BEECH raises her face—it is all puckered.

MRS. GWYN. [Impulsively] Oh, I did-n't mean that, Peachey!

MISS BEECH. All right, my dear.

MRS. GWYN. I'm so dragged in two. [She sinks into a chair] I knew it must come.

MISS BEECH. Does she know every-thing, Molly?

MRS. GWYN. She guesses.

MISS BEECH. [Mournfully] It's either him or her then, my dear; one or the other you'll have to give up.

MRS. GWYN. [Motionless] Life's very hard on women.

MISS BEECH. Life's only just begin-ning for that child, Molly.

MRS. GWYN. You don't care if it ends for me!

MISS BEECH. Is it as bad as that?

MRS. GWYN. Yes.

MISS BEECH. [Rocking her body] Poor things! Poor things!

MRS. GWYN. Are you still fond of me?

MISS BEECH. Yes, yes, my dear, of course I am.

MRS. GWYN. In spite of my—wicked-ness? [She laughs.

MISS BEECH. Who am I to tell what's wicked and what isn't? God knows you're both like daughters to me.

MRS. GWYN. [Abruptly] I can't.

MISS BEECH. Molly.

MRS. GWYN. You don't know what you're asking.

MISS BEECH. If I could save you suffering, my dear, I would. I hate suffering, if it's only a fly, I hate it.

MRS. GWYN. [Turning away from her] Life isn't fair. Peachey, go in and leave me alone.

[She leans back motionless.

MISS BEECH gets off her seat, and stroking MRS. GWYN'S arm in passing goes silently away. In the opening of the wall she meets LEVER, who is looking for his partner. They make way for each other.

LEVER. [Going up to MRS. GWYN—gravely] The next is our dance, Molly.

MRS. GWYN. [Unmoving] Let's sit it out here, then.

LEVER sits down.

LEVER. I've made it all right with your uncle.

MRS. GWYN. [Dully] Oh?

LEVER. I spoke to him about the shares before dinner.

MRS. GWYN. Yes, he told me, thank you.

LEVER. There's nothing to worry over, dear.

MRS. GWYN. [Passionately] What does it matter about the wretched shares now? I'm stifling.

[She throws her scarf off.

LEVER. I don't understand what you mean by "now."

MRS. GWYN. Don't you?

LEVER. We weren't—Joy can't know —why should she? I don't believe for a minute——

MRS. GWYN. Because you don't want to.

LEVER. Do you mean she does?

MRS. GWYN. Her heart knows.

LEVER makes a movement of discomfiture; suddenly MRS. GWYN looks at him as though to read his soul.

MRS. GWYN. I seem to bring you nothing but worry, Maurice? Are you tired of me?

LEVER. [Meeting her eyes] No, I am not.

MRS. GWYN. Ah, but would you tell me if you were?

LEVER. [Softly] Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

MRS. GWYN struggles to look at him, then covers her face with her hands.

MRS. GWYN. If I were to give you up, you'd forget me in a month.

LEVER. Why do you say such things?

MRS. GWYN. If only I could believe I was necessary to you!

LEVER. [Forcing the fervour of his voice] But you are!

MRS. GWYN. Am I? [With the ghost of a smile] Midsummer day!

[She gives a laugh that breaks into a sob.

The music of a waltz sounds from the house.

LEVER. For God's sake, don't, Molly —I don't believe in going to meet trouble.

MRS. GWYN. It's staring me in the face.

LEVER. Let the future take care of itself!

MRS. GWYN has turned away her face, covering it with her hands.

LEVER. Don't, Molly! [Trying to pull her hands away] Don't!

MRS. GWYN. Oh! what shall I do?

There is a silence; the music of the waltz sounds louder from the house.

MRS. GWYN. [Starting up] Listen! One can't sit it out and dance it too. Which is it to be, Maurice, dancing—or sitting out? It must be one or the other, mustn't it?

LEVER. Molly! Molly!

MRS. GWYN. Ah, my dear! [Standing away from him as though to shoo herself] How long shall I keep you? This is all that's left of me. It's time I joined the wallflowers. [Smiling faintly] It's time I played the mother isn't it? [In a whisper] It'll be all sitting out then.

LEVER. Don't! Let's go and dance, it'll do you good.

He puts his hands on her arms, and in a gust of passion kisses her lips and throat.

MRS. GWYN. I can't give you up—I can't. Love me, oh! love me!

For a moment they stand so; then, with sudden remembrance of where they are, they move apart.

LEVER. Are you all right now, daring?

MRS. GWYN. [Trying to smile] Yes, clear—quite.

LEVER. Then let's go, and dance.

[They go.

For a few seconds the hollow tree stands alone; then from the house ROSE comes and enters it. She takes out a bottle of champagne, wipes it, and carries it away; but seeing MRS. GWYN'S scarf lying across the chair, she fingers it, and stops, listening to the waltz. Suddenly draping it round her shoulders, she seizes the bottle of champagne, and waltzes with abandon to the music, as though avenging a long starvation of her instincts. Thus dancing, she is surprised by DICK, who has come to smoke a cigarette and think, at the spot where he was told to "have a go." ROSE, startled, stops and hugs the bottle.

DICK. It's not claret, Rose, I shouldn't warm it.

ROSE, taking off the scarf, replaces it on the chair; then with the half-warmed bottle, she retreats. DICK, in the swing, sits thinking of his fate. Suddenly from behind the hollow tree, he sees JOY darting forward in her day dress with her hair about her neck, and her skirt all torn. As he springs towards her she turns at bay.

DICK. Joy!

JOY. I want Uncle Tom.

DICK. [In consternation] But ought you to have got up—I thought you were ill in bed; oughtn't you to be lying down?

JOY. I haven't been in bed. Where's Uncle Tom?

DICK. But where have you been—your dress is all torn? Look!

[He touches the torn skirt.

JOY. [Tearing it away] In the fields. Where's Uncle Tom?

DICK. Aren't you really ill, then?

JOY shakes her head, DICK showing her the irises.

DICK. Look at these. They were the best I could get!

JOY. Don't! I want Uncle Tom!

DICK. Won't you take them?

JOY. I've got something else to do.

DICK. [With sudden resolution] What do you want the Colonel for?

JOY. I want him.

DICK. Alone?

JOY. Yes.

DICK. Joy, what is the matter?

JOY. I've got something to tell him.

DICK. What? [With sudden inspiration] Is it about Lever?

JOY. [In a low voice] The mine.

DICK. The mine?

JOY. It's not—not a proper one.

DICK. How do you mean, Joy?

JOY. I overheard. I don't care, I listened. I wouldn't if it had been anybody else, but I hate him.

DICK. [Gravely] What did you hear?

JOY. He's keeping back something Uncle Tom ought to know.

DICK. Are you sure?

JOY makes a rush to pass him.

DICK. [Barring the way] No, wait a minute—you must! Was it something that really matters? I don't want to know what.

JOY. Yes, it was.

DICK. What a beastly thing—are you quite certain, Joy?

JOY. [Between her teeth] Yes.

DICK. Then you must tell him, of course, even if you did overhear. You can't stand by and see the Colonel swindled. Whom was he talking to?

JOY. I won't tell you.

DICK. [Taking her wrist] Was it—was it your mother?

JOY bends her head.

DICK. But if it was your mother, why doesn't she——

JOY. Let me go!

DICK. [Still holding her] I mean I can't see what——

JOY. [Passionately] Let me go!

DICK. [Releasing her] I'm thinking of your mother, Joy. She would never——

JOY. [Covering her face] That man!

DICK. But, Joy, just think! There must be some mistake. It's so queer—it's quite impossible!

JOY. He won't let her.

DICK. Won't let her—won't let her? But—— [Stopping dead, and in a very different voice] Oh!

JOY. [Passionately] Why d'you look at me like that? Why can't you speak?

[She waits for him to speak, but he does not.

JOY. I'm going to show what he is, so that Mother shan't speak to him again. I can—can't I—if I tell Uncle Tom?—can't I——?

DICK. But Joy—if your mother knows a thing like—that——

JOY. She wanted to tell—she begged him—and he wouldn't.

DICK. But, Joy, dear, it means——

JOY. I hate him, I want to make her hate him, and I will.

DICK. But, Joy, dear, don't you see—if your mother knows a thing like that, and doesn't speak of it, it means that she—it means that you can't make her hate him—it means—— If it were anybody else, but, well, you can't give your own mother away!

JOY. How dare you! How dare you! [Turning to the hollow tree] It isn't true—— Oh! it isn't true?

DICK. [In deep distress] Joy, dear, I never meant, I didn't really!

[He tries to pull her hands down from her face.

JOY. [Suddenly] Oh! go away, go away!

MRS. GWYN is seen coming back. JOY springs into the tree. DICK quickly steals away. MRS. GWYN goes up to the chair and takes the scarf that she has come for, and is going again, when JOY steals out to her.

JOY. Mother!

MRS. GWYN stands looking at her with her teeth set on her lower lip.

JOY. Oh! Mother, it isn't true?

MRS. GWYN. [Very still] What isn't true?

JOY. That you and he are——

Searching her mother's face, which is deadly still. In a whisper: Then it is true. Oh!

MRS. GWYN. That's enough, Joy! What I am is my affair—not yours—do you understand?

JOY. [Low and fierce] Yes, I do.

MRS. GWYN. You don't. You're only a child.

JOY. [Passionately] I understand that you've hurt—— [She stops.

MRS. GWYN. Do you mean your father?

JOY. [Bowing her head] Yes, and—and me [She covers her face] I'm—I'm ashamed.

MRS. GWYN. I brought you into the world, and you say that to me? Have I been a bad mother to you?

JOY. [In a smothered voice] Oh! Mother!

MRS. GWYN. Ashamed? Am I to live all my life like a dead woman because you're ashamed? Am I to live like the dead because you're a child that knows nothing of life? Listen, Joy, you'd better understand this once for all. Your father has no right over me and he knows it. We've been hateful to each other for years. Can you understand that? Don't cover your face like a child—look at me.

JOY drops her hands, and lifts her face. MRS. GWYN looks back at her, her lips are quivering; she goes on speaking with stammering rapidity.

MRS. GWYN. D'you think—because I suffered when you were born and because I've suffered since with every ache you ever had, that that gives you the right to dictate to me now? [In a dead voice] I've been unhappy enough and shall be unhappy enough in the time to come.

JOY. I would do anything for you, Mother.

MRS. GWYN. Except—let me live, Joy. That's the only thing you won't do for me, I quite understand.

JOY. Oh! Mother, you don't understand—I want you so; and I seem to be nothing to you now.

MRS. GWYN. Nothing to me?

[She smiles.

JOY. Mother, darling, if you're so un-appy let's forget it all, let's go away nd I'll be everything to you, I promise.

MRS. GWYN. [With the ghost of a ugh] Ah, Joy!
JOY. I would try so hard.
MRS. GWYN. [With the same quiver- g smile] My darling, I know you ould, until you fell in love yourself.
JOY. Oh, Mother, I wouldn't, I never ould, I swear it.
MRS. GWYN. There has never been a oman, Joy, that did not fall in love.
JOY. [In a despairing whisper] But s wrong of you—it's wicked!
MRS. GWYN. If it's wicked, I shall pay r it, not you!
JOY. But I want to save you, Mother!
MRS. GWYN. Save me?
[Breaking into laughter.
JOY. I can't bear it that you—if you'll ly—I'll never leave you. You think I n't know what I'm saying, but I do, cause even now I—I half love some- dy. Oh, Mother! [Pressing her east] I feel—I feel so awful—as if erybody knew.
MRS. GWYN. You think I'm a monster hurt you. Ah! yes! You'll understand tter some day.
JOY. [In a sudden outburst of excited ar] I won't believe it—I—I—can't— u're deserting me, Mother.
MRS. GWYN. Oh, you untouched ings.
JOY looks up suddenly, sees her face, and sinks down on her knees.
JOY. Mother—it's for me!
MRS. GWYN. Ask for my life, Joy— n't be afraid!
JOY turns her face away. MRS. GWYN bends suddenly and touches her daughter's hair; JOY shrinks from that touch.
MRS. GWYN. [Recoiling as though she d been stung] I forgot—I'm desert- g you.
And swiftly without looking back she goes away. JOY left alone under the hollow tree, crouches lower, and her shoulders shake. Here DICK finds her, when he hears no longer any sound of voices. He falls on his knees beside her.

DICK. Oh! Joy, dear, don't cry. It's so dreadful to see you! I'd do anything not to see you cry! Say something.
JOY is still for a moment, then the shaking of the shoulders begins again.
DICK. Joy, darling. It's so awful, you'll make yourself ill, and it isn't worth it, really. I'd do anything to save you pain—won't you stop just for a minute?
JOY is still again.
DICK. Nothing in the world's worth your crying, Joy. Give me just a little look.
JOY. [Looking; in a smothered voice] Don't!
DICK. You do look so sweet! Oh, Joy! I'll comfort you, I'll take it all on myself. I know all about it.
JOY gives a sobbing laugh.
DICK. I do. I've had trouble too, I swear I have. It gets better, it does really.
JOY. You don't know—it's—it's——
DICK. Don't think about it! No, no, no! I know exactly what it's like.
[He strokes her arm.
JOY. [Shrinking, in a whisper] You mustn't.
The music of a waltz is heard again.
DICK. Look here, Joy! It's no good, we must talk it over calmly.
JOY. You don't see. It's the—it's the disgrace——
DICK. Oh! as to that—she's your mother, whatever she does; I'd like to see anybody say anything about her.
[Viciously.
JOY. [Gulping her tears] That doesn't help.
DICK. But if she doesn't love your father——
JOY. But she's married to him!
DICK. [Hastily] Yes, I know! Still—
JOY. [Catching at a straw] What?
DICK. [Hastily] Of course, I believe in morals. [They stare solemnly at each other] I can't help seeing marriage is awfully important.
JOY. [Solemnly] It's sacred.
DICK. But there must be exceptions, Joy.
JOY. [Losing herself a little in the stress of this discussion] How can there be, if it's sacred?

DICK. [Earnestly] All rules have exceptions.

JOY. It can't be true about marriage—how can it——

DICK. [With intense earnestness] But look here, Joy, if it's a failure, I do think it seems awful—don't you?

JOY. I don't know—yes—if—— [Suddenly] But it's my own mother!

DICK. [Gravely] I know, of course. I can't expect you to see it in your own case like this. [With desperation] But look here, Joy, this'll show you! If a person loves, they have to decide. Well, then, you see, that's what your mother's done.

JOY. But that doesn't show me anything!

DICK. But it does. The thing is to look at it as if it wasn't yourself. If it had been you and me in love, Joy, and it was wrong, like them, of course [ruefully], I know you'd have decided right. [Fiercely] But I swear I should have decided wrong. [Triumphantly] That's why I feel I understand your mother.

JOY. [Brushing her sleeve across her eyes] Oh, Dick, you are so sweet—and—and—and—funny!

DICK. [Sliding his arm about her] I love you, Joy, that's why, and I'll love you till you don't feel it any more. I will. I'll love you all day and every day; you shan't miss anything, I swear it. It's such a beautiful night—it's on purpose. Look!

JOY looks; he looks at her.

DICK. But it's not so beautiful as you.

JOY. [Bending her head] You mustn't. I don't know—what's coming.

DICK. [Sidling closer] Aren't your knees tired, darling? I—I can't get near you properly.

JOY. [With a sob] Oh! Dick, you are a funny—comfort!

DICK. We'll stick together, Joy, always; nothing'll matter then.

They struggle to their feet—the waltz sounds louder.

DICK. You're missing it all! I can't bear you to miss the dancing. It seems so queer! Couldn't we? Just a little turn?

JOY. No, no!

DICK. Oh! try!

[He takes her gently by the wais she shrinks back.

JOY. [Brokenly] No—no! Oh! Dic —to-morrow'll be so awful.

DICK. To-morrow shan't hurt yo Joy; nothing shall ever hurt you agai She looks at him, and her fac changes; suddenly she buries against his shoulder.

They stand so just a moment in th moonlight; then turning to th river move slowly out of sigh Again the hollow tree is le alone. The music of the waltz ha stopped. The voices of MIS BEECH and the COLONEL are hear approaching from the hous They appear in the opening of th wall. The COLONEL carries a pai of field-glasses with which to loo at the moon.

COLONEL. Charming to see Moll dance with Lever, their steps go so wel together! I can always tell when a wom an's enjoying herself, Peachey.

MISS BEECH. [Sharply] Can you You're very clever.

COLONEL. Wonderful, that moon! I'm going to have a look at her! Splendi glasses these, Peachey [He screws them out], not a better pair in England. I re member in Burmah with these glasses used to be able to tell a man from woman at two miles and a quarter. An that's no joke, I can tell you. [But o his way to the moon, he has taken a sur vey of the earth to the right along th river. In a low but excited voice] I say I say—is it one of the maids?—th baggage! Why! It's Dick! By Georg she's got her hair down, Peachey! It Joy!

MISS BEECH goes to look. He mak as though to hand the glasses her, but puts them to his own ey instead—excitedly.

COLONEL. It is! What about h headache? By George, they're kis ing. I say, Peachey! I shall have to t Nell?

MISS BEECH. Are you sure they kissing? Well, that's some comfort.

COLONEL. They're at the stile no

Oughtn't I to stop them, eh? [He stands on tiptoe] We mustn't spy on them, dash it all. [He drops the glasses] They're out of sight now.

MISS BEECH. [To herself] He said he wouldn't let her.

COLONEL. What! have you been encouraging them?

MISS BEECH. Don't be in such a hurry!

[She moves towards the hollow tree.

COLONEL. [Abstractedly] By George, Peachey, to think that Nell and I were once—— Poor Nell! I remember just such a night as this——

[He stops, and stares before him, sighing.

MISS BEECH. [Impressively] It's a comfort she's got that good young man. She's found out that her mother and his Mr. Lever are—you know.

COLONEL. [Losing all traces of his fussiness, and drawing himself up as though he were on parade] You tell me that my niece——?

MISS BEECH. Out of her own mouth!

COLONEL. [Bowing his head] I never would have believed she'd have forgotten herself.

MISS BEECH. [Very solemnly] Ah, my dear! We're all as hollow as that tree! When it's ourselves it's always a special case!

The COLONEL makes a movement of distress, and MISS BEECH goes to him.

MISS BEECH. Don't you take it so to heart, my dear!

A silence.

COLONEL. [Shaking his head] I couldn't have believed Molly would forget that child.

MISS BEECH. [Sadly] They must go their own ways, poor things! She can't put herself in the child's place, and the child can't put herself in Molly's. A woman and a girl—there's the tree of life between them!

COLONEL. [Staring into the tree to see indeed if that were the tree alluded to] It's a grief to me, Peachey, it's a grief! [He sinks into a chair, stroking his long moustaches. Then to avenge his hurt] Shan't tell Nell—dashed if I do anything to make the trouble worse!

MISS BEECH. [Nodding] There's suffering enough, without adding to it with our trumpery judgments! If only things would last between them!

COLONEL. [Fiercely] Last! By George, they'd better—— [He stops, and looking up with a queer sorry look] I say, Peachey—Life's very funny!

MISS BEECH. Men and women are! [Touching his forehead tenderly] There, there—take care of your poor, dear head! Tsst! The blessed innocents!

She pulls the COLONEL'S sleeve. They slip away towards the house, as JOY and DICK come back. They are still linked together, and stop by the hollow of the tree.

JOY. [In a whisper] Dick, is love always like this!

DICK. [Putting his arms round her, with conviction] It's never been like this before. It's you and me!

[He kisses her on the lips.

The curtain falls.

A DRAMA IN THREE ACTS

is noon. In the Underwoods' dining-room a bright fire is burning. On one side of the fireplace are double doors leading to the drawing-room, on the other side a door leading to the hall. In the centre of the room a long dining-table without a cloth is set out as a board table. At the head of it, in the Chairman's seat, sits JOHN ANTHONY, an old man, big, clean-shaven, and high-coloured, with thick white hair, and thick dark eyebrows. His movements are rather slow and feeble, but his eyes are very much alive. There is a glass of water by his side. On his right sits his son EDGAR, an earnest-looking young man, reading a newspaper. Next him WANKLIN, a man with jutting eyebrows, and silver-streaked light hair, is bending over transfer papers. TENCH, the secretary, a short and rather humble, nervous man, stands helping him. On WANKLIN'S right sits UNDERWOOD, the Manager, a quiet man, with a long, stiff jaw, and steady eyes. Back to the fire is SCANTLEBURY, a very large, pale, sleepy man, with grey hair, rather bald. Between him and the Chairman are two empty chairs. Before the fire is standing FREDERIC WILDER, lean, cadaverous, complaining, with drooping grey moustaches.

WILDER. I say, this fire's the devil! in I have a screen, Tench?

SCANTLEBURY. A screen, ah!

TENCH. Certainly, Mr. Wilder. [He oks at UNDERWOOD] That is—perhaps the manager—perhaps Mr. Underwood——

SCANTLEBURY. These fireplaces of yours, Underwood——

UNDERWOOD. [Roused from studying some papers] A screen? Rather! I'm sorry. [He goes to the door with a little smile] We're not accustomed to complaints of too much fire down here just now.

He speaks as though he holds a pipe between his teeth, slowly, ironically.

WILDER. [In an injured voice] You mean the men. H'm!

SCANTLEBURY. Poor devils!

WILDER. It's their own fault, Scantlebury.

EDGAR. [Holding out his paper] There's great distress amongst them, according to the Trenartha News.

WILDER. Oh, that rag! Give it to Wanklin. Suit his Radical views. They call us monsters, I suppose. The editor of that rubb: h ought to be shot.

EDGAR. [Reading] "If the Board of worthy gentlemen who control the Trenartha Tin Plate Works from their armchairs in London, would condescend to come and see for themselves the conditions prevailing amongst their workpeople during this strike——"

WILDER. Well, we have come.

EDGAR. [Continuing] "We cannot believe that even their leg-of-mutton hearts would remain untouched."

WANKLIN takes the paper from him.

WILDER. Ruffian! I remember that fellow when he hadn't a penny to his name; little snivel of a chap that's made his way by blackguarding everybody who takes a different view to himself.

ANTHONY says something that is not heard.

WILDER. What does your father say?

EDGAR. He says "The kettle and the pot."

WILDER. H'm!

[He sits down next to SCANTLEBURY.

SCANTLEBURY. [Blowing out his cheeks] I shall boil if I don't get that screen.

UNDERWOOD and ENID enter with a screen, which they place before the fire. ENID is tall; she has a small, decided face, and is twenty-eight years old.

ENID. Put it closer, Frank. Will that do, Mr. Wilder? It's the highest we've got.

WILDER. Thanks, capitally.

SCANTLEBURY. [Turning, with a sigh of pleasure] Ah! Merci, Madame!

ENID. Is there anything else you want, Father?

ANTHONY shakes his head.

ENID. Edgar—anything?

EDGAR. You might give me a "J" nib, old girl.

ENID. There are some down there by Mr. Scantlebury.

SCANTLEBURY. [Handling a little box of nibs] Ah! your brother uses "J's." What does the manager use? [With expansive politeness] What does your husband use, Mrs. Underwood?

UNDERWOOD. A quill!

SCANTLEBURY. The homely product of the goose. [He holds out quills.

UNDERWOOD. [Drily] Thanks, if you can spare me one. [He takes a quill] What about lunch, Enid?

ENID. [Stopping at the double doors and looking back] We're going to have lunch here, in the drawing-room, so you needn't hurry with your meeting.

WANKLIN and WILDER bow, and she goes out.

SCANTLEBURY. [Rousing himself, suddenly] Ah! Lunch! That hotel—— Dreadful! Did you try the whitebait last night? Fried fat!

WILDER. Past twelve! Aren't you going to read the minutes, Tench?

TENCH. [Looking for the Chairman's assent, reads in a rapid and monotonous voice]. "At a Board Meeting held th 31st of January at the Company' Offices, 512, Cannon Street, E.C. Pres ent—Mr. Anthony in the chair, Messrs F. H. Wilder, William Scantlebury Oliver Wanklin, and Edgar Anthony Read letters from the Manager date January 20th, 23rd, 25th, 28th, relativ to the strike at the Company's Works Read letters to the Manager of Januar 21st, 24th, 26th, 29th. Read letter fro Mr. Simon Harness, of the Centra Union, asking for an interview with th Board. Read letter from the Men' Committee, signed David Roberts James Green, John Bulgin, Henr Thomas, George Rous, desiring confer ence with the Board; and it was re solved that a special Board Meeting b called for February 7th at the house o the Manager, for the purpose of dis cussing the situation with Mr. Simo Harness and the Men's Committee o the spot. Passed twelve transfers, signe and sealed nine certificates and one bal ance certificate."

[He pushes the book over to th CHAIRMAN.

ANTHONY. [With a heavy sigh] I it's your pleasure, sign the same.

[He signs, moving the pen with di ficulty.

WANKLIN. What's the Union's game Tench? They haven't made up thei split with the men. What does Harnes want this interview for?

TENCH. Hoping we shall come to compromise, I think, sir; he's having meeting with the men this afternoon.

WILDER. Harness! Ah! He's one o those cold-blooded, cool-headed chap I distrust them. I don't know that w didn't make a mistake to come dow What time'll the men be here?

UNDERWOOD. Any time now.

WILDER. Well, if we're not read they'll have to wait—won't do 'em an harm to cool their heels a bit.

SCANTLEBURY. [Slowly] Poor devil It's snowing. What weather!

UNDERWOOD. [With meaning slow ness] This house'll be the warmest pla they've been in this winter.

WILDER. I hope we're going to sett this business in time for me to catch t go. I've got to take my wife to Spain -morrow. [Chattily] My old father d a strike at his works in '69; just ch a February as this. They wanted shoot him.

WANKLIN. What! In the close sea- n?

WILDER. By George, there was no ose season for employers then! He ed to go down to his office with a stol in his pocket.

SCANTLEBURY. [Faintly alarmed] Not riously?

WILDER. [With finality] Ended in s shootin' one of 'em in the legs.

SCANTLEBURY. [Unavoidably feeling r thigh] No? God bless me!

ANTHONY. [Lifting the agenda paper] o consider the policy of the Board in lation to the strike.

There is a silence.

WILDER. It's this infernal three-cor- red duel—the Union, the men, and rselves.

WANKLIN. We needn't consider the nion.

WILDER. It's my experience that u've always got to consider the Union, nfound them! If the Union were go- g to withdraw their support from the en, as they've done, why did they ever ow them to strike at all?

EDGAR. We've had that over a dozen nes.

WILDER. Well, I've never understood It's beyond me. They talk of the gineers' and furnacemen's demands ing excessive—so they are—but that's t enough to make the Union with- aw their support. What's behind

UNDERWOOD. Fear of strikes at Har- r's and Tinewell's.

WILDER. [With triumph] Afraid of her strikes—now, that's a reason! hy couldn't we have been told that fore?

UNDERWOOD. You were.

TENCH. You were absent from the oard that day, sir.

SCANTLEBURY. The men must have en they had no chance when the Union .ve them up. It's madness.

UNDERWOOD. It's Roberts!

WILDER. Just our luck, the men find- ing a fanatical firebrand like Roberts for leader.

A pause.

WANKLIN. [Looking at ANTHONY] Well?

WILDER. [Breaking in fussily] It's a regular mess. I don't like the position we're in; I don't like it; I've said so for a long time. [Looking at WANKLIN] When Wanklin and I came down here before Christmas it looked as if the men must collapse. You thought so too, Underwood.

UNDERWOOD. Yes.

WILDER. Well, they haven't! Here we are, going from bad to worse—losing our customers—shares going down!

SCANTLEBURY. [Shaking his head] M'm! M'm!

WANKLIN. What loss have we made by this strike, Tench?

TENCH. Over fifty thousand, sir!

SCANTLEBURY. [Pained] You don't say!

WILDER. We shall never get it back.

TENCH. No, sir.

WILDER. Who'd have supposed the men were going to stick out like this? —nobody suggested that.

[Looking angrily at TENCH.

SCANTLEBURY. [Shaking his head] I've never liked a fight—never shall.

ANTHONY. No surrender!

[All look at him.

WILDER. Who wants to surrender?

ANTHONY looks at him.

WILDER. I—I want to act reasonably. When the men sent Roberts up to the Board in December—then was the time. We ought to have humoured him; instead of that, the Chairman—[dropping his eyes before ANTHONY's]—er—we snapped his head off. We could have got them in then by a little tact.

ANTHONY. No compromise!

WILDER. There we are! This strike's been going on now since October, and as far as I can see it may last another six months. Pretty mess we shall be in by then. The only comfort is, the men'll be in a worse!

EDGAR. [To UNDERWOOD] What sort of state are they really in, Frank?

UNDERWOOD. [Without expression] Damnable!

WILDER. Well, who on earth would have thought they'd have held on like this without support!

UNDERWOOD. Those who know them.

WILDER. I defy anyone to know them! And what about tin? Price going up daily. When we do get started we shall have to work off our contracts at the top of the market.

WANKLIN. What do you say to that, Chairman?

ANTHONY. Can't be helped!

WILDER. Shan't pay a dividend till goodness knows when!

SCANTLEBURY. [With emphasis] We ought to think of the shareholders. [Turning heavily] Chairman, I say we ought to think of the shareholders.

ANTHONY mutters.

SCANTLEBURY. What's that?

TENCH. The Chairman says he is thinking of you, sir.

SCANTLEBURY. [Sinking back into torpor] Cynic!

WILDER. It's past a joke. I don't want to go without a dividend for years if the Chairman does. We can't go on playing ducks and drakes with the Company's prosperity.

EDGAR. [Rather ashamedly] I think we ought to consider the men.

All but ANTHONY fidget in their seats.

SCANTLEBURY. [With a sigh] We mustn't think of our private feelings, young men. That'll never do.

EDGAR. [Ironically] I'm not thinking of our feelings. I'm thinking of the men's.

WILDER. As to that—we're men of business.

WANKLIN. That is the little trouble.

EDGAR. There's no necessity for pushing things so far in the face of all this suffering—it's—it's cruel.

No one speaks, as though EDGAR had uncovered something whose existence no man prizing his self-respect could afford to recognise.

WANKLIN. [With an ironical smile] I'm afraid we mustn't base our policy on luxuries like sentiment.

EDGAR. I detest this state of things.

ANTHONY. We didn't seek the quarrel.

EDGAR. I know that, sir, but surel we've gone far enough.

ANTHONY. No.

All look at one another.

WANKLIN. Luxuries apart, Chairma we must look out what we're doing.

ANTHONY. Give way to the men onc and there'll be no end to it.

WANKLIN. I quite agree, but——

ANTHONY shakes his head.

WANKLIN. You make it a question c bedrock principle?

ANTHONY nods.

WANKLIN. Luxuries again, Chai man! The shares are below par.

WILDER. Yes, and they'll drop to half when we pass the next dividen SCANTLEBURY. [With alarm] Com come! Not so bad as that.

WILDER. [Grimly] You'll see! [Cra ing forward to catch ANTHONY' speech] I didn't catch——

TENCH. [Hesitating] The Chairma says, sir, "Fais que—que—devra—— EDGAR. [Sharply] My father says "Do what we ought—and let things rip.

WILDER. Tcha!

SCANTLEBURY. [Throwing up h hands] The Chairman's a Stoic—I a ways said the Chairman was a Stoic.

WILDER. Much good that'll do us.

WANKLIN. [Suavely] Seriousl Chairman, are you going to let the shi sink under you, for the sake of— principle?

ANTHONY. She won't sink.

SCANTLEBURY. [With alarm] N while I'm on the Board I hope.

ANTHONY. [With a twinkle] Bett rat, Scantlebury.

SCANTLEBURY. What a man!

ANTHONY. I've always fought ther I've never been beaten yet.

WANKLIN. We're with you in theo Chairman. But we're not all made cast-iron.

ANTHONY. We've only to hold on.

WILDER. [Rising and going to t fire] And go to the devil as fast as can!

ANTHONY: Better go to the devil th give in!

WILDER. [Fretfully] That may s you, sir, but it doesn't suit me. or a one else I should think.

ANTHONY looks him in the face—a silence.

EDGAR. I don't see how we can get ver it that to go on like this means arvation to the men's wives and milies.

WILDER turns abruptly to the fire, and SCANTLEBURY puts out a hand to push the idea away.

WANKLIN. I'm afraid again that unds a little sentimental.

EDGAR. Men of business are excused om decency, you think?

WILDER. Nobody's more sorry for the en than I am, but if they [lashing himself] choose to be such a pig-headed lot, s nothing to do with us; we've quite ough on our hands to think of ourlves and the shareholders.

EDGAR. [Irritably] It won't kill the areholders to miss a dividend or two; don't see that that's reason enough for uckling under.

SCANTLEBURY. [With grave discomrt] You talk very lightly of your divinds, young man; I don't know where e are.

WILDER. There's only one sound way looking at it. We can't go on ruining rselves with this strike.

ANTHONY. No caving in!

SCANTLEBURY. [With a gesture of deair] Look at him!

ANTHONY is leaning back in his chair. They do look at him.

WILDER. [Returning to his seat] Well, I can say is, if that's the Chairan's view, I don't know what we've me down here for.

ANTHONY. To tell the men that we- nothing for them—— [Grimly] They n't believe it till they hear it spoken plain English.

WILDER. H'm! Shouldn't be a bit surised if that brute Roberts hadn't got down here with the very same idea. hate a man with a grievance.

EDGAR. [Resentfully] We didn't pay m enough for his discovery. I always id that at the time.

WILDER. We paid him five hundred d a bonus of two hundred three years er. If that's not enough! What does want for goodness' sake?

TENCH. [Complainingly] Company made a hundred thousand out of his brains, and paid him seven hundred—that's the way he goes on, sir.

WILDER. The man's a rank agitator! Look here, I hate the Unions. But now we've got Harness here let's get him to settle the whole thing.

ANTHONY. No!

Again they look at him.

UNDERWOOD. Roberts won't let the men assent to that.

SCANTLEBURY. Fanatic! Fanatic!

WILDER. [Looking at ANTHONY] And not the only one!

FROST enters from the hall.

FROST. [To ANTHONY] Mr. Harness from the Union, waiting, sir. The men are here too, sir.

ANTHONY nods. UNDERWOOD goes to the door, returning with HARNESS, a pale, clean-shaven man with hollow cheeks, quick eyes and lantern jaw—FROST has retired.

UNDERWOOD. [Pointing to TENCH'S chair] Sit there next the Chairman, Harness, won't you?

At HARNESS'S appearance, the Board have drawn together, as it were, and turned a little to him, like cattle at a dog.

HARNESS. [With a sharp look round, and a bow] Thanks! [He sits—his accent is slightly nasal] Well, gentlemen, we're going to do business at last, I hope.

WILDER. Depends on what you call business, Harness. Why don't you make the men come in?

HARNESS. [Sardonically] The men are far more in the right than you are. The question with us is whether we shan't begin to support them again.

He ignores them all, except ANTHONY, to whom he turns in speaking.

ANTHONY. Support them if you like; we'll put in free labour and have done with it.

HARNESS. That won't do, Mr. Anthony. You can't get free labour, and you know it.

ANTHONY. We shall see that.

HARNESS. I'm quite frank with you. We were forced to withhold our support from your men because some of their demands are in excess of current rates. I expect to make them withdraw those demands to-day; if they do, take it straight from me, gentlemen, we shall back them again at once. Now, I want to see something fixed up before I go back to-night. Can't we have done with this old-fashioned tug-of-war business? What good's it doing you? Why don't you recognise once for all that these people are men like yourselves, and want what's good for them just as you want what's good for you—— [Bitterly] Your motor-cars, and champagne, and eight-course dinners.

ANTHONY. If the men will come in, we'll do something for them.

HARNESS. [Ironically] Is that your opinion too, sir—and yours—and yours?

The Directors do not answer.

HARNESS. Well, all I can say is: It's a kind of high and mighty aristocratic tone I thought we'd grown out of—seems I was mistaken.

ANTHONY. It's the tone the men use. Remains to be seen which can hold out longest—they without us, or we without them.

HARNESS. As business men, I wonder you're not ashamed of this waste of force, gentlemen. You know what it'll all end in.

ANTHONY. What?

HARNESS. Compromise—it always does.

SCANTLEBURY. Can't you persuade the men that their interests are the same as ours?

HARNESS. [Turning, ironically] I could persuade them of that, sir, if they were.

WILDER. Come, Harness, you're a clever man, you don't believe all the Socialistic claptrap that's talked nowadays. Their's no real difference between their interests and ours.

HARNESS. There's just one very simple little question I'd like to put to you. Will you pay your men one penny more than they force you to pay them?

WILDER is silent.

WANKLIN. [Chiming in] I humbly thought that not to pay more than was necessary was the A B C of commerce.

HARNESS. [With irony] Yes, that seems to be the A B C of commerce sir; and the A B C of commerce is between your interests and the men's.

SCANTLEBURY. [Whispering] We ought to arrange something.

HARNESS. [Drily] Am I to understand then, gentlemen, that your Board is going to make no concessions?

WANKLIN and WILDER bend forward as if to speak, but stop.

ANTHONY. [Nodding] None.

WANKLIN and WILDER again bend forward, and SCANTLEBURY give an unexpected grunt.

HARNESS. You were about to say something, I believe?

But SCANTLEBURY says nothing.

EDGAR. [Looking up suddenly] We're sorry for the state of the men.

HARNESS. [Icily] The men have no use for your pity, sir. What they want is justice.

ANTHONY. Then let them be just.

HARNESS. For that word "just" read "humble," Mr. Anthony. Why should they be humble? Barring the accident of money, aren't they as good men as you?

ANTHONY. Cant!

HARNESS. Well, I've been five years in America. It colours a man's notions.

SCANTLEBURY. [Suddenly, as though avenging his uncompleted grunt] Let's have the men in and hear what they've got to say!

ANTHONY nods, and UNDERWOOD goes out by the single door.

HARNESS. [Drily] As I'm to have an interview with them this afternoon, gentlemen, I'll ask you to postpone your final decision till that's over.

Again ANTHONY nods, and takes up his glass drinks.

UNDERWOOD comes in again, followed by ROBERTS, GREEN, BULGIN, THOMAS, ROUS. They file in, hat in hand, and stand silent in a row. ROBERTS is lean, of middle height, with a slight stoop. He has a little rat-gnawn, brown grey beard, moustaches, high cheek-bones, hollow cheeks, sma fiery eyes. He wears an old and grease-stained, blue serge suit, and carries an old bowler hat. He stands nearest the Chairman. GREEN, next to him, has a clean, worn face, with a small grey, goatee beard and drooping moustaches, iron spectacles, and mild, straightforward eyes. He wears an overcoat, green with age, and a linen collar. Next to him is BULGIN, a tall, strong man, with a dark moustache, and fighting jaw, wearing a red muffler, who keeps changing his cap from one hand to the other. Next to him is THOMAS, an old man with a grey moustache, full beard, and weather-beaten, bony face, whose overcoat discloses a lean, plucked-looking neck. On his right, ROUS, the youngest of the five, looks like a soldier; he has eyes that have stared at death.

UNDERWOOD. [Pointing] There are ne chairs there against the wall, berts; won't you draw them up and down?

ROBERTS. Thank you, Mr. Under-od, we'll stand—in the presence e Board. [He speaks in a biting and ccato voice, rolling his r's, pronounc-his a's like an Italian a, and his con-ants short and crisp] How are you, r. Harness? Didn't expect t' have the asure of seeing you till this after-on.

HARNESS. [Steadily] We shall meet ain then, Roberts.

ROBERTS. Glad to hear that; we shall ve some news for you to take to your ople.

ANTHONY. What do the men want?

ROBERTS. [Acidly] Beg pardon, I don't te catch the Chairman's remark.

TENCH. [From behind the Chairman's air] The Chairman wishes to know at the men have to say.

ROBERTS. It's what the Board has to we've come to hear. It's for the ard to speak first.

ANTHONY. The Board has nothing to ROBERTS. [Looking along the line of n] In that case we're wasting the Directors' time. We'll be taking our feet off this pretty carpet.

[He turns, the men move slowly, as though hypnotically influenced.

WANKLIN. [Suavely] Come, Roberts, you didn't give us this long, cold journey for the pleasure of saying that.

THOMAS. [A pure Welshman] No, sir, an' what I say iss——

ROBERTS. [Bitingly] Go on, Henry Thomas, go on. You're better able to speak to the—Directors than me.

THOMAS is silent.

TENCH. The Chairman means, Roberts, that it was the men who asked for the conference, the Board wish to hear what they have to say.

ROBERTS. Gad! If I was to begin to tell ye all they have to say, I wouldn't be finished to-day. And there'd be some that'd wish they'd never left their London palaces.

HARNESS. What's your proposition, man? Be reasonable.

ROBERTS. You want reason, Mr. Harness? Take a look round this afternoon before the meeting. [He looks at the men; no sound escapes them] You'll see some very pretty scenery.

HARNESS. All right, my friend; you won't put me off.

ROBERTS. [To the men] We shan't put Mr. Harness off. Have some champagne with your lunch, Mr. Harness; you'll want it, sir.

HARNESS. Come, get to business, man!

THOMAS. What we're asking, look you, is just simple justice.

ROBERTS. [Venomously] Justice from London? What are you talking about, Henry Thomas? Have you gone silly?

THOMAS is silent.

ROBERTS. We know very well what we are—discontented dogs—never satisfied. What did the Chairman tell me up in London? That I didn't know what I was talking about. I was a foolish, uneducated man, that knew nothing of the wants of the men I spoke for.

EDGAR. Do please keep to the point.

ANTHONY. [Holding up his hand] There can only be one master, Roberts.

ROBERTS. Then, be Gad, it'll be us.

There is a silence; ANTHONY and ROBERTS stare at one another.

UNDERWOOD. If you've nothing to say to the Directors, Roberts, perhaps you'll let Green or Thomas speak for the men.

GREEN and THOMAS look anxiously at ROBERTS, at each other, and the other men.

GREEN. [An Englishman] If I'd been listened to, gentlemen——

THOMAS. What I'fe got to say iss what we'fe all got to say——

ROBERTS. Speak for yourself, Henry Thomas.

SCANTLEBURY. [With a gesture of deep spiritual discomfort] Let the poor men call their souls their own!

ROBERTS. Aye, they shall keep their souls, for it's not much body that you've left them, Mr. [with biting emphasis, as though the word were an offence] Scantlebury! [To the men] Well, will you speak, or shall I speak for you?

ROUS. [Suddenly] Speak out, Roberts, or leave it to others.

ROBERTS. [Ironically] Thank you, George Rous. [Addressing himself to ANTHONY] The Chairman and Board of Directors have honoured us by leaving London and coming all this way to hear what we've got to say; it would not be polite to keep them any longer waiting.

WILDER. Well, thank God for that!

ROBERTS. Ye will not dare to thank Him when I have done, Mr. Wilder, for all your piety. May be your God up in London has no time to listen to the working man. I'm told He is a wealthy God; but if He listens to what I tell Him, He will know more than ever He learned in Kensington.

HARNESS. Come, Roberts, you have your own God. Respect the God of other men.

ROBERTS. That's right, sir. We have nother God down here; I doubt He is ither different to Mr. Wilder's. Ask enry Thomas; he will tell you whether is God and Mr. Wilder's are the same.

THOMAS lifts his hand, and cranes his head as though to prophecy.

WANKLIN. For goodness' sake, let's keep to the point, Roberts.

ROBERTS. I rather think it is the point, Mr. Wanklin. If you can get the God of Capital to walk through the streets of Labour, and pay attention to what he sees, you're a brighter man than I tal you for, for all that you're a Radical.

ANTHONY. Attend to me, Roberts!

ROBERTS is silent.

ANTHONY. You are here to speak fo the men, as I am here to speak for th Board. [He looks slowly roun

WILDER, WANKLIN, and SCANTLEBURY make movements of uneasiness, and EDGAR gazes at the floo A faint smile comes on HARNESS'S face.

ANTHONY. Now then, what is it?

ROBERTS. Right, sir!

Throughout all that follows, he an ANTHONY look fixedly upon eac other. Men and Directors show their various ways suppressed un easiness, as though listening t words that they themselves woul not have spoken.

ROBERTS. The men can't afford t travel up to London; and they don trust you to believe what they say i black and white. They know what th post is [he darts a look at UNDERWOO and TENCH] and what Directors' meet ings are: "Refer it to the manager—le the manager advise us on the men's con dition. Can we squeeze them a littl more?"

UNDERWOOD. [In a low voice] Don' hit below the belt, Roberts!

ROBERTS. Is it below the belt, Mr. Un derwood? The men know. When I cam up to London, I told you the positio straight. An' what came of it? I wa told I didn't know what I was talkin about. I can't afford to travel up t London to be told that again.

ANTHONY. What have you to say fo the men?

ROBERTS. I have this to say—and firs as to their condition. Ye shall 'ave n need to go and ask your manager. Y can't squeeze them any more. Every ma of us is well-nigh starving. [A surprise murmur rises from the men. ROBERT looks round] Ye wonder why I tell y that? Every man of us is going shor We can't be no worse off than we' been these weeks past. Ye needn't thin that by waiting ye'll drive us to com in. We'll die first, the whole lot of u The men have sent for ye to know, one nd for all, whether ye are going to rant them their demands. I see the ieet of paper in the Secretary's hand.

TENCH moves nervously.

ROBERTS. That's it, I think, Mr. ench. It's not very large.

TENCH. [Nodding] Yes.

ROBERTS. There's not one sentence of riting on that paper that we can do ithout.

A movement amongst the men. ROBERTS turns on them sharply.

ROBERTS. Isn't that so?

The men assent reluctantly. ANTHONY takes from TENCH the paper and peruses it.

ROBERTS. Not one single sentence. All ıose demands are fair. We have not ked anything that we are not entitled ask. What I said up in London, I say gain now: there is not anything on that ece of paper that a just man should ot ask, and a just man give.

A pause.

ANTHONY. There is not one single de- and on this paper that we will grant.

In the stir that follows on these words, ROBERTS watches the Directors and ANTHONY the men. WILDER gets up abruptly and goes over to the fire.

ROBERTS. D'ye mean that?

ANTHONY. I do.

WILDER at the fire makes an emphatic movement of disgust.

ROBERTS. [Noting it, with dry intenty] Ye best know whether the condiın of the Company is any better than e condition of the men. [Scanning the irectors' faces] Ye best know whether can afford your tyranny—but this I ll ye: If ye think the men will give ay the least part of an inch, ye're mak- the worst mistake ye ever made. [He res his eyes on SCANTLEBURY] Ye ink because the Union is not support- us—more shame to it!—that we'll coming on our knees to you one fine orning. Ye think because the men ve got their wives an' families to ink of—that it's just a question of a eek or two——

ANTHONY. It would be better if you d not speculate so much on what we ink.

ROBERTS. Aye! It's not much profit to us! I will say this for you, Mr. Anthony—ye know your own mind! [Staring at ANTHONY] I can reckon on ye!

ANTHONY. [Ironically] I am obliged to you!

ROBERTS. And I know mine. I tell ye this. The men will send their wives and families where the country will have to keep them; an' they will starve sooner than give way. I advise ye, Mr. Anthony, to prepare yourself for the worst that can happen to your Company. We are not so ignorant as you might suppose. We know the way the cat is jumping. Your position is not all that it might be—not exactly!

ANTHONY. Be good enough to allow us to judge of our position for ourselves. Go back, and reconsider your own.

ROBERTS. [Stepping forward] Mr. Anthony, you are not a young man now; from the time that I remember anything ye have been an enemy to every man that has come into your works. I don't say that ye're a mean man, or a cruel man, but ye've grudged them the say of any word in their own fate. Ye've fought them down four times. I've heard ye say ye love a fight—mark my words—ye're fighting the last fight ye'll ever fight——

TENCH touches ROBERTS' sleeve.

UNDERWOOD. Roberts! Roberts!

ROBERTS. Roberts! Roberts! I mustn't speak my mind to the Chairman, but the Chairman may speak his mind to me!

WILDER. What are things coming to?

ANTHONY. [With a grim smile at WILDER] Go on, Roberts; say what you like!

ROBERTS. [After a pause] I have no more to say.

ANTHONY. The meeting stands adjourned to five o'clock.

WANKLIN. [In a low voice to UNDERWOOD] We shall never settle anything like this.

ROBERTS. [Bitingly] We thank the Chairman and Board of Directors for their gracious hearing.

He moves towards the door; the men cluster together stupefied; then ROUS, throwing up his head, passes ROBERTS and goes out. The others follow.

ROBERTS. [With his hand on the door—maliciously] Good day, gentlemen! [He goes out.

HARNESS. [Ironically] I congratulate you on the conciliatory spirit that's been displayed. With your permission, gentlemen, I'll be with you again at half-past five. Good morning!

He bows slightly, rests his eyes on ANTHONY, who returns his stare unmoved, and, followed by UNDERWOOD, goes out. There is a moment of uneasy silence. UNDERWOOD reappears in the doorway.

WILDER. [With emphatic disgust] Well!

The double doors are opened.

ENID. [Standing in the doorway] Lunch is ready.

EDGAR, getting up abruptly, walks out past his sister.

WILDER. Coming to lunch, Scantlebury?

SCANTLEBURY. [Rising heavily] I suppose so, I suppose so. It's the only thing we can do.

They go out through the double doors.

WANKLIN. [In a low voice] Do you really mean to fight to a finish, Chairman?

ANTHONY nods.

WANKLIN. Take care! The essence of things is to know when to stop.

ANTHONY does not answer.

WANKLIN. [Very gravely] This way disaster lies. The ancient Trojans were fools to your father, Mrs. Underwood.

[He goes out through the double doors.

ENID. I want to speak to Father, Frank.

UNDERWOOD follows WANKLIN out. TENCH, passing round the table, is restoring order to the scattered pens and papers.

ENID. Aren't you coming, Dad?

ANTHONY shakes his head. ENID looks meaningly at TENCH.

ENID. Won't you go and have some lunch, Mr. Tench?

TENCH. [With papers in his hand] Thank you, ma'am, thank you!

[He goes slowly, looking back

ENID. [Shutting the doors] I do hope it's settled, Father!

ANTHONY. No!

ENID. [Very disappointed] Oh! Haven't you done anything?

ANTHONY shakes his head.

ENID. Frank says they all want to come to a compromise, really, except that man Roberts.

ANTHONY. I don't.

ENID. It's such a horrid position for us. If you were the wife of the manager, and lived down here, and saw all. You can't realise, Dad!

ANTHONY. Indeed?

ENID. We see all the distress. You remember my maid Annie, who married Roberts?

ANTHONY nods.

ENID. It's so wretched, her heart weak; since the strike began, she hasn even been getting proper food. I know it for a fact, Father.

ANTHONY. Give her what she wants poor woman!

ENID. Roberts won't let her take anything from us.

ANTHONY. [Staring before him] can't be answerable for the men's obstinacy.

ENID. They're all suffering. Father Do stop it, for my sake!

ANTHONY. [With a keen look at her] You don't understand, my dear.

ENID. If I were on the Board, I'd do something.

ANTHONY. What would you do?

ENID. It's because you can't bear to give way. It's so——

ANTHONY. Well?

ENID. So unnecessary.

ANTHONY. What do you know about necessity? Read your novels, play your music, talk your talk, but don't try and tell me what's at the bottom of a struggle like this.

ENID. I live down here, and see it.

ANTHONY. What d'you imagine stands between you and your class and these men that you're so sorry for?

ENID. [Coldly] I don't know what you mean, Father.

ANTHONY. In a few years you and ur children would be down in the ndition they're in, but for those who ve the eyes to see things as they are d the backbone to stand up for themlves.

ENID. You don't know the state the en are in.

ANTHONY. I know it well enough.

ENID. You don't, Father; if you did, u wouldn't——

ANTHONY. It's you who don't know e simple facts of the position. What rt of mercy do you suppose you'd get no one stood between you and the ntinual demands of labour? This sort mercy—— [he puts his hand up to throat and squeezes it] First would your sentiments; then your culture, d your comforts would be going all e time.

ENID. I don't believe in barriers beeen classes.

ANTHONY. You—don't—believe—in—rriers—between the classes?

ENID. [Coldly] And I don't know iat that has to do with this question.

ANTHONY. It will take a generation two for you to understand.

ENID. It's only you and Roberts, ther, and you know it!

ANTHONY thrusts out his lower lip.

ENID. It'll ruin the Company.

ANTHONY. Allow me to judge of that.

ENID. [Resentfully] I won't stand by d let poor Annie Roberts suffer like s! And think of the children, Father! arn you.

ANTHONY. [With a grim smile] What you propose to do?

ENID. That's my affair.

ANTHONY only looks at her.

ENID. [In a changed voice, stroking sleeve] Father, you know you ought to have this strain on you—you ow what Dr. Fisher said!

ANTHONY. No old man can afford to ten to old women.

ENID. But you have done enough, en if it really is such a matter of inciple with you.

ANTHONY. You think so?

ENID. Don't, Dad! [Her face works] u—you might think of us!

ANTHONY. I am.

ENID. It'll break you down.

ANTHONY. [Slowly] My dear, I am not going to funk; you may rely on that.

Re-enter TENCH with papers; he glances at them, then plucking up courage.

TENCH. Beg pardon, madam, I think I'd rather see these papers were disposed of before I get my lunch.

ENID, after an impatient glance at him, looks at her father, turns suddenly, and goes into the drawing-room.

TENCH. [Holding the papers and a pen to ANTHONY, very nervously] Would you sign these for me, please, sir?

ANTHONY takes the pen and signs.

TENCH. [Standing with a sheet of blotting-paper behind EDGAR'S chair, begins speaking nervously] I owe my position to you, sir.

ANTHONY. Well?

TENCH. I'm obliged to see everything that's going on, sir; I—I depend upon the Company entirely. If anything were to happen to it, it'd be disastrous for me.

ANTHONY nods.

TENCH. And, of course, my wife's just had another; so it makes me doubly anxious just now. And the rates are really terrible down our way.

ANTHONY. [With grim amusement] Not more terrible than they are up mine.

TENCH. No, sir? [Very nervously] I know the Company means a great deal to you, sir.

ANTHONY. It does; I founded it.

TENCH. Yes, sir. If the strike goes on it'll be very serious. I think the Directors are beginning to realise that, sir.

ANTHONY. [Ironically] Indeed?

TENCH. I know you hold very strong views, sir, and it's always your habit to look things in the face; but I don't think the Directors—like it, sir, now they—they see it.

ANTHONY. [Grimly] Nor you, it seems.

TENCH. [With the ghost of a smile] No, sir; of course I've got my children, and my wife's delicate; in my position I have to think of these things.

ANTHONY nods.

TENCH. It wasn't that I was going to say, sir, if you'll excuse me——

[Hesitates.

ANTHONY. Out with it, then!

TENCH. I know—from my own father, sir, that when you get on in life you do feel things dreadfully——

ANTHONY. [Almost paternally] Come, out with it, Tench!

TENCH. I don't like to say it, sir.

ANTHONY. [Stonily] You must.

TENCH. [After a pause, desperately bolting it out] I think the Directors are going to throw you over, sir.

ANTHONY. [Sits in silence] Ring the bell!

TENCH nervously rings the bell and stands by the fire.

TENCH. Excuse me saying such a thing. I was only thinking of you, sir.

FROST enters from the hall, he comes to the foot of the table, and looks at ANTHONY. TENCH covers his nervousness by arranging papers.

ANTHONY. Bring me a whisky and soda.

FROST. Anything to eat, sir?

ANTHONY shakes his head—FROST goes to the sideboard, and prepares the drink.

TENCH. [In a low voice, almost supplicating] If you could see your way, sir, it would be a great relief to my mind, it would indeed. [He looks up at ANTHONY, who has not moved] It does make me so very anxious. I haven't slept properly for weeks, sir, and that's a fact.

ANTHONY looks in his face, then slowly shakes his head.

TENCH. [Disheartened] No, sir?

He goes on arranging papers. FROST places the whisky and soda on a salver and puts it down by ANTHONY'S right hand. He stands away, looking gravely at ANTHONY.

FROST. Nothing I can get you, sir?

ANTHONY shakes his head.

FROST. You're aware, sir, of what the doctor said, sir?

ANTHONY. I am.

A pause. FROST suddenly move closer to him, and speaks in a lo voice.

FROST. This strike, sir; puttin' all th strain on you. Excuse me, sir, is it— is it worth it, sir?

ANTHONY mutters some words tha are inaudible.

FROST. Very good, sir!

He turns and goes out into the ha —TENCH makes two attempts t speak; but meeting his chairman gaze he drops his eyes, and turn ing dismally, he too goes ou ANTHONY is left alone. He grip the glass, tilts it, and drinks deep ly; then sets it down with a dee and rumbling sigh, and leans bac in his chair.

The curtain falls.

ACT II

SCENE I

It is half-past three. In the kitchen o Roberts' cottage a meagre little fir is burning. The room is clean an tidy, very barely furnished, wit a brick floor and whitewashed walls much stained with smoke. There i a kettle on the fire. A door oppo site the fireplace opens inward from a snowy street. On the wood en table are a cup and saucer, a tea pot, knife, and plate of bread an cheese. Close to the fireplace in a old armchair, wrapped in a ru sits MRS. ROBERTS, a thin and dark haired woman about thirty-fiv with patient eyes. Her hair is n done up, but tied back with a pie of ribbon. By the fire, too, is MR YEO; a red-haired, broad-face person. Sitting near the table MRS. ROUS, an old lady, ashe white, with silver hair; by the doo standing, as if about to go, is MR BULGIN, a little pale, pinched-l woman. In a chair, with her elbo resting on the table, and her fa resting in her hands sits MAD THOMAS, a good-looking girl, twenty-two, with high cheek-bones, deep-set eyes, and dark, untidy hair. She is listening to the talk but she neither speaks nor moves.

MRS. YEO. So he give me a sixpence, ıd that's the first bit o' money I seen is week. There an't much 'eat to this re. Come and warm yourself, Mrs. ous, you're lookin' as white as the ow, you are.

MRS. ROUS. [Shivering—placidly] h! but the winter my old man was ok was the proper winter. Seventy-ne that was, when none of you was rdly born—not Madge Thomas, nor ıe Bulgin. [Looking at them in turn] nnie Roberts, 'ow old were you, dear?

MRS. ROBERTS. Seven, Mrs. Rous.

MRS. ROUS. Seven—well ther'! A tiny tle thing!

MRS. YEO. [Aggressively] Well, I as ten myself, I remembers it.

MRS. ROUS. [Placidly] The Company dn't been started three years. Father as workin' on the acid that's 'ow he t 'is pisoned leg. I kep' sayin' to 'im 'ather, you've got a pisoned leg." Vell," 'e said, "Mother, pison or no son, I can't afford to go a-layin' up." n' two days after he was on 'is back, d never got up again. It was Provi-nce! There wasn't none o' these Com-nsion Acts then.

MRS. YEO. Ye hadn't no strike that nter! [With grim humour] This win-r's 'ard enough for me. Mrs. Roberts, u don't want no 'arder winter, do 'u? Wouldn't seem natural to 'ave a nner, would it, Mrs. Bulgin?

MRS. BULGIN. We've had bread and a last four days.

MRS. YEO. You got that Friday's ındry's job?

MRS. BULGIN. [Dispiritedly] They id they'd give it me, but when I went st Friday, they were full up. I got to again next week.

MRS. YEO. Ah! There's too many ter that. I send Yeo out on the ice to it on the gentry's skates an' pick up nat 'e can. Stops 'im from broodin' out the 'ouse.

MRS. BULGIN. [In a desolate, matter-f-fact voice] Leavin' out the men—it's bad enough with the children. I keep 'em in bed, they don't get so hungry when they're not running about; but they're that restless in bed they worry your life out.

MRS. YEO. You're lucky they're all so small. It's the goin' to school that makes 'em 'ungry. Don't Bulgin give you *any*thin'?

MRS. BULGIN. [Shakes her head, then, as though by afterthought] Would if he could, I s'pose.

MRS. YEO. [Sardonically] What! 'Aven't 'e got no shares in the Company?

MRS. ROUS. [Rising with tremulous cheerfulness] Well, good-bye, Annie Roberts, I'm going along home.

MRS. ROBERTS. Stay an' have a cup of tea, Mrs. Rous?

MRS. ROUS. [With the faintest smile] Roberts'll want 'is tea when he comes in. I'll just go an' get to bed; it's warmer there than anywhere.

[She moves very shakily towards the door.

MRS. YEO. [Rising and giving her an arm] Come on, Mother, take my arm; we're all going the same way.

MRS. ROUS. [Taking the arm] Thank you, my dearies!

They go out, followed by MRS. BULGIN.

MADGE. [Moving for the first time] There, Annie, you see that! I told George Rous, "Don't think to have my company till you've made an end of all this trouble. You ought to be ashamed," I said, "with your own mother looking like a ghost, and not a stick to put on the fire. So long as you're able to fill your pipes, you'll let us starve." "I'll take my oath, Madge," he said, "I've not had smoke nor drink these three weeks!" "Well, then, why do you go on with it?" "I can't go back on Roberts!" . . . That's it! Roberts, always Roberts! They'd all drop it but for him. When he talks it's the devil that comes into them.

A silence. MRS. ROBERTS makes a movement of pain.

MADGE. Ah! You don't want him beaten! He's your man. With everybody like their own shadows! [She makes gesture towards MRS. ROBERTS] If Rous wants me he must give up Roberts. If he gave him up—they all would. They're only waiting for a lead. Father's against him—they're all against him in their hearts.

MRS. ROBERTS. You won't beat Roberts!

They look silently at each other.

MADGE. Won't I? The cowards—when their own mothers and their own children don't know where to turn.

MRS. ROBERTS. Madge!

MADGE. [Looking searchingly at MRS. ROBERTS] I wonder he can look you in the face. [She squats before the fire, with her hands out to the flame] Harness is here again. They'll have to make up their minds to-day.

MRS. ROBERTS. [In a soft, slow voice, with a slight West-country burr] Roberts will never give up the furnacemen and engineers. 'Twouldn't be right.

MADGE. You can't deceive me. It's just his pride.

A tapping at the door is heard, the women turn as ENID enters. She wears a round fur cap, and a jacket of squirrel's fur. She closes the door behind her.

ENID. Can I come in, Annie?

MRS. ROBERTS. [Flinching] Miss Enid! Give Mrs. Underwood a chair, Madge!

MADGE gives ENID the chair she has been sitting on.

ENID. Thank you! Are you any better?

MRS. ROBERTS. Yes, 'M'm; thank you, M'm.

ENID. [Looking at the sullen MADGE as though requesting her departure] Why did you send back the jelly? I call that really wicked of you!

MRS. ROBERTS. Thank you, M'm, I'd no need for it.

ENID. Of course! It was Roberts' doing, wasn't it? How can he let all this suffering go on amongst you?

MADGE. [Suddenly] What suffering?

ENID. [Surprised] I beg your pardon!

MADGE. Who said there was suffering?

MRS. ROBERTS. Madge!

MADGE. [Throwing her shawl ove her head] Please to let us keep ou selves to ourselves. We don't want yo coming here and spying on us.

ENID. [Confronting her, but witho rising] I didn't speak to you.

MADGE. [In a low, fierce voice] Kee your kind feelings to yourself. Yo think you can come amongst us, b you're mistaken. Go back and tell th Manager that.

ENID. [Stonily] This is not you house.

MADGE. [Turning to the door] No, is not my house; keep clear of m house, Mrs. Underwood.

[She goes out. ENID taps her finge on the table.

MRS. ROBERTS. Please to forgiv Madge Thomas, M'm; she's a bit upse to-day.

A pause.

ENID. [Looking at her] Oh, I thin they're so stupid, all of them.

MRS. ROBERTS. [With a faint smile Yes, M'm.

ENID. Is Roberts out?

MRS. ROBERTS. Yes, M'm.

ENID. It is his doing, that they don come to an agreement. Now isn't i Annie?

MRS. ROBERTS. [Softly, with her eye on ENID, and moving the fingers of on hand continually on her breast] The do say that your father, M'm——

ENID. My father's getting an ol man, and you know what old men ar

MRS. ROBERTS. I am sorry, M'm.

ENID. [More softly] I don't expe you to feel sorry, Annie. I know it's h fault as well as Roberts'.

MRS. ROBERTS. I'm sorry for anyon that gets old, 'M'm; it's dreadful to g old, and Mr. Anthony was such a fi old man I always used to think.

ENID. [Impulsively] He always like you, don't you remember? Look her Annie, what can I do? I do so want t know. You don't get what you ought t have. [Going to the fire, she takes th kettle off, and looks for coals] A you're so naughty sending back the sou and things!

MRS. ROBERTS. [With a faint smile Yes, M'm?

ENID. [Resentfully] Why, you have even got coals?

MRS. ROBERTS. If you please, M'm, to t the kettle on again; Roberts won't ve long for his tea when he comes in. 's got to meet the men at four.

ENID. [Putting the kettle on] That ans he'll lash them into a fury again. n't you stop his going, Annie?

MRS. ROBERTS smiles ironically.

ENID. Have you tried? [A silence] es he know how ill you are?

MRS. ROBERTS. It's only my weak rt, M'm.

ENID. You used to be so well when u were with us.

MRS. ROBERTS. [Stiffening] Roberts always good to me.

ENID. But you ought to have everything you want, and you have nothing!

MRS. ROBERTS. [Appealingly] They me I don't look like a dyin' woman?

ENID. Of course you don't; if you uld only have proper—— Will you my doctor if I send him to you? I'm re he'd do you good.

MRS. ROBERTS. [With faint question] Yes, M'm.

ENID. Madge Thomas oughtn't to ne here; she only excites you. As if didn't know what suffering there is ongst the men! I do feel for them adfully, but you know they have ne too far.

MRS. ROBERTS. [Continually moving fingers] They say there's no other y to get better wages, M'm.

ENID. [Earnestly] But, Annie, that's y the Union won't help them. My sband's very sympathetic with the n, but he says they're not underpaid.

MRS. ROBERTS. No, M'm?

ENID. They never think how the mpany could go on if we paid the ges they want.

MRS. ROBERTS. [With an effort] But dividends having been so big, M'm.

ENID. [Taken aback] You all seem to nk the shareholders are rich men, but y're not—most of them are really no tter off than working men.

MRS. ROBERTS smiles.

ENID. They have to keep up appearces.

MRS. ROBERTS. Yes, M'm?

ENID. You don't have to pay rates and taxes, and a hundred other things that they do. If the men didn't spend such a lot in drinking and betting they'd be quite well off!

MRS. ROBERTS. They say, workin' so hard, they must have some pleasure.

ENID. But surely not low pleasure like that.

MRS. ROBERTS. [A little resentfully] Roberts never touches a drop; and he's never had a bet in his life.

ENID. Oh! but he's not a com—— I mean he's an engineer—a superior man.

MRS. ROBERTS. Yes, M'm. Roberts says they've no chance of other pleasures.

ENID. [Musing] Of course, I know it's hard.

MRS. ROBERTS. [With a spice of malice] And they say gentlefolk's just as bad.

ENID. [With a smile] I go as far as most people, Annie, but you know, yourself, that's nonsense.

MRS. ROBERTS. [With painful effort] A lot o' the men never go near the Public; but even they don't save but very little, and that goes if there's illness.

ENID. But they've got their clubs, haven't they?

MRS. ROBERTS. The clubs only give up to eighteen shillin's a week, M'm, and it's not much amongst a family. Roberts says workin' folk have always lived from hand to mouth. Sixpence to-day is worth more than a shillin' tomorrow, that's what they say.

ENID. But that's the spirit of gambling.

MRS. ROBERTS. [With a sort of excitement] Roberts says a working man's life is all a gamble, from the time 'e's born to the time 'e dies.

ENID leans forward, interested.

MRS. ROBERTS goes on with a growing excitement that culminates in the personal feeling of the last words.

MRS. ROBERTS. He says, M'm, that when a working man's baby is born, it's a toss-up from breath to breath whether it ever draws another, and so on all 'is life; an' when he comes to be old, it's the workhouse or the grave. He says that without a man is very near, and pinches and stints 'imself and 'is children to save, there can't be neither surplus nor security. That's why he wouldn't have no children [she sinks back], not though I wanted them.

ENID. Yes, yes, I know!

MRS. ROBERTS. No you don't, M'm. You've got your children, and you'll never need to trouble for them.

ENID. [Gently] You oughtn't to be talking so much, Annie. [Then, in spite of herself] But Roberts was paid a lot of money, wasn't he, for discovering that process?

MRS. ROBERTS. [On the defensive] All Roberts' savin's have gone. He's always looked forward to this strike. He says he's no right to a farthing when the others are suffering. 'Tisn't so with all o' them! Some don't seem to care no more than that—so long as they get their own.

ENID. I don't see how they can be expected to when they're suffering like this. [In a changed voice] But Roberts ought to think of you! It's all terrible! The kettle's boiling. Shall I make the tea? [She takes the teapot, and seeing tea there, pours water into it] Won't you have a cup?

MRS. ROBERTS. No, thank you, M'm. [She is listening as though for footsteps] I'd sooner you didn't see Roberts, M'm, he gets so wild.

ENID. Oh! but I must, Annie; I'll be quite calm, I promise.

MRS. ROBERTS. It's life an' death to him, M'm.

ENID. [Very gently] I'll get him to talk to me outside, we won't excite you.

MRS. ROBERTS. [Faintly] No, M'm.

[She gives a violent start. ROBERTS has come in, unseen.

ROBERTS. [Removing his hat—with subtle mockery] Beg pardon for coming in; you're engaged with a lady, I see.

ENID. Can I speak to you, Mr. Roberts?

ROBERTS. Whom have I the pleasure of addressing, Ma'am?

ENID. But surely you know me! I'm Mrs. Underwood.

ROBERTS. [With a bow of malice] T daughter of our chairman.

ENID. [Earnestly] I've come on pu pose to speak to you; will you co outside a minute?

[She looks at MRS. ROBERT

ROBERTS. [Hanging up his hat] I ha nothing to say, Ma'am.

ENID. But I must speak to you, pleas

[She moves towards the doo

ROBERTS. [With sudden venom] have not the time to listen!

MRS. ROBERTS. David!

ENID. Mr. Roberts, please!

ROBERTS. [Taking off his overcoa I am sorry to disoblige a lady—M Anthony's daughter.

ENID. [Wavering, then with sudde decision] Mr. Roberts, I know you another meeting of the men.

ROBERTS bows.

ENID. I came to appeal to you. Pleas please try to come to some compr mise; give way a little, if it's only f your own sakes!

ROBERTS. [Speaking to himself] T daughter of Mr. Anthony begs me give way a little, if it's only for our ow sakes.

ENID. For everybody's sake; for yo wife's sake.

ROBERTS. For my wife's sake, f everybody's sake—for the sake of M Anthony.

ENID. Why are you so bitter again my father? He has never done anythi to you.

ROBERTS. Has he not?

ENID. He can't help his views, a more than you can help yours.

ROBERTS. I really didn't know tha had a right to views!

ENID. He's an old man, and you—

[Seeing his eyes fixed on her, s stops.

ROBERTS. [Without raising his voic If I saw Mr. Anthony going to die, a I could save him by lifting my hand, would not lift the little finger of it.

ENID. You—you——

[She stops again, biting her l

ROBERTS. I would not, and that's fl

ENID. [Coldly] You don't mean w you say, and you know it!

ROBERTS. I mean every word of it.

ENID. But why?

ROBERTS. [With a flash] Mr. Anthony ands for tyranny! That's why!

ENID. Nonsense!

MRS. ROBERTS makes a movement as if to rise, but sinks back in her chair.

ENID. [With an impetuous movement] inie!

ROBERTS. Please not to touch my fe!

ENID. [Recoiling with a sort of hor-r] I believe—you are mad.

ROBERTS. The house of a madman then not the fit place for a lady.

ENID. I'm not afraid of you.

ROBERTS. [Bowing] I would not ex-ct the daughter of Mr. Anthony to be raid. Mr. Anthony is not a coward like e rest of them.

ENID. [Suddenly] I suppose you think brave, then, to go on with this strug-.

ROBERTS. Does Mr. Anthony think it ave to fight against women and chil-en? Mr. Anthony is a rich man, I be-ve; does he think it brave to fight ainst those who haven't a penny? oes he think it brave to set children ying with hunger, an' women shiver-r with cold?

ENID. [Putting up her hand, as ough warding off a blow] My father acting on his principles, and you know

ROBERTS. And so am I!

ENID. You hate us; and you can't ar to be beaten!

ROBERTS. Neither can Mr. Anthony, - all that he may say.

ENID. At any rate you might have y on your wife.

MRS. ROBERTS who has her hand pressed to her heart, takes it away, and tries to calm her breathing.

ROBERTS. Madam, I have no more to r.

He takes up the loaf. There is a knock at the door, and UNDERWOOD comes in. He stands looking at them, ENID turns to him, then seems undecided.

UNDERWOOD. Enid!

ROBERTS. [Ironically] Ye were not needing to come for your wife, Mr. Underwood. We are not rowdies.

UNDERWOOD. I know that, Roberts. I hope Mrs. Roberts is better.

ROBERTS turns away without answering.

UNDERWOOD. Come, Enid!

ENID. I make one more appeal to you, Mr. Roberts, for the sake of your wife.

ROBERTS. [With polite malice] If I might advise ye, Ma'am—make it for the sake of your husband and your father.

ENID, suppressing a retort, goes out. UNDERWOOD opens the door for her and follows. ROBERTS, going to the fire, holds out his hands to the dying glow.

ROBERTS. How goes it, my girl? Feeling better, are you?

MRS. ROBERTS smiles faintly. He brings his overcoat and wraps it round her.

ROBERTS. [Looking at his watch] Ten minutes to four! [As though inspired] I've seen their faces, there's no fight in them, except for that one old robber.

MRS. ROBERTS. Won't you stop and eat, David? You've 'ad nothing all day!

ROBERTS. [Putting his hand to his throat] Can't swallow till those old sharks are out o' the town. [He walks up and down] I shall have a bother with the men—there's no heart in them, the cowards. Blind as bats, they are—can't see a day before their noses.

MRS. ROBERTS. It's the women, David.

ROBERTS. Ah! So they say! They can remember the women when their own bellies speak! The women never stops them from the drink; but from a little suffering to themselves in a sacred cause, the women stops them fast enough.

MRS. ROBERTS. But think o' the children, David.

ROBERTS. Ah! If they will go breeding themselves for slaves, without a thought o' the future o' them they breed——

MRS. ROBERTS. [Gasping] That's enough, David; don't begin to talk of that—I won't—I can't——

ROBERTS. [Staring at her] Now, now, my girl!

MRS. ROBERTS. [Breathlessly] No, no, David—I won't.

ROBERTS. There, there! Come, come! That's right. [Bitterly] Not one penny will they put by for a day like this. Not they! Hand to mouth—Gad!—I know them! They've broke my heart. There was no holdin' them at the start, but now the pinch 'as come.

MRS. ROBERTS. How can you expect it, David? They're not made of iron.

ROBERTS. Expect it? Wouldn't I expect what I would do meself? Wouldn't I starve an' rot rather than give in? What one man can do, another can.

MRS. ROBERTS. And the women?

ROBERTS. This is not women's work.

MRS. ROBERTS. [With a flash of malice] No, the women may die for all you care. That's their work.

ROBERTS. [Averting his eyes] Who talks of dying? No one will die till we have beaten these——

[He meets her eyes again, and again turns his away. Excitedly.

ROBERTS. This is what I've been waiting for all these months. To get the old robbers down, and send them home again without a farthin's worth o' change. I've seen their faces, I tell you, in the valley of the shadow of defeat.

[He goes to the peg and takes down his hat.

MRS. ROBERTS. [Following with her eyes—softly] Take your overcoat, David; it must be bitter cold.

ROBERTS. [Coming up to her—his eyes are furtive] No, no! There, there, stay quiet and warm. I won't be long, my girl.

MRS. ROBERTS. [With soft bitterness] You'd better take it.

She lifts the coat. But ROBERTS puts it back, and wraps it round her. He tries to meet her eyes, but cannot. MRS. ROBERTS stays huddled in the coat, her eyes, that follow him about, are half malicious, half yearning. He looks at his watch again, and turns to go. In the doorway he meets JAN THOMAS, a boy of ten in clothes too big for him, carrying a penny whistle.

ROBERTS. Hallo, boy!

He goes, JAN stops within a yar of MRS. ROBERTS, and stares her without a word.

MRS. ROBERTS. Well, Jan!

JAN. Father's coming; sister Madg is coming.

He sits at the table, and fidgets wit his whistle; he blows three vagu notes; then imitates a cuckoo.

There is a tap on the door. O THOMAS comes in.

THOMAS. A very coot tay to yo Ma'am. It is petter that you are.

MRS. ROBERTS. Thank you, M Thomas.

THOMAS. [Nervously] Roberts in?

MRS. ROBERTS. Just gone on to th meeting, Mr. Thomas.

THOMAS. [With relief, becomin talkative] This is fery unfortunate, loo you! I came to tell him that we mu make terms with London. It is a fe great pity he is gone to the meeting. H will be kicking against the pricks, I a thinking.

MRS. ROBERTS. [Half rising] He never give in, Mr. Thomas.

THOMAS. You must not be frettin that is very pat for you. Look yo there iss hartly any mans for suppor ing him now, but the engineers an George Rous. [Solemnly] This stri is no longer coing with Chapel, loo you! I have listened carefully, an' have talked with her.

JAN blows.

THOMAS. Sst! I don't care what t others say, I say that Chapel means to be stopping the trouple, that is wh I make of her; and it is my opinion th this is the fery best thing for all of u If it wasn't my opinion, I ton't say but it is my opinion, look you.

MRS. ROBERTS. [Trying to suppre her excitement] I don't know what come to Roberts, if you give in.

THOMAS. It iss no disgrace wh effer! All that a mortal man coult he hass tone. It iss against Human N ture he hass gone; fery natural—a man may to that; but Chapel H spoken and he must not co against h

JAN imitates the cuckoo.

THOMAS. Ton't make that squeakin [Going to the door] Here iss ghter come to sit with you. A fery t day, Ma'am—no fretting—re-nper!

MADGE comes in and stands at the open door, watching the street.

IADGE. You'll be late, Father; they're inning. [She catches him by the ve] For the love of God, stand up im, Father—this time!

'HOMAS. [Detaching his sleeve with nity] Leave me to do what's proper, !

He goes out, MADGE, in the centre of the open doorway, slowly moves in, as though before the approach of some one.

ROUS. [Appearing in the doorway] dge!

MADGE stands with her back to MRS. ROBERTS, staring at him with her head up and her hands behind her.

ROUS. [Who has a fierce distracted k] Madge! I'm going to the meeting.

MADGE, without moving, smiles contemptuously.

ROUS. D'ye hear me?

[They speak in quick low voices.

IADGE. I hear! Go, and kill your own ther, if you must.

ROUS seizes her by both her arms. She stands rigid, with her head bent back. He releases her, and he too stands motionless.

ROUS. I swore to stand by Roberts. I ore that! Ye want me to go back on at I've sworn.

IADGE. [With slow soft mockery] u are a pretty lover!

ROUS. Madge!

IADGE. [Smiling] I've heard that ers do what their girls ask them—N sounds the cuckoo's notes]—but 's not true, it seems!

ROUS. You'd make a blackleg of me!

IADGE. [With her eyes half-closed] it for me!

ROUS. [Dashing his hand across his w] Damn! I can't!

IADGE. [Swiftly] Do it for me!

ROUS. [Through his teeth] Don't play wanton with me!

IADGE. [With a movement of her d towards JAN—quick and low] I'd that to get the children bread!

ROUS. [In a fierce whisper] Madge! Oh, Madge!

MADGE. [With soft mockery] But you can't break your word for me!

ROUS. [With a choke] Then, Begod, I can! [He turns and rushes off.

MADGE stands with a faint smile on her face, looking after him. She moves to the table.

MADGE. I have done for ROBERTS!

[She sees that MRS. ROBERTS has sunk back in her chair.

MADGE. [Running to her, and feeling her hands] You're as cold as a stone! You want a drop of brandy. Jan, run to the "Lion"; say, I sent you for Mrs. Roberts.

MRS. ROBERTS. [With a feeble movement] I'll just sit quiet, Madge. Give Jan—his—tea.

MADGE. [Giving JAN a slice of bread] There, ye little rascal. Hold your piping. [Going to the fire, she kneels] It's going out.

MRS. ROBERTS. [With a faint smile] 'Tis all the same!

JAN begins to blow his whistle.

MADGE. Tsht! Tsht!—you——

JAN stops.

MRS. ROBERTS. [Smiling] Let 'im play, Madge.

MADGE. [On her knees at the fire, listening] Waiting an' waiting. I've no patience with it; waiting an' waiting—that's what a woman has to do! Can you hear them at it—I can!

She leans her elbows on the table, and her chin on her hands. Behind her, MRS ROBERTS leans forward, with painful and growing excitement, as the sounds of the strikers' meeting come in.

The curtain falls.

SCENE II

It is past four. In a grey, failing light, an open muddy space is crowded with workmen. Beyond, divided from it by a barbed-wire fence, is the raised towing-path of a canal, on which is moored a barge. In the distance are marshes and snow-covered hills. The "Works" high wall runs from the canal across the open space, and in the angle of this wall is a rude platform of barrels and boards. On it, HARNESS is standing. ROBERTS, a little apart from the crowd, leans his back against the wall. On the raised towing-path two bargemen lounge and smoke indifferently.

HARNESS. [Holding out his hand] Well, I've spoken to you straight. If I speak till to-morrow I can't say more.

JAGO. [A dark, sallow, Spanish-looking man with a short, thin beard] Mister, want to ask you! Can they get blacklegs?

BULGIN. [Menacing] Let 'em try.

There are savage murmurs from the crowd.

BROWN. [A round-faced man] Where could they get 'em then?

EVANS. [A small, restless, harassed man, with a fighting face] There's always blacklegs; it's the nature of 'em. There's always men that'll save their own skins.

Another savage murmur. There is a movement, and old THOMAS, joining the crowd, takes his stand in front.

HARNESS. [Holding up his hand] They can't get them. But that won't help you. Now men, be reasonable. Your demands would have brought on us the burden of a dozen strikes at a time when we were not prepared for them. The Unions live by Justice, not to one, but all. Any fair man will tell you—you were ill-advised! I don't say you go too far for that which you're entitled to, but you're going too far for the moment; you've dug a pit for yourselves. Are you to stay there, or are you to climb out? Come!

LEWIS. [A clean-cut Welshman with a dark moustache] You've hit it, Mister! Which is it to be?

Another movement in the crowd, and ROUS, coming quickly, takes his stand next THOMAS.

HARNESS. Cut your demands to the right pattern, and we'll see you through; refuse, and don't expect me to waste my time coming down here again. I'm not the sort that speaks at random, as you ought to know by this time. you're the sound men I take you for no matter who advises you against it [he fixes his eyes on ROBERTS] you make up your minds to come in, a trust to us to get your terms. Whi is it to be? Hands together, and vi tory—or—the starvation you've g now?

A prolonged murmur from t crowd.

JAGO. [Sullenly] Talk about wh you know.

HARNESS. [Lifting his voice above t murmur] Know? [With cold passio All that you've been through, m friend, I've been through—I w through it when I was no bigger tha [pointing to a youth] that shaver there the Unions then weren't what they a now. What's made them strong? It hands together that's made them stron I've been through it all, I tell you, t brand's on my soul yet. I know wh you've suffered—there's nothing y can tell me that I don't know; but t whole is greater than the part, and yo are only the part. Stand by us, a we'll stand by you.

Quartering them with his eyes, waits. The murmuring swell the men form little groups.

GREEN, BULGIN, and LEWIS ta together.

LEWIS. Speaks very sensible, t Union chap.

GREEN [Quietly] Ah! if I'd a bee listened to, you'd 'ave 'eard sense the two months past.

The bargemen are seen laughin

LEWIS. [Pointing] Look at those tw blanks over the fence there!

BULGIN. [With gloomy violenc They'd best stop their cackle, or I break their jaws.

JAGO. [Suddenly] You say the fu nacemen's paid enough?

HARNESS. I did not say they we paid enough; I said they were paid much as the furnacemen in simil works elsewhere.

EVANS. That's a lie! [Hubbub] Wh about Harper's?

HARNESS. [With cold irony] Y may look at home for lies, my m arper's shifts are longer, the pay rks out the same.

HENRY ROUS. [A dark edition of his other GEORGE] Will ye support us in uble pay overtime Saturdays?

HARNESS. Yes, we will.

JAGO. What have ye done with our scriptions?

HARNESS. [Coldly] I have told you at we will do with them.

EVANS. Ah! will, it's always will! 'd have our mates desert us.

Hubbub.

BULGIN. [Shouting] Hold your row!

EVANS looks round angrily.

HARNESS. [Lifting his voice] Those o know their right hands from their ts know that the Unions are neither eves nor traitors. I've said my say. gure it out my lads; when you want you know where I shall be.

He jumps down, the crowd gives way, he passes through them, and goes away. A bargeman looks after him jerking his pipe with a derisive gesture. The men close up in groups, and many looks are cast at ROBERTS, who stands alone against the wall.

EVANS. He wants ye to turn black-s, that's what he wants. He wants ye go back on us. Sooner than turn ckleg—I'd starve, I would.

BULGIN. Who's talkin' o' blacklegs—id what you're saying, will you?

BLACKSMITH [A youth with yellow r and huge arms] What about the men?

EVANS. They can stand what we can nd, I suppose, can't they?

BLACKSMITH. Ye've no wife?

EVANS. An' don't want one!

THOMAS. [Raising his voice] Aye! ve us the power to come to terms h London, lads.

DAVIES. [A dark, slow-fly, gloomy n] Go up the platform, if you got thing to say, go up an' say it.

There are cries of "Thomas!" He is pushed towards the platform; he ascends it with difficulty, and bares his head, waiting for silence. A hush!

RED-HAIRED YOUTH. [Suddenly] Coot Thomas!

A hoarse laugh; the bargemen exchange remarks; a hush again, and THOMAS begins speaking.

THOMAS. We are all in the tepth together, and it iss Nature that has put us there.

HENRY ROUS. It's London put us there!

EVANS. It's the Union.

THOMAS. It iss not Lonton; nor it iss not the Union—it iss Nature. It iss no disgrace whateffer to a potty to give in to Nature. For this Nature iss a fery pig thing; it is pigger than what a man is. There iss more years to my hett than to the hett of any one here. It is fery pat, look you, this coing against Nature. It is pat to make other potties suffer, when there is nothing to pe cot py it.

A laugh. THOMAS angrily goes on.

THOMAS. What are ye laughing at? It is pat, I say! We are fighting for a principle; there is no potty that shall say I am not a peliever in principle. Putt when Nature says "No further," then it is no coot snapping your fingers in her face.

A laugh from ROBERTS, and murmurs of approval.

THOMAS. This Nature must be humort. It is a man's pisiness to be pure, honest, justice and merciful. That's what Chapel tells you. [To ROBERTS, angrily] And, look you, David Roberts, Chapel tells you ye can do that without coing against Nature.

JAGO. What about the Union?

THOMAS. I ton't trust the Union; they haf treated us like tirt. "Do what we tell you," said they. I haf peen captain of the furnacemen twenty years, and I say to the Union—[excitedly]—"Can you tell me then, as well as I can tell you, what iss the right wages for the work that these men do?" For fife and twenty years I haf paid my moneys to the Union and—[with great excitement]—for nothings! What iss that but roguery, for all that this Mr. Harness says!

Murmurs.

EVANS. Hear, hear.

HENRY ROUS. Get on with you! Cut on with it then!

THOMAS. Look you, if a man toes not trust me, am I coing to trust him?

JAGO. That's right.

THOMAS. Let them alone for rogues, and act for ourself.

Murmurs.

BLACKSMITH. That's what we been doin', haven't we?

THOMAS. [With increased excitement] I wass brought up to do for myself. I wass brought up to go without a thing if I hat not moneys to puy it. There iss too much, look you, of doing things with other people's moneys. We haf fought fair, and if we haf peen peaten, it iss no fault of ours. Gif us the power to make terms with London for ourself; if we ton't succeed, I say it iss petter to take our peating like men, than to tie like togs, or hang on to others' coat-tails to make them do our pisiness for us!

EVANS. [Muttering] Who wants to?

THOMAS. [Craning] What's that? If I stand up to a potty, and he knocks me town, I am not to go hollering to other potties to help me; I am to stand up again; and if he knocks me town properly, I am to stay there, isn't that right?

Laughter.

JAGO. No Union!

HENRY ROUS. Union!

Others take up the shout.

EVANS. Blacklegs!

BULGIN and the BLACKSMITH shake their fists at EVANS.

THOMAS. [With a gesture] I am an olt man, look you.

A sudden silence, then murmurs again.

LEWIS. Olt fool, with his "No Union!"

BULGIN. Them furnace chaps! For twopence I'd smash the faces o' the lot of them.

GREEN. If I'd 'a been listened to at the first——

THOMAS. [Wiping his brow] I'm comin' now to what I was coing to say——

DAVIES. [Muttering] An' time too!

THOMAS. [Solemnly] Chapel says: Ton't carry on this strife! Put an end to it!

JAGO. That's a lie! Chapel says go on!

THOMAS. [Scornfully] Inteet! I h ears to my head.

RED-HAIRED YOUTH. Ah! long one

A laugh.

JAGO. Your ears have misbeled y then.

THOMAS. [Excitedly] Ye cannot right if I am, ye cannot haf it bo ways.

RED-HAIRED YOUTH. Chapel c though!

"The Shaver" laughs; there a murmurs from the crowd.

THOMAS [Fixing his eyes on "T Shaver"] Ah! ye're coing the roat tamnation. An' so I say to all of yo If ye co against Chapel I will not with you, nor will any other Got-fea ing man.

He steps down from the platfor

JAGO makes his way towards

There are cries of "Don't let 'i go up!"

JAGO. Don't let him go up? That free speech, that is. [He goes up] ain't got much to say to you. Look the matter plain; ye've come the ro this far, and now you want to chuck t journey. We've all been in one boa and now you want to pull in two. W engineers have stood by you; ye' ready now, are ye, to give us the go-b If we'd a-known that before, we'd n a-started out with you so early o bright morning! That's all I've got say. Old man Thomas a'n't got h Bible lesson right. If you give up London, or to Harness, now it's givi us the chuck—to save your skins—y won't get over that, my boys; it's a dir thing to do.

He gets down; during his lit speech, which is ironically spoke there is a restless discomfort the crowd. ROUS, stepping fo ward, jumps on the platform. H has an air of fierce distracti Sullen murmurs of disapprot from the crowd.

ROUS. [Speaking with great exci ment] I'm no blanky orator, mates, wot I say is drove from me. What I s is yuman nature. Can a man set see 'is mother starve? Can 'e now?

ROBERTS. [Starting forward] Rous

ROUS. [Staring at him fiercely] Sim Arness said fair! I've changed my nind!

EVANS. Ah! Turned your coat, you nean!

The crowd manifests a great surprise.

LEWIS. [Apostrophising ROUS] Hallo! What's turned him round?

ROUS. [Speaking with intense excitement] 'E said fair. "Stand by us," 'e aid, "and we'll stand by you." That's where we've been makin' our mistake his long time past; and who's to blame or't? [He points at ROBERTS] That nan there! "No," 'e said, "fight the obbers," 'e said, "squeeze the breath ut o' them!" But it's not the breath ut of them that's being squeezed; it's he breath out of us and ours, and that's he book of truth. I'm no orator, nates, it's the flesh and blood in me hat's speakin', it's the heart o' me. With a menacing, yet half-ashamed novement towards ROBERTS] He'll peak to you again, mark my words, ut don't ye listen. [The crowd groans] t's hell fire that's on that man's tongue.

ROBERTS is seen laughing] Sim 'Arness s right. What are we without the Union—handful o' parched leaves—a uff o' smoke. I'm no orator, but I say: Chuck it up! Chuck it up! Sooner than o on starving the women and the hildren.

The murmurs of acquiescence almost drown the murmurs of dissent.

EVANS. What's turned you to blackegging?

ROUS. [With a furious look] Sim Arness knows what he's talkin' about. Give us power to come to terms with London; I'm no orator, but I say—have done wi' this black misery!

He gives his muffler a twist, jerks his head back and jumps off the platform. The crowd applauds and surges forward. Amid cries of "That's enough!" "Up Union!" "Up Harness!" ROBERTS quietly ascends the platform. There is a moment of silence.

BLACKSMITH. We don't want to hear you. Shut it!

HENRY ROUS. Get down!

Amid such cries they surge towards the platform.

EVANS. [Fiercely] Let'm speak! Roberts! Roberts!

BULGIN. [Muttering] He'd better look out that I don't crack 'is skull.

ROBERTS faces the crowd, probing them with his eyes till they gradually become silent. He begins speaking. One of the bargemen rises and stands.

ROBERTS. You don't want to hear me, then? You'll listen to Rous and to that old man, but not to me. You'll listen to Sim Harness of the Union that's treated you so fair; maybe you'll listen to those men from London? Ah! You groan! What for? You love their feet on your necks, don't you? [Then as BULGIN elbows his way towards the platform, with calm pathos] You'd like to break my jaw, John Bulgin. Let me speak, then do your smashing, if it gives you pleasure. [BULGIN stands motionless and sullen] Am I a liar, a coward, a traitor? If only I were, ye'd listen to me, I'm sure. [The murmurings cease, and there is now dead silence] Is there a man of you here that has less to gain by striking? Is there a man of you that had more to lose? Is there a man of you that has given up eight hundred pounds since this trouble here began? Come now, is there? How much has Thomas given up—ten pounds or five, or what? You listened to him, and what had he to say? "None can pretend," he said, "that I'm not a believer in principle—[with biting irony] —but when Nature says: 'No further, 'tes going agenst Nature.'" I tell you if a man cannot say to Nature: "Budge me from this if ye can!"—[with a sort of exaltation]—his principles are but his belly. "Oh, but," Thomas says, "a man can be pure and honest, just and merciful, and take off his hat to Nature!" I tell you Nature's neither pure nor honest, just nor merciful. You chaps that live over the hill, an' go home dead beat in the dark on a snowy night—don't ye fight your way every inch of it? Do ye go lyin' down an' trustin' to the tender mercies of this merciful Nature? Try it and you'll soon know with what ye've got to deal. 'Tes only by that—[he strikes a blow with his clenched fist]—in Nature's face that a man can be a man. "Give in," says Thomas, "go down on your knees; throw up your foolish fight, an' perhaps," he said, "perhaps your enemy will chuck you down a crust."

JAGO. Never!

EVANS. Curse them!

THOMAS. I nefer said that.

ROBERTS. [Bitingly] If ye did not say it, man, ye meant it. An' what did ye say about Chapel? "Chapel's against it," ye said. "She's against it!" Well, if Chapel and Nature go hand in hand, it's the first I've ever heard of it. That young man there—[pointing to ROUS]—said I 'ad 'ell fire on my tongue. If I had I would use it all to scorch and wither this talking of surrender. Surrendering's the work of cowards and traitors.

HENRY ROUS. [As GEORGE ROUS moves forward] Go for him, George—don't stand his lip!

ROBERTS. [Flinging out his finger] Stop there, George Rous, it's no time this to settle personal matters. [ROUS stops] But there was one other spoke to you—Mr. Simon Harness. We have not much to thank Mr. Harness and the Union for. They said to us "Desert your mates, or we'll desert you." An' they did desert us.

EVANS. They did.

ROBERTS. Mr. Simon Harness is a clever man, but he has come too late. [With intense conviction] For all that Mr. Simon Harness says, for all that Thomas, Rous, for all that any man present here can say—We've won the fight!

The crowd sags nearer, looking eagerly up. With withering scorn.

ROBERTS. You've felt the pinch o't in your bellies. You've forgotten what that fight 'as been; many times I have told you; I will tell you now this once again. The fight o' the country's body and blood against a blood-sucker. The fight of those that spend theirselves with every blow they strike and every breath they draw, against a thing that fattens on them, and grows and grows by the law of merciful Nature. That thing is Capital! A thing that buys the sweat o' men's brows, and the tortures o' their brains, at its own price. Don't I know that? Wasn' the work o' my brains bought for seven hundred pounds, and hasn't one hundred thousand pounds been gained them by that seven hundred without the stirring of a finger! It is a thing that will take as much and give you as little as it can. That's Capital! A thing that will say—"I'm very sorry for you, poor fellows—you have a cruel time of it, I know," but will not give one sixpence of its dividends to help you have a better time. That's Capital! Tell me, for all their talk is there one of them that will consent to another penny on the Income Tax to help the poor? That's Capital! A white-faced, stony-hearted monster! Ye have got it on its knees; are ye to give up at the last minute to save your miserable bodies pain? When I went this morning to those old men from London, I looked into their very 'earts. One of them was sitting there—Mr. Scantlebury, a mass of flesh nourished on us: sittin' there for all the world like the shareholders in this Company, that sit not moving tongue nor finger, takin' dividends—a great dumb ox that can only be roused when its food is threatened. I looked into his eyes and I say he was afraid—afraid for himself and his dividends, afraid for his fees, afraid of the very shareholders he stands for; and all but one of them's afraid—like children that get into a wood at night, and start at every rustle of the leaves. I ask you men—[he pauses, holding out his hand till there is utter silence]—Give me a free hand to tell them: "Go you back to London. The men have nothing for you!" [A murmuring] Give me that, and I swear to you, within a week you shall have from London all you want.

EVANS, JAGO, AND OTHERS. A free hand! Give him a free hand! Bravo—bravo!

ROBERTS. 'Tis not for this little moment of time we're fighting—[the murmuring dies]—not for ourselves, but wn little bodies, and their wants, 'tis r all those that come after throughout l time. [With intense sadness] Oh!

en—for the love o' them, don't roll o another stone upon their heads, don't elp to blacken the sky, an' let the bit-r sea in over them. They're welcome the worst that can happen to me, to e worst that can happen to us all, ren't they—aren't they? If we can iake [passionately] that white-faced onster with the bloody lips, that has icked the life out of ourselves, our ives and children, since the world bean. [Dropping the note of passion, but ith the utmost weight and intensity] we have not the hearts of men to and against it breast to breast, and eye eye, and force it backward till it cry
r mercy, it will go on sucking life;
id we shall stay for ever what we are n almost a whisper*] less than the very ogs.

An utter stillness, and ROBERTS stands rocking his body slightly, with his eyes burning the faces of the crowd.

EVANS AND JAGO. [Suddenly] Rob-ts!

The shout is taken up.

There is a slight movement in the crowd, and MADGE passing below the towing-path, stops by the platform, looking up at ROBERTS. A sudden doubting silence.

ROBERTS. "Nature," says that old man, ive in to Nature." I tell you, strike ur blow in Nature's face—an' let it its worst!

[He catches sight of MADGE, his brows contract, he looks away.

MADGE. [In a low voice—close to the atform] Your wife's dying!

ROBERTS glares at her as if torn from some pinnacle of exaltation.

ROBERTS. [Trying to stammer on] I y to you—answer them—answer em——

[He is drowned by the murmur in the crowd.

THOMAS. [Stepping forward] Ton't u hear her, then?

ROBERTS. What is it?

A dead silence.

THOMAS. Your wife, man!

ROBERTS hesitates, then with a gesture, he leaps down, and goes away below the towing-path, the men making way for him. The standing bargeman opens and prepares to light a lantern. Daylight is fast failing.

MADGE. He needn't have hurried! Annie Roberts is dead. [Then in the silence, passionately] You pack of blinded hounds! How many more women are you going to let die?

The crowd shinks back from her, and breaks up in groups, with a confused, uneasy movement. MADGE goes quickly away below the towing-path. There is a hush as they look after her.

LEWIS. There's a spitfire, for ye!

BULGIN. [Growling] I'll smash 'er jaw.

GREEN. If I'd a-been listened to, that poor woman——

THOMAS. It's a judgment on him for coing against Chapel. I tolt him how 'twould be!

EVANS. All the more reason for sticking by 'im. [A cheer] Are you goin' to desert him now 'e's down? Are you goin' to chuck him over, now 'e's lost 'is wife?

The crowd is murmuring and cheering all at once.

ROUS. [Leaping on the platform] Lost his wife! Aye! Can't ye see? Look at home, look at your own wives! What's to save them? Ye'll have the same in all your houses before long!

LEWIS. Aye, aye!

HENRY ROUS. Right! George, right!

There are murmurs of assent.

ROUS. It's not us that's blind, it's Roberts. How long will ye put up with 'im!

HENRY ROUS, BULGIN, DAVIES. Give 'im the chuck!

The cry is taken up.

EVANS. [Fiercely] Kick a man that's down? Down?

HENRY ROUS. Stop his jaw there!

EVANS throws up his arm at a threat from BULGIN. The bargeman, who has lighted the lantern, holds it high above his head.

ROUS. What brought him down then, but 'is own black obstinacy? Are ye goin' to follow a man that can't see better than that where he's goin'?

EVANS. He's lost 'is wife.

ROUS. An' whose fault's that but his own. 'Ave done with 'im, I say, before he's killed your own wives and mothers.

DAVIES. Down 'im!

HENRY ROUS. He's finished!

BROWN. We've had enough of 'im!

BLACKSMITH. Too much!

The crowd takes up these cries, excepting only EVANS, JAGO, and GREEN, who is seen to argue mildly with the BLACKSMITH.

ROUS. [Above the hubbub] We'll make terms with the Union, lads.

EVANS. [Fiercely] Ye blacklegs!

BULGIN. [Savagely—squaring up to him] Who are ye callin' blacklegs, Rat?

EVANS throws up his fists, parries the blow, and returns it. They fight. The bargemen are seen holding up the lantern and enjoying the sight. Old THOMAS steps forward and holds out his hands.

THOMAS. Shame on your strife!

The BLACKSMITH, BROWN, LEWIS, and the RED-HAIRED YOUTH pull EVANS and BULGIN apart. The stage is almost dark.

The curtain falls.

ACT III

It is five o'clock. In the UNDERWOODS' drawing-room, which is artistically furnished, ENID is sitting on the sofa working at a baby's frock. EDGAR by a little spindle-legged table in the centre of the room, is fingering a china box. His eyes are fixed on the double doors that lead into the dining-room.

EDGAR. [Putting down the china box, and glancing at his watch] Just on five, they're all in there waiting, except Frank. Where's he?

ENID. He's had to go down to Gasgoyne's about a contract. Will you want him?

EDGAR. He can't help us. This is a directors' job. [Motioning towards a single door half hidden by a curtain] Father in his room?

ENID. Yes.

EDGAR. I wish he'd stay there, Enid.

ENID looks up at him.

EDGAR. This is a beastly business old girl?

[He takes up the little box again and turns it over and over.

ENID. I went to the Roberts' this afternoon, Ted.

EDGAR. That wasn't very wise.

ENID. He's simply killing his wife.

EDGAR. We are, you mean.

ENID. [Suddenly] Roberts ought to give way!

EDGAR. There's a lot to be said on the men's side.

ENID. I don't feel half so sympathetic with them as I did before I went. They just set up class feeling against you. Poor Annie was looking dreadfully bad—fire going out, and nothing fit for her to eat.

EDGAR walks to and fro.

ENID. But she would stand up for Roberts. When you see all this wretchedness going on and feel you can do nothing, you have to shut your eyes to the whole thing.

EDGAR. If you can.

ENID. When I went I was all on their side, but as soon as I got there I began to feel quite different at once. People talk about sympathy with the working classes, they don't know what it means to try and put it into practice. It seems hopeless.

EDGAR. Ah! well.

ENID. It's dreadful going on with the men in this state. I do hope the dad will make concessions.

EDGAR. He won't. [Gloomily] It's a sort of religion with him. Curse it! I know what's coming! He'll be voted down.

ENID. They wouldn't dare!

EDGAR. They will—they're in a funk.

ENID. [Indignantly] He'd never stand it!

EDGAR. [With a shrug] My dear girl, if you're beaten in a vote, you've got to stand it.

ENID. Oh! [She gets up in alarm] But would he resign?

EDGAR. Of course! It goes to the roots of his belief.

ENID. But he's so wrapped up in this company, Ted! There'd be nothing left for him! It'd be dreadful!

EDGAR shrugs his shoulders.

ENID. Oh, Ted, he's so old now! You mustn't let them!

EDGAR. [Hiding his feelings in an outburst] My sympathies in this strike are all on the side of the men.

ENID. He's been chairman for more than thirty years! He made the whole thing! And think of the bad times they've had, it's always been he who pulled them through. Oh, Ted, you must——

EDGAR. What is it you want? You said just now you hoped he'd make concessions. Now you want me to back him in not making them. This isn't a game, Enid!

ENID. [Hotly] It isn't a game to me that the dad's in danger of losing all he cares about in life. If he won't give way, and he's beaten, it'll simply break him down!

EDGAR. Didn't you say it was dreadful going on with the men in this state?

ENID. But can't you see, Ted, father'll never get over it! You must stop them somehow. The others are afraid of him. If you back him up——

EDGAR. [Putting his hand to his head] Against my convictions—against yours! The moment it begins to pinch one personally——

ENID. It isn't personal, it's the dad!

EDGAR. Your family or yourself, and ever goes the show!

ENID. [Resentfully] If you don't like it seriously, I do.

EDGAR. I'm as fond of him as you are; that's nothing to do with it.

ENID. We can't tell about the men; it's all guesswork. But we know the dad might have a stroke any day. D'you mean to say that he isn't more to you than——

EDGAR. Of course he is.

ENID. I dont understand you then. If it were for oneself it would be different, but for our own father! You don't seem to realise.

EDGAR. I realise perfectly.

ENID. It's your first duty to save him.

EDGAR. I wonder.

ENID. [Imploring] Oh, Ted! It's the only interest he's got left; it'll be like a death-blow to him!

EDGAR. [Restraining his emotion] I know.

ENID. Promise!

EDGAR. I'll do what I can.

[He turns to the double doors. The curtained door is opened, and ANTHONY appears. EDGAR opens the double doors, and passes through.

SCANTLEBURY'S voice is faintly heard: "Past five; we shall never get through—have to eat another dinner at that hotel!" The doors are shut. ANTHONY walks forward.

ANTHONY. You've been seeing Roberts, I hear.

ENID. Yes.

ANTHONY. Do you know what trying to bridge such a gulf as this is like?

ENID puts her work on the little table, and faces him.

ANTHONY. Filling a sieve with sand.

ENID. Don't!

ANTHONY. You think with your gloved hands you can cure the trouble of the century. [He passes on.

ENID. Father!

ANTHONY stops at the double doors.

ENID. I'm only thinking of you!

ANTHONY. [More softly] I can take care of myself, my dear.

ENID. Have you thought what'll happen if you're beaten—[she points]—in there?

ANTHONY. I don't mean to be.

ENID. Oh! Father, don't give them a chance. You're not well; need you go to the meeting at all?

ANTHONY. [With a grim smile] Cut and run?

ENID. But they'll out-vote you!

ANTHONY. [Putting his hand on the doors] We shall see!

ENID. I beg you, Dad!

ANTHONY looks at her softly.

ENID. Won't you?

ANTHONY shakes his head. He opens the doors. A buzz of voices comes in.

SCANTLEBURY. Can one get dinner on that 6.30 train up?

TENCH. No, sir, I believe not, sir.

WILDER. Well, I shall speak out; I've had enough of this.

EDGAR. [Sharply] What?

It ceases instantly. ANTHONY passes through, closing the doors behind him. ENID springs to them with a gesture of dismay. She puts her hand on the knob, and begins turning it; then goes to the fireplace, and taps her foot on the fender. Suddenly she rings the bell. FROST comes in by the door that leads into the hall.

FROST. Yes, M'm?

ENID. When the men come, Frost, please show them in here; the hall's cold.

FROST. I could put them in the pantry, M'm.

ENID. No, I don't want to—to offend them; they're so touchy.

FROST. Yes, M'm. [Pause] Excuse me, Mr. Anthony's 'ad nothing to eat all day.

ENID. I know, Frost.

FROST. Nothin' but two whiskies and sodas, M'm.

ENID. Oh! you oughtn't to have let him have those.

FROST. [Gravely] Mr. Anthony is a little difficult, M'm. It's not as if he were a younger man, an' knew what was good for 'im; he will have his own way.

ENID. I suppose we all want that.

FROST. Yes, M'm. [Quietly] Excuse me speakin' about the strike. I'm sure it the other gentlemen were to give up to Mr. Anthony, and quietly let the men 'ave what they want, afterwards, that'd be the best way. I find that very useful with him at times, M'm.

ENID shakes her head.

FROST. If he's crossed, it makes him violent [with an air of discovery], and I've noticed in my own case, when I'm violent I'm always sorry for it afterwards.

ENID. [With a smile] Are you ever violent, Frost?

FROST. Yes, M'm; oh! sometimes very violent.

ENID. I've never seen you.

FROST. [Impersonally] No, M'm; that is so.

ENID fidgets towards the door's back.

FROST. [With feeling] Bein' with Mr Anthony, as you know, M'm, ever since I was fifteen, it worries me to see him crossed like this at his age. I've taken the liberty to speak to Mr. Wenklin [dropping his voice]—seems to be the most sensible of the gentlemen—but 'e said to me: "That's all very well, Frost, but this strike's a very serious thing," 'e said. "Serious for all parties, no doubt," I said, "but yumour 'im, sir," I said, "yumour 'im. It's like this, if a man comes to a stone wall, e' doesn't drive 'is 'ead against it, 'e gets over it." "Yes," 'e said, "you'd better tell your master that." [FROST looks at his nails] That's where it is, M'm. I said to Mr Anthony this morning: "Is it worth it sir?" "Damn it," he said to me, "Frost! Mind your own business, or take a month's notice!" Beg pardon, M'm, for using such a word.

ENID. [Moving to the double doors and listening] Do you know that man Roberts, Frost?

FROST. Yes, M'm; that's to say, not to speak to. But to look at 'im you can tell what he's like.

ENID. [Stopping] Yes?

FROST. He's not one of these 'ere ordinary 'armless Socialists. 'E's violent got a fire inside 'im. What I call "personal." A man may 'ave what opinion 'e likes, so long as 'e's not personal when 'e's that 'e's not safe.

ENID. I think that's what my father feels about Roberts.

FROST. No doubt, M'm, Mr. Anthony has a feeling against him.

ENID glances at him sharply, but finding him in perfect earnest stands biting her lips, and looking at the double doors.

FROST. It's a regular right down struggle between the two. I've no patience with this Roberts, from what ar he's just an ordinary workin' man xe the rest of 'em. If he did invent a ing he's no worse off than 'undreds of hers. My brother invented a new kind dumb waiter—nobody gave him any-ing for it, an' there it is, bein' used l over the place.

ENID moves closer to the double doors.

FROST. There's a kind o' man that ever forgives the world, because 'e asn't born a gentleman. What I say is -no man that's a gentleman looks down n another man because 'e 'appens to e a class or two above 'm, no more an if 'e 'appens to be a class or two elow.

ENID. [With slight impatience] Yes, I know, Frost, of course. Will you please go in and ask if they'll have some tea; say I sent you.

FROST. Yes, M'm.

He opens the doors gently and goes in. There is a momentary sound of earnest, rather angry talk.

WILDER. I don't agree with you.

WANKLIN. We've had this over a dozen times.

EDGAR. [Impatiently] Well, what's the proposition?

SCANTLEBURY. Yes, what does your father say? Tea? Not for me, not for me!

WANKLIN. What I understand the chairman to say is this——

FROST re-enters closing the door behind him.

ENID. [Moving from the door] Won't they have any tea, Frost?

She goes to the little table, and remains motionless, looking at the baby's frock. A parlourmaid enters from the hall.

PARLOURMAID. A Miss Thomas, M'm.

ENID. [Raising her head] Thomas? What Miss Thomas—d'you mean ——?

PARLOURMAID. Yes, M'm.

ENID. [Blankly] Oh! Where is she?

PARLOURMAID. In the porch.

ENID. I don't want——

[She hesitates.

FROST. Shall I dispose of her, M'm?

ENID. I'll come out. No, show her in here, Ellen.

The PARLOURMAID and FROST go out. ENID pursing her lips, sits at the little table, taking up the baby's frock. The PARLOURMAID ushers in MADGE THOMAS and goes out; MADGE stands by the door.

ENID. Come in. What is it? What have you come for, please?

MADGE. Brought a message from Mrs. Roberts.

ENID. A message? Yes.

MADGE. She asks you to look after her mother.

ENID. I don't understand.

MADGE. [Sullenly] That's the message.

ENID. But—what—why?

MADGE. Annie Roberts is dead.

There is a silence.

ENID. [Horrified] But it's only a little more than an hour since I saw her.

MADGE. Of cold and hunger.

ENID. [Rising] Oh! that's not true! the poor thing's heart—— What makes you look at me like that? I tried to help her.

MADGE. [With suppressed savagery] I thought you'd like to know.

ENID. [Passionately] It's so unjust! Can't you see that I want to help you all?

MADGE. I never harmed anyone that hadn't harmed me first.

ENID. [Coldly] What harm have I done you? Why do you speak to me like that?

MADGE. [With the bitterest intensity] You come out of your comfort to spy on us! A week of hunger, that's what you want!

ENID. [Standing her ground] Don't talk nonsense!

MADGE. I saw her die; her hands were blue with the cold.

ENID. [With a movement of grief] Oh! Why wouldn't she let me help her? It's such senseless pride!

MADGE. Pride's better than nothing to keep your body warm.

ENID. [Passionately] I won't talk to you! How can you tell what I feel? It's not my fault that I was born better off than you.

MADGE. We don't want your money.

ENID. You don't understand, and you don't want to; please to go away!

MADGE. [Balefully] You've killed her, for all your soft words, you and your father——

ENID. [With rage and emotion] That's wicked! My father is suffering himself through this wretched strike.

MADGE. [With sombre triumph] Then tell him Mrs. Roberts is dead! That'll make him better.

ENID. Go away!

MADGE. It's lucky she has no children, like you.

She makes a sudden and swift movement towards ENID, fixing her eyes on the child's frock lying across the little table. ENID snatches the frock up, as though it were the child itself. They stand a yard apart, crossing glances.

MADGE. [Pointing to the frock with a little smile] Ah! You felt that!

ENID, on the point of tears, straightens out the child's frock.

ENID. Go away!

MADGE. I've given you the message.

She turns and goes out into the hall. ENID, motionless till she has gone, sinks down at the table, bending her head over the frock, which she is still clutching to her. The double doors are opened, and ANTHONY comes slowly in; he passes his daughter, and lowers himself into an armchair. He is very flushed.

ENID. [Hiding her emotion—anxiously] What is it, Dad?

ANTHONY makes a gesture, but does not speak.

ENID. Who was it?

ANTHONY does not answer. ENID, going to the double doors, meets EDGAR coming in. They speak together in low tones.

ENID. What is it, Ted?

EDGAR. That fellow Wilder! Taken to personalities! He was downright insulting.

ENID. What did he say?

EDGAR. Said, Father was too old and feeble to know what he was doing! The Dad's worth six of him!

ENID. Of course he is.

They look at ANTHONY. The doors open wider, WANKLIN appears with SCANTLEBURY.

SCANTLEBURY. [Sotto voce] I don't like the look of this!

WANKLIN. [Going forward] Come, Chairman! Wilder sends you his apologies. A man can't do more.

WILDER, followed by TENCH, comes in, and goes to ANTHONY.

WILDER. [Glumly] I withdraw my words, sir. I'm sorry.

ANTHONY nods to him.

ENID. You haven't come to a decision, Mr. Wanklin?

WANKLIN shakes his head.

WANKLIN. We're all here, Chairman; what do you say? Shall we get on with the business, or shall we go back to the other room?

SCANTLEBURY. Yes, yes; let's get on. We must settle something.

He turns from a small chair, and settles himself suddenly in the largest chair, with a sigh of comfort.

WILDER and WANKLIN also sit; and TENCH, drawing up a straight-backed chair close to his Chairman, sits on the edge of it with the minute-book and a stylographic pen.

ENID. [Whispering] I want to speak to you a minute, Ted.

They go out through the double doors.

WANKLIN. Really, Chairman, it's no use soothing ourselves with a sense of false security. If this strike's not brought to an end before the General Meeting, the shareholders will certainly haul us over the coals.

SCANTLEBURY. [Stirring] What—what's that?

WANKLIN. I know it for a fact.

ANTHONY. Let them!

WILDER. And get turned out?

WANKLIN. [To ANTHONY] I don't mind martyrdom for a policy in which I believe, but I object to being burnt for some one else's principles.

SCANTLEBURY. Very reasonable—you must see that, Chairman.

ANTHONY. We owe it to other em-ployers to stand firm.

WANKLIN. There's a limit to that.

ANTHONY. You were all full of fight at the start.

SCANTLEBURY. [With a sort of groan] We thought the men would give in, but they haven't!

ANTHONY. They will!

WILDER. [Rising and pacing up and down] I can't have my reputation as a man of business destroyed for the satisfaction of starving the men out. [Almost in tears] I can't have it! How can we meet the shareholders with things in the state they are?

SCANTLEBURY. Hear, hear—hear, hear!

WILDER. [Lashing himself] If any one expects me to say to them I've lost you fifty thousand pounds and sooner than put my pride in my pocket I'll lose you another. [Glancing at ANTHONY] It's—it's unnatural! I don't want to go against you, sir——

WANKLIN. [Persuasively] Come, Chairman, we're not free agents. We're part of a machine. Our only business is to see the Company earns as much profit as it safely can. If you blame me for want of principle: I say that we're Trustees. Reason tells us we shall never get back in the saving of wages what we shall lose if we continue this struggle—really, Chairman, we must bring it to an end, on the best terms we can make.

ANTHONY. No!

There is a pause of general dismay.

WILDER. It's a deadlock then. [Letting his hands drop with a sort of despair] Now I shall never get off to Spain!

WANKLIN. [Retaining a trace of irony] You hear the consequences of your victory, Chairman?

WILDER. [With a burst of feeling] My wife's ill!

SCANTLEBURY. Dear, dear! You don't say so!

WILDER. If I don't get her out of this cold, I won't answer for the consequences.

Through the double doors EDGAR comes in looking very grave.

EDGAR. [To his father] Have you heard this, sir? Mrs. Roberts is dead!

Every one stares at him, as if trying to gauge the importance of this news.

EDGAR. Enid saw her this afternoon, she had no coals, or food, or anything, It's enough!

There is a silence, every one avoiding the other's eyes, except ANTHONY, who stares hard at his son.

SCANTLEBURY. You don't suggest that we could have helped the poor thing?

WILDER. [Flustered] The woman was in bad health. Nobody can say there's any responsibility on us. At least—not on me.

EDGAR. [Hotly] I say that we are responsible.

ANTHONY. War is war!

EDGAR. Not on women!

WANKLIN. It not infrequently happens that women are the greatest sufferers.

EDGAR. If we knew that, all the more responsibility rests on us.

ANTHONY. This is no matter for amateurs.

EDGAR. Call me what you like, sir. It's sickened me. We had no right to carry things to such a length.

WILDER. I don't like this business a bit—that Radical rag will twist it to their own ends; see if they don't! They'll get up some cock and bull story about the poor woman's dying from starvation. I wash my hands of it.

EDGAR. You can't. None of us can.

SCANTLEBURY. [Striking his fist on the arm of his chair] But I protest against this——

EDGAR. Protest as you like, Mr. Scantlebury, it won't alter facts.

ANTHONY. That's enough.

EDGAR. [Facing him angrily] No, sir. I tell you exactly what I think. If we pretend the men are not suffering, it's humbug; and if they're suffering, we know enough of human nature to know the women are suffering more, and as to the children—well—it's damnable!

SCANTLEBURY rises from his chair.

EDGAR. I don't say that we meant to be cruel, I don't say anything of the sort; but I do say it's criminal to shut our eyes to the facts. We employ these men, and we can't get out of it. I don't care so much about the men, but I'd sooner resign my position on the Board than go on starving women in this way.

All except ANTHONY are now upon their feet. ANTHONY sits grasping the arms of his chair and staring at his son.

SCANTLEBURY. I don't—I don't like the way you're putting it, young sir.

WANKLIN. You're rather overshooting the mark.

WILDER. I should think so indeed!

EDGAR. [Losing control] It's no use blinking things. If you want to have the death of women on your hands—I don't!

SCANTLEBURY. Now, now, young man!

WILDER. On our hands? Not on mine, I won't have it!

EDGAR. We are five members of this Board; if we were four against it, why did we let it drift till it came to this? You know perfectly well why—because we hoped we should starve the men out. Well, all we've done is to starve one woman out!

SCANTLEBURY. [Almost hysterically] I protest, I protest! I'm a humane man—we're all humane men!

EDGAR. [Scornfully] There's nothing wrong with our humanity. It's our imaginations, Mr. Scantlebury.

WILDER. Nonsense! My imagination's as good as yours.

EDGAR. If so, it isn't good enough.

WILDER. I foresaw this!

EDGAR. Then why didn't you put your foot down!

WILDER. Much good that would have done. [He looks at ANTHONY.

EDGAR. If you, and I, and each one of us here who say that our imaginations are so good——

SCANTLEBURY. [Flurried] I never said so.

EDGAR. [Paying no attention] ——had put our feet down, the thing would have been ended long ago, and this poor woman's life wouldn't have been crushed out of her like this. For all we can tell there may be a dozen other starving women.

SCANTLEBURY. For God's sake, sir, don't use that word at a—at a Board meeting; it's—it's monstrous.

EDGAR. I will use it, Mr. Scantlebury.

SCANTLEBURY. Then I shall not listen to you. I shall not listen! It's painful to me. [He covers his ears.

WANKLIN. None of us are opposed to a settlement, except your father.

EDGAR. I'm certain that if the shareholders knew——

WANKLIN. I don't think you'll find their imaginations are any better than ours. Because a woman happens to have a weak heart——

EDGAR. A struggle like this finds out the weak spots in everybody. Any child knows that. If it hadn't been for this cutthroat policy, she needn't have died like this; and there wouldn't be all this misery that anyone who isn't a fool can see is going on.

Throughout the foregoing ANTHONY has eyed his son; he now moves as though to rise, but stops as EDGAR speaks again.

EDGAR. I don't defend the men, or myself, or anybody.

WANKLIN. You may have to! A coroner's jury of disinterested sympathisers may say some very nasty things. We mustn't lose sight of our position.

SCANTLEBURY. [Without uncovering his ears] Coroner's jury: No, no, it's not a case for that?

EDGAR. I've had enough of cowardice.

WANKLIN. Cowardice is an unpleasant word, Mr. Edgar Anthony. It will look very like cowardice if we suddenly concede the men's demands when a thing like this happens; we must be careful!

WILDER. Of course we must. We've no knowledge of this matter, except a rumour. The proper course is to put the whole thing into the hands of Harness to settle for us; that's natural, that's what we should have come to any way.

SCANTLEBURY. [With dignity] Exactly! [Turning to EDGAR] And as to you, young sir, I can't sufficiently express my—my distaste for the way you've treated the whole matter. You ought to withdraw! Talking of starvation, talking of cowardice! Considering hat our views are! Except your own ather—we're all agreed the only policy —is one of good-will—it's most ir-egular, it's most improper, and all I n say is it's—it's given me pain——

[He places his hand on the centre of his scheme.

EDGAR. [Stubbornly] I withdraw othing.

He is about to say more when SCANTLEBURY once more covers up his ears. TENCH suddenly makes a demonstration with the minute-book. A sense of having been engaged in the unusual comes over all of them, and one by one they resume their seats. EDGAR alone remains on his feet.

WILDER. [With an air of trying to ipe something out] I pay no attenon to what young Mr. Anthony has id. Coroner's Jury! The idea's preosterous. I—I move this amendment the Chairman's motion: That the spute be placed at once in the hands
Mr. Simon Harness for settlement, the lines indicated by him this morn-
g. Any one second that?

TENCH writes in the book.

WANKLIN. I do.

WILDER. Very well, then; I ask the hairman to put it to the Board.

ANTHONY. [With a great sigh—owly] We have been made the sub-ct of an attack. [Looking round at ILDER and SCANTLEBURY with ironi-l contempt] I take it on my shoulders. am seventy-six years old. I have en Chairman of this Company since inception two-and-thirty years ago.
have seen it pass through good and il report. My connection with it ben in the year that this young man as born.

EDGAR bows his head. ANTHONY, gripping his chair, goes on.

ANTHONY. I have had to do with nen" for fifty years; I've always stood to them; I have never been beaten
t. I have fought the men of this Com-ny four times, and four times I have aten them. It has been said that I am t the man I was. [He looks at WIL-ER] However that may be, I am man ough to stand to my guns.

His voice grows stronger. The directors, each in his way, show the grip his words have on them.

ANTHONY. The men have been treated justly, they have had fair wages, we have always been ready to listen to complaints. It has been said that times have changed; if they have, I have not changed with them. Neither will I. It has been said that masters and men are equal! Cant! There can only be one master in a house! Where two men meet the better man will rule. It has been said that Capital and Labour have the same interests. Cant! Their interests are as wide asunder as the poles. It has been said that the Board is only part of a machine. Cant! We are the machine; its brains and sinews; it is for us to lead and to determine what is to be done, and to do it without fear or favour. Fear of the men! Fear of the shareholders! Fear of our own shadows! Before I am like that, I hope to die.

[He pauses, and meeting his son's eyes, goes on.

ANTHONY. There is only one way of treating "men"—with the iron hand. This half and half business, the half and half manners of this generation has brought all this upon us. Sentiment and softness, and what this young man, no doubt, would call his social policy. You can't eat cake and have it! This middle-class sentiment, or socialism, or whatever it may be, is rotten. Masters are masters, men are men! Yield one demand, and they will make it six. They are [he smiles grimly] like Oliver Twist, asking for more. If I were in their place I should be the same. But I am not in their place. Mark my words: one fine morning, when you have given way here, and given way there—you will find you have parted with the ground beneath your feet, and are deep in the bog of bankruptcy; and with you, floundering in that bog, will be the very men you have given way to. I have been accused of being a domineering tyrant, thinking only of my pride—I am thinking of the future of this country, threatened with the black waters of confusion, threatened with mob government, threatened with what I cannot see. If by any conduct of mine I help to bring this on us, I shall be ashamed to look my fellows in the face.

ANTHONY stares before him, at what he cannot see, and there is perfect stillness. FROST comes in from the hall, and all but ANTHONY look round at him uneasily.

FROST. [To his master] The men are here, sir.

ANTHONY makes a gesture of dismissal.

FROST. Shall I bring them in, sir?

ANTHONY. Wait!

FROST goes out, ANTHONY turns to face his son.

ANTHONY. I come to the attack that has been made upon me.

EDGAR, with a gesture of depreciation, remains motionless with his head a little bowed.

ANTHONY. A woman has died. I am told that her blood is on my hands; I am told that on my hands is the starvation and the suffering of other women and of children.

EDGAR. I said "on our hands," sir.

ANTHONY. It is the same. [His voice grows stronger and stronger, his feeling is more and more made manifest] I am not aware that if my adversary suffer in a fair fight not sought by me, it is my fault. If I fall under his feet —as fall I may—I shall not complain. That will be my lookout—and this is —his. I cannot separate, as I would, these men from their women and children. A fair fight is a fair fight! Let them learn to think before they pick a quarrel!

EDGAR. [In a low voice] But is it a fair fight, Father? Look at them, and look at us! They've only this one weapon!

ANTHONY. [Grimly] And you're weak-kneed enough to teach them how to use it! It seems the fashion nowadays for men to take their enemy's side. I have not learnt that art. Is it my fault that they quarrelled with their Union, too?

EDGAR. There is such a thing as Mercy.

ANTHONY. And Justice comes before it.

EDGAR. What seems just to one man, sir, is injustice to another.

ANTHONY. [With suppressed passion] You accuse me of injustice—of what amounts to inhumanity—of cruelty——

EDGAR makes a gesture of horror—a general frightened movement.

WANKLIN. Come, come, Chairman!

ANTHONY. [In a grim voice] These are the words of my own son. They are the words of a generation that I don't understand; the words of a soft breed.

A general murmur. With a violent effort ANTHONY recovers his control.

EDGAR. [Quietly] I said it of myself too, Father.

A long look is exchanged between them, and ANTHONY puts out his hand with a gesture as if to sweep the personalities away; then places it against his brow, swaying as though from giddiness. There is a movement towards him. He waves them back.

ANTHONY. Before I put this amendment to the Board, I have one more word to say. [He looks from face to face] If it is carried, it means that we shall fail in what we set ourselves to do. It means that we shall fail in the duty that we owe to all Capital. It means that we shall fail in the duty that we owe ourselves. It means that we shall be open to constant attack to which we as constantly shall have to yield. Be under no misapprehension—run this time, and you will never make a stand again! You will have to fly like curs before the whips of your own men. If that is the lot you wish for, you will vote for this amendment.

He looks again, from face to face, finally resting his gaze on EDGAR. All sit with their eyes on the ground. ANTHONY makes a gesture, and TENCH hands him the book. He reads.

ANTHONY. "Moved by Mr. Wilder, and seconded by Mr. Wanklin: 'That the men's demands be placed at once in the hands of Mr. Simon Harness for settlement on the lines indicated by him his morning." [With sudden vigour] Those in favour: Signify the same in he usual way!

For a minute no one moves; then hastily, just as ANTHONY is about to speak, WILDER'S hand and WANKLIN'S are held up, then SCANTLEBURY'S, and last EDGAR'S, who does not lift his head.

ANTHONY. Contrary? [ANTHONY lifts his own hand; in a clear voice] The amendment is carried. I resign my position on this Board.

There is dead silence. ANTHONY sits motionless, his head slowly drooping; suddenly he heaves as though the whole of his life had risen up within him.

ANTHONY. Fifty years! You have disgraced me, gentlemen. Bring in the men!

He sits motionless, staring before him. The Board draws hurriedly together, and forms a group. TENCH in a frightened manner speaks into the hall. WILDER takes WANKLIN apart.

WILDER. [Hurriedly] What's to be said to them? Why isn't Harness here? Ought we to see the men before he comes? I don't——

TENCH. Will you come in, please?

Enter THOMAS, GREEN, BULGIN and ROUS, who file up in a row past the little table. TENCH sits down and writes. All eyes are fixed on ANTHONY, who makes no sign.

WANKLIN. [Stepping up to the little table, with nervous cordiality] Well, Thomas, how's it to be? What's the result of your meeting?

ROUS. Sim Harness has our answer. He'll tell you what it is. We're waiting for him. He'll speak for us.

WANKLIN. Is that so, Thomas?

THOMAS. [Sullenly] Yes. Roberts will not be coming, his wife is dead.

SCANTLEBURY. Yes, yes! Poor woman! Yes! Yes!

FROST. [Entering from the hall] Mr. Harness, sir!

As HARNESS enters he retires.

HARNESS has a piece of paper in his hand, he bows to the directors, nods towards the men, and takes his stand behind the little table in the very centre of the room.

HARNESS. Good evening, gentlemen.

TENCH, with the paper he has been writing, joins him, they speak together in low tones.

WILDER. We've been waiting for you, Harness. Hope we shall come to some——

FROST. [Entering from the hall] Roberts. [He goes.

ROBERTS comes hastily in, and stands staring at ANTHONY. His face is drawn and old.

ROBERTS. Mr. Anthony, I am afraid I am a little late, I would have been here in time but for something that—has happened. [To the men] Has anything been said?

THOMAS. No! But, man, what made ye come?

ROBERTS. Ye told us this morning, gentlemen, to go away and reconsider our position. We have reconsidered it; we are here to bring you the men's answer. [To ANTHONY] Go ye back to London. We have nothing for you. By no jot or tittle do we abate our demands, nor will we until the whole of those demands are yielded.

ANTHONY looks at him but does not speak. There is a movement amongst the men as though they were bewildered.

HARNESS. Roberts!

ROBERTS. [Glancing fiercely at him, and back to ANTHONY] Is that clear enough for ye? Is it short enough and to the point? Ye made a mistake to think that we would come to heel. Ye may break the body, but ye cannot break the spirit. Get back to London, the men have nothing for ye!

Pausing uneasily he takes a step towards the unmoving ANTHONY.

EDGAR. We're all sorry for you, Roberts, but——

ROBERTS. Keep your sorrow, young man. Let your father speak!

HARNESS. With the sheet of paper in his hand, speaking from behind the little table] Roberts!

ROBERTS. [To ANTHONY, with pas- sionate intensity] Why don't ye answer?

HARNESS. Roberts!

ROBERTS. [Turning sharply] What is it?

HARNESS. [Gravely] You're talking without the book; things have travelled past you.

He makes a sign to TENCH, who beckons the directors. They quickly sign his copy of the terms.

HARNESS. Look at this, man! [Holding up his sheet of paper] 'Demands conceded, with the exception of those relating to the engineers and furnacemen. Double wages for Saturday's overtime. Night-shifts as they are.' These terms have been agreed. The men go back to work again to-morrow. The strike is at an end.

ROBERTS. [Reading the paper, and turning on the men. They shrink back from him, all but ROUS, who stands his ground. With deadly stillness] Ye have gone back on me? I stood by ye to the death; ye waited for that to throw me over!

The men answer, all speaking together.

ROUS. It's a lie!

THOMAS. Ye were past endurance, man.

GREEN. If ye'd listen to me——

BULGIN. [Under his breath] Hold your jaw!

ROBERTS. Ye waited for that!

HARNESS. [Taking the directors' copy of the terms, and handing his own to TENCH] That's enough, men. You had better go.

The men shuffle slowly, awkwardly away.

WILDER. [In a low, nervous voice] There's nothing to stay for now, I suppose. [He follows to the door] I shall have a try for that train! Coming, Scantlebury?

SCANTLEBURY. [Following with WANKLIN] Yes, yes, wait for me. [He stops as ROBERTS speaks.

ROBERTS. [To ANTHONY] But ye have not signed them terms! They can't make terms without their Chairman! Ye would never sign them terms!

ANTHONY looks at him without speaking.

ROBERTS. Don't tell me ye have! for the love o' God! [With passionate appeal] I reckoned on ye!

HARNESS. [Holding out the director's copy of the terms] The Board has signed!

ROBERTS looks dully at the signatures—dashes the paper from him, and covers up his eyes.

SCANTLEBURY. [Behind his hand to TENCH] Look after the Chairman! He's not well; he's not well—he had no lunch. If there's any fund started for the women and children, put me down for—for twenty pounds.

He goes out into the hall, in cumbrous haste; and WANKLIN, who has been staring at ROBERTS and ANTHONY with twitchings of his face, follows. EDGAR remains seated on the sofa, looking at the ground; TENCH, returning to the bureau, writes in his minute book. HARNESS stands by the little table, gravely watching ROBERTS.

ROBERTS. Then you're no longer Chairman of this Company! [Breaking into half-mad laughter] Ah! ha—ah! ha, ha! They've thrown ye over—thrown over their Chairman: Ah—h—ha! [With a sudden dreadful calm] So—they've done us both down, Mr Anthony?

ENID, hurrying through the double doors, comes quickly to her father and bends over him.

HARNESS. [Coming down and laying his hands on ROBERTS' sleeve] For shame, Roberts! Go home quietly, man, go home!

ROBERTS. [Tearing his arm away] Home? [Shrinking together—in a whisper] Home!

ENID. [Quietly to her father] Come away, dear! Come to your room!

ANTHONY rises with an effort. He turns to ROBERTS who looks up at him. They stand several seconds gazing at each other fixedly; ANTHONY lifts his hand, as though to salute, but lets it fall. The expression of ROBERTS' face changes from hostility to wonder. They bend their heads in token of respect. ANTHONY turns, and slowly walks towards the curtained door. Suddenly he sways as though about to fall, recovers himself, and is assisted out by ENID and EDGAR, who has hurried across the room. ROBERTS remains motionless for several seconds, staring intently after ANTHONY, then goes out into the hall.

TENCH. [Approaching HARNESS] It's great weight off my mind, Mr. Harness! But what a painful scene, sir!

[He wipes his brow.

HARNESS, pale and resolute, regards with a grim half-smile the quavering TENCH.

TENCH. It's all been so violent! What did he mean by: "Done us both down?" If he has lost his wife, poor fellow, he oughtn't to have spoken to the Chairman like that!

HARNESS. A woman dead; and the two best men both broken!

TENCH. [Staring at HARNESS—suddenly excited] D'you know, sir—these terms, they're the very same we drew up together, you and I, and put to both sides before the fight began? All this—all this—and—and what for?

HARNESS. [In a slow grim voice] That's where the fun comes in.

UNDERWOOD without turning from the door makes a gesture of assent.

The curtain falls.

ACT II. Lady Cheshire's morning room; after breakfast.

ACT III. The smoking room; tea time.

A night elapses between Acts I and II.

THE ELDEST SON

A DOMESTIC DRAMA IN THREE ACTS

ACT I

SCENE I

The scene is a well-lighted, and large, oak-panelled hall, with an air of being lived in, and a broad, oak staircase. The dining-room, drawing-room, billiard-room, all open into it; and under the staircase a door leads to the servants' quarters. In a huge fireplace a log fire is burning. There are tiger-skins on the floor, horns on the walls; and a writing-table against the wall opposite the fireplace. FREDA STUDDENHAM, a pretty, pale girl with dark eyes, in the black dress of a lady's-maid, is standing at the foot of the staircase with a bunch of white roses in one hand, and a bunch of yellow roses in the other. A door closes above, and SIR WILLIAM CHESHIRE, in evening dress, comes downstairs. He is perhaps fifty-eight, of strong build, rather bull-necked, with grey eyes, and a well-coloured face, whose choleric autocracy is veiled by a thin urbanity. He speaks before he reaches the bottom.

SIR WILLIAM. Well, Freda! Nice oses. Who are they for?

FREDA. My lady told me to give the ellow to Mrs. Keith, Sir William, and ie white to Miss Lanfarne, for their rst evening.

SIR WILLIAM. Capital. [Passing on wards the drawing-room] Your ather coming up to-night?

FREDA. Yes.

SIR WILLIAM. Be good enough to tell im I specially want to see him here fter dinner, will you?

FREDA. Yes, Sir William.

SIR WILLIAM. By the way, just ask him to bring the game-book in, if he's got it.

He goes out into the drawing-room; and FREDA stands restlessly tapping her foot against the bottom stair. With a flutter of skirts CHRISTINE KEITH comes rapidly down. She is a nice-looking, fresh-coloured young woman in a low-necked dress.

CHRISTINE. Hullo, Freda! How are you?

FREDA. Quite well, thank you, Miss Christine—Mrs. Keith, I mean. My lady told me to give you these.

CHRISTINE. [Taking the roses] Oh! Thanks! How sweet of Mother!

FREDA. [In a quick toneless voice] The others are for Miss Lanfarne. My lady thought white would suit her better.

CHRISTINE. They suit you in that black dress.

FREDA lowers the roses quickly.

CHRISTINE. What do you think of Joan's engagement?

FREDA. It's very nice for her.

CHRISTINE. I say, Freda, have they been going hard at rehearsals?

FREDA. Every day. Miss Dot gets very cross, stage-managing.

CHRISTINE. I do hate learning a part. Thanks awfully for unpacking. Any news?

FREDA. [In the same quick, dull voice] The underkeeper, Dunning, won't marry Rose Taylor, after all.

CHRISTINE. What a shame! But I say that's serious. I thought there was—she was—I mean——

FREDA. He's taken up with another girl, they say.

CHRISTINE. Too bad! [Pinning the roses] D'you know if Mr. Bill's come?

FREDA. [With a swift upward look] Yes, by the six-forty.

RONALD KEITH comes slowly down, a weathered firm-lipped man, in evening dress, with eyelids half drawn over his keen eyes, and the air of a horseman.

KEITH. Hallo! Roses in December. I say, Freda, your father missed a wigging this morning when they drew blank at Warnham's spinney. Where's that litter of little foxes?

FREDA. [Smiling faintly] I expect father knows, Captain Keith.

KEITH. You bet he does. Emigration? Or thin air? What?

CHRISTINE. Studdenham'd never shoot a fox, Ronny. He's been here since the flood.

KEITH. There's more ways of killing a cat—eh, Freda?

CHRISTINE. [Moving with her husband towards the drawing-room] Young Dunning won't marry that girl, Ronny.

KEITH. Phew! Wouldn't be in his shoes, then! Sir William'll never keep a servant who makes a scandal in the village. Bill come?

As they disappear from the hall, JOHN LATTER, in a clergyman's evening dress, comes sedately down-stairs, a tall, rather pale young man, with something in him, as it were, both of heaven, and a drawing-room. He passes FREDA with a formal little nod. HAROLD, a fresh-cheeked, cheery-looking youth, comes down, three steps at a time.

HAROLD. Hallo, Freda! Patience on the monument. Let's have a sniff! For Miss Lanfarne? Bill come down yet?

FREDA. No, Mr. Harold.

HAROLD crosses the hall, whistling, and follows LATTER into the drawing-room. There is the sound of a scuffle above, and a voice crying: "Shut up, Dot!" And JOAN comes down screwing her head back. She is pretty and small, with large clinging eyes.

JOAN. Am I all right behind, Freda? That beast, Dot!

FREDA. Quite, Miss Joan.

DOT'S face, like a full moon, appears over the upper banisters. She too comes running down, a frank figure, with the face of a rebel.

DOT. You little being!

JOAN. [Flying towards the drawing-room, is overtaken at the door] Oh! Dot! You're pinching!

As they disappear into the drawing-room, MABEL LANFARNE, a tall girl with a rather charming Irish face, comes slowly down. And at sight of her FREDA'S whole figure becomes set and meaningfull.

FREDA. For you, Miss Lanfarne, from my lady.

MABEL. [In whose speech is a touch of wilful Irishry] How sweet! [Fastening the roses] And how are you, Freda?

FREDA. Very well, thank you.

MABEL. And your father? Hope he's going to let me come out with the guns again.

FREDA. [Stolidly] He'll be delighted, I'm sure.

MABEL. Ye-es: I haven't forgotten his face—last time.

FREDA. You stood with Mr. Bill. He's better to stand with than Mr. Harold, or Captain Keith.

MABEL. He didn't touch a feather that day.

FREDA. People don't when they're anxious to do their best.

A gong sounds. And MABEL LANFARNE giving FREDA a rather inquisitive stare, moves on to the drawing-room. Left alone without the roses, FREDA still lingers. At the slamming of a door above and hasty footsteps, she shrinks back against the stairs. BILL runs down, and comes on her suddenly. He is a tall, good-looking edition of his father, with the same stubborn look of veiled choler.

BILL. Freda! [And as she shrinks still further back] What's the matter? [Then at some sound he looks round uncasily and draws away from her.] Aren't you glad to see me?

FREDA. I've something to say to you, r. Bill. After dinner.

BILL. Mister——?

She passes him, and rushes away up-stairs. And BILL, who stands frowning and looking after her, recovers himself sharply as the drawing-room door is opened, and SIR WILLIAM and MISS LANFARNE come forth, followed by KEITH, DOT, HAROLD, CHRISTINE, LATTER, and JOAN, all leaning across each other, and talking. By herself, behind them, comes LADY CHESHIRE, a refined-looking woman of fifty, with silvery dark hair, and an expression at once gentle and ironic. They move across the hall towards the dining-room.

SIR WILLIAM. Ah! Bill.

MABEL. How do you do?

KEITH. How are you, old chap?

DOT. [Gloomily] Do you know your rt?

HAROLD. Hallo, old man!

CHRISTINE gives her brother a flying kiss. JOAN and LATTER pause and look at him shyly without speech.

BILL. [Putting his hand on JOAN's oulder] Good luck, you two! Well, other?

LADY CHESHIRE. Well, my dear boy! ice to see you at last. What a long ne!

She draws his arm through hers, and they move towards the dining-room.

The curtain falls.

The curtain rises again at once.

SCENE II

CHRISTINE, LADY CHESHIRE, DOT, MABEL LANFARNE, and JOAN, are returning to the hall after dinner.

CHRISTINE. [In a low voice] Mother, it true about young Dunning and ose Taylor?

LADY CHESHIRE. I'm afraid so, ar.

CHRISTINE. But can't they be——

DOT. Ah! ah-h!

CHRISTINE and her mother are silent.

DOT. My child, I'm not the young person.

CHRISTINE. No, of course not—only——

[Nodding towards JOAN and MABEL.

DOT. Look here! This is just an instance of what I hate.

LADY CHESHIRE. My dear? Another one?

DOT. Yes, Mother, and don't you pretend you don't understand, because you know you do.

CHRISTINE. Instance? Of what?

JOAN and MABEL have ceased talking, and listen, still at the fire.

DOT. Humbug, of course. Why should you want them to marry, if he's tired of her?

CHRISTINE. [Ironically] Well! If your imagination doesn't carry you as far as that!

DOT. When people marry, do you believe they ought to be in love with each other?

CHRISTINE. [With a shrug] That's not the point.

DOT. Oh? Were you in love with Ronny?

CHRISTINE. Don't be idiotic!

DOT. Would you have married him if you hadn't been?

CHRISTINE. Of course not!

JOAN. Dot! You are!——

DOT. Hallo! my little snipe!

LADY CHESHIRE. Dot, dear!

DOT. Don't shut me up, Mother! [To JOAN] Are you in love with John?

JOAN turns hurriedly to the fire.

DOT. Would you be going to marry him if you were not?

CHRISTINE. You are a brute, Dot.

DOT. Is Mabel in love with—whoever she is in love with?

MABEL. And I wonder who that is.

DOT. Well, would you marry him if you weren't?

MABEL. No, I would not.

DOT. Now, Mother; did you love Father?

CHRISTINE. Dot, you really are awful.

DOT. [Rueful and detached] Well, it is a bit too thick, perhaps.

JOAN. Dot!

DOT. Well, Mother, did you—I mean quite calmly?

LADY CHESHIRE. Yes, dear, quite calmly.

DOT. Would you have married him if you hadn't?

LADY CHESHIRE shakes her head.

DOT. Then we're all agreed!

MABEL. Except yourself.

DOT. [Grimly] Even if I loved him, he might think himself lucky if I married him.

MABEL. Indeed, and I'm not so sure.

DOT. [Making a face at her] What I was going to——

LADY CHESHIRE. But don't you think, dear, you'd better not?

DOT. Well, I won't say what I was going to say, but what I do say is—Why the devil——

LADY CHESHIRE. Quite so, Dot!

DOT. [A little disconcerted] If they're tired of each other, they ought not to marry, and if Father's going to make them——

CHRISTINE. You don't understand in the least. It's for the sake of the——

DOT. Out with it, Old Sweetness! The approaching infant! God bless it!

There is a sudden silence, for KEITH and LATTER are seen coming from the dining-room.

LATTER. That must be so, Ronny.

KEITH. No, John; not a bit of it!

LATTER. You don't think!

KEITH. Good Gad, who wants to think after dinner!

DOT. Come on! Let's play pool. [She turns at the billiard-room door] Look here! Rehearsal to-morrow is directly after breakfast; from "Eccles enters breathless" to the end.

MABEL. Whatever made you choose "Caste," Dot? You know it's awfully difficult.

DOT. Because it's the only play that's not too advanced.

The girls all go into the billiard-room.

LADY CHESHIRE. Where's Bill, Ronny?

KEITH. [With a grimace] I rather think Sir William and he are in Committeee of Supply—Mem-Sahib.

LADY CHESHIRE. Oh!

LATTER. [In the tone of one resuming an argument] There can't be two opinions about it, Ronny. Young Dunning's refusal is simply indefensible.

KEITH. I don't agree a bit, John.

LATTER. Of course, if you won't listen.

KEITH. [Clipping a cigar] Draw it mild, my dear chap. We've had the whole thing over twice at least.

LATTER. My point is this——

KEITH. [Regarding LATTER quizzically with his half-closed eyes] I know—I know—but the point is, how far your point is simply professional.

LATTER. If a man wrongs a woman, he ought to right her again. There's no answer to that.

KEITH. It all depends.

LATTER. That's rank opportunism.

KEITH. Rats! Look here—Oh! hang it, John, one can't argue this out with a parson.

LATTER. [Frigidly] Why not?

HAROLD. [Who has entered from the dining-room] Pull devil, pull baker!

KEITH. Shut up, Harold!

LATTER. "To play the game" is the religion even of the Army.

KEITH. Exactly, but what is the game?

LATTER. What else can it be in this case?

KEITH. You're too puritanical, young John. You can't help it—line of country laid down for you. All drag-huntin'! What!

LATTER. [With concentration] Look here!

HAROLD. [Imitating the action of a man pulling at a horse's head] 'Come hup, I say, you hugly beast!'

KEITH. [To LATTER] You're not going to draw me, old chap. You don't see where you'd land us all.

[He smokes calmly.

LATTER. How do you imagine vice takes its rise? From precisely this sort of thing of young Dunning's.

KEITH. From human nature, I should have thought, John. I admit that I don't like a fellow's leavin' a girl in the lurch; but I don't see the use in drawin' hard and fast rules. You only have to break 'em. Sir William and you would just tie Dunning and the girl up together, willy-nilly, to save appearances, and ten to one but there'll be the deuce to pay in a year's time. You can take a horse to the water, you can't make him drink.

LATTER. I entirely and absolutely disagree with you.

HAROLD. Good old John!

LATTER. At all events we know where your principles take you.

KEITH. [Rather dangerously] Where, please?

HAROLD turns up his eyes, and points downwards.

KEITH. Dry up, Harold!

LATTER. Did you ever hear the story of Faust?

KEITH. Now look here, John; with all due respect to your cloth, and all the politeness in the world, you may go to —blazes.

LATTER. Well, I must say, Ronny—of all the rude boors——

[He turns towards the billiard-room.

KEITH. Sorry I smashed the glass, old chap.

LATTER passes out. There comes a mingled sound through the opened door, of female voices, laughter, and the click of billiard balls, clipped off by the sudden closing of the door.

KEITH. [Impersonally] Deuced odd, the way a parson puts one's back up! Because you know I agree with him really; young Dunning ought to play the game; and I hope Sir William'll make him.

The butler JACKSON has entered from the door under the stairs followed by the keeper STUDDENHAM, a man between fifty and sixty, in a full-skirted coat with big pockets, cord breeches, and gaiters; he has a steady self-respecting weathered face, with blue eyes and a short grey beard, which has obviously once been red.

KEITH. Hullo! Studdenham!

STUDDENHAM. [Touching his forehead] Evenin', Captain Keith.

JACKSON. Sir William still in the dining-room with Mr. Bill, sir?

HAROLD. [With a grimace] He is, Jackson.

JACKSON goes out to the dining-room.

KEITH. You've shot no pheasants yet, Studdenham?

STUDDENHAM. No, sir. Only birds. We'll be doin' the spinneys and the home covert while you're down.

KEITH. I say, talkin' of spinneys——

He breaks off sharply, and goes out with HAROLD into the billiard-room. SIR WILLIAM enters from the dining-room, applying a gold toothpick to his front teeth.

SIR WILLIAM. Ah! Studdenham. Bad business this, about young Dunning!

STUDDENHAM. Yes, Sir William.

SIR WILLIAM. He definitely refuses to marry her?

STUDDENHAM. He does that.

SIR WILLIAM. That won't do, you know. What reason does he give?

STUDDENHAM. Won't say other than that he don't want no more to do with her.

SIR WILLIAM. God bless me! That's not a reason. I can't have a keeper of mine playing fast and loose in the village like this. [Turning to LADY CHESHIRE, who has come in from the billiard-room] That affair of young Dunning's, my dear.

LADY CHESHIRE. Oh! Yes! I'm so sorry, Studdenham. The poor girl!

STUDDENHAM. [Respectfully] Fancy he's got a feeling she's not his equal, now, my lady.

LADY CHESHIRE. [To herself] Yes, I suppose he has made her his superior.

SIR WILLIAM. What? Eh! Quite! Quite! I was just telling Studdenham the fellow must set the matter straight. We can't have open scandals in the village. If he wants to keep his place he must marry her at once.

LADY CHESHIRE. [To her husband in a low voice] Is it right to force them?

Do you know what the girl wishes, Studdenham?

STUDDENHAM. Shows a spirit, my lady—says she'll have him—willin' or not.

LADY CHESHIRE. A spirit? I see. If they marry like that they're sure to be miserable.

SIR WILLIAM. What! Doesn't follow at all. Besides, my dear, you ought to know by this time, there's an unwritten law in these matters. They're perfectly well aware that when there are consequences, they have to take them.

STUDDENHAM. Some o' these young people, my lady, they don't put two and two together no more than an old cock pheasant.

SIR WILLIAM. I'll give him till to-morrow. If he remains obstinate, he'll have to go; he'll get no character, Studdenham. Let him know what I've said. I like the fellow, he's a good keeper. I don't want to lose him. But this sort of thing I won't have. He must toe the mark or take himself off. Is he up here to-night?

STUDDENHAM. Hangin' partridges, Sir William. Will you have him in?

SIR WILLIAM. [Hesitating] Yes—yes. I'll see him.

STUDDENHAM. Good-night to you, my lady.

LADY CHESHIRE. Freda's not looking well, Studdenham.

STUDDENHAM. She's a bit pernickitty with her food, that's where it is.

LADY CHESHIRE. I must try and make her eat.

SIR WILLIAM. Oh! Studdenham. We'll shoot the home covert first. What did we get last year?

STUDDENHAM. [Producing the game-book; but without reference to it] Two hundred and fifty-three pheasants, eleven hares, fifty-two rabbits, three woodcock, sundry.

SIR WILLIAM. Sundry? Didn't include a fox did it? [Gravely] I was seriously upset this morning at Warnham's spinney——

STUDDENHAM. [Very gravely] Yu don't say, Sir William; that four-year-old he du look a handful!

SIR WILLIAM [With a sharp look] You know well enough what I mean.

STUDDENHAM. [Unmoved] Shall I send young Dunning, Sir William?

SIR WILLIAM gives a short, sharp nod, and STUDDENHAM retires by the door under the stairs.

SIR WILLIAM. Old fox!

LADY CHESHIRE. Don't be too hard on Dunning. He's very young.

SIR WILLIAM. [Patting her arm] My dear, you don't understand young fellows, how should you?

LADY CHESHIRE. [With her fain irony] A husband and two sons no counting. [Then as the door under the stairs is opened] Bill, now do——

SIR WILLIAM. I'll be gentle with him [Sharply] Come in!

LADY CHESHIRE retires to the billiard-room. She gives a look back and a half smile at young DUNNING, a fair young man dressed in brown cords and leggings, and holding his cap in his hand; then goes out.

SIR WILLIAM. Evenin', Dunning.

DUNNING. [Twisting his cap] Evenin Sir William.

SIR WILLIAM. Studdenham's told you what I want to see you about?

DUNNING. Yes, sir.

SIR WILLIAM. The thing's in your hands. Take it or leave it. I don't put pressure on you. I simply won't have this sort of thing on my estate.

DUNNING. I'd like to say, Sir William, that she—— [He stops

SIR WILLIAM. Yes, I daresay—— Si of one and a half a dozen of the othe Can't go into that.

DUNNING. No, Sir William.

SIR WILLIAM. I'm quite mild wit you. This is your first place. If yo leave here you'll get no character.

DUNNING. I never meant any harm sir.

SIR WILLIAM. My good fellow, yo know the custom of the country.

DUNNING. Yes, Sir William, but—

SIR WILLIAM. You should ha looked before you leaped. I'm not fo ing you. If you refuse you must g that's all.

DUNNING. Yes, Sir William.

Sir William. Well, now go along d take a day to think it over.
Bill, who has sauntered moodily from the dining-room, stands by the stairs listening. Catching sight of him, Dunning raises his hand to his forelock.
Dunning. Very good, Sir William.
le turns, fumbles, and turns again]
y old mother's dependent on me——
Sir William. Now, Dunning, I've no ore to say.
Dunning goes sadly away under the stairs.
Sir William. [Following] And look re! Just understand this—— [He too goes out.
Bill, lighting a cigarette, has approached the writing-table. He looks very glum. The billiard-room door is flung open. Mabel Lanfarne appears, and makes him a little curtsey.
Mabel. Against my will I am bidden bring you in to pool.
Bill. Sorry! I've got letters.
Mabel. You seem to have become ry conscientious.
Bill. Oh! I don't know.
Mabel. Do you remember the last y of the covert shooting?
Bill. I do.
Mabel. [Suddenly] What a pretty rl Freda Studdenham's grown!
Bill. Has she?
Mabel. "She walks in beauty."
Bill. Really? Hadn't noticed.
Mabel. Have you been taking lessons conversation?
Bill. Don't think so.
Mabel. Oh! [There is a silence] Mr.
heshire!
Bill. Miss Lanfarne!
Mabel. What's the matter with you?
ren't you rather queer, considering at I don't bite, and was rather a pal!
Bill. [Stolidly] I'm sorry.
Then seeing that his mother has come in from the billiard-room, he sits down at the writing-table.
Lady Cheshire. Mabel, dear, do take y cue. Won't you play too, Bill, and y and stop Ronny, he's too terrible?
Bill. Thanks. I've got these letters.
Mabel taking the cue passes back into the billiard-room, whence comes out the sound of talk and laughter.
Lady Cheshire. [Going over and standing behind her son's chair] Anything wrong, darling?
Bill. Nothing, thanks. [Suddenly] I say, I wish you hadn't asked that girl here.
Lady Cheshire. Mabel! Why? She's wanted for rehearsals. I thought you got on so well with her last Christmas.
Bill. [With a sort of sullen exasperation] A year ago.
Lady Cheshire. The girls like her, so does your father; personally I must say I think she's rather nice and Irish.
Bill. She's all right, I daresay.
He looks round as if to show his mother that he wishes to be left alone. But Lady Cheshire, having seen that he is about to look at her, is not looking at him.
Lady Cheshire. I'm afraid your father's been talking to you, Bill.
Bill. He has.
Lady Cheshire. Debts? Do try and make allowances. [With a faint smile] Of course he is a little—— Bill. He is.
Lady Cheshire. I wish I could——
Bill. Oh, Lord! Don't you get mixed up in it!
Lady Cheshire. It seems almost a pity that you told him.
Bill. He wrote and asked me point blank what I owed.
Lady Cheshire. Oh! [Forcing herself to speak in a casual voice] I happen to have a little money, Bill—— I think it would be simpler if——
Bill. Now look here, Mother, you've tried that before. I can't help spending money, I never shall be able, unless I go to the Colonies, or something of the kind.
Lady Cheshire. Don't talk like that!
Bill. I would, for two straws!
Lady Cheshire. It's only because your father thinks such a lot of the place, and the name, and your career. The Cheshires are all like that. They've been here so long; they're all—root.
Bill. Deuced funny business my career will be, I expect!

LADY CHESHIRE. [Fluttering, but restraining herself lest he should see] But, Bill, why must you spend more than your allowance?

BILL. Why—anything? I didn't make myself.

LADY CHESHIRE. I'm afraid we did that. It was inconsiderate, perhaps.

BILL. Yes, you'd better have left me out.

LADY CHESHIRE. But why are you so—— Only a little fuss about money!

BILL. Ye-es.

LADY CHESHIRE. You're not keeping anything from me, are you?

BILL. [Facing her] No. [He then turns very deliberately to the writing things, and takes up a pen] I must write these letters, please.

LADY CHESHIRE. Bill, if there's any real trouble, you will tell me, won't you?

BILL. There's nothing whatever.

[He suddenly gets up and walks about.

LADY CHESHIRE, too, moves over to the fireplace, and after an uneasy look at him, turns to the fire. Then, as if trying to switch off his mood, she changes the subject abruptly.

LADY CHESHIRE. Isn't it a pity about young Dunning? I'm so sorry for Rose Taylor.

There is a silence. Stealthily under the staircase FREDA has entered, and seeing only BILL, advances to speak to him.

BILL. [Suddenly] Oh! well, you can't help these things in the country.

As he speaks, FREDA stops dead, perceiving that he is not alone; BILL, too, catching sight of her, starts.

LADY CHESHIRE. [Still speaking to the fire] It seems dreadful to force him. I do so believe in people doing things of their own accord. [Then seeing FREDA standing so uncertainly by the stairs] Do you want me, Freda?

FREDA. Only your cloak, my lady. Shall I—begin it?

At this moment SIR WILLIAM enters from the drawing-room.

LADY CHESHIRE. Yes, yes.

SIR WILLIAM. [Genially] Can you give me another five minutes, Bill? [Pointing to the billiard-room] We'll come directly, my dear.

FREDA, with a look at BILL, has gone back whence she came; and LADY CHESHIRE goes reluctantly away into the billiard-room.

SIR WILLIAM. I shall give young Dunning short shrift. [He moves over to the fireplace and divides his coat-tails] Now, about you, Bill! I don't want to bully you the moment you come down, but you know, this can't go on. I've paid your debts twice. Shan't pay them this time unless I see a disposition to change your mode of life. [A pause] You get your extravagance from your mother. She's very queer—[A pause]—All the Winterleghs are like that about money.

BILL. Mother's particularly generous, if that's what you mean.

SIR WILLIAM. [Drily] We will put it that way. [A pause] At the present moment you owe, as I understand it, eleven hundred pounds.

BILL. About that.

SIR WILLIAM. Mere flea-bite. [A pause] I've a proposition to make.

BILL. Won't it do to-morrow, sir?

SIR WILLIAM. "To-morrow" appears to be your motto in life.

BILL. Thanks!

SIR WILLIAM. I'm anxious to change it to to-day.

BILL looks at him in silence.

SIR WILLIAM. It's time you took your position seriously, instead of hanging about town, racing, and playing polo and what not.

BILL. Go ahead!

At something dangerous in his voice, SIR WILLIAM modifies his attitude.

SIR WILLIAM. The proposition's very simple. I can't suppose anything so rational and to your advantage will appeal to you, but [drily] I mention it. Marry a nice girl, settle down, and stand for the division; you can have the Dower House and fifteen hundred a year, and I'll pay your debts into the bargain. If you're elected I'll make it two thousand. Plenty of time to work up the onstituency before we kick out these ıfernal Rads. Carpet-bagger against ou; if you go hard at it in the summer, 'll be odd if you don't manage to put ı your three days a week, next season. 'ou can take Rocketer and that four-ear-old—he's well up to your weight, ully eight and a half inches of bone. 'ou'll only want one other. And if Miss -if your wife means to hunt——

BILL. You've chosen my wife, then?

SIR WILLIAM. [With a quick look] imagine, you've some girl in your ind.

BILL. Ah!

SIR WILLIAM. Used not to be un-ıtural at your age. I married your other at twenty-eight. Here you are, dest son of a family that stands for mething. The more I see of the times ıe more I'm convinced that everybody ho is anybody has got to buckle to, ıd save the landmarks left. Unless e're true to our caste, and prepared work for it, the landed classes are ›ing to go under to this infernal demo-atic spirit in the air. The outlook's ry serious. We're threatened in a hun-ed ways. If you mean business, you'll ant a wife. When I came into the roperty I should have been lost with-ıt your mother.

BILL. I thought this was coming.

SIR WILLIAM. [With a certain geniality] My dear fellow, I don't want to ıt a pistol to your head. You've had slack rein so far. I've never objected your sowing a few wild oats—so long you—er——

Unseen by SIR WILLIAM, BILL makes a sudden movement.

SIR WILLIAM. Short of that—at all ents, I've not inquired into your af-irs. I can only judge by the—er—:cuniary evidence you've been good ough to afford me from time to time. imagine you've lived like a good many ung men in your position—I'm not aming you, but there's a time for all ings.

BILL. Why don't you say outright at you want me to marry Mabel Lan-rne?

SIR WILLIAM. Well, I do. Girl's a nice ıe. Good family—got a little money—rides well. Isn't she good-looking enough for you, or what?

BILL. Quite, thanks.

SIR WILLIAM. I understood from your mother that you and she were on good terms.

BILL. Please don't drag Mother into it.

SIR WILLIAM. [With dangerous politeness] Perhaps you'll be good enough to state your objections.

BILL. Must we go on with this?

SIR WILLIAM. I've never asked you to do anything for me before; I expect you to pay attention now. I've no wish to dragoon you into this particular marriage. If you don't care for Miss Lanfarne, marry a girl you're fond of.

BILL. I refuse.

SIR WILLIAM. In that case you know what to look out for. [With a sudden rush of choler] You young . . . [He checks himself and stands glaring at BILL, who glares back at him] This means, I suppose, that you've got some entanglement or other.

BILL. Suppose what you like, sir.

SIR WILLIAM. I warn you, if you play the blackguard——

BILL. You can't force me like young Dunning.

Hearing the raised voices LADY CHESHIRE has come back from the billiard-room.

LADY CHESHIRE. [Closing the door] What is it?

SIR WILLIAM. You deliberately refuse! Go away, Dorothy.

LADY CHESHIRE. [Resolutely] I haven't seen Bill for two months.

SIR WILLIAM. What! [Hesitating] Well—we must talk it over again.

LADY CHESHIRE. Come to the billiard-room, both of you: Bill, do finish those letters!

With a deft movement she draws SIR WILLIAM toward the billiard-room, and glances back at BILL before going out, but he has turned to the writing-table. When the door is closed, BILL looks into the drawing-room, then opens the door under the stairs; and, backing away towards the writing-table, sits down there, and takes up a pen. FREDA, who has evi- dently been waiting, comes in and stands by the table.

BILL. I say, this is dangerous, you know.

FREDA. Yes—but I must.

BILL. Well, then—[With natural recklessness] Aren't you going to kiss me?

Without moving she looks at him with a sort of miserable inquiry.

BILL. Do you know you haven't seen me for eight weeks?

FREDA. Quite—long enough—for you to have forgotten.

BILL. Forgotten! I don't forget people so soon.

FREDA. No?

BILL. What's the matter with you, Freda?

FREDA. [After a long look] It'll never be as it was.

BILL. [Jumping up] How d'you mean?

FREDA. I've got something for you. [She takes a diamond ring out of her dress and holds it out to him] I've worn it since Cromer.

BILL. Now, look here——

FREDA. I've had my holiday; I shan't get another in a hurry.

BILL. Freda!

FREDA. You'll be glad to be free. That fortnight's all you really loved me in.

BILL. [Putting his hands on her arms] I swear——

FREDA. [Between her teeth] Miss Lanfarne need never know about me.

BILL. So that's it! I've told you a dozen times—nothing's changed.

FREDA looks at him and smiles.

BILL. Oh! very well! If you will make yourself miserable.

FREDA. Everybody will be pleased.

BILL. At what?

FREDA. When you marry her.

BILL. This is too bad.

FREDA. It's what always happens—even when it's not a gentleman.

BILL. That's enough!

FREDA. But I'm not like that girl down in the village. You needn't be afraid I'll say anything when—it comes. That's what I had to tell you.

BILL. What!

FREDA. I can keep a secret.

BILL. Do you mean this?

She bows her head.

BILL. Good God!

FREDA. Father brought me up not to whine. Like the puppies when they hold them up by their tails. [With a sudden break in her voice] Oh! Bill!

BILL. [With his head down, seizing her hands] Freda! [He breaks away from her towards the fire] Good God!

She stands looking at him, then quietly slips away by the door under the staircase. BILL turns to speak to her, and sees that she has gone. He walks up to the fireplace, and grips the mantelpiece.

BILL. By Jove! This is——!

The curtain falls.

ACT II

The scene is LADY CHESHIRE'S morning-room, at ten o'clock on the following day. It is a pretty room with white panelled walls, and chrysanthemums and carmine lilies in bowls. A large bow window overlooks the park under a soft westerly sky. A piano stands open, a fire is burning; and the morning's correspondence is scattered on a writing-table. Doors opposite each other lead to the maid's workroom and to a corridor. LADY CHESHIRE is standing in the middle of the room, looking at an opera cloak which FREDA is holding out.

LADY CHESHIRE. Well, Freda, suppose you just give it up!

FREDA. I don't like to be beaten.

LADY CHESHIRE. You're not to worry over your work. And by the way, I promised your father to make you eat more.

FREDA smiles.

LADY CHESHIRE. It's all very well to smile. You want bracing up. Now don't be naughty. I shall give you tonic. And I think you had better put that cloak away.

FREDA. I'd rather have one more time, my lady.

LADY CHESHIRE. [Sitting down at her riting-table] Very well.

FREDA goes out into her workroom, as JACKSON comes in from the corridor.

JACKSON. Excuse me, my lady. here's a young woman from the vil-ge, says you wanted to see her.

LADY CHESHIRE. Rose Taylor? Ask er to come in. Oh! and Jackson, the ır for the meet, please, at half-past ten.

JACKSON, having bowed and with-drawn, LADY CHESHIRE rises with marked signs of nervous-ness, which she has only just suppressed when ROSE TAYLOR, a stolid country girl, comes in and stands waiting by the door.

LADY CHESHIRE. Well, Rose. Do come !

ROSE advances perhaps a couple of steps.

LADY CHESHIRE. I just wondered hether you'd like to ask my advice. our engagement with Dunning's oken off, isn't it?

ROSE. Yes—but I've told him he's got marry me.

LADY CHESHIRE. I see! And you ink that'll be the wisest thing?

ROSE. [Stolidly] I don't know, my dy. He's got to.

LADY CHESHIRE. I do hope you're a tle fond of him still.

ROSE. I'm not. He don't deserve it.

LADY CHESHIRE. And—do you think 's quite lost his affection for you?

ROSE. I suppose so, else he wouldn't eat me as he's done. He's after that— at—— He didn't ought to treat me as I was dead.

LADY CHESHIRE. No, no—of course. ut you will think it all well over, on't you?

ROSE. I've a-got nothing to think over, cept what I know of.

LADY CHESHIRE. But for you both to arry in that spirit! You know it's for fe, Rose. [Looking into her face] I'm ways ready to help you.

ROSE. [Dropping a very slight curt-y] Thank you, my lady, but I think ? ought to marry me. I've told him he ight.

LADY CHESHIRE. [Sighing] Well, that's all I wanted to say. It's a question of your self-respect; I can't give you any real advice. But just remember that if you want a friend——

ROSE. [With a gulp] I'm not so 'ard, really. I only want him to do what's right by me.

LADY CHESHIRE. [With a little lift of her eyebrows—gently] Yes, yes—I see.

ROSE. [Glancing back at the door] I don't like meeting the servants.

LADY CHESHIRE. Come along, I'll take you out another way.

As they reach the door, DOT comes in.

DOT. [With a glance at ROSE] Can we have this room for the mouldy re-hearsal, Mother?

LADY CHESHIRE. Yes, dear, you can air it here.

Holding the door open for ROSE she follows her out. And DOT, with a book of "Caste" in her hand, arranges the room accord-ing to a diagram.

DOT. Chair — chair — table — chair — Dash! Table — piano — fire — window! [Producing a pocket comb] Comb for Eccles. Cradle?—Cradle—[She vicious-ly dumps a waste-paper basket down, and drops a footstool into it] Brat! [Then reading from the book gloomily] "Enter Eccles breathless. Esther and Polly rise—Esther puts on lid of band-box." Bandbox!

Searching for something to repre-sent a bandbox, she opens the workroom door.

DOT. Freda?

FREDA comes in.

DOT. I say, Freda. Anything the mat-ter? You seem awfully down.

FREDA does not answer.

DOT. You haven't looked anything of a lollipop lately.

FREDA. I'm quite all right, thank you, Miss Dot.

DOT. Has mother been givin' you a tonic?

FREDA. [Smiling a little] Not yet.

DOT. That doesn't account for it then. [With a sudden warm impulse] What is it, Freda?

FREDA. Nothing.

DOT. [Switching off on a different line of thought] Are you very busy this morning?

FREDA. Only this cloak for my lady.

DOT. Oh! that can wait. I may have to get you in to prompt, if I can't keep 'em straight. [Gloomily] They stray so. Would you mind?

FREDA. [Stolidly] I shall be very glad, Miss Dot.

DOT. [Eyeing her dubiously] All right. Let's see—what did I want?

JOAN has come in.

JOAN. Look here, Dot; about the baby in this scene. I'm sure I ought to make more of it.

DOT. Romantic little beast! [She plucks the footstool out by one ear, and holds it forth] Let's see you try!

JOAN. [Recoiling] But, Dot, what are we really going to have for the baby? I can't rehearse with that thing. Can't you suggest something, Freda?

FREDA. Borrow a real one, Miss Joan. There are some that don't count much.

JOAN. Freda, how horrible!

DOT. [Dropping the footstool back into the basket] You'll just put up with what you're given.

Then, as CHRISTINE and MABEL LANFARNE come in, FREDA turns abruptly and goes out.

DOT. Buck up! Where are Bill and Harold? [To JOAN] Go and find them, mouse-cat.

But BILL and HAROLD, followed by LATTER, are already in the doorway. They come in, and LATTER, stumbling over the waste-paper basket, takes it up to improve its position.

DOT. Drop that cradle, John! [As he picks the footstool out of it] Leave the baby in! Now then! Bill you enter there! [She points to the workroom door where BILL and MABEL range themselves close to the piano; while HAROLD goes to the window] John! get off the stage! Now then, "Eccles enters breathless, Esther and Polly rise." Wait a minute. I know now. [She opens the workroom door] Freda, I wanted a bandbox.

HAROLD. [Cheerfully] I hate beginning to rehearse, you know, you feel such a fool.

DOT. [With her bandbox—gloomily] You'll feel more of a fool when you have begun. [To BILL, who is staring into the workroom] Shut the door. Now.

BILL shuts the door.

LATTER. [Advancing] Look here! I want to clear up a point of psychology before we start.

DOT. Good Lord!

LATTER. When I bring in the milk—ought I to bring it in seriously—as if I were accustomed—I mean, I maintain that if I'm——

JOAN. Oh! John, but I don't think it's meant that you should——

DOT. Shut up! Go back, John! Blow the milk! Begin, begin, begin! Bill!

LATTER. [Turning round and again advancing] But I think you underrate the importance of my entrance altogether.

MABEL. Oh! no, Mr. Latter!

LATTER. I don't in the least want to destroy the balance of the scene, but I do want to be clear about the spirit. What is the spirit?

DOT. [With gloom] Rollicking!

LATTER. Well, I don't think so. We shall run a great risk with this play, if we rollick.

DOT. Shall we? Now look here——!

MABEL. [Softly to BILL] Mr. Cheshire!

BILL. [Desperately] Let's get on!

DOT. [Waving LATTER back] Begin begin! At last!

But JACKSON has come in.

JACKSON. [To CHRISTINE] Studdenham says, M'm, if the young ladies want to see the spaniel pups, he's brought 'em round.

JOAN. [Starting up] Oh! come on John!

[She flies towards the door, followed by LATTER.

DOT. [Gesticulating with her book] Stop! You——!

CHRISTINE and HAROLD also rush past.

DOT. [Despairingly] First pick! [Tearing her hair] Pigs! Devils!

[She rushes after them.

BILL and MABEL are left alone.

MABEL. [Mockingly] And don't you ant one of the spaniel pups?

BILL. [Painfully reserved and sullen, d conscious of the workroom door] n't keep a dog in town. You can have e, if you like. The breeding's all ght.

MABEL. Sixth pick?

BILL. The girls'll give you one of irs. They only fancy they want n.

MABEL. [Moving nearer to him, with r hands clasped behind her] You ow, you remind me awfully of your ther. Except that you're not nearly polite. I don't understand you Eng-h—lords of the soil. The way you ve of disposing of your females. Vith a sudden change of voice] What is the matter with you last night? oftly] Won't you tell me?

BILL. Nothing to tell.

MABEL. Ah! no, Mr. Bill.

BILL. [Almost succumbing to her ice—then sullenly] Worried, I sup-se.

MABEL. [Returning to her mocking] iite got over it?

BILL. Don't chaff me, please.

MABEL. You really are rather formid-le.

BILL. Thanks.

MABEL. But, you know, I love to cross field where there's a bull.

BILL. Really! Very interesting.

MABEL. The way of their only seeing e thing at a time. [She moves back as advances] And overturning people the journey.

BILL. Hadn't you better be a little reful?

MABEL. And never to see the hedge til they're stuck in it. And then aight from that hedge into the op-site one.

BILL. [Savagely] What makes you it me this morning of all mornings?

MABEL. The beautiful morning! 'uddenly] It must be dull for poor eda working in there with all this fun ing on?

BILL. [Glancing at the door] Fun u call it?

MABEL. To go back to you, now—Mr. ieshire.

BILL. No.

MABEL. You always make me feel so Irish. Is it because you're so English, d'you think? Ah! I can see him moving his ears. Now he's pawing the ground —— He's started!

BILL. Miss Lanfarne!

MABEL. [Still backing away from him, and drawing him on with her eyes and smile] You can't help coming after me! [Then with a sudden change to a sort of stern gravity] Can you? You'll feel that when I've gone.

They stand quite still, looking into each other's eyes and FREDA, who has opened the door of the workroom stares at them.

MABEL. [Seeing her] Here's the stile. Adieu, Monsieur le taureau!

She puts her hand behind her, opens the door, and slips through, leaving BILL to turn, following the direction of her eyes, and see FREDA with the cloak still in her hand.

BILL. [Slowly walking towards her] I haven't slept all night.

FREDA. No?

BILL. Have you been thinking it over?

FREDA gives a bitter little laugh.

BILL. Don't! We must make a plan. I'll get you away. I won't let you suffer. I swear I won't.

FREDA. That will be clever.

BILL. I wish to Heaven my affairs weren't in such a mess.

FREDA. I shall be—all—right, thank you.

BILL. You must think me a blackguard. [She shakes her head] Abuse me—say something! Don't look like that!

FREDA. Were you ever really fond of me?

BILL. Of course I was, I am now. Give me your hands.

She looks at him, then drags her hands from his, and covers her face.

BILL. [Clenching his fists] Look here! I'll prove it. [Then as she suddenly flings her arms round his neck and clings to him] There, there!

There is a click of a door handle They start away from each other, and see LADY CHESHIRE regarding them.

LADY CHESHIRE. [Without irony] I beg your pardon.

She makes as if to withdraw from an unwarranted intrusion, but suddenly turning, stands, with lips pressed together, waiting.

LADY CHESHIRE. Yes?

FREDA has muffled her face. But BILL turns and confronts his mother.

BILL. Don't say anything against her!

LADY CHESHIRE. [Tries to speak to him and fails—then to FREDA] Please—go!

BILL. [Taking Freda's arm] No.

LADY CHESHIRE, after a moment's hesitation, herself moves towards the door.

BILL. Stop, Mother!

LADY CHESHIRE. I think perhaps not.

BILL. [Looking at FREDA, who is cowering as though from a blow] It's a d—d shame!

LADY CHESHIRE. It is.

BILL. [With sudden resolution] It's not as you think. I'm engaged to be married to her.

FREDA gives him a wild stare, and turns away.

LADY CHESHIRE. [Looking from one to the other] I—don't—think—I—quite—understand.

BILL. [With the brutality of his mortification] What I said was plain enough.

LADY CHESHIRE. Bill!

BILL. I tell you I am going to marry her.

LADY CHESHIRE. [To FREDA] Is that true?

FREDA gulps and remains silent.

BILL. If you want to say anything, say it to me, Mother.

LADY CHESHIRE. [Gripping the edge of a little table] Give me a chair, please.

BILL gives her a chair.

LADY CHESHIRE. [To FREDA] Please sit down too.

FREDA sits on the piano stool, still turning her face away.

LADY CHESHIRE. [Fixing her eyes on FREDA] Now!

BILL. I fell in love with her! And she with me.

LADY CHESHIRE. When?

BILL. In the summer.

LADY CHESHIRE. Ah!

BILL. It wasn't her fault!

LADY CHESHIRE. No?

BILL. [With a sort of menace] Mother!

LADY CHESHIRE. Forgive me, I am not quite used to the idea. You say that you—are engaged?

BILL. Yes.

LADY CHESHIRE. The reasons against such an engagement have occurred to you, I suppose? [With a sudden change of tone] Bill! what does it mean?

BILL. If you think she's trapped me into this——

LADY CHESHIRE. I do not. Neither do I think she has been trapped. I think nothing. I understand nothing.

BILL. [Grimly] Good!

LADY CHESHIRE. How long has this —engagement lasted?

BILL. [After a silence] Two months.

LADY CHESHIRE. [Suddenly] This is —this is quite impossible.

BILL. You'll find it isn't.

LADY CHESHIRE. It's simple misery.

BILL. [Pointing to the workroom] Go and wait in there, Freda.

LADY CHESHIRE. [Quickly] And are you still in love with her?

FREDA, moving towards the workroom, smothers a sob.

BILL. Of course I am.

FREDA has gone, and as she goes LADY CHESHIRE rises suddenly, forced by the intense feeling she has been keeping in hand.

LADY CHESHIRE. Bill! Oh, Bill! What does it all mean?

BILL, looking from side to side, only shrugs his shoulders.

LADY CHESHIRE. You are not in love with her now. It's no good telling me you are.

BILL. I am.

LADY CHESHIRE. That's not exactly how you would speak if you were.

BILL. She's in love with me.

LADY CHESHIRE. [Bitterly] I suppose so.

BILL. I mean to see that nobody runs er down.

LADY CHESHIRE. [With difficulty] Bill! Am I a hard, or mean woman?

BILL. Mother!

LADY CHESHIRE. It's all your life—nd—your father's—and—all of us. I vant to understand—I must understand. Have you realised what an awful thing this would be for us all? It's uite impossible that it should go on.

BILL. I'm always in hot water with ie governor, as it is. She and I'll ake good care not to be in the way.

LADY CHESHIRE. Tell me everything!

BILL. I have.

LADY CHESHIRE. I'm your mother, ill.

BILL. What's the good of these ques-ons?

LADY CHESHIRE. You won't give her way—I see!

BILL. I've told you all there is to tell. Ve're engaged, we shall be married uietly, and—and—go to Canada.

LADY CHESHIRE. If there weren't iore than that to tell you'd be in love ith her now.

BILL. I've told you that I am.

LADY CHESHIRE. You are not. [Almost fiercely] I know—I know there's iore behind.

BILL. There—is—nothing.

LADY CHESHIRE. [Baffled, but unconvinced] Do you mean that your love for er has been just what it might have een for a lady?

BILL. [Bitterly] Why not?

LADY CHESHIRE. [With painful ony] It is not so as a rule.

BILL. Up to now I've never heard ou or the girls say a word against reda. This isn't the moment to begin, lease.

LADY CHESHIRE. [Solemnly] All such arriages end in wretchedness. You aven't a taste or tradition in com-ion. You don't know what marriage is. lay after day, year after year. It's no se being sentimental—for people rought up as we are, to have different anners is worse than to have different ouls. Besides, it's poverty. Your fath-r will never forgive you, and I've prac-cally nothing. What can you do? You have no profession. How are you going to stand it; with a woman who——? It's the little things.

BILL. I know all that, thanks.

LADY CHESHIRE. Nobody does till they've been through it. Marriage is hard enough when people are of the same class. [With a sudden movement towards him] Oh! my dear—before it's too late!

BILL. [After a struggle] It's no good.

LADY CHESHIRE. It's not fair to her. It can only end in her misery.

BILL. Leave that to me, please.

LADY CHESHIRE. [With an almost angry vehemence] Only the very finest can do such things. And you—don't even know what trouble's like.

BILL. Drop it, please, Mother.

LADY CHESHIRE. Bill, on your word of honour, are you acting of your own free will?

BILL. [Breaking away from her] I can't stand any more.

[He goes out into the workroom.

LADY CHESHIRE. What in God's name shall I do?

In her distress she stands quite still, then goes to the workroom door, and opens it.

LADY CHESHIRE. Come in here, please, Freda.

After a second's pause, FREDA, white and trembling, appears in the doorway, followed by BILL.

LADY CHESHIRE. No, Bill. I want to speak to her alone.

BILL does not move.

LADY CHESHIRE. [Icily] I must ask you to leave us.

BILL hesitates; then shrugging his shoulders, he touches FREDA'S arms, and goes back into the workroom, closing the door. There is silence.

LADY CHESHIRE. How did it come about?

FREDA. I don't know, my lady.

LADY CHESHIRE. For heaven's sake, child, don't call me that again, whatever happens. [She walks to the window, and speaks from there] I know well enough how love comes. I don't blame you. Don't cry. But, you see, it's my eldest son.

FREDA puts her hand to her breast.

LADY CHESHIRE. Yes, I know. Women always get the worst of these things. That's natural. But it's not only you—is it? Does any one guess?

FREDA. No.

LADY CHESHIRE. Not even your father?

FREDA shakes her head.

LADY CHESHIRE. There's nothing more dreadful than for a woman to hang like a stone round a man's neck. How far has it gone? Tell me!

FREDA. I can't.

LADY CHESHIRE. Come!

FREDA. I—won't.

LADY CHESHIRE. [Smiling painfully] Won't give him away? Both of you the same. What's the use of that with me? Look at me! Wasn't he with you when you went for your holiday this summer?

FREDA. He's—always—behaved—like—a—gentleman.

LADY CHESHIRE. Like a man—you mean!

FREDA. It hasn't been his fault! I love him so.

LADY CHESHIRE turns abruptly, and begins to walk up and down the room. Then stopping, she looks intently at FREDA.

LADY CHESHIRE. I don't know what to say to you. It's simple madness! It can't, and shan't go on.

FREDA. [Sullenly] I know I'm not his equal, but I am—somebody.

LADY CHESHIRE. [Answering this first assertion of rights with a sudden steeliness] Does he love you now?

FREDA. That's not fair—it's not fair.

LADY CHESHIRE. If men are like gunpowder, Freda, women are not. If you've lost him it's been your own fault.

FREDA. But he does love me, he must. It's only four months.

LADY CHESHIRE. [Looking down, and speaking rapidly] Listen to me. I love my son, but I know him—I know all his kind of man. I've lived with one for thirty years. I know the way their senses work. When they want a thing they must have it, and then—they're sorry.

FREDA. [Sullenly] He's not sorry.

LADY CHESHIRE. Is his love big enough to carry you both over everything? . . . You know it isn't.

FREDA. If I were a lady, you would talk like that.

LADY CHESHIRE. If you were a la there'd be no trouble before either you. You'll make him hate you.

FREDA. I won't believe it. I cou make him happy—out there.

LADY CHESHIRE. I don't want to so odious as to say all the things y must know. I only ask you to try a put yourself in our position.

FREDA. Ah, yes!

LADY CHESHIRE. You ought to kno me better than to think I'm pure selfish.

FREDA. Would you like to put you self in my position?

[She throws up her hea

LADY CHESHIRE. What!

FREDA. Yes. Just like Rose.

LADY CHESHIRE. [In a low, horro stricken voice] Oh!

There is a dead silence, then goi swiftly up to her, she loo straight into FREDA'S eyes.

FREDA. [Meeting her gaze] Oh! Y it's the truth. [Then to BILL, who h come in from the workroom, she gas out] I never meant to tell.

BILL. Well, are you satisfied?

LADY CHESHIRE. [Below her breat This is terrible.

BILL. The governor had better kno

LADY CHESHIRE. Oh! no; not yet!

BILL. Waiting won't cure it!

The door from the corridor thrown open; CHRISTINE a DOT run in with their copies the play in their hands; seei that something is wrong, th stand still. After a look at h mother, BILL turns abruptly, a goes back into the workroo LADY CHESHIRE moves towar the window.

JOAN. [Following her sisters] T car's round. What's the matter?

DOT. Shut up!

SIR WILLIAM'S voice is heard fro the corridor calling "DOROTHY As LADY CHESHIRE, passing h handkerchief over her face, tur round, he enters. He is in fu hunting dress: well-weathered pink, buckskins, and mahogany tops.

SIR WILLIAM. Just off, my dear. [To is daughters, genially] Rehearsin'? What! [He goes up to FREDA, holding ut his gloved right hand] Button that or me, Freda, would you? It's a bit tiff!

FREDA buttons the glove: LADY CHESHIRE and the girls watching in hypnotic silence.

SIR WILLIAM. Thank you! "Balmy as May"; scent ought to be first-rate. [To ADY CHESHIRE] Good-bye, my dear! ampson's Gorse—best day of the whole ear. [He pats JOAN on the shoulder] Vish you were comin' out, Joan.

He goes out, leaving the door open, and as his footsteps and the chink of his spurs die away, FREDA turns and rushes into the work-room.

CHRISTINE. Mother! What——?

But LADY CHESHIRE waves the question aside, passes her daughter, and goes out into the corridor. The sound of a motor-car is heard.

JOAN. [Running to the window] hey've started!—— Chris! What is it? ot!

DOT. Bill, and her!

JOAN. But what?

DOT. [Gloomily] Heaven knows! Go way, you're not fit for this.

JOAN. [Aghast] I am fit.

DOT. I think not.

CHRISTINE. [In a hard voice] Mother ught to have told us.

JOAN. It can't be very awful. Freda's o good.

DOT. Call yourself in love, you—ilky kitten!

CHRISTINE. It's horrible, not knowing nything! I wish Ronny hadn't gone.

JOAN. Shall I fetch John?

DOT. John!

CHRISTINE. Perhaps Harold knows.

JOAN. He went out with Studden-am.

DOT. It's always like this, women kept 1 blinkers. Rose-leaves and humbug! hat awful old man!

JOAN. Dot.

CHRISTINE. Don't talk of Father like that!

DOT. Well, he is! And Bill will be just like him at fifty! Heaven help Freda, whatever she's done! I'd sooner be a private in a German regiment than a woman.

JOAN. Dot, you're awful!

DOT. You—mouse-hearted—linnet!

CHRISTINE. Don't talk that nonsense about women!

DOT. You're married and out of it; and Ronny's not one of these terrific John Bulls. [To JOAN, who has opened the door] Looking for John? No good, my dear; lath and plaster.

JOAN. [From the door, in a frightened whisper] Here's Mabel!

DOT. Heavens, and the waters under the earth!

CHRISTINE. If we only knew!

As MABEL comes in, the three girls are silent, with their eyes fixed on their books.

MABEL. The silent company.

DOT. [Looking straight at her] We're chucking it for to-day.

MABEL. What's the matter?

CHRISTINE. Oh! nothing.

DOT. Something's happened.

MABEL. Really! I am sorry. [Hesitating] Is it bad enough for me to go?

CHRISTINE. Oh! no, Mabel!

DOT. [Sardonically] I should think very likely.

While she is looking from face to face, BILL comes in from the workroom. He starts to walk across the room, but stops, and looks stolidly at the four girls.

BILL. Exactly! Fact of the matter is, Miss Lanfarne, I'm engaged to my mother's maid.

No one moves or speaks. Suddenly MABEL LANFARNE goes towards him, holding out her hand. BILL does not take her hand, but bows. Then after a swift glance at the girls' faces MABEL goes out into the corridor, and the three girls are left staring at their brother.

BILL. [Coolly] Thought you might like to know.

[He, too, goes out into the corridor.

CHRISTINE. Great heavens!

JOAN. How awful!

CHRISTINE. I never thought of anything as bad as that.

JOAN. Oh! Chris! Something must be done!

DOT. [Suddenly to herself] Ha! When Father went up to have his glove buttoned!

There is a sound, JACKSON has come in from the corridor.

JACKSON. [To DOT] If you please, Miss, Studdenham's brought up the other two pups. He's just outside. Will you kindly take a look at them, he says?

There is silence.

DOT. [Suddenly] We can't.

CHRISTINE. Not just now, Jackson.

JACKSON. Is Studdenham and the pups to wait, M'm?

DOT shakes her head violently. But STUDDENHAM is seen already standing in the doorway, with a spaniel puppy in either side-pocket. He comes in, and JACKSON stands waiting behind him.

STUDDENHAM. This fellow's the best, Miss Dot. [He protrudes the right-hand pocket] I was keeping him for my girl—a proper breedy one—takes after his father.

The girls stare at him in silence.

DOT. [Hastily] Thanks, Studdenham, I see.

STUDDENHAM. I won't take 'em out in here. They're rather bold yet.

CHRISTINE. [Desperately] No, no, of course.

STUDDENHAM. Then you think you'd like him, Miss Dot? The other's got a white chest; she's a lady.

[He protrudes the left-hand pocket.

DOT. Oh, yes! Studdenham; thanks, thanks awfully.

STUDDENHAM. Wonderful faithful creatures; follow you like a woman. You can't shake 'em off anyhow. [He protrudes the right-hand pocket] My girl, she'd set her heart on him, but she'll just have to do without.

DOT. [As though galvanised] Oh! no, I can't take it away from her.

STUDDENHAM. Bless you, she won't mind! That's settled, then. [He turns to the door. To the puppy] Ah! would you! Tryin' to wriggle out of it! Regular young limb!

[He goes out, followed by JACKSON.

CHRISTINE. How ghastly!

DOT. [Suddenly catching sight of the book in her hand] "Caste!"

[She gives vent to a short sharp laugh.

The curtain falls.

ACT III

It is five o'clock of the same day. The scene is the smoking-room, with walls of Leander red, covered by old steeplechase and hunting prints. Armchairs encircle a high-fender hearth, in which a fire is burning. The curtains are not yet drawn across mullioned windows, but electric light is burning. There are two doors, leading, the one to the billiard-room, the other to the corridor. BILL is pacing up and down; HAROLD, at the fireplace, stands looking at him with commiseration.

BILL. What's the time?

HAROLD. Nearly five. They won't be in yet, if that's any consolation. Always a good meet—[softly] as the tiger said when he ate the man.

BILL. By Jove! You're the only person I can stand within a mile of me, Harold.

HAROLD. Old boy! Do you seriously think you're going to make it any better by marrying her?

BILL shrugs his shoulders, still pacing the room.

HAROLD. Well, then?

BILL. Look here! I'm not the sort that finds it easy to say things.

HAROLD. No, old man.

BILL. But I've got a kind of self-respect though you wouldn't think it!

HAROLD. My dear old chap!

BILL. This is about as low-down a thing as one could have done, I suppose—one's own mother's maid; we've known her since she was so high. I see it now that—I've got over the attack.

HAROLD. But, heavens! if you're no longer keen on her, Bill! Do apply your reason, old boy.

There is silence; while BILL again paces up and down.

BILL. If you think I care two straws about the morality of the thing——

HAROLD. Oh! my dear old man! Of course not!

BILL. It's simply that I shall feel such a d—d skunk, if I leave her in the lurch, with everybody knowing. Try it yourself; you'd soon see!

HAROLD. Poor old chap!

BILL. It's not as if she'd tried to force me into it. And she's a soft little thing. Why I ever made such a sickening ass of myself, I can't think. I never meant——

HAROLD. No, I know! But, don't do anything rash, Bill; keep your head, old man!

BILL. I don't see what loss I should be, if I did clear out of the country. The sound of cannoning billiard-balls is heard] Who's that knocking the balls about?

HAROLD. John, I expect.

The sound ceases.

BILL. He's coming in here. Can't stand that!

As LATTER appears from the billiard-room, he goes hurriedly out.

LATTER. Was that Bill?

HAROLD. Yes.

LATTER. Well?

HAROLD. [Pacing up and down in his turn] Cat on hot bricks is nothing to him. This is the sort of thing you read of in books, John! What price your argument with Ronny now? Well, it's not too late for you luckily.

LATTER. What do you mean?

HAROLD. You needn't connect yourself with this eccentric family!

LATTER. I'm not a bounder, Harold.

HAROLD. Good!

LATTER. It's terrible for your sisters.

HAROLD. Deuced lucky we haven't a lot of people staying here! Poor Mother! John, I feel awfully bad about this. If something isn't done, pretty mess I shall be in.

LATTER. How?

HAROLD. There's no entail. If the Governor cuts Bill off, it'll all come to me.

LATTER. Oh!

HAROLD. Poor old Bill! I say, the play! Nemesis! What? Moral! Caste don't matter. Got us fairly on the hop.

LATTER. It's too bad of Bill. It really is. He's behaved disgracefully.

HAROLD. [Warmly] Well! There are thousands of fellows who'd never dream of sticking to the girl, considering what it means.

LATTER. Perfectly disgusting!

HAROLD. Hang you, John! Haven't you any human sympathy? Don't you know how these things come about? It's like a spark in a straw-yard.

LATTER. One doesn't take lighted pipes into straw-yards unless one's an idiot, or worse.

HAROLD. H'm! [With a grin] You're not allowed tobacco. In the good old days no one would have thought anything of this. My great-grandfather—— LATTER. Spare me your great-grandfather.

HAROLD. I could tell you of at least a dozen men I know who've been through this same business, and got off scot-free; and now because Bill's going to play the game, it'll smash him up.

LATTER. Why didn't he play the game at the beginning?

HAROLD. I can't stand your sort, John. When a thing like this happens, all you can do is to cry out: Why didn't he——? Why didn't she——? What's to be done—that's the point!

LATTER. Of course he'll have to——

HAROLD. Ha!

LATTER. What do you mean by—that?

HAROLD. Look here, John! You feel in your bones that a marriage'll be hopeless, just as I do, knowing Bill and the girl and everything! Now don't you?

LATTER. The whole thing is—is most unfortunate.

HAROLD. By Jove! I should think it was!

As he speaks CHRISTINE and KEITH come in from the billiard-room. He is still in splashed hunting clothes, and looks exceptionally weathered, thin-lipped, reticent. He lights a cigarette, and sinks into an armchair. Behind them DOT and JOAN have come stealing in.

CHRISTINE. I've told Ronny.

JOAN. This waiting for Father to be told is awful.

HAROLD. [To KEITH] Where did you leave the old man?

KEITH. Clackenham. He'll be home in ten minutes.

DOT. Mabel's going.

They all stir, as if at fresh consciousness of discomfiture.

DOT. She walked into Gracely, and sent herself a telegram.

HAROLD. Phew!

DOT. And we shall say good-bye, as if nothing had happened!

HAROLD. It's up to you, Ronny.

KEITH, looking at JOAN, slowly emits smoke; and LATTER passing his arm through JOAN'S, draws her away with him into the billiard-room.

KEITH. Dot?

DOT. I'm not a squeamy squirrel.

KEITH. Has anybody seen the girl since?

DOT. Yes.

HAROLD. Well?

DOT. She's just sitting there.

CHRISTINE. [In a hard voice] As we're all doing.

DOT. She's so soft, that's what's so horrible. If one could only feel——!

KEITH. She's got to face the music like the rest of us.

DOT. Music! Squeaks! Ugh! The whole thing's like a concertina, and some one jigging it!

They all turn as the door opens, and a FOOTMAN enters with a tray of whisky, gin, lemons, and soda water. In dead silence the FOOTMAN puts the tray down.

HAROLD. [Forcing his voice] Did you get a run, Ronny? [As KEITH nods] What point?

KEITH. Eight mile.

FOOTMAN. Will you take tea, sir?

KEITH. No, thanks, Charles!

In dead silence again the FOOTMAN goes out, and they all loo after him.

HAROLD. [Below his breath] Goo Gad! That's a queeze of it!

KEITH. What's our line of country t be?

CHRISTINE. All depends on Father.

KEITH. Sir William's between th devil and the deep sea, as it strikes m

CHRISTINE. He'll simply forbid it u terly, of course.

KEITH. H'm! Hard Case! Man wh reads family prayers, and lessons c Sunday forbids son to——

CHRISTINE. Ronny!

KEITH. Great Scott! I'm not sayin Bill ought to marry her. She's got t stand the racket. But your dad will hav a tough job to take up that position.

DOT. Awfully funny!

CHRISTINE. What on earth d'yo mean, Dot?

DOT. Morality in one eye, and you title in the other!

CHRISTINE. Rubbish!

HAROLD. You're all reckoning with out your Bill.

KEITH. Ye-es. Sir William can c him off; no mortal power can help th title going down, if Bill chooses to b such a——

[He draws in his breath with sharp hiss.

HAROLD. I won't take what Bill ough to have; nor would any of you girls, should think——

CHRISTINE AND DOT. Of course no

KEITH. [Patting his wife's arm Hardly the point, is it?

DOT. If it wasn't for Mother! Freda just as much of a lady as most girl Why shouldn't he marry her, and go Canada? It's what he's really fit fo

HAROLD. Steady on, Dot!

DOT. Well, imagine him in Parli ment! That's what he'll come to, if stays here—jolly for the country!

CHRISTINE. Don't be cynical! W must find a way of stopping Bill.

DOT. Me cynical!

CHRISTINE. Let's go and beg hi Ronny!

KEITH. No earthly! The only hope in the girl.

DOT. She hasn't the stuff in her!

HAROLD. I say! What price young Dunning! Right about face! Poor old lad!

CHRISTINE. It's past joking, Harold!

DOT. [Gloomily] Old Studdenham's better than most relations by marriage!

KEITH. Thanks!

CHRISTINE. It's ridiculous—monstrous! It's fantastic!

HAROLD. [Holding up his hand] There's his horse going round. He's in!

They turn from listening to the sound, to see LADY CHESHIRE coming from the billiard-room. She is very pale. They all rise and DOT puts an arm round her; while KEITH pushes forward his chair. JOAN and LATTER too have come stealing back.

LADY CHESHIRE. Thank you, Ronny! [She sits down.

DOT. Mother, you're shivering! Shall get you a fur?

LADY CHESHIRE. No, thanks, dear!

DOT. [In a low voice] Play up, Mother darling!

LADY CHESHIRE. [Straightening herself] What sort of a run, Ronny?

KEITH. Quite fair, M'm. Brazier's to Caffyn's Dyke, good straight line.

LADY CHESHIRE. And the young horse?

KEITH. Carries his ears in your mouth a bit, that's all. [Putting his hand on her shoulder] Cheer up, Mem-Sahib!

CHRISTINE. Mother, must anything be said to Father? Ronny thinks it all depends on her. Can't you use your influence?

LADY CHESHIRE shakes her head.

CHRISTINE. But, Mother, it's desperate.

DOT. Shut up, Chris! Of course Mother can't. We simply couldn't beg her to let us off!

CHRISTINE. There must be some way. What do you think in your heart, Mother?

DOT. Leave Mother alone!

CHRISTINE. It must be faced, now or never.

DOT. [In a low voice] Haven't you any self-respect?

CHRISTINE. We shall be the laughing-stock of the whole county. Oh! Mother, do speak to her! You know it'll be misery for both of them.

LADY CHESHIRE bows her head.

CHRISTINE. Well, then?

LADY CHESHIRE shakes her head.

CHRISTINE. Not even for Bill's sake?

DOT. Chris!

CHRISTINE. Well, for heaven's sake, speak to Bill again, Mother! We ought all to go on our knees to him.

LADY CHESHIRE. He's with your father now.

HAROLD. Poor old Bill!

CHRISTINE. [Passionately] He didn't think of us! That wretched girl!

LADY CHESHIRE. Chris!

CHRISTINE. There are limits.

LADY CHESHIRE. Not to self-control.

CHRISTINE. No, Mother! I can't—I never shall—You must speak to Freda again! You know what Bill is. He rushes his fences so, when he gets his head down. Oh! do try! It's only fair to her, and all of us!

LADY CHESHIRE. [Painfully] There are things one can't do.

CHRISTINE. But it's Bill! I know you can make her give him up, if you'll only say all you can. And, after all, what's coming won't affect her as if she'd been a lady. Only you can do it, Mother. Do back me up, all of you! It's the only way!

Hypnotised by their private longing for what CHRISTINE has been urging, they have all fixed their eyes on LADY CHESHIRE, who looks from face to face, and moves her hands as if in physical pain.

CHRISTINE. [Softly] Mother!

LADY CHESHIRE suddenly rises, looking towards the billiard-room door, listening. They all follow her eyes. She sits down again, passing her hand over her lips, as SIR WILLIAM enters. His hunting clothes are splashed; his face very grim and set. He walks to the fire without a glance at any one, and stands looking down into it. Very quietly, every one but LADY CHESHIRE steals away.

LADY CHESHIRE. What have you done?

SIR WILLIAM. You there!

LADY CHESHIRE. Don't keep me in suspense!

SIR WILLIAM. The fool! My God! Dorothy! I didn't think I had a blackguard for a son, who was a fool into the bargain.

LADY CHESHIRE. [Rising] If he were a blackguard he would not be what you call a fool.

SIR WILLIAM. [After staring angrily, makes her a slight bow] Very well!

LADY CHESHIRE. [In a low voice] Bill, don't be harsh. It's all too terrible.

SIR WILLIAM. Sit down, my dear.

She resumes her seat, and he turns back to the fire.

SIR WILLIAM. In all my life I've never been face to face with a thing like this. [Gripping the mantel-piece so hard that his hands and arms are seen shaking] You ask me to be calm. I am trying to be. Be good enough in turn not to take his part against me.

LADY CHESHIRE. Bill!

SIR WILLIAM. I am trying to think. I understand that you've known this—piece of news since this morning. I've known it ten minutes. Give me a little time, please. [Then, after a silence] Where's the girl?

LADY CHESHIRE. In the workroom.

SIR WILLIAM. [Raising his clenched fist] What in God's name was he about?

LADY CHESHIRE. What have you said to him?

SIR WILLIAM. Nothing—by a miracle. [He breaks away from the fire and walks up and down] My family goes back to the thirteenth century. Nowadays they laugh at that! I don't! Nowadays they laugh at everything—they even laugh at the word lady—I married you, and I don't. . . . Married his mother's maid! By George! Dorothy! I don't know what we've done to deserve this; it's a death-blow! I'm not prepared to sit down and wait for it. By Gad! I am not. [With sudden fierceness] There are plenty in these days who'll be glad enough for this to happen; plenty of these d—d Socialists and Radicals, who'll laugh their souls out over what they haven't the bowels to see's a—tragedy. I say it would be a tragedy; for you, and me, and all us. You and I were brought up, a we've brought the children up, w certain beliefs, and wants, and hab A man's past—his traditions—he ca get rid of them. They're—they're hi self! [Suddenly] It shan't go on.

LADY CHESHIRE. What's to prev it?

SIR WILLIAM. I utterly forbid t piece of madness. I'll stop it.

LADY CHESHIRE. But the thing can't stop.

SIR WILLIAM. Provision must made.

LADY CHESHIRE. The unwritten la

SIR WILLIAM. What! [Suddenly p ceiving what she is alluding to] You thinking of young—young——[Short I don't see the connection.

LADY CHESHIRE. What's so awful, that the boy's trying to do what's lo —and we—his father and mother—

SIR WILLIAM. I'm not going to see eldest son ruin his life. I must thi this out.

LADY CHESHIRE. [Beneath breath] I've tried that—it doesn't he

SIR WILLIAM. This girl, who w born on the estate, had the run of t house—brought up with money earn from me—nothing but kindness fr all of us; she's broken the comm rules of gratitude and decency—s lured him on, I haven't a doubt!

LADY CHESHIRE. [To herself] In way, I suppose.

SIR WILLIAM. What! It's ruin. We always been here. Who the deuce a we if we leave this place? D'you thi we could stay? Go out and meet eve body just as if nothing had happene Good-bye to any prestige, political, cial, or anything! This is the sort business nothing can get over. I've s it before. As to that other matter— soon forgotten—constantly happen —— Why, my own grandfather——

LADY CHESHIRE. Does he help?

SIR WILLIAM. [Stares before hi silence—suddenly] You must go to girl. She's soft. She'll never hold against you.

LADY CHESHIRE. I did before I k what was in front of her—I said a ould. I can't go again now. How can I, Bill?

SIR WILLIAM. What are you going to o, then—fold your hands? [Then, as LADY CHESHIRE makes a movement of istress] If he marries her, I've done vith him. As far as I'm concerned he'll ease to exist. The title—I can't help. My God! Does that meet your wishes?

LADY CHESHIRE. [With sudden fire] 'ou've no right to put such an alterna- ve to me. I'd give ten years of my life prevent this marriage. I'll go to Bill. I'll beg him on my knees.

SIR WILLIAM. Then why can't you go the girl? She deserves no considera- on. It's not a question of morality. Morality be damned!

LADY CHESHIRE. But not self-respect.

SIR WILLIAM. What! You're his nother!

LADY CHESHIRE. I have been to her; 've tried; I [putting her hand to her hroat] couldn't get it out.

SIR WILLIAM. [Staring at her] You on't?

LADY CHESHIRE. I can't, Bill. It seems o—caddish, so mean.

SIR WILLIAM. In the whole course of ur married life, Dorothy, I've never nown you set yourself up against me. resent this, I warn you—I resent it. end the girl to me.

With a look back at him LADY CHESHIRE goes out into the cor- ridor.

SIR WILLIAM. This is a nice end to ny day!

He takes a small china cup from off the mantelpiece; it breaks with the pressure of his hand, and falls into the fireplace. While he stands looking at it blankly, there is a knock.

SIR WILLIAM. Come in!

FREDA enters from the corridor.

SIR WILLIAM. I've asked you to be ood enough to come, in order that— pointing to chair] You may sit down.

But though she advances two or three steps, she does not sit down.

SIR WILLIAM. This is a sad business.

FREDA. [Below her breath] Yes, Sir William.

SIR WILLIAM. [Becoming conscious of the depths of feeling before him] I —er—are you attached to my son?

FREDA. [In a whisper] Yes.

SIR WILLIAM. It's very painful to me to have to do this. [He turns away from her and speaks to the fire] I sent for you—to—ask—— [quickly] How old are you?

FREDA. Twenty-two.

SIR WILLIAM. [More resolutely] Do you expect me to—sanction such a mad idea as a marriage?

FREDA. I don't expect anything.

SIR WILLIAM. You know—you have- n't earned the right to be considered.

FREDA. Not yet!

SIR WILLIAM. What! That oughtn't to help you! On the contrary. Now brace yourself up, and listen to me!

She stands waiting to hear her sentence. SIR WILLIAM looks at her; and his glance gradually wavers.

SIR WILLIAM. I've not a word to s y for my son. He's behaved like a scamp.

FREDA. Oh! no!

SIR WILLIAM. [With a silencing gesture] At the same time——What made you forget yourself? You've no excuse, you know.

FREDA. No.

SIR WILLIAM. You'll deserve all you'll get. Confound it! To expect me to—— It's intolerable! Do you know where my son is?

FREDA. [Faintly] I think he's in the billiard-room with my lady.

SIR WILLIAM. [With renewed resolution] I wanted to—to put it to you—as a—as a—what! [Seeing her stand so absolutely motionless, looking at him, he turns abruptly, and opens the billiard-room door] I'll speak to him first. Come in here, please! [To FREDA] Go in, and wait!

LADY CHESHIRE and BILL come in, and FREDA passing them, goes into the billiard-room to wait.

SIR WILLIAM. [Speaking with a pause between each sentence] Your mother and I have spoken of this—calamity. I imagine that even you have some dim perception of the monstrous nature of it. I must tell you this: If you do this mad thing, you fend for yourself. You- 'll receive nothing from me now or hereafter. I consider that only due to the position our family has always held here. Your brother will take your place. We shall get on as best we can without you. [There is a dead silence, till he adds sharply] Well!

BILL. I shall marry her.

LADY CHESHIRE. Oh! Bill! Without love—without anything!

BILL. All right, Mother! [To SIR WILLIAM] You've mistaken your man, sir. Because I'm a rotter in one way, I'm not necessarily a rotter in all. You put the butt end of the pistol to Dunning's head yesterday, you put the other end to mine to-day. Well! [He turns round to go out] Let the damned thing off!

LADY CHESHIRE. Bill!

BILL. [Turning to her] I'm not going to leave her in the lurch.

SIR WILLIAM. Do me the justice to admit that I have not attempted to persuade you to.

BILL. No! you've chucked me out. I don't see what else you could have done under the circumstances. It's quite all right. But if you wanted me to throw her over, Father, you went the wrong way to work, that's all; neither you nor I are very good at seeing consequences.

SIR WILLIAM. Do you realise your position?

BILL. [Grimly] I've a fair notion of it.

SIR WILLIAM. [With a sudden outburst] You have none—not the faintest, brought up as you've been.

BILL. I didn't bring myself up.

SIR WILLIAM. [With a movement of uncontrolled anger, to which his son responds] You—ungrateful young dog!

LADY CHESHIRE. How can you—both?

They drop their eyes, and stand silent.

SIR WILLIAM. [With grimly suppressed emotion] I am speaking under the stress of very great pain—some consideration is due to me. This is a disaster which I never expected to have to face. It is a matter which I naturally can never hope to forget. I shall carry this down to my death. We shall all of us do that. I have had the misfortune all my life to believe in o position here—to believe that we oun ed for something—that the count wanted us. I have tried to do my du by that position. I find in one mome that it is gone—smoke—gone. M philosophy is not equal to that. T countenance this marriage would unnatural.

BILL. I know. I'm sorry. I've got h into this—I don't see any other way ou It's a bad business for me, Father, well as for you——

He stops, seeing that JACKSON h come in, and is standing the waiting.

JACKSON. Will you speak to Studde ham, Sir William? It's about you Dunning.

After a moment of dead silenc SIR WILLIAM nods, and the bu ler withdraws.

BILL. [Stolidly] He'd better be tol

SIR WILLIAM. He shall be.

STUDDENHAM enters, and touch his forehead to them all with comprehensive gesture.

STUDDENHAM. Good evenin', my lad Evenin', Sir William! Glad to be ab to tell you, the young man's to do th proper thing. Asked me to let yo know, Sir William. Banns'll be up ne Sunday. [Struck by the silence, he loo round at all three in turn, and sudden seeing that LADY CHESHIRE is shive ing] Beg pardon, my lady, you're sha in' like a leaf!

BILL. [Blurting it out] I've a paint piece of news for you, Studdenha I'm engaged to your daughter. We're be married at once.

STUDDENHAM. I—don't—understat you—sir.

BILL. The fact is, I've behaved bad but I mean to put it straight.

STUDDENHAM. I'm a little deaf. I you say—my daughter?

SIR WILLIAM. There's no use mi ing matters, Studdenham. It's a th derbolt—young Dunning's case c again.

STUDDENHAM. I don't rightly foll She's—— You've——! I must see daughter. Have the goodness to s for her, m'lady.

LADY CHESHIRE goes to the billiard-room, and calls: "Freda, come here, please."

STUDDENHAM. [To SIR WILLIAM] You tell me that my daughter's in the position of that girl owing to your son? Men ha' been shot for less.

BILL. If you like to have a pot at me, Studdenham—you're welcome.

STUDDENHAM. [Averting his eyes from BILL at the sheer atrocity of this sequel to his words] I've been in your service five and twenty years, Sir William; but this is man to man—this is!

SIR WILLIAM. I don't deny that, Studdenham.

STUDDENHAM. [With eyes shifting in sheer anger] No—'twouldn't be very easy. Did I understand him to say that he offers her marriage?

SIR WILLIAM. You did.

STUDDENHAM. [Into his beard] Well that's something! [Moving his hands as if wringing the neck of a bird] I'm trying to see the rights o' this.

SIR WILLIAM. [Bitterly] You've all your work cut out for you, Studdenham.

Again STUDDENHAM makes the unconscious wringing movement with his hands.

LADY CHESHIRE. [Turning from it with a sort of horror] Don't, Studdenham! Please!

STUDDENHAM. What's that, m'lady?

LADY CHESHIRE. [Under her breath] Your—your—hands.

While STUDDENHAM is still staring at her, FREDA is seen standing in the doorway, like a black ghost.

STUDDENHAM. Come here! You! [FREDA moves a few steps towards her other] When did you start this?

FREDA. [Almost inaudibly] In the summer, Father.

LADY CHESHIRE. Don't be harsh to her!

STUDDENHAM. Harsh! [His eyes again move from side to side as if pain and anger had bewildered them. Then poking sideways at FREDA, but in a gentler voice] And when did you tell him about—what's come to you?

FREDA. Last night.

STUDDENHAM. Oh! [With sudden menace] You young——! [He makes a convulsive movement of one hand; then, in the silence, seems to lose grip of his thoughts, and puts his hand up to his head] I want to clear me mind a bit—I don't see it plain at all. [Without looking at BILL] 'Tis said there's been an offer of marriage?

BILL. I've made it, I stick to it.

STUDDENHAM. Oh! [With slow, puzzled anger] I want time to get the pith o' this. You don't say anything, Sir William?

SIR WILLIAM. The facts are all before you.

STUDDENHAM. [Scarcely moving his lips] M'lady?

LADY CHESHIRE is silent.

STUDDENHAM. [Stammering] My girl was—was good enough for any man. It's not for him that's—that's—to look down on her. [To FREDA] You hear the handsome offer that's been made you? Well?

FREDA moistens her lips and tries to speak, but cannot.

STUDDENHAM. If nobody's to speak a word, we won't get much forrarder. I'd like for you to say what's in your mind. Sir William.

SIR WILLIAM. I—If my son marries her he'll have to make his own way.

STUDDENHAM. [Savagely] I'm not puttin' thought to that.

SIR WILLIAM. I didn't suppose you were, Studdenham. It appears to rest with your daughter. [He suddenly takes out his handkerchief, and puts it to his forehead] Infernal fires they make up here!

LADY CHESHIRE, who is again shivering desperately, as if with intense cold, makes a violent attempt to control her shuddering.

STUDDENHAM. [Suddenly] There's luxuries that's got to be paid for. [To FREDA] Speak up, now.

FREDA turns slowly and looks up at SIR WILLIAM; he involuntarily raises his hand to his mouth. Her eyes travel on to LADY CHESHIRE, who faces her, but so deadly pale that she looks as if she were going to faint. The girl's gaze passes on to BILL, standing rigid, with his jaw set.

FREDA. I want—[Then flinging her arm up over her eyes, she turns from him] No!

SIR WILLIAM. Ah!

At that sound of profound relief, STUDDENHAM, whose eyes have been following his daughter's, moves towards SIR WILLIAM, all his emotion turned into sheer angry pride.

STUDDENHAM. Don't be afraid, Sir. William! We want none of you! She'll not force herself where she's not welcome. She may ha' slipped her good name, but she'll keep her proper pride. I'll have no charity marriage in my family.

SIR WILLIAM. Steady, Studdenham!

STUDDENHAM. If the young gentleman has tired of her in three months, as a blind man can see by the looks of him —she's not for him!

BILL. [Stepping forward] I'm ready to make it up to her.

STUDDENHAM. Keep back, there! [He takes hold of FREDA, and looks around him] Well! She's not the first this has happened to since the world began, an' she won't be the last. Come away, now, come away!

Taking FREDA by the shoulders, he guides her towards the door.

SIR WILLIAM. Damn it, Studdenham Give us credit for something!

STUDDENHAM. [Turning—his face a eyes lighted up by a sort of smili snarl] Ah! I do that, Sir William. B there's things that can't be undone!

[He follows FREDA o

As the door closes, SIR WILLIAM calm gives way. He staggers p his wife, and sinks heavily, though exhausted, into a ch by the fire. BILL, following FRE and STUDDENHAM, has stopp at the shut door. LADY CHES IRE moves swiftly close to hi The door of the billiard-room opened, and DOT appears. With glance round, she crosses quick to her mother.

DOT. [In a low voice] Mabel's ju going, Mother! [Almost whisperin Where's Freda? Is it—— Has s really had the pluck?

LADY CHESHIRE bending her he for "Yes," goes out into the b liard-room. DOT clasps her han together, and standing there the middle of the room, loo from her brother to her fath from her father to her brother. quaint little pitying smile com on her lips. She gives a fa shrug of her shoulders.

The curtain falls.

A TRAGEDY IN FOUR ACTS

ACT I

A TRAGEDY IN FOUR ACTS

The scene is the managing clerk's room, at the offices of JAMES AND WALTER HOW, on a July morning. The room is old-fashioned, furnished with well-worn mahogany and leather, and lined with tin boxes and estate plans. It has three doors. Two of them are close together in the centre of a wall. One of these two doors leads to the outer office, which is only divided from the managing clerk's room by a partition of wood and clear glass; and when the door into this outer office is opened there can be seen the wide outer door leading out on to the stone stairway of the building. The other of these two centre doors leads to the junior clerk's room. The third door is that leading to the partners' room.

The managing clerk, COKESON, is sitting at his table adding up figures in a pass-book, and murmuring their numbers to himself. He is a man of sixty, wearing spectacles; rather short, with a bald head, and an honest, pug-dog face. He is dressed in a well-worn black frock-coat and pepper-and-salt trousers.

COKESON. And five's twelve, and three -fifteen, nineteen, twenty-three, thirty-vo, forty-one—and carry four. [He cks the page, and goes on murmuring] ive, seven, twelve, seventeen, twenty-ur and nine, thirty-three, thirteen and rry one.

He again makes a tick. The outer office door is opened, and SWEEDLE, the office-boy, appears, closing the door behind him. He is a pale youth of sixteen, with spiky hair.

COKESON. [With grumpy expectation] And carry one.

SWEEDLE. There's a party wants to see Falder, Mr. Cokeson.

COKESON. Five, nine, sixteen, twenty-one, twenty-nine—and carry two. Sent him to Morris's. What name?

SWEEDLE. Honeywill.

COKESON. What's his business?

SWEEDLE. It's a woman.

COKESON. A lady?

SWEEDLE. No, a person.

COKESON. Ask her in. Take this pass-book to Mr. James.

[He closes the pass-book.

SWEEDLE. [Reopening the door] Will you come in, please?

RUTH HONEYWILL comes in. She is a tall woman, twenty-six years old, unpretentiously dressed, with black hair and eyes, and an ivory-white, clear-cut face. She stands very still, having a natural dignity of pose and gesture.

SWEEDLE goes out into the partners' room with the pass-book.

COKESON. [Looking round at RUTH] The young man's out. [Suspiciously] State your business, please.

RUTH. [Who speaks in a matter-of-fact voice, and with a slight West-Country accent] It's a personal matter, sir.

COKESON. We don't allow private callers here. Will you leave a message?

RUTH. I'd rather see him, please.

[She narrows her dark eyes and gives him a honeyed look.

COKESON. [Expanding] It's all against the rules. Suppose I had my friends here to see me! It'd never do!

RUTH. No, sir.

COKESON. [A little taken aback] Exactly! And here you are wanting to see a junior clerk!

RUTH. Yes, sir; I must see him.

COKESON. [Turning full round to her with a sort of outraged interest] But this is a lawyer's office. Go to his private address.

RUTH. He's not there.

COKESON. [Uneasy] Are you related to the party?

RUTH. No, sir.

COKESON. [In real embarrassment] I don't know what to say. It's no affair of the office.

RUTH. But what am I to do?

COKESON. Dear me! I can't tell you that.

SWEEDLE comes back. He crosses to the outer office and passes through into it, with a quizzical look at COKESON, carefully leaving the door an inch or two open.

COKESON. [Fortified by this look] This won't do, you know, this won't do at all. Suppose one of the partners came in!

An incoherent knocking and chuckling is heard from the outer door of the outer office.

SWEEDLE. [Putting his head in] There's some children outside here.

RUTH. They're mine, please.

SWEEDLE. Shall I hold them in check?

RUTH. They're quite small, sir.

[She takes a step towards COKESON.

COKESON. You mustn't take up his time in office hours; we're a clerk short as it is.

RUTH. It's a matter of life and death.

COKESON. [Again outraged] Life and death!

SWEEDLE. Here is Falder.

FALDER has entered through the outer office. He is a pale, good-looking young man, with quick, rather scared eyes. He moves towards the door of the clerk's office, and stands there irresolute.

COKESON. Well, I'll give you a minute. It's not regular.

Taking up a bundle of papers, he goes out into the partners' room.

RUTH. [In a low, hurried voice] He's on the drink again, Will. He tried to cut my throat last night. I came out with the children before he was awak I went round to you——

FALDER. I've changed my digs.

RUTH. Is it all ready for to-night?

FALDER. I've got the tickets. Meet m 11.45 at the booking office. For Goo sake don't forget we're man and wif [Looking at her with tragic intensit Ruth!

RUTH. You're not afraid of goin are you?

FALDER. Have you got your thing and the children's?

RUTH. Had to leave them, for fe of waking Honeywill, all but one ba I can't go near home again.

FALDER. [Wincing] All that mon gone for nothing. How much must y have?

RUTH. Six pounds—I could do wi that, I think.

FALDER. Don't give away where we' going. [As if to himself] When I g out there I mean to forget it all.

RUTH. If you're sorry, say so. I sooner he killed me than take y against your will.

FALDER. [With a queer smile] We' got to go. I don't care; I'll have you.

RUTH. You've just to say; it's n too late.

FALDER. It is too late. Here's sev pounds. Booking office—11.45 to-nigh If you weren't what you are to m Ruth——!

RUTH. Kiss me!

They cling together passionate then fly apart just as COKES re-enters the room. RUTH tur and goes out through the out office. COKESON advances delibe ately to his chair and seats hi self.

COKESON. This isn't right, Falder.

FALDER. It shan't occur again, sir.

COKESON. It's an improper use these premises.

FALDER. Yes, sir.

COKESON. You quite understand—t party was in some distress; and, ha ing children with her, I allowed feelings—[He opens a drawer and p duces from it a tract] Just take th "Purity in the Home." It's a well-wi ten thing.

FALDER. [Taking it, with a peculiar expression] Thank you, sir.

COKESON. And look here, Falder, before Mr. Walter comes, have you finished up that cataloguing Davis had in hand before he left?

FALDER. I shall have done with it tomorrow, sir—for good.

COKESON. It's over a week since Davis went. Now it won't do, Falder. You're neglecting your work for private life. I shan't mention about the party having called, but——

FALDER. [Passing into his room] Thank you, sir.

COKESON stares at the door through which FALDER has gone out; then shakes his head, and is just settling down to write, when WALTER HOW comes in through the outer office. He is a rather refined-looking man of thirty-five, with a pleasant, almost apologetic voice.

WALTER. Good-morning, Cokeson.

COKESON. Morning, Mr. Walter.

WALTER. My father here?

COKESON. [Always with a certain patronage as to a young man who might be doing better] Mr. James has been here since eleven o'clock.

WALTER. I've been in to see the pictures, at the Guildhall.

COKESON. [Looking at him as though his eyes were exactly what was to be expected] Have you now—ye-es. This case of Boulter's—am I to send it to counsel?

WALTER. What does my father say?

COKESON. 'Aven't bothered him.

WALTER. Well, we can't be too careful.

COKESON. It's such a little thing—hardly worth the fees. I thought you'd do it yourself.

WALTER. Send it, please. I don't want the responsibility.

COKESON. [With an indescribable air of compassion] Just as you like. This "right-of-way" case—we've got 'em on the deeds.

WALTER. I know; but the intention was obviously to exclude that bit of common ground.

COKESON. We needn't worry about that. We're the right side of the law.

WALTER. I don't like it.

COKESON. [With an indulgent smile] We shan't want to set ourselves up against the law. Your father wouldn't waste his time doing that.

As he speaks JAMES HOW comes in from the partners' room. He is a shortish man, with white side-whiskers, plentiful grey hair, shrewd eyes, and gold pince-nez.

JAMES. Morning, Walter.

WALTER. How are you, Father?

COKESON. [Looking down his nose at the papers in his hand as though deprecating their size] I'll just take Boulter's lease in to young Falder to draft the instructions.

[He goes out into FALDER'S room.

WALTER. About that right-of-way case?

JAMES. Oh, well, we must go forward there. I thought you told me yesterday the firm's balance was over four hundred.

WALTER. So it is.

JAMES. [Holding out the pass-book to his son] Three—five—one, no recent cheques. Just get me out the cheque-book.

WALTER goes to a cupboard, unlocks a drawer, and produces a cheque-book.

JAMES. Tick the pounds in the counterfoils. Five, fifty-four, seven, five, twenty-eight, twenty, ninety, eleven, fifty-two, seventy-one. Tally?

WALTER. [Nodding] Can't understand. Made sure it was over four hundred.

JAMES. Give me the cheque-book. [He takes the cheque-book and cons the counterfoils] What's this ninety?

WALTER. Who drew it?

JAMES. You.

WALTER. [Taking the cheque-book] July 7th? That's the day I went down to look over the Trenton Estate—last Friday week; I came back on the Tuesday, you remember. But look here, Father, it was nine I drew a cheque for. Five guineas to Smithers and my expenses. It just covered all but half a crown.

JAMES. [Gravely] Let's look at that ninety cheque. [He sorts the cheque out from the bundle in the pocket of the pass-book] Seems all right. There's no nine here. This is bad. Who cashed that nine-pound cheque?

WALTER. [Puzzled and pained] Let's see! I was finishing Mrs. Reddy's will —only just had time; yes—I gave it to Cokeson.

JAMES. Look at that t y: that yours?

WALTER. [After consideration] My y's curl back a little; this doesn't.

JAMES. [As COKESON re-enters from FALDER'S room] We must ask him. Just come here and carry your mind back a bit, Cokeson. D'you remember cashing a cheque for Mr. Walter last Friday week—the day he went to Trenton?

COKESON. Ye-es. Nine pounds.

JAMES. Look at this. [Handing him the cheque.

COKESON. No! Nine pounds. My lunch was just coming in; and of course I like it hot; I gave the cheque to Davis to run round to the bank. He brought it back, all notes—you remember, Mr. Walter, you wanted some silver to pay your cab. [With a certain contemptuous compassion] Here, let me see. You've got the wrong cheque.

[He takes cheque-book and pass-book from WALTER.

WALTER. Afraid not.

COKESON. [Having seen for himself] It's funny.

JAMES. You gave it to Davis, and Davis sailed for Australia on Monday. Looks black, Cokeson.

COKESON. [Puzzled and upset] Why this'd be a felony! No, no! there's some mistake.

JAMES. I hope so.

COKESON. There's never been anything of that sort in the office the twenty-nine years I've been here.

JAMES. [Looking at cheque and counterfoil] This is a very clever bit of work; a warning to you not to leave space after your figures, Walter.

WALTER. [Vexed] Yes, I know—I was in such a tearing hurry that afternoon.

COKESON. [Suddenly] This has upset me.

JAMES. The counterfoil altered too very deliberate piece of swindlin What was Davis's ship?

WALTER. City of Rangoon.

JAMES. We ought to wire and ha him arrested at Naples; he can't there yet.

COKESON. His poor young wife. liked the young man. Dear, oh dea In this office!

WALTER. Shall I go to the bank a ask the cashier?

JAMES. [Grimly] Bring him rou here. And ring up Scotland Yard.

WALTER. Really?

He goes out through the ou office. JAMES paces the room. stops and looks at COKESON, w is disconsolately rubbing knees of his trousers.

JAMES. Well, Cokeson! There's som thing in character, isn't there?

COKESON. [Looking at him over spectacles] I don't quite take you, sir.

JAMES. Your story would sou d——d thin to any one who didn't kn you.

COKESON. Ye-es! [He laughs. Th with sudden gravity] I'm sorry f that young man. I feel it as if it w my own son, Mr. James.

JAMES. A nasty business!

COKESON. It unsettles you. All go on regular, and then a thing like th happens. Shan't relish my lunch to-da

JAMES. As bad as that, Cokeson?

COKESON. It makes you think. [Con dentially] He must have had tempt tion.

JAMES. Not so fast. We haven't co victed him yet.

COKESON. I'd sooner have lost month's salary than had this happen

[He broo

JAMES. I hope that fellow will hu up.

COKESON. [Keeping things pleas for the cashier] It isn't fifty yards, M James. He won't be a minute.

JAMES. The idea of dishonesty ab this office—it hits me hard, Cokeso

[He goes towards the door of partners' room.

SWEEDLE. [Entering quietly, to Co SON in a low voice] She's popped gain, sir—something she forgot to say Falder.

COKESON. [Roused from his abstraction] Eh? Impossible. Send her away!

JAMES. What's that?

COKESON. Nothing, Mr. James. A rivate matter. Here, I'll come myself. He goes into the outer office as JAMES sses into the partners' room] Now, u really mustn't—we can't have anydy just now.

RUTH. Not for a minute, sir?

COKESON. Reely! Reely! I can't have If you want him, wait about; he'll going out for his lunch directly.

RUTH. Yes, sir.

WALTER, entering with the cashier, passes RUTH as she leaves the outer office.

COKESON. [To the cashier, who rembles a sedentary dragoon] Goodorning. [To WALTER] Your father's there.

WALTER crosses and goes into the partners' room.

COKESON. It's a nahsty, unpleasant tle matter, Mr. Cowley. I'm quite hamed to have to trouble you.

COWLEY. I remember the cheque quite ell. [As if it were a liver] Seemed in rfect order.

COKESON. Sit down, won't you? I'm t a sensitive man, but a think like this out the place—it's not nice. I like ople to be open and jolly together.

COWLEY. Quite so.

COKESON. [Buttonholing him, and ncing towards the partners' room] f course he's a young man. I've told m about it before now—leaving space ter his figures, but he will do it.

COWLEY. I should remember the per-n's face—quite a youth.

COKESON. I don't think we shall be le to show him to you, as a matter of ct.

JAMES and WALTER have come back from the partners' room.

JAMES. Good-morning, Mr. Cowley. ou've seen my son and myself, you've en Mr. Cokeson, and you've seen veedle, my office-boy. It was none of , I take it.

The cashier shakes his head with a smile

JAMES. Be so good as to sit there. Cokeson, engage Mr. Cowley in conversation, will you?

[He goes towards FALDER'S room.

COKESON. Just a word, Mr. James.

JAMES. Well?

COKESON. You don't want to upset the young man in there, do you? He's a nervous young feller.

JAMES. This must be thoroughly cleared up, Cokeson, for the sake of Falder's name, to say nothing of yours.

COKESON. [With some dignity] That'll look after itself, sir. He's been upset once this morning; I don't want him startled again.

JAMES. It's a matter of form; but I can't stand upon niceness over a thing like this—too serious. Just talk to Mr. Cowley. [He opens the door of FALDER'S room] Bring in the papers in Boulter's lease, will you, Falder?

COKESON. [Bursting into voice] Do you keep dogs?

The cashier, with his eyes fixed on the door, does not answer.

COKESON. You haven't such a thing as a bulldog pup you could spare me, I suppose?

At the look on the cashier's face his jaw drops, and he turns to see FALDER standing in the doorway, with his eyes fixed on COWLEY, like the eyes of a rabbit fastened on a snake.

FALDER. [Advancing with the papers] Here they are, sir!

JAMES. [Taking them] Thank you.

FALDER. Do you want me, sir?

JAMES. No, thanks.

FALDER turns and goes back into his own room. As he shuts the door JAMES gives the cashier an interrogative look, and the cashier nods.

JAMES. Sure? This isn't as we suspected.

COWLEY. Quite. He knew me. I suppose he can't slip out of that room?

COKESON. [Gloomily] There's only the window—a whole floor and a basement.

The door of FALDER'S room is quietly opened, and FALDER, with his hat in his hand, moves towards the door of the outer office.

JAMES. [Quietly] Where are you going, Falder?

FALDER. To have my lunch, sir.

JAMES. Wait a few minutes, would you? I want to speak to you about this lease.

FALDER. Yes, sir. [He goes back into his room.

COWLEY. If I'm wanted, I can swear that's the young man who cashed the cheque. It was the last cheque I handled that morning before my lunch. These are the numbers of the notes he had. [He puts a slip of paper on the table; then, brushing his hat round] Good-morning!

JAMES. Good-morning, Mr. Cowley!

COWLEY. [To COKESON] Good-morning.

COKESON. [With stupefaction] Good-morning.

The cashier goes out through the outer office. COKESON sits down in his chair, as though it were the only place left in the morass of his feelings.

WALTER. What are you going to do?

JAMES. Have him in. Give me the cheque and the counterfoil.

COKESON. I don't understand. I thought young Davis——

JAMES. We shall see.

WALTER. One moment, Father—have you thought it out?

JAMES. Call him in!

COKESON. [Rising with difficulty and opening FALDER'S door; hoarsely] Step in here a minute.

FALDER comes in.

FALDER. [Impressively] Yes, sir?

JAMES. [Turning to him suddenly with the cheque held out] You know this cheque, Falder?

FALDER. No, sir.

JAMES. Look at it. You cashed it last Friday week.

FALDER. Oh! yes, sir; that one—Davis gave it me.

JAMES. I know. And you gave Davis the cash?

FALDER. Yes, sir.

JAMES. When Davis gave you the cheque was it exactly like this?

FALDER. Yes, I think so, sir.

JAMES. You know that Mr. Wal drew that cheque for nine pounds?

FALDER. No, sir—ninety.

JAMES. Nine, Falder.

FALDER. [Faintly] I don't und stand, sir.

JAMES. The suggestion, of course, that the cheque was altered; whether you or Davis is the question.

FALDER. I—I——

COKESON. Take your time, take yo time.

FALDER. [Regaining his impassivi Not by me, sir.

JAMES. The cheque was handed Cokeson by Mr. Walter at one o'cloc we know that because Mr. Cokeso lunch had just arrived.

COKESON. I couldn't leave it.

JAMES. Exactly; he therefore ga the cheque to Davis. It was cashed you at 1.15. We know that because t cashier recollects it for the last cheq he handled before his lunch.

FALDER. Yes, sir, Davis gave it to because some friends were giving h a farewell luncheon.

JAMES. [Puzzled] You accuse Dav then?

FALDER. I don't know, sir—it's ve funny.

WALTER, who has come close to father, says something to him a low voice.

JAMES. Davis was not here ag after that Saturday, was he?

COKESON. [Anxious to be of assi ance to the young man, and seeing fa signs of their all being jolly once mo No, he sailed on the Monday.

JAMES. Was he, Falder?

FALDER. [Very faintly] No, sir.

JAMES. Very well, then, how do y account for the fact that this nou was added to the nine in the count foil on or after Tuesday?

COKESON. [Surprised] How's that

FALDER gives a sort of lurch; tries to pull himself together, he has gone all to pieces.

JAMES. [Very grimly] Out, afraid, Cokeson. The cheque-book mained in Mr. Walter's pocket till came back from Trenton on Tues norning. In the face of this, Falder, do ou still deny that you altered both heque and counterfoil?

FALDER. No, sir—no, Mr. How. I did , sir; I did it.

COKESON. [Succumbing to his feel-ngs] Dear, dear! what a thing to do!

FALDER. I wanted the money so badly, r. I didn't know what I was doing.

COKESON. However such a thing could ave come into your head!

FALDER. [Grasping at the words] I an't think, sir, really! It was just a inute of madness.

JAMES. A long minute, Falder. [Tap-ing the counterfoil] Four days at ast.

FALDER. Sir, I swear I didn't know hat I'd done till afterwards, and then hadn't the pluck. Oh! sir, look over it! ll pay the money back—I will, I omise.

JAMES. Go into your room.

FALDER, with a swift imploring look, goes back into his room. There is silence.

JAMES. About as bad a case as there uld be.

COKESON. To break the law like that in here!

WALTER. What's to be done?

JAMES. Nothing for it. Prosecute.

WALTER. It's his first offence.

JAMES. [Shaking his head] I've grave ubts of that. Too neat a piece of indling altogether.

COKESON. I shouldn't be surprised if was tempted.

JAMES. Life's one long temptation, keson.

COKESON. Ye-es, but I'm speaking of e flesh and the devil, Mr. James. ere was a woman come to see him is morning.

WALTER. The woman we passed as e came in just now. Is it his wife?

COKESON. No, no relation. [Restrain-g what in jollier circumstances would ve been a wink] A married person, ough.

WALTER. How do you know?

COKESON. Brought her children. [candalised] There they were outside e office.

JAMES. A real bad egg.

WALTER. I should like to give him a chance.

JAMES. I can't forgive him for the sneaky way he went to work—counting on our suspecting young Davis if the matter came to light. It was the merest accident the cheque-book stayed in your pocket.

WALTER. It must have been the temptation of a moment. He hadn't time.

JAMES. A man doesn't succumb like that in a moment, if he's a clean mind and habits. He's rotten; got the eyes of a man who can't keep his hands off when there's money about.

WALTER. [Dryly] We hadn't noticed that before.

JAMES. [Brushing the remark aside] I've seen lots of those fellows in my time. No doing anything with them except to keep 'em out of harm's way. They've got a blind spot.

WALTER. It's penal servitude.

COKESON. They're nahsty places—prisons.

JAMES. [Hesitating] I don't see how it's possible to spare him. Out of the question to keep him in this office—honesty's the sine qua non.

COKESON. [Hypnotised] Of course it is.

JAMES. Equally out of the question to send him out amongst people who've no knowledge of his character. One must think of society.

WALTER. But to brand him like this?

JAMES. If it had been a straightforward case I'd give him another chance. It's far from that. He has dissolute habits.

COKESON. I didn't say that—extenuating circumstances.

JAMES. Same thing. He's gone to work in the most cold-blooded way to defraud his employers, and cast the blame on an innocent man. If that's not a case for the law to take its course, I don't know what is.

WALTER. For the sake of his future, though.

JAMES. [Sarcastically] According to you, no one would ever prosecute.

WALTER. [Nettled] I hate the idea of it.

COKESON. We must have protection.

JAMES. This is degenerating into talk.

[He moves towards the partners' room.

WALTER. Put yourself in his place, Father.

JAMES. You ask too much of me.

WALTER. We can't possibly tell the pressure there was on him.

JAMES. You may depend on it, my boy, if a man is going to do this sort of thing he'll do it, pressure or no pressure; if he isn't nothing'll make him.

WALTER. He'll never do it again.

COKESON. [Fatuously] S'pose I were to have a talk with him. We don't want to be hard on the young man.

JAMES. That'll do, Cokeson. I've made up my mind.

[He passes into the partners' room.

COKESON. [After a doubtful moment] We must excuse your father. I don't want to go against your father; if he thinks it right.

WALTER. Confound it, Cokeson! why don't you back me up? You know you feel——

COKESON. [On his dignity] I really can't say what I feel.

WALTER. We shall regret it.

COKESON. He must have known what he was doing.

WALTER. [Bitterly] "The quality of mercy is not strained."

COKESON. [Looking at him askance] Come, come, Mr. Walter. We must try and see it sensible.

SWEEDLE. [Entering with a tray] Your lunch, sir.

COKESON. Put it down!

While SWEEDLE is putting it down on COKESON'S table, the detective, WISTER, enters the outer office, and, finding no one there, comes to the inner doorway. He is a square, medium-sized man, clean-shaved, in a serviceable blue serge suit and strong boots.

WISTER. [To WALTER*]* From Scotland Yard, sir. Detective-Sergeant Wister.

WALTER. [Askance] Very well! I'll speak to my father.

[He goes into the partners' room.

JAMES enters.

JAMES. Morning! [In answer to an appealing gesture from COKESON*]* I'm sorry; I'd stop short of this if I felt I could. Open that door.

SWEEDLE, wondering and scared, opens it.

JAMES. Come here, Mr. Falder.

As FALDER comes shrinkingly out, the detective, in obedience to a sign from JAMES, slips his hand out and grasps his arm.

FALDER. [Recoiling] Oh! no,—oh no!

WISTER. Come, come, there's a good lad.

JAMES. I charge him with felony.

FALDER. Oh, sir! There's some one— I did it for her. Let me be till to-morrow.

JAMES motions with his hand. At that sign of hardness, FALDER becomes rigid. Then, turning, he goes out quietly in the detective's grip. JAMES follows, stiff and erect. SWEEDLE, rushing to the door with open mouth, pursues them through the outer office into the corridor. When they have all disappeared COKESON spins completely around and makes a rush for the outer office.

COKESON. [Hoarsely] Here! Here! What are we doing?

There is silence. He takes out his handkerchief and mops the sweat from his face. Going back blindly to his table, he sits down, and stares blankly at his lunch.

The curtain falls.

ACT II

A Court of Justice, on a foggy October afternoon—crowded with barristers, solicitors, reporters, ushers and jurymen. Sitting in the large solid dock is FALDER, with a warder on either side of him, placed there for his safe custody, seemingly indifferent to and unconscious of his presence. FALDER is sitting exactly opposite to the JUDGE, who, raised above the clerk of the court, also seems unconscious of and indifferent to every thing. HAROLD CLEAVER, the counsel for the Crown, is a dried, yellowish man, of more than middle age, in a wig worn almost to the colour of his face. HECTOR FROME, the counsel for the defence, is a young, tall man, clean-shaven, in a very white wig. Among the spectators, having already given their evidence, are JAMES and WALTER HOW, and COWLEY, the cashier. WISTER, the detective, is just leaving the witness-box.

CLEAVER. That is the case for the rown, me lud!

[Gathering his robes together, he sits down.

FROME. [Rising and bowing to the JDGE] If it please your lordship and embers of the jury. I am not going to spute the fact that the prisoner alred this cheque, but I am going to put :fore you evidence as to the condi-on of his mind, and to submit that ou would not be justified in finding at he was responsible for his actions the time. I am going to show you, in ct, that he did this in a moment of erration, amounting to temporary inity, caused by the violent distress un-er which he was labouring. Gentlen, the prisoner is only twenty-three ars old. I shall call before you a woman from whom you will learn the events at led up to this act. You will hear om her own lips the tragic circumances of her life, the still more tragic fatuation with which she has inspired e prisoner. This woman, gentlemen, as been leading a miserable existence ith a husband who habitually ill-uses r, from whom she actually goes in rror of her life. I am not, of course, ying that it's either right or desirle for a young man to fall in love ith a married woman or that it's s business to rescue her from an ogrelike husband. I'm not saying anything f the sort. But we all know the power f the passion of love; and I would sk you to remember, gentlemen, in stening to her evidence, that, married a drunken and violent husband, she as no power to get rid of him; for, as you know, another offence besides violence is necessary to enable a woman to obtain a divorce; and of this offence it does not appear that her husband is guilty.

THE JUDGE. Is this relevant, Mr. Frome?

FROME. My lord, I submit, extremely —I shall be able to show your lordship that directly.

THE JUDGE. Very well.

FROME. In these circumstances, what alternatives were left to her? She could either go on living with this drunkard, in terror of her life; or she could apply to the Court for a separation order. Well, gentlemen, my experience of such cases assures me that this would have given her very insufficient protection from the violence of such a man; and even if effectual would very likely have reduced her either to the workhouse or the streets—for it's not easy, as she is now finding, for an unskilled woman without means of livelihood to support herself and her children without resorting either to the Poor Law or—to speak quite plainly—to the sale of her body.

THE JUDGE. You are ranging rather far, Mr. Frome.

FROME. I shall fire point-blank in a minute, my lord.

THE JUDGE. Let us hope so.

FROME. Now, gentlemen, mark—and this is what I have been leading up to —this woman will tell you, and the prisoner will confirm her, that, confronted with such alternatives, she set her whole hopes on himself, knowing the feeling with which she had inspired him. She saw a way out of her misery by going with him to a new country, where they would both be unknown, and might pass as husband and wife. This was a desperate and, as my friend Mr. Cleaver will no doubt call it, an immoral resolution; but, as a fact, the minds of both of them were constantly turned towards it. One wrong is no excuse for another, and those who are never likely to be faced by such a situation possibly have the right to hold up their hands —as to that I prefer to say nothing. But whatever view you take, gentlemen, of this part of the prisoner's story—whatever opinion you form of the right of these two young people under such circumstances to take the law into their own hands—the fact remains that this young woman in her distress, and this young man, little more than a boy, who was so devotedly attached to her, did conceive this—if you like—reprehensible design of going away together. Now, for that, of course, they required money, and—they had none. As to the actual events of the morning of July 7th, on which this cheque was altered, the events on which I rely to prove the defendant's irresponsibility—I shall allow those events to speak for themselves, through the lips of my witnesses, Robert Cokeson.

[He turns, looks round, takes up a sheet of paper, and waits.

COKESON is summoned into court, and goes into the witness-box, holding his hat before him. The oath is administered to him.

FROME. What is your name?

COKESON. Robert Cokeson.

FROME. Are you managing clerk to the firm of solicitors who employ the prisoner?

COKESON. Ye-es.

FROME. How long had the prisoner been in their employ?

COKESON. Two years. No, I'm wrong there—all but seventeen days.

FROME. Had you him under your eye all that time?

COKESON. Except Sundays and holidays.

FROME. Quite so. Let us hear, please, what you have to say about his general character during those two years.

COKESON. [Confidentially to the jury, and as if a little surprised at being asked] He was a nice, pleasant-spoken young man. I'd no fault to find with him—quite the contrary. It was a great surprise to me when he did a thing like that.

FROME. Did he ever give you reason to suspect his honesty?

COKESON. No! To have dishonesty in our office, that'd never do.

FROME. I'm sure the jury fully appreciate that, Mr. Cokeson.

COKESON. Every man of busines knows that honesty's the sign qua nonne.

FROME. Do you give him a good char acter all round, or do you not?

COKESON. [Turning to the JUDGE Certainly. We were all very jolly an pleasant together, until this happened Quite upset me.

FROME. Now, coming to the mornin of the 7th of July, the morning o which the cheque was altered. Wha have you to say about his demeanou that morning?

COKESON. [To the jury] If you as me, I don't think he was quite compo when he did it.

THE JUDGE. [Sharply] Are you sug gesting that he was insane?

COKESON. Not compos.

THE JUDGE. A little more precision please.

FROME. [Smoothly] Just tell us, Mr Cokeson.

COKESON. [Somewhat outraged Well, in my opinion—[looking at th JUDGE] such as it is—he was jumpy a the time. The jury will understand m meaning.

FROME. Will you tell us how you cam to that conclusion?

COKESON. Ye-es, I will. I have m lunch in from the restaurant, a cho and a potato—saves times. That day happened to come just as Mr. Walt How handed me the cheque. Well, like it hot; so I went into the clerk office and I handed the cheque to Davi the other clerk, and told him to g change. I noticed young Falder wall ing up and down. I said to him: "Th is not the Zoological Gardens, Falde FROME. Do you remember what answered?

COKESON. Ye-es: "I wish to God were!" Struck me as funny.

FROME. Did you notice anything e peculiar?

COKESON. I did.

FROME. What was that?

COKESON. His collar was unbutton Now, I like a young man to be nea said to him: "Your collar's unb toned."

FROME. And what did he answer

COKESON. Stared at me. It wasn't nice.

THE JUDGE. Stared at you? Isn't that a very common practice?

COKESON. Ye-es, but it was the look in his eyes. I can't explain my meaning —it was funny.

FROME. Had you ever seen such a look in his eyes before?

COKESON. No. If I had I should have spoken to the partners. We can't have anything eccentric in our profession.

THE JUDGE. Did you speak to them on that occasion?

COKESON. [Confidentially] Well, I didn't like to trouble them without prime facey evidence.

FROME. But it made a very distinct impression on your mind.

COKESON. Ye-es. The clerk Davis could have told you the same.

FROME. Quite so. It's very unfortunate that we've not got him here. Now can you tell me of the morning on which the discovery of the forgery was made? That would be the 18th. Did anything happen that morning?

COKESON. [With his hand to his ear] I'm a little deaf.

FROME. Was there anything in the course of that morning—I mean before the discovery—that caught your attention?

COKESON. Ye-es—a woman.

THE JUDGE. How is this relevant, Mr. Frome?

FROME. I am trying to establish the state of mind in which the prisoner committed this act, my lord.

THE JUDGE. I quite appreciate that. But this was long after the act.

FROME. Yes, my lord, but it contributes to my contention.

THE JUDGE. Well!

FROME. You say a woman. Do you mean that she came to the office?

COKESON. Ye-es.

FROME. What for?

COKESON. Asked to see young Falder; he was out at the moment.

FROME. Did you see her?

COKESON. I did.

FROME. Did she come alone?

COKESON. [Confidentially] Well, there you put me in a difficulty. I mustn't tell you what the office-boy told me.

FROME. Quite so, Mr. Cokeson, quite so——

COKESON. [Breaking in with an air of "You are young—leave it to me"] But I think we can get round it. In answer to a question put to her by a third party the woman said to me: "They're mine, sir."

THE JUDGE. What are? What were?

COKESON. Her children. They were outside.

THE JUDGE. How do you know?

COKESON. Your lordship mustn't ask me that, or I shall have to tell you what I was told—and that'd never do.

THE JUDGE. [Smiling] The office-boy made a statement.

COKESON. Egg-zactly.

FROME. What I want to ask you, Mr. Cokeson, is this. In the course of her appeal to see Falder, did the woman say anything that you specially remember?

COKESON. [Looking at him as if to encourage him to complete the sentence] A leetle more, sir.

FROME. Or did she not?

COKESON. She did. I shouldn't like you to have led me to the answer.

FROME. [With an irritated smile] Will you tell the jury what it was?

COKESON. "It's a matter of life and death."

FOREMAN OF THE JURY. Do you mean the woman said that?

COKESON. [Nodding] It's not the sort of thing you like to have said to you.

FROME. [A little impatiently] Did Falder come in while she was there?

COKESON nods.

FROME. And she saw him, and went away?

COKESON. Ah! there I can't follow you. I didn't see her go.

FROME. Well, is she there now?

COKESON. [With an indulgent smile] No!

FROME. Thank you, Mr. Cokeson.

[He sits down.

CLEAVER. [Rising] You say that on the morning of the forgery the prisoner was jumpy. Well, now, sir, what precisely do you mean by that word?

COKESON. [Indulgently] I want you to understand. Have you ever seen a dog that's lost its master? He was kind of everywhere at once with his eyes.

CLEAVER. Thank you; I was coming to his eyes. You called them "funny." What are we to understand by that? Strange, or what?

COKESON. Ye-es, funny.

CLEAVER. [Sharply] Yes, sir, but what may be funny to you may not be funny to me, or to the jury. Did they look frightened, or shy, or fierce, or what?

COKESON. You make it very hard for me. I give you the word, and you want me to give you another.

CLEAVER. [Rapping his desk] Does "funny" mean mad?

COKESON. Not mad, fun——

CLEAVER. Very well! Now you say he had his collar unbuttoned? Was it a hot day?

COKESON. Ye-es; I think it was.

CLEAVER. And did he button it when you called his attention to it?

COKESON. Ye-es, I think he did.

CLEAVER. Would you say that that denoted insanity?

He sits down. COKESON, who has opened his mouth to reply, is left gaping.

FROME. [Rising hastily] Have you ever caught him in that dishevelled state before?

COKESON. No! He was always clean and quiet.

FROME. That will do, thank you.

COKESON turns blandly to the JUDGE, as though to rebuke counsel for not remembering that the JUDGE might wish to have a chance; arriving at the conclusion that he is to be asked nothing further, he turns and descends from the box, and sits down next to JAMES and WALTER.

FROME. Ruth Honeywill.

RUTH comes into court, and takes her stand stoically in the witness-box. She is sworn.

FROME. What is your name, please?

RUTH. Ruth Honeywill.

FROME. How old are you?

RUTH. Twenty-six.

FROME. You are a married woman living with your husband? A little louder.

RUTH. No, sir; not since July.

FROME. Have you any children?

RUTH. Yes, sir, two.

FROME. Are they living with you?

RUTH. Yes, sir.

FROME. You know the prisoner?

RUTH. [Looking at him] Yes.

FROME. What was the nature of your relations with him?

RUTH. We were friends.

THE JUDGE. Friends?

RUTH. [Simply] Lovers, sir.

THE JUDGE. [Sharply] In what sense do you use that word?

RUTH. We love each other.

THE JUDGE. Yes, but——

RUTH. [Shaking her head] No, your lordship—not yet.

THE JUDGE. Not yet! H'm! [He looks from RUTH to FALDER] Well!

FROME. What is your husband?

RUTH. Traveller.

FROME. And what was the nature of your married life?

RUTH. [Shaking her head] It don't bear talking about.

FROME. Did he ill-treat you, or what?

RUTH. Ever since my first was born.

FROME. In what way?

RUTH. I'd rather not say. All sorts of ways.

THE JUDGE. I am afraid I must stop this, you know.

RUTH. [Pointing to FALDER] He offered to take me out of it, sir. We were going to South America.

FROME. [Hastily] Yes, quite—and what prevented you?

RUTH. I was outside his office when he was taken away. It nearly broke my heart.

FROME. You knew, then, that he had been arrested?

RUTH. Yes, sir. I called at his office afterwards, and [pointing to COKESON] that gentleman told me all about it.

FROME. Now, do you remember the morning of Friday, July 7th?

RUTH. Yes.

FROME. Why?

RUTH. My husband nearly strangled ıe that morning.

THE JUDGE. Nearly strangled you!

RUTH. [Bowing her head] Yes, my ɔrd.

FROME. With his hands, or——?

RUTH. Yes, I just managed to get way from him. I went straight to my riend. It was eight o'clock.

THE JUDGE. In the morning? Your usband was not under the influence of quor then?

RUTH. It wasn't always that.

FROME. In what condition were you?

RUTH. In very bad condition, sir. My ress was torn, and I was half choking.

FROME. Did you tell your friend what ıd happened?

RUTH. Yes. I wish I never had.

FROME. It upset him?

RUTH. Dreadfully.

FROME. Did he ever speak to you out a cheque?

RUTH. Never.

FROME. Did he ever give you any ɔney?

RUTH. Yes.

FROME. When was that?

RUTH. On Saturday.

FROME. The 8th?

RUTH. To buy an outfit for me and e children, and get all ready to start.

FROME. Did that surprise you, or not?

RUTH. What, sir?

FROME. That he had money to give u.

RUTH. Yes, because on the morning ıen my husband nearly killed me my nd cried because he hadn't the money get me away. He told me afterwards d come into a windfall.

FROME. And when did you last see n?

RUTH. The day he was taken away, It was the day we were to have rted.

FROME. Oh, yes, the morning of the est. Well, did you see him at all ween the Friday and that morning?

RUTH nods.

FROME. What was his manner then?

RUTH. Dumb-like—sometimes he did- seem able to say a word.

FROME. As if something unusual had ɔpened to him?

RUTH. Yes.

FROME. Painful, or pleasant, or what?

RUTH. Like a fate hanging over him.

FROME. [Hesitating] Tell me, did you love the defendant very much?

RUTH. [Bowing her head] Yes.

FROME. And had he a very great affection for you?

RUTH. [Looking at FALDER] Yes, sir.

FROME. Now, ma'am, do you or do you not think that your danger and unhappiness would seriously affect his balance, his control over his actions?

RUTH. Yes.

FROME. His reason, even?

RUTH. For a moment like, I think it would.

FROME. Was he very much upset that Friday morning, or was he fairly calm?

RUTH. Dreadfully upset. I could hardly bear to let him go from me.

FROME. Do you still love him?

RUTH. [With her eyes on FALDER] He's ruined himself for me.

FROME. Thank you.

[He sits down. RUTH remains stoically upright in the witness-box.

CLEAVER. [In a considerate voice] When you left him on the morning of Friday the 7th you would not say that he was out of his mind, I suppose?

RUTH. No, sir.

CLEAVER. Thank you; I've no further questions to ask you.

RUTH. [Bending a little forward to the jury] I would have done the same for him; I would indeed.

THE JUDGE. Please, please! You say your married life is an unhappy one? Faults on both sides?

RUTH. Only that I never bowed down to him. I don't see why I should, sir, not to a man like that.

THE JUDGE. You refused to obey him?

RUTH. [Avoiding the question] I've always studied him to keep things nice.

THE JUDGE. Until you met the prisoner—was that it?

RUTH. No; even after that.

THE JUDGE. I ask, you know, because you seem to me to glory in this affection of yours for the prisoner.

RUTH. [Hesitating] I—I do. It's the only thing in my life now.

THE JUDGE. [Staring at her hard] Well, step down, please.

RUTH looks at FALDER, then passes quietly down and takes her seat among the witnesses.

FROME. I call the prisoner, my lord.

FALDER leaves the dock; goes into the witness-box, and is duly sworn.

FROME. What is your name?

FALDER. William Falder.

FROME. And age?

FALDER. Twenty-three.

FROME. You are not married?

FALDER shakes his head.

FROME. How long have you known the last witness?

FALDER. Six months.

FROME. Is her account of the relationship between you a correct one?

FALDER. Yes.

FROME. You became devotedly attached to her, however?

FALDER. Yes.

THE JUDGE. Though you knew she was a married woman?

FALDER. I couldn't help it, your lordship.

THE JUDGE. Couldn't help it?

FALDER. I didn't seem able to.

The JUDGE slightly shrugs his shoulders.

FROME. How did you come to know her?

FALDER. Through my married sister.

FROME. Did you know whether she was happy with her husband?

FALDER. It was trouble all the time.

FROME. You knew her husband?

FALDER. Only through her—he's a brute.

THE JUDGE. I can't allow indiscriminate abuse of a person not present.

FROME. [Bowing] If your lordship pleases. [To FALDER] You admit altering this cheque?

FALDER bows his head.

FROME. Carry your mind, please, to the morning of Friday, July the 7th, and tell the jury what happened.

FALDER. [Turning to the jury] I was having my breakfast when she came. Her dress was all torn, and she was gasping and couldn't seem to get her breath at all; there were the marks of his fingers round her throat; her arm was bruised, and the blood had got into her eyes dreadfully. It frightened me, and then when she told me, I felt—I felt—well—it was too much for me! [Hardening suddenly] If you'd seen it, having the feelings for her that I had, you'd have felt the same, I know.

FROME. Yes?

FALDER. When she left me—because I had to go to the office—I was out of my senses for fear that he'd do it again, and thinking what I could do. I couldn't work—all the morning I was like that—simply couldn't fix my mind on anything. I couldn't think at all. I seemed to have to keep moving. When Davis—the other clerk—gave me the cheque—he said: "It'll do you good, Will, to have a run with this. You seem half off your chump this morning." Then when I had it in my hand—I don't know how it came, but it just flashed across me that if I put the t y and the nought there would be the money to get her away. It just came and went—I never thought of it again. Then Davis went out to his luncheon, and I don't really remember what I did till I pushed the cheque through to the cashier under the rail. I remember his saying "Notes?" Then I suppose I knew what I'd done. Anyway, when I got outside I wanted to chuck myself under a 'bus; I wanted to throw the money away; but it seemed I was in for it, so I thought at any rate I'd save her. Of course the tickets I took for the passage and the little I gave her had been wasted, and all, except what I was obliged to spend myself, I've restored. I keep thinking over and over how it was I came to do it, and how I can have it all again to do differently!

FALDER is silent, twisting his hands before him.

FROME. How far is it from your office to the bank?

FALDER. Not more than fifty yards, sir.

FROME. From the time Davis went out to lunch to the time you cashed the cheque, how long do you say it must have been?

FALDER. It couldn't have been more ninutes, sir, because I ran all the ray.

FROME. During those four minutes ou say you remember nothing?

FALDER. No, sir; only that I ran.

FROME. Not even adding the t y and he nought?

FALDER. No, sir. I don't really.

FROME sits down, and CLEAVER rises.

CLEAVER. But you remember running, do you?

FALDER. I was all out of breath when got to the bank.

CLEAVER. And you don't remember altering the cheque?

FALDER. [Faintly] No, sir.

CLEAVER. Divested of the romantic lamour which my friend is casting ver the case, is this anything but an rdinary forgery? Come.

FALDER. I was half frantic all that ıorning, sir.

CLEAVER. Now, now! You don't deny ıat the t y and the nought were so ke the rest of the handwriting as to ıoroughly deceive the cashier?

FALDER. It was an accident.

CLEAVER. [Cheerfully] Queer sort of :cident, wasn't it? On which day did ou alter the counterfoil?

FALDER. [Hanging his head] On the Vednesday morning.

CLEAVER. Was that an accident, too?

FALDER. [Faintly] No.

CLEAVER. To do that you had to watch our opportunity, I suppose?

FALDER. [Almost inaudibly] Yes.

CLEAVER. You don't suggest that you ere suffering under great excitement hen you did that?

FALDER. I was haunted.

CLEAVER. With the fear of being ound out?

FALDER. [Very low] Yes.

THE JUDGE. Didn't it occur to you at the only thing for you to do was confess to your employers, and reore the money?

FALDER. I was afraid.

There is silence.

CLEAVER. You desired, too, no doubt complete your design of taking this oman away?

FALDER. When I found I'd done a thing like that, to do it for nothing seemed so dreadful. I might just as well have chucked myself into the river.

CLEAVER. You knew that the clerk Davis was about to leave England—didn't it occur to you when you altered this cheque that suspicion would fall on him?

FALDER. It was all done in a moment. I thought of it afterwards.

CLEAVER. And that didn't lead you to avow what you'd done?

FALDER. [Sullenly] I meant to write when I got out there—I would have repaid the money.

THE JUDGE. But in the meantime your innocent fellow clerk might have been prosecuted.

FALDER. I knew he was a long way off, your lordship. I thought there'd be time. I didn't think they'd find it out so soon.

FROME. I might remind your lordship that as Mr. Walter How had the cheque-book in his pocket till after Davis had sailed, if the discovery had been made only one day later Falder himself would have left, and suspicion would have attached to him, and not to Davis, from the beginning.

THE JUDGE. The question is whether the prisoner knew that suspicion would light on himself, and not on Davis. [To FALDER sharply] Did you know that Mr. Walter How had the cheque-book till after Davis had sailed?

FALDER. I—I thought—he——

THE JUDGE. Now speak the truth—yes or no!

FALDER. [Very low] No, my lord. I had no means of knowing.

THE JUDGE. That disposes of your point, Mr. Frome.

FROME bows to the JUDGE.

CLEAVER. Has any aberration of this nature ever attacked you before?

FALDER. [Faintly] No, sir.

CLEAVER. You had recovered sufficiently to go back to your work that afternoon?

FALDER. Yes, I had to take the money back.

CLEAVER. You mean the nine pounds. Your wits were sufficiently keen for you to remember that? And you still persist in saying you don't remember altering this cheque. [He sits down.

FALDER. If I hadn't been mad I should never have had the courage.

FROME. [Rising] Did you have your lunch before going back?

FALDER. I never ate a thing all day; and at night I couldn't sleep.

FROME. Now, as to the four minutes that elapsed between Davis's going out and your cashing the cheque: do you say that you recollect nothing during those four minutes?

FALDER. [After a moment] I remember thinking of Mr. Cokeson's face.

FROME. Of Mr. Cokeson's face! Had that any connection with what you were doing?

FALDER. No, sir.

FROME. Was that in the office, before you ran out?

FALDER. Yes, and while I was running.

FROME. And that lasted till the cashier said: "Will you have notes?"

FALDER. Yes, and then I seemed to come to myself—and it was too late.

FROME. Thank you. That closes the evidence for the defence, my lord.

The JUDGE nods, and FALDER goes back to his seat in the dock.

FROME. [Gathering up notes] If it please your lordship—members of the jury,—My friend in cross-examination has shown a disposition to sneer at the defence which has been set up in this case, and I am free to admit that nothing I can say will move you, if the evidence has not already convinced you that the prisoner committed this act in a moment when to all practical intents and purposes he was not responsible for his actions; a moment of such mental and moral vacuity, arising from the violent emotional agitation under which he had been suffering, as to amount to temporary madness. My friend has alluded to the "romantic glamour" with which I have sought to invest this case. Gentlemen, I have done nothing of the kind. I have merely shown you the background of "life"—that palpitating life which, believe me—whatever my friend may say—always lies behind the commission of a crime. Now, gentlemen, we live in a highly civilised age and the sight of brutal violence disturbs us in a very strange way, even when we have no personal interest in the matter. But when we see it inflicted on a woman whom we love—what then? Just think of what your own feelings would have been, each of you at the prisoner's age; and then look at him. Well! he is hardly the comfortable, shall we say bucolic, person likely to contemplate with equanimity mark of gross violence on a woman to whom he was devotedly attached. Yes, gentlemen, look at him! He has not a strong face; but neither has he a vicious face. He is just the sort of man who would easily become the prey of his emotions. You have heard the description of his eyes. My friend may laugh at the word "funny"—I think it better describes the peculiar uncanny look of those who are strained to breaking point than any other word which could have been used. I don't pretend, mind you, that his mental irresponsibility was more than a flash of darkness, in which all sense of proportion became lost; but I do contend, that, just as a man who destroys himself at such a moment may be, and often is, absolved from the stigma attaching to the crime of self-murder, so he may, and frequently does, commit other crimes while in this irresponsible condition, and that he may be justly be acquitted of criminal intent and treated as a patient. I admit that this is a plea which might well be abused. It is a matter for discretion. But here you have a case in which there is every reason to give the benefit of the doubt. You heard me ask the prisoner what he thought of during those four fatal minutes. What was his answer? "I thought of Mr. Cokeson's face!" Gentlemen, no man could invent an answer like that—it is absolutely stamped with truth. You have seen the great affection (legitimate or not) existing between him and this woman, who came here to give evidence for him at the risk of her life. It is impossible for you to doubt his distress on the morning when he committed this act. We well know what errible havoc such distress can make n weak and highly nervous people. It vas all the work of a moment. The rest as followed, as death follows a stab o the heart, or water drops if you hold p a jug to empty it. Believe me, gentlenen, there is nothing more tragic in fe than the utter impossibility of hanging what you have done. Once this heque was altered and presented, the vork of four minutes—four mad min-tes—the rest has been silence. But in nose four minutes the boy before you as slipped through a door, hardly pened, into that great cage which ever again quite lets a man go—the age of the Law. His further acts, his ailure to confess, the alteration of the ounterfoil, his preparations for flight, ·e all evidence—not of deliberate and ailty intention when he committed the ·ime act from which these subsequent ·ts arose; no—they are merely evi·nce of the weak character which is early enough his misfortune. But is man to be lost because he is bred and ·rn with a weak character? Gentle-en, men like the prisoner are de-royed daily under our law for want that human insight which sees them they are, patients, and not crimi-

ls. If the prisoner be found guilty, d treated as though he were a crimi-
l type, he will, as all experience ows, in all probability become one.
beg you not to return a verdict that y thrust him back into prison and and him for ever. Gentlemen, Justice a machine that, when some one has ce given it the starting push, rolls on iitself. Is this young man to be ground pieces under this machine for an act ich at the worst was one of weak-s? Is he to become a member of the kless crews that man those dark, illrred ships called prisons? Is that to his voyage—from which so few ren? Or is he to have another chance, be still looked on as one who has ie a little astray, but who will come k? I urge you, gentlemen, do not n this young man! For, as a result of se four minutes, ruin, utter and irre-vable, stares him in the face. He can saved now. Imprison him as a criminal, and I affirm to you that he will be lost. He has neither the face nor the manner of one who can survive that terrible ordeal. Weigh in the scales his criminality and the suffering he has undergone. The latter is ten times heavier already. He has lain in prison under this charge for more than two months. Is he likely ever to forget that? Imagine the anguish of his mind during that time. He has had his punishment, gentlemen, you may depend. The rolling of the chariot-wheels of Justice over this boy began when it was decided to prosecute him. We are now already at the second stage. If you permit it to go on to the third I would not give—that for him.

He holds up finger and thumb in the form of a circle, drops his hand, and sits down.

The jury stir, and consult each other's faces; then they turn towards the counsel for the Crown, who rises, and, fixing his eyes on a spot that seems to give him satisfaction, slides them every now and then towards the jury.

CLEAVER. May it please your lordship. [Rising on his toes] Gentlemen of the jury,—The facts in this case are not disputed, and the defence, if my friend will allow me to say so, is so thin that I don't propose to waste the time of the Court by taking you over the evidence. The plea is one of temporary insanity. Well, gentlemen, I daresay it is clearer to me than it is to you why this rather—what shall we call it?—bizarre defence has been set up. The alternative would have been to plead guilty. Now, gentlemen, if the prisoner had pleaded guilty my friend would have had to rely on a simple appeal to his lordship. Instead of that, he has gone into the byways and hedges and found this—er—peculiar plea, which has enabled him to show you the proverbial woman, to put her in the box—to give, in fact, a romantic glow to this affair. I compliment my friend; I think it highly ingenious of him. By these means, he has—to a certain extent—got round the Law. He has brought the whole story of motive and stress out in court, at first hand, in a way that he would not otherwise have been able to do. But when you have once grasped that fact, gentlemen, you have grasped everything. [With good-humoured contempt] For look at this plea of insanity; we can't put it lower than that. You have heard the woman. She has every reason to favour the prisoner, but what did she say? She said that the prisoner was not insane when she left him in the morning. If he were going out of his mind through distress, that was obviously the moment when insanity would have shown itself. You have heard the managing clerk, another witness for the defence. With some difficulty I elicited from him the admission that the prisoner, though jumpy (a word that he seemed to think you would understand, gentlemen, and I'm sure I hope you do), was not mad when the cheque was handed to Davis. I agree with my friend that it's unfortunate that we have not got Davis here, but the prisoner has told you the words with which Davis in turn handed him the cheque; he obviously, therefore, was not mad when he received it, or he would not have remembered those words. The cashier has told you that he was certainly in his senses when he cashed it. We have therefore the plea that a man who is sane at ten minutes past one, and sane at fifteen minutes past, may, for the purposes of avoiding the consequences of a crime, call himself insane between those points of time. Really, gentlemen, this is so peculiar a proposition that I am not disposed to weary you with further argument. You will form your own opinion of its value. My friend has adopted this way of saying a great deal to you—and very eloquently—on the score of youth, temptation, and the like. I might point out, however, that the offence with which the prisoner is charged is one of the most serious known to our law; and there are certain features in this case, such as the suspicion which he allowed to rest on his innocent fellow clerk, and his relations with this married woman, which will render it difficult for you to attach too much importance to such pleading. I ask you, in short, for that verdict of guilty which, in the circumstances, I regard you as, unfortunately, bound to record.

Letting his eyes travel from the JUDGE and the jury to FROME, he sits down.

THE JUDGE. [Bending a little towards the jury, and speaking in a businesslike voice] Members of the jury, you have heard the evidence, and the comments on it. My only business is to make clear to you the issues you have to try. The facts are admitted, so far as the alteration of this cheque and counterfoil by the prisoner. The defence set up is that he was not in a responsible condition when he committed the crime. Well, you have heard the prisoner's story, and the evidence of the other witnesses—so far as it bears on the point of insanity. If you think that what you have heard establishes the fact that the prisoner was insane at the time of the forgery, you will find him guilty but insane. If, on the other hand, you conclude from what you have seen and heard that the prisoner was sane—and nothing short of insanity will count—you will find him guilty. In reviewing the testimony as to his mental condition you must bear in mind very carefully the evidence as to his demeanour and conduct both before and after the act of forgery—the evidence of the prisoner himself, of the woman, of the witness—er—Cokeson, and—er—of the cashier. And in regard to that I especially direct your attention to the prisoner's admission that the idea of adding the t y and the nought did come into his mind at the moment when the cheque was handed to him; and also to the alteration of the counterfoil, and to his subsequent conduct generally. The bearing of all this on the question of premeditation (and premeditation will imply sanity) is very obvious. You must not allow any considerations of age or temptation to weigh with you in the finding of your verdict. Before you can come to a verdict guilty but insane you must be well and thoroughly convinced that the condition of his mind was such as would have qualified him e moment for a lunatic asylum. [He uses; then, seeing that the jury are ubtful whether to retire or no, adds] ou may retire, if you wish to do so.

The jury retire by a door behind the JUDGE. The JUDGE bends over his notes. FALDER, leaning from the dock, speaks excitedly to his solicitor, pointing down at RUTH. The solicitor in turn speaks to FROME.

FROME. [Rising] My lord. The pris-er is very anxious that I should ask u if your lordship would kindly re-est the reporters not to disclose the me of the woman witness in the ess reports of these proceedings. ur lordship will understand that the isequences might be extremely seri-; to her.

HE JUDGE. [Pointedly—with the sus-ion of a smile] Well, Mr. Frome, t deliberately took this course which olved bringing her here.

ROME. [With an ironic bow] If your dship thinks I could have brought the full facts in any other way?

HE JUDGE. H'm! Well.

ROME. There is very real danger to , your lordship.

HE JUDGE. You see, I have to take word for all that.

ROME. If your lordship would be so l. I can assure your lordship that I not exaggerating.

HE JUDGE. It goes very much against grain with me that the name of a ess should ever be suppressed. ith a glance at FALDER, who is grip- and clasping his hands before him, then at RUTH, who is sitting per-ly rigid with her eyes fixed on FAL-I'll consider your application. It t depend. I have to remember that may have come here to commit per- on the prisoner's behalf.

ROME. Your lordship, I really——

HE JUDGE. Yes, yes—I don't suggest hing of the sort, Mr. Frome. Leave that for the moment.

As he finishes speaking, the jury return, and file back into the box.

ERK OF ASSIZE. Members of the , are you agreed on your verdcit?

REMAN. We are.

CLERK OF ASSIZE. Is it Guilty, or Guilty, but insane?

FOREMAN. Guilty.

The JUDGE nods; then, gathering up his notes, he looks at FALDER, who sits motionless.

FROME. [Rising] If your lordship would allow me to address you in mitigation of sentence. I don't know if your lordship thinks I can add anything to what I have said to the jury on the score of the prisoner's youth, and the great stress under which he acted.

THE JUDGE. I don't think you can, Mr. Frome.

FROME. If your lordship says so—I do most earnestly beg your lordship to give the utmost weight to my plea.

[He sits down.

THE JUDGE. [To the Clerk] Call upon him.

THE CLERK. Prisoner at the bar, you stand convicted of felony. Have you anything to say for yourself why the Court should not give you judgment according to Law?

FALDER shakes his head.

THE JUDGE. William Falder, you have been given fair trial and found guilty, in my opinion rightly found guilty, of forgery. [He pauses; then, consulting his notes, goes on] The defence was set up that you were not responsible for your actions at the moment of committing this crime. There is no doubt, I think, that this was a device to bring out at first hand the nature of the temptation to which you succumbed. For throughout the trial your counsel was in reality making an appeal for mercy. The setting up of this defence of course enabled him to put in some evidence that might weigh in that direction. Whether he was well advised to do so is another matter. He claimed that you should be treated rather as a patient than as a criminal. And this plea of his, which in the end amounted to a passionate appeal, he based in effect on an indictment of the march of Justice, which he practically accused of confirming and completing the process of criminality. Now, in considering how far I should allow weight to his appeal, I have a number of factors to take into account. I have to consider on the one hand the grave nature of your offence, the deliberate way in which you subsequently altered the counterfoil, the danger you caused to an innocent man—and that, to my mind, is a very grave point—and finally I have to consider the necessity of deterring others from following your example. On the other hand, I bear in mind that you are young, that you have hitherto borne a good character, that you were, if I am to believe your evidence and that of your witnesses, in a state of some emotional excitement when you committed this crime. I have every wish, consistently with my duty —not only to you, but to the community, to treat you with leniency. And this brings me to what are the determining factors in my mind in my consideration of your case. You are a clerk in a lawyer's office—that is a very serious aggravation in this case; no possible excuse can be made for you on the ground that you were not fully conversant with the nature of the crime you were committing and the penalties that attach to it. It is said, however, that you were carried away by your emotions. The story has been told here to-day of your relations with this—er—Mrs. Honeywill; on that story both the defence and the plea for mercy were in effect based. Now what is that story? It is that you, a young man, and she, a young woman unhappily married, had formed an attachment, which you both say—with what truth I am unable to gauge —had not yet resulted in immoral relations, but which you both admit was about to result in such relationship. Your counsel has made an attempt to palliate this, on the ground that the woman is in what he describes, I think, as "a hopeless position." As to that I can express no opinion. She is a married woman, and the fact is patent that you committed this crime with the view of furthering an immoral design. Now, however I might wish, I am not able to justify to my conscience a plea for mercy which has a basis inimical to morality. It is vitiated ab initio. Your counsel has made an attempt also to show that to punish you with further imprisonment would be unjust. I do not follow him in these flights. The Law, what it is—a majestic edifice, sheltering all of us, each stone of which rests on another. I am concerned only with its administration. The crime you have committed is a very serious one. I cannot feel it in accordance with my duty to society to exercise the powers I have in your favour. You will go to penal servitude for three years.

FALDER, who throughout the JUDGE'S speech has looked at him steadily, lets his head fall forward on his breast. RUTH starts up from her seat as he is taken out by the warders. There is a bustle in court.

THE JUDGE. [Speaking to the reporters] Gentlemen of the Press, I think that the name of the female witness should not be reported.

The reporters bow their acquiescence.

THE JUDGE. [To RUTH, who is standing in the direction in which FALDER has disappeared] Do you understand your name will not be mentioned?

COKESON. [Pulling her sleeve] The judge is speaking to you.

RUTH turns, stares at the JUDGE and turns away.

THE JUDGE. I shall sit rather late to-day. Call the next case.

CLERK OF ASSIZE. [To a warder] Bring up John Booley.

To cries of "Witnesses in the case of Booley."

The curtain falls.

ACT III

SCENE I

A prison. A plainly furnished room with two large barred windows overlooking the prisoners' exercise yard, where men, in yellow clothes marked with arrows, and yellow brimless caps, are seen in single file at a distance of four yards from each other, walking rapidly on serpentine white lines traced the concrete floor of the yard. Two warders in blue uniforms, with peaked caps and swords, are stationed amongst them. The room has distempered walls, a bookcase with numerous official-looking books, a cupboard between the windows, a plan of the prison on the wall, a writing-table covered with documents. It is Christmas Eve.

he GOVERNOR, a neat, grave-looking man, with a trim, fair moustache, the eyes of a theorist, and grizzled hair, receding from the temples, is standing close to this writing-table looking at a sort of rough saw made out of a piece of metal. The hand in which he holds it is gloved, for two fingers are missing. The chief warder, WOODER, a tall, thin, military-looking man of sixty, with grey moustache and melancholy, monkey-like eyes, stands very upright two paces from him.

THE GOVERNOR. [With a faint, disacted smile] Queer-looking affair, Mr. ooder! Where did you find it?

WOODER. In his mattress, sir. Haven't me across such a thing for two years w.

THE GOVERNOR. [With curiosity] Had any set plan?

WOODER. He'd sawed his window-bar out that much.

[He holds up his thumb and finger a quarter of an inch apart.

THE GOVERNOR. I'll see him this ernoon. What's his name? Moaney! old hand, I think?

WOODER. Yes, sir—four spell of pe. You'd think an old lag like him uld have had more sense by now. ith pitying contempt] Occupied his nd, he said. Breaking in and breaking —that's all they think about.

THE GOVERNOR. Who's next him?

WOODER. O'Cleary, sir.

THE GOVERNOR. The Irishman.

WOODER. Next him again there's that ng fellow, Falder—star class—and t him old Clipton.

THE GOVERNOR. Ah, yes! "The phipher." I want to see him about his s.

WOODER. Curious thing, sir: they seem to know when there's one of these tries at escape going on. It makes them restive—there's a regular wave going through them just now.

THE GOVERNOR. [Meditatively] Odd things—those waves. [Turning to look at the prisoners exercising] Seem quiet enough out here!

WOODER. That Irishman, O'Cleary, began banging on his door this morning. Little thing like that's quite enough to upset the whole lot. They're just like dumb animals at times.

THE GOVERNOR. I've seen it with horses before thunder—it'll run right through cavalry lines.

The prison CHAPLAIN has entered. He is a dark-haired, ascetic man, in clerical undress, with a peculiarly steady, tight-lipped face and slow, cultured speech.

THE GOVERNOR. [Holding up the saw] Seen this, Miller?

THE CHAPLAIN. Useful-looking specimen.

THE GOVERNOR. Do for the Museum, eh! [He goes to the cupboard and opens it, displaying to view a number of quaint ropes, hooks, and metal tools with labels tied on them] That'll do, thanks, Mr. Wooder.

WOODER. [Saluting] Thank you, sir.

[He goes out.

THE GOVERNOR. Account for the state of the men last day or two, Miller? Seems going through the whole place.

THE CHAPLAIN. No. I don't know of anything.

THE GOVERNOR. By the way, will you dine with us to-morrow?

THE CHAPLAIN. Christmas Day? Thanks very much.

THE GOVERNOR. Worries me to feel the men discontented. [Gazing at the saw] Have to punish this poor devil. Can't help liking a man who tries to escape.

[He places the saw in his pocket and locks the cupboard again.

THE CHAPLAIN. Extraordinary perverted will-power—some of them. Nothing to be done till it's broken.

THE GOVERNOR. And not much afterwards, I'm afraid. Ground too hard for golf?

WOODER comes in again.

WOODER. Visitor to speak to you, sir. I told him it wasn't usual.

THE GOVERNOR. What about?

WOODER. Shall I put him off, sir?

THE GOVERNOR. [Resignedly] No, no. Let's see him. Don't go, Miller.

WOODER motions to some one without, and as the visitor comes in withdraws.

The visitor is COKESON, who is attired in a thick overcoat to the knees, woollen gloves, and carries a top hat.

COKESON. I'm sorry to trouble you. But it's about a young man you've got here.

THE GOVERNOR. We have a good many.

COKESON. Name of Falder, forgery. [Producing a card, and handing it to the GOVERNOR] Firm of James and Walter How. Well known in the law.

THE GOVERNOR. [Receiving the card—with a faint smile] What do you want to see me about, sir?

COKESON. [Suddenly seeing the prisoners at exercise] Why! what a sight!

THE GOVERNOR. Yes, we have that privilege from here; my office is being done up. [Sitting down at his table] Now, please!

COKESON. [Dragging his eyes with difficulty from the window] I wanted to say a word to you; I shan't keep you long. [Confidentially] Fact is, I oughtn't to be here by rights. His sister came to me—he's got no father and mother—and she was in some distress. "My husband won't let me go and see him," she said; "says he's disgraced the family. And his other sister," she said, "is an invalid." And she asked me to come. Well, I take an interest in him. He was our junior—I go to the same chapel—and I didn't like to refuse.

THE GOVERNOR. I'm afraid he's not allowed a visitor yet—he's only here for his one month's separate confinement.

COKESON. You see I saw him while he was shut up waiting for his trial and he was lonely.

THE GOVERNOR. [With faint amusement] Ring the bell—would you, Mille

[To COKESON] You'd like to hear wh the doctor says about him, perhaps.

THE CHAPLAIN.]Ringing the bel You are not accustomed to prisons, would seem, sir.

COKESON. No. But it's a pitiful sigh He's quite a young fellow. I said him: "Be patient," I said. "Patient he said. "A day," he said, "shut up your cell thinking and brooding as do, it's longer than a year outside. can't help it," he said; "I try—but I' built that way, Mr. Cokeson." And held his hand up to his face. I could s the tears trickling through his finge It wasn't nice.

THE CHAPLAIN. He's a young m with rather peculiar eyes, isn't he? N Church of England, I think?

COKESON. No.

THE CHAPLAIN. I know.

THE GOVERNOR. [To WOODER, w has come in] Ask the doctor to be go enough to come here for a minute.

WOODER salutes, and goes out.

THE GOVERNOR. Let's see, he's n married?

COKESON. No. [Confidentially] B there's a party he's very much attach to, not altogether com-il-fo. It's a s story.

THE CHAPLAIN. If it wasn't for dri and women, sir, this prison might closed.

COKESON. [Looking at the CHAPLA over his spectacles] Ye-es, but I wan to tell you about that, special. It pr on his mind.

THE GOVERNOR. Well!

COKESON. Like this. The woman a nahsty, spiteful feller for a husba and she'd left him. Fact is, she was ing away with our young friend. not nice—but I've looked over it. W after the trial she said she'd earn living apart, and wait for him to c out. That was a great consolation him. But after a month she came t —I don't know her personally—and said: "I can't earn the children's ing, let alone my own—I've got friends. I'm obliged to keep ou everybody's way, else my husband to know where I was. I'm very educed," she said. And she has lost esh. "I'll have to go to the work-ouse!" It's a painful story. I said to er: "No," I said, "not that! I've got wife an' family, but sooner than you ould do that I'll spare you a little yself." "Really," she said—she's a ice creature—"I don't like to take it rom you. I think I'd better go back my husband." Well, I know he's a ahsty, spiteful feller—drinks—but I dn't like to persuade her not to.

THE CHAPLAIN. Surely—no.

COKESON. Ye-es, but I'm sorry now. e's got his three years to serve. I ant things to be pleasant for him.

THE CHAPLAIN. [With a touch of patience] The Law hardly shares ur view, I'm afraid.

COKESON. He's all alone there by mself. I'm afraid it'll turn him silly. nd nobody wants that, I s'pose. He ied when I saw him. I don't like to see man cry.

THE CHAPLAIN. It's a very rare ng for them to give way like that.

COKESON. [Looking at him—in a tone sudden dogged hostility] I keep dogs.

THE CHAPLAIN. Indeed?

COKESON. Ye-es. And I say this: I uldn't shut one of them up all by nself, week after week, not if he'd me all over.

THE CHAPLAIN. Unfortunately, the minal is not a dog; he has a sense of ht and wrong.

COKESON. But that's not the way to ke him feel it.

THE CHAPLAIN. Ah! there I'm afraid must differ.

COKESON. It's the same with dogs. If u treat 'em with kindness they'll do thing for you; but to shut 'em up ne, it only makes 'em savage.

THE CHAPLAIN. Surely you should ow those who have had a little more perience than yourself to know what best for prisoners.

COKESON. [Doggedly] I know this ng feller, I've watched him for rs. He's eurotic—got no stamina. father died of consumption. I'm king of his future. If he's to be t there shut up by himself, without nt to keep him company, it'll do him harm. I said to him: "Where do you feel it?" "I can't tell you, Mr. Cokeson," he said, "but sometimes I could beat my head against the wall." It's not nice.

During this speech the DOCTOR has entered. He is a medium-sized, rather good-looking man, with a quick eye. He stands leaning against the window.

THE GOVERNOR. This gentleman thinks the separate is telling on Q 3007—Falder, young thin fellow, star class. What do you say, Doctor Clements?

THE DOCTOR. He doesn't like it, but it's not doing him any harm, it's only a month.

COKESON. But he was weeks before he came in here.

THE DOCTOR. We can always tell. He's lost no weight since he's been here.

COKESON. It's his state of mind I'm speaking of.

THE DOCTOR. His mind's all right so far. He's nervous, rather melancholy. I don't see signs of anything more. I'm watching him carefully.

COKESON. [Nonplussed] I'm glad to hear you say that.

THE CHAPLAIN. [More suavely] It's just at this period that we are able to make some impression on them, sir. I am speaking from my special standpoint.

COKESON. [Turning bewildered to the GOVERNOR] I don't want to be unpleasant, but I do feel it's awkward.

THE GOVERNOR. I'll make a point of seeing him to-day.

COKESON. I'm much obliged to you. I thought perhaps seeing him every day you wouldn't notice it.

THE GOVERNOR. [Rather sharply] If any sign of injury to his health shows itself his case will be reported at once. That's fully provided for. [He rises.

COKESON. [Following his own thoughts] Of course, what you don't see doesn't trouble you; but I don't want to have him on my mind.

THE GOVERNOR. I think you may safely leave it to us, sir.

COKESON. [Mollified and apologetic] I thought you'd understand me. I'm a plain man—never set myself up against authority. [Expanding to the CHAPLAIN] Nothing personal meant. Good-morning.

As he goes out the three officials do not look at each other, but their faces wear peculiar expressions.

THE CHAPLAIN. Our friend seems to think that prison is a hospital.

COKESON. [Returning suddenly with an apologetic air] There's just one little thing. This woman—I suppose I mustn't ask you to let him see her. It'd be a rare treat for them both. He'll be thinking about her all the time. Of course she's not his wife. But he's quite safe in here. They're a pitiful couple. You couldn't make an exception?

THE GOVERNOR. [Wearily] As you say, my dear sir, I couldn't make an exception; he won't be allowed a visit till he goes to a convict prison.

COKESON. I see. [Rather coldly] Sorry to have troubled you.

[He again goes out.

THE CHAPLAIN. [Shrugging his shoulders] The plain man indeed, poor fellow. Come and have some lunch, Clements?

[He and the DOCTOR go out talking. The GOVERNOR, with a sigh, sits down at his table and takes up a pen.

The curtain falls.

SCENE II

Part of the ground corridor of the prison. The walls are coloured with greenish distemper up to a stripe of deeper green about the height of a man's shoulder, and above this line are whitewashed. The floor is of blackened stones. Daylight is filtering through a heavily barred window at the end. The doors of four cells are visible. Each cell has a little round peephole at the level of a man's eye, covered by a little round disc, which, raised upwards, affords a view of the cell. On the wall, close to each cell door, hangs a little square board with the prisoner's name, number, and record. Overhead can be seen the iron structures of the first-floor and second-floor corridors.

The WARDER INSTRUCTOR, a bearded man in blue uniform, with an apron, and some dangling keys, just emerging from one of the cells

INSTRUCTOR. [Speaking from the door into the cell] I'll have another bit for you when that's finished.

O'CLEARY. [Unseen—in an Irish voice] Little doubt o' that, sirr.

INSTRUCTOR. [Gossiping] Well, you'd rather have it than nothing, I s'pose.

O'CLEARY. An' that's the blessed truth.

Sounds are heard of a cell door being closed and locked, and of approaching footsteps.

INSTRUCTOR. [In a sharp, changed voice] Look alive over it!

He shuts the cell door, and stands at attention. The GOVERNOR comes walking down the corridor, followed by WOODER.

THE GOVERNOR. Anything to report?

INSTRUCTOR. [Saluting] Q 3007 [points to a cell] is behind with his work, sir. He'll lose marks to-day.

The GOVERNOR nods and passes on to the end cell. The INSTRUCTOR goes away.

THE GOVERNOR. This is our maker of saws, isn't it?

He takes the saw from his pocket as WOODER throws open the door of the cell. The convict MOANEY is seen lying on his bed, athwart the cell, with his cap on. He springs up and stands in the middle of the cell. He is a raw-boned fellow, about fifty years old, with outstanding big ears and fierce, staring, steel-coloured eyes.

WOODER. Cap off!

MOANEY removes his cap.

WOODER. Out here!

MOANEY comes to the door.

THE GOVERNOR. [Beckoning him into the corridor, and holding up the saw—with the manner of one speaking to a private] Anything to say about this, my man?

MOANEY is silent.

THE GOVERNOR. Come!

MOANEY. It passed the time.

THE GOVERNOR. [Pointing into the ll] Not enough to do, eh?

MOANEY. It don't occupy your mind.

THE GOVERNOR. [Tapping the saw] ou might find a better way than this.

MOANEY. [Sullenly] Well! What ay? I must keep my hand in against e time I get out. What's the good of ything else to me at my time of life? With a gradual change to civility, as s tongue warms] Ye know that, sir. l be in again within a year or two, ter I've done this lot. I don't want to sgrace meself when I'm out. You've t your pride keeping the prison iart; well, I've got mine. [Seeing that ? GOVERNOR is listening with interest, goes on, pointing to the saw] I must doin' a little o' this. It's no harm to y one. I was five weeks makin' that w—a bit of all right it is, too; now ! get cells, I suppose, or seven days' ead and water. You can't help it, sir, now that—I quite put meself in your ce.

THE GOVERNOR. Now, look here, oaney, if I pass it over will you give your word not to try it on again? ink!

He goes into the cell, walks to the end of it, mounts the stool, and tries the window-bars.

THE GOVERNOR. [Returning] Well?

MOANEY. [Who has been reflecting] e got another six weeks to do in here, ne. I can't do it and think o' nothing. ust have something to interest me. u've made me a sporting offer, sir, I can't pass my word about it. I uldn't like to deceive a gentleman. inting into the cell] Another four rs' steady work would have done it.

HE GOVERNOR. Yes, and what then? ght, brought back, punishment. e weeks' hard work to make this, cells at the end of it, while they a new bar to your window. Is it th it, Moaney?

MOANEY. [With a sort of fierceness] , it is.

HE GOVERNOR. [Putting his hand to brow] Oh, well! Two days' cells ead and water.

MOANEY. Thank 'e, sir.

[He turns quickly like an animal and slips into his cell.

The GOVERNOR looks after him and shakes his head as WOODER closes and locks the cell door.

THE GOVERNOR. Open Clipton's cell.

WOODER opens the door of CLIPTON'S cell. CLIPTON is sitting on a stool just inside the door, at work on a pair of trousers. He is a small, thick, oldish man, with an almost shaven head, and smouldering little dark eyes behind smoked spectacles. He gets up and stands motionless in the doorway, peering at his visitors.

THE GOVERNOR. [Beckoning] Come out here a minute, Clipton.

CLIPTON, with a sort of dreadful quietness, comes into the corridor, the needle and thread in his hand. The GOVERNOR signs to WOODER, who goes into the cell and inspects it carefully.

THE GOVERNOR. How are your eyes?

CLIPTON. I don't complain of them. I don't see the sun here. [He makes a stealthy movement, protruding his neck a little] There's just one thing, Mr. Governor, as you're speaking to me. I wish you'd ask the cove next door here to keep a bit quieter.

THE GOVERNOR. What's the matter? I don't want any tales, Clipton.

CLIPTON. He keeps me awake. I don't know who he is. [With contempt] One of this star class, I expect. Oughtn't to be here with us.

THE GOVERNOR. [Quietly] Quite right, Clipton. He'll be moved when there's a cell vacant.

CLIPTON. He knocks about like a wild beast in the early morning. I'm not used to it—stops me getting my sleep out. In the evening too. It's not fair, Mr. Governor, as you're speaking to me. Sleep's the comfort I've got here; I'm entitled to take it out full.

WOODER comes out of the cell, and instantly, as though extinguished, CLIPTON moves with stealthy suddenness back into his cell.

WOODER. All right, sir.

The GOVERNOR nods. The door is closed and locked.

THE GOVERNOR. Which is the man who banged on his door this morning?

WOODER. [Going towards O'CLEARY'S cell] This one, sir; O'Cleary.

[He lifts the disc and glances through the peep-hole.

THE GOVERNOR. Open.

WOODER throws open the door. O'CLEARY, who is seated at a little table by the door as if listening, springs up and stands at attention just inside the doorway. He is a broadfaced, middle-aged man, with a wide, thin, flexible mouth, and little holes under his high cheek-bones.

THE GOVERNOR. Where's the joke, O'Cleary?

O'CLEARY. The joke, your honour? I've not seen one for a long time.

THE GOVERNOR. Banging on your door?

O'CLEARY. Oh! that!

THE GOVERNOR. It's womanish.

O'CLEARY. An' it's that I'm becoming this two months past.

THE GOVERNOR. Anything to complain of?

O'CLEARY. No, sirr.

THE GOVERNOR. You're an old hand; you ought to know better.

O'CLEARY. Yes, I've been through it all.

THE GOVERNOR. You've got a youngster next door; you'll upset him.

O'CLEARY. It cam' over me, your honour. I can't always be the same steady man.

THE GOVERNOR. Work all right?

O'CLEARY. [Taking up a rush mat he is making] Oh! I can do it on me head. It's the miserablest stuff—don't take the brains of a mouse. [Working his mouth] It's here I feel it—the want of a little noise—a terrible little wud aise me.

THE GOVERNOR. You know as well as I do that if you were out in the shops you wouldn't be allowed to talk.

O'CLEARY. [With a look of profound meaning] Not with my mouth.

THE GOVERNOR. Well, then?

O'CLEARY. But it's the great conve sation I'd be havin'.

THE GOVERNOR. [With a smile] We no more conversation on your door.

O'CLEARY. No, sir, I wud not ha the little wit to repate meself.

THE GOVERNOR. [Turning] Goo night.

O'CLEARY. Good-night, your honou

[He turns into his cell. The GOVE NOR shuts the door.

THE GOVERNOR. [Looking at the re ord card] Can't help liking the po blackguard.

WOODER. He's an amiable man, sir.

THE GOVERNOR. [Pointing down t corridor] Ask the doctor to come he Mr. Wooder.

WOODER salutes and goes aw down the corridor.

The GOVERNOR goes to the door FALDER'S cell. He raises his t injured hand to uncover the pe hole; but, without uncovering shakes his head and drops hand; then, after scrutinising record board, he opens the door. FALDER, who is stand against it, lurches forward, u a gasp.

THE GOVERNOR. [Beckoning him o Now tell me: can't you settle do Falder?

FALDER. [In a breathless voice] sir.

THE GOVERNOR. You know wha mean? It's no good running your h against a stone wall, is it?

FALDER. No, sir.

THE GOVERNOR. Well, come.

FALDER. I try, sir.

THE GOVERNOR. Can't you sleep?

FALDER. Very little. Between o'clock and getting up's the w time.

THE GOVERNOR. How's that?

FALDER. [His lips twitch with a of smile] I don't know, sir. I wa ways nervous. [Suddenly vol Everything seems to get such a then. I feel I'll never get out as as I live.

THE GOVERNOR. That's morbid lad. Pull yourself together.

FALDER. [With an equally su ogged resentment] Yes—I've got

)—

THE GOVERNOR. Think of all these ther fellows?

FALDER. They're used to it.

THE GOVERNOR. They all had to go rough it once for the first time, just s you're doing now.

FALDER. Yes, sir, I shall get to be ke them in time, I suppose.

THE GOVERNOR. [Rather taken aback]
'm! Well! That rests with you. Now, me. Set your mind to it, like a good llow. You're still quite young. A man n make himself what he likes.

FALDER. [Wistfully] Yes, sir.

THE GOVERNOR. Take a good hold of urself. Do you read?

FALDER. I don't take the words in.
Hanging his head] I know it's no od; but I can't help thinking of hat's going on outside.

THE GOVERNOR. Private trouble?

FALDER. Yes.

THE GOVERNOR. You mustn't think out it.

FALDER. [Looking back at his cell]
ow can I help it, sir?

He suddenly becomes motionless as WOODER and the DOCTOR approach. The GOVERNOR motions to him to go back into his cell.

FALDER. [Quick and low] I'm quite ght in my head, sir.

[He goes back into his cell.

THE GOVERNOR. [To the DOCTOR] st go in and see him, Clements.

The DOCTOR goes into the cell. The GOVERNOR pushes the door to, nearly closing it, and walks towards the window.

WOODER. [Following] Sorry you ould be troubled like this, sir. Very ntented lot of men, on the whole.

THE GOVERNOR. [Shortly] You think ?

WOODER. Yes, sir. It's Christmas do- g it, in my opinion.

THE GOVERNOR. [To himself] Queer, at!

WOODER. Beg, pardon, sir?

THE GOVERNOR. Christmas!

He turns towards the window, leaving WOODER looking at him with a sort of pained anxiety.

WOODER. [Suddenly] Do you think we make show enough sir? If you'd like us to have more holly?

THE GOVERNOR. Not at all, Mr. Wooder.

WOODER. Very good, sir.

The DOCTOR has come out of FALDER'S cell, and the GOVERNOR beckons to him.

THE GOVERNOR. Well?

THE DOCTOR. I can't make anything much of him. He's nervous, of course.

THE GOVERNOR. Is there any sort of case to report? Quite frankly, Doctor.

THE DOCTOR. Well, I don't think the separate's doing him any good; but then I could say the same of a lot of them—they'd get on better in the shops, there's no doubt.

THE GOVERNOR. You mean you'd have to recommend others?

THE DOCTOR. A dozen at least. It's on his nerves. There's nothing tangible. This fellow here [pointing to O'CLEARY'S cell], for instance—feels it just as much, in his way. If I once get away from physical facts—I shan't know where I am. Conscientiously, sir, I don't know how to differentiate him. He hasn't lost weight. Nothing wrong with his eyes. His pulse is good. Talks all right. It's only another week before he goes.

THE GOVERNOR. It doesn't amount to melancholia?

THE DOCTOR. [Shaking his head] I can report on him if you like; but if I do I ought to report on others.

THE GOVERNOR. I see. [Looking towards FALDER'S cell] The poor devil must just stick it then.

[As he says this he looks absently at WOODER.

WOODER. Beg pardon, sir?

For answer the GOVERNOR stares at him, turns on his heel, and walks away.

There is a sound as of beating on metal.

THE GOVERNOR. [Stopping] Mr. Wooder?

WOODER. Banging on his door, sir. I thought we should have more of that.

[He hurries forward, passing the GOVERNOR, who follows slowly.

The curtain falls.

SCENE III

FALDER'S cell, a whitewashed space thirteen feet broad by seven deep, and nine feet high, with a rounded ceiling. The floor is of shiny blackened bricks. The barred window, with a ventilator, is high up in the middle of the end wall. In the centre of the opposite end wall is the narrow door. In a corner are the mattress and bedding rolled up (two blankets, two sheets, and a coverlet). Above them is a quarter-circular wooden shelf, on which is a Bible and several little devotional books, piled in a symmetrical pyramid; there are also a black hair-brush, tooth-brush, and a bit of soap. In another corner is the wooden frame of a bed, standing on end. There is a dark ventilator under the window, and another over the door. FALDER'S work (a shirt to which he is putting buttonholes) is hung to a nail on the wall over a small wooden table, on which the novel "Lorna Doone" lies open. Low down in the corner by the door is a thick glass screen, about a foot square, covering the gas-jet let into the wall. There is also a wooden stool, and a pair of shoes beneath it. Three bright round tins are set under the window.

In fast-failing daylight, FALDER, in his stockings, is seen standing motionless, with his head inclined towards the door, listening. He moves a little closer to the door, his stockinged feet making no noise. He stops at the door. He is trying harder and harder to hear something, any little thing that is going on outside. He springs suddenly upright—as if at a sound—and remains perfectly motionless. Then, with a heavy sigh, he moves to his work, and stands looking at it, with his head down; he does a stitch or two, having the air of a man so lost in sadness that each stitch is, as it were, a coming to life. Then, turning abruptly, he begins pacing the cell, moving his head, like an animal pacing its cage. He stops again at the door, listens, and, placing the palms of his hands against it with his fingers spread out, leans his forehead against the iron. Turning from it presently, he moves slowly back towards the window, tracing his way with his finger along the top line of the distemper that runs round the walls. He stops under the window, and, picking up the lid of one of the tins, peers into it, as if trying to make a companion of his own face. It has grown very nearly dark. Suddenly the lid falls out of his hand with a clatter—the only sound that has broken the silence—and he stands staring intently at the wall where the stuff of the shirt is hanging rather white in the darkness—he seems to be seeing somebody or something there. There is a sharp tap and click; the cell light behind the glass screen has been turned up. The cell is brightly lighted. FALDER is seen gasping for breath.

A sound from far away, as of distant dull beating on thick metal, is suddenly audible. FALDER shrinks back not able to bear this sudden clamour. But the sound grows, as though some great tumbril were rolling towards the cell. And gradually it seems to hypnotise him. He begins creeping inch by inch nearer to the door. The banging sound travelling from cell to cell, draws closer and closer; FALDER'S hands are seen moving as if his spirit had already joined in this beating, and the sound swells till it seems to have entered the very cell. He suddenly raises his clenched fists. Panting violently, he flings himself at his door, and beats on it.

The curtain falls.

ACT IV

The scene is again COKESON'S room, a few minutes to ten of a March morning, two years later. The doors are all open. SWEEDLE, no blessed with a sprouting moustache, is getting the offices ready. He arranges papers on COKESON'S table; then goes to a covered washstand, raises the lid, and looks at himself in the mirror. While he is gazing his fill RUTH HONEYWILL comes in through the outer office and stands in the doorway. There seems a kind of exultation and excitement behind her habitual impassivity.

SWEEDLE. [Suddenly seeing her, and opping the lid of the washstand with bang] Hello! It's you!

RUTH. Yes.

SWEEDLE. There's only me here! They n't waste their time hurrying down the morning. Why, it must be two ars since we had the pleasure of see- g you. [Nervously] What have you en doing with yourself?

RUTH. [Sardonically] Living.

SWEEDLE. [Impressed] If you want to e him [he points to COKESON'S chair], 'll be here directly—never misses— t much. [Delicately] I hope our iend's back from the country. His ne's been up these three months, if I member.

RUTH nods.

SWEEDLE. I was awful sorry about at. The governor made a mistake—if u ask me.

RUTH. He did.

SWEEDLE. He ought to have given him hanst. And, I say, the judge ought to let him go after that. They've for- t what human nature's like. Whereas know.

RUTH gives him a honeyed smile.

SWEEDLE. They come down on you e a cartload of bricks, flatten you t, and when you don't swell up again y complain of it. I know 'em—seen a of that sort of thing in my time. He shakes his head in the plentitude wisdom] Why, only the other day e governor——

But COKESON has come in through the outer office; brisk with east wind, and decidedly greyer.

COKESON. [Drawing off his coat and ves] Why! it's you! [Then motion- g SWEEDLE out, and closing the door] Quite a stranger! Must be two years. D'you want to see me? I can give you a minute. Sit down! Family well?

RUTH. Yes. I'm not living where I was.

COKESON. [Eyeing her askance] I hope things are more comfortable at home.

RUTH. I couldn't stay with Honeywill, after all.

COKESON. You haven't done anything rash, I hope. I should be sorry if you'd done anything rash.

RUTH. I've kept the children with me.

COKESON. [Beginning to feel that things are not so jolly as he had hoped] Well, I'm glad to have seen you. You've not heard from the young man, I suppose, since he came out?

RUTH. Yes, I ran across him yesterday.

COKESON. I hope he's well.

RUTH. [With sudden fierceness] He can't get anything to do. It's dreadful to see him. He's just skin and bone.

COKESON. [With genuine concern] Dear me! I'm sorry to hear that. [On his guard again] Didn't they find him a place when his time was up?

RUTH. He was only there three weeks. It got out.

COKESON. I'm sure I don't know what I can do for you. I don't like to be snubby.

RUTH. I can't bear his being like that.

COKESON. [Scanning her not unprosperous figure] I know his relations aren't very forthy about him. Perhaps you can do something for him, till he finds his feet.

RUTH. Not now. I could have—but not now.

COKESON. I don't understand.

RUTH. [Proudly] I've seen him again —that's all over.

COKESON. [Staring at her—disturbed] I'm a family man—I don't want to hear anything unpleasant. Excuse me—I'm very busy.

RUTH. I'd have gone home to my people in the country long ago, but they've never got over me marrying Honeywill. I never was waywise, Mr. Cokeson, but I'm proud. I was only a girl, you see, when I married him. I thought the world of him, of course . . . he used to come travelling to our farm.

COKESON. [Regretfully] I did hope you'd have got on better, after you saw me.

RUTH. He used me worse than ever. He couldn't break my nerve, but I lost my health; and then he began knocking the children about. . . . I couldn't stand that. I wouldn't go back now, if he were dying.

COKESON. [Who has risen and is shifting about as though dodging a stream of lava] We mustn't be violent, must we?

RUTH. [Smouldering] A man that can't behave better than that——

There is silence.

COKESON. [Fascinated in spite of himself] Then there you were! And what did you do then?

RUTH. [With a shrug] Tried the same as when I left him before . . . making skirts . . . cheap things. It was the best I could get, but I never made more than ten shillings a week, buying my own cotton and working all day; I hardly ever got to bed till past twelve. I kept at it for nine months. [Fiercely] Well, I'm not fit for that; I wasn't made for it. I'd rather die.

COKESON. My dear woman! We mustn't talk like that.

RUTH. It was starvation for the children too—after what they'd always had. I soon got not to care. I used to be too tired. [She is silent.

COKESON. [With fearful curiosity] And—what happened then?

RUTH. [With a laugh] My employer happened then—he's happened ever since.

COKESON. Dear! Oh Dear! I never came across a thing like this.

RUTH. [Dully] He's treated me all right. But I've done with that. [Suddenly her lips begin to quiver, and she hides them with the back of her hand] I never thought I'd see him again, you see. It was just a chance I met him by Hyde Park. We went in there and sat down, and he told me all about himself. Oh! Mr. Cokeson, give him another chance.

COKESON. [Greatly disturbed] The you've both lost your livings! What horrible position!

RUTH. If he could only get here—where there's nothing to find out abou him!

COKESON. We can't have anythin derogative to the firm.

RUTH. I've no one else to go to.

COKESON. I'll speak to the partner but I don't think they'll take him, unde the circumstances. I don't really.

RUTH. He came with me; he's dow there in the street.

[She points to the windo

COKESON. [On his dignity] H shouldn't have done that until he's se for. [Then softening at the look on h face] We've got a vacancy, as it ha pens, but I can't promise anything.

RUTH. It would be the saving of hir

COKESON. Well, I'll do what I can, b I'm not sanguine. Now tell him that don't want him here till I see ho things are. Leave your address? [R peating her] 83 Mullingar Street? [H notes it on blotting-paper] Good-mor ing.

RUTH. Thank you.

She moves towards the door, tur as if to speak, but does not, a goes away.

COKESON. [Wiping his head and for head with a large white cotton handke chief] What a business!

Then, looking amongst his pape he sounds his bell. SWEEDLE a swers it.

COKESON. Was that young Richar coming here to-day after the clerk place?

SWEEDLE. Yes.

COKESON. Well, keep him in the a I don't want to see him yet.

SWEEDLE. What shall I tell him, sir?

COKESON. [With asperity] Inv something. Use your brains. Do stump him off altogether.

SWEEDIE. Shall I tell him that we got illness, sir?

COKESON. No! Nothing untrue. I'm not here to-day.

SWEEDLE. Yes, sir. Keep him hank ing?

COKESON. Exactly. And look h ou remember Falder? I may be hav-g him round to see me. Now, treat im like you'd have him treat you in a milar position.

SWEEDLE. I naturally should do.

COKESON. That's right. When a man's own never hit 'im. 'Tisn't necessary.
ive him a hand up. That's a metaphor recommend to you in life. It's sound olicy.

SWEEDLE. Do you think the governors ill take him on again, sir?

COKESON. Can't say anything about at. [At the sound of some one having ntered the outer office] Who's there?

SWEEDLE. [Going to the door and oking] It's Falder, sir.

COKESON. [Vexed] Dear me! That's ry naughty of her. Tell him to call gain. I don't want—

He breaks off as FALDER comes in.
FALDER is thin, pale, older, his eyes have grown more restless. His clothes are very worn and loose.

SWEEDLE, nodding cheerfully, withdraws.

COKESON. Glad to see you. You're ther previous. [Trying to keep things easant] Shake hands! She's striking nile the iron's hot. [He wipes his rehead] I don't blame her. She's xious.

FALDER timidly takes COKESON'S hand and glances towards the partners' door.

COKESON. No—not yet! Sit down!

FALDER sits in the chair at the side of COKESON'S table, on which he places his cap.

COKESON. Now you are here I'd like u to give me a little account of your-
f. [*Looking at him over his specta-
s*] How's your health?

FALDER. I'm alive, Mr. Cokeson.

COKESON. [Preoccupied] I'm glad to ar that. About this matter. I don't e doing anything out of the ordinary;
s not my habit. I'm a plain man, and want everything smooth and straight.
it I promised your friend to speak to : partners, and I always keep my ord.

FALDER. I just want a chance, Mr.
keson. I've paid for that job a thousand times and more. I have, sir. No one knows. They say I weighed more when I came out than when I went in. They couldn't weigh me here [he touches his head] or here [he touches his heart, and gives a sort of laugh]. Till last night I'd have thought there was nothing in here at all.

COKESON. [Concerned] You've not got heart disease?

FALDER. Oh! they passed me sound enough.

COKESON. But they got you a place, didn't they?

FALDER. Yes; very good people, knew all about it—very kind to me. I thought I was going to get on first rate. But one day, all of a sudden, the other clerks got wind of it. . . . I couldn't stick it, Mr. Cokeson, I couldn't, sir.

COKESON. Easy, my dear fellow, easy.

FALDER. I had one small job after that, but it didn't last.

COKESON. How was that?

FALDER. It's no good deceiving you, Mr. Cokeson. The fact is, I seem to be struggling against a thing that's all round me. I can't explain it. It's as if I was in a net; as fast as I cut it here, it grows up there. I didn't act as I ought to have, about references; but what are you to do? You must have them. And that made me afraid, and I left. In fact, I'm—I'm afraid all the time now.

[He bows his head and leans dejectedly silent over the table.

COKESON. I feel for you—I do really. Aren't your sisters going to do anything for you?

FALDER. One's in consumption. And the other——

COKESON. Ye . . . es. She told me her husband wasn't quite pleased with you.

FALDER. When I went there—they were at supper—my sister wanted to give me a kiss—I know. But he just looked at her, and said: "What have you come for?" Well, I pocketed my pride and I said: "Aren't you going to give me your hand, Jim? Cis is, I know," I said. "Look here!" he said, "that's all very well, but we'd better come to an understanding. I've been expecting you, and I've made up my mind. I'll give you twenty-five pounds to go to Canada with." "I see," I said —"good riddance! No, thanks; keep your twenty-five pounds." Friendship's a queer thing when you've been where I have.

COKESON. I understand. Will you take the twenty-five pounds from me? [Flustered, as FALDER regards him with a queer smile] Quite without prejudice; I meant it kindly.

FALDER. They wouldn't let me in.

COKESON. Oh! Ah! No! You aren't looking the thing.

FALDER. I've slept in the Park three nights this week. The dawns aren't all poetry there. But meeting her—I feel a different man this morning. I've often thought the being fond of her's the best thing about me; it's sacred, somehow—and yet it did for me. That's queer, isn't it?

COKESON. I'm sure we're all very sorry for you.

FALDER. That's what I've found, Mr. Cokeson. Awfully sorry for me. [With quiet bitterness] But it doesn't do to associate with criminals!

COKESON. Come, come, it's no use calling yourself names. That never did a man any good. Put a face on it.

FALDER. It's easy enough to put a face on it, sir, when you're independent. Try it when you're down like me. They talk about giving you your deserts. Well, I think I've had just a bit over.

COKESON. [Eyeing him askance over his spectacles] I hope they haven't made a Socialist of you.

FALDER is suddenly still, as if brooding over his past self; he utters a peculiar laugh.

COKESON. You must give them credit for the best intentions. Really you must. Nobody wishes you harm, I'm sure.

FALDER. I believe that, Mr. Cokeson. Nobody wishes you harm, but they down you all the same. This feeling—— [He stares round him, as though at something closing in] It's crushing me. [With sudden impersonality] I know it is.

COKESON. [Horribly disturbed] There's nothing there! We must try and take it quiet. I'm sure I've often had you in my prayers. Now leave it to me. I'll use my gumption and take 'em when they're jolly.

[As he speaks the two partners come in.

COKESON. [Rather disconcerted, but trying to put them all at ease] I didn't expect you quite so soon. I've just been having a talk with this young man. I think you'll remember him.

JAMES. [With a grave, keen look] Quite well. How are you, Falder?

WALTER. [Holding out his hand almost timidly] Very glad to see you again, Falder.

FALDER. [Who has recovered his self-control, takes the hand] Thank you, sir.

COKESON. Just a word, Mr. James. [To FALDER, pointing to the clerks' office] You might go in there a minute. You know your way. Our junior won't be coming this morning. His wife's just had a little family.

FALDER goes uncertainly out into the clerks' office.

COKESON. [Confidentially] I'm bound to tell you all about it. He's quite penitent. But there's a prejudice against him. And you're not seeing him to advantage this morning; he's under-nourished. It's very trying to go without your dinner.

JAMES. Is that so, Cokeson?

COKESON. I wanted to ask you. He had his lesson. Now we know all about him, and we want a clerk. There is a young fellow applying, but I'm keeping him in the air.

JAMES. A gaol-bird in the office, Cokeson? I don't see it.

WALTER. "The rolling of the chariot wheels of Justice!" I've never got them out of my head.

JAMES. I've nothing to reproach myself with in this affair. What's he been doing since he came out?

COKESON. He's had one or two places but he hasn't kept them. He's sensitive—quite natural. Seems to fancy everybody's down on him.

JAMES. Bad sign. Don't like the follow—never did from the first. "Weak character" 's written all over him.

WALTER. I think we owe him a lift up.

JAMES. He brought it all on himself.
WALTER. The doctrine of full respon-ibility doesn't quite hold in these ys.
JAMES. [Rather grimly] You'll find safer to hold it for all that, my boy.
WALTER. For oneself, yes—not for her people, thanks.
JAMES. Well! I don't want to be rd.
COKESON. I'm glad to hear you say at. He seems to see something preading his arms] round him. 'Tisn't althy.
JAMES. What about that woman he is mixed up with? I saw some one commonly like her outside as we me in.
COKESON. That! Well, I can't keep ything from you. He has met her.
JAMES. Is she with her husband?
COKESON. No.
JAMES. Falder living with her, I sup-se?
COKESON. [Desperately trying to re-n the new-found jollity] I don't know at of my own knowledge. 'Tisn't my siness.
JAMES. It's our business, if we're go-g to engage him, Cokeson.
COKESON. [Reluctantly] I ought to l you, perhaps: I've had the party re this morning.
JAMES. I thought so. [To WALTER] o, my dear boy, it won't do. Too shady ogether!
COKESON. The two things together ake it very awkward for you—I see at.
WALTER. [Tentatively] I don't quite ow what we have to do with his pri-te life.
JAMES. No, no! He must make a an sheet of it, or he can't come here.
WALTER. Poor devil!
COKESON. Will you have him in? nd as JAMES nods] I think I can get m to see reason.
JAMES. [Grimly] You can leave that me, Cokeson.
WALTER. [To JAMES, in a low voice, hile COKESON is summoning FALDER] is whole future may depend on what u do, Dad.

FALDER comes in. He has pulled himself together, and presents a steady front.

JAMES. Now look here, Falder. My son and I want to give you another chance; but there are two things I must say to you. In the first place: It's no good coming here as a victim. If you've any notion that you've been unjustly treated—get rid of it. You can't play fast and loose with morality and hope to go scot-free. If society didn't take care of itself, nobody would—the sooner you realise that the better.

FALDER. Yes, sir; but—may I say something?

JAMES. Well?

FALDER. I had a lot of time to think it over in prison. [He stops.

COKESON. [Encouraging him] I'm sure you did.

FALDER. There were all sorts there. And what I mean, sir, is, that if we'd been treated differently the first time, and put under somebody that could look after us a bit, and not put in prison, not a quarter of us would ever have got there.

JAMES. [Shaking his head] I'm afraid I've very grave doubts of that, Falder.

FALDER. [With a gleam of malice] Yes, sir, so I found.

JAMES. My good fellow, don't forget that you began it.

FALDER. I never wanted to do wrong.

JAMES. Perhaps not. But you did.

FALDER. [With all the bitterness of his past suffering] It's knocked me out of time. [Pulling himself up] That is, I mean, I'm not what I was.

JAMES. This isn't encouraging for us, Falder.

COKESON. He's putting it awkwardly, Mr. James.

FALDER. [Throwing over his caution from the intensity of his feeling] I mean it, Mr. Cokeson.

JAMES. Now, lay aside all those thoughts, Falder, and look to the future.

FALDER. [Almost eagerly] Yes, sir, but you don't understand what prison is. It's here it gets you.

[He grips his chest.

COKESON. [In a whisper to JAMES] I told you he wanted nourishment.

WALTER. Yes, but, my dear fellow, that'll pass away. Time's merciful.

FALDER. [With his face twitching] I hope so, sir.

JAMES. [Much more gently] Now, my boy, what you've got to do is to put all the past behind you and build yourself up a steady reputation. And that brings me to the second thing. This woman you were mixed up with—you must give us your word, you know, to have done with that. There's no chance of your keeping straight if you're going to begin your future with such a relationship.

FALDER. [Looking from one to the other with a hunted expression] But sir . . . but sir . . . it's the one thing I looked forward to all that time. And she too . . . I couldn't find her before last night.

During this and what follows COKESON becomes more and more uneasy.

JAMES. This is painful, Falder. But you must see for yourself that it's impossible for a firm like this to close its eyes to everything. Give us this proof of your resolve to keep straight, and you can come back—not otherwise.

FALDER. [After staring at JAMES, suddenly stiffens himself] I couldn't give her up. I couldn't! Oh, sir! I'm all she's got to look to. And I'm sure she's all I've got.

JAMES. I'm very sorry, Falder, but I must be firm. It's for the benefit of you both in the long run. No good can come of this connection. It was the cause of all your disaster.

FALDER. But, sir, it means—having gone through all that—getting broken up—my nerves are in an awful state—for nothing. I did it for her.

JAMES. Come! If she's anything of a woman she'll see it for herself. She won't want to drag you down further. If there were a prospect of your being able to marry her—it might be another thing.

FALDER. It's not my fault, sir, that she couldn't get rid of him—she would have if she could. That's been the whole trouble from the beginning. [Looking suddenly at WALTER] . . . If anybod would help her! It's only money wante now, I'm sure.

COKESON. [Breaking in, as WALTE hesitates, and is about to speak] I don think we need consider that—it's rath far-fetched.

FALDER. [To WALTER, appealing] H must have given her full cause sinc she could prove that he drove her leave him.

WALTER. I'm inclined to do what yo say, Falder, if it can be managed.

FALDER. Oh, sir!

[He goes to the window and loo down into the street.

COKESON. [Hurriedly] You don't tal me, Mr. Walter. I have my reasons.

FALDER. [From the window] She down there, sir. Will you see her? can beckon to her from here.

WALTER hesitates, and looks fro COKESON to JAMES.

JAMES. [With a sharp nod] Yes, her come.

FALDER beckons from the windo

COKESON. [In a low fluster to JAM and WALTER] No, Mr. James. She's n quite what she ought to ha' been, whi this young man's been away. She's l her chance. We can't consult how swindle the Law.

FALDER has come from the windo

The three men look at him in sort of awed silence.

FALDER. [With instinctive apprehe sion of some change—looking from o to the other] There's been nothing t tween us, sir, to prevent it. . . . Wh I said at the trial was true. And l night we only just sat in the Park.

SWEEDLE comes in from the ou office.

COKESON. What is it?

SWEEDLE. Mrs. Honeywill.

There is silence.

JAMES. Show her in.

RUTH comes slowly in, and sta stoically with FALDER on one s and the three men on the ot No one speaks. COKESON turn his table, bending over his pa as though the burden of the s ation were forcing him back his accustomed groove.

JAMES. [Sharply] Shut the door.

SWEEDLE shuts the door.

JAMES. We've asked you to come up ecause there are certain facts to be aced in this matter. I understand you ave only just met Falder again.

RUTH. Yes—only yesterday.

JAMES. He's told us about himself, nd we're very sorry for him. I've romised to take him back here if he'll ake a fresh start. [Looking steadily : RUTH] This is a matter that requires ourage, ma'am.

RUTH, who is looking at FALDER, begins to twist her hands in front of her as though prescient of disaster.

FALDER. Mr. Walter How is good ough to say that he'll help us to get u a divorce.

RUTH flashes a startled glance at JAMES and WALTER.

JAMES. I don't think that's practica-e, Falder.

FALDER. But, sir——!

JAMES. [Steadily] Now, Mrs. Honey-ll. You're fond of him.

RUTH. Yes, sir; I love him.

[She looks miserably at FALDER.

JAMES. Then you don't want to stand his way, do you?

RUTH. [In a faint voice] I could take re of him.

JAMES. The best way you can take re of him will be to give him up.

FALDER. Nothing shall make me give u up. Yon can get a divorce. There's en nothing between us, has there?

RUTH. [Mournfully shaking her nd—without looking at him] No.

FALDER. We'll keep apart till it's over, ; if you'll only help us—we promise.

JAMES. [To RUTH] You see the thing inly, don't you? You see what I an?

RUTH. [Just above a whisper] Yes.

COKESON. [To himself] There's a ir woman.

JAMES. The situation is impossible.

RUTH. Must I, sir?

JAMES. [Forcing himself to look at] I put it to you, ma'am. His fu-e is in your hands.

RUTH. [Miserably] I want to do the t for him.

JAMES. [A little huskily] That's right, that's right!

FALDER. I don't understand. You're not going to give me up—after all this? There's something—— [Starting forward to JAMES] Sir, I swear solemnly there's been nothing between us.

JAMES. I believe you, Falder. Come, my lad, be as plucky as she is.

FALDER. Just now you were going to help us. [He stares at RUTH, who is standing absolutely still; his face and hands twitch and quiver as the truth dawns on him] What is it? You've not been——

WALTER. Father!

JAMES. [Hurriedly] There, there! That'll do, that'll do! I'll give you your chance, Falder. Don't let me know what you do with yourselves, that's all.

FALDER. [As if he has not heard] Ruth?

RUTH looks at him; and FALDER covers his face with his hands. There is silence.

COKESON. [Suddenly] There's some one out there. [To RUTH] Go in here. You'll feel better by yourself for a minute.

He points to the clerks' room and moves towards the outer office. FALDER does not move. RUTH puts out her hand timidly. He shrinks back from the touch. She turns and goes miserably into the clerks' room. With a brusque movement he follows, seizing her by the shoulder just inside the doorway. COKESON shuts the door.

JAMES. [Pointing to the outer office] Get rid of that, whoever it is.

SWEEDLE. [Opening the office door, in a scared voice] Detective-Sergeant Wister.

The detective enters, and closes the door behind him.

WISTER. Sorry to disturb you, sir. A clerk you had here, two years and a half ago. I arrested him in this room.

JAMES. What about him?

WISTER. I thought perhaps I might get his whereabouts from you.

There is an awkward silence.

COKESON. [Pleasantly, coming to the rescue] We're not responsible for his movements; you know that.

JAMES. What do you want with him?

WISTER. He's failed to report himself lately.

WALTER. Has he to keep in touch with the police then?

WISTER. We're bound to know his whereabouts. I dare say we shouldn't interfere, sir, but we've just heard there's a serious matter of obtaining employment with a forged reference. What with the two things together—we must have him.

Again there is silence. WALTER and COKESON steal glances at JAMES, who stands staring steadily at the detective.

COKESON. [Expansively] We're very busy at the moment. If you could make it convenient to call again we might be able to tell you then.

JAMES. [Decisively] I'm a servant of the Law, but I dislike peaching. In fact, I can't do such a thing. If you want him you must find him without us.

As he speaks his eye falls on FALDER'S cap, still lying on the table, and his face contracts.

WISTER. [Noting the gesture—quietly] Very good, sir. I ought to warn you that sheltering——

JAMES. I shelter no one. But you mustn't come here and ask questions which it's not my business to answer.

WISTER. [Dryly] I won't trouble you further then, gentlemen.

COKESON. I'm sorry we couldn't give you the information. You quite understand, don't you? Good morning!

WISTER turns to go, but instead of going to the door of the outer office he goes to the door of the clerks' room.

COKESON. The other door . . . the other door!

WISTER opens the clerks' door. RUTH'S voice is heard: "Oh, do!" and FALDER'S: "I can't!" There is a little pause; then, with sharp fright, RUTH says: "Who's that?" WISTER has gone in.

The three men look aghast at the door.

WISTER. [From within] Keep back, please!

He comes swiftly out with his arm twisted in FALDER'S. The latter gives a white, staring look at the three men.

WALTER. Let him go this time, for God's sake!

WISTER. I couldn't take the responsibility, sir.

FALDER. [With a queer, desperate laugh] Good!

Flinging a look back at RUTH, he throws up his head, and goes out through the outer office, half dragging WISTER after him.

WALTER. [With despair] That finishes him. It'll go on for ever now.

SWEEDLE can be seen staring through the outer door. There are sounds of footsteps descending the stone stairs; suddenly a dull thud, a faint "My God!" in WISTER'S voice.

JAMES. What's that?

SWEEDLE dashes forward. The door swings to behind him. There is dead silence.

WALTER. [Starting forward to the inner room] The woman—she's fainting!

He and COKESON support the fainting RUTH from the doorway of the clerks' room.

COKESON. [Distracted] Here, my dear! There, there!

WALTER. Have you any brandy?

COKESON. I've got sherry.

WALTER. Get it, then. Quick!

[He places RUTH in a chair—while JAMES has dragged forward.

COKESON. [With sherry] Here! This good strong sherry.

They try to force the sherry between her lips.

*There is the sound of feet, and then stop to listen. The outer door is reopened—*WISTER and SWEEDLE are seen carrying some burden.

JAMES. [Hurrying forward] What's it?

They lay the burden down in the outer office, out of sight, and but RUTH cluster round it, speaking in hushed voices.

WISTER. He jumped—neck's broken.

WALTER. Good God!

WISTER. He must have been mad to ink he could give me the slip like that. nd what was it—just a few months!

WALTER. [Bitterly] Was that all?

JAMES. What a desperate thing! Then, in a voice unlike his own] Run or a doctor—you!

SWEEDLE rushes from the outer office.

JAMES. An ambulance!

WISTER goes out. On RUTH'S face an expression of fear and horror has been seen growing, as if she dared not turn towards the voices. She now rises and steals towards them.

WALTER. [Turning suddenly] Look!

The three men shrink back out of her way.

RUTH drops on her knees by the body.

RUTH. [In a whisper] What is it? He's not breathing. [She crouches over him] My dear! My pretty!

In the outer office doorway the figures of men are seen standing.

RUTH. [Leaping to her feet] No, no! No, no! He's dead!

The figures of the men shrink back.

COKESON. [Stealing forward. In a hoarse voice] There, there, poor dear woman!

At the sound behind her RUTH faces round at him.

COKESON. No one'll touch him now! Never again! He's safe with gentle Jesus!

RUTH stands as though turned to stone in the doorway staring at COKESON, who, bending humbly before her, holds out his hand as one would to a lost dog.

The curtain falls.

THE LITTLE DREAM

AN ALLEGORY IN SIX SCENES

SCENE I

is just after sunset of an August evening. The scene is a room in a mountain hut, furnished only with a dresser and a low broad window seat. Through this window three rocky peaks are seen by the light of a moon, which is slowly whitening the last hues of sunset. An oil lamp is burning. SEELCHEN, a mountain girl, eighteen years old, is humming a folk-song, and putting away in a cupboard freshly washed soup-bowls and glasses. She is dressed in a tight-fitting black velvet bodice, square-cut at the neck, and partly filled in with a gay handkerchief, coloured rose-pink, blue, and golden, like the alpenrose, the gentian, and the mountain dandelion; alabaster beads, pale as edelweiss, are round her throat; her stiffened, white linen sleeves finish at the elbow; and her full well-worn skirt is of gentian blue. The two thick plaits of her hair are crossed, and turned round her head. As she puts away the last bowl, there is a knock, and LAMOND opens the outer door. He is young, tanned, and good-looking, dressed like a climber, and carries a plaid, a rucksack, and an ice-axe.

LAMOND. Good evening!

SEELCHEN. Good evening, gentle sir! LAMOND. My name is Lamond. I'm y late, I fear.

SEELCHEN. Do you wish to sleep e?

LAMOND. Please.

SEELCHEN. All the beds are full—it is ity. I will call mother.

LAMOND. I've come to go up the Great Horn at sunrise.

SEELCHEN. [Awed] The Great Horn! But he is impossible.

LAMOND. I am going to try that.

SEELCHEN. There is the Wine Horn, and the Cow Horn.

LAMOND. I have climbed them.

SEELCHEN. But he is so dangerous—it is perhaps—death.

LAMOND. Oh! that's all right! One must take one's chance.

SEELCHEN. And father has hurt his foot. For guide, there is only Hans Felsman.

LAMOND. The celebrated Felsman?

SEELCHEN. [Nodding; then looking at him with admiration] Are you that Herr Lamond who has climbed all our little mountains this year?

LAMOND. All but that big fellow.

SEELCHEN. We have heard of you. Will you not wait a day for father's foot?

LAMOND. Ah! no. I must go back home to-morrow.

SEELCHEN. The gracious sir is in a hurry.

LAMOND. [Looking at her intently] Alas!

SEELCHEN. Are you from a great city? Is it very big?

LAMOND. Six million souls.

SEELCHEN. Oh! [After a little pause] I have seen Cortina twice.

LAMOND. Do you live here all the year?

SEELCHEN. In winter in the valley.

LAMOND. And don't you want to see the world?

SEELCHEN. Sometimes. [Going to a door, she calls softly] Hans! [Then pointing to another door] There are seven German gentlemen asleep in there!

LAMOND. Oh God!

SEELCHEN. Please! They are here to see the sunrise. [She picks up a little book that has dropped from LAMOND'S pocket] I have read several books.

LAMOND. This is by a great poet. Do you never make poetry here, and dream dreams, among your mountains?

SEELCHEN. [Slowly shaking her head] See! It is the full moon.

While they stand at the window looking at the moon, there enters a lean, well-built, taciturn young man dressed in Loden.

SEELCHEN. Hans!

FELSMAN. [In a deep voice] The gentleman wishes me?

SEELCHEN. [Awed] The Great Horn for to-morrow. [Whispering to him] It is the celebrated city one.

FELSMAN. The Great Horn is not possible.

LAMOND. You say that? And you're the famous Felsman?

FELSMAN. [Grimly] We start at dawn.

SEELCHEN. It is the first time for years!

LAMOND. [Placing his plaid and rucksack on the window bench] Can I sleep here?

SEELCHEN. I will see! [She runs out.

FELSMAN. [Taking blankets from the cupboard and spreading them on the window seat] So!

[As he goes out into the air, SEELCHEN comes slipping in again.

SEELCHEN. There is still one bed. This is too hard for you.

LAMOND. Oh! thanks; but that's all right.

SEELCHEN. To please me!

LAMOND. May I ask your name?

SEELCHEN. Seelchen.

LAMOND. Little soul, that means—doesn't it? To please you I would sleep with seven German gentlemen.

SEELCHEN. Oh! no; it is not necessary.

LAMOND. [With a grave bow] At your service, then.

[He prepares to go.

SEELCHEN. Is it very nice in towns, in the World, where you come from?

LAMOND. When I'm there I would be here; but when I'm here I would be there.

SEELCHEN. [Clasping her hands] That is like me—but I am always here.

LAMOND. Ah! yes; there is no one like you in towns.

SEELCHEN. In two places one cannot be. [Suddenly] In the towns there are theatres, and there is beautiful fine work, and—dancing, and—churches—and trains—and all the things in books—and—

LAMOND. Misery.

SEELCHEN. But there is life.

LAMOND. And there is death.

SEELCHEN. To-morrow, when you have climbed—will you not come back?

LAMOND. No.

SEELCHEN. You have all the world and I have nothing.

LAMOND. Except Felsman, and the mountains.

SEELCHEN. It is not good to eat only bread.

LAMOND. [Looking at her hard] I would like to eat you!

SEELCHEN. But I am not nice; I am full of big wants—like the cheese with holes.

LAMOND. I shall come again.

SEELCHEN. There will be no more hard mountains left to climb. And if it is not exciting, you do not care.

LAMOND. O wise little soul!

SEELCHEN. No. I am not wise. I here it is always aching.

LAMOND. For the moon?

SEELCHEN. Yes. [Then suddenly] From the big world you will remember—

LAMOND. [Taking her hand] There is nothing in the big world so sweet as this.

SEELCHEN. [Wisely] But there is the big world itself.

LAMOND. May I kiss you, for good night?

She puts her face forward; and he kisses her cheek, and, suddenly, her lips. Then as she draws away—

LAMOND. I am sorry, little soul.

SEELCHEN. That's all right!

LAMOND. [Taking the candle] Dream well! Good night!

SEELCHEN. [Softly] Good night!

FELSMAN. [Coming in from the air

d eyeing them] It is cold—it will be ıe.

LAMOND, still looking back, goes; and FELSMAN waits for him to pass.

SEELCHEN. [From the window seat] was hard for him here, I thought.

He goes up to her, stays a moment looking down, then bends and kisses her hungrily.

SEELCHEN. Art thou angry?

He does not answer, but turning out the lamp, goes into an inner room.

SEELCHEN sits gazing through the window at the peaks bathed in full moonlight. Then, drawing the blankets about her, she snuggles down on the window seat.

SEELCHEN. [In a sleepy voice] They ıssed me—both. [She sleeps.

The scene falls quite dark.

SCENE II

he scene is slowly illumined as by dawn. SEELCHEN is still lying on the window seat. She sits up, freeing her face and hands from the blankets, changing the swathings of deep sleep for the filmy coverings of a dream. The wall of the hut has vanished; there is nothing between her and the three dark mist-veiled mountains save a trough of black space.

ose to SEELCHEN, on the edge of the trough of dark space that divides her from the mountains, are four little flower figures, EDELWEISS and GENTIAN, MOUNTAIN DANDELION and ALPENROSE, peering up at her through the darkness. On their heads are crowns of their several flowers, all powdered with dew-drops which ring like little bells.

SEELCHEN. Oh! They have faces!

All around the peaks there is nothing but almost blue-black sky. The peaks brighten.

EDELWEISS. [In a tiny voice] Would ıu? Would you? Would you? Ah! ı!

GENTIAN, M. DANDELION, ALPENROSE. [With their bells ringing enviously] Oo-oo-oo!

And suddenly the Peak of THE COW HORN speaks in a voice as of one unaccustomed.

THE COW HORN. I am the mountains. Amongst kine and my black-brown sheep I live; I am silence, and monotony; I am the solemn hills. I am fierceness, and the mountain wind; clean pasture, and wild rest. Look in my eyes, love me alone!

SEELCHEN. [Breathless] The Cow Horn! He is speaking—for Felsman and the mountains. It is the half of my heart!

THE FLOWERS laugh happily.

THE COW HORN. I stalk the eternal hills—I drink the mountain snows. My eyes are the colour of burned wine; in them lives melancholy. The lowing of the kine, the wind, the sound of falling rocks, the running of the torrents; no other talk know I. Thoughts simple, and blood hot, strength huge—the cloak of gravity.

SEELCHEN. Yes, yes, I want him. He is strong!

THE COW HORN. Little soul! Hold to me! Love me! Live with me under the stars!

SEELCHEN. [Below her breath] I am afraid.

And suddenly the Peak of THE WINE HORN speaks in a youth's voice.

THE WINE HORN. I am the town—the will-o'-the-wisp that dances through the streets; I am the cooing dove, from the plane-trees' and the chestnuts' shade. From day to day all changes, where I burn my incense to my thousand little gods. In white palaces I dwell, and passionate dark alleys. The life of men in crowds is mine—of lamplight in the streets at dawn. [Softly] I have a thousand loves, and never one too long; for I am nimbler than your heifers playing in the sunshine.

THE FLOWERS, ringing in alarm cry:

"We know them!"

THE WINE HORN. I hear the rustlings of the birth and death of pleasure; and the rattling of swift wheels. I hear the hungry oaths of men; and love kisses in the airless night. Without me, little soul, you starve and die.

SEELCHEN. He is speaking for the gentle sir, and the big world of the Town. It pulls my heart.

THE WINE HORN. My thoughts surpass in number the flowers in your meadows; they fly more swiftly than your eagles on the wind. I drink the wine of aspiration, and the drug of disillusion. Thus am I never dull!

SEELCHEN. I am afraid.

THE WINE HORN. Love me, little soul! I paint life fifty colours. I make a thousand pretty things! I twine about your heart!

SEELCHEN. He is honey!

THE FLOWERS ring their bells jealously and cry:
"Bitter! Bitter!"

THE COW HORN. Stay with me, Seelchen! I wake thee with the crystal air.

THE FLOWERS laugh happily.

THE WINE HORN. Come with me, Seelchen! My fan, Variety, shall wake you!

THE FLOWERS moan.

SEELCHEN. [In grief] My heart! It is torn!

THE WINE HORN. With me, little soul, you shall race in the streets, and peep at all secrets. We will hold hands, and fly like the thistle-down.

M. DANDELION. My puff-balls fly faster!

THE WINE HORN. I will show you the sea.

GENTIAN. My blue is deeper!

THE WINE HORN. I will shower on you blushes.

ALPENROSE. I can blush redder!

THE WINE HORN. Little soul, listen! My Jewels! Silk! Velvet!

EDELWEISS. I am softer than velvet.

THE WINE HORN. [Proudly] My wonderful rags!

THE FLOWERS. [Moaning] Of those we have none.

SEELCHEN. He has all things.

THE COW HORN. Mine are the clouds with the dark silvered wings; mine are the rocks on fire with the sun; and the dewdrops cooler than pearls. Away from my breath, of snow and swe grass, thou wilt droop, little soul.

THE WINE HORN. The dark Clove my fragrance!

SEELCHEN. [Distracted] Oh! it hard!

THE COW HORN. I will never dese thee.

THE WINE HORN. A hundred time I will desert you, a hundred times con back, and kiss you.

SEELCHEN. [Whispering] Peace fo my heart!

THE COW HORN. With me thou sha lie on the warm wild thyme.

THE FLOWERS laugh happily.

THE WINE HORN. With me you sha lie on a bed of dove's feathers.

THE FLOWERS moan.

THE WINE HORN. I will give you ol wine.

THE COW HORN. I will give thee ne milk.

THE WINE HORN. Hear my song!

From far away comes a sound as mandolins.

SEELCHEN. [Clasping her breast] M heart—it is leaving me!

THE COW HORN. Hear my song!

From the distance floats the pipin of a Shepherd's reed.

SEELCHEN. [Curving her hand at h ears] The piping! Ah!

THE COW HORN. Stay with me, See chen!

THE WINE HORN. Come with m Seelchen!

THE COW HORN. I give thee ce tainty!

THE WINE HORN. I give you chance

THE COW HORN. I give thee peac

THE WINE HORN. I give you chang

THE COW HORN. I give thee stillnes

THE WINE HORN. I give you voice

THE COW HORN. I give thee one lo

THE WINE HORN. I give you many

SEELCHEN. [As if the words we torn from her heart] Both, both—I w love!

And suddenly the Peak of T GREAT HORN speaks.

THE GREAT HORN. And both th shalt love, little soul! Thou shalt lie the hills with Silence; and dance in t cities with Knowledge! Both shall p ss thee! The sun and the moon on e mountains shall burn thee; the lamps the Town singe thy wings, small oth! Each shall seem all the world to ee, each shall seem as thy grave! Thy art is a feather blown from one outh to the other. But be not afraid!

r the life of a man is for all loves turn. 'Tis a little raft moored, then ling out into the blue; a tune caught a hush, then whispering on; a new-rn babe, half courage and half sleep.
ere is a hidden rhythm. Change, iietude, Chance, Certainty. The One,
e Many. Burn on—thou pretty flame, ing to eat the world! Thou shalt ne to me at last, my little soul!

SEELCHEN, enraptured, stretches her arms to embrace the sight and sound, but all fades slowly into dark sleep.

SCENE III

e dark scene again becomes glamorous under a night sky. SEELCHEN is standing with her hand stretched out towards the gateway of a Town from which is streaming a pathway of light. On one side of the gate stands the glowing figure of a youth. On the other side of the gateway is a cloaked statue in shadow. Above the centre of the gateway is a dimly seen sphynx-like stone head.

The Youth of THE WINE HORN sings:

'Little star soul
Through the frost fields of night
Roaming alone, disconsolate—
From out the cold
I call thee in—
Striking my dark mandolin—
Beneath this moon of gold."

SEELCHEN. [Whispering] Is it the wn—the big world?

The Youth of THE WINE HORN sings on:

retty grey moth,
Vhere the strange candles shine,
eeking for warmth, so desperate—
Ah! fluttering dove
I bid thee win—
Striking my dark mandolin—
The crimson flame of love."

SEELCHEN. [Gazing enraptured at the gateway] In there it is warm and light!

As she speaks, from either side come moth-children, meeting and fluttering up the path of light to the gateway; then wheeling aside, they form again, and again flutter forward.

SEELCHEN. [Holding out her hands] They are real—their wings are windy.

They rush past her and vanish into the Town.

The Youth of THE WINE HORN sings on:

"Lips of my song,
To the white maiden's heart
Go ye, and whisper, passionate
These words that burn—
'O listening one!
Love that flieth is gone
Nor ever may return!'"

SEELCHEN runs towards him—but the glow around him fades, he has become shadow. There in the gateway stands LAMOND in a dark cloak.

SEELCHEN. It is you!

LAMOND. Without my little soul I am cold. Come!

[He holds out his arms to her.

SEELCHEN. Shall I be safe?

LAMOND. What is safety? Are you safe in your mountains?

SEELCHEN. Where am I, here?

LAMOND. The Town.

Smiling, he points to the gateway. There come dancing out all the firefly lights of the streets.

SEELCHEN. [Whispering] What are they?

LAMOND. The lights, little one—street lights. The lamps—the gold of life!

SEELCHEN. Are they always so bright?

The Youth of THE WINE HORN is again illumined. He strikes a loud chord; then, as SEELCHEN moves towards that sound, the glow dies; there is again only blue sha- dow, and all the firefly lights have vanished through the gateway.

SEELCHEN. Is he laughing at me?

LAMOND. Come!

SEELCHEN. I am afraid!

LAMOND. Of what is new? Would you know but one-half of the moon? Ah! Little Soul, will you live for ever with your goats—when I can show you such wonders?

SEELCHEN. Are they good?

LAMOND. They are everything.

SEELCHEN. [Creeping a little nearer to the gateway] It is so strange and bright in the Town! Is it not dark in there too?

LAMOND. I will keep the darkness from you with love.

SEELCHEN. Oh! but I do not love.

LAMOND. Child! To love is to live—seeking for wonder. When a feather flies is it not loving the wind, the unknown? If darkness and light did not change, could we breathe? [And as she draws nearer] To love is to peer over the edge, and, spying the little grey flower, to climb down! It has wings; it has flown—again you must climb; it shivers, 'tis but air in your hand—you must crawl, you must cling, you must leap, and still it is there and not there—for the grey flower flits like a moth, and the wind of its wings is all you shall catch. But your eyes shall be shining, your cheeks shall be burning, your breast shall be panting.—Ah! little heart! [The scene falls darker] And when the night comes—there it is still, thistle-down blown on the dark, and your white hands will reach for it, and your honey breath waft it, and never, never, shall you grasp it—but life shall be lovely. [His voice dies to a whisper. He stretches out his arms] Come to my Town!—Come!

SEELCHEN. [Touching his breast] I will come.

LAMOND. [Drawing her to the gateway] Love me!

SEELCHEN. I love!

The mandolin twangs out; they pass through into the Town. Illumined in his crimson glow the Youth of THE WINE HORN is seen again. And slowly to the chords of h mandolin he begins to sing:

"The windy hours through darkne fly—
Canst hear them, little heart?
New loves are born, and old loves di
And kissing lips must part.
The dusky bees of passing years—
Canst see them, soul of mine—
From flower and flower supping tear
And pale sweet honey wine?

[His voice grows strange and pa sionate.

"O flame that treads the marsh of tim
Flitting for ever low,
Where, through the black enchante slime,
We, desperate, following go—
Untimely fire, we bid thee stay!
Into dark air above,
The golden gipsy thins away—
So has it been with love!"

While he is singing it falls dar save for the glow around him. A his song ends he fades away, an the dawn breaks. Then from th dark gateway of the Town, the chill grey light, SEELCHE comes forth. She is pale, as wan with living; her eyes lik pitch against the powdery white ness of her face.

SEELCHEN. My heart is old.

But as she speaks from far awa is heard a faint chiming of Cow BELLS; and while she stand listening, LAMOND appears in th gateway of the Town.

LAMOND. Little soul!

SEELCHEN. You! Always you!

LAMOND. I have new wonders.

SEELCHEN shakes her head.

LAMOND. I swear it. You have n tired of me, who am never the sam That cannot be.

SEELCHEN. Listen!

The chime of THE COWBELLS heard again.

LAMOND. [Jealously] The music dull sleep! Has life, then, with been sorrow?

SEELCHEN. I do not regret.

LAMOND. Come!

SEELCHEN. [Pointing to her breast] e bird is tired with flying. [Touch- her lips] The flowers have no dew.

LAMOND. Would you leave me?

SEELCHEN. See!

There, in a streak of the dawn, close to the gateway, but point- ing away from the Town, the dim cloaked statue has turned into the Shepherd of THE COW HORN.

LAMOND. What is it?

SEELCHEN. My mountains!

LAMOND. There is nothing! [He holds fast] Do not go! Do not go! I 're given you the marvels of my wn. I will give you more!

But SEELCHEN turns from him.

LAMOND. If with you I may no longer , then together let us die! See! Here sweet Deaths by Slumber and by owning!

From the dim gateway of the Town come forth the shadowy forms, DEATH BY SLUMBER and DEATH BY DROWNING, who dance slowly towards SEELCHEN, stand smiling at her, and as slowly dance away.

SEELCHEN. [Following] Yes. They good and sweet.

While she moves again towards the Town LAMOND'S face becomes transfigured with joy. But just as she reaches the gateway there is heard again the distant chime of COWBELLS. and the sound of the blowing of pipes; the Shep- herd of THE COW HORN sings:

"To the wild grass come, and the dull far roar
Of the falling rock; to the flowery meads
Of thy mountain home, where the eagles soar,
And the grizzled flock in the sun- shine feeds.
To the Alp, where I, in the pale light crowned
With the moon's thin horns, to my pasture roam;
To the silent sky, and the wist- ful sound
Of the rosy dawns—my daughter, come!"

While he sings, the sun has risen; and SEELCHEN has turned, with parted lips, and hands stretched out; and the Forms of Death have vanished back into the Town.

SEELCHEN. I come.

LAMOND. [Clasping her knees] Little soul! Must I then die, like a gnat when the sun goes down? Without you I am nothing.

SEELCHEN. [Releasing herself] Poor heart—I am gone!

LAMOND. It is dark.

He covers his face with his cloak, in the gateway of the Town.

Then as SEELCHEN reaches the Shepherd of THE COW HORN, there is blown a long note of a pipe; the scene falls black; and there rises a far, continual, mingled sound of Cowbells, and Flower-Bells, and Pipes.

SCENE IV

The scene slowly brightens with the misty flush of dawn. SEELCHEN stands on a green alp, with, all around, nothing but blue sky. A slip of a crescent moon is lying on her back. On a low rock sits a brown-faced GOATHERD blowing on a pipe, and the four FLOWER-CHILDREN are dancing in their shifts of grey-white, and blue, rose-pink, and burnt gold. Their bells are ringing, as they pelt each other with flowers of their own colours; and each in turn, wheeling, flings one flower at SEEL- CHEN, who puts them to her lips and eyes.

SEELCHEN. The dew! [She moves to- wards the rock] Goatherd!

But THE FLOWERS encircle her; and when they wheel away he has vanished. She turns to THE FLOWERS, but they too vanish. The veils of mist are rising.

SEELCHEN. Gone! [She rubs her eyes; then turning once more to the rock, sees FELSMAN standing there, with arms folded] Thou!

FELSMAN. So thou hast come—like a sick heifer to be healed. Was it good in the Town—that kept thee so long?

SEELCHEN. I do not regret.

FELSMAN. Why then return?

SEELCHEN. I was tired.

FELSMAN. Never again shalt thou go from me!

SEELCHEN. [Mocking] With what wilt thou keep me?

FELSMAN. [Grasping her] Thus.

SEELCHEN. I have known Change—I am no timid maid.

FELSMAN. [Moodily] Aye, thou art different. Thine eyes are hollow—thou art white-faced.

SEELCHEN. [Still mocking] Then what hast thou here that shall keep me?

FELSMAN. The sun.

SEELCHEN. To burn me.

FELSMAN. The air.

There is a faint wailing of wind.

SEELCHEN. To freeze me.

FELSMAN. The silence.

The noise of the wind dies away.

SEELCHEN. Yes, it is lonely.

FELSMAN. The flowers shall dance to thee.

And to a ringing of their bells, THE FLOWERS come dancing till, one by one, they cease, and sink down, nodding, falling asleep.

SEELCHEN. See! Even they grow sleepy here!

FELSMAN. The goats shall wake them.

THE GOATHERD is seen again sitting upright on his rock and piping. And there come four little brown, wild-eyed, naked Boys, with Goats' legs and feet, who dance gravely in and out of the sleeping FLOWERS; and THE FLOWERS wake, spring up, and fly; till each Goat, catching his flower, has vanished, and THE GOATHERD has ceased to pipe, and lies motionless again on his rock.

FELSMAN. Love me!

SEELCHEN. Thou art rude!

FELSMAN. Love me!

SEELCHEN. Thou art grim!

FELSMAN. Aye, I have no silver tongue. Listen! This is my voice! [Sweeping his arm around all the still alp] From dawn to the first star all is quiet. [Laying his hand on her heart] And the wings of the bird shall be still.

SEELCHEN. [Touching his eyes] Thine eyes are fierce. In them I see the wild beasts crouching. In them I see the distance. Are they always fierce?

FELSMAN. Never—to look on thee, my flower.

SEELCHEN. [Touching his hands] Thy hands are rough to pluck flowers. [She breaks away from him—to the rock where THE GOATHERD is lying] See! Nothing moves. The very day stands still. Boy! [But THE GOATHERD neither stirs nor answers] He is lost in the blue. [Passionately] Boy! He will not answer me. No one will answer me here.

FELSMAN. [With fierce longing] Am I no one?

The scene darkens with evening.

SEELCHEN. See! Sleep has stolen the day! It is night already.

There come the female shadow forms of SLEEP, in grey cobweb garments, waving their arms drowsily, wheeling round her.

SEELCHEN. Are you Sleep? My love Sleep! My lover—Rest!

Smiling, she holds out her arms. FELSMAN. He takes her sweaying form. They vanish, encircled by the forms of SLEEP. It is dark save for the light of the thin horned moon suddenly grown bright. Then on his rock, to faint piping, THE GOATHERD sings:

"My goat, my little speckled one,
My yellow eyed, sweet-smelling
Let moon and wind and gold sun
And stars beyond all telling
Make, every day, a sweeter gra
And multiply thy leaping!
And may the mountain foxes p
And never scent thee sleeping!
Oh! let my pipe be clear and
And let me find sweet water!
No hawk, nor udder-seeking
Come near thee, little daught
May fiery rocks defend, at no
Thy tender feet from slipping!

Oh! hear my prayer beneath the moon—
Great Master, Goat-God—skipping!"

With a long wail of the pipe THE GOATHERD BOY is silent. Then the moon fades, and all is black; till, in the faint grisly light of the false dawn creeping up, SEELCHEN is seen rising from the side of the sleeping FELSMAN. THE GOATHERD BOY has gone; but by the rock stands the Shepherd of THE COW HORN in his cloak.

SEELCHEN. Years, years I have slept. y spirit is hungry. [Then as she sees Shepherd of THE COW HORN stand there] I know thee now—Life of the th—the smell of thee, the sight of e, the taste of thee, and all thy mu: I have passed thee and gone by.

[She moves away.

ELSMAN. [Waking] Where wouldst u go?

SEELCHEN. To the edge of the world.

ELSMAN. [Rising and trying to stay] Thou shalt not leave me!

But against her smiling gesture he struggles as though against solidity.

SEELCHEN. Friend! The time has e.

ELSMAN. Were my kisses, then, too le? Was I too dull?

SEELCHEN. I do not regret, but I must

The Youth of THE WINE HORN is seen suddenly standing opposite the motionless Shepherd of THE COW HORN; and his mandolin twangs out.

ELSMAN. The cursed music of the wn. Is it to him thou wilt return? roping for sight of the hated figure] annot see.

SEELCHEN. Fear not! I go ever onrd.

ELSMAN. Do not leave me to the id in the rocks! Without thee love is d, and I must die.

SEELCHEN. Poor heart! I am gone.

ELSMAN. [Crouching against the k] It is cold.

At the blowing of the Shepherd's pipe, THE COW HORN stretches forth his hand to her. The mandolin twangs out, and THE WINE HORN holds out his hand. She stands unmoving.

SEELCHEN. Companions, I must go. In a moment it will be dawn.

In silence THE COW HORN and THE WINE HORN cover their faces. The false dawn dies. It falls quite dark.

SCENE V

Then a faint glow stealing up, lights the snowy Peak of THE GREAT HORN, and streams forth on SEELCHEN. No other peak is visible, but to either side of that path of light, like shadows, THE COW HORN and THE WINE HORN stand with cloaked heads.

SEELCHEN. Great One! I come!

The Peak of THE GREAT HORN speaks in a far-away voice, growing, with the light, clearer and stronger:

"Wandering flame, thou restless fever
Burning all things, regretting none;
The winds of fate are stilled for ever—
Thy little generous life is done,
And all its wistful wonderings cease!
Thou traveller to the tideless sea,
Where light and dark, and change and peace,
Are One—Come, little soul, to MYSTERY!"

SEELCHEN, falling on her knees, bows her head to the ground. The glow slowly fades till the scene is black.

SCENE VI

Then as the blackness lifts, in the dim light of the false dawn filtering through the window of the mountain hut, LAMOND and FELSMAN are seen standing beside SEELCHEN looking down at her asleep on the window seat.

FELSMAN. [Putting out his hand to wake her] In a moment it will be dawn.

She stirs, and her lips move, murmuring.

LAMOND. Let her sleep. She's dreaming.

FELSMAN raises a lantern, till its light falls on her face. Then the two men move stealthily towards the door, and, as she speaks, pas out.

SEELCHEN. [Rising to her knees, an stretching out her hands with ecstasy Great One, I come! [Waking, she look around, and struggles to her feet] M little dream!

Through the open door, the firs flush of dawn shows in the sk There is a sound of goat-bel passing.

The curtain falls.

THE PIGEON

A FANTASY IN THREE ACTS

"Without that, Monsieur, all is dry as a parched skin of orange."

ACT I

is the night of Christmas Eve, the scene is a Studio flush with the street, having a skylight darkened by a fall of snow. There is no one in the room, the walls of which are whitewashed, above a floor of bare dark boards. A fire is cheerfully burning. On a model's platform stands an easel and canvas. There are busts and pictures; a screen, a little stool, two armchairs, and a long old-fashioned settle under the window. A door in one wall leads to the house, a door in the opposite wall to the model's dressing-room, and the street door is in the centre of the wall between. On a low table a Russian samovar is hissing; and beside it on a tray stands a teapot, with glasses, lemon, sugar, and a decanter of rum. Through a huge uncurtained window close to the street door the snowy lamplit street can be seen, and beyond it the river and a night of stars.

e sound of a latchkey turned in the lock of the street door, and ANN WELLWYN enters, a girl of seventeen, with hair tied in a ribbon and covered by a scarf. Leaving the door open, she turns up the electric light and goes to the fire. She throws off her scarf and long red cloak. She is dressed in a high evening frock of some soft white material. Her movements are quick and substantial. Her face, full of no nonsense, is decided and sincere, with deep-set eyes, and a capable, well-shaped forehead. Shredding off her gloves she warms her hands.

In the doorway appear the figures of two men. The first is rather short and slight, with a soft short beard, bright soft eyes, and a crumply face. Under his squash hat his hair is rather plentiful and rather grey. He wears an old brown ulster and woollen gloves, and is puffing at a hand-made cigarette. He is ANN'S father, WELLWYN, the artist. His companion is a well-wrapped clergyman of medium height and stoutish build, with a pleasant, rosy face, rather shining eyes, and rather chubby clean-shaped lips; in appearance, indeed, a grown-up boy. He is the Vicar of the parish— CANON BERTLEY.

BERTLEY. My dear Wellwyn, the whole question of reform is full of difficulty. When you have two men like Professor Calway and Sir Thomas Hoxton taking diametrically opposite points of view, as we've seen to-night, I confess, I—— WELLWYN. Come in, Vicar, and have some grog.

BERTLEY. Not to-night, thanks! Christmas to-morrow! Great temptation, though, this room! Good night, Wellwyn; good night, Ann!

ANN. [Coming from the fire towards the tea-table] Good night, Canon Bertley.

He goes out, and WELLWYN, shutting the door after him, approaches the fire.

ANN. [Sitting on the little stool, with her back to the fire, and making tea] Daddy!

WELLWYN. My dear?

ANN. You say you liked Professor Calway's lecture. Is it going to do you any good, that's the question?

WELLWYN. I—I hope so, Ann.

ANN. I took you on purpose. Your charity's getting simply awful. Those two this morning cleared out all my housekeeping money.

WELLWYN. Um! Um! I quite understand your feeling.

ANN. They both had your card, so I couldn't refuse—didn't know what you'd said to them. Why don't you make it a rule never to give your card to anyone except really decent people, and—picture dealers, of course.

WELLWYN. My dear, I have—often.

ANN. Then why don't you keep it? It's a frightful habit. You are naughty, Daddy. One of these days you'll get yourself into the most fearful complications.

WELLWYN. My dear, when they—when they look at you?

ANN. You know the house wants all sorts of things. Why do you speak to them at all?

WELLWYN. I don't—they speak to me.

[He takes off his ulster and hangs it over the back of an arm-chair.

ANN. They see you coming. Anybody can see you coming, Daddy. That's why you ought to be so careful. I shall make you wear a hard hat. Those squashy hats of yours are hopelsssly inefficient.

WELLWYN. [Gazing at his hat] Calway wears one.

ANN. As if anyone would beg of Professor Calway.

WELLWYN. Well—perhaps not. You know, Ann, I admire that fellow. Wonderful power of—of—theory! How a man can be so absolutely tidy in his mind! It's most exciting.

ANN. Has anyone begged of you today?

WELLWYN. [Doubtfully] No—no.

ANN. [After a long, severe look] Will you have rum in your tea?

WELLWYN. [Crestfallen] Yes, my dear—a good deal.

ANN. [Pouring out the rum, and handing him the glass] Well, who was it?

WELLWYN. He didn't beg of me. [Losing himself in recollection] Interesting old creature, Ann—real type. Old cabman.

ANN. Where?

WELLWYN. Just on the Embankment.

ANN. Of course! Daddy, you know the Embankment ones are always rotters.

WELLWYN. Yes, my dear; but this wasn't.

ANN. Did you give him your card?

WELLWYN. I—I—don't——

ANN. Did you, Daddy?

WELLWYN. I'm rather afraid I may have!

ANN. May have! It's simply immoral.

WELLWYN. Well, the old fellow was so awfully human, Ann. Besides, I didn't give him any money—hadn't got any.

ANN. Look here, Daddy! Did you ever ask anybody for anything? You know you never did, you'd starve first. So would anybody decent. Then, why won't you see that people who beg are rotters?

WELLWYN. But, my dear, we're not all the same. They wouldn't do it if it wasn't natural to them. One likes to be friendly. What's the use of being alive if one isn't?

ANN. Daddy, you're hopeless.

WELLWYN. But, look here, Ann, the whole thing's so jolly complicated. According to Calway, we're to give the State all we can spare, to make the undeserving deserving. He's a Professor; he ought to know. But old Hoxton's always dinning it into me that we ought to support private organisations for helping the deserving, and damn the undeserving. Well, that's just the opposite. And he's a J.P. Tremendous experience. And the Vicar seems to be for a little bit of both. Well, what the devil——? My trouble is, whichever I go with, he always converts me. [Ruefully] And there's no fun in any of them.

ANN. [Rising] Oh! Daddy, you are so—don't you know that you're the air of all social reformers? [She en-lops him] There's a tear in the left ee of your trousers. You're not to ear them again.

WELLWYN. Am I likely to?

ANN. I shouldn't be a bit surprised if isn't your only pair. D'you know iat I live in terror of?

WELLWYN gives her a queer and apprehensive look.

ANN. That you'll take them off some y, and give them away in the street. ave you got any money? [She feels his coat, and he in his trousers—y find nothing] Do you know that ur pockets are one enormous hole?

WELLWYN. No!

ANN. Spiritually.

WELLWYN. Oh! Ah! H'm!

ANN. [Severely] Now, look here, ddy! [She takes him by his lapels] on't imagine that it isn't the most gusting luxury on your part to go on ing away things as you do! You ow what you really are, I suppose—sickly sentimentalist!

WELLWYN. [Breaking away from her, turbed] It isn't sentiment. It's sim- that they seem to me so—so—jolly. I'm to give up feeling sort of—e in here [he touches his chest] ut people—it doesn't matter who y are—then I don't know what I'm do. I shall have to sit with my head a bag.

ANN. I think you ought to.

WELLWYN. I suppose they see I like m—then they tell me things. After t, of course you can't help doing at you can.

ANN. Well, if you will love them up!

WELLWYN. My dear, I don't want to. isn't them especially—why, I feel it n with old Calway sometimes. It's y Providence that he doesn't want thing of me—except to make me like nself—confound him!

ANN. [Moving towards the door into house—impressively] What you n't see is that other people aren't a like you.

WELLWYN. Well, thank God!

ANN. It's so old-fashioned too! I'm ing to bed—I just leave you to your science.

WELLWYN. Oh!

ANN. [Opening the door—severely] Good night— [with a certain weakening] you old—Daddy!

[She jumps at him, gives him a hug, and goes out.

WELLWYN stands perfectly still. He first gazes up at the skylight, then down at the floor. Slowly he begins to shake his head, and mutter, as he moves towards the fire.

WELLWYN. Bad lot. . . . Low type—no backbone, no stability!

There comes a fluttering knock on the outer door. As the sound slowly enters his consciousness, he begins to wince, as though he knew, but would not admit its significance. Then he sits down, covering his ears. The knocking does not cease. WELLWYN drops first one, then both hands, rises, and begins to sidle towards the door. The knocking becomes louder.

WELLWYN. Ah dear! Tt! Tt! Tt!

After a look in the direction of ANN'S disappearance, he opens the street door a very little way. By the light of the lamp there can be seen a young girl in dark clothes, huddled in a shawl to which the snow is clinging. She has on her arm a basket covered with a bit of sacking.

WELLWYN. I can't you know; it's impossible.

The girl says nothing, but looks at him with dark eyes.

WELLWYN. [Wincing] Let's see—I don't know you—do I?

The girl, speaking in a soft hoarse voice, with a faint accent of reproach: "Mrs. Megan—you give me this——" She holds out a dirty visiting card.

WELLWYN. [Recoiling from the card] Oh! Did I? Ah! When?

MRS. MEGAN. You 'ad some vi'lets off of me larst spring. You give me 'arf a crown.

WELLWYN. [Looking stealthily round] Ah! Well, come in—just for a minute—it's very cold—and tell us what it is.

She comes in stolidly, a sphinx-like figure, with her pretty tragic little face.

WELLWYN. I don't remember you. [Looking closer] Yes, I do. Only—you weren't the same—were you?

MRS. MEGAN. [Dully] I seen trouble since.

WELLWYN. Trouble! Have some tea?

He looks anxiously at the door into the house, then goes quickly to the table, and pours out a glass of tea, putting rum into it.

WELLWYN. [Handing her the tea] Keeps the cold out! Drink it off!

MRS. MEGAN drinks it off, chokes a little, and almost immediately seems to get a size larger. WELLWYN watches her with his head held on one side, and a smile broadening on his face.

WELLWYN. Cure for all evils, um?

MRS. MEGAN. It warms you.

[She smiles.

WELLWYN. [Smiling back, and catching himself out] Well! You know, I oughtn't.

MRS. MEGAN. [Conscious of the disruption of his personality, and withdrawing into her tragic abyss] I wouldn't 'a come. but you told me if I wanted an' and——

WELLWYN. [Gradually losing himself in his own nature] Let me see—corner of Flight Street, wasn't it?

MRS. MEGAN. [With faint eagerness] Yes, sir, an' I told you about me vi'lets—it was a luvly spring day.

WELLWYN. Beautiful! Beautiful! Birds singing, and the trees, &c.! We had quite a talk. You had a baby with you.

MRS. MEGAN. Yes. I got married since then.

WELLWYN. Oh! Ah! Yes! [Cheerfully] And how's the baby?

MRS. MEGAN. [Turning to stone] I lost her.

WELLWYN. Oh! poor—Um!

MRS. MEGAN. [Impassive] You said something abaht makin' a picture of me. [With faint eagerness] So I thought I might come, in case you'd forgotten.

WELLWYN. [Looking at her intently] Things going badly?

MRS. MEGAN. [Stripping the sacking off her basket] I keep 'em covered up but the cold gets to 'em. Thruppence—that's all I've took.

WELLWYN. Ho! Tt! Tt! [He looks into the basket] Christmas, too!

MRS. MEGAN. They're dead.

WELLWYN. [Drawing in his breath] Got a good husband?

MRS. MEGAN. He plays cards.

WELLWYN. Oh, Lord; And what are you doing out—with a cold like that?

[He taps his chest.

MRS. MEGAN. We was sold up this morning—he's gone off with 'is mate. Haven't took enough yet for a night's lodgin'.

WELLWYN. [Correcting a spasmodic dive into his pockets] But who buys flowers at this time of night?

MRS. MEGAN looks at him, and faintly smiles.

WELLWYN. [Rumpling his hair] Saints above us! Here! Come to the fire!

She follows him to the fire. He shuts the street door.

WELLWYN. Are your feet wet?

She nods.

WELLWYN. Well, sit down here, and take them off. That's right.

She sits on the stool. And after a slow look up at him, which has in it a deeper knowledge than belongs of right to her years, begins taking off her shoes and stockings. WELLWYN goes to the door into the house, opens it, and listens with a sort of stealthy casualness. He returns whistling, but not out loud. The girl has finished taking off her stockings, and turned her bare toes to the flames. She shuffles them back under her skirt.

WELLWYN. How old are you, my child?

MRS. MEGAN. Nineteen, come Candlemas.

WELLWYN. And what's your name?

MRS. MEGAN. Guinevere.

WELLWYN. What? Welsh?

MRS. MEGAN. Yes—from Battersea.

WELLWYN. And your husband?
MRS. MEGAN. No. Irish, 'e is. Notting
'ale, 'e comes from.
WELLWYN. Roman Catholic?
MRS. MEGAN. Yes, My 'usband's an
'eist as well.
WELLWYN. I see. [Abstractedly] How 'lly! And how old is he—this young an of yours?
MRS. MEGAN. 'E'll be twenty soon.
WELLWYN. Babes in the wood! Does e treat you badly?
MRS. MEGAN. No.
WELLWYN. Nor drink?
MRS. MEGAN. No. He's not a bad one.
nly he gets playin' cards—then 'e'll
the kite.
WELLWYN. I see. And when he's not ing it, what does he do?
MRS. MEGAN. [Touching her basket] me as me. Other jobs tires 'im.
WELLWYN. That's very nice! [He ecks himself] Well, what am I to do ith you?
MRS. MEGAN. Of course, I could get e night's lodging if I like to do—the me as some of them.
WELLWYN. No! no! Never, my child!
ever!
MRS. MEGAN. It's easy that way.
WELLWYN. Heavens! But your hus-nd! Um?
MRS. MEGAN. [With stoical vindic- veness] He's after one I know of.
WELLWYN. Tt! What a pickle!
MRS. MEGAN. I'll 'ave to walk about e streets.
WELLWYN. [To himself] Now how n I?

MRS. MEGAN looks up and smiles at him, as if she had already discovered that he is peculiar.

WELLWYN. You see, the fact is, I istn't give you anything—because—ll, for one thing I haven't got it.
ere are other reasons, but that's the real one. But, now, there's a little om where my models dress. I won-r if you could sleep there. Come, and e.

The girl gets up lingeringly, loth to leave the warmth. She takes up her wet stockings.

MRS. MEGAN. Shall I put them on ain?

WELLWYN. No, no; there's a nice warm pair of slippers. [Seeing the steam rising from her] Why, you're wet all over. Here, wait a little!

He crosses to the door into the house, and after stealthy listening, steps through. The girl, like a cat, steals back to the warmth of the fire. WELLWYN returns with a candle, a canary-coloured bath-gown, and two blankets.

WELLWYN. Now then! [He precedes her towards the door of the model's room] Hsssh! [He opens the door and holds up the candle to show her the room] Will it do? There's a couch. You'll find some washing things. Make yourself quite at home. See!

The girl, perfectly dumb, passes through with her basket—and her shoes and stockings. WELLWYN hands her the candle, blankets, and bath-gown.

WELLWYN. Have a good sleep, child! Forget that you're alive! [He closes the door, mournfully] Done it again! [He goes to the table, cuts a large slice of cake, knocks on the door, and hands it in] Chow-chow! [Then, as he walks away, he sights the opposite door] Well—damn it, what could I have done? Not a farthing on me! [He goes to the street door to shut it, but first opens it wide to confirm himself in his hospitality] Night like this!

A sputter of snow is blown in his face. A voice says: "Monsieur, pardon!" WELLWYN recoils spasmodically. A figure moves from the lamp-post to the doorway. He is seen to be young and to have ragged clothes. He speaks again: "You do not remember me, Monsieur? My name is Ferrand—it was in Paris, in the Champs-Elysées—by the fountain. . . . When you came to the door, Monsieur—I am not made of iron. . . . Tenez, here is your card—I have never lost it." He holds out to WELLWYN an old and dirty visiting card. As inch by inch he has advanced into the doorway, the light from within falls on him, a tall gaunt young pagan with fair hair and reddish golden stubble of beard, a long ironical nose a little to one side, and large, grey, rather prominent eyes. There is a certain grace in his figure and movements; his clothes are nearly dropping off him.

WELLWYN. [Yielding to a pleasant memory] Ah! yes. By the fountain. I was sitting there, and you came and ate a roll, and drank the water.

FERRAND. [With faint eagerness] My breakfast. I was in poverty—veree bad off. You gave me ten francs. I thought I had a little the right [WELLWYN makes a movement of disconcertion], seeing you said that if I came to England——

WELLWYN. Um! And so you've come?

FERRAND. It was time that I consolidated my fortunes, Monsieur.

WELLWYN. And you—have——

[He stops, embarrassed.

FERRAND. [Shrugging his ragged shoulders] One is not yet Rothschild.

WELLWYN. [Sympathetically] No. [Yielding to memory] We talked philosophy.

FERRAND. I have not yet changed my opinion. We other vagabonds, we are exploited by the bourgeois. This is always my idea, Monsieur.

WELLWYN. Yes—not quite the general view, perhaps! Well—[Heartily] Come in! Very glad to see you again.

FERRAND. [Brushing his arm over his eyes] Pardon, Monsieur—your goodness—I am a little weak. [He opens his coat, and shows a belt drawn very tight over his ragged shirt] I tighten him one hole for each meal, during two days now. That gives you courage.

WELLWYN. [With cooing sounds, pouring out tea, and adding rum] Have some of this. It'll buck you up.

[He watches the young man drink.

FERRAND. [Becoming a size larger] Sometimes I think that I will never succeed to dominate my life, Monsieur—though I have no vices, except that I guard always the aspiration to achieve success. But I will not roll myself under the machine of existence to gain a nothing every day. I must find with what to fly a little.

WELLWYN. [Delicately] Yes; yes—I remember, you found it difficult to stay long in any particular—yes.

FERRAND. [Proudly] In one little corner? No—Monsieur—never! That is not in my character. I must see life.

WELLWYN. Quite, quite! Have some cake? [He cuts cake.

FERRAND. In your country they say you cannot eat the cake and have it. But one must always try, Monsieur; one must never be content. [Refusing the cake] Grand merci, but for the moment I have no stomach—I have lost my stomach now for two days. If I could smoke, Monsieur!

[He makes the gesture of smoking.

WELLWYN. Rather! [Handing his tobacco pouch] Roll yourself one.

FERRAND. [Rapidly rolling a cigarette] If I had not found you, Monsieur—I would have been a little hole in the river to-night—I was so discouraged. [He inhales and puffs a long luxurious whiff of smoke. Very bitterly] Life! [He disperses the puff of smoke with his finger, and stares before him] And to think that in a few minutes HE will be born! Monsieur! [He gazes intently at WELLWYN] The world would reproach you for your goodness to me.

WELLWYN. [Looking uneasily at the door into the house] You think so? Ah!

FERRAND. Monsieur, if HE himself were on earth now, there would be a little heap of gentlemen writing to the journals every day to call HIM sloppy sentimentalist! And what is veree funny, these gentlemen they would all be most strong Christians. [He regards WELLWYN deeply] But that will not trouble you, Monsieur; I saw well from the first that you are no Christian. You have so kind a face.

WELLWYN. Oh! Indeed!

FERRAND. You have not enough the Phirasee in your character. You do not judge, and you are judged.

[He stretches his limbs as if in pain.

WELLWYN. Are you in pain?

FERRAND. I 'ave a little the rheuma-
m.

WELLWYN. Wet through, of course!
lancing towards the house] Wait a
! I wonder if you'd like these trou-rs; they've—er—they're not quite——

He passes through the door into the house. FERRAND stands at the fire, with his limbs spread as it were to embrace it, smoking with abandonment. WELLWYN returns stealthily, dressed in a Jaeger dressing-gown, and bearing a pair of drawers, his trousers, a pair of slippers, and a sweater.

WELLWYN. [Speaking in a low voice, the door is still open] Can you make se do for the moment?

FERRAND. *Je vous remercie, Monsieur.
ointing to the screen*] May I retire?

WELLWYN. Yes, yes.

FERRAND goes behind the screen. WELLWYN closes the door into the house, then goes to the window to draw the curtains. He suddenly recoils and stands petrified with doubt.

WELLWYN. Good Lord!

There is the sound of tapping on glass. Against the windowpane is pressed the face of a man. WELLWYN motions to him to go away. He does not go, but continues tapping. WELLWYN opens the door. There enters a square old man, with a red, pendulous-jawed, shaking face under a snow-be-sprinkled bowler hat. He is holding out a visiting card with tremulous hand.

WELLWYN. Who's that? Who are u?

TIMSON. [In a thick, hoarse, shaking ce] 'Appy to see you, sir; we 'ad a c this morning. Timson—I give you name. You invited of me, if ye rember.

WELLWYN. It's a little late, really.

TIMSON. Well, ye see, I never ex-ted to 'ave to call on yer. I was hed up all right when I spoke to yer s mornin', but bein' Christmas, ngs 'ave took a turn with me to-day.
e speaks with increasing thickness] reg'lar disgusted—not got the price of a bed abaht me. Thought you wouldn't like me to be delicate—not at my age.

WELLWYN. [With a mechanical and distracted dive of his hands into his pockets] The fact is, it so happens I haven't a copper on me.

TIMSON. [Evidently taking this for professional refusal] Wouldn't arsk you if I could 'elp it. 'Ad to do with 'orses all me life. It's this 'ere cold I'm frightened of. I'm afraid I'll go to sleep.

WELLWYN. Well, really, I——

TIMSON. To be froze to death—I mean—it's awkward.

WELLWYN. [Puzzled and unhappy] Well—come in a moment, and let's—think it out. Have some tea!

He pours out the remains of the tea, and finding there is not very much, adds rum rather liberally. TIMSON, who walks a little wide at the knees, steadying his gait, has followed.

TIMSON. [Receiving the drink] Yer 'ealth. 'Ere's sobriety! [He applies the drink to his lips with shaking hand. Agreeably surprised] Blimey! Thish yer tea's foreign, ain't it?

FERRAND. [Reappearing from behind the screen in his new clothes of which the trousers stop too soon] With a needle, Monsieur, I would soon have with what to make face against the world.

WELLWYN. Too short! Ah!

He goes to the dais on which stands ANN'S work-basket, and takes from it a needle and cotton.

While he is so engaged FERRAND is sizing up old TIMSON, as one dog will another. The old man, glass in hand, seems to have lapsed into coma.

FERRAND. [Indicating TIMSON] Monsieur!

[He makes the gesture of one drinking, and shakes his head.

WELLWYN. [Handing him the needle and cotton] Um! Afraid so!

They approach TIMSON, who takes no notice.

FERRAND. [Gently] It is an old cabby, is it not, Monsieur? Ceux sont tous des buveurs.

WELLWYN. [Concerned at the old man's stupefaction] Now, my old friend, sit down a moment. [They manœuvre TIMSON to the settle] Will you smoke?

TIMSON. [In a drowsy voice] Thank 'ee—smoke pipe of 'baccer. Old 'orse—standin' abaht in th' cold.

[He relapses into coma.

FERRAND. [With a click of his tongue] Il est parti.

WELLWYN. [Doubtfully] He hasn't really left a horse outside, do you think?

FERRAND. Non, non, Monsieur—no 'orse. He is dreaming. I know very well that state of him—that catches you sometimes. It is the warmth sudden on the stomach. He will speak no more sense to-night. At the most, drink, and fly a little in his past.

WELLWYN. Poor old buffer!

FERRAND. Touching, is it not, Monsieur? There are many brave gents among the old cabbies—they have philosophy—that comes from 'orses, and from sitting still.

WELLWYN. [Touching TIMSON'S shoulder] Drenched!

FERRAND. That will do 'im no 'arm, Monsieur—no 'arm at all. He is well wet inside, remember—it is Christmas to-morrow. Put him a rug, if you will, he will soon steam.

TIMSON. [Faintly roused] Tha's right. Put—the rug on th' old 'orse.

[He makes a strange noise, and works his head and tongue.

WELLWYN. [Alarmed] What's the matter with him?

FERRAND. It is nothing, Monsieur; for the moment he thinks 'imself a 'orse. Il joue "cache-cache," 'ide and seek, with what you call—'is bitt.

WELLWYN. But what's to be done with him? One can't turn him out in this state.

FERRAND. If you wish to leave him 'ere, Monsieur, have no fear. I charge myself with him.

WELLWYN. Oh! [Dubiously] You—er—I really don't know, I—hadn't contemplated—— You think you could manage if I—if I went to bed?

FERRAND. But certainly, Monsieur.

WELLWYN. [Still dubiously] You—you're sure you've everything you want?

FERRAND. [Bowing] Mais oui, Monsieur.

WELLWYN. I don't know what I can do by staying.

FERRAND. There is nothing you can do, Monsieur. Have confidence in me.

WELLWYN. Well—keep the fire up quietly—very quietly. You'd better take this coat of mine, too. You'll find it precious cold, I expect, about three o'clock.

[He hands FERRAND his ulster.

FERRAND. [Taking it] I shall sleep praying for you, Monsieur.

WELLWYN. Ah! Yes! Thanks! Well—good-night! By the way, I shall be down rather early. Have to think of my household a bit, you know.

FERRAND. Très bien, Monsieur. I comprehend. One must well be regular in this life.

WELLWYN. [With a start] Lord! [He looks at the door of the model's room.] I'd forgotten——

FERRAND. Can I undertake anything, Monsieur?

WELLWYN. No, no! [He goes to the electric light switch by the outer door.] You won't want this, will you?

FERRAND. Merci, Monsieur.

WELLWYN switches off the light.

FERRAND. Bon soir, Monsieur!

WELLWYN. The devil! Er—good-night!

[He hesitates, rumples his hair, and passes rather suddenly away.

FERRAND. [To himself] Poor pigeon! [Looking long at old TIMSON] Espèce de type anglais!

He sits down in the firelight, curls up a foot on his knee, and takes out a knife, rips the stitching of a turned-up end of trousers, pinches the cloth double, and puts in the preliminary stitch of a new hem—all with the swiftness of one well-accustomed. Then, as if hearing a sound behind him, he gets up quickly and slips behind the screen. MRS. MEGAN, attracted by the cessation of voices has opened the door, and is creeping from the model's room towards the fire. She has almost reached it before she takes in the torpid crimson figure of old TIMSON. She halts and puts her hand to her chest—a queer figure in the firelight, garbed in the canary-coloured bath-gown and rabbits-wool slippers, her black matted hair straggling down on her neck. Having quite digested the fact that the old man is in a sort of stupor, MRS. MEGAN goes close to the fire, and sits on the little stool, smiling sideways at old TIMSON. FERRAND, coming quietly up behind, examines her from above, drooping his long nose as if inquiring with it as to her condition in life; then he steps back a yard or two.

'ERRAND. [Gently] Pardon, Ma'moi-e.

IRS. MEGAN. [Springing to her feet] !

'ERRAND. All right, all right! We are ve gents!

'IMSON. [Faintly roused] 'Old up, -e!

'ERRAND. Trust in me, Ma'moiselle!

MRS. MEGAN responds by drawing away.

ERRAND. [Gently] We must be good rades. This asylum—it is better 1 a doss-'ouse.

He pushes the stool over towards her, and seats himself. Somewhat reassured, MRS. MEGAN again sits down.

RS. MEGAN. You frightened me.

IMSON. [Unexpectedly—in a drowsy] Purple foreigners!

ERRAND. Pay no attention, Ma'moi-. He is a philosopher.

RS. MEGAN. Oh! I thought 'e was ed.

They both look at TIMSON.

ERRAND. It is the same—veree 'arm-

RS. MEGAN. What's that he's got on

'RRAND. It is a coronation robe. e no fear Ma'moiselle. Veree docile itate.

MRS. MEGAN. I wouldn't be afraid of him. [Challenging FERRAND] I'm afraid o' you.

FERRAND. It is because you do not know me, Ma'moiselle. You are wrong, it is always the unknown you should love.

MRS. MEGAN. I don't like the way you —speaks to me.

FERRAND. Ah! You are a Princess in disguise?

MRS. MEGAN. No fear!

FERRAND. No? What is it then you do to make face against the necessities of life? A living?

MRS. MEGAN. Sells flowers.

FERRAND. [Rolling his eyes] It is not a career.

MRS. MEGAN. [With a touch of devilry] You don't know what I do.

FERRAND. Ma'moiselle, whatever you do is charming.

MRS. MEGAN looks at him, and slowly smiles.

MRS. MEGAN. You're a foreigner.

FERRAND. It is true.

MRS. MEGAN. What do you do for a livin'?

FERRAND. I am an interpreter.

MRS. MEGAN. You ain't very busy, are you?

FERRAND. [With dignity] At present I am resting.

MRS. MEGAN. [Looking at him and smiling] How did you and 'im come here?

FERRAND. Ma'moiselle, we would ask you the same question.

MRS. MEGAN. The gentleman let me. 'E's funny.

FERRAND. C'est un ange! [At MRS. MEGAN's blank stare he interprets] An angel!

MRS. MEGAN. Me luck's out—that's why I come.

FERRAND. [Rising] Ah! Ma'moiselle! Luck! There is the little God who dominates us all. Look at this old! [He points to TIMSON] He is finished. In his day that old would be doing good business. He could afford himself—[He makes a sign of drinking] Then come the motor cars. All goes—he has nothing left, only 'is 'abits of a cocher! Luck!

TIMSON. [With a vague gesture—drowsily] Kick the foreign beggars out.

FERRAND. A real Englishman. . . . And look at me! My father was merchant of ostrich feathers in Brussels. If I had been content to go in his business, I would 've been rich. But I was born to roll—"rolling stone"—to voyage is stronger than myself. Luck! . . . And you, Ma'moiselle, shall I tell your fortune? [He looks in her face] You were born for la joi de vivre—to drink the wines of life. Et vous voilà! Luck!

Though she does not in the least understand what he has said, her expression changes to a sort of glee.

FERRAND. Yes. You were born loving pleasure. Is it not? You see, you cannot say, No. All of us, we have our fates. Give me your hand. [He kneels down and takes her hand] In each of us there is that against which we cannot struggle. Yes, yes!

He holds her hand, and turns it over between his own. MRS. MEGAN remains stolid, half-fascinated, half-reluctant.

TIMSON. [Flickering into consciousness] Be'ave yourselves! Yer crimson canary birds!

MRS. MEGAN would withdraw her hand, but cannot.

FERRAND. Pay no attention, Ma'moiselle. He is a Puritan.

TIMSON relapses into comatosity, upsetting his glass, which falls with a crash.

MRS. MEGAN. Let go my hand, please!

FERRAND. [Relinquishing it, and staring into the fire gravely] There is one thing I have never done—'urt a woman—that is hardly in my character. [Then, drawing a little closer, he looks into her face] Tell me, Ma'moiselle, what is it you think of, all day long?

MRS. MEGAN. I dunno—lots, I thinks of.

FERRAND. Shall I tell you?

Her eyes remain fixed on his, the strangeness of him preventing her from telling him to "get along." He goes on in his ironic voice.

FERRAND. It is of the streets—th lights—the faces—it is of all whic moves, and is warm—it is of colour— it is [he brings his face quite close t hers] of Love. That is for you what th road is for me. That is for you wha the rum is for that old—[He jerks hi thumb back at TIMSON. Then bendin swiftly forward to the girl] See! I kis you—Ah!

He draws her forward off the stoo There is a little struggle, the she resigns her lips. The litt stool, overturned, falls with clatter. They spring up, and mov apart. The door opens and AN enters from the house in a blu dressing-gown, with her ha loose, and a candle held hig above her head. Taking in th strange half-circle round the fir she recoils. Then, standing h grounds, calls in a voice shar ened by fright: "Daddy- Daddy!"

TIMSON. [Stirring uneasily, a struggling to his feet] All ri——! I comin'!

FERRAND. Have no fear, Madame!

In the silence that follows, a clo begins loudly striking twel ANN remains, as if carved stone, her eyes fastened on t strangers. There is the sound some one falling downstairs, a WELLWYN appears, also holdi a candle above his head.

ANN. Look!

WELLWYN. Yes, yes, my dear! It happened.

ANN. [With a sort of groan] O Daddy!

In the renewed silence, the chur clock ceases to chime.

FERRAND. [Softly, in his ironic voi HE is come, Monsieur! 'Appy Chri mas! Bon Noël!

There is a sudden chime of bells The stage is blotted dark.

Curtain.

ACT II

is four o'clock in the afternoon of New Year's Day. On the raised Dais MRS. MEGAN is standing, in her rags, with bare feet and ankles, her dark hair as if blown about, her lips parted, holding out a dishevelled bunch of violets. Before his easel, WELLWYN is painting her. Behind him, at a table between the cupboard and the door to the model's room, TIMSON is washing brushes, with the movements of one employed upon relief works. The samovar is hissing on the table by the stove, the tea-things are set out.

VELLWYN. Open your mouth.

MRS. MEGAN opens her mouth.

ANN. [In hat and coat, entering from house] Daddy!

WELLWYN goes to her; and, released from restraint, MRS. MEGAN looks around at TIMSON and grimaces.

VELLWYN. Well, my dear?

They speak in low voices.

ANN. [Holding out a note] This note m Canon Bertley. He's going to ig her husband here this afternoon.

[She looks at MRS. MEGAN.

VELLWYN. Oh!

[He also looks at MRS. MEGAN.

NN. And I met Sir Thomas Hox- at church this morning, and spoke im about Timson.

VELLWYN. Um!

They look at TIMSON. Then ANN goes back to the door, and WELLWYN follows her.

NN. [Turning] I'm going round , Daddy, to ask Professor Calway t we're to do with that Ferrand.

ELLWYN. Oh! One each! I wonder ey'll like it.

NN. They'll have to lump it.

[She goes out into the house.

ELLWYN. [Back at his ease] You shut your mouth now.

MRS. MEGAN shuts her mouth, but opens it immediately to smile.

ELLWYN. [Spasmodically] Ah! that's what I want. [He dabs furiously at the canvas. Then standing back, runs his hands through his hair and turns a painter's glance towards the skylight] Dash! Light's gone! Off you get, child—don't tempt me!

MRS. MEGAN descends. Passing towards the door of the model's room she stops, and stealthily looks at the picture.

TIMSON. Ah! Would yer!

WELLWYN. [Wheeling round] Want to have a look? Well—come on!

He takes her by the arm, and they stand before the canvas. After a stolid moment, she giggles.

WELLWYN. Oh! You think so?

MRS. MEGAN. [Who has lost her hoarseness] It's not like my picture that I had on the pier.

WELLWYN. No—it wouldn't be.

MRS. MEGAN. [Timidly] If I had an 'at on, I'd look better.

WELLWYN. With feathers?

MRS. MEGAN. Yes.

WELLWYN. Well, you can't! I don't like hats, and I don't like feathers.

MRS. MEGAN timidly tugs his sleeve. TIMSON, screened as he thinks by the picture, has drawn from his bulky pocket a bottle and is taking a stealthy swig.

WELLWYN. [To MRS. MEGAN, affecting not to notice] How much do I owe you?

MRS. MEGAN. [A little surprised] You paid me for to-day—all 'cept a penny.

WELLWYN. Well! Here it is. [He gives her a coin] Go and get your feet on!

MRS. MEGAN. You've give me 'arf a crown.

WELLWYN. Cut away now!

MRS. MEGAN, smiling at the coin, goes towards the model's room. She looks back at WELLWYN, as if to draw his eyes to her, but he is gazing at the picture; then, catching old TIMSON'S sour glance, she grimaces at him, kicking up her feet with a little squeal. But when WELLWYN turns to the sound, she is demurely passing through the doorway.

TIMSON. [In his voice of dubious sobriety] I've finished these yer brushes, sir. It's not a man's work. I've been thinkin' if you'd keep an 'orse, I could give yer satisfaction.

WELLWYN. Would the horse, Timson?

TIMSON. [Looking him up and down] I knows of one that would just suit yer. Reel 'orse, you'd like 'im.

WELLWYN. [Shaking his head] Afraid not, Timson! Awfully sorry, though, to have nothing better for you than this, at present.

TIMSON. [Faintly waving the brushes] Of course, if you can't afford it, I don't press you—it's only that I feel I'm not doing meself justice. [Confidentially] There's just one thing, sir; I can't bear to see a gen'leman imposed on. That foreigner—'e's not the sort to 'ave about the place. Talk? Oh! ah! But 'e'll never do any good with 'imself. He's a alien.

WELLWYN. Terrible misfortune to a fellow, Timson.

TIMSON. Don't you believe it, sir; it's his fault. I says to the young lady yesterday: Miss Ann, your father's a gen'leman [with a sudden accent of hoarse sincerity], and so you are—I don't mind sayin' it—but, I said, he's too easy-goin'.

WELLWYN. Indeed!

TIMSON. Well, see that girl now! [He shakes his head] I never did believe in goin' behind a person's back—I'm an Englishman—but [lowering his voice] she's a bad hat, sir. Why, look at the street she comes from!

WELLWYN. Oh! you know it?

TIMSON. Lived there meself larst three years. See the difference a few days' corn's made in her. She's that saucy you can't touch 'er head.

WELLWYN. Is there any necessity, Timson?

TIMSON. Artful too. Full o' vice, I call 'er. Where's 'er 'usband?

WELLWYN. [Gravely] Come, Timson! You wouldn't like her to—— TIMSON. [With dignity, so that the bottle in his pocket is plainly visible] I'm a man as always beared inspection.

WELLWYN. [With a well-directed smile] So I see.

TIMSON. [Curving himself round the bottle] It's not for me to say nothing—but I can tell a gen'leman as quick a ever I can tell an 'orse.

WELLWYN. [Painting] I find it safe to assume that every man is a gentle man, and every woman a lady. Save no end of self-contempt. Give me th little brush.

TIMSON. [Handing him the brush after a considerable introspective pause] Would yer like me to stay and was it for yer again? [With great resolution] I will—I'll do it for you—neve grudged workin' for a gen'leman.

WELLWYN. [With sincerity] Than you, Timson—very good of you, I'm sure. [He hands him back the brush] Just lend us a hand with this. [Assisted by TIMSON he pushes back the dais] Let's see! What do I owe you?

TIMSON. [Reluctantly] It so 'appen you advanced me to-day's yesterday.

WELLWYN. Then I suppose you wa to-morrow's?

TIMSON. Well, I 'ad to spend it, look in' for a permanent job. When you' got to do with 'orses, you can't negle the publics, or you might as well dead.

WELLWYN. Quite so!

TIMSON. It mounts up in the cour o' the year.

WELLWYN. It would. [Passing him coin] This is for an exceptional pu pose—Timson—see? Not—— TIMSON. [Touching his forehead] Certainly, sir. I quite understand. I not that sort, as I think I've proved yer, comin' here regular day after da all the week. There's one thing, I oug to warn you perhaps—I might 'ave give this job up any day.

He makes a faint demonstrati with the little brush, then puts absent-mindedly, into his pock WELLWYN. [Gravely] I'd never sta in the way of your bettering yourse Timson. And, by the way, my daugh spoke to a friend about you to-day think something may come of it.

TIMSON. Oh! Oh! She did! Well might do me a bit o' good. [He ma for the outer door, but stops] That f eigner! 'E sticks in my gizzard. It's as if there wasn't plenty o' pigeons n to pluck in 'is own Gawd-forsaken untry. Reg-lar jay, that's what I calls

n. I could tell yer something——

He has opened the door, and suddenly sees that FERRAND himself is standing there. Sticking out his lower lip, TIMSON gives a roll of his jaw and lurches forth into the street. Owing to a slight miscalculation, his face and raised arms are plainly visible through the window, as he fortifies himself from his bottle against the cold. FERRAND, having closed the door, stands with his thumb acting as pointer towards this spectacle. He is now remarkably dressed in an artist's squashy green hat, a frock coat too small for him, a bright blue tie of knitted silk, the grey trousers that were torn, well-worn brown boots, and a tan waistcoat.

WELLWYN. What luck to-day?

FERRAND. [With a shrug] Again I ve beaten all London, Monsieur—not e bite. [Contemplating himself] I nk perhaps, that, for the bourgeoisie, re is a little too much colour in my tume.

WELLWYN. [Contemplating him] t's see—I believe I've an old top hat newhere.

FERRAND. Ah! Monsieur, merci, but t I could not. It is scarcely in my racter.

WELLWYN. True!

FERRAND. I have been to merchants wine, of tabac, to hotels, to Leicester uare. I have been to a—Society for eading Christian knowledge — I ught there I would have a chance haps as interpreter. Toujours même se—we regret, we have no situation you—same thing everywhere. It ms there is nothing doing in this n.

WELLWYN. I've noticed, there never

FERRAND. I was thinking, Monsieur, t in aviation there might be a career me—but it seems one must be ned.

WELLWYN. Afraid so, Ferrand.

FERRAND. [Approaching the picture] Ah! You are always working at this. You will have something of very good there, Monsieur. You wish to fix the type of wild savage existing ever amongst our high civilisation. C'est très chic, ça! [WELLWYN manifests the quiet delight of an English artist actually understood] In the figures of these good citizens, to whom she offers her flower, you would give the idea of all the cage doors open to catch and make tame the wild bird, that will surely die within. Très gentil! Believe me, Monsieur, you have there the greatest comedy of life! How anxious are the tame birds to do the wild birds good. [His voice changes] For the wild birds it is not funny. There is in some human souls, Monsieur, what cannot be made tame.

WELLWYN. I believe you, Ferrand.

The face of a young man appears at the window, unseen. Suddenly ANN opens the door leading to the house.

ANN. Daddy—I want you.

WELLWYN. [To FERRAND] Excuse me a minute!

[He goes to his daughter, and they pass out.

FERRAND remains at the picture. MRS. MEGAN dressed in some of ANN'S discarded garments, has come out of the model's room. She steals up behind FERRAND like a cat, reaches an arm up, and curls it round his mouth. He turns, and tries to seize her; she disingenuously slips away. He follows. The chase circles the tea-table. He catches her, lifts her up, swings round with her, so that her feet fly out; kisses her bent-back face, and sets her down. She stands there smiling. The face at the window darkens.

FERRAND. La Valse!

He takes her with both hands by the waist, she puts her hands against his shoulders to push him off—and suddenly they are whirling. As they whirl, they bob together once or twice, and kiss. Then, with a warning motion towards the door, she wrenches herself free, and stops beside the picture, trying desperately to appear demure. WELLWYN and ANN have entered. The face has vanished.

FERRAND. [Pointing to the picture] One does not comprehend all this, Monsieur, without well studying. I was in train to interpret for Ma'moiselle the chiaroscuro.

WELLWYN. [With a queer look] Don't take it too seriously, Ferrand.

FERRAND. It is a masterpiece.

WELLWYN. My daughter's just spoken to a friend, Professor Calway. He'd like to meet you. Could you come back a little later?

FERRAND. Certainly, Ma'moiselle. That will be an opening for me, I trust.

[He goes to the street door.

ANN. [Paying no attention to him] Mrs. Megan, will you too come back in half an hour?

FERRAND. Très bien, Ma'moiselle! I will see that she does. We will take a little promenade together. That will do us good.

[He motions towards the door; MRS. MEGAN, all eyes, follows him out.

ANN. Oh! Daddy, they are rotters. Couldn't you see they were having the most high jinks?

WELLWYN. [At his picture] I seemed to have noticed something.

ANN. [Preparing for tea] They were kissing.

WELLWYN. Tt! Tt!

ANN. They're hopeless, all three—especially her. Wish I hadn't given her my clothes now.

WELLWYN. [Absorbed] Something of wild-savage.

ANN. Thank goodness it's the Vicar's business to see that married people live together in his parish.

WELLWYN. Oh! [Dubiously] The Megans are Roman Catholic-Atheists, Ann.

ANN. [With heat] Then they're all the more bound.

WELLWYN gives a sudden and alarmed whistle.

ANN. What's the matter?

WELLWYN. Didn't you say you spoke to Sir Thomas, too? Suppose he comes in while the Professor's here. They're cat and dog.

ANN. [Blankly] Oh! [As WELLWYN strikes a match] The samovar is lighted. [Taking up the nearly empty decanter of rum and going to the cupboard] It's all right. He won't.

He turns back to his picture.

ANN. [At the cupboard] Daddy!

WELLWYN. Hi!

ANN. There were three bottles.

WELLWYN. Oh!

ANN. Well! Now there aren't any.

WELLWYN. [Abstracted] That'll be Timson.

ANN. [With real horror] But it's awful!

WELLWYN. It is, my dear.

ANN. In seven days. To say nothing of the stealing.

WELLWYN. [Vexed] I blame myself—very much. Ought to have kept it locked up.

ANN. You ought to keep him locked up!

There is heard a mild but authoritative knock.

WELLWYN. Here's the Vicar!

ANN. What are you going to do about the rum?

WELLWYN. [Opening the door to CANON BERTLEY] Come in, Vicar. Happy New Year!

BERTLEY. Same to you! Ah! Ann! I've got into touch with her young husband—he's coming round.

ANN. [Still a little out of her place] Thank Go—— Goodness!

BERTLEY. [Faintly surprised] From what I hear he's not really a bad youth. Afraid he bets on horses. The great thing, Wellwyn, with those poor fellows is to put your finger on the weak spot.

ANN. [To herself—gloomily] That's not difficult. What would you do, Canon Bertley, with a man who's been drinking father's rum?

BERTLEY. Remove the temptation, of course.

WELLWYN. He's done that.

BERTLEY. Ah! Then— [WELLWYN and ANN hang on his words] then I should——er——

ANN. [Abruptly] Remove him.

BERTLEY. Before I say that, Ann, I ust certainly see the individual.

WELLWYN. [Pointing to the window] ere he is!

In the failing light TIMSON'S face is indeed to be seen pressed against the windowpane.

ANN. Daddy, I do wish you'd have ck glass put. It's so disgusting to be ed at!

WELLWYN going quickly to the door, has opened it.

WELLWYN. What do you want?

TIMSON enters with dignity. He is fuddled.

TIMSON. [Slowly] Arskin' yer par- n—thought it me duty to come back— nd thish yer little brishel on me.

[He produces the little paint-brush.

ANN. [In a deadly voice] Nothing e?

TIMSON accords her a glassy stare.

WELLWYN. [Taking the brush hastily] at'll do, Timson, thanks!

TIMSON. As I am 'ere, can I do any- ng for yer?

ANN. Yes, you can sweep out that lit- room. [She points to the model's m] There's a broom in there.

TIMSON. [Disagreeably surprised] rtainly; never make bones about a le extra—never 'ave in all me life. 'it at onsh, I will. [He moves across the model's room at that peculiar ad gait so perfectly adjusted to his its] You quite understand me— ldn't bear to 'ave anything on me t wasn't mine. [He passes out.

ANN. Old fraud!

WELLWYN. "In" and "on." Mark my rds, he'll restore the—bottles.

BERTLEY. But, my dear Wellwyn, that stealing.

WELLWYN. We all have our discrep- ies, Vicar.

ANN. Daddy! Discrepancies!

WELLWYN. Well, Ann, my theory is t as regards solids Timson's an In- idualist, but as regards liquids he's a mmunist . . . or vice versa, accord- to taste.

BERTLEY. No, no, we mustn't joke out it. [Gravely] I do think he should spoken to.

WELLWYN. Yes, but not by me.

BERTLEY. Surely you're the proper person.

WELLWYN. [Shaking his head] It was my rum, Vicar. Look so personal.

There sound a number of little tat-tat knocks.

WELLWYN. Isn't that the Professor's knock?

While ANN sits down to make tea, he goes to the door and opens it. There, dressed in an ulster, stands a thin, clean-shaved man, with a little hollow sucked into either cheek, who, taking off a grey squash hat, discloses a majestically bald forehead, which completely dominates all that comes below it.

WELLWYN. Come in, Professor! So awfully good of you! You know Canon Bertley, I think?

CALWAY. Ah! How d'you do?

WELLWYN. Your opinion will be invaluable, Professor.

ANN. Tea, Professor Calway?

They have assembled round the tea-table.

CALWAY. Thank you; no tea; milk.

WELLWYN. Rum?

[He pours rum in CALWAY'S milk.

CALWAY. A little—thanks! [Turning to ANN] You were going to show me someone you're trying to rescue, or something, I think.

ANN. Oh! Yes. He'll be here directly —simply perfect rotter.

CALWAY. [Smiling] Really! Ah! I think you said he was a congenital?

WELLWYN. [With great interest] What!

ANN. [Low] Daddy! [To CALWAY] Yes; I—I think that's what you call him.

CALWAY. Not old?

ANN. No; and quite healthy—a vagabond.

CALWAY. [Sipping] I see! Yes. Is it, do you think chronic unemployment with a vagrant tendency? Or would it be nearer the mark to say: Vagrancy—— WELLWYN. Pure! Oh! pure! Professor. Awfully human.

CALWAY. [With a smile of knowledge] Quite! And—er——

ANN. [Breaking in] Before he comes, there's another——

BERTLEY. [Blandly] Yes, when you came in, we were discussing what should be done with a man who drinks rum—[CALWAY pauses in the act of drinking] that doesn't belong to him.

CALWAY. Really! Dipsomaniac?

BERTLEY. Well—perhaps you could tell us—drink certainly changing thine to mine. The Professor could see him, Wellwyn?

ANN. [Rising] Yes, do come and look at him, Professor Calway. He's in there.

[She points towards the model's room.

ANN. No, really; we needn't open the door. You can see him through the glass. He's more than half——

CALWAY. Well, I hardly——

ANN. Oh! Do! Come, on Professor Calway! We must know what to do with him.

CALWAY rises.

ANN. You can stand on a chair. It's all science.

She draws CALWAY to the model's room, which is lighted by a glass panel in the top of the high door. CANON BERTLEY also rises and stands watching. WELLWYN hovers, torn between respect for science and dislike of espionage.

ANN. [Drawing up a chair] Come on!

CALWAY. Do you seriously wish me to?

ANN. Rather! It's quite safe; he can't see you.

CALWAY. But he might come out.

ANN puts her back against the door, CALWAY mounts the chair dubiously, and raises his head cautiously, bending it more and more downwards.

ANN. Well?

CALWAY. He appears to be—sitting on the floor.

WELLWYN. Yes, that's all right!

BERTLEY'S covers his lips.

CALWAY. [To ANN—descending] By the look of his face, as far as one can see it, I should say there was a leaning towards mania. I know the treatment.

There comes three loud knocks on the door. WELLWYN and ANN exchange a glance of consterna tion.

ANN. Who's that?

WELLWYN. It sounds like Sir Thomas

CALWAY. Sir Thomas Hoxton?

WELLWYN. [Nodding] Awfully sorry Professor. You see, we—— CALWAY. Not at all. Only, I must de cline to be involved in argument wit him, please.

BERTLEY. He has experience. W might get his opinion, don't you think CALWAY. On a point of reform A J. P.!

BERTLEY. [Deprecating] My dear si —we needn't take it.

The three knocks resound with ex traordinary fury.

ANN. You'd better open the doo Daddy.

WELLWYN opens the door. SI THOMAS HOXTON is disclosed i a fur overcoat and top hat. Hi square, well-coloured face is re markable for a massive jaw, dom nating all that comes above i His voice is resolute.

HOXTON. Afraid I didn't make mysel heard.

WELLWYN. So good of you to come Sir Thomas. Canon Bertley! [The greet] Professor Calway you know, think.

HOXTON. [Ominously] I do.

They almost greet. An awkwar pause.

ANN. [Blurting it out] That old cab man I told you of's been drinkin Father's rum.

BERTLEY. We were just discussin what's to be done with him, Sir Thomas One wants to do the very best, of cours The question of reform is always del cate.

CALWAY. I beg your pardon. There no question here.

HOXTON. [Abruptly] Oh! Is he in th house?

ANN. In there.

HOXTON. Works for you, eh?

WELLWYN. Er—yes.

HOXTON. Let's have a look at him!

An embarrassed pause.

BERTLEY. Well—the fact is, S Thomas——

CALWAY. When last under observa-
n—
ANN. He was sitting on the floor.
WELLWYN. I don't want the old felv to feel he's being made a show of.
sgusting to be spied at, Ann.
ANN. You can't, Daddy! He's drunk.
HOXTON. Never mind, Miss Wellwyn. undreds of these fellows before me in time. [At CALWAY] The only thing a sharp lesson!
CALWAY. I disagree. I've seen the n; what he requires is steady con-l, and the Dobbins treatment.
WELLWYN approaches them with fearful interest.
HOXTON. Not a bit of it! He wants e for his knob! Brace 'em up! It's the y thing.
BERTLEY. Personally, I think that if were spoken to seriously——
CALWAY. I cannot walk arm in arm
h a crab.
HOXTON. [Approaching CALWAY] I
your pardon?
CALWAY. [Moving back a little] u're moving backwards, Sir Thomas.
e told you before, convinced reacnaryism, in these days——
There comes a single knock on the street door.
BERTLEY. [Looking at his watch] you know, I'm rather afraid this may our young husband, Wellwyn. I told n half-past four.
WELLWYN. Oh! Ah! Yes. [Going vards the two reformers] Shall we go o the house, Professor, and settle the estion quietly while the Vicar sees a ing man?
CALWAY. [Pale with uncompleted tement, and gravitating insensibly in direction indicated] The merest ise of continuity—a simple instinct for ler——
HOXTON. [Following] The only way get order, sir, is to bring the dis-lerly up with a round turn.
CALWAY turns to him in the doorway.
HOXTON. You people without practi-experience——
CALWAY. If you'll listen to me a nute.
HOXTON. I can show you in a mo——

[They vanish through the door.
WELLWYN. I was afraid of it.
BERTLEY. The two points of view. Pleasant to see such keenness. I may want you, Wellwyn. And Ann perhaps had better not be present.
WELLWYN. [Relieved] Quite so! My dear!

ANN goes reluctantly. WELLWYN opens the street door. The lamp outside has just been lighted, and, by its gleam, is seen the figure of RORY MEGAN, thin, pale, youthful. ANN turning at the door into the house gives him a long, inquisitive look, then goes.

WELLWYN. Is that Megan?
MEGAN. Yus.
WELLWYN. Come in.

MEGAN comes in. There follows an awkward silence, during which WELLWYN turns up the light, then goes to the tea-table and pours out a glass of tea and rum.

BERTLEY. [Kindly] Now, my boy, how is it that you and your wife are living apart like this?
MEGAN. I dunno.
BERTLEY. Well, if you don't, none of us are very likely to, are we?
MEGAN. That's what I thought, as I was comin' along.
WELLWYN. [Twinkling] Have some tea, 'Megan? [Handing him the glass] What d'you think of her picture? 'Tisn't quite finished.
MEGAN. [After scrutiny] I seen her look like it—once.
WELLWYN. Good! When was that?
MEGAN. [Stoically] When she 'ad the measles. [He drinks.
WELLWYN. [Ruminating] I see—yes. I quite see—feverish!
BERTLEY. My dear Wellwyn, let me—— [To MEGAN] Now, I hope you're willing to come together again, and to maintain her?
MEGAN. If she'll maintain me.
BERTLEY. Oh! but—— I see, you mean you're in the same line of business?
MEGAN. Yus.
BERTLEY. And lean on each other. Quite so!
MEGAN. I leans on 'er mostly—with 'er looks.

BERTLEY. Indeed! Very interesting—that!

MEGAN. Yus. Sometimes she'll take 'arf a crown off of a toff.

[He looks at WELLWYN.

WELLWYN. [Twinkling] I apologise to you, Megan.

MEGAN. [With a faint smile] I could do with a bit more of it.

BERTLEY. [Dubiously] Yes! Yes! Now, my boy, I've heard you bet on horses.

MEGAN. No, I don't.

BERTLEY. Play cards, then? Come! Don't be afraid to acknowledge it.

MEGAN. When I'm 'ard up—yus.

BERTLEY. But don't you know that's ruination?

MEGAN. Depends. Sometimes I wins a lot.

BERTLEY. You know that's not at all what I mean. Come, promise me to give it up.

MEGAN. I dunno abaht that.

BERTLEY. Now, there's a good fellow. Make a big effort and throw the habit off!

MEGAN. Comes over me—same as it might over you.

BERTLEY. Over me! How do you mean, my boy?

MEGAN. [With a look up] To tork!

WELLWYN, turning to the picture, makes a funny little noise.

BERTLEY. [Maintaining his good humour] A hit! But you forget, you know, to talk's my business. It's not yours to gamble.

MEGAN. You try sellin' flowers. If that ain't a—gamble——

BERTLEY. I'm afraid we're wandering a little from the point. Husband and wife should be together. You were brought up to that. Your father and mother——

MEGAN. Never was.

WELLWYN. [Turning from the picture] The question is, Megan: Will you take your wife home? She's a good little soul.

MEGAN. She never let me know it.

There is a feeble knock on the door.

WELLWYN. Well, now, come. Here she is!

He points to the door, and stands regarding MEGAN with his friendly smile.

MEGAN. [With a gleam of responsiveness] I might, perhaps, to please you sir.

BERTLEY. [Appropriating the gesture] Capital, I thought we should get on i time.

MEGAN. Yus.

WELLWYN opens the door. MRS MEGAN and FERRAND are re vealed. They are about to ente but, catching sight of MEGAN hesitate.

BERTLEY. Come in! Come in!

MRS. MEGAN enters stolidly. FER RAND, following, stands apart wit an air of extreme detachmen MEGAN, after a quick glance a them both, remains unmoved. N one has noticed that the door o the model's room has been opene and that the unsteady figure o old TIMSON is standing there.

BERTLEY. [A little awkard in the presence of FERRAND—to the MEGANS] Thi begins a new chapter. We won't im prove the occasion. No need.

MEGAN, turning towards his wife makes her a gesture as if to say "Here! let's get out of this!"

BERTLEY. Yes, yes, you'll like to ge home at once—I know.

[He holds up his hand mechanically

TIMSON. I forbids the banns.

BERTLEY. [Startled] Gracious!

TIMSON. [Extremely unsteady] Jus cause and impejiment. There 'e stands [He points to FERRAND] The crimso foreigner! The mockin' jay!

WELLWYN. Timson!

TIMSON. You're a gen'leman—I'm aweer o' that—but I must speak th truth—[he waves his hand] an' sham the devil!

BERTLEY. Is this the rum——?

TIMSON. [Struck by the word] I'm teetotaler.

WELLWYN. Timson, Timson!

TIMSON. Seein' as there's ladies pre ent, I won't be conspicuous. [Movi away, and making for the door, strikes against the dais, and moun upon it] But what I do say, is: He's better than 'er and she's worse.

BERTLEY. This is distressing.

FERRAND. [Calmly] On my honour, onsieur!

TIMSON growls.

WELLWYN. Now, now, Timson!

TIMSON. That's all right. You're a n'leman, an' I'm a gen'leman, but ain't, an' she ain't.

WELLWYN. We shall not believe you.

BERTLEY. No, no; we shall not believe u.

TIMSON. [Heavily] Very well, you ubts my word. Will it make any ference, Guv'nor, if I speaks the th?

BERTLEY. No, certainly not—that is—course, it will.

TIMSON. Well, then, I see 'em plainer n I see [pointing at BERTLEY] the two you.

WELLWYN. Be quiet, Timson!

BERTLEY. Not even her husband be- es you.

MEGAN. [Suddenly] Don't I!

WELLWYN. Come, Megan, you can see old fellow's in Paradise.

BERTLEY. Do you credit such a—such object?

[He points at TIMSON, who seems falling asleep.

MEGAN. Naow!

Unseen by anybody, ANN has re- turned.

BERTLEY. Well, then, my boy?

MEGAN. I seen 'em meself.

BERTLEY. Gracious! But just now you re willing——

MEGAN. [Sardonically] There wasn't thing against me honour, then. Now r've took it away between you, comin' with it like this. I don't want no re of 'er, and I'll want a good deal re of 'im; as 'e'll soon find.

He jerks his chin at FERRAND, turns slowly on his heel, and goes out into the street.

There follows a profound silence.

ANN. What did I say, Daddy? Utter! three.

Suddenly alive to her presence, they all turn.

TIMSON. [Waking up and looking nd him] Well, p'raps I'd better

Assisted by WELLWYN he lurches gingerly off the dais towards the door, which WELLWYN holds open for him.

TIMSON. [Mechanically] Where to, sir?

Receiving no answer he passes out, touching his hat; and the door is closed.

WELLWYN. Ann!

ANN goes back whence she came.

BERTLEY, steadily regarding MRS. MEGAN, who has put her arm up in front of her face, beckons to FERRAND, and the young man comes gravely forward.

BERTLEY. Young people, this is very dreadful.

MRS. MEGAN lowers her arm a lit- tle, and looks at him over it.

BERTLEY. Very sad!

MRS. MEGAN. [Dropping her arm] Megan's no better than what I am.

BERTLEY. Come, come! Here's your home broken up!

MRS. MEGAN smiles.

BERTLEY. [Shaking his head gravely] Surely—surely—you mustn't smile.

MRS. MEGAN becomes tragic.

BERTLEY. That's better. Now, what is to be done?

FERRAND. Believe me, Monsieur, I greatly regret.

BERTLEY. I'm glad to hear it.

FERRAND. If I had foreseen this dis- aster.

BERTLEY. Is that your only reason for regret?

FERRAND. [With a little bow] Any reason that you wish, Monsieur. I will do my possible.

MRS. MEGAN. I could get an unfur- nished room if [she slides her eyes round at WELLWYN] I 'ad the money to furnish it.

BERTLEY. But suppose I can induce your husband to forgive you, and take you back?

MRS. MEGAN. [Shaking her head] 'E'd 'it me.

BERTLEY. I said to forgive.

MRS. MEGAN. That wouldn't make no difference. [With a flash at BERTLEY] An' I ain't forgiven him!

BERTLEY. That is sinful.

MRS. MEGAN. I'm a Catholic.

BERTLEY. My good child, what difference does that make?

FERRAND. Monsieur, if I might interpret for her.

BERTLEY silences him with a gesture.

MRS. MEGAN. [Sliding her eyes towards WELLWYN] If I 'ad the money to buy some fresh stock.

BERTLEY. Yes; yes; never mind the money. What I want to find in you both, is repentance.

MRS. MEGAN. [With a flash up at him] I can't get me livin' off of repentin'.

BERTLEY. Now, now! Never say what you know to be wrong.

FERRAND. Monsieur, her soul is very simple.

BERTLEY. [Severely] I do not know, sir, that we shall get any great assistance from your views. In fact, one thing is clear to me, she must discontinue your acquaintanceship at once.

FERRAND. Certainly, Monsieur. We have no serious intentions.

BERTLEY. All the more shame to you, then!

FERRAND. Monsieur, I see perfectly your point of view. It is very natural.

[He bows and is silent.

MRS. MEGAN. I don't want 'im hurt 'cos o' me. Megan'll get his mates to belt him—bein' foreign like he is.

BERTLEY. Yes, never mind that. It's you I'm thinking of.

MRS. MEGAN. I'd sooner they'd hit me.

WELLWYN. [Suddenly] Well said, my child!

MRS. MEGAN. 'Twasn't his fault.

FERRAND. [Without irony—to WELLWYN] I cannot accept that Monsieur. The blame—it is all mine.

ANN. [Entering suddenly from the house] Daddy, they're having an awful——!

The voices of PROFESSOR CALWAY and SIR THOMAS HOXTON are distinctly heard.

CALWAY. The question is a much wider one, Sir Thomas.

HOXTON. As wide as you like, you'll never——

WELLWYN pushes ANN back into the house and closes the door behind her. The voices are still faintly heard arguing on the threshold.

BERTLEY. Let me go in here a minute Wellwyn. I must finish speaking to her.

[He motions MRS. MEGAN towards the model's room] We can't leave the matter thus.

FERRAND. [Suavely] Do you desire my company, Monsieur?

BERTLEY, with a prohibitive gesture of his hand, shepherds the reluctant MRS. MEGAN into the model's room.

WELLWYN. [Sorrowfully] You shouldn't have done this, Ferrand. It wasn't the square thing.

FERRAND. [With dignity] Monsieur, I feel that I am in the wrong. It was stronger than me.

As he speaks, SIR THOMAS HOXTON and PROFESSOR CALWAY enter from the house. In the dim light, and the full cry of argument, they do not notice the figures at the fire. SIR THOMAS HOXTON leads towards the street door.

HOXTON. No, sir, I repeat, if the country once commits itself to your views of reform, it's as good as doomed.

CALWAY. I seem to have heard that before, Sir Thomas. And let me say at once that your hitty-missy cartload of bricks régime—— HOXTON. Is a deuced sight better, sir, than your grandmotherly methods. What the old fellow wants is a shock! With all this socialistic mollycoddling, you're losing sight of the individual.

CALWAY. [Swiftly] You, sir, with your "devil take the hindmost," have never even seen him.

SIR THOMAS HOXTON, throwing back a gesture of disgust, steps out into the night, and falls heavily. PROFESSOR CALWAY, hastening to his rescue, falls more heavily still.

TIMSON, momentarily roused from slumber on the doorstep, sits up.

HOXTON. [Struggling to his knees.] Damnation!

CALWAY. [Sitting] How simultaneous!

WELLWYN and FERRAND approach hastily.

FERRAND. [Pointing to TIMSON] Mon-ur, it was true, it seems. They had t sight of the individual.

A policeman has appeared under the street lamp. He picks up HOXTON'S hat.

CONSTABLE. Anything wrong, sir?

HOXTON. [Recovering his feet] rong? Great Scott! Constable! Why you let things lie about in the street e this? Look here, Wellwyn!

They all scrutinise TIMSON.

WELLWYN. It's only the old fellow ose reform you were discussing.

HOXTON. How did he come here?

CONSTABLE. Drunk, sir. [Ascertaining MSON to be in the street] Just off the mises, by good luck. Come along, her.

TIMSON. [Assisted to his feet—drow-] Cert'nly, by no means; take my a.

They move from the doorway. HOX-TON and CALWAY re-enter, and go towards the fire.

ANN. [Entering from the house] iat's happened?

CALWAY. Might we have a brush?

HOXTON. [Testily] Let it dry!

He moves to the fire and stands before it. PROFESSOR CALWAY following stands a little behind him. ANN returning begins to brush the PROFESSOR'S sleeve.

WELLWYN. [Turning from the r, where he has stood looking af-the receding TIMSON] Poor old nson!

FERRAND. [Softly] Must be philoso-r, Monsieur! They will but run him a little.

From the model's room MRS. ME-GAN has come out, shepherded by CANON BERTLEY.

BERTLEY. Let's see, your Christian ne is——?

MRS. MEGAN. Guinevere.

BERTLEY. Oh! Ah! Ah! Ann, take —— take our little friend into the dy a minute; I am going to put her) service. We shall make a new wom-of her, yet.

ANN. [Handing CANON BERTLEY the brush, and turning to MRS. MEGAN] Come on!

[She leads into the house, and MRS. MEGAN follows stolidly.

BERTLEY. [Brushing CALWAY'S back] Have you fallen?

CALWAY. Yes.

BERTLEY. Dear me! How was that?

HOXTON. That old ruffian drunk on the doorstep. Hope they'll give him a sharp dose! These rag-tags!

[He looks round, and his angry eyes light by chance on FERRAND.

FERRAND. [With his eyes on HOXTON —softly] Monsieur, something tells me it is time I took the road again.

WELLWYN. [Fumbling out a sovereign] Take this, then!

FERRAND. [Refusing the coin] Non, Monsieur. To abuse 'ospitality is not in my character.

BERTLEY. We must not despair of anyone.

HOXTON. Who talked of despairing? Treat him, as I say, and you'll see!

CALWAY. The interest of the State——

HOXTON. The interest of the individual citizen, sir——

BERTLEY. Come! A little of both, a little of both!

They resume their brushing.

FERRAND. You are now debarrassed of us three. I leave you instead—these sirs. [He points] Au revoir, Monsieur! [Motioning towards the fire] 'Appy New Year!

He slips quietly out. WELLWYN, turning, contemplates the three reformers. They are all now brushing away, scratching each other's backs, and gravely hissing. As he approaches them, they speak with a certain unanimity.

HOXTON. My theory——!

CALWAY. My theory——!

BERTLEY. My theory——!

They stop surprised. WELLWYN makes a gesture of discomfort, as they speak again with still more unanimity.

HOXTON. My——!

CALWAY. My——!

BERTLEY. My——!

They stop in greater surprise. The stage is blotted dark.

ACT III

It is the first of April—a white spring day of gleams and driving showers. The street door of WELLWYN'S studio stands wide open, and, past it, in the street, the wind is whirling bits of straw and paper bags. Through the door can be seen the butt end of a stationary furniture van with its flap let down. To this van three humble-men in shirt sleeves and aprons, are carrying out the contents of the studio. The hissing samovar, the teapot, the sugar, and the nearly empty decanter of rum stand on the low round table in the fast-being-gutted room. WELLWYN in his ulster and soft hat, is squatting on the little stool in front of the blazing fire, staring into it, and smoking a hand-made cigarette. He has a moulting air. Behind him the humble-men pass, embracing busts and other articles of vertu.

CHIEF HUMBLE-MAN. [Stopping, and standing in the attitude of expectation] We've about pinched this little lot, sir. Shall we take the—reservoir?

[He indicates the samovar.

WELLWYN. Ah! [Abstractedly feeling in his pockets, and finding coins] Thanks—thanks—heavy work, I'm afraid.

HUMBLE-MAN. [Receiving the coins—a little surprised and a good deal pleased] Thank'ee, sir. Much obliged, I'm sure. We'll 'ave to come back for this. [He gives the dais a vigorous push with his foot] Not a fixture, as I understand. Perhaps you'd like us to leave these 'ere for a bit.

[He indicates the tea-things.

WELLWYN. Ah! do.

The humble-men go out. There is the sound of horses being started, and the butt end of the van disappears. WELLWYN stays on the stool, smoking and brooding over the fire. The open doorway is darkened by a figure. CANON BERTLEY is standing there.

BERTLEY. Wellwyn!

WELLWYN turns and rises.

BERTLEY. It's ages since I saw you. No idea you were moving. This is very dreadful.

WELLWYN. Yes, Ann found this too exposed. That tall house in Fligh Street—we're going there. Seventh floor.

BERTLEY. Lift?

WELLWYN shakes his head.

BERTLEY. Dear me! No lift? Fine view, no doubt.

WELLWYN nods.

BERTLEY. You'll be greatly missed.

WELLWYN. So Ann thinks. Vicar what's become of that little flower-seller I was painting at Christmas? You took her into service.

BERTLEY. Not we—exactly! Some dear friends of ours. Painful subject!

WELLWYN. Oh!

BERTLEY. Yes. She got the footman into trouble.

WELLWYN. Did she, now?

BERTLEY. Disappointing. I consulted with Calway, and he advised me to try a certain institution. We got her safely in—excellent place; but, d'you know she broke out three weeks ago. And since—I've heard—[he holds his hand up] hopeless, I'm afraid—quite!

WELLWYN. I thought I saw her last night. You can't tell me her address, I suppose?

BERTLEY. [Shaking his head] The husband too has quite passed out of ken. He betted on horses, you remember. I'm sometimes tempted to believe there's nothing for some of these poor folk but to pray for death.

ANN has entered from the house. Her hair hangs from under a knitted cap. She wears a white wool jersey, and a loose silk scarf.

BERTLEY. Ah! Ann. I was telling your father of that poor little Mrs. Megan.

ANN. Is she dead?

BERTLEY. Worse, I fear. By the way—what became of her accomplice?

ANN. We haven't seen him since. [She looks searchingly at WELLWYN. At least—have you—Daddy?

WELLWYN. [Rather hurt] No, no dear; I have not.

BERTLEY. And the—old gentleman who drank the rum?

NN. He got fourteen days. It was fifth time.

ERTLEY. Dear me!

NN. When he came out he got more ık than ever. Rather a score for fessor Calway, wasn't it?

ERTLEY. I remember. He and Sir mas took a kindly interest in the fellow.

NN. Yes, they fell over him. The fessor got him into an Institution.

ERTLEY. Indeed!

NN. He was perfectly sober all the e he was there.

/ELLWYN. My dear, they only allow n milk.

NN. Well, anyway, he was reformed.

'ELLWYN. Ye—yes!

NN. [Terribly] Daddy! You've been ıg him!

'ELLWYN. [With dignity] My dear, ve not.

NN. How do you know, then?

'ELLWYN. Came across Sir Thomas he Embankment yesterday; told me Timson had been had up again for ng down in front of a brewer's '.

NN. Why?

'ELLWYN. Well, you see, as soon as ame out of the what d'you call 'em, ot drunk for a week, and it left him ow spirits.

ERTLEY. Do you mean he deliberately down, with the intention—of—er?

'ELLWYN. Said he was tired of life, they didn't believe him.

NN. Rather a score for Sir Thomas! ppose he'd told the Professor? What he say?

'ELLWYN. Well, the Professor said h a quick glance at BERTLEY] he felt was nothing for some of these poor ls but a lethal chamber.

ERTLEY. [Shocked] Did he really?

[He has not yet caught WELLWYN's glance.

'ELLWYN. And Sir Thomas agreed. oric occasion. And you, Vicar—

BERTLEY winces.

NN. [To herself] Well, there isn't.

ERTLEY. And yet! Some good in the fellow, no doubt, if one could put s finger on it. [Preparing to go] You'll let us know, then, when you're settled. What was the address?

WELLWYN takes out and hands him a card.

BERTLEY. Ah! yes. Good-bye, Ann. Good-bye, Wellwyn. [The wind blows his hat along the street] What a wind! [He goes, pursuing.

ANN. [Who has eyed the card askance] Daddy, have you told those other two where we're going?

WELLWYN. Which other two, my dear?

ANN. The Professor and Sir Thomas.

WELLWYN. Well, Ann, naturally I——

ANN. [Jumping on to the dais with disgust] Oh, dear! When I'm trying to get you away from all this atmosphere. I don't so much mind the Vicar knowing, because he's got a weak heart——

[She jumps off again.

WELLWYN. [To himself] Seventh floor! I felt there was something.

ANN. [Preparing to go] I'm going round now. But you must stay here till the van comes back. And don't forget you tipped the men after the first load.

WELLWYN. Oh! yes, yes. [Uneasily] Good sorts, they look, those fellows!

ANN. [Scrutinising him] What have you done?

WELLWYN. Nothing, my dear, really ——!

ANN. What?

WELLWYN. I—I rather think I may have tipped them twice.

ANN. [Dryly] Daddy! If it is the first of April, it's not necessary to make a fool of oneself. That's the last time you ever do these ridiculous things.

WELLWYN eyes her askance.

ANN. I'm going to see that you spend your money on yourself. You needn't look at me like that! I mean to. As soon as I've got you away from here, and all —these——

WELLWYN. Don't rub it in, Ann!

ANN. [Giving him a sudden hug—then going to the door—with a sort of triumph] Deeds, not words, Daddy!

She goes out, and the wind catching her scarf blows it out beneath her firm young chin. WELLWYN returning to the fire, stands brood- ing, and gazing at his extinct cigarette.

WELLWYN. [To himself] Bad lot—low type! No method! No theory!

In the doorway appear FERRAND and MRS. MEGAN. They stand, unseen, looking at him. FERRAND is more ragged, if possible, than on Christmas Eve. His chin and cheeks are clothed in a reddish-golden beard.

MRS. MEGAN'S dress is not so woe-begone, but her face is white, her eyes dark-circled. They whisper. She slips back into the shadow of the doorway. WELLWYN turns at the sound, and stares at FERRAND in amazement.

FERRAND. [Advancing] Enchanted to see you, Monsieur. [He looks round the empty room] You are leaving?

WELLWYN. [Nodding—then taking the young man's hand] How goes it?

FERRAND. [Displaying himself, simply] As you see, Monsieur. I have done of my best. It still flies from me.

WELLWYN. [Sadly—as if against his will] Ferrand, it will always fly.

The young foreigner shivers suddenly from head to foot; then controls himself with a great effort.

FERRAND. Don't say that, Monsieur. It is too much the echo of my heart.

WELLWYN. Forgive me! I didn't mean to pain you.

FERRAND. [Drawing nearer the fire] That old cabby, Monsieur, you remember—they tell me, he nearly succeeded to gain happiness the other day.

WELLWYN nods.

FERRAND. And those sirs, so interested in him, with their theories? He has worn them out?

WELLWYN nods.

FERRAND. That goes without saying. And now they wish for him the lethal chamber.

WELLWYN. [Startled] How did you know that?

There is silence.

FERRAND. [Staring into the fire] Monsieur, while I was on the road this time I fell ill of a fever. It seemed to me in my illness that I saw the truth—how I was wasting in this world—I would never be good for anyone—n anyone for me—all would go by, and never of it—fame, and fortune, a peace, even the necessities of life, ev mocking me.

He draws closer to the fire, spread ing his fingers to the flame. A while he is speaking, through t doorway MRS. MEGAN creeps to listen.

FERRAND. [Speaking on into the fir And I saw, Monsieur, so plain, that should be vagabond all my days, and days short, I dying in the end the dea of a dog. I saw it all in my fever clear as that flame—there was nothi for us others, but the herb of death.

WELLWYN takes his arm and press it.

FERRAND. And so, Monsieur, I wish to die. I told no one of my fever. I out on the ground—it was verree co But they would not let me die on t roads of their parishes—they took me an Institution. Monsieur, I looked their eyes while I lay there, and I s more clear than the blue heaven th they thought it best that I should although they would not let me. Th Monsieur, naturally my spirit rose, a I said: "So much the worse for you will live a little more." One is ma like that! Life is sweet, Monsieur.

WELLWYN. Yes, Ferrand; Life sweet.

FERRAND. That little girl you had he Monsieur—[WELLWYN nods] in her there is something of wild-savage. S must have joy of life. I have seen since I came back. She has embrac the life of joy. It is not quite the sa thing. [He lowers his voice] She is lo Monsieur, as a stone that sinks in wat I can see, if she cannot. [As WELLW makes a movement of distress] Oh am not to blame for that, Monsieur, had well begun before I knew her.

WELLWYN. Yes, yes—I was afraid it, at the time.

MRS. MEGAN turns silently, and s away.

FERRAND. I do my best for her, M sieur, but look at me! Besides, I am good for her—it is not good for sin souls to be with those who see thi ır. For the great part of mankind, to anything—is fatal.

Vellwyn. Even for you, it seems.

Ferrand. No, Monsieur. To be so r to death has done me good; I shall lack courage any more till the wind ws on my grave. Since I saw you, nsieur, I have been in three Institu- ıs. They are palaces. One may eat n the floor—though it is true—for ıgs—they eat too much of skilly re. One little thing they lack—those ıces. It is understanding of the 'uman rt. In them tame birds pluck wild ls naked.

Vellwyn. They mean well.

ERRAND. Ah! Monsieur, I am loafer, ter—what you like—for all that terly] poverty is my only crime. If I e rich, should I not be simply veree inal, 'ighly respected, with soul re commerce, travelling to see the ld? And that young girl, would she be "that charming ladee," "veree , you know!" And the old Tims— l old-fashioned gentleman—drinking liquor well. Eh! bien—what are we ? Dark beasts, despised by all. That fe, Monsieur.

[He stares into the fire.

'ELLWYN. We're our own enemies, 'and. I can afford it—you can't. e true!

ERRAND. [Earnestly] Monsieur, do know this? You are the sole being can do us good—we hopeless ELLWYN. [Shaking his head] Not a f it; I'm hopeless too.

ERRAND. [Eagerly] Monsieur, it is that. You understand. When we are you we feel something—here—[he es his heart]. If I had one prayer ake, it would be, Good God, give understand! Those sirs, with their ies, they can clean our skins and our 'abits—that soothes for them esthetic sense; it gives them too good little importance. But our s they cannot touch, for they nevare stand. Without that, Monsieur, all as a parched skin of orange.

ELLWYN. Don't be so bitter. Think the work they do!

RRAND. Monsieur, of their industry I say nothing. They do a good work while they attend with their theories to the sick, and the tame old, and the good unfortunate deserving. Above all to the little children. But, Monsieur, when all is done, there are always us hopeless ones. What can they do with me, Monsieur, with that girl, or with that old man? Ah! Monsieur, we, too, 'ave our qualities, we others—it wants your courage to undertake a career like mine, or that young girl's. We wild ones—we know a thousand times more of life than ever will those sirs. They waste their time trying to make rooks white. Be kind to us if you will, or let us alone like Mees Ann, but do not try to change our skins. Leave us to live, or leave us to die when we like in the free air. If you do not wish of us, you have but to shut your pockets and your doors—we shall die the faster.

Wellwyn. [With agitation] But that, you know—we can't do—now can we?

Ferrand. If you cannot, how is it our fault? The harm we do to others—is it so much? If I am criminal, dangerous—shut me up! I would not pity myself—nevare. But we in whom something moves—like that flame, Monsieur, that cannot keep still—we others—we are not many—that must have motion in our lives, do not let them make us prisoners, with their theories, because we are not like them—it is life itself they would enclose! [He draws up his tattered figure, then bending over the fire again] I ask your pardon; I am talking. If I could smoke, Monsieur?

Wellwyn hands him a tobacco pouch; and he rolls a cigarette with his yellow-stained fingers.

Ferrand. The good God made me so that I would rather walk a whole month of nights, hungry, with the stars, than sit one single day making round business on an office stool! It is not to my advantage. I cannot help it that I am a vagabond. What would you have? It is stronger than me. [He looks suddenly at Wellwyn] Monsieur, I say to you things I have never said.

Wellwyn. [Quietly] Go on, go on.

There is silence.

Ferrand. [Suddenly] Monsieur! Are you really English? The English are so civilised.

WELLWYN. And am I not?

FERRAND. You treat me like a brother.

WELLWYN has turned towards the street door at a sound of feet, and the clamour of voices.

TIMSON. [From the street] Take her in 'ere. I knows 'im.

Through the open doorway come a police constable and a loafer, bearing between them the limp white-faced form of MRS. MEGAN, hatless and with drowned hair, enveloped in the policeman's waterproof. Some curious persons bring up the rear, jostling in the doorway, among whom is TIMSON carrying in his hands the policeman's dripping waterproof leg pieces.

FERRAND. [Starting forward] Monsieur, it is that little girl!

WELLWYN. What's happened? Constable! What's happened?

The CONSTABLE and loafer have laid the body down on the dais; with WELLWYN and FERRAND they stand bending over her.

CONSTABLE. 'Tempted sooicide, sir; but she hadn't been in the water 'arf a minute when I got hold of her. [He bends lower] Can't understand her collapsin' like this.

WELLWYN. [Feeling her heart] I don't feel anything.

FERRAND. [In a voice sharpened by emotion] Let me try, Monsieur.

CONSTABLE. [Touching his arm] You keep off, my lad.

WELLWYN. No, constable—let him. He's her friend.

CONSTABLE. [Releasing FERRAND—to the loafer] Here, you! Cut off for a doctor—sharp now! [He pushes back the curious persons] Now then, stand away there, please—we can't have you round the body. Keep back—— Clear out, now!

He slowly moves them back, and at last shepherds them through the door and shuts it on them, TIMSON being last.

FERRAND. The rum!

WELLWYN fetches the decanter. With the little there is left, FERRAND chafes the girl's hands a forehead, and pours some betwe her lips. But there is no respon from the inert body.

FERRAND. Her soul is still away, Mo sieur.

WELLWYN, seizing the decant pours into it tea and boiling wat

CONSTABLE. It's never drownin', —her head was hardly under; I was to her like knife.

FERRAND. [Rubbing her feet] She h not yet her philosophy, Monsieur; at t beginning they often try. If she is dea [In a voice of awed rapture] What fo tune!

CONSTABLE. [With puzzled sadnes True enough, sir—that! We'd j begun to know 'er. If she 'as be taken—her best friends couldn't wish better.

WELLWYN. [Applying the decanter her lips] Poor little thing! I'll try t hot tea.

FERRAND. [Whispering] La mort— grand ami!

WELLWYN. Look! Look at her! Sh coming round!

A faint tremor passes over M MEGAN'S body. He again appl the hot drink to her mouth. S stirs and gulps.

CONSTABLE. [With intense reli That's brave! Good lass! She'll pick now, sir.

Then, seeing that TIMSON and curious persons have again ope the door, he drives them out, stands with his back against MRS. MEGAN comes to herself

WELLWYN. [Sitting on the dais supporting her—as if to a child] Th you are, my dear. There, there—be now! That's right. Drink a little m of this tea.

MRS. MEGAN drinks from the canter.

FERRAND. [Rising] Bring her to fire, Monsieur.

They take her to the fire and her on the little stool. From moment of her restored anima FERRAND has resumed his ai cynical detachment, and stands apart with arms folded, watching.

VELLWYN. Feeling better, my child?

IRS. MEGAN. Yes.

VELLWYN. That's good. That's good. w, how was it? Um?

IRS. MEGAN. I dunno. [She shivers] as standin' here just now when you talkin', and when I heard 'im, it ' over me to do it—like.

VELLWYN. Ah, yes, I know.

IRS. MEGAN. I didn't seem no good neself nor anyone. But when I got in water, I didn't want to any more. It cold in there.

VELLWYN. Have you been having a bad time of it?

RS. MEGAN. Yes. And listenin' to upset me. [She signs with her head 'ERRAND] I feel better now I've been ie water. [She smiles, and shivers.

'ELLWYN. There, there! Shivery? to walk up and down a little?

They begin walking together up and down.

'ELLWYN. Beastly when your head under?

RS. MEGAN. Yes. It frightened me. I ght I wouldn't come up again.

'ELLWYN. I know—sort of world out end, wasn't it? What did you of, um?

RS. MEGAN. I wished I 'adn't jump- an' I thought of my baby—that died d—[in a rather surprised voice] I thought of d-dancin'.

Her mouth quivers, her face puckers, she gives a choke and a little sob.

ELLWYN. [Stopping and stroking There, there—there!

For a moment her face is buried in his sleeve, then she recovers herself.

RS. MEGAN. Then 'e got hold o' me, pulled me out.

ELLWYN. Ah! what a comfort—

RS. MEGAN. Yes. The water got into nouth. [They walk again] I would- ave gone to do it but for him. [She s towards FERRAND] His talk made feel all funny, as if people wanted o.

ELLWYN. My dear child! Don't think such things! As if anyone would——!

MRS. MEGAN. [Stolidly] I thought they did. They used to look at me so sometimes, where I was before I ran away—I couldn't stop there, you know.

WELLWYN. Too cooped-up?

MRS. MEGAN. Yes. No life at all, it wasn't—not after sellin' flowers, I'd rather be doin' what I am.

WELLWYN. Ah! Well—it's all over, now! How d'you feel—eh? Better?

MRS. MEGAN. Yes. I feels all right now.

[She sits up again on the little stool before the fire.

WELLWYN. No shivers, and no aches; quite comfy?

MRS. MEGAN. Yes.

WELLWYN. That's a blessing. All well now, Constable—thank you!

CONSTABLE. [Who has remained discreetly apart at the door—cordially] First rate, sir! That's capital! [He approaches and scrutinises MRS. MEGAN] Right as rain, eh, my girl?

MRS. MEGAN. [Shrinking a little] Yes.

CONSTABLE. That's fine. Then I think perhaps, for 'er sake, sir, the sooner we move on and get her a change o' clothin', the better.

WELLWYN. Oh! don't bother about that—I'll send round for my daughter—we'll manage for her here.

CONSTABLE. Very kind of you, I'm sure, sir. But [With embarrassment] she seems all right. She'll get every attention at the station.

WELLWYN. But I assure you, we don't mind at all; we'll take the greatest care of her.

CONSTABLE. [Still more embarrassed] Well, sir, of course, I'm thinkin' of—— I'm afraid I can't depart from the usual course.

WELLWYN. [Sharply] What! But—oh! No! No! That'll be all right, Constable! That'll be all right! I assure you.

CONSTABLE. [With more decision] I'll have to charge her, sir.

WELLWYN. Good God! You don't mean to say the poor little thing has got to be——

CONSTABLE. [Consulting with him]

Well, sir, we can't get over the facts, can we? There it is! You know what sooicide amounts to—it's an awkward job.

WELLWYN. [Calming himself with an effort] But look here, Constable, as a reasonable man—— This poor wretched little girl—you know what that life means better than anyone! Why! It's to her credit to try and jump out of it!

The CONSTABLE shakes his head.

WELLWYN. You said yourself her best friends couldn't wish her better! [Dropping his voice still more] Everybody feels it! The Vicar was here a few minutes ago saying the very same thing—the Vicar, Constable!

The CONSTABLE shakes his head.

WELLWYN. Ah! now, look here, I know something of her. Nothing can be done with her. We all admit it. Don't you see? Well, then, hang it—you needn't go and make fools of us all by——

FERRAND. Monsieur, it is the first of April.

CONSTABLE. [With a sharp glance at him] Can't neglect me duty, sir; that's impossible.

WELLWYN. Look here! She—slipped. She's been telling me. Come, Constable, there's a good fellow. May be the making of her, this.

CONSTABLE. I quite appreciate your good 'eart, sir, an' you make it very 'ard for me—but, come now! I put it to you as a gentleman, would you go back on yer duty if you was me?

WELLWYN raises his hat, and plunges his fingers through and through his hair.

WELLWYN. Well! God in heaven! Of all the d—d topsy-turvy——! Not a soul in the world wants her alive—and now she's to be prosecuted for trying to be where everyone wishes her.

CONSTABLE. Come, sir, come! Be a man!

Throughout all this MRS. MEGAN has sat stolidly before the fire, but as FERRAND suddenly steps forward she looks up at him.

FERRAND. Do not grieve, Monsieur! This will give her courage. There is nothing that gives more courage than to see the irony of things. [He touches MRS. MEGAN'S shoulder] Go, my chil it will do you good.

MRS. MEGAN rises, and looks him dazedly.

CONSTABLE. [Coming forward, a taking her by the hand] That's my gc lass. Come along! We won't hurt yo

MRS. MEGAN. I don't want to They'll stare at me.

CONSTABLE. [Comforting] Not the I'll see to that.

WELLWYN. [Very upset] Take her a cab, Constable, if you must—for Go sake! [He pulls out a shilling] Here

CONSTABLE. [Taking the shilling] will, sir, certainly. Don't think I wa to—— WELLWYN. No, no, I know. You're good sort.

CONSTABLE. [Comfortable] Don't y take on, sir! It's her first try; th won't be hard on 'er. Like as not o bind 'er over in her own recogs. not do it again. Come, my dear.

MRS. MEGAN. [Trying to free h self from the policeman's cloak] I wa to take this off. It looks so funny.

As she speaks the door is opened ANN; behind whom is dimly s the form of old TIMSON, s heading the curious persons.

ANN. [Looking from one to the ot in amaze] What is it? What's happene Daddy!

FERRAND. [Out of the silence] It nothing, Ma'moiselle! She has fa to drown herself. They run her in little.

WELLWYN. Lend her your jacket, dear; she'll catch her death.

ANN, feeling MRS. MEGAN'S a strips off her jacket, and helps into it without a word.

CONSTABLE. [Donning his clo Thank you, Miss—very good of y I'm sure.

MRS. MEGAN. [Mazed] It's warm She gives them all a lost half-st ing look, and passes with CONSTABLE through the doory FERRAND. That makes the third of Monsieur. We are not in luck. To w us dead, it seems, is easier than to le die.

He looks at ANN, who is stand with her eyes fixed on her father. WELLWYN has taken from his pocket a visiting card.

'ELLWYN. [To FERRAND] Here, 'k; take this, run after her! When 'ye done with her tell her to come 1S.

ERRAND. [Taking the card, and reading the address] "No. 7, Haven House, ht Street!" Rely on me, Monsieur will bring her myself to call on you. revoir, mon bon Monsieur!

He bends over WELLWYN'S hand; then, with a bow to ANN, goes out; his tattered figure can be seen through the window, passing in the wind. WELLWYN turns back to the fire. The figure of TIMSON advances into the doorway, no longer holding in either hand a waterproof leg-piece.

'MSON. [In a croaky voice] Sir!

'ELLWYN. What—you, Timson?

'MSON. On me larst legs, sir. 'Ere! can see 'em for yerself! Shawn't ole yer long.

ELLWYN. [After a long and desperate] Not now—Timson—not now! e this! [He takes out another card, hands it to TIMSON] Some other

'MSON. [Taking the card] Yer new ess! You are a gen'leman.

[He lurches slowly away.

ANN shuts the street door and sets her back against it. The rumble of the approaching van is heard outside. It ceases.

IN. [In a fateful voice] Daddy! 'y stare at each other] Do you know you've done? Given your card to six rotters.

ELLWYN. [With a blank stare] Six?

IN. [Staring round the naked room] t was the good of this?

WELLWYN. [Following her eyes—very gravely] Ann! It is stronger than me.

Without a word ANN opens the door, and walks straight out. With a heavy sigh, WELLWYN sinks down on the little stool before the fire. The three humble-men come in.

CHIEF HUMBLE-MAN. [In an attitude of expectation] This is the larst of it, sir.

WELLWYN. Oh! Ah! yes!

He gives them money; then something seems to strike him, and he exhibits certain signs of vexation. Suddenly he recovers, looks from one to the other, and then at the tea-things. A faint smile comes on his face.

WELLWYN. You can finish the decanter. [He goes out in haste.

CHIEF HUMBLE-MAN. [Clinking the coins] Third time of arskin'! April fool! Not 'arf! Good old pigeon!

SECOND HUMBLE-MAN. 'Uman being, I call 'im.

CHIEF HUMBLE-MAN. [Taking the three glasses from the last packing-case, and pouring very equally into them] That's right. Tell you wot, I'd never 'a touched this unless 'e'd told me to, I wouldn't—not with 'im.

SECOND HUMBLE-MAN. Ditto to that! This is a bit of orl right! [Raising his glass] Good luck!

THIRD HUMBLE-MAN. Same 'ere!

Simultaneously they place their lips smartly against the liquor, and at once let fall their faces and their glasses.

CHIEF HUMBLE-MAN. [With great solemnity] Crikey! Bill! Tea! . . . 'E's got us!

The stage is blotted dark.

THE FUGITIVE

A PLAY IN FOUR ACTS

"With a hey-ho chivy—Hark-forrard, Hark-forrard tantivy!"

ACT I

e scene is the pretty drawing-room of a flat. There are two doors, one open into the hall, the other shut and curtained. Through a large bay window, the curtains of which are not yet drawn, the towers of Westminster can be seen darkening in a summer sunset; a grand piano stands across one corner. The manservant PAYNTER, clean-shaven and discreet, is arranging two tables for bridge.

RNEY, the maid, a girl with one of those flowery Botticellian faces only met with in England, comes in through the curtained door, which she leaves open, disclosing the glimpse of a white wall. PAYNTER looks up at her; she shakes her head with an expression of concern.

'AYNTER. Where's she gone?

BURNEY. Just walks about, I fancy.

'AYNTER. She and the Governor don't it! One of these day she'll flit—ı'll see. I like her—she's a lady; but se thoroughbred 'uns—it's their skin their mouths. They'll go till they p if they like the job, and if they 't, it's nothing but jib—jib—jib. How s it down there before she married ı?

BURNEY. Oh! Quiet, of course.

'AYNTER. Country homes—I know . What's her father, the old Rector, ?

BURNEY. Oh! very steady old man. mother dead long before I took the e.

PAYNTER. Not a penny, I suppose?

BURNEY. [Shaking her head] No; and seven of them.

PAYNTER. [At sound of the hall door] The Governor!

BURNEY withdraws through the curtained door.

GEORGE DEDMOND enters from the hall. He is in evening dress, opera hat, and overcoat; his face is broad, comely, glossily shaved, but with neat moustaches. His eyes, clear, small, and blue-grey, have little speculation. His hair is well brushed.

GEORGE. [Handing PAYNTER his coat and hat] Look here, Paynter! When I send up from the Club for my dress things, always put in a black waistcoat as well.

PAYNTER. I asked the mistress, sir.

GEORGE. In future—see?

PAYNTER. Yes, sir. [Signing towards the window] Shall I leave the sunset, sir?

But GEORGE has crossed to the curtained door; he opens it and says: "Clare!" Receiving no answer, he goes in. PAYNTER switches up the electric light. His face, turned towards the curtained door, is apprehensive.

GEORGE. [Re-entering] Where's Mrs. Dedmond?

PAYNTER. I hardly know, sir.

GEORGE. Dined in?

PAYNTER. She had a mere nothing at seven, sir.

GEORGE. Has she gone out, since?

PAYNTER. Yes, sir—that is, yes. The —er—mistress was not dressed at all.

A little matter of fresh air, I think, sir.

GEORGE. What time did my mother say they'd be here for bridge?

PAYNTER. Sir Charles and Lady Dedmond were coming at half-past nine; and Captain Huntingdon, too—Mr. and Mrs. Fullarton might be a bit late, sir.

GEORGE. It's that now. Your mistress said nothing?

PAYNTER. Not to me, sir.

GEORGE. Send Burney.

PAYNTER. Very good sir.

[He withdraws.

GEORGE stares gloomily at the card-tables. BURNEY comes in from the hall.

GEORGE. Did your mistress say anything before she went out?

BURNEY. Yes, sir.

GEORGE. Well?

BURNEY. I don't think she meant it, sir.

GEORGE. I don't want to know what you don't think, I want the fact.

BURNEY. Yes, sir. The mistress said: "I hope it'll be a pleasant evening, Burney!"

GEORGE. Oh!—Thanks.

BURNEY. I've put out the mistress's things, sir.

GEORGE. Ah!

BURNEY. Thank you, sir.

[She withdraws.

GEORGE. Damn!

He again goes to the curtained door, and passes through. PAYNTER, coming in from the hall, announces: "General Sir Charles and Lady Dedmond." SIR CHARLES is an upright, well-groomed, grey-moustached, red-faced man of sixty-seven, with a keen eye for molehills, and none at all for mountains. LADY DEDMOND has a firm, thin face, full of capability and decision, not without kindliness; and faintly weathered, as if she had faced many situations in many parts of the world. She is fifty-five.

PAYNTER withdraws.

SIR CHARLES. Hullo! Where are they? H'm!

As he speaks, GEORGE re-enters.

LADY DEDMOND. [Kissing her son] Well, George. Where's Clare?

GEORGE. Afraid she's late.

LADY DEDMOND. Are we early?

GEORGE. As a matter of fact, she's n in.

LADY DEDMOND. Oh?

SIR CHARLES. H'm! Not—not had rumpus?

GEORGE. Not particularly. [With t first real sign of feeling] What I ca stand is being made a fool of befo other people. Ordinary friction one c put up with. But that——!

SIR CHARLES. Gone out on purpos What!

LADY DEDMOND. What was t trouble?

GEORGE. I told her this morning y were coming in to bridge. Appea she'd asked that fellow Malise, f music.

LADY DEDMOND. Without letting y know?

GEORGE. I believe she did tell me.

LADY DEDMOND. But surely——

GEORGE. I don't want to discuss There's never anything in particul We're all anyhow, as you know.

LADY DEDMOND. I see. [She loo shrewdly at her son] My dear, I shou be rather careful about him, I think.

SIR CHARLES. Who's that?

LADY DEDMOND. That Mr. Malise.

SIR CHARLES. Oh! That chap!

GEORGE. Clare isn't that sort.

LADY DEDMOND. I know. But s catches up notions very easily. I thi it's a great pity you ever came acr him.

SIR CHARLES. Where did you pick h up?

GEORGE. Italy—this Spring—so place or other where they couldn't spe English.

SIR CHARLES. Um! That's the wo of travellin'.

LADY DEDMOND. I think you ought have dropped him. These literary p ple—— [Quietly] From exchang ideas to something else, isn't very George.

SIR CHARLES. We'll make him bridge. Do him good, if he's that sor fellow.

LADY DEDMOND. Is anyone else com-
?
GEORGE. Reggie Huntingdon, and the llartons.
LADY DEDMOND. [Softly] You know,
dear boy, I've been meaning to speak you for a long time. It is such a pity u and Clare—— What is it?
GEORGE. God knows! I try, and I be-ve she does.
SIR CHARLES. It's distressin' for us,
u know, my dear fellow—distressin'.
LADY DEDMOND. I know it's been goon for a long time.
GEORGE. Oh! leave it alone, Mother.
LADY DEDMOND. But, George, I'm aid this man has brought it to a point ut ideas into her head.
GEORGE. You can't dislike him more n I do. But there's nothing one can ect to.
LADY DEDMOND. Could Reggie Hunt-don do anything, now he's home?
others sometimes——
GEORGE. I can't bear my affairs being ssed about with.
LADY DEDMOND. Well! it would be ter for you and Clare to be supposed e out together, than for her to be out ne. Go quietly into the dining-room l wait for her.
SIR CHARLES. Good! Leave your ther to make up something. She'll do [A bell sounds.
LADY DEDMOND. That may be he.
ick!
GEORGE goes out into the hall, leaving the door open in his haste.
LADY DEDMOND, following, calls "Paynter!" PAYNTER enters.
LADY DEDMOND. Don't say anything ut your master and mistress being
. I'll explain.
PAYNTER. The master, my lady?
LADY DEDMOND. Yes, I know. But you dn't say so. Do you understand?
PAYNTER. [In polite dudgeon] Just my lady. [He goes out.
SIR CHARLES. By Jove! That fellow lls a rat!
LADY DEDMOND. Be careful, Charles!
SIR CHARLES. I should think so.
LADY DEDMOND. I shall simply say
're dining out, and that we're not to t bridge for them.

SIR CHARLES. [Listening] He's having a palaver with that man of George's.
PAYNTER, reappearing, announces: "Captain Huntingdon." SIR CHARLES and LADY DEDMOND turn to him with relief.
LADY DEDMOND. Ah! It's you, Reginald!
HUNTINGDON. [A tall, fair soldier, of thirty] How d'you do? How are you, sir? What's the matter with their man?
SIR CHARLES. What!
HUNTINGDON. I was going into the dining-room to get rid of my cigar; and he said: "Not in there, sir. The master's there, but my instructions are to the effect that he's not."
SIR CHARLES. I knew that fellow——
LADY DEDMOND. The fact is, Reginald, Clare's out, and George is waiting for her. It's so important people shouldn't—— HUNTINGDON. Rather!
They draw together, as people do, discussing the misfortunes of members of their families.
LADY DEDMOND. It's getting serious, Reginald. I don't know what's to become of them. You don't think the Rector—you don't think your father would speak to Clare?
HUNTINGDON. Afraid the Governor's hardly well enough. He takes anything of that sort to heart so—especially Clare.
SIR CHARLES. Can't you put in a word yourself?
HUNTINGDON. Don't know where the mischief lies.
SIR CHARLES. I'm sure George doesn't gallop her on the road. Very steady-goin' old fellow, old George.
HUNTINGDON. Oh, yes; George is all right, sir.
LADY DEDMOND. They ought to have had children.
HUNTINGDON. Expect they're pretty glad now they haven't. I really don't know what to say, ma'am.
SIR CHARLES. Saving your presence, you know, Reginald, I've often noticed parsons' daughters grow up queer. Get too much morality and rice puddin'.
LADY DEDMOND. [With a clear look] Charles!

SIR CHARLES. What was she like when you were kids?

HUNTINGDON. Oh, all right. Could be rather a little devil, of course, when her monkey was up.

SIR CHARLES. I'm fond of her. Nothing she wants that she hasn't got, is there?

HUNTINGDON. Never heard her say so.

SIR CHARLES. [Dimly] I don't know whether old George is a bit too matter of fact for her. H'm?

A short silence.

LADY DEDMOND. There's a Mr. Malise coming here to-night. I forget if you know him.

HUNTINGDON. Yes. A thorough-bred mongrel.

LADY DEDMOND. He's literary. [With hesitation] You—you don't think he—puts—er—ideas into her head?

HUNTINGDON. I asked Greyman, the novelist, about him; seems he's a bit of an Ishmaelite, even among those fellows. Can't see Clare——

LADY DEDMOND. No. Only, the great thing is that she shouldn't be encouraged. Listen!—It is her—coming in. I can hear their voices. Gone to her room. What a blessing that man isn't here yet! [The door-bell rings] Tt! There he is, I expect.

SIR CHARLES. What are we goin' to say?

HUNTINGDON. Say they're dining out, and we're not to wait bridge for them.

SIR CHARLES. Good!

The door is opened, and PAYNTER announces "Mr. Kenneth Malise." MALISE enters. He is a tall man, about thirty-five, with a strongly marked, dark, irregular, ironic face, and eyes which seem to have needles in their pupils. His thick hair is rather untidy, and his dress clothes not too new.

LADY DEDMOND. How do you do? My son and daughter-in-law are so very sorry. They'll be here directly.

MALISE bows with a queer, curly smile.

SIR CHARLES. [Shaking hands] How d'you do, sir?

HUNTINGDON. We've met, I think.

He gives MALISE that peculiar smiling stare, which seems to warn the person bowed to of the sort of person he is. MALISE'S eyes sparkle.

LADY DEDMOND. Clare will be so grieved. One of those invitations——

MALISE. On the spur of the moment.

SIR CHARLES. You play bridge, sir?

MALISE. Afraid not!

SIR CHARLES. Don't mean that? Then we shall have to wait for 'em.

LADY DEDMOND. I forget, Mr. Malise—you write, don't you?

MALISE. Such is my weakness.

LADY DEDMOND. Delightful profession.

SIR CHARLES. Doesn't tie you! What?

MALISE. Only by the head.

SIR CHARLES. I'm always thinkin' of writin' my experiences.

MALISE. Indeed!

There is the sound of a door banged.

SIR CHARLES. [Hastily] You smoke, Mr. Malise?

MALISE. Too much.

SIR CHARLES. Ah! Must smoke when you think a lot.

MALISE. Or think when you smoke a lot.

SIR CHARLES. [Genially] Don't know that I find that.

LADY DEDMOND. [With her clear look at him] Charles!

The door is opened. CLARE DEDMOND in a cream-coloured evening frock comes in from the hall, followed by GEORGE. She is rather pale, of middle height, with beautiful figure, wavy brown hair, full, smiling lips, and large grey mesmeric eyes, one of those women all vibration, iced over with well-trained stoicism of voice and manner.

LADY DEDMOND. Well, my dear!

SIR CHARLES. Ah! George. Good dinner?

GEORGE. [Giving his hand to MALISE] How are you? Clare! Mr. Malise!

CLARE. [Smiling—in a clear voice with the faintest possible lisp] Yes, we met on the door-mat. [Pa

SIR CHARLES. Deuce you did!

[An awkward pa

LADY DEDMOND. [Acidly] Mr. Ma doesn't play bridge, it appears. Af shall be rather in the way of music.

SIR CHARLES. What! Aren't we go- to get a game?
PAYNTER has entered with a tray.
GEORGE. Paynter! Take that table into dining-room.
PAYNTER. [Putting down the tray on table behind the door] Yes, sir.
MALISE. Let me give you a hand.
PAYNTER and MALISE carry one of the bridge tables out, GEORGE making a half-hearted attempt to relieve MALISE.
SIR CHARLES. Very fine sunset!
Quite softly CLARE begins to laugh. All look at her first with surprise, then with offence, then almost with horror. GEORGE is about to go up to her, but HUNTINGDON heads him off.
HUNTINGDON. Bring the tray along, man.
GEORGE takes up the tray, stops to look at CLARE, then allows HUNTINGDON to shepherd him out.
LADY DEDMOND. [Without looking at ARE] Well, if we're going to play, arles? [She jerks his sleeve.
SIR CHARLES. What?
[He marches out.
LADY DEDMOND. [Meeting MALISE in doorway] Now you will be able to e your music.
She follows the GENERAL out.
CLARE stands perfectly still, with her eyes closed.
MALISE. Delicious!
CLARE. [In her level, clipped voice] fectly beastly of me! I'm so sorry. imply can't help running amok to- ıt.
MALISE. Never apologise for being fey. much too rare.
CLARE. On the door-mat! And they'd te-washed me so beautifully! Poor s! I wonder if I ought—— [She looks towards the door.
MALISE. Don't spoil it!
CLARE. I'd been walking up and down Embankment for about three hours. does get desperate sometimes.
MALISE. Thank God for that!
CLARE. Only makes it worse after- ds. It seems so frightful to them,

MALISE. [Softly and suddenly, but with a difficulty in finding the right words] Blessed be the respectable! May they dream of—me! And blessed be all men of the world! May they perish of a sûrfeit of—good form!
CLARE. I like that. Oh, won't there be a row! [With a faint movement of her shoulders] And the usual reconciliation.
MALISE. Mrs. Dedmond, there's a whole world outside yours. Why don't you spread your wings?
CLARE. My dear father's a saint, and he's getting old and frail; and I've got a sister engaged; and three little sisters to whom I'm supposed to set a good example. Then, I've no money, and I can't do anything for a living, except serve in a shop. I shouldn't be free, either; so what's the good? Besides, I oughtn't to have married if I wasn't going to be happy. You see, I'm not a bit misunderstood or ill-treated. It's only—— MALISE. Prison. Break out!
CLARE. [Turning to the window] Did you see the sunset? That white cloud trying to fly up?
[She holds up her bare arms, with a motion of flight.
MALISE. [Admiring her] Ah-h-h! [Then, as she drops her arms suddenly] Play me something.
CLARE. [Going to the piano] I'm awfully grateful to you. You don't make me feel just an attractive female. I wanted somebody like that. [Letting her hands rest on the notes] All the same, I'm glad not to be ugly MALISE. Thank God for beauty!
PAYNTER. [Opening the door] Mr. and Mrs. Fullarton.
MALISE. Who are they?
CLARE. [Rising] She's my chief pal. He was in the Navy.
She goes forward. MRS. FULLARTON is a rather tall woman, with dark hair and a quick eye. He, one of those clean-shaven naval men of good presence who have retired from the sea, but not from their susceptibility.
MRS. FULLARTON. [Kissing CLARE, and taking in both MALISE and her husband's look at CLARE] We've only come for a minute.

CLARE. They're playing bridge in the dining-room. Mr. Malise doesn't play. Mr. Malise—Mrs. Fullarton, Mr. Fullarton. [They greet.

FULLARTON. Most awfully jolly dress, Mrs. Dedmond.

MRS. FULLARTON. Yes, lovely, Clare.

FULLARTON abases eyes which mechanically readjust themselves.

MRS. FULLARTON. We can't stay for bridge, my dear; I just wanted to see you a minute, that's all. [Seeing HUNTINGDON coming in she speaks in a low voice to her husband] Edward, I want to speak to Clare. How d'you do, Captain Huntingdon?

MALISE. I'll say good night.

He shakes hands with CLARE, bows to MRS. FULLARTON, and makes his way out. HUNTINGDON and FULLARTON foregather in the doorway.

MRS. FULLARTON. How are things, Clare?

CLARE just moves her shoulders.

MRS. FULLARTON. Have you done what I suggested? Your room?

CLARE. No.

MRS. FULLARTON. Why not?

CLARE. I don't want to torture him. If I strike—I'll go clean. I expect I shall strike.

MRS. FULLARTON. My dear! You'll have the whole world against you.

CLARE. Even you won't back me, Dolly?

MRS. FULLARTON. Of course I'll back you, all that's possible, but I can't invent things.

CLARE. You wouldn't let me come to you for a bit, till I could find my feet?

MRS. FULLARTON, taken aback, cannot refrain from her glance at FULLARTON automatically gazing at CLARE while he talks with HUNTINGDON.

MRS. FULLARTON. Of course—the only thing is that——

CLARE. [With a faint smile] It's all right, Dolly. I'm not coming.

MRS. FULLARTON. Oh! don't do anything desperate, Clare—you are so desperate sometimes. You ought to make terms—not tracks.

CLARE. Haggle? [She shakes her head] What have I got to make terms with? What he still wants is just what I hate giving.

MRS. FULLARTON. But, Clare——

CLARE. No, Dolly; even you don't understand. All day and every day—just as far apart as we can be—and still—— Jolly, isn't it? If you've got a soul at all.

MRS. FULLARTON. It's awful, really.

CLARE. I suppose there are lots of women who feel as I do, and go on with it; only, you see, I happen to have something in me that—comes to an end. Can't endure beyond a certain time, ever.

She has taken a flower from her dress, and suddenly tears it to bits. It is the only sign of emotion she has given.

MRS. FULLARTON. [Watching] Look here, my child; this won't do. You must get a rest. Can't Reggie take you with him to India for a bit?

CLARE. [Shaking her head] Reggie lives on his pay.

MRS. FULLARTON. [With one of her quick looks] That was Mr. Malise then.

FULLARTON. [Coming towards them] I say, Mrs. Dedmond, you wouldn't sing me that little song you sang the other night. [He hums] "If I might be the falling bee and kiss thee all the day." Remember?

MRS. FULLARTON. "The falling dew," Edward. We simply must go, Clare. Good night. [She kisses her.

FULLARTON. [Taking half-cover between his wife and CLARE] It suits you down to the ground—that dress.

CLARE. Good night.

HUNTINGDON sees them out. Left alone CLARE clenches her hands, moves swiftly across to the window, and stands looking out.

HUNTINGDON. [Returning] Look here, Clare!

CLARE. Well, Reggie?

HUNTINGDON. This is working up to a mess, old girl. You can't do this kind of thing with impunity. No man'll put up with it. If you've got anything against George, better tell me.

CLARE shakes her head.

HUNTINGDON. You ought to know I should stick by you. What is it? Come——

CLARE. Get married, and find out as I year that she's the wrong person; so ong that you can't exchange a single al thought; that your blood runs cold ien she kisses you—then you'll know.

HUNTINGDON. My dear old girl, I n't want to be a brute; but it's a bit ficult to believe in that, except in vels.

CLARE. Yes, incredible, when you ven't tried.

HUNTINGDON. I mean, you—you chose n yourself. No one forced you to rry him.

CLARE. It does seem monstrous, does- it?

HUNTINGDON. My dear child, do give a reason.

CLARE. Look! [She points out at the ht and the darkening towers] If orge saw that for the first time he'd t say, "Ah, Westminster! Clock wer! Can you see the time by it?" if one cared where or what it was— utiful like that! Apply that to every very—everything.

HUNTINGDON. [Staring] George may a bit prosaic. But my dear old girl, if t's all——

CLARE. It's not all—it's nothing. I 't explain, Reggie—it's not reason, at ; it's—it's like being underground in lamp cell; it's like knowing you'll er get out. Nothing coming—never thing coming again—never anything.

HUNTINGDON. [Moved and puzzled] dear old thing; you mustn't get into tods like this. If it's like that, don't nk about it.

CLARE. When every day and every ht!—— Oh! I know it's my fault for ing married him, but that doesn't p.

HUNTINGDON. Look here! It's not as George wasn't quite a decent chap. d it's no use blinking things; you absolutely dependent on him. At ne they've got every bit as much as y can do to keep going.

CLARE. I know.

HUNTINGDON. And you've got to think the girls. Any trouble would be very stly for them. And the poor old vernor would feel it awfully.

CLARE. If I didn't know all that, Reg- . I should have gone home long ago.

HUNTINGDON. Well, what's to be done? If my pay would run to it—but it simply won't.

CLARE. Thanks, old boy, of course not.

HUNTINGDON. Can't you try to see George's side of it a bit?

CLARE. I do. Oh! don't let's talk about it.

HUNTINGDON. Well, my child, there's just one thing—you won't go sailing near the wind, will you? I mean, there are fellows always on the lookout.

CLARE. "That chap Malise, you'd better avoid him!" Why?

HUNTINGDON. Well! I don't know him. He may be all right, but he's not our sort. And you're too pretty to go on the tack of the New Woman and that kind of thing—haven't been brought up to it.

CLARE. British home-made summer goods, light and attractive—don't wear long. [At the sound of voices in the hall] They seem to be going, Reggie.

HUNTINGDON looks at her vexed, unhappy.

HUNTINGDON. Don't head for trouble, old girl. Take a pull. Bless you! Good night.

CLARE kisses him, and when he has gone turns away from the door holding herself in, refusing to give rein to some outburst of emotion. Suddenly she sits down at the untouched bridge table, leaning her bare elbows on it and her chin on her hands, quite calm. GEORGE is coming in. PAYNTER follows him.

CLARE. Nothing more wanted, thank you, Paynter. You can go home, and the maids can go to bed.

PAYNTER. We are much obliged, ma'am.

CLARE. I ran over a dog, and had to get it seen to.

PAYNTER. Naturally, ma'am!

CLARE. Good night.

PAYNTER. I couldn't get you a little anything, ma'am?

CLARE. No, thank you.

PAYNTER. No, ma'am. Good night, ma'am. [He withdraws.

GEORGE. You needn't have gone out of your way to tell a lie that wouldn't deceive a guinea-pig. [Going up to her] Pleased with yourself to-night.

CLARE shakes her head.

GEORGE. Before that fellow Malise; as if our own people weren't enough!

CLARE. Is it worth while to rag me? I know I've behaved badly, but I couldn't help it, really!

GEORGE. Couldn't help behaving like a shop-girl? My God! You were brought up as well as I was.

CLARE. Alas!

GEORGE. To let everybody see that we don't get on—there's only one word for it—Disgusting!

CLARE. I know.

GEORGE. Then why do you do it? I've always kept my end up. Why in heaven's name do you behave in this crazy way?

CLARE. I'm sorry.

GEORGE. [With intense feeling] You like making a fool of me!

CLARE. No—— Really! Only—I must break out sometimes.

GEORGE. There are things one does not do.

CLARE. I came in because I was sorry.

GEORGE. And at once began to do it again! It seems to me you delight in rows.

CLARE. You'd miss your—reconciliations.

GEORGE. For God's sake, Clare, drop cynicism!

CLARE. And truth?

GEORGE. You are my wife, I suppose.

CLARE. And they twain shall be one—spirit.

GEORGE. Don't talk wild nonsense!

There is silence.

CLARE. [Softly] I don't give satisfaction. Please give me notice!

GEORGE. Pish!

CLARE. Five years, and four of them like this! I'm sure we've served our time. Don't you really think we might get on better together—if I went away?

GEORGE. I've told you I won't stand a separation for no real reason, and have your name bandied about all over London. I have some primitive sense of honour.

CLARE. You mean your name, don't you?

GEORGE. Look here. Did that fellow Malise put all this into your head?

CLARE. No; my own evil nature.

GEORGE. I wish the deuce we'd never met him. Comes of picking up people you know nothing of. I distrust him—and his looks—and his infernal satiric way. He can't even dress decently. He's not—good form.

CLARE. [With a touch of rapture] Ah-h!

GEORGE. Why do you let him come? What d'you find interesting in him?

CLARE. A mind.

GEORGE. Deuced funny one! To have a mind—as you call it—it's not necessary to talk about Art and Literature.

CLARE. We don't.

GEORGE. Then what do you talk about—your minds?

CLARE looks at him.

GEORGE. Will you answer a straight question? Is he falling in love with you?

CLARE. You had better ask him.

GEORGE. I tell you plainly, as a man of the world, I don't believe in the guide, philosopher, and friend business.

CLARE. Thank you.

A silence. CLARE suddenly clasps her hands behind her head.

CLARE. Let me go! You'd be much happier with any other woman.

GEORGE. Clare!

CLARE. I believe—I'm sure I could earn my living. Quite serious.

GEORGE. Are you mad?

CLARE. It has been done.

GEORGE. It will never be done by you—understand that!

CLARE. It really is time we parted. I'll go clean out of your life. I don't want your support unless I'm giving you something for your money.

GEORGE. Once for all, I don't mean to allow you to make fools of us both.

CLARE. But if we are already! Look at us. We go on, and on. We're a spectacle!

GEORGE. That's not my opinion; nor the opinion of anyone, so long as you behave yourself.

CLARE. That is—behave as you think right.

GEORGE. Clare, you're pretty riling.

CLARE. I don't want to be horrid. But m in earnest this time.
GEORGE. So am I.
CLARE turns to the curtained door.
GEORGE. Look here! I'm sorry. God ows I don't want to be a brute. I know
're not happy.
CLARE. And you—are you happy?
GEORGE. I don't say I am. But why
't we be?
CLARE. I see no reason, except that
1 are you, and I am I.
GEORGE. We can try.
CLARE. I have—haven't you?
GEORGE. We used——
CLARE. I wonder!
GEORGE. You know we did.
CLARE. Too long ago—if ever.
GEORGE. [Coming closer] I—still——
CLARE. [Making a barrier of her hand]
u know that's only cupboard love.
GEORGE. We've got to face the facts.
CLARE. I thought I was.
GEORGE. The facts are that we're marl—for better or worse, and certain igs are expected of us. It's suicide you, and folly for me, in my posi-
, to ignore that. You have all you reasonably want; and I don't—
't wish for any change. If you could ig anything against me—if I drank, knocked about town, or expected too h of you. I'm not unreasonable in way, that I can see.
CLARE. Well, I think we've talked ugh.
[She again moves toward the curtained door.
GEORGE. Look here, Clare; you don't n you're expecting me to put up 1 the position of a man who's neither ried nor unmarried? That's simple gatory. You ought to know.
CLARE. Yes. I haven't yet, have I?
GEORGE. Don't go like that! Do you ose we're the only couple who've id things aren't what they thought, have to put up with each other and e the best of it.
CLARE. Not by thousands.
GEORGE. Well, why do you imagine do it?
CLARE. I don't know.
GEORGE. From a common sense of dey.

CLARE. Very!
GEORGE. By Jove! You can be the most maddening thing in all the world! [Taking up a pack of cards, he lets them fall with a long slithering flutter] After behaving as you have this evening, you might try to make some amends, I should think.

CLARE moves her head from side to side, as if in sight of something she could not avoid. He puts his hand on her arm.

CLARE. No, no—no!
GEORGE. [Dropping his hand] Can't you make it up?
CLARE. I don't feel very Christian.

She opens the door, passes through, and closes it behind her. GEORGE steps quickly towards it, stops, and turns back into the room. He goes to the window and stands looking out; shuts it with a bang, and again contemplates the door. Moving forward, he rests his hand on the deserted card-table, clutching its edge, and muttering. Then he crosses to the door into the hall and switches off the light. He opens the door to go out, then stands again irresolute in the darkness and heaves a heavy sigh. Suddenly he mutters: "No!" Crosses resolutely back to the curtained door, and opens it. In the gleam of light CLARE is standing, unhooking a necklet. He goes in, shutting the door behind him with a thud.

Curtain.

ACT II

The scene is a large, whitewashed, disordered room, whose outer door opens on to a corridor and stairway. Doors on either side lead to other rooms. On the walls are unframed reproductions of fine pictures, secured with tintacks. An old wine-coloured armchair of low and comfortable appearance, near the centre of the room, is surrounded by a litter of manuscripts, books, ink, pens and newspapers, as though someone had already been up to his neck in labour, though by a grandfather's clock it is only eleven. On a smallish table close by, are sheets of paper, cigarette ends, and two claret bottles. There are many books on shelves, and on the floor, an overflowing pile, whereon rests a soft hat, and a black knobby stick. MALISE sits in his armchair, garbed in trousers, dressing-gown, and slippers, unshaved and uncollared, writing. He pauses, smiles, lights a cigarette, and tries the rhythm of the last sentence, holding up a sheet of quarto MS.

MALISE. "Not a word, not a whisper of Liberty from all those excellent frock-coated gentlemen—not a sign, not a grimace. Only the monumental silence of their profound deference before triumphant Tyranny."

While he speaks, a substantial woman, a little over middle-age, in old dark clothes and a black straw hat, enters from the corridor. She goes to a cupboard, brings out from it an apron and a Bissell broom. Her movements are slow and imperturbable, as if she had much time before her. Her face is broad and dark, with Chinese eyebrows.

MALISE. Wait, Mrs. Miler!

MRS. MILER. I'm gettin' be'ind'and, sir.

[She comes and stands before him. MALISE writes.

MRS. MILER. There's a man 'angin' about below.

MALISE looks up; seeing that she has roused his attention, she stops. But as soon as he is about to write again, goes on.

MRS. MILER. I see him first yesterday afternoon. I'd just been out to get meself a penny-worth o' soda, an' as I come in I passed 'im on the second floor, lookin' at me with an air of suspicion. I thought to meself at the time, I thought: You're a 'andy sort of 'ang-dog man.

MALISE. Well?

MRS. MILER. Well—peekin' down through the balusters, I see 'im lookin at a photograft. That's a funny place I thinks, to look at pictures—it's s dark there, ye 'ave to use yer eyesight So I giv' a scrape with me 'eel [Sh illustrates] and he pops it in his pocket and puts up 'is 'and to knock at numbe three. I goes down an' I says: "Yo know there's no one lives there, don yer?" "Ah!" 'e says with an air of inner cence, "I wants the name of Smithers. "Oh!" I says, "try round the corne number ten." "Ah!" 'e says, tactful "much obliged." "Yes," I says, "you'l find 'im in at this time o' day. Goo evenin'!" And I thinks to meself [Sh closes one eye] Rats! There's a goo many corners hereabouts.

MALISE. [With detached appreciation Very good, Mrs. Miler.

MRS. MILER. So this mornin', ther 'e was again on the first floor with 'and raised, pretendin' to knock at num ber two. "Oh! you're still lookin' fo 'im?" I says, lettin' him see I was grandmother. "Ah!" 'e says, affabl "you misdirected me; it's here I've g my business." "That's lucky," I say "cos nobody lives there neither. Go mornin'!" And I come straight up. you want to see 'im at work you only to go downstairs, 'e'll be on t ground floor by now, pretendin' to kno at number one. Wonderful resource!

MALISE. What's he like, this gentl man?

MRS. MILER. Just like the men y see on the front page o' the daily pape Nasty, smooth-lookin' feller, with o o' them billycock hats you can't abid MALISE. Isn't he a dun?

MRS. MILER. They don't be'ave li that; you ought to know, sir. He's af no good. [Then, after a little pau Ain't he to be put a stop to? If I to me time I could get 'im, innercent-li with a jug o' water.

MALISE, smiling, shakes his hea

MALISE. You can get on now; I'm ing to shave.

He looks at the clock, and pas out into the inner room. M MILER gazes round her, pins her skirt, sits down in the a chair, takes off her hat and p it on the table, and slowly rolls up her sleeves; then with her hands on her knees she rests. There is a soft knock on the door. She gets up leisurely and moves flat-footed towards it. The door being opened CLARE is revealed.

CLARE. Is Mr. Malise in?

MRS. MILER. Yes. But 'e's dressin'.

CLARE. Oh.

MRS. MILER. Won't take 'im long. hat name?

CLARE. Would you say—a lady?

MRS. MILER. It's against the rules. t if you'll sit down a moment I'll see at I can do. [She brings forward a ir and rubs it with her apron. Then s to the door of the inner room and aks through it] A lady to see you. eturning she removes some cigarette ls] This is my hour. I shan't make ch dust. [Noting CLARE'S eyebrows sed at the débris round the armchair] particular about not disturbin' ngs.

CLARE. I'm sure you are.

MRS. MILER. He likes 'is 'abits regu-

Making a perfunctory pass with the Bissell broom, she runs it to the cupboard, comes back to the table, takes up a bottle and holds it to the light; finding it empty, she turns it upside down and drops it into the waste-paper basket; then, holding up the other bottle, and finding it not empty, she corks it and drops it into the fold of her skirt.

MRS. MILER. He takes his claret h-opened—not like these 'ere bawg-'s.

CLARE. [Rising] I think I'll come back r.

MRS. MILER. Mr. Malise is not in my fidence. We keep each other to our-es. Perhaps you'd like to read the er; he has it fresh every mornin'—Westminster.

She plucks that journal from out of the armchair and hands it to CLARE, who sits down again unhappily to brood. MRS. MILER makes a pass or two with a very dirty duster, then stands still. No longer hearing sounds, CLARE looks up.

MRS. MILER. I wouldn't interrupt yer with my workin', but 'e likes things clean. [At a sound from the inner room] That's 'im; 'e's cut 'isself! I'll just take 'im the tobaccer!

She lifts a green paper screw of tobacco from the débris round the armchair and taps on the door. It opens. CLARE moves restlessly across the room.

MRS. MILER. [Speaking into the room] The tobaccer. The lady's waitin'.

CLARE has stopped before a reproduction of Titian's picture "Sacred and Profane Love." MRS. MILER stands regarding her with a Chinese smile. MALISE enters, a thread of tobacco still hanging to his cheek.

MALISE. [Taking MRS. MILER'S hat off the table and handing it to her] Do the other room.

Enigmatically she goes.

MALISE. Jolly of you to come. Can I do anything?

CLARE. I want advice—badly.

MALISE. What! Spreading your wings?

CLARE. Yes.

MALISE. Ah! Proud to have given you that advice. When?

CLARE. The morning after you gave it me . . .

MALISE. Well?

CLARE. I went down to my people. I knew it would hurt my dad frightfully, but somehow I thought I could make him see. No good. He was awfully sweet, only—he couldn't.

MALISE. [Softly] We English love liberty in those who don't belong to us. Yes.

CLARE. It was horrible. There were the children—and my old nurse. I could never live at home now. They'd think I was—— Impossible—utterly! I'd made up my mind to go back to my owner—And then—he came down himself. I couldn't stand it. To be hauled back and begin all over again; I simply couldn't. I watched for a chance; and ran to the station, and came up to an hotel.

MALISE. Bravo!

CLARE. I don't know—no pluck this morning! You see, I've got to earn my living—no money; only a few things I can sell. All yesterday I was walking about, looking at the women. How does anyone ever get a chance?

MALISE. Sooner than you should hurt his dignity by working, your husband would pension you off.

CLARE. If I don't go back to him I couldn't take it.

MALISE. Good!

CLARE. I've thought of nursing, but it's a long training, and I do so hate watching pain. The fact is, I'm pretty hopeless; can't even do art work. I came to ask you about the stage.

MALISE. Have you ever acted?

CLARE shakes her head.

MALISE. You mightn't think so, but I've heard there's a prejudice in favour of training. There's Chorus—I don't recommend it. How about your brother?

CLARE. My brother's got nothing to spare, and he wants to get married; and he's going back to India in September. The only friend I should care to bother is Mrs. Fullarton, and she's—got a husband.

MALISE. I remember the gentleman.

CLARE. Besides, I should be besieged day and night to go back. I must lie doggo somehow.

MALISE. It makes my blood boil to think of women like you. God help all ladies without money.

CLARE. I expect I shall have to go back.

MALISE. No, no! We shall find something. Keep your soul alive at all costs. What! let him hang on to you till you're nothing but—emptiness and ache, till you lose even the power to ache. Sit in his drawing-room, pay calls, play bridge, go out with him to dinners, return to—duty; and feel less and less, and be less and less, and so grow old and—die!

The bell rings.

MALISE. [Looking at the door in doubt] By the way—he'd no means of tracing you?

She shakes her head. The bell rings again.

MALISE. Was there a man on the stairs as you came up?

CLARE. Yes. Why?

MALISE. He's begun to haunt them, I'm told.

CLARE. Oh! But that would mean they thought I—oh! no!

MALISE. Confidence in me is not excessive.

CLARE. Spying!

MALISE. Will you go in there for a minute? Or shall we let them ring—or—what? It may not be anything, of course.

CLARE. I'm not going to hide.

The bell rings a third time.

MALISE. [Opening the door of the inner room] Mrs. Miler, just see who it is; and then go, for the present.

MRS. MILER comes out with her hat on, passes enigmatically to the door, and opens it. A man's voice says: "Mr. Malise? Would you give him these cards?"

MRS. MILER. [Re-entering] The cards.

MALISE. Mr. Robert Twisden. Sir Charles and Lady Dedmond.

[He looks at CLARE.

CLARE. [Her face scornful and unmoved] Let them come.

MALISE. [To MRS. MILER] Show them in!

TWISDEN enters—a clean-shaved shrewd-looking man, with a fighting underlip, followed by SIR CHARLES and LADY DEDMOND. MRS. MILER goes. There are no greetings.

TWISDEN. Mr. Malise? How do you do, Mrs. Dedmond? Had the pleasure of meeting you at your wedding.

CLARE inclines her head.

TWISDEN. I am Mr. George Dedmond's solicitor, sir. I wonder if you would be so very kind as to let us have a few words with Mrs. Dedmond alone?

At a nod from CLARE, MALISE passes into the inner room, and shuts the door. A silence.

SIR CHARLES. [Suddenly] What!

LADY DEDMOND. Mr. Twisden, what you——?

TWISDEN. [Uneasy] Mrs. Dedmond, I must apologise, but you—you have gave us an alternative, did you? [He pauses for an answer, and, not getting e, goes on] Your disappearance has ven your husband great anxiety. ally, my dear madam, you must for- ve us for this—attempt to get into mmunication.

CLARE. Why did you spy here?

SIR CHARLES. No, no! Nobody's spied you. What!

TWISDEN. I'm afraid the answer is it we appear to have been justified. t the expression on CLARE'S face he es on hastily] Now, Mrs. Dedmond, n a lawyer and I know that appear- ces are misleading. Don't think I'm friendly; I wish you well.

CLARE raises her eyes. Moved by that look, which is exactly as if she had said: "I have no friends," he hurries on.

TWISDEN. What we want to say to you his: Don't let this split go on! Don't mmit yourself to what you'll bitterly ret. Just tell us what's the matter. sure it can be put straight.

CLARE. I have nothing against my hus- id—it was quite unreasonable to leave

TWISDEN. Come, that's good.

CLARE. Unfortunately, there's some- ng stronger than reason.

TWISDEN. I don't know it, Mrs. Ded- nd.

CLARE. No?

TWISDEN. [Disconcerted] Are you— oughtn't to take a step without ice, in your position.

CLARE. Nor with it?

TWISDEN. [Approaching her] Come, r; isn't there anything you feel you'd to say—that might help to put mat- straight?

CLARE. I don't think so, thank you.

LADY DEDMOND. You must see, Clare,

TWISDEN. In your position, Mrs. Ded- id—a beautiful young woman with- money. I'm quite blunt. This is a d world. Should be awfully sorry if thing went wrong.

CLARE. And if I go back?

TWISDEN. Of two evils, if it be so— ose the least?

CLARE. I am twenty-six; he is thirty- . We can't reasonably expect to die fifty years.

LADY DEDMOND. That's morbid, Clare.

TWISDEN. What's open to you if you don't go back? Come, what's your position? Neither fish, flesh, nor fowl; fair game for everybody. Believe me, Mrs. Dedmond, for a pretty woman to strike, as it appears you're doing, simply because the spirit of her marriage has taken flight, is madness. You must know that no one pays attention to anything but facts. If now—excuse me—you—you had a lover, [his eyes travel round the room and again rest on her] you would, at all events, have some ground under your feet, some sort of protection, but [he pauses] as you have not—you've none.

CLARE. Except what I make myself.

SIR CHARLES. Good God!

TWISDEN. Yes! Mrs. Dedmond! There's the bedrock difficulty. As you haven't money, you should never have been pretty. You're up against the world, and you'll get no mercy from it. We lawyers see too much of that. I'm putting it brutally, as a man of the world.

CLARE. Thank you. Do you think you quite grasp the alternative?

TWISDEN. [Taken aback] But, my dear young lady, there are two sides to every contract. After all, your husband's fulfilled his.

CLARE. So have I up till now. I shan't ask anything from him—nothing—do you understand?

LADY DEDMOND. But, my dear, you must live.

TWISDEN. Have you ever done any sort of work?

CLARE. Not yet.

TWISDEN. Any conception of the competition nowadays?

CLARE. I can try.

TWISDEN, looking at her, shrugs his shoulders.

CLARE. [Her composure a little broken by that look] It's real to me—this—you see?

SIR CHARLES. But, my dear girl, what the devil's to become of George?

CLARE. He can do what he likes—it's nothing to me.

TWISDEN. Mrs. Dedmond, I say without hesitation you've no notion of what you're faced with, brought up to a sheltered life as you've been. Do you realise that you stand at the parting of the ways, and one leads into the wilderness.

CLARE. Which?

TWISDEN. [Glancing at the door through which MALISE has gone] Of course, if you want to play at wild asses there are plenty who will help you.

SIR CHARLES. By Gad! Yes!

CLARE. I only want to breathe.

TWISDEN. Mrs. Dedmond, go back! You can now. It will be too late soon. There are lots of wolves about.

[Again he looks at the door.

CLARE. But not where you think. You say I need advice. I came here for it.

TWISDEN. [With a curiously expressive shrug] In that case I don't know that I can usefully stay.

[He goes to the outer door.

CLARE. Please don't have me followed when I leave here. Please!

LADY DEDMOND. George is outside, Clare.

CLARE. I don't wish to see him. By what right have you come here? [She goes to the door through which MALISE has passed, opens it, and says] Please come in, Mr. Malise.

MALISE enters.

TWISDEN. I am sorry. [Glancing at MALISE, he inclines his head] I am sorry. Good morning. [He goes.

LADY DEDMOND. Mr. Malise, I'm sure, will see——

CLARE. Mr. Malise will stay here, please, in his own room.

MALISE bows.

SIR CHARLES. My dear girl, 'pon my soul, you know, I can't grasp your line of thought at all!

CLARE. No?

LADY DEDMOND. George is most willing to take up things just as they were before you left.

CLARE. Ah!

LADY DEDMOND. Quite frankly—what is it you want?

CLARE. To be left alone. Quite frankly, he made a mistake to have me spied on.

LADY DEDMOND. But, my good girl, if you'd let us know where you were, like a reasonable being. You can't possibly be left to yourself without money or position of any kind. Heaven knows what you'd be driven to!

[She looks at MALISE.

MALISE. [Softly] Delicious!

SIR CHARLES. You will be good enough to repeat that out loud, sir.

LADY DEDMOND. Charles! Clare, you must know this is all a fit of spleen; your duty and your interest—marriage is sacred, Clare.

CLARE. Marriage! My marriage has become the—the reconciliation—of two animals—one of them unwilling. That's all the sanctity there is about it.

SIR CHARLES. What!

LADY DEDMOND. You ought to be horribly ashamed.

CLARE. Of the fact—I am.

LADY DEDMOND. [Darting a glance at MALISE] If we are to talk this out, it must be in private.

MALISE. [To CLARE] Do you wish me to go?

CLARE. No.

LADY DEDMOND. [At MALISE] should have thought ordinary decent feeling—— Good heavens, girl! Can't you see that you're being played with?

CLARE. If you insinuate anything against Mr. Malise, you lie.

LADY DEDMOND. If you will do these things—come to a man's rooms——

CLARE. I came to Mr. Malise because he's the only person I know with imagination enough to see what my position is; I came to him a quarter of an hour ago, for the first time, for definite advice, and you instantly suspect him. That is disgusting.

LADY DEDMOND. [Frigidly] Is the natural place for me to find my son's wife?

CLARE. His woman.

LADY DEDMOND. Will you listen, Reginald?

CLARE. I have.

LADY DEDMOND. Haven't you any religious sense at all, Clare?

CLARE. None, if it's religion to live as we do.

LADY DEDMOND. It's terrible—the state of mind! It's really terrible!

CLARE breaks into the soft laugh of the other evening. As if galvanised by the sound, SIR CHARLES com- to life out of the transfixed bewilderment with which he has been listening.

SIR CHARLES. For God's sake don't gh like that!

CLARE stops.

LADY DEDMOND. [With real feeling] r the sake of the simple right, Clare!

CLARE. Right? Whatever else is right ur life is not. [She puts her hand on r heart] I swear before God that I've ed and tried. I swear before God, that I believed we could ever again love h other only a little tiny bit, I'd go k. I swear before God that I don't nt to hurt anybody.

LADY DEDMOND. But you are hurting rybody. Do—do be reasonable!

CLARE. [Losing control] Can't you see t I'm fighting for all my life to come ot to be buried alive—not to be slow- mothered. Look at me! I'm not wax 'm flesh and blood. And you want to on me for ever—body and soul.

They stare at her.

SIR CHARLES. [Suddenly] By Jove! I 't know, I don't know! What!

LADY DEDMOND. [To MALISE] If you e any decency left, sir, you will allow son, at all events, to speak to his wife e. [Beckoning to her husband] We- vait below.

SIR CHARLES. I—I want to speak. [To RE] My dear, if you feel like this, I only say as a—as a gentleman——

LADY DEDMOND. Charles!

SIR CHARLES. Let me alone! I can ' say that—damme, I don't know that n say anything!

He looks at her very grieved, then turns and marches out, followed by LADY DEDMOND, whose voice is heard without, answered by his: "What!" In the doorway, as they pass, GEORGE is standing; he comes in.

GEORGE. [Going up to CLARE, who has vered all her self-control] Will you e outside and speak to me?

CLARE. No.

GEORGE glances at MALISE, who is leaning against the wall with folded arms.

GEORGE. [In a low voice] Clare!

CLARE. Well!

GEORGE. You try me pretty high, don't you, forcing me to come here, and speak before this fellow? Most men would think the worst, finding you like this.

CLARE. You need not have come—or thought at all.

GEORGE. Did you imagine I was going to let you vanish without an effort——

CLARE. To save me?

GEORGE. For God's sake be just! I've come here to say certain things. If you force me to say them before him—on your head be it! Will you appoint somewhere else?

CLARE. No.

GEORGE. Why not?

CLARE. I know all those "certain things." "You must come back. It is your duty. You have no money. Your friends won't help you. You can't earn your living. You are making a scandal." You might even say for the moment: "Your room shall be respected."

GEORGE. Well, it's true and you've no answer.

CLARE. Oh! [Suddenly] Our life's a lie. It's stupid; it's disgusting. I'm tired of it! Please leave me alone!

GEORGE. You rather miss the point, I'm afraid. I didn't come here to tell you what you know perfectly well when you're sane. I came here to say this: Anyone in her senses could see the game your friend here is playing. It wouldn't take a baby in. If you think that a gentleman like that [His stare travels round the dishevelled room till it rests on MALISE] champions a pretty woman for nothing, you make a fairly bad mistake.

CLARE. Take care.

But MALISE, after one convulsive movement of his hands, has again become rigid.

GEORGE. I don't pretend to be subtle or that kind of thing; but I have ordinary common sense. I don't attempt to be superior to plain facts——

CLARE. [Under her breath] Facts!

GEORGE. Oh! for goodness' sake drop that hifalutin' tone. It doesn't suit you. Look here! If you like to go abroad with one of your young sisters until the autumn, I'll let the flat and go to the Club.

CLARE. Put the fire out with a penny hose. [Slowly] I am not coming back to you, George. The farce is over.

GEORGE. [Taken aback for a moment by the finality of her tone, suddenly fronts MALISE] Then there is something between you and this fellow.

MALISE. [Dangerously, but without moving] I beg your pardon!

CLARE. There—is—nothing.

GEORGE. [Looking from one to the other] At all events, I won't—I won't see a woman who once——

CLARE makes a sudden effacing movement with her hands.

GEORGE. I won't see her go to certain ruin without lifting a finger.

CLARE. That is noble.

GEORGE. [With intensity] I don't know that you deserve anything of me. But on my honour, as a gentleman, I came here this morning for your sake, to warn you of what you're doing. [He turns suddenly on MALISE] And I tell this precious friend of yours plainly what I think of him, and that I'm not going to play into his hands.

MALISE, without stirring from the wall, looks at CLARE, and his lips move.

CLARE. [Shakes her head at him—then to GEORGE] Will you go, please?

GEORGE. I will go when you do.

MALISE. A man of the world should know better than that.

GEORGE. Are you coming?

MALISE. That is inconceivable.

GEORGE. I'm not speaking to you, sir.

MALISE. You are right. Your words and mine will never kiss each other.

GEORGE. Will you come?

CLARE shakes her head.

GEORGE. [With fury] D'you mean to stay in this pigsty with that rhapsodical swine?

MALISE. [Transformed] By God, if you don't go, I'll kill you.

GEORGE. [As suddenly calm] That remains to be seen.

MALISE. [With most deadly quietness] Yes, I will kill you.

He goes stealthily along the wall, takes up from where it lies on the pile of books the great black knobby stick, and stealthily approaches GEORGE, his face quite fiendish.

CLARE. [With a swift movement, grasping the stick] Please.

MALISE resigns the stick, and the two men, perfectly still, glare at each other. CLARE, letting the stick fall, puts her foot on it. Then slowly she takes off her hat and lays it on the table.

CLARE. Now will you go!

There is silence.

GEORGE. [Staring at her hat] You mad little fool! Understand this; if you've not returned home by three o'clock I'll divorce you, and you may roll in the gutter with this high-souled friend of yours. And mind this, you sir—I won't spare you—by God! Your pocket shall suffer. That's the only thing that touches fellows like you.

Turning, he goes out, and slams the door. CLARE and MALISE remain face to face. Her lips have begun to quiver.

CLARE. Horrible!

She turns away, shuddering, and sits down on the edge of the armchair, covering her eyes with the backs of her hands. MALISE picks up the stick, and fingers it lovingly. Then putting it down, he moves so that he can see her face. She is sitting quite still, staring straight before her.

MALISE. Nothing could be better.

CLARE. I don't know what to do! I don't know what to do!

MALISE. Thank the stars for your good fortune.

CLARE. He means to have revenge on you! And it's all my fault.

MALISE. Let him. Let him go for his divorce. Get rid of him. Have done with him—somehow.

She gets up and stands with face averted. Then swiftly turning to him.

CLARE. If I must bring you harm, let me pay you back! I can't bear it otherwise! Make some use of me, if you don't mind!

MALISE. My God!

She puts up her face to be kissed, shutting her eyes.

MALISE. You poor——

He clasps and kisses her, then, drawing back, looks in her face. She has not moved, her eyes are still closed; but she is shivering; her lips are tightly pressed together; her hands twitching.

MALISE. [Very quietly] No, no! This not the house of a "gentleman."

CLARE. [Letting her head fall, and alst in a whisper] I'm sorry.

MALISE. I understand.

CLARE. I don't feel. And without—I 't, can't.

MALISE. [Bitterly] Quite right. u've had enough of that.

There is a long silence. Without looking at him she takes up her hat, and puts it on.

MALISE. Not going?

CLARE nods.

MALISE. You don't trust me?

CLARE. I do! But I can't take when not giving.

MALISE. I beg—I beg you! What does matter? Use me! Get free some- r.

CLARE. Mr. Malise, I know what I ht to be to you, if I let you in for this. I know what you want—or will it. Of course—why not?

MALISE. I give you my solemn d——

CLARE. No! if I can't be that to you— not real. And I can't. It isn't to be ufactured, is it?

MALISE. It is not.

CLARE. To make use of you in such a ! No.

[She moves towards the door.

MALISE. Where are you going?

CLARE does not answer. She is breathing rapidly. There is a change in her, a sort of excitement beneath her calmness.

MALISE. Not back to him?

CLARE shakes her head.

MALISE. Thank God! But where? To people again?

CLARE. No.

MALISE. Nothing—desperate?

CLARE. Oh! no.

MALISE. Then what—tell me—come!

CLARE. I don't know. Women manage show.

MALISE. But you—poor dainty thing!

CLARE. It's all right! Don't be unhappy! Please!

MALISE. [Seizing her arm] D'you imagine they'll let you off, out there—you with your face? Come, trust me—trust me! You must!

CLARE. [Holding out her hand] Goodbye!

MALISE. [Not taking that hand] This great damned world, and—you! Listen! [The sound of the traffic far down below is audible in the stillness] Into that! alone—helpless—without money. The men who work with you; the men you make friends of—d'you think they'll let you be? The men in the streets, staring at you, stopping you—pudgy, bull-necked brutes; devils with hard eyes; senile swine; and the "chivalrous" men, like me, who don't mean you harm, but can't help seeing you're made for love! Or suppose you don't take covert but struggle on in the open. Society! The respectable! The pious! Even those who love you! Will they let you be? Hue and cry! The hunt was joined the moment you broke away! It will never let up! Covert to covert—till they've run you down, and you're back in the cart, and God pity you!

CLARE. Well, I'll die running!

MALISE. No, no! Let me shelter you! Let me!

CLARE. [Shaking her head and smiling] I'm going to seek my fortune. Wish me luck!

MALISE. I can't let you go.

CLARE. You must.

He looks into her face; then, realising that she means it, suddenly bends down to her fingers, and puts his lips to them.

MALISE. Good luck, then! Good luck!

He releases her hand. Just touching his bent head with her other hand, CLARE turns and goes. MALISE remains with bowed head, listening to the sound of her receding footsteps. They die away. He raises himself, and strikes out into the air with his clenched fist.

Curtain.

ACT III

SCENE I

Malise's sitting-room. An afternoon, three months later. On the table are an open bottle of claret, his hat, and some tea-things. Down by the hearth is a kettle on a lighted spirit-stand. Near the door stands Haywood, a short, round-faced man, with a tobacco-coloured moustache; Malise, by the table, is contemplating a piece of blue paper.

Haywood. Sorry to press an old customer, sir, but a year and an 'alf without any return on your money——

Malise. Your tobacco is too good, Mr. Haywood. I wish I could see my way to smoking another.

Haywood. Well, sir—that's a funny remedy.

With a knock on the half-opened door, a Boy appears.

Malise. Yes. What is it?

Boy. Your copy for The Watchfire, please, sir.

Malise. [Motioning him out] Yes. Wait!

The Boy withdraws. Malise goes up to the pile of books, turns them over, and takes up some volumes.

Malise. This is a very fine unexpurgated translation of Boccaccio's "Decameron," Mr. Haywood—illustrated. I should say you would get more than the amount of your bill for them.

Haywood. [Shaking his head] Them books worth three pounds seven!

Malise. It's scarce, and highly improper. Will you take them in discharge?

Haywood. [Torn between emotions] Well, I 'ardly know what to say—— No, sir, I don't think I'd like to 'ave to do with that.

Malise. You could read them first, you know?

Haywood. [Dubiously] I've got my wife at 'ome.

Malise. You could both read them.

Haywood. [Brought to his bearings] No, sir, I couldn't.

Malise. Very well; I'll sell them myself, and you shall have the result.

Haywood. Well, thank you, sir. I'm sure I didn't want to trouble you.

Malise. Not at all, Mr. Haywood. It's for me to apologise.

Haywood. So long as I give satisfaction.

Malise. [Holding the door for him] Certainly. Good evening.

Haywood. Good evenin', sir; no offence, I hope.

Malise. On the contrary.

Doubtfully Haywood goes. And Malise stands scratching his head; then slipping the bill into one of the volumes to remind him, he replaces them at the top of the pile. The Boy again advances into the doorway.

Malise. Yes, now for you.

He goes to the table and takes some sheets of MS. from an old portfolio. But the door is again timidly pushed open, and Haywood reappears.

Malise. Yes, Mr. Haywood?

Haywood. About that little matter, sir. If—if it's any convenience to you—I've—thought of a place where I could——

Malise. Read them? You'll enjoy them thoroughly.

Haywood. No, sir, no! Where I can dispose of them.

Malise. [Holding out the volumes] It might be as well.

Haywood takes the books gingerly.

Malise. I congratulate you, Mr. Haywood; it's a classic.

Haywood. Oh, indeed—yes, sir. In the event of there being any—— Malise. Anything over? Carry it to my credit. Your bill—— [He hands over the blue paper] Send me the receipt. Good evening!

Haywood, nonplussed, and trying to hide the books in an evening paper, fumbles out: "Good evenin', sir!" and departs. Malise again takes up the sheets of MS. and cons a sentence over to himself, gazing blankly at the stout Boy.

Malise. "Man of the world—go m your god! Poor buttoned-up phiopher" [the Boy shifts his feet] "ind to the point of cretinism, and nded to the bone on fear of ridicule e Boy breathes heavily]—you are the ve of facts!"

There is a knock on the door.

Malise. Who is it?

The door is pushed open, and Reginald Huntingdon stands there.

Huntingdon. I apologise, sir; can I ne in a minute?

Malise bows with ironical hostility.

Huntingdon. I don't know if you rember me—Clare Dedmond's brother.

Malise. I remember you.

[He motions to the stolid Boy to go outside again.

Huntingdon. I've come to you, sir, a gentleman——

Malise. Some mistake. There is one, elieve, on the first floor.

Huntingdon. It's about my sister.

Malise. D—n you! Don't you know
I've been shadowed these last three nths? Ask your detectives for any rmation you want.

Huntingdon. We know that you en't seen her, or even known where is.

Malise. Indeed! You've found that Brilliant!

Huntingdon. We know it from my
r.

Malise. Oh! So you've tracked her
m?

Huntingdon. Mrs. Fullarton came ss her yesterday in one of those shops—selling gloves.

Malise. Mrs. Fullarton—the lady the husband. Well! you've got her.
her back into prison.

Huntingdon. We have not got her.
left at once, and we don't know re she's gone.

Malise. Bravo!

Huntingdon. [Taking hold of his Look here, Mr. Malise, in a way I e your feeling, but I'm fond of my r, and it's damnable to have to go to India knowing she must be adrift, without protection, going ugh God knows what! Mrs. Ful-n says she's looking awfully pale down.

Malise. [Struggling between resentment and sympathy] Why do you come to me?

Huntingdon. We thought——

Malise. Who?

Huntingdon. My—my father and myself.

Malise. Go on.

Huntingdon. We thought there was just a chance that, having lost that job, she might come to you again for advice. If she does, it would be really generous of you if you'd put my father in touch with her. He's getting old, and he feels this very much. [He hands
Malise a card] This is his address.

Malise. [Twisting the card] Let there be no mistake, sir; I do nothing that will help give her back to her husband. She's out to save her soul alive, and I don't join the hue and cry that's after her. On the contrary—if I had the power. If your father wants to shelter her, that's another matter. But she'd her own ideas about that.

Huntingdon. Perhaps you don't realize how unfit my sister is for rough and tumble. She's not one of this new sort of woman. She's always been looked after, and had things done for her.
Pluck she's got, but that's all, and she's bound to come to grief.

Malise. Very likely—the first birds do. But if she drops half-way it's better than if she'd never flown. Your sister, sir, is trying the wings of her spirit, out of the old slave market. For women as for men, there's more than one kind of dishonour, Captain Huntingdon, and worse things than being dead, as you know in your profession.

Huntingdon. Admitted—but——

Malise. We each have our own views as to what they are. But they all come to—death of our spirits, for the sake of our carcases. Anything more?

Huntingdon. My leave's up. I sail to-morrow. If you do see my sister I trust you to give her my love and say I begged she would see my father.

Malise. If I have the chance—yes.

He makes a gesture of salute, to which Huntingdon *responds.
Then the latter turns and goes out.*

MALISE. Poor fugitive! Where are you running now?

He stands at the window, through which the evening sunlight is powdering the room with smoky gold. The stolid BOY has again come in. MALISE stares at him, then goes back to the table, takes up the MS., and booms it at him; he receives the charge, breathing hard.

MALISE. "Man of the world—product of a material age; incapable of perceiving reality in motions of the spirit; having 'no use,' as you would say, for 'sentimental nonsense'; accustomed to believe yourself the national spine—your position is unassailable. You will remain the idol of the country—arbiter of law, parson in mufti, darling of the play-wright and the novelist—God bless you!—while waters lap these shores."

He places the sheets of MS. in an envelope, and hands them to the BOY.

MALISE. You're going straight back to The Watchfire?

BOY. [Stolidly] Yes, sir.

MALISE. [Staring at him] You're a masterpiece. D'you know that?

BOY. No, sir.

MALISE. Get out, then.

He lifts the portfolio from the table, and takes it into the inner room. The BOY, putting his thumb stolidly to his nose, turns to go. In the doorway he shies violently at the figure of CLARE, standing there in a dark-coloured dress, skids past her and goes. CLARE comes into the gleam of sunlight, her white face alive with emotion or excitement. She looks round her, smiles, sighs; goes swiftly to the door, closes it, and comes back to the table. There she stands, fingering the papers on the table, smoothing MALISE'S hat—wistfully, eagerly, waiting.

MALISE. [Returning] You!

CLARE. [With a faint smile] Not very glorious, is it?

He goes towards her, and checks himself, then slews the armchair round.

MALISE. Come! Sit down, sit down!

CLARE, heaving a long sigh, sinks down into the chair.

MALISE. Tea's nearly ready.

He places a cushion for her, and prepares tea; she looks up at him softly, but as he finishes and turns to her, she drops that glance.

CLARE. Do you think me an awful coward for coming? [She has taken a little plain cigarette case from her dress.] Would you mind if I smoked?

MALISE shakes his head, then draws back from her again, as if afraid to be too close. And again, unseen, she looks at him.

MALISE. So you've lost your job?

CLARE. How did you——?

MALISE. Your brother. You only just missed him.

CLARE starts up.

MALISE. They had an idea you'd come. He's sailing to-morrow—he wants you to see your father.

CLARE. Is Father ill?

MALISE. Anxious about you.

CLARE. I've written to him every week. [Excited] They're still hunting me!

MALISE. [Touching her shoulder gently] It's all right—all right.

She sinks again into the chair, and again he withdraws. And once more she gives him that soft eager look, and once more averts it as he turns to her.

CLARE. My nerves have gone funny lately. It's being always on one's guard and stuffy air, and feeling people look and talk about you, and dislike you being there.

MALISE. Yes; that wants pluck.

CLARE. [Shaking her head] I curl up all the time. The only thing I know for certain is, that I shall never go back to him. The more I've hated what I've been doing, the more sure I've been I might come to anything—but not that.

MALISE. Had a very bad time?

CLARE. [Nodding] I'm spoilt. It's a curse to be a lady when you have to earn your living. It's not really been so hard, I suppose; I've been selling things and living about twice as well as most shop girls.

MALISE. Were they decent to you?

CLARE. Lots of the girls are really ... But somehow they don't want me, 't help thinking I've got airs or ...ething; and in here [She touches breast] I don't want them!

MALISE. I know.

CLARE. Mrs. Fullarton and I used to ...ng to a society for helping reduced ...lewomen to get work. I know now ...t they want: enough money not to ...k—that's all! [Suddenly looking up ...im] Don't think me worse than I ...—please! It's working under people; having to do it, being driven. I have ..., I've not been altogether a coward, ...y! But every morning getting there ...same time; every day the same stale ...ner," as they call it; every evening ...same "Good evening, Miss Clare," ...od evening, Miss Simpson," "Good ...ing, Miss Hart," "Good evening, ... Clare." And the same walk home, ...he same 'bus; and the same men ... you mustn't look at, for fear they'll ...w you. [She rises] Oh! and the ...g—always, always—that there's no ... or life, or hope, or anything. It was ... like being ill, the way I've wanted ...de and dance and get out into the ...try. [Her excitement dies away into ...ld clipped composure, and she sits ... again] Don't think too badly of ...it really is pretty ghastly!

MALISE. [Gruffly] H'm! Why a ...?

CLARE. References. I didn't want to ...nore lies than I could help; a mar... woman on strike can't tell the truth, ...know. And I can't typewrite or do ...hand yet. And chorus—I thought— ... wouldn't like.

MALISE. I? What have I——? [He ...s himself] Have men been brutes?

CLARE. [Stealing a look at him] One ...ved me a lot. He caught hold of my ... one evening. I just took this out ... draws out her hatpin and holds it ... dagger, her lip drawn back as the ...f a dog going to bite] and said: ... you leave me alone, please?" And ...d. It was rather nice. And there ... one quite decent little man in the ...—I was sorry for him—such a ...le little man!

MALISE. Poor devil—it's hard not to wish for the moon.

At the tone of his voice CLARE looks up at him; his face is turned away.

CLARE. [Softly] How have you been? Working very hard?

MALISE. As hard as God will let me.

CLARE. [Stealing another look] Have you any typewriting I could do? I could learn, and I've still got a brooch I could sell. Which is the best kind?

MALISE. I had a catalogue of them somewhere.

He goes into the inner room. The moment he is gone, CLARE stands up, her hands pressed to her cheeks as if she felt them flaming. Then, with hands clasped, she stands waiting. He comes back with the old portfolio.

MALISE. Can you typewrite where you are?

CLARE. I have to find a new room anyway. I'm changing—to be safe. [She takes a luggage ticket from her glove] I took my things to Charing Cross—only a bag and one trunk. [Then, with that queer expression on her face which prefaces her desperations] You don't want me now, I suppose.

MALISE. What?

CLARE. [Hardly above a whisper] Because—if you still wanted me—I could—now.

MALISE. [Staring hard into her face that is quivering and smiling] You mean it? You could? You care——?

CLARE. I've thought of you—so much! But only—if you're sure.

He clasps her and kisses her closed eyes; and so they stand for a moment, till the sound of a latch-key in the door sends them apart.

MALISE. It's the housekeeper. Give me that ticket; I'll send for your things.

Obediently she gives him the ticket, smiles, and goes quietly into the inner room. MRS. MILER has entered; her face, more Chinese than ever, shows no sign of having seen.

MALISE. That lady will stay here, Mrs. Miler. Kindly go with this ticket to the cloak-room at Charing Cross station, and bring back her luggage in a cab. Have you money?

MRS. MILER. 'Arf a crown. [She takes the ticket—then impressively] In case you don't know—there's two o' them men about the stairs now.

The moment she is gone MALISE makes a gesture of maniacal fury. He steals on tiptoe to the outer door, and listens. Then, placing his hand on the knob, he turns it without noise, and wrenches back the door. Transfigured in the last sunlight streaming down the corridor are two men, close together, listening and consulting secretly. They start back.

MALISE. [With strange, almost noiseless ferocity] You've run her to earth; your job's done. Kennel up, hounds!

[And in their faces he slams the door.

Curtain.

SCENE II

The same, early on a winter afternoon, three months later. The room has now a certain daintiness. There are curtains over the doors, a couch under the window, all the books are arranged on shelves. In small vases, over the fireplace, are a few violets and chrysanthemums. MALISE sits huddled in his armchair drawn close to the fire, paper on knee, pen in hand. He looks rather grey and drawn, and round his chair is the usual litter. At the table, now nearer to the window, CLARE sits working a typewriter. She finishes a line, puts sheets of paper together, makes a note on a card—adds some figures, and marks the total.

CLARE. Kenneth, when this is paid, I shall have made two pound seventeen in the three months, and saved you about three pounds. One hundred and seventeen shillings at tenpence a thousand is one hundred and forty thousand words at fourteen hundred words an hour. It's only just over an hour a day. Can't you get me more?

MALISE lifts the hand that holds his pen and lets it fall again. CLARE puts the cover on the typewriter and straps it.

CLARE. I'm quite packed. Shall I pack for you? [He nods] Can't we have more than three days at the sea? [He shakes his head. Going up to him] You did sleep last night.

MALISE. Yes, I slept.

CLARE. Bad head? [MALISE nods] But this time the day after to-morrow the case will be heard and done with. You're not worrying for me? Except for my poor old dad, I don't care a bit.

MALISE heaves himself out of the chair, and begins pacing up and down.

CLARE. Kenneth, do you understand why he doesn't claim damages, after what he said that day—here? [Looking suddenly at him] It is true that he doesn't?

MALISE. It is not.

CLARE. But you told me yourself—

MALISE. I lied.

CLARE. Why?

MALISE. [Shrugging] No use lying any longer—you'd know it to-morrow.

CLARE. How much am I valued at?

MALISE. Two thousand. [Grimly] He'll settle it on you. [He laughs] Masterly! By one stroke, destroys his enemy, avenges his "honour," and gilds his name with generosity!

CLARE. Will you have to pay?

MALISE. Stones yield no blood.

CLARE. Can't you borrow?

MALISE. I couldn't even get the costs.

CLARE. Will they make you bankrupt then?

MALISE nods.

CLARE. But that doesn't mean that you won't have your income, does it?

MALISE laughs.

CLARE. What is your income, Kenneth?

He is silent.

CLARE. A hundred and fifty from Watchfire, I know. What else?

MALISE. Out of five books I have made the sum of forty pounds.

CLARE. What else? Tell me.

MALISE. Fifty to a hundred pounds a year. Leave me to gnaw my way out, child.

Clare stands looking at him in distress, then goes quickly into the room behind her. Malise takes up his paper and pen. The paper is quite blank.

ALISE. [Feeling his head] Full of ke.

He drops paper and pen, and crossing to the room on the left goes in. Clare re-enters with a small leather box. She puts it down on her typing table as Malise returns followed by Mrs. Miler, wearing her hat, and carrying his overcoat.

RS. MILER. Put your coat on. It's a r wind.

He puts on the coat.

.ARE. Where are you going?

ALISE. To The Watchfire.

The door closes behind him, and Mrs. Miler goes up to Clare holding out a little blue bottle with a red label, nearly full.

RS. MILER. You know he's takin' [She makes a little motion towards mouth] to make 'im sleep?

ARE. [Reading the label] Where it?

RS. MILER. In the bathroom chest o' ers, where 'e keeps 'is odds and I was lookin' for 'is garters.

ARE. Give it to me!

RS. MILER. He took it once before. nust get his sleep.

ARE. Give it to me!

Mrs. Miler resigns it, Clare takes the cork out, smells, then tastes it from her finger. Mrs. Miler, twisting her apron in her hands, speaks.

RS. MILER. I've 'ad it on my mind a time to speak to yer. Your comin' not done 'im a bit o' good.

ARE. Don't!

RS. MILER. I don't want to, but with the worry o' this 'ere divorce an' you bein' a lady an' 'im havin' so careful of yer, and tryin' to not smokin' all day like 'e used, ot gettin' 'is two bottles of claret ar; an' losin' his sleep, an' takin' stuff for it; and now this 'ere last ess. I've seen 'im sometimes holdin' id as if it was comin' off. [Seeing

Clare wince, she goes on with a sort of compassion in her Chinese face] I can see yer fond of him; an' I've nothin' against yer—you don't trouble me a bit; but I've been with 'im eight years—we're used to each other, and I can't bear to see 'im not 'imself, really I can't.

She gives a sudden sniff. Then her emotion passes, leaving her as Chinese as ever.

Clare. This last business—what do you mean by that?

Mrs. Miler. If 'e a'nt told yer, I don't know that I've any call to.

Clare. Please.

Mrs. Miler. [Her hands twisting very fast] Well, it's to do with this 'ere Watchfire. One of the men that sees to the writin' of it—'e's a old friend of Mr. Malise, 'e come 'ere this mornin' when you was out. I was doin' my work in there [She points to the room on the right] an' the door open, so I 'eard 'em. Now you've 'ung them curtains, you can't 'elp it.

Clare. Yes?

Mrs. Miler. It's about your divorce case. This 'ere Watchfire, ye see, belongs to some fellers that won't 'ave their men gettin' into the papers. So this 'ere friend of Mr. Malise—very nice 'e spoke about it—"If it comes into Court," 'e says, "you'll 'ave to go," 'e says. "These beggars, these dogs, these logs," 'e says, "they'll 'oof you out," 'e says. An' I could tell by the sound of his voice, 'e meant it—proper upset 'e was. So that's that!

Clare. It's inhuman!

Mrs. Miler. That's what I thinks; but it don't 'elp, do it? "'Tain't the circulation," 'e says, "it's the principle," 'e says; and then 'e starts in swearin' horrible. 'E's a very nice man. And Mr. Malise, 'e says: "Well, that about does for me!" 'e says.

Clare. Thank you, Mrs. Miler—I'm glad to know.

Mrs. Miler. Yes; I don't know as I ought to 'ave told you. [Desperately uncomfortable] You see, I don't take notice of Mr. Malise, but I know 'im very well. 'E's a good-'earted gentleman, very funny, that'll do things to help others, and what's more, keep on doin' em, when they hurt 'im; very obstinate 'e is. Now, when you first come 'ere three months ago, I says to meself: "He'll enjoy this 'ere for a bit, but she's too much of a lady for 'im." What 'e wants about 'im permanent is a woman that thinks an' talks about all them things he talks about. And sometimes I fancy 'e don't want nothin' permanent about 'im at all.

CLARE. Don't!

MRS. MILER. [With another sudden sniff] Gawd knows I don't want to upset ye. You're situated very 'ard; an' women's got no business to 'urt one another—that's what I thinks.

CLARE. Will you go out and do something for me?

MRS. MILER nods. CLARE takes up the sheaf of papers and from the leather box a note and an emerald pendant.

CLARE. Take this with the note to that address—it's quite close. He'll give you thirty pounds for it. Please pay these bills and bring me back the receipts, and what's over.

MRS. MILER. [Taking the pendant and note] It's a pretty thing.

CLARE. Yes. It was my mother's.

MRS. MILER. It's a pity to part with it; ain't you got another?

CLARE. Nothing more, Mrs. Miler, not even a wedding ring.

MRS. MILER. [Without expression] You make my 'eart ache sometimes.

She wraps pendant and note into her handkerchief and goes out to the door.

MRS. MILER. [From the door] There's a lady and gentleman out here. Mrs. Fuller—wants you, not Mr. Malise.

CLARE. Mrs. Fullarton?

MRS. MILER nods.

CLARE. Ask them to come in.

MRS. MILER opens the door wide, says "Come in," and goes. MRS. FULLARTON is accompanied not by FULLARTON, but by the lawyer, TWISDEN. They come in.

MRS. FULLARTON. Clare! My dear! How are you after all this time?

CLARE. [Her eyes fixed on TWISDEN] Yes?

MRS. FULLARTON. [Disconcerted by the strange greeting] I brought Mr. Twisden to tell you something. May I stay?

CLARE. Yes. [She points to the chair at the same table: MRS. FULLARTON sits down] Now!

TWISDEN comes forward

TWISDEN. As you're not defending the case, Mrs. Dedmond, there is nobody but yourself for me to apply to.

CLARE. Please tell me quickly, what you've come for.

TWISDEN. [Bowing slightly] I am instructed by Mr. Dedmond to say that if you will leave your present companion and undertake not to see him again, he will withdraw the suit and settle three hundred a year on you. [At CLARE'S movement of abhorrence] Don't misunderstand me, please—it is not— it could hardly be, a request that you should go back. Mr. Dedmond is not prepared to receive you again. The proposal—for I give my saying so—remarkably Quixotic —is made to save the scandal to his family and your own. It binds you to nothing but the abandonment of your present companion, with certain conditions as to the same nature as to the future. In other words, it assures you a position so long as you live quietly by yourself.

CLARE. I see. Will you please thank Mr. Dedmond, and say that I refuse.

MRS. FULLARTON. Clare, Clare! For God's sake don't be desperate.

CLARE, deathly still, just looks at her.

TWISDEN. Mrs. Dedmond, I am bound to put the position to you in its naked brutality. You know there's a claim for damages?

CLARE. I have just learnt it.

TWISDEN. You realise what the result of this suit must be: You will be left dependent on an undischarged bankrupt. To put it another way, you'll be a stone round the neck of a drowning man.

CLARE. You are cowards.

MRS. FULLARTON. Clare, Clare! [To TWISDEN] She doesn't mean it; please be patient.

CLARE. I do mean it. You ruin him because of me. You get him down, and kick him to intimidate me.

MRS. FULLARTON. My dear girl!

isden is not personally concerned.
w can you?
LARE. If I were dying, and it would e me, I wouldn't take a penny from husband.
WISDEN. Nothing could be more bit-than those words. Do you really 1 me to take them back to him?
LARE. Yes.
[She turns from them to the fire.
RS. FULLARTON. [In a low voice to 'SDEN] Please leave me alone with don't say anything to Mr. Ded-d yet.
WISDEN. Mrs. Dedmond, I told you that I wished you well. Though have called me a coward, I still do For God's sake, think—before it's ate.
.ARE. [Putting out her hand blindly] sorry I called you a coward. It's the e thing, I meant.
WISDEN. Never mind that. Think!
With the curious little movement of one who sees something he does not like to see, he goes. CLARE is leaning her forehead against the mantelshelf, seemingly unconscious that she is not alone. MRS. FULLARTON approaches quietly till she can see CLARE'S face.
RS. FULLARTON. My dear sweet
, don't be cross with me!
CLARE turns from her. It is all the time as if she were trying to get away from words and people to something going on within herself.
S. FULLARTON. How can I help ng to see you saved from all this liness?
ARE. Please don't, Dolly! Let me

S. FULLARTON. I must speak,
! I do think you're hard on
e. It's generous of him to offer thdraw the suit—considering. You ve it to us to try and spare your and your sisters and—and all of o care for you.
ARE. [Facing her] You say George nerous! If he wanted to be that never have claimed those damages.
evenge he wants—I heard him here. You think I've done him an injury. So I did—when I married him. I don't know what I shall come to, Dolly, but I shan't fall so low as to take money from him. That's as certain as that I shall die.

MRS. FULLARTON. Do you know, Clare, I think it's awful about you! You're too fine, and not fine enough, to put up with things; you're too sensitive to take help, and you're not strong enough to do without it. It's simply tragic. At any rate, you might go home to your people.

CLARE. After this!

MRS. FULLARTON. To us, then?

CLARE. "If I could be the falling bee, and kiss thee all the day!" No, Dolly!

MRS. FULLARTON turns from her ashamed and baffled, but her quick eyes take in the room, trying to seize on some new point of attack.

MRS. FULLARTON. You can't be—you aren't—happy, here?

CLARE. Aren't I?

MRS. FULLARTON. Oh! Clare! Save yourself—and all of us!

CLARE. [Very still] You see, I love him.

MRS. FULLARTON. You used to say you'd never love; did not want it—would never want it.

CLARE. Did I? How funny!

MRS. FULLARTON. Oh! my dear! Don't look like that, or you'll make me cry.

CLARE. One doesn't always know the future, does one? [Desperately] I love him! I love him!

MRS. FULLARTON. [Suddenly] If you love him, what will it be like for you, knowing you've ruined him?

CLARE. Go away! Go away!

MRS. FULLARTON. Love!—you said!

CLARE. [Quivering at that stab—suddenly] I must—I will keep him. He's all I've got.

MRS. FULLARTON. Can you—can you keep him?

CLARE. Go!

MRS. FULLARTON. I'm going. But, men are hard to keep, even when you've not been the ruin of them. You know whether the love this man gives you is really love. If not—God help you! [She turns at the door, and says mournfully] Good-bye, my child! If you can——

Then goes. CLARE, almost in a whisper, repeats the words: "Love! you said!" At the sound of a latch-key she runs as if to escape into the bedroom, but changes her mind and stands blotted against the curtain of the door. MALISE enters. For a moment he does not see her standing there against the curtain that is much the same colour as her dress. His face is that of a man in the grip of a rage that he feels to be impotent. Then, seeing her, he pulls himself together, walks to his armchair, and sits down there in his hat and coat.

CLARE. Well? The Watchfire? You may as well tell me.

MALISE. Nothing to tell you, child.

At that touch of tenderness she goes up to his chair and kneels down beside it. Mechanically MALISE takes off his hat.

CLARE. Then you are to lose that, too?

MALISE stares at her.

CLARE. I know about it—never mind how.

MALISE. Sanctimonious dogs!

CLARE. [Very low] There are other things to be got, aren't there?

MALISE. Thick as blackberries. I just go out and cry, "Malise, unsuccessful author, too honest journalist, free-thinker, co-respondent, bankrupt," and they tumble!

CLARE. [Quietly] Kenneth, do you care for me?

MALISE stares at her.

CLARE. Am I anything to you but just prettiness?

MALISE. Now, now! This isn't the time to brood! Rouse up and fight.

CLARE. Yes.

MALISE. We're not going to let them down us, are we?

She rubs her cheek against his hand, that still rests on her shoulder.

MALISE. Life on sufferance, breath at the pleasure of the enemy! And some day in the fullness of his mercy to be made a present of the right to eat an drink and breathe again. [His gestu sums up the rage within him.] Fin [He puts his hat on and rises.] That the last groan they get from me.

CLARE. Are you going out again? [H nods.] Where?

MALISE. Blackberrying! Our train not till six.

ACT IV

SUPPER-TIME in a small room at "The Gascony" on Derby Day. Through the windows of a broad corridor, out of which the door opens, is seen the dark blue of a summer night. The walls are of apricot-gold; the carpets, curtains, lamp-shades, and gilded chairs, of red; the woodwork and screens white; the palms in gilded tubs. A doorway that has no door leads to another small room. One little table behind a screen, and one little table in the open, are set for two persons each. On a service table, above which hangs a speaking-tube, are some dishes of hors d'œuvres, a basket of peaches, two bottles of champagne in ice-pails, and a small barrel of oysters in a gilded tub. ARNAUD, the waiter, slim, dark, quick, his face seamed with a quiet, soft irony, is opening oysters and listening to the robust joy of a distant supper party, where a man is playing the last bars of: "Do ye ken John Peel" on a horn. As the sound dies away, he murmurs: "Très joli!" and opens another oyster. Two Ladies with bare shoulders and large hats pass down the corridor. Their talk is faintly wafted in: "Well, I never like Derby night! The boys do get so bobbish!" "That horn—vulgar, I call it!" ARNAUD'S eyebrows rise, the corners of his mouth droop. A Lady with bare shoulders, and crimson roses in her hair, comes along the corridor, and stops for a second at the window, for a man to join her. They come through into the room. ARNAUD has sprung to attention, but with: "Let's go in here, shall we?" they pass through into the further room. The MANAGER, a gentleman with neat moustaches, and buttoned into a frock-coat, has appeared, brisk, noiseless, his eyes everywhere; he inspects the peaches.

MANAGER. Four shillin' apiece tonight, see?

ARNAUD. Yes, Sare.

From the inner room a young man and his partner have come in. She is dark, almost Spanish-looking; he fair, languid, pale, clean-shaved, slackly smiling, with half-closed eyes—one of those who are bred and dissipated to the point of having lost all save the capacity for hiding their emotions. He speaks in a:

LANGUID VOICE. Awful row they're kickin' up in there, Mr. Varley. A fellow with a horn.

MANAGER. [Blandly] Gaddesdon Hunt, my lord—always have their supper with us, Derby night. Quiet corner here, my lord. Arnaud!

ARNAUD is already at the table, between screen and palm. And, there ensconced, the couple take their seats. Seeing them safely landed, the MANAGER, brisk and noiseless, moves away. In the corridor a lady in black, with a cloak falling open, seems uncertain whether to come in. She advances into the doorway. It is CLARE.

ARNAUD. [Pointing to the other table as he flies with dishes] Nice table, Madame.

CLARE moves to the corner of it. An artist in observation of his clients, ARNAUD takes in her face—very pale under her wavy, simply-dressed hair; shadowy beneath the eyes; not powdered; her lips not reddened; without a single ornament; takes in her black dress, finely cut, her arms and neck beautifully white, and at her breast three gardenias. And as he nears her, she lifts her eyes. It is very much the look of something lost, appealing for guidance.

ARNAUD. Madame is waiting for someone?

She shakes her head.

ARNAUD. Then Madame will be veree well here—veree well. I take Madame's cloak?

He takes the cloak gently and lays it on the back of the chair fronting the room, that she may put it round her when she wishes. She sits down.

LANGUID VOICE. [From the corner] Waiter!

ARNAUD. Milord!

LANGUID VOICE. The Roederer.

ARNAUD. At once, milord.

CLARE sits tracing a pattern with her finger on the cloth, her eyes lowered. Once she raises them and follows ARNAUD'S dark rapid figure.

ARNAUD. [Returning] Madame feels the 'eat? [He scans her with increased curiosity] You wish something, Madame?

CLARE. [Again giving him that look] Must I order?

ARNAUD. Non, Madame, it is not necessary. A glass of water. [He pours it out] I have not the pleasure of knowing Madame's face.

CLARE. [Faintly smiling] No.

ARNAUD. Madame will find it veree good 'ere, veree quiet.

LANGUID VOICE. Waiter!

ARNAUD. Pardon! [He goes] The bare-necked ladies with large hats again pass down the corridor outside, and again the voices are wafted in: "Totti! Not she! Oh! my goodness, she has got a pride on her!" "Bobbie'll never stick it!" "Look here, dear——" Galvanised by the sounds, CLARE has caught up cloak and half-risen; they sink away and she subsides.

ARNAUD. [Back at her table, with quaint shrug towards the corridor] It is not rowdy here, Madame, as a rule—not as in some places. To-night a little noise. Madame is fond of flowers. [He whisks out, and returns almost at once with a bowl of carnations from some table in the next room] There, smell good!

CLARE. You are very kind.

ARNAUD. [With courtesy] Not at all, Madame; a pleasure. [He bows] A young man, tall, thin, lank, straight, with close-cropped, sandyish hair and moustache, a face tanned very red, and one of those small, long, lean heads that grow in Britain; clad in a thin overcoat thrown open, an opera hat pushed back, a white waistcoat round his lean middle, he comes in from the corridor. He looks round, glances at CLARE, passes her table towards the further room, stops in the doorway, and looks back at her. Her eyes have just been lifted, and are at once cast down again. The young man wavers, catches ARNAUD'S eye, jerks his head to summon him, and passes into the further room. ARNAUD takes up the vase that has been superseded, and follows him out. And CLARE sits alone in silence, broken by the murmurs of the languid lord and his partner, behind the screen. She is breathing as if she had been running hard. She lifts her eyes. The tall young man, divested of hat and coat, is standing by her table, holding out his hand with a sort of bashful hardiness.

UNG MAN. How d'you do? Didn't mise you at first. So sorry—awfully of me.

LARE'S eyes seem to fly from him, to appeal to him, to resign herself all at once. Something in the YOUNG MAN responds. He drops his hand.

ARE. [Faintly] How d'you do?

UNG MAN. [Stammering] You—een down there to-day?

ARE. Where?

JNG MAN. [With a smile] The . What? Don't you generally go ? [He touches the other chair] I?

RE. [Almost in a whisper] Yes.

's he sits down, ARNAUD returns and stands before them.

NAUD. The plovers' eggs veree to-night, Sare. Veree good, Ma- A peach or two, after. Veree good es. The Roederer, Sare—not bad Madame likes it frappé, but not ld—yes?

He is away again to his service-table.

NG MAN. [Burying his face in rnations] I say—these are jolly, aren't they? They do you pretty well here.

CLARE. Do they?

YOUNG MAN. You've never been here?

CLARE shakes her head.

YOUNG MAN. By Jove! I thought I didn't know your face.

CLARE looks full at him. Again something moves in the YOUNG MAN, and he stammers.

YOUNG MAN. I mean—not——

CLARE. It doesn't matter.

YOUNG MAN. [Respectfully] Of course, if I—if you were waiting for anybody, or anything—I——

[He half rises.

CLARE. It's all right, thank you.

The YOUNG MAN sits down again, uncomfortable, nonplussed. There is silence, broken by the inaudible words of the languid lord, and the distant merriment of the supper party. ARNAUD brings the plovers' eggs.

YOUNG MAN. The wine, quick.

ARNAUD. At once, Sare.

YOUNG MAN. [Abruptly] Don't you ever go racing, then?

CLARE. No.

ARNAUD pours out champagne.

YOUNG MAN. I remember awfully well my first day. It was pretty thick—lost every blessed bob, and my watch and chain, playin' three cards on the way home.

CLARE. Everything has a beginning, hasn't it?

[She drinks. The YOUNG MAN stares at her.

YOUNG MAN. [Floundering in these waters deeper than he had bargained for] I say—about things having beginnings—did you mean anything?

CLARE nods.

YOUNG MAN. What! D'you mean it's really the first——?

CLARE nods. The champagne has flicked her courage.

YOUNG MAN. By George! [He leans back] I've often wondered.

ARNAUD. [Again filling the glasses] Monsieur finds——

YOUNG MAN. [Abruptly] It's all right

He drains his glass, then sits bolt upright. Chivalry and the camaraderie of class have begun to stir in him.

YOUNG MAN. Of course I can see that you're not—I mean, that you're a —a lady.

CLARE smiles.

YOUNG MAN. And I say, you know—if you have to—because you're in a hole —I should feel a cad. Let me lend you——?

CLARE. [Holding up her glass] Le vin est tiré, il faut le boire!

She drinks. The French words, which he does not too well understand, completing his conviction that she is a lady, he remains quite silent, frowning. As CLARE held up her glass, two gentlemen have entered. The first is blond, of good height and a comely insolence. His crisp, fair hair, and fair brushed-up moustache are just going grey; an eyeglass is fixed in one of two eyes that lord it over every woman they see; his face is broad, and coloured with air and wine. His companion is a tall, thin, dark bird of the night, with sly, roving eyes, and hollow cheeks. They stand looking round, then pass into the further room; but in passing, they have stared unreservedly at CLARE.

YOUNG MAN. [Seeing her wince] Look here! I'm afraid you must feel me rather a brute, you know.

CLARE. No, I don't; really.

YOUNG MAN. Are you absolute stoney?

CLARE nods.

YOUNG MAN. But [Looking at her frock and cloak] you're so awfully well——

CLARE. I had the sense to keep them.

YOUNG MAN. [More and more disturbed] I say, you know—I wish you'd let me lend you something. I had quite a good day down there.

CLARE. [Again tracing her pattern on the cloth—then looking up at him full] I can't take, for nothing.

YOUNG MAN. By Jove! I don't know —really, I don't—this makes me feel pretty rotten. I mean, it's your being lady.

CLARE. [Smiling] That's not you fault, is it? You see, I've been beate all along the line. And I really don care what happens to me. [She has th peculiar fey look on her face now] really don't; except that I don't tak charity. It's lucky for me it's you, an not some——

The supper party is getting sli more boisterous, and there come a long view holloa, and a blas of the horn.

YOUNG MAN. But I say, what abo your people? You must have peop of some sort.

He is fast becoming fascinated, fo her cheeks have begun to flus and her eyes to shine.

CLARE. Oh, yes; I've had people, and husband, and—everything—— And he I am! Queer, isn't it? [She touches h glass] This is going to my head! D you mind? I shan't sing songs and g up and dance, and I won't cry, I pro ise you!

YOUNG MAN. [Between fascinat and chivalry] By George! One simp can't believe in this happening to lady——

CLARE. Have you got sisters? [Brea ing into her soft laughter] My brothe in India. I shan't meet him, anyway.

YOUNG MAN. No, but—I say—are y really quite cut off from everybody?

CLARE nods.

YOUNG MAN. Something rather a ful must have happened?

She smiles. The two gentlem have returned. The blond one again staring fixedly at CLA This time she looks back at h flaming; and, with a little lau he passes with his friend into corridor.

CLARE. Who are those two?

YOUNG MAN. Don't know—not b much about town yet. I'm just b from India myself. You said y brother was there; what's his n ment?

CLARE. [Shaking her head] You're going to find out my name. I hav got one—nothing.

[She leans her bare elbows on the table, and her face on her hands.

CLARE. First of June! This day last ar I broke covert—I've been running er since.

YOUNG MAN. I don't understand a . You—must have had a—a—some e——

But there is such a change in her face, such rigidity of her whole body, that he stops and averts his eyes. When he looks again she is drinking. She puts the glass down, and gives a little laugh.

YOUNG MAN. [With a sort of awe] yway it must have been like riding a pretty stiff fence, for you to come e to-night.

CLARE. Yes. What's the other side?

The YOUNG MAN puts out his hand and touches her arm. It is meant for sympathy, but she takes it for attraction.

CLARE. [Shaking her head] Not yet—ıse! I'm enjoying this. May I have a ırette?

He takes out his case, and gives her one.

CLARE. [Letting the smoke slowly h] Yes, I'm enjoying it. Had a ty poor time lately; not enough to sometimes.

OUNG MAN. Not really! How damn-! I say—do have something more stantial.

CLARE gives a sudden gasp, as if going off into hysterical laughter, but she stifles it, and shakes her head.

OUNG MAN. A peach?

ARNAUD brings peaches to the table.

CLARE. [Smiling] Thank you.

He fills their glasses and retreats.

CLARE. [Raising her glass] Eat and k, for to-morrow we—— Listen!

From the supper party comes the sound of an abortive chorus:

"With a hey ho, chivy, hark forrard, hark forrard, tantivy!"

Jarring out into a discordant whoop, it sinks.

CLARE. "This day a stag must die." y old song!

OUNG MAN. Rowdy lot! [Suddenly] y—I admire your pluck.

CLARE. [Shaking her head] Haven't kept my end up. Lots of women do! You see: I'm too fine, and not fine enough! My best friend said that. Too fine, and not fine enough. [She laughs] I couldn't be a saint and a martyr, and I wouldn't be a soulless doll. Neither one thing nor the other—that's the tragedy.

YOUNG MAN. You must have had awful luck!

CLARE. I did try. [Fiercely] But what's the good—when there's nothing before you?—I've been ill. Do I look ill?

YOUNG MAN. No; simply awfully pretty.

CLARE. [With a laugh] A man once said to me: "As you haven't money, you should never have been pretty!" But, you see, it is some good. If I hadn't been, I couldn't have risked coming here, could I? Don't you think it was rather sporting of me to buy these [She touches the gardenias] with the last shilling over from my cab fare?

YOUNG MAN. Did you really— D—d sporting!

CLARE. It's no use doing things by halves, is it? I'm—in for it—wish me luck! [She drinks, and puts her glass down with a smile] In for it—deep! [She flings up her hands above her smiling face] Down, down, till they're just above water, and then—down, down, down, and—all over! Are you sorry now you came and spoke to me?

YOUNG MAN. By Jove, no! it may be caddish, but I'm not.

CLARE. Thank God for beauty! I hope I shall die pretty! Do you think I shall do well?

YOUNG MAN. I say—don't talk like that!

CLARE. I want to know. Do you?

YOUNG MAN. Well, then—yes, I do.

CLARE. That's splendid. Those poor women in the streets would give their eyes, wouldn't they?—that have to go up and down, up and down! Do you think I—shall——

The YOUNG MAN, half-rising, puts his hand on her arm.

YOUNG MAN. I think you're getting much too excited. You look all—— Won't you eat your peach? [She shakes her head] Do! Have something else, then—some grapes, or something?

CLARE. No, thanks.

[She has become quite calm again.

YOUNG MAN. Well, then, what d'you think? It's awfully hot in here, isn't it? Wouldn't it be jollier drivin'? Shall we —shall we make a move?

CLARE. Yes.

The YOUNG MAN turns to look for the waiter, but ARNAUD is not in the room. He gets up.

YOUNG MAN. [Feverishly] D—n that waiter! Wait half a minute, if you don't mind, while I pay the bill.

As he goes out into the corridor, the two gentlemen re-appear. CLARE is sitting motionless, looking straight before her.

DARK ONE. A fiver you don't get her to!

BLOND ONE. Done!

He advances to her table with his inimitable insolence, and taking the cigar from his mouth, bends his stare on her, and says: "Charmed to see you lookin' so well! Will you have supper with me here to-morrow night?" Startled out of her reverie, CLARE looks up. She sees those eyes, she sees beyond him the eyes of his companion — sly, malevolent, amused—watching; and she just sits gazing, without a word. At that regard, so clear, the Blond One does not wince. But rather suddenly he says: "That's arranged then. Half-past eleven. So good of you. Good night!" He replaces his cigar, and strolls back to his companion, and in a low voice says: "Pay up!" Then at a languid "Hullo, Charles!" they turn to greet the two in their nook behind the screen. CLARE has not moved, nor changed the direction of her gaze. Suddenly she thrusts her hand into the pocket of the cloak that hangs behind her, and brings out the little blue bottle which, six months ago, she took from MALISE. She pulls out the cork and pours the whole contents into her champagne. She lifts the glass, holds it before her—smiling, as if to call a toast, then puts it to her lips and drinks. Still smiling, she sets the empty glass down, and lays the gardenia flowers against her face. Slowly she droops back in her chair, the drowsy smile still on her lips; the gardenias drop into her lap; her arms relax, her head falls forward on her breast. And the voices behind the screen talk on, and the sounds of joy from the supper party wax and wane.

The waiter, ARNAUD, returning from the corridor, passes to his service-table with a tall, be-ribboned basket of fruit. Putting it down, he goes towards the table behind the screen, and sees. He runs up to CLARE.

ARNAUD. Madame! Madame! [He listens for her breathing; then suddenly catching sight of the little bottle, smells at it] Bon Dieu!

At that queer sound they come from behind the screen—all four, and look. The dark night-bird says: "Hallo; fainted!" ARNAUD holds out the bottle.

LANGUID LORD. [Taking it, and smelling] Good God!

The woman bends over CLARE, and lifts her hands; ARNAUD rushes to his service-table, and speaks into his tube:

ARNAUD. The boss. Quick! [Looking up he sees the YOUNG MAN, returning] Monsieur, elle a fui! Elle est morte!

LANGUID LORD. [To the YOUNG MAN standing there aghast] What's this? Friend of yours?

YOUNG MAN. My God! She was a lady. That's all I know about her.

LANGUID LORD. A lady!

The blond and dark gentlemen have slipped from the room; and out of the supper party's distant laughter comes suddenly a long shrill: "Gone away!" And the sound of the horn playing the seven last notes of the old song

"This day a stag must die!"
From the last note of all the sound flies up to an octave higher, sweet and thin, like a spirit passing, till it is drowned once more in laughter. The YOUNG MAN has covered his eyes with his hands; ARNAUD is crossing himself fervently; the LANGUID LORD stands gazing, with one of the dropped gardenias twisted in his fingers; and the woman, bending over CLARE, kisses her forehead.

THE MOB

A DRAMA IN FOUR ACTS

ACT I

is half-past nine of a July evening. In a dining-room lighted by sconces, and apparelled in wall-paper, carpet, and curtains of deep vivid blue, the large French windows between two columns are open on to a wide terrace, beyond which are seen trees in darkness, and distant shapes of lighted houses. On one side is a bay window, over which curtains are partly drawn. Opposite to this window is a door leading into the hall. At an oval rosewood table, set with silver, flowers, fruit, and wine, six people are seated after dinner. Back to the bay window is STEPHEN MORE, the host, a man of forty, with a fine-cut face, a rather charming smile, and the eyes of an idealist; to his right, SIR JOHN JULIAN, an old soldier, with thin brown features, and grey moustaches; to SIR JOHN'S right, his brother, the DEAN of STOUR, a tall, dark, ascetic-looking Churchman; to his right KATHERINE is leaning forward, her elbows on the table, and her chin on her hands, staring across at her husband; to her right sits EDWARD MENDIP, a pale man of forty-five, very bald, with a fine forehead, and on his clear-cut lips a smile that shows his teeth; between him and MORE is HELEN JULIAN, a pretty dark-haired young woman, absorbed in thoughts of her own. The voices are tuned to the pitch of heated discussion, as the curtain rises.

HE DEAN. I disagree with you, hen; absolutely, entirely disagree.
ORE. I can't help it.

MENDIP. Remember a certain war, Stephen! Were your chivalrous notions any good, then? And, what was winked at in an obscure young Member is anathema for an Under Secretary of State. You can't afford——

MORE. To follow my conscience? That's new, Mendip.

MENDIP. Idealism can be out of place, my friend.

THE DEAN. The Government is dealing here with a wild lawless race, on whom I must say I think sentiment is rather wasted.

MORE. God made them, Dean.

MENDIP. I have my doubts.

THE DEAN. They have proved themselves faithless. We have the right to chastise.

MORE. If I hit a little man in the eye, and he hits me back, have I the right to chastise him?

SIR JOHN. We didn't begin this business.

MORE. What! With our missionaries and our trading?

THE DEAN. It is news indeed that the work of civilisation may be justifiably met by murder. Have you forgotten Glaive and Morlinson?

SIR JOHN. Yes. And that poor fellow Groome and his wife?

MORE. They went into a wild country, against the feeling of the tribes, on their own business. What has the nation to do with the mishaps of gamblers?

SIR JOHN. We can't stand by and see our own flesh and blood ill-treated!

THE DEAN. Does our rule bring blessing—or does it not, Stephen?

MORE. Sometimes; but with all my soul I deny the fantastic superstition that our rule can benefit a people like this, a nation of one race, as different from ourselves as dark from light—in colour, religion, every mortal thing. We can only pervert their natural instincts.

THE DEAN. That to me is an unintelligible point of view.

MENDIP. Go into that philosophy of yours a little deeper, Stephen—it spells stagnation. There are no fixed stars on this earth. Nations can't let each other alone.

MORE. Big ones could let little ones alone.

MENDIP. If they could there'd be no big ones. My dear fellow, we know little nations are your hobby, but surely office should have toned you down.

SIR JOHN. I've served my country fifty years, and I say she is not in the wrong.

MORE. I hope to serve her fifty, Sir John, and I say she is.

MENDIP. There are moments when such things can't be said, More.

MORE. They'll be said by me to-night, Mendip.

MENDIP. In the House?

MORE nods.

KATHERINE. Stephen!

MENDIP. Mrs. More, you mustn't let him. It's madness.

MORE. [Rising] You can tell people that to-morrow, Mendip. Give it a leader in The Parthenon.

MENDIP. Political lunacy! No man in your position has a right to fly out like this at the eleventh hour.

MORE. I've made no secret of my feelings all along. I'm against this war, and against the annexation we all know it will lead to.

MENDIP. My dear fellow! Don't be so Quixotic! We shall have war within the next twenty-four hours, and nothing you can do will stop it.

HELEN. Oh! No!

MENDIP. I'm afraid so, Mrs. Hubert.

SIR JOHN. Not a doubt of it, Helen.

MENDIP. [To MORE] And you mean to charge the windmill?

MORE nods.

MENDIP. C'est magnifique!

MORE. I'm not out for advertisement.

MENDIP. You will get it!

MORE. Must speak the truth sometimes, even at that risk.

SIR JOHN. It is not the truth.

MENDIP. The greater the truth the greater the libel, and the greater the resentment of the person libelled.

THE DEAN. [Trying to bring matters to a blander level] My dear Stephen, even if you were right—which I deny—about the initial merits, there surely comes a point where the individual conscience must resign itself to the country's feeling. This has become a question of national honour.

SIR JOHN. Well said, James!

MORE. Nations are bad judges of their honour, Dean.

THE DEAN. I shall not follow you there.

MORE. No. It's an awkward word.

KATHERINE. [Stopping THE DEAN] Uncle James! Please!

MORE looks at her intently.

SIR JOHN. So you're going to put yourself at the head of the cranks, ruin your career, and make me ashamed that you're my son-in-law?

MORE. Is a man only to hold beliefs when they're popular? You've stood up to be shot at often enough, Sir John.

SIR JOHN. Never by my country. Your speech will be in all the foreign press—trust 'em for seizing on anything against us. A show-up before other countries——!

MORE. You admit the show-up?

SIR JOHN. I do not, sir.

THE DEAN. The position has become impossible. The state of things out there must be put an end to once for all. Come, Katherine, back us up!

MORE. My country, right or wrong. Guilty—still my country!

MENDIP. That begs the question.

KATHERINE rises. THE DEAN, too, stands up.

THE DEAN. [In a low voice] Quia Deus vult perdere——!

SIR JOHN. Unpatriotic!

MORE. I'll have no truck with tyranny.

KATHERINE. Father doesn't admire tyranny. Nor do any of us, Stephen.

HUBERT JULIAN, a tall soldier-like man, has come in.

HELEN. Hubert!

She gets up and goes to him, and they talk together near the door.

SIR JOHN. What in God's name

our idea? We've forborne long enough, n all conscience.

More. Sir John, we great Powers ave got to change our ways in dealing ith weaker nations. The very dogs an give us lessons—watch a big dog ith a little one.

Mendip. No, no, these things are not simple as all that.

More. There's no reason in the world, Mendip, why the rules of chivalry ould not apply to nations at least as ell as to—dogs.

Mendip. My dear friend, are you to come that hapless kind of outcast, a ampion of lost causes?

More. This cause is not lost.

Mendip. Right or wrong, as lost as er was cause in all this world. There as never a time when the word "pa- otism" stirred mob sentiment as it es now. 'Ware "Mob," Stephen—are "Mob"!

More. Because general sentiment's ainst me, I—a public man—am to ny my faith? The point is not whether n right or wrong, Mendip, but wheth- I'm to sneak out of my conviction cause it's unpopular.

The Dean. I'm afraid I must go. [To atherine] Good night, my dear! Ah! ubert! [He greets Hubert] Mr. Men- , I go your way. Can I drop you?

Mendip. Thank you. Good night, Mrs. re. Stop him! It's perdition.

He and The Dean go out. Kath- erine puts her arm in Helen's, and takes her out of the room. Hubert remains standing by the door.

Sir John. I knew your views were treme in many ways, Stephen, but I ver thought the husband of my daugh- would be a Peace-at-any-price man!

More. I am not! But I prefer to fight meone my own size.

Sir John. Well! I can only hope to d you'll come to your senses before commit the folly of this speech. I st get back to the War Office. Good ht, Hubert.

Hubert. Good night, Father.

Sir John goes out. Hubert stands motionless, dejected.

Hubert. We've got our orders.

More. What? When d'you sail?

Hubert. At once.

More. Poor Helen!

Hubert. Not married a year; pretty bad luck!

More touches his arm in sympathy.

Hubert. Well! We've got to put feelings in our pockets. Look here, Stephen—don't make that speech! Think of Katherine—with the Dad at the War Office, and me going out, and Ralph and old George out there already! You can't trust your tongue when you're hot about a thing.

More. I must speak, Hubert.

Hubert. No, no! Bottle yourself up for to-night. The next few hours 'll see it begin.

More turns from him.

Hubert. If you don't care whether you mess up your own career—don't tear Katherine in two!

More. You're not shirking your duty because of your wife.

Hubert. Well! You're riding for a fall, and a godless mucker it'll be. This'll be no picnic. We shall get some nasty knocks out there. Wait and see the feeling here when we've had a force or two cut up in those mountains. It's awful country. Those fellows have got modern arms, and are jolly good fighters. Do drop it, Stephen!

More. Must risk something, sometimes, Hubert—even in my profession!

As he speaks, Katherine comes in.

Hubert. But it's hopeless, my dear chap—absolutely.

More turns to the window, Hubert to his sister—then with a gesture towards More, as though to leave the matter to her, he goes out.

Katherine. Stephen! Are you really going to speak?

He nods.

Katherine. I ask you not.

More. You know my feeling.

Katherine. But it's our own country. We can't stand apart from it. You won't stop anything—only make people hate you. I can't bear that.

More. I tell you, Kit, someone must raise a voice. Two or three reverses—certain to come—and the whole country will go wild. And one more little nation will cease to live.

KATHERINE. If you believe in your country, you must believe that the more land and power she has, the better for the world.

MORE. Is that your faith?

KATHERINE. Yes.

MORE. I respect it; I even understand it; but—I can't hold it.

KATHERINE. But Stephen, your speech will be a rallying cry to all the cranks, and everyone who has a spite against the country. They'll make you their figurehead.

MORE smiles.

KATHERINE. They will. Your chance of the Cabinet will go—you may even have to resign your seat.

MORE. Dogs will bark. These things soon blow over.

KATHERINE. No, not if you once begin a thing, you always go on; and what earthly good?

MORE. History won't say: "And this they did without a single protest from their public men!"

KATHERINE. There are plenty who—

MORE. Poets?

KATHERINE. Do you remember that day on our honeymoon, going up Ben Lawers? You were lying on your face in the heather; you said it was like kissing a loved woman. There was a lark singing—you said that was the voice of one's worship. The hills were very blue; that's why we had blue here, because it was the best dress of our country. You do love her.

MORE. Love her!

KATHERINE. You'd have done this for me—then.

MORE. Would you have asked me—then, Kit?

KATHERINE. Yes. The country's our country! Oh! Stephen, think what it'll be like for me—with Hubert and the other boys out there. And poor Helen, and Father! I beg you not to make this speech.

MORE. Kit! This isn't fair. Do you want me to feel myself a cur?

KATHERINE. [Breathless] I—I—almost feel you'll be a cur to do it. [She looks at him, frightened by her own words. Then, as the footman HENRY ha come in to clear the table—very low] I ask you not!

He does not answer, and she goes out.

MORE. [To the servant] Later please Henry, later!

The servant retires. MORE stil stands looking down at the din ing-table; then putting his hand to his throat, as if to free it from the grip of his collar, he pours out a glass of water, and drinks it off. In the street, outside the bay window, two street musicians, a harp and a violin, have taken up their stand, and after some twangs and scrapes, break into music. MORE goes towards the sound, and draws aside one curtain. After a moment, he returns to the table, and takes up the notes of the speech. He is in an agony of indecision.

MORE. A cur!

He seems about to tear his notes across. Then, changing his mind, turns them over and over, muttering. His voice gradually grows louder, till he is declaiming to the empty room the peroration of his speech.

MORE. " . . . We have arrogated to our land the title Champion of Freedom Foe of Oppression. Is that indeed a by gone glory? Is it not worth some sacri fice of our pettier dignity, to avoid lay ing another stone upon its grave; t avoid placing before the searchlight eye of History the spectacle of yet on more piece of national cynicism? We ar about to force our will and our dominio on a race that has always been fre that loves its country, and its indepen dence, as much as ever we love ours. cannot sit silent to-night and see this b gin. As we are tender of our own lan so we should be of the lands of other I love my country. It is because I lov my country that I raise my voice. Wa like in spirit these people may be—b they have no chance against ourselve And war on such, however agreeable the blind moment, is odious to the f ture. The great heart of mankind ev eats in sense and sympathy with the eaker. It is against this great heart of ankind that we are going. In the ime of Justice and Civilisation we pur- ue this policy; but by Justice we shall reafter be judged, and by Civilisation condemned."

While he is speaking, a little figure has flown along the terrace outside, in the direction of the music, but has stopped at the sound of his voice, and stands in the open window, listening—a dark-haired, dark-eyed child, in a blue dressing-gown caught up in her hand. The street musicians, having reached the end of a tune, are silent.

In the intensity of More's feeling, a wine-glass, gripped too strongly, breaks and falls in pieces on to a finger-bowl. The child starts forward into the room.

More. Olive!

Olive. Who were you speaking to, ddy?

More. [Staring at her] The wind, eetheart!

Olive. There isn't any!

More. What blew you down, then?

Olive. [Mysteriously] The music. Did wind break the wine-glass, or did it he in two in your hand?

More. Now my sprite! Upstairs in, before Nurse catches you. Fly! !

Olive. Oh! no, Daddy! [With confitial fervour] It feels like things to- ht!

More. You're right there!

Olive. [Pulling him down to her, and ispering] I must get back again in ret. H'sh!

She suddenly runs and wraps herself into one of the curtains of the bay window. A young man enters, with a note in his hand.

More. Hallo, Steel!

The street musicians have again begun to play.

Steel. From Sir John—by special senger from the War Office.

More. [Reading the note] "The ball pened."

He stands brooding over the note, and Steel looks at him anxiously. He is a dark, sallow, thin-faced young man, with the eyes of one who can attach himself to people, and suffer with them.

Steel. I'm glad it's begun, sir. It would have been an awful pity to have made that speech.

More. You too, Steel!

Steel. I mean, if it's actually started ——

More. [Tearing the note across] Yes. Keep that to yourself.

Steel. Do you want me any more?

More takes from his breast pocket some papers, and pitches them down on the bureau.

More. Answer these.

Steel. [Going to the bureau] Fetherby was simply sickening. [He begins to write. Struggle has begun again in More] Not the faintest recognition that there are two sides to it.

More gives him a quick look, goes quietly to the dining-table and picks up his sheaf of notes. Hiding them with his sleeve, he goes back to the window, where he again stands hesitating.

Steel. Chief gem: [Imitating] "We must show Impudence at last that Dignity is not asleep!"

More. [Moving out on to the terrace] Nice quiet night!

Steel. This to the Cottage Hospital —shall I say you will preside?

More. No.

Steel writes; then looking up and seeing that More is no longer there, he goes to the window, looks to right and left, returns to the bureau, and is about to sit down again when a thought seems to strike him with consternation. He goes again to the window. Then snatching up his hat, he passes hurriedly out along the terrace. As he vanishes, Katherine comes in from the hall. After looking out on the terrace she goes to the bay window; stands there listening; then comes restlessly back into the room. Olive, creeping quietly from behind the curtain, clasps her round the waist.

KATHERINE. O my darling! How you startled me! What are you doing down here, you wicked little sinner!

OLIVE. I explained all that to Daddy. We needn't go into it again, need we?

KATHERINE. Where is Daddy?

OLIVE. Gone.

KATHERINE. When?

OLIVE. Oh! only just, and Mr. Steel went after him like a rabbit. [The music stops] They haven't been paid, you know.

KATHERINE. Now, go up at once. I can't think how you got down here.

OLIVE. I can. [Wheedling] If you pay them, Mummy, they're sure to play another.

KATHERINE. Well, give them that! One more only.

She gives OLIVE a coin, who runs with it to the bay window, opens the side casement, and calls to the musicians.

OLIVE. Catch, please! And would you play just one more?

She returns from the window, and seeing her mother lost in thought, rubs herself against her.

OLIVE. Have you got an ache?

KATHERINE. Right through me, darling?

OLIVE. Oh!

The musicians strike up a dance.

OLIVE. Oh! Mummy! I must just dance!

She kicks off her little blue shoes, and begins dancing. While she is capering HUBERT comes in from the hall. He stands watching his little niece for a minute, and KATHERINE looks at him.

HUBERT. Stephen gone!

KATHERINE. Yes—stop, Olive!

OLIVE. Are you good at my sort of dancing, Uncle!

HUBERT. Yes, chick—awfully!

KATHERINE. Now, Olive!

The musicians have suddenly broken off in the middle of a bar. From the street comes the noise of distant shouting.

OLIVE. Listen, Uncle! Isn't it a particular noise?

HUBERT and KATHERINE listen with all their might, and OLIVE stares at their faces. HUBERT goes to the window. The sound comes nearer. The shouted words are faintly heard: "Pyper—war—our force crosses frontier—sharp fightin'—pyper."

KATHERINE. [Breathless] Yes! It is.

The street cry is heard again in two distant voices coming from different directions: "War—pyper—sharp fightin' on the frontier—pyper."

KATHERINE. Shut out those ghouls!

As HUBERT closes the window NURSE WREFORD comes in from the hall. She is an elderly woman endowed with a motherly grimness. She fixes OLIVE with her eye, then suddenly becomes conscious of the street cry.

NURSE. Oh! don't say it's begun.

HUBERT comes from the window.

NURSE. Is the regiment to go, Mr Hubert?

HUBERT. Yes, Nanny.

NURSE. Oh, dear! My boy!

KATHERINE. [Signing to where OLIVE stands with wide eyes] Nurse!

HUBERT. I'll look after him, Nurse.

NURSE. And him keepin' company! And you not married a year. Ah! Mr Hubert, now do 'ee take care; you are him's both so rash.

HUBERT. Not I, Nurse!

NURSE looks long into his face, then lifts her finger, and beckons OLIVE.

OLIVE. [Perceiving new sensations before her, goes quietly] Good night, Uncle! Nanny, d'you know why I was obliged to come down? [In a fervent whisper] It's a secret! [As she passes with NURSE out into the hall, her voice is heard saying, "Do tell me all about the war."]

HUBERT. [Smothering emotion under a blunt manner] We sail on Friday, by-by. Be good to Helen, old girl.

KATHERINE. Oh! I wish——! Why can't women—fight?

HUBERT. Yes, it's bad for you, with Stephen taking it like this. But he'll come round now it's once begun.

KATHERINE shakes her head, then goes suddenly up to him, throws her arms round his neck. It is as if all the feeling pent up in her were finding vent in this hug.

The door from the hall is opened, and SIR JOHN'S voice is heard outside: "All right, I'll find her."

KATHERINE. Father!

SIR JOHN comes in.

SIR JOHN. Stephen get my note? I it it over the moment I got to the ar Office.

KATHERINE. I expect so. [Seeing the n note on the table] Yes.

SIR JOHN. They're shouting the news y. Thank God, I stopped that crazy ech of his in time.

KATHERINE. Have you stopped it?

SIR JOHN. What! He wouldn't be h a sublime donkey?

KATHERINE. I think that is just what might be. [Going to the window] shall know soon.

SIR JOHN, after staring at her, goes up to HUBERT.

SIR JOHN. Keep a good heart, my boy. country's first.

[They exchange a hand-squeeze.

KATHERINE backs away from the window. STEEL has appeared there from the terrace, breathless from running.

STEEL. Mr. More back?

KATHERINE. No. Has he spoken?

STEEL. Yes.

KATHERINE. Against?

STEEL. Yes.

SIR JOHN. What? After!

SIR JOHN stands rigid, then turns and marches straight out into the hall. At a sign from KATHERINE, HUBERT follows him.

KATHERINE. Yes, Mr. Steel?

STEEL. [Still breathless and agitated] were here—he slipped away from somehow. He must have gone ght down to the House. I ran over, when I got in under the Gallery he speaking already. They expected thing—I never heard it so still . He gripped them from the first —deadly—every syllable. It got of those fellows. But all the time, the silence you could feel a—sort of—current going round. And then Sherratt—I think it was—began it, and you saw the anger rising in them; but he kept them down—his quietness! The feeling! I've never seen anything like it there. Then there was a whisper all over the House that fighting had begun. And the whole thing broke out—a regular riot—as if they could have killed him. Someone tried to drag him down by the coat-tails, but he shook him off, and went on. Then he stopped dead and walked out, and the noise dropped like a stone. The whole thing didn't last five minutes. It was fine, Mrs. More; like—like lava; he was the only cool person there. I wouldn't have missed it for anything—it was grand!

MORE has appeared on the terrace, behind STEEL.

KATHERINE. Good night, Mr. Steel.

STEEL. [Startled] Oh!—Good night!

He goes out into the hall. KATHERINE picks up OLIVE'S shoes, and stands clasping them to her breast. MORE comes in.

KATHERINE. You've cleared your conscience, then! I didn't think you'd hurt me so.

MORE does not answer, still living in the scene he has gone through, and KATHERINE goes a little nearer to him.

KATHERINE. I'm with the country, heart and soul, Stephen. I warn you.

While they stand in silence, facing each other, the footman, HENRY, enters from the hall.

FOOTMAN. These notes, sir, from the House of Commons.

KATHERINE. [Taking them] You can leave the room directly.

The FOOTMAN goes out.

MORE. Open them!

KATHERINE opens one after the other, and lets them fall on the table.

MORE. Well?

KATHERINE. What you might expect. Three of your best friends. It's begun.

MORE. 'Ware Mob! [He gives a laugh] I must write to the Chief.

KATHERINE makes an impulsive movement towards him; then quietly goes to the bureau, sits down and takes up a pen.

KATHERINE. Let me make the rough draft. [She waits] Yes?

MORE. [Dictating]

"July 15th.

"DEAR SIR CHARLES,—After my speech to-night, embodying my most unalterable convictions [KATHERINE turns and looks up at him, but he is staring straight before him, and with a little movement of despair she goes on writing] I have no alternative but to place the resignation of my Under-Secretaryship in your hands. My view, my faith in this matter may be wrong—but I am surely right to keep the flag of my faith flying. I imagine I need not enlarge on the reasons——"

The curtain falls.

ACT II

Before noon a few days later. The open windows of the dining-room let in the sunlight. On the table a number of newspapers are littered. HELEN is sitting there, staring straight before her. A newspaper boy runs by outside calling out his wares. At the sound she gets up and goes out on to the terrace. HUBERT enters from the hall. He goes at once to the terrace, and draws HELEN into the room.

HELEN. Is it true—what they're shouting?

HUBERT. Yes. Worse than we thought. They got our men all crumpled up in the Pass—guns helpless. Ghastly beginning.

HELEN. Oh, Hubert!

HUBERT. My dearest girl!

HELEN puts her face up to his. He kisses her. Then she turns quickly into the bay window. The door from the hall has been opened, and the footman, HENRY, comes in, preceding WREFORD and his sweetheart.

HENRY. Just wait here, will you, while I let Mrs. More know. [Catching sight of HUBERT] Beg pardon, sir!

HUBERT. All right, Henry. [Off-hand] Ah! Wreford!

The FOOTMAN withdraws.

HUBERT. So you've brought her round. That's good! My sister'll look after her—don't you worry! Got everything packed? Three o'clock sharp.

WREFORD. [A broad-faced soldier dressed in khaki, with a certain look of dry humour, now dimmed—speaking with a West Country burr] That's right, zurr; all's ready.

HELEN has come out of the window and is quietly looking at WREFORD and the girl standing there so awkwardly.

HELEN. [Quietly] Take care of him, Wreford.

HUBERT. We'll take care of each other, won't we, Wreford?

HELEN. How long have you been engaged?

THE GIRL. [A pretty, indeterminate young woman] Six months.

[She sobs suddenly.

HELEN. Ah! He'll soon be safe back.

WREFORD. I'll owe 'em for this. [In a low voice to her] Don't 'ee now! Don 'ee!

HELEN. No! Don't cry, please!

She stands struggling with her own lips, then goes out on to the terrace, HUBERT following; WREFORD and his girl remain where they were, strange and awkward, she muffling her sobs.

WREFORD. Don't 'ee go on like that, Nance; I'll 'ave to take you 'ome. That silly, now we've a-come. I might 'a' dead and buried by the fuss you're makin'. You've a-drove the lady away. See!

She regains control of herself as the door is opened and KATHERINE appears, accompanied by OLIVE, who regards WREFORD with awe and curiosity, and by NURSE, whose eyes are red, but whose manner is composed.

KATHERINE. My brother told me; glad you've brought her.

WREFORD. Ye—as, M'. She feels like goin', a bit.

KATHERINE. Yes, yes! Still, it's in the country, isn't it?

THE GIRL. That's what Wreford keeps tellin' me. He've got to go—so it's se upsettin' 'im. And of course I keep ellin' him I shall be all right.

NURSE. [Whose eyes never leave her on's face] And so you will.

THE GIRL. Wreford thought it 'd com-ort him to know you were interested n me. 'E's so 'otheaded I'm sure some-hin' 'll come to 'im.

KATHERINE. We've all got someone oing. Are you coming to the docks?
Ve must send them off in good spirits,
ou know.

OLIVE. Perhaps he'll get a medal.

KATHERINE. Olive!

NURSE. You wouldn't like for him to : hanging back, one of them antitriot, stop-the-war ones.

KATHERINE. [Quickly] Let me see—have your address. [Holding out her nd to WREFORD] We'll look after
r.

OLIVE. [In a loud whisper] Shall I id him my toffee?

KATHERINE. If you like, dear. [To REFORD] Now take care of my brother d yourself, and we'll take care of r.

WREFORD. Ye-as, M'.

He then looks rather wretchedly at his girl, as if the interview had not done so much for him as he had hoped. She drops a little curtsey. WREFORD salutes.

OLIVE. [Who has taken from the bu-u a packet, placing it in his hand] very nourishing!

WREFORD. Thank you, miss.

Then, nudging each other, and entangled in their feelings and the conventions, they pass out, shepherded by NURSE.

ATHERINE. Poor things!

)LIVE. What is an anti-patriot, stop-war one, Mummy?

ATHERINE. [Taking up a newspaper]
: a stupid name, dear—don't chatter!

LIVE. But tell me just one weeny g!

ATHERINE. Well?

LIVE. Is Daddy one?

ATHERINE. Olive! How much do you
w about this war?

LIVE. They won't obey us properly.
ve have to beat them, and take away country. We shall, shan't we?

KATHERINE. Yes. But Daddy doesn't want us to; he doesn't think it fair, and he's been saying so. People are very angry with him.

OLIVE. Why isn't it fair? I suppose we're littler than them.

KATHERINE. No.

OLIVE. Oh! in history we always are. And we always win. That's why I like history. Which are you for, Mummy—us or them?

KATHERINE. Us.

OLIVE. Then I shall have to be. It's a pity we're not on the same side as Daddy.

KATHERINE shudders.

OLIVE. Will they hurt him for not taking our side?

KATHERINE. I expect they will, Olive.

OLIVE. Then we shall have to be extra nice to him.

KATHERINE. If we can.

OLIVE. I can; I feel like it.

HELEN and HUBERT have returned along the terrace. Seeing KATHERINE and the child, HELEN passes on, but HUBERT comes in at the French window.

OLIVE. [Catching sight of him—softly] Is Uncle Hubert going to the front to-day?

KATHERINE nods.

OLIVE. But not grandfather?

KATHERINE. No, dear.

OLIVE. That's lucky for them, isn't it?

HUBERT comes in. The presence of the child gives him self-control.

HUBERT. Well, old girl, it's good-bye. [To OLIVE] What shall I bring you back, chick?

OLIVE. Are there shops at the front? I thought it was dangerous.

HUBERT. Not a bit.

OLIVE. [Disillusioned] Oh!

KATHERINE. Now, darling, give Uncle a good hug.

Under cover of OLIVE'S hug, KATHERINE repairs her courage.

KATHERINE. The Dad and I'll be with you all in spirit. Good-bye, old boy!

They do not dare to kiss, and HUBERT goes out very stiff and straight, in the doorway passing STEEL, of whom he takes no no- tice. STEEL hesitates, and would go away.

KATHERINE. Come in, Mr. Steel.

STEEL. The deputation from Toulmin ought to be here, Mrs. More. It's twelve.

OLIVE. [Having made a little ball of newspaper slyly] Mr. Steel, catch!

[She throws, and STEEL catches it in silence.

KATHERINE. Go upstairs, won't you, darling?

OLIVE. Mayn't I read in the window, Mummy? Then I shall see if any soldiers pass.

KATHERINE. No. You can go out on the terrace a little, and then you must go up.

OLIVE goes reluctantly out on to the terrace.

STEEL. Awful news this morning of that Pass! And have you seen these? [Reading from the newspaper] "We will have no truck with the jargon of the degenerate who vilifies his country at such a moment. The Member for Toulmin has earned for himself the contempt of all virile patriots." [He takes up a second journal] "There is a certain type of public man who, even at his own expense, cannot resist the itch to advertise himself. We would, at moments of national crisis, muzzle such persons, as we muzzle dogs that we suspect of incipient rabies. . . ." They're in full cry after him!

KATHERINE. I mind much more all the creatures who are always flinging mud at the country making him their hero suddenly! You know what's in his mind?

STEEL. Oh! We must get him to give up that idea of lecturing everywhere against the war, Mrs. More; we simply must.

KATHERINE. [Listening] The deputation's come. Go and fetch him, Mr. Steel. He'll be in his room, at the House.

STEEL goes out, and KATHERINE stands at bay. In a moment he opens the door again, to usher in the deputation; then retires. The four gentlemen have entered as if conscious of grave issues. The first and most picturesque is JAMES HOME, a thin, tall, grey-bearded man, with plentiful hair, contradictious eyebrows, and the half-shy, half-bold manners, alternately rude and overpolite, of one not accustomed to Society, yet secretly much taken with himself. He is dressed in rough tweeds, with a red silk tie slung through a ring, and is closely followed by MARK WACE, a waxy, round-faced man of middle-age, with sleek dark hair, traces of whisker, and a smooth way of continually rubbing his hands together, as if selling something to an esteemed customer. He is rather stout, wears dark clothes, with a large gold chain. Following him comes CHARLES SHELDER, a lawyer, of fifty, with a bald egg-shaped head, and gold pince-nez. He has little side whiskers, a leathery, yellowish skin, a rather kind but watchful and dubious face, and when he speaks seems to have a plum in his mouth, which arises from the preponderance of his shaven upper lip. Last of the deputation comes WILLIAM BANNING, an energetic-looking, square-shouldered, self-made country-man, between fifty and sixty, with grey moustaches, ruddy face, and lively brown eyes.

KATHERINE. How do you do, Mr. Home?

HOME. [Bowing rather extravagantly over her hand, as if to show his independence of women's influence] Mrs. More! We hardly expected—— This is an honour.

WACE. How do you do, Ma'am?

KATHERINE. And you, Mr. Wace?

WACE. Thank you, Ma'am, well indeed!

SHELDER. How d'you do, Mrs. More?

KATHERINE. Very well, thank you, Mr. Shelder.

BANNING. [Speaking with a rather broad country accent] This is but a poor occasion, Ma'am.

KATHERINE. Yes, Mr. Banning. Will you sit down, gentlemen.

Seeing that they will not settle down while she is standing, she sits at the table. They gradually take their seats. Each member of deputation in his own way is severely hanging back from any mention of the subject in hand; and KATHERINE as intent on drawing them to it.

KATHERINE. My husband will be here two minutes. He's only over at the ouse.

SHELDER. [Who is of higher standing d education than the others] Charm- position—this, Mrs. More! So near —er—Centre of—Gravity—um?

KATHERINE. I read the account of ır second meeting at Toulmin.

BANNING. It's bad, Mrs. More—bad. ere's no disguising it. That speech s moon-summer madness—Ah! it s! Take a lot of explaining away. ıy did you let him, now? Why did ı? Not your views, I'm sure!

[He looks at her, but for answer she only compresses her lips.

BANNING. I tell you what hit me—at's hit the whole constituency—and t's his knowing we were over the ntier, fighting already, when he made KATHERINE. What difference does it ke if he did know?

MORE. Hitting below the belt—I uld have thought—you'll pardon me!

BANNING. Till war's begun, Mrs. re, you're entitled to say what you , no doubt—but after! That's going inst your country. Ah! his speech s strong, you know—his speech was ong.

KATHERINE. He had made up his mind speak. It was just an accident the ws coming then. [A silence.

BANNING. Well, that's true, I suppose. ıat we really want is to make sure won't break out again.

MORE. Very high-minded, his views course—but, some consideration for common herd. You'll pardon me!

SHELDER. We've come with the friend- it feelings, Mrs. More—but, you ow, it won't do, this sort of thing!

NACE. We shall be able to smooth ı down. Oh! surely.

BANNING. We'd be best perhaps not mention about his knowing that fight- had begun.

As he speaks, MORE enters through the French windows. They all rise.

MORE. Good morning, gentlemen.

[He comes down to the table, but does not offer to shake hands.

BANNING. Well, Mr. More? You've made a woeful mistake, sir; I tell you to your face.

MORE. As everybody else does, Banning. Sit down again, please.

They gradually resume their seats, and MORE sits in KATHERINE'S chair. She alone remains standing leaning against the corner of the bay window, watching their faces.

BANNING. You've seen the morning's telegrams? I tell you, Mr. More—another reverse like that, and the flood will sweep you clean away. And I'll not blame it. It's only flesh and blood.

MORE. Allow for flesh and blood in me, too, please. When I spoke the other night it was not without a certain feeling here. [He touches his heart.

BANNING. But your attitude's so sudden—you'd not been going that length when you were down with us in May.

MORE. Do me the justice to remember that even then I was against our policy. It cost me three weeks' hard struggle to make up my mind to that speech. One comes slowly to these things, Banning.

SHELDER. Case of conscience?

MORE. Such things have happened, Shelder, even in politics.

SHELDER. You see, our ideals are naturally low—how different from yours!

MORE smiles.

KATHERINE, who has drawn near her husband, moves back again, as if relieved at this gleam of geniality. WACE rubs his hands.

BANNING. There's one thing you forget, sir. We send you to Parliament, representing us; but you couldn't find six men in the whole constituency that would have bidden you to make that speech.

MORE. I'm sorry; but I can't help my convictions, Banning.

SHELDER. What was it the prophet was without in his own country?

BANNING. Ah! but we're not funning, Mr. More, I've never known feeling run so high. The sentiment of both meetings was dead against you. We've had showers of letters to headquarters. Some from very good men—very warm friends of yours.

SHELDER. Come now! It's not too late. Let's go back and tell them you won't do it again.

MORE. Muzzling order?

BANNING. [Bluntly] That's about it.

MORE. Give up my principles to save my Parliamentary skin. Then, indeed, they might call me a degenerate!

[He touches the newspapers on the table.

KATHERINE makes an abrupt and painful movement, then remains as still as before, leaning against the corner of the window-seat.

BANNING. Well, well! I know. But we don't ask you to take your words back—we only want discretion in the future.

MORE. Conspiracy of silence! And have it said that a mob of newspapers have hounded me to it.

BANNING. They won't say that of you.

SHELDER. My dear More, aren't you rather dropping to our level? With your principles you ought not to care two straws what people say.

MORE. But I do. I can't betray the dignity and courage of public men. If popular opinion is to control the utterances of her politicians, then good-bye indeed to this country!

BANNING. Come now! I won't say that your views weren't sound enough before the fighting began. I've never liked our policy out there. But our blood's being spilled; and that makes all the difference. I don't suppose they'd want me exactly, but I'd be ready to go myself. We'd all of us be ready. And we can't have the man that represents us talking wild, until we've licked these fellows. That's it in a nutshell.

MORE. I understand your feeling, Banning. I tender you my resignation. I can't and won't hold on where I'm not wanted.

BANNING. No, no, no! Don't do that! [His accent broader and broader] You've 'ad your say, and there it is. Coom now! You've been our Membe nine years, in rain and shine.

SHELDER. We want to keep you, More Come! Give us your promise—that's a good man!

MORE. I don't make cheap promises You ask too much.

There is silence, and they all look at MORE.

SHELDER. There are very excellen reasons for the Government's policy.

MORE. There are always excellent reasons for having your way with the weak SHELDER. My dear More, how you can get up any enthusiasm for those cattle lifting ruffians?

MORE. Better lift cattle than lift free dom.

SHELDER. Well, all we'll ask is tha you shouldn't go about the country, say ing so.

MORE. But that is just what I must do

Again they all look at MORE in consternation.

HOME. Not down our way, you'll par don me.

WACE. Really—really, sir——

SHELDER. The time of crusades is past More.

MORE. Is it?

BANNING. Ah! no, but we don't want to part with you, Mr. More. It's a bitte thing, this, after three elections. Look a the 'uman side of it! To speak ill o your country when there's been a dis aster like this terrible business in th Pass. There's your own wife. I see he brother's regiment's to start this ver afternoon. Come now—how must sh feel?

MORE breaks away to the bay win dow. The DEPUTATION exchang glances.

MORE. [Turning] To try to muzzl me like this—is going too far.

BANNING. We just want to put yo out of temptation.

MORE. I've held my seat with you all weathers for nine years. You've a been bricks to me. My heart's in m work, Banning; I'm not eager to unde go political eclipse at forty.

SHELDER. Just so—we don't want s see you in that quandary.

BANNING. It'd be no friendliness re you a wrong impression of the state feeling. Silence—till the bitterness is erpast; there's naught else for it, Mr. ore, while you feel as you do. That igue of yours! Come! You owe us nething. You're a big man; it's the view you ought to take.

More. I am trying to.

Home. And what precisely is your w?—you'll pardon my asking.

More. [Turning on him] Mr. Home . great country such as ours—is trus- for the highest sentiments of man- d. Do these few outrages justify us stealing the freedom of this little ple?

Banning. Steal their freedom! That's ner running before the hounds.

More. Ah, Banning! now we come to In your hearts you're none of you that—neither by force nor fraud. d yet you all know that we've gone there to stay, as we've gone into er lands—as all we big Powers go other lands, when they're little and ak. The Prime Minister's words the er night were these: "If we are ed to spend this blood and money r, we must never again be forced." at does that mean but swallowing country?

Shelder. Well, and quite frankly, it'd no bad thing.

Home. We don't want their wretched ntry—we're forced.

More. We are not forced.

Shelder. My dear More, what is llisation but the logical, inevitable llowing up of the lower by the ner types of man? And what else will e here?

More. We shall not agree there, Shel- ; and we might argue it all day. the point is, not whether you or I right—the point is: What is a man holds a faith with all his heart to Please tell me.

There is a silence.

Banning. [Simply] I was just think- of those poor fellows in the Pass.

More. I can see them, as well as you, ining. But, imagine! Up in our own nty—the Black Valley—twelve hun- d foreign devils dead and dying—the ws busy over them—in our own country, our own valley—ours—ours—violated. Would you care about "the poor fellows" in that Pass?—Invading, stealing dogs! Kill them—kill them! You would, and I would, too!

The passion of those words touches and grips as no arguments could; and they are silent.

More. Well! What's the difference out there? I'm not so inhuman as not to want to see this disaster in the Pass wiped out. But once that's done, in spite of my affection for you; of my ambitions, and they're not few; [Very low] in spite of my own wife's feeling, I must be free to raise my voice against this war.

Banning. [Speaking slowly, consulting the others, as it were, with his eyes] Mr. More, there's no man I respect more than yourself. I can't tell what they'll say down there when we go back; but I, for one, don't feel it in me to take a hand in pressing you farther against your faith.

Shelder. We don't deny that—that you have a case of sorts.

Wace. No—surely.

Shelder. A man should be free, I suppose, to hold his own opinions.

More. Thank you, Shelder.

Banning. Well! Well! We must take you as you are; but it's a rare pity; there'll be a lot of trouble——

His eyes light on Home, who is leaning forward with hand raised to his ear, listening. Very faint, from far in the distance, there is heard a skirling sound. All become conscious of it, all listen.

Home. [Suddenly] Bagpipes!

The figure of Olive flies past the window, out on the terrace. Katherine turns, as if to follow her.

Shelder. Highlanders! [He rises.

Katherine goes quickly out on to the terrace. One by one they all follow to the window. One by one go out on to the terrace, till More is left alone. He turns to the bay window. The music is swelling, coming nearer. More leaves the window—his face distorted by the strife of his emotions. He paces the room, taking, in some sort, the rhythm of the march.

Slowly the music dies away in the distance to a drum-tap and the tramp of a company. More stops at the table, covering his eyes with his hands.

The Deputation troop back across the terrace, and come in at the French windows. Their faces and manners have quite changed. Katherine follows them as far as the window.

Home. [In a strange, almost threatening voice] It won't do, Mr. More. Give us your word, to hold your peace!

Shelder. Come! More.

Wace. Yes, indeed—indeed!

Banning. We must have it.

More. [Without lifting his head] I—I——

The drum-tap of a regiment marching is heard.

Banning. Can you hear that go by, man—when your country's just been struck?

Now comes the scuffle and mutter of a following crowd.

More. I give you——

Then, sharp and clear above all other sounds, the words: "Give the beggars hell, boys!" "Wipe your feet on their dirty country!" "Don't leave 'em a bloody acre!"

And a burst of hoarse cheering.

More. [Flinging up his head] That's reality! By Heaven! No!

Katherine. Oh!

Shelder. In that case, we'll go.

Banning. You mean it? You lose us, then!

More bows.

Home. Good riddance! [Venomously—his eyes darting between More and Katherine] Go and stump the country! Find out what they think of you! You'll pardon me!

One by one, without a word, only Banning looking back, they pass out into the hall. More sits down at the table before the pile of newspapers. Katherine, in the window, never moves. Olive comes along the terrace, to her mother.

Olive. They were nice ones! Such a lot of dirty people following, and some quite clean, Mummy. [Conscious from her mother's face that something is very wrong, she looks at her father, and then steals up to his side] Uncle Hubert's gone, Daddy; and Auntie Helen's crying. And—look at Mummy!

More raises his head and looks.

Olive. Do be on our side! Do!

She rubs her cheek against his. Feeling that he does not rub his cheek against hers, Olive stands away, and looks from him to her mother in wonder.

The curtain falls.

ACT III

SCENE I

A cobble-stoned alley, without pavement, behind a suburban theatre. The tall, blind, dingy-yellowish wall of the building is plastered with the tattered remnants of old entertainment bills, and the words: "To Let," and with several torn, and one still virgin placard, containing this announcement: "Stop-the-War Meeting, October 1st. Addresses by Stephen More, Esq., and others." The alley is plentifully strewn with refuse and scraps of paper. Three stone steps, inset, lead to the stage door. It is a dark night, and a street lamp close to the wall throws all the light there is. A faint, confused murmur, as of distant hooting is heard. Suddenly a boy comes running, then two rough girls hurry past in the direction of the sound, and the alley is again deserted. The stage door opens, and a doorkeeper, poking his head out, looks up and down. He withdraws, but in a second reappears, preceding three black-coated gentlemen.

Doorkeeper. It's all clear. You can get away down here, gentlemen. Keep to the left, then sharp to the right, round the corner.

The Three. [Dusting themselves, and ttling their ties] Thanks, very much! hanks!

First Black-Coated Gentleman. here's More? Isn't he coming?

They are joined by a fourth black-coated Gentleman.

Fourth Black-Coated Gentleman. st behind. [To the Doorkeeper] anks.

They hurry away. The Doorkeeper retires. Another boy runs past. Then the door opens again. Steel and More come out.

More stands hesitating on the steps; then turns as if to go back.

Steel. Come along, sir, come!

More. It sticks in my gizzard, Steel.

Steel. [Running his arm through re's, and almost dragging him down steps] You owe it to the theatre ple.

More still hesitates.

Steel. We might be penned in there ther hour; you told Mrs. More half-t ten; it'll only make her anxious. d she hasn't seen you for six weeks.

More. All right; don't dislocate my a.

They move down the steps, and away to the left, as a boy comes running down the alley. Sighting More, he stops dead, spins round, and crying shrilly: "'Ere 'e is! That's 'im! 'Ere 'e is!" he bolts back in the direction whence he came.

Steel. Quick, sir, quick!

More. That is the end of the limit, he foreign ambassador remarked.

Steel. [Pulling him back towards door] Well! come inside again, any-!

A number of men and boys, and a few young girls, are trooping quickly from the left. A motley crew, out for excitement; loafers, artisans, navvies; girls rough, or dubious. All in the mood of hunters, and having tasted blood. They gather round the steps displaying the momentary irresolution and curiosity that follows on a new development of any chase. More, on the bottom step, turns and eyes them.

A Girl. [At the edge] Which is 'im! The old 'un or the young?

More turns, and mounts the remaining steps.

Tall Youth. [With lank black hair under a bowler hat] You blasted traitor!

More faces round at the volley of jeering that follows; the chorus of booing swells, then gradually dies, as if they realised that they were spoiling their own sport.

A Rough Girl. Don't frighten the poor feller!

A girl beside her utters a shrill laugh.

Steel. [Tugging at More's arm] Come along, sir.

More. [Shaking his arm free—to the crowd] Well, what do you want?

A Voice. Speech.

More. Indeed! That's new.

Rough Voice. [At the back of the crowd] Look at his white liver. You can see it in his face.

A Big Navvy. [In front] Shut it! Give 'im a chanst!

Tall Youth. Silence for the blasted traitor?

A youth plays the concertina; there is laughter, then an abrupt silence.

More. You shall have it in a nutshell!

A Shopboy. [Flinging a walnut-shell which strikes More on the shoulder] Here y'are!

More. Go home, and think! If foreigners invaded us, wouldn't you be fighting tooth and nail like those tribesmen, out there?

Tall Youth. Treacherous dogs! Why don't they come out in the open?

More. They fight as best they can.

A burst of hooting is led by a soldier in khaki on the outskirts.

More. My friend there in khaki led that hooting. I've never said a word against our soldiers. It's the Government I condemn for putting them to this, and the Press for hounding on the Government, and all of you for being led by the nose to do what none of you would do, left to yourselves.

The Tall Youth leads a somewhat unspontaneous burst of execration.

MORE. I say not one of you would go for a weaker man.

VOICES IN THE CROWD.

ROUGH VOICE. Tork sense!

GIRL'S VOICE. He's gittin' at you!

TALL YOUTH'S VOICE. Shiny skunk!

A NAVVY. [Suddenly shouldering forward] Look 'ere, Mister! Don't you come gaffin' to those who've got mates out there, or it'll be the worse for you —you go 'ome!

COCKNEY VOICE. And git your wife to put cotton-wool in yer ears.

A spurt of laughter.

A FRIENDLY VOICE. [From the outskirts] Shame! Bravo, More! Keep it up!

A scuffle drowns this cry.

MORE. [With vehemence] Stop that! Stop that! You——!

TALL YOUTH. Traitor!

AN ARTISAN. Who black-legged?

MIDDLE-AGED MAN. Ought to be shot —backin' his country's enemies!

MORE. Those tribesmen are defending their homes.

TWO VOICES. Hear! hear!

They are hustled into silence.

TALL YOUTH. Wind-bag!

MORE. [With sudden passion] Defending their homes! Not mobbing unarmed men!

STEEL again pulls at his arm.

ROUGH. Shut it, or we'll do you in!

MORE. [Recovering his coolness] Ah! Do me in by all means! You'd deal such a blow at cowardly mobs as wouldn't be forgotten in your time.

STEEL. For God's sake, sir!

MORE. [Shaking off his touch] Well!

There is an ugly rush, checked by the fall of the foremost figures, thrown too suddenly against the bottom step. The crowd recoils. There is a momentary lull, and MORE stares steadily down at them.

COCKNEY VOICE. Don't 'e speak well! What eloquence!

Two or three nut-shells and a piece of orange-peel strike MORE across the face. He takes no notice.

ROUGH VOICE. That's it! Give 'im some encouragement.

The jeering laughter is changed to anger by the contemptuous smile on MORE'S face.

A TALL YOUTH. Traitor!

A VOICE. Don't stand there like a stuck pig.

A ROUGH. Let's 'ave 'im dahn off that!

Under cover of the applause that greets this, he strikes MORE across the legs with a belt. STEEL starts forward. MORE, flinging out his arm, turns him back, and resumes his tranquil staring at the crowd in whom the sense of being foiled by this silence is fast turning to rage.

THE CROWD. Speak up, or get down! Get off! Get away, there—or we'll make you! Go on!

MORE remains immovable.

A YOUTH. [In a lull of disconcertion] I'll make 'im speak! See!

He darts forward and spits, defiling MORE'S hand. MORE jerks it up as if it had been stung, then stands as still as ever. A spurt of laughter dies into a shiver of repugnance at the action. The shame is fanned again to fury by the sight of MORE'S scornful face.

TALL YOUTH. Shift! or you'll get it!

A VOICE. Enough of your ugly mug!

A ROUGH. Give 'im one!

Two flung stones strike MORE. He staggers and nearly falls, then rights himself.

A GIRL'S VOICE. Shame!

FRIENDLY VOICE. Bravo, More! Stick it!

A ROUGH. Give 'im another!

A VOICE. No!

A GIRL'S VOICE. Let 'im alone! Come on, Billy, this ain't no fun!

Still looking up at MORE, the whole crowd falls into an uneasy silence broken only by the shuffling of feet. Then the BIG NAVVY in the front rank turns and elbows his way out to the edge of the crowd.

THE NAVVY. Let 'im be!

With half-sullen and half-shamefaced acquiescence the crowd breaks up and drifts back whence it came, till the alley is nearly empty.

MORE. [As if coming to, out of a nce—wiping his hand and dusting his t] Well, Steel!

And followed by STEEL, he descends the steps and moves away. Two policemen pass, glancing up at the broken glass. One of them stops and makes a note.

The curtain falls.

SCENE II

The window-end of KATHERINE'S bedroom, panelled in cream-coloured wood. The light from four candles is falling on KATHERINE, who is sitting before the silver mirror of an old oak dressing-table, brushing her hair. A door, on the left, stands ajar. An oak chair against the wall close to a recessed window is all the other furniture. Through this window the blue night is seen, where a mist is rolled out flat amongst trees, so that only dark clumps of boughs show here and there, beneath a moonlit sky. As the curtain rises, KATHERINE, with brush arrested, is listening. She begins again brushing her hair, then stops, and taking a packet of letters from a drawer of her dressing-table, reads. Through the just-open door behind her comes the voice of OLIVE.

LIVE. Mummy! I'm awake!

But KATHERINE goes on reading; and OLIVE steals into the room in her nightgown.

LIVE. [At KATHERINE'S elbow—exning her watch on its stand] It's teen minutes to eleven.

ATHERINE. Olive, Olive!

LIVE. I just wanted to see the time. ever can go to sleep if I try—it's e helpless, you know. Is there a vic- yet?

KATHERINE shakes her head.

LIVE. Oh! I prayed extra special one in the evening papers. [Stray round her mother] Hasn't Daddy e?

ATHERINE. Not yet.

OLIVE. Are you waiting for him? [Burying her face in her mother's hair] Your hair is nice, Mummy. It's particular to-night.

KATHERINE lets fall her brush, and looks at her almost in alarm.

OLIVE. How long has Daddy been away?

KATHERINE. Six weeks.

OLIVE. It seems about a hundred years, doesn't it? Has he been making speeches all the time?

KATHERINE. Yes.

OLIVE. To-night, too?

KATHERINE. Yes.

OLIVE. The night that man was here whose head's too bald for anything—oh! Mummy, you know—the one who cleans his teeth so tremendously—I heard Daddy making a speech to the wind. It broke a wine-glass. His speeches must be good ones, mustn't they!

KATHERINE. Very.

OLIVE. It felt funny; you couldn't see any wind, you know.

KATHERINE. Talking to the wind is an expression, Olive.

OLIVE. Does Daddy often?

KATHERINE. Yes, nowadays.

OLIVE. What does it mean?

KATHERINE. Speaking to people who won't listen.

OLIVE. What do they do, then?

KATHERINE. Just a few people go to hear him, and then a great crowd comes and breaks in; or they wait for him outside, and throw things, and hoot.

OLIVE. Poor Daddy! Is it people on our side, who throw things?

KATHERINE. Yes, but only rough people.

OLIVE. Why does he go on doing it? I shouldn't.

KATHERINE. He thinks it his duty.

OLIVE. To your neighbour, or only to God?

KATHERINE. To both.

OLIVE. Oh! Are those his letters?

KATHERINE. Yes.

OLIVE. [Reading from the letter] "My dear Heart." Does he always call you his dear heart, Mummy? It's rather jolly, isn't it? "I shall be home about half-past ten to-morrow night. For a few hours the fires of p-u-r-g-a-t-o-r-y will cease to burn——" What are the fires of p-u-r-g-a-t-o-r-y?

KATHERINE. [Putting away the letters] Come, Olive!

OLIVE. But what are they?

KATHERINE. Daddy means that he's been very unhappy.

OLIVE. Have you, too?

KATHERINE. Yes.

OLIVE. [Cheerfully] So have I. May I open the window?

KATHERINE. No; you'll let the mist in.

OLIVE. Isn't it a funny mist—all flat!

KATHERINE. Now, come along, frog!

OLIVE. [Making time] Mummy, when is Uncle Hubert coming back?

KATHERINE. We don't know, dear.

OLIVE. I suppose Aunty Helen'll stay with us till he does.

KATHERINE. Yes.

OLIVE. That's something, isn't it?

KATHERINE. [Picking her up] Now then!

OLIVE. [Deliciously limp] Had I better put in the duty to your neighbour—if there isn't a victory soon? [As they pass through the door] You're tickling under my knee! [Little gurgles of pleasure follow. Then silence. Then a drowsy voice] I must keep awake for Daddy.

KATHERINE comes back. She is about to leave the door a little open, when she hears a knock on the other door. It is opened a few inches, and NURSE'S voice says:

"Can I come in, Ma'am?"

The NURSE comes in.

KATHERINE. [Shutting OLIVE'S door, and going up to her] What is it, Nurse?

NURSE. [Speaking in a low voice] I've been meaning to—I'll never do it in the daytime. I'm giving you notice.

KATHERINE. Nurse! You too!

She looks towards OLIVE'S room with dismay. The NURSE smudges a slow tear away from her cheek.

NURSE. I want to go right away at once.

KATHERINE. Leave Olive! That is the sins of the fathers with a vengeance.

NURSE. I've had another letter from my son. No. Miss Katherine, while the master goes on upholdin' these murderin' outlandish creatures, I can't live in this house, not now he's coming bac

KATHERINE. But, Nurse——!

NURSE. It's not like them [With a ineffable gesture] downstairs, becau I'm frightened of the mob, or of t window's bein' broke again, or mir what the boys in the street say. I shou think not—no! It's my heart. I'm so night and day thinkin' of my son, a him lying out there at night without rag of dry clothing, and water that t bullocks won't drink, and maggots the meat; and every day one of h friends laid out stark and cold, and o day—'imself perhaps. If anything we to 'appen to him, I'd never forgive m self—here. Ah! Miss Katherine, I wo der how you bear it—bad news com every day—— And Sir John's face sad—— And all the time the mast speaking against us, as it might be J nah 'imself.

KATHERINE. But, Nurse, how can y leave us, you?

NURSE. [Smudging at her cheek There's that tells me it's encourag something to happen, if I stay here; a Mr. More coming back to-night. Y can't serve God and Mammon, the Bi says.

KATHERINE. Don't you know w it's costing him?

NURSE. Ah! Cost him his seat, his reputation; and more than that cost him, to go against the country.

KATHERINE. He's following his c science.

NURSE. And others must foll theirs, too. No, Miss Katherine, for to let him—you, with your three br ers out there, and your father wasting away with grief. Sufferin' as you've been these three months p What'll you feel if anything happen my three young gentlemen out there my dear Mr. Hubert that I nursed self, when your precious mother co n't. What would she have said—v you in the camp of his enemies.

KATHERINE. Nurse, Nurse!

NURSE. In my paper they say he's couraging these heathens and ma the foreigners talk about us; and e day longer the war lasts, there's blood on this house.

KATHERINE. [Turning away] Nurse, an't—I won't listen.

URSE. [Looking at her intently] Ah! 'll move him to leave off! I see r heart, my dear. But if you don't, n go I must!

She nods her head gravely, goes to the door of OLIVE'S room, opens it gently, stands looking for a moment, then with the words "My Lamb!" she goes in noiselessly and closes the door.

KATHERINE turns back to her glass, puts back her hair, and smooths her lips and eyes. The door from the corridor is opened, and HELEN'S voice says: "Kit! You're not in bed?"

ATHERINE. No.

HELEN too is in a wrapper, with a piece of lace thrown over her head. Her face is scared and miserable, and she runs into KATHERINE'S arms.

ATHERINE. My dear, what is it?

ELEN. I've seen—a vision!

ATHERINE. Hssh! You'll wake e!

ELEN. [Staring before her] I'd just n asleep, and I saw a plain that ed to run into the sky—like—that And on it there were—dark things. grew into a body without a head, a gun by its side. And one was a sitting huddled up, nursing a nded leg. He had the face of Hu- 's servant, Wreford. And then I saw ubert. His face was all dark and ; and he had—a wound, an awful nd here. [She touches her breast] blood was running from it, and he trying to stop it—oh! Kit—by ing it. [She pauses, stifled by emo-] Then I heard Wreford laugh, and vultures didn't touch live bodies. there came a voice, from some- re, calling out: "Oh, God! I'm dy- " And Wreford began to swear , and I heard Hubert say: "Don't, ford; let the poor fellow be!" But voice went on and on, moaning and ng out: "I'll lie here all night dying d then I'll die!" And Wreford ged himself along the ground; his face all devilish, like a man who's going to kill.

KATHERINE. My dear! How ghastly!

HELEN. Still that voice went on, and I saw Wreford take up the dead man's gun. Then Hubert got upon his feet, and went tottering along, so feebly, so dreadfully—but before he could reach and stop him, Wreford fired at the man who was crying. And Hubert called out: "You brute!" and fell right down. And when Wreford saw him lying there, he began to moan and sob, but Hubert never stirred. Then it all got black again—and I could see a dark woman-thing creeping, first to the man without a head; then to Wreford; then to Hubert, and it touched him, and sprang away. And it cried out: "A—ai—ah!" [Pointing out at the mist] Look! Out there! The dark things!

KATHERINE. [Putting her arms round her] Yes, dear, yes! You must have been looking at the mist.

HELEN. [Strangely calm] He's dead!

KATHERINE. It was only a dream.

HELEN. You didn't hear that cry. [She listens] That's Stephen. Forgive me, Kit; I oughtn't to have upset you, but I couldn't help coming.

She goes out. KATHERINE, into whom her emotion seems to have passed, turns feverishly to the window, throws it open and leans out. MORE comes in.

MORE. Kit!

Catching sight of her figure in the window, he goes quickly to her.

KATHERINE. Ah.

[She has mastered her emotion.

MORE. Let me look at you!

He draws her from the window to the candle-light, and looks long at her.

MORE. What have you done to your hair?

KATHERINE. Nothing.

MORE. It's wonderful to-night.

[He takes it greedily and buries his face in it.

KATHERINE. [Drawing her hair away] Well?

MORE. At last!

KATHERINE. [Pointing t OLIVE'S room] Hssh?

MORE. How is she?

KATHERINE. All right.

MORE. And you?

KATHERINE shrugs her shoulders.

MORE. Six weeks!

KATHERINE. Why have you come?

MORE. Why!

KATHERINE. You begin again the day after to-morrow. Was it worth while?

MORE. Kit!

KATHERINE. It makes it harder for me, that's all.

MORE. [Staring at her] What's come to you?

KATHERINE. Six weeks is a long time to sit and read about your meetings.

MORE. Put that away to-night. [He touches her] This is what travellers feel when they come out of the desert to —water.

KATHERINE. [Suddenly noticing the cut on his forehead] Your forehead! It's cut.

MORE. It's nothing.

KATHERINE. Oh! Let me bathe it!

MORE. No, dear! It's all right.

KATHERINE. [Turning away] Helen has just been telling me a dream she's had of Hubert's death.

MORE. Poor child!

KATHERINE. Dream bad dreams, and wait, and hide oneself—there's been nothing else to do. Nothing, Stephen—nothing!

MORE. Hide? Because of me?

KATHERINE nods.

MORE. [With a movement of distress] I see. I thought from your letters you were coming to feel—— Kit! You look so lovely!

Suddenly he sees that she is crying, and goes quickly to her.

MORE. My dear, don't cry! God knows I don't want to make things worse for you. I'll go away.

She draws away from him a little, and after looking long at her, he sits down at the dressing-table and begins turning over the brushes and articles of toilet, trying to find words.

MORE. Never look forward. After the time I've had—I thought—to-night —it would be summer—I thought it would be you—and everything!

ACT IV

It is between lights, the following in the dining-room of MORE'S ho
The windows are closed, but tains are not drawn. STEEL is se at the bureau, writing a letter f MORE'S dictation.

STEEL. [Reading over the letter] "No ubt we shall have trouble. But, if the vn authorities at the last minute for- l the use of the hall, we'll hold the eting in the open. Let bills be got t, and an audience will collect in any ie."

MORE. They will.

STEEL. "Yours truly"; I've signed for 1.

MORE nods.

STEEL. [Blotting and enveloping the er] You know the servants have all en notice—except Henry.

MORE. Poor Henry!

STEEL. It's partly nerves, of course he windows have been broken twice ut it's partly——

MORE. Patriotism! Quite! they'll do next smashing themselves. That re- ds me—to-morrow you begin holi- , Steel.

STEEL. Oh, no!

MORE. My dear fellow—yes. Last at ended your sulphur cure. Truly y ever to have let you in for it.

STEEL. Someone must do the work. i're half dead as it is.

MORE. There's lots of kick in me.

STEEL. Give it up, sir. The odds are great. It isn't worth it.

MORE. To fight to a finish; knowing must be beaten—is anything better th it?

STEEL. Well, then, I'm not going.

MORE. This is my private hell, Steel; don't roast in it any longer. Be- e me, it's a great comfort to hurt no but yourself.

STEEL. I can't leave you, sir.

MORE. My dear boy, you're a brick— we've got off by a miracle so far, I can't have the responsibility of any longer. Hand me over that cor- ondence about to-morrow's meet-

STEEL takes some papers from his pocket, but does not hand them.

ORE. Come! [He stretches out his d for the papers. As STEEL still vs back he says more sharply] Give to me, Steel!

STEEL hands them over.

ORE. Now, that ends it, d'you see? They stand looking at each other; then STEEL, very much upset, turns and goes out of the room. MORE, who has watched him with a sorry smile, puts the papers into a dispatch-case. As he is closing the bureau, the footman HENRY enters, announcing: "Mr. Mendip, sir." MENDIP comes in, and the FOOTMAN withdraws. MORE turns to his visitor, but does not hold out his hand.

MENDIP. [Taking MORE'S hand] Give me credit for a little philosophy, my friend. Mrs. More told me you'd be back to-day. Have you heard?

MORE. What?

MENDIP. There's been a victory.

MORE. Thank God!

MENDIP. Ah! So you actually are flesh and blood.

MORE. Yes!

MENDIP. Take off the martyr's shirt, Stephen. You're only flouting human nature.

MORE. So—even you defend the mob!

MENDIP. My dear fellow, you're up against the strongest common instinct in the world. What do you expect? That the man in the street should be a Quixote? That his love of country should express itself in philosophic altruism? What on earth do you expect? Men are very simple creatures? and Mob is just conglomerate essence of simple men.

MORE. Conglomerate *ex*crescence. Mud of street and market-place gathered in a torrent—— This blind howling "patriotism"—what each man feels in here? [He touches his breast] No!

MENDIP. You think men go beyond instinct—they don't. All they know is that something's hurting that image of themselves that they call country. They just feel something big and religious, and go it blind.

MORE. This used to be the country of free speech. It used to be the country where a man was expected to hold to his faith.

MENDIP. There are limits to human nature, Stephen.

MORE. Let no man stand to his guns in face of popular attack. Still your advice, is it?

MENDIP. My advice is: Get out of town at once. The torrent you speak of will be let loose the moment this news is out. Come, my dear fellow, don't stay here!

MORE. Thanks! I'll see that Katherine and Olive go.

MENDIP. Go with them! If your cause is lost, that's no reason why you should be.

MORE. There's the comfort of not running away. And—I want comfort.

MENDIP. This is bad, Stephen; bad, foolish—foolish. Well! I'm going to the House. This way?

MORE. Down the steps, and through the gate. Good-bye!

KATHERINE has come in followed by NURSE, hatted and cloaked, with a small bag in her hand. KATHERINE takes from the bureau a cheque which she hands to the NURSE. MORE comes in from the terrace.

MORE. You're wise to go, Nurse.

NURSE. You've treated my poor dear badly, sir. Where's your heart?

MORE. In full use.

NURSE. On those heathens. Don't your own hearth and home come first? Your wife that was born in time of war, with her own father fighting, and her grandfather killed for his country. A bitter thing, to have the windows of her house broken, and be pointed at by the boys in the street.

MORE stands silent under this attack, looking at his wife.

KATHERINE. Nurse!

NURSE. It's unnatural, sir—what you're doing! To think more of those savages than of your own wife! Look at her! Did you ever see her look like that? Take care, sir, before it's too late!

MORE. Enough, please!

NURSE stands for a moment, doubtful; looks long at KATHERINE; then goes.

MORE. [Quietly] There has been a victory. [He goes out.

KATHERINE is breathing fast, listening to the distant hum and stir rising in the street. She runs to the window as the footman, HENRY, entering, says: "Sir John Julian, ma'am!" SIR JOHN comes in, a newspaper in his hand.

KATHERINE. At last! A victory!

SIR JOHN. Thank God!

[He hands her the paper.

KATHERINE. Oh, Dad!

[She tears the paper open, and feverishly reads.

KATHERINE. At last!

The distant hum in the street is rising steadily. But SIR JOHN after the one exultant moment when he handed her the paper stares dumbly at the floor.

KATHERINE. [Suddenly conscious of his gravity] Father!

SIR JOHN. There is other news.

KATHERINE. One of the boys? Hubert?

SIR JOHN bows his head.

KATHERINE. Killed?

SIR JOHN again bows his head.

KATHERINE. The dream! [She covers her face] Poor Helen!

They stand for a few seconds silent; then SIR JOHN raises his head and putting up a hand, touches her wet cheek.

SIR JOHN. [Huskily] Whom the gods love——

KATHERINE. Hubert!

SIR JOHN. And hulks like me go living!

KATHERINE. Dear Dad!

SIR JOHN. But we shall drive the Germans now! We shall break them. Stephen back?

KATHERINE. Last night.

SIR JOHN. Has he finished his blasphemous speech-making at last?

KATHERINE shakes her head.

SIR JOHN. Not?

Then, seeing that KATHERINE quivering with emotion, strokes her hand.

SIR JOHN. My dear! Death is many houses!

KATHERINE. I must go to Helen. Stephen, Father. I can't.

SIR JOHN. If you wish, child.

She goes out, leaving SIR JOHN his grave, puzzled grief; and a few seconds MORE comes in.

MORE. Yes, Sir John. You want me?

Sir John. Hubert is killed.
More. Hubert!
Sir John. By these—whom you up-
d. Katherine asked me to let you ow. She's gone to Helen. I under-nd you only came back last night
m your—— No word I can use uld give what I feel about that. I 't know how things stand now been you and Katherine; but I tell t this, Stephen: you've tried her these : two months beyond what any wom-ought to bear!
More makes a gesture of pain.
ir John. When you chose your rse——
More. Chose!
ir John. You placed yourself in opition to every feeling in her. You w this might come. It may come in with another of my sons——
More. I would willingly change places a any one of them.
ir John. Yes—I can believe in your appiness. I cannot conceive of great-misery than to be arrayed against r country. If I could have Hubert
, I would not have him at such a e—no, nor all my sons. Pro patria
i—— My boy, at all events, is by!
More. Yes!
ir John. Yet you can go on doing t you are! What devil of pride has into you, Stephen?
More. Do you imagine I think myself er than the humblest private fighting there? Not for a minute.
ir John. I don't understand you. I ays thought you devoted to Kath-
e.
More. Sir John, you believe that ntry comes before wife and child?
r John. I do.
More. So do I.
r John. [Bewildered] Whatever country does or leaves undone, I no e presume to judge her than I pree to judge my God. [With all the tation of the suffering he has under-for her] My country!
More. I would give all I have—for creed.
r John. [Puzzled] Stephen, I've r looked on you as a crank; I always believed you sane and honest. But this is—visionary mania.

More. Vision of what might be.

Sir John. Why can't you be content with what the grandest nation—the grandest men on earth have found good enough for them? I've known them, I've seen what they could suffer, for our country.

More. Sir John, imagine what the last two months have been to me! To see people turn away in the street—old friends pass me as if I were a wall! To dread the post! To go to bed every night with the sound of hooting in my ears! To know that my name is never referred to without contempt——

Sir John. You have your new friends. Plenty of them, I understand.

More. Does that make up for being spat at as I was last night? Your battles are fool's play to it.

The stir and rustle of the crowd in the street grows louder. Sir John turns his head towards it.

Sir John. You've heard there's been a victory. Do you carry your unnatural feeling so far as to be sorry for that?

More shakes his head.

Sir John. That's something! For God's sake, Stephen, stop before it's gone past mending. Don't ruin your life with Katherine. Hubert was her favourite brother. You are backing those who killed him. Think what that means to her! Drop this—mad Quixotism—idealism—whatever you call it. Take Katherine away. Leave the country till the thing's over—this country of yours that you're opposing, and—and—traducing. Take her away! Come! What good are you doing? What earthly good! Come, my boy! Before you're utterly undone.

More. Sir John! Our men are dying out there for the faith that's in them! I believe my faith the higher, the better for mankind—— Am I to slink away? Since I began this campaign I've found hundreds who've thanked me for taking this stand. They look on me now as their leader. Am I to desert them? When you led your forlorn hope—did you ask yourself what good you were doing, or whether you'd come through alive? It's my forlorn hope not to betray those who are following me; and not to help let die a fire—a fire that's sacred—not only now in this country, but in all countries, for all time.

SIR JOHN. [After a long stare] I give you credit for believing what you say. But let me tell you whatever that fire you talk of—I'm too old-fashioned to grasp—one fire you are letting die—your wife's love. By God! This crew of your new friends, this crew of cranks and jays, if they can make up to you for the loss of her love—of your career, of all those who used to like and respect you—so much the better for you. But if you find yourself bankrupt of affection—alone as the last man on earth; if this business ends in your utter ruin and destruction—as it must—I shall not pity—I cannot pity you! Good night!

He marches to the door, opens it, and goes out. MORE is left standing perfectly still. The stir and murmur of the street is growing all the time, and slowly forces itself on his consciousness. He goes to the bay window and looks out; then rings the bell. It is not answered, and, after turning up the lights, he rings again. KATHERINE comes in. She is wearing a black hat, and black outdoor coat. She speaks coldly without looking up.

KATHERINE. You rang!

MORE. For them to shut this room up.

KATHERINE. The servants have gone out. They're afraid of the house being set on fire.

MORE. I see.

KATHERINE. They have not your ideals to sustain them.

MORE winces.

KATHERINE. I am going with Helen and Olive to Father's.

MORE. [Trying to take in the exact sense of her words] Good! You prefer that to an hotel?

KATHERINE nods.

MORE. [Gently] Will you let me say, Kit, how terribly I feel for you—Hubert's——

KATHERINE. Don't! I ought to have made what I meant plainer. I am n coming back.

MORE. Not——? Not while the hou ——

KATHERINE. Not—at all.

MORE. Kit!

KATHERINE. I warned you from t first. You've gone too far!

MORE. [Terribly moved] Do you u derstand what this means? After t years—and all—our love!

KATHERINE. Was it love? How co you ever have loved one so unher as myself!

MORE. This is madness, Kit—Kit!

KATHERINE. Last night I was rea You couldn't. If you couldn't then, y never can. You are very exalted, Ste en. I don't like living,—I won't li with one whose equal I am not. T has been coming ever since you ma that speech. I told you that night w the end would be.

KATHERINE. No! Let's have truth! People so wide apart don't lo Let me go!

KATHERINE. Last night you used word—bargain. Quite right. I mean buy you. I meant to kill your faith. showed me what I was doing. I d like to be shown up as a driver of l gains, Stephen.

KATHERINE. Yes, that's cruel! shows the heights you live on. I w drag you down.

ORE. And drown in—that?

KATHERINE turns swiftly to the door. There she stands and again looks at him. Her face is mysterious, from the conflicting currents of her emotions.

ORE. So—you're going?

ATHERINE. [In a whisper] Yes.

She bends her head, opens the door, and goes. MORE starts forward as if to follow her, but OLIVE has appeared in the doorway. She has on a straight little white coat and a round white cap.

IVE. Aren't you coming with us, y?

MORE shakes his head.

IVE. Why not?

RE. Never mind, my dicky bird.

IVE. The motor'll have to go very There are such a lot of people in reet. Are you staying to stop them g the house on fire?

MORE nods.

IVE. May I stay a little, too?

MORE shakes his head.

IVE. Why?

VE. Oo-o!

RE. Trot, my soul!

he goes, looks back at him, turns suddenly and vanishes.

MORE follows her to the door, but stops there. Then, as full realisation begins to dawn on him, he runs to the bay window, craning his head to catch sight of the front door. There is the sound of a vehicle starting, and the continual hooting of its horn as it makes its way among the crowd. He turns from the window.

MORE. Alone as the last man on earth!

Suddenly a voice rises clear out of the hurly-burly in the street.

VOICE. There 'e is! That's 'im! More! Traitor! More!

A shower of nut-shells, orange-peel, and harmless missiles begins to rattle against the glass of the window. Many voices take up the groaning: "More! Traitor! Blackleg! More!" And through the window can be seen waving flags and lighted Chinese lanterns swinging high on long bamboos. The din of execration swells. MORE stands unheeding, still gazing after the cab. Then, with a sharp crack, a flung stone crashes through one of the panes. It is followed by a hoarse shout of laughter, and a hearty groan. A second stone crashes through the glass. MORE turns for a moment, with a contemptuous look, towards the street, and the flare of the Chinese lanterns lights up his face. Then, as if forgetting all about the din outside, he moves back into the room, looks round him, and lets his head droop. The din rises louder and louder; a third stone crashes through. MORE raises his head again, and, clasping his hands, looks straight before him. The footman, HENRY, entering, hastens to the French windows.

MORE. Ah! Henry, I thought you'd gone.

FOOTMAN. I came back, sir.

MORE. Good fellow!

FOOTMAN. They're trying to force the terrace gate, sir. They've no business coming on to private property—no matter what?

In the surging entrance of the mob the footman, HENRY, who shows fight, is overwhelmed, hustled out into the crowd on the terrace, and no more seen. The MOB is a mixed crowd of revellers of both sexes, medical students, clerks, shopmen and girls, and a boy scout or two. Many have exchanged hats—some wear masks, or false noses, some carry feathers or tin whistles. Some with bamboos and Chinese lanterns, swing them up outside on the terrace. The medley of noises is very great. Such ringleaders as exist in the confusion are a GROUP OF STUDENTS, the chief of whom, conspicuous because unadorned, is an athletic hatless young man with a projecting underjaw, and heavy coal-black moustache, who seems with the swing of his huge arms and shoulders to sway the currents of motion. When the first surge of noise and movement subsides, he calls out: "To him, boys! Chair the hero!" THE STUDENTS rush at the impassive MORE, swing him roughly on to their shoulders and bear him round the room. When they have twice circled the table to the music of their confused singing, groans and whistling, THE CHIEF OF THE STUDENTS calls out: "Put him down!" Obediently they set him down on the table which has been forced into the bay window, and stand gaping up at him.

CHIEF STUDENT. Speech! Speech!

The noise ebbs, and MORE looks round him.

CHIEF STUDENT. Now then, you, sir.

MORE. [In a quiet voice] Very well. You are here by the law that governs the action of all mobs—the law of Force. By that law, you can do what you like to this body of mine.

A VOICE. And we will, too.

MORE. I don't doubt it. But before that, I've a word to say.

A VOICE. You've always that.

ANOTHER VOICE raises a donkey's braying.

MORE. You—Mob—are the most co temptible thing under the sun. Wh you walk the street—God goes in.

CHIEF STUDENT. Be careful, you sir.

VOICES. Down him! Down with t beggar!

MORE. [Above the murmurs] My fi friends, I'm not afraid of you. You' forced your way into my house, a you've asked me to speak. Put up wi the truth for once! [His words ru out] You are the thing that pelts t weak; kicks women; howls down fr speech. This to-day, and that to-m row. Brain—you have none. Spiri not the ghost of it! If you're not mea ness, there's no such thing. If you're cowardice, there is no coward [Above the growing fierceness of hubbub] Patriotism—there are t kinds—that of our soldiers, and this mine. You have neither!

CHIEF STUDENT. [Checking a d gerous rush] Hold on! Hold [To MORE] Swear to utter no m blasphemy against your country: Sw it!

CROWD. Ah! Ay! Ah!

MORE. My country is not yours. M is that great country which shall n take toll from the weakness of otl [Above the groaning] Ah! you break my head and my windows; don't think that you can break my f You could never break or shake i you were a million to one.

A girl with dark eyes and hai wild, leaps out from the cr and shakes her fist at him.

GIRL. You're friends with them killed my lad!

MORE smiles down at her, and swiftly plucks the knife from belt of a Boy Scout beside he

GIRL. Smile, you—cur!

A violent rush and heave from hind flings MORE forward the steel. He reels, staggers and falls down amongst crowd. A scream, a sway, a hubbub of cries. The STUDENT shouts above the "Steady!" Another: "My He's got it!"

CHIEF STUDENT. Give him air!

The crowd falls back, and two STUDENTS, bending over MORE, lift his arms and head, but they fall like lead. Desperately they test him for life.

CHIEF STUDENT. By the lord, it's er!

Then begins a scared swaying out towards the window. Someone turns out the lights, and in the darkness the crowd fast melts away. The body of MORE lies in the gleam from a single Chinese lantern. Muttering the words: "Poor devil! He kept his end up anyway!" the CHIEF STUDENT picks from the floor a little abandoned Union Jack and lays it on MORE'S breast. Then he, too, turns, and rushes out.

And the body of MORE lies in the streak of light; and the noises in the street continue to rise.

e curtain falls, but rises again almost at once.

AFTERMATH

A late Spring dawn is just breaking. Against trees in leaf and blossom, with the houses of a London Square beyond, suffused by the spreading glow, is seen a dark life-size statue on a granite pedestal. In front is the broad, dust-dim pavement. The light grows till the central words around the pedestal can be clearly read:

ERECTED
To the Memory of STEPHEN MORE
"Faithful to his ideal"

High above, the face of MORE looks straight before him with a faint smile. On one shoulder, and on his bare head two sparrows have perched, and from the gardens, behind, come the twittering and singing of birds.

The curtain falls.

A BIT O' LOVE

A PLAY IN THREE ACTS

ACT I

is Ascension Day in a village of the West. In the low panelled hall sitting-room of the BURLACOMBES' farmhouse on the village green, MICHAEL STRANGWAY, a clerical collar round his throat and a dark Norfolk jacket on his back, is playing the flute before a very large framed photograph of a woman, which is the only picture on the walls. His age is about thirty-five; his figure thin and very upright and his clean-shorn face thin, upright, narrow, with long and rather pointed ears; his dark hair is brushed in a coxcomb off his forehead. A faint smile hovers about his lips which Nature has made rather full and he has made thin, as though keeping a hard secret; but his bright grey eyes, dark round the rim, look out and upwards almost as if he were being crucified. There is something about the whole of him that makes him seem not quite present. A gentle creature, burnt within.

ow, broad window above a window-seat forms the background to his figure; and through its lattice panes are seen the outer gate and yew-trees of a churchyard and the porch of a church, bathed in May sunlight. The front door, at right angles to the window-seat, leads to the village green, and a door on the left into the house.

s the third movement of Veracini's violin sonata that STRANGWAY plays. His back is turned to the door into the house, and he does not hear when it is opened, and IVY BURLACOMBE, the farmer's daughter, a girl of fourteen, small and quiet as a mouse, comes in, a prayer-book in one hand, and in the other a glass of water, with wild orchis and a bit of deep pink hawthorn. She sits down on the window-seat, and having opened her book, sniffs at the flowers. Coming to the end of the movement STRANGWAY stops, and looking up at the face on the wall, heaves a long sigh.

IVY. [From the seat] I picked these for yü, Mr. Strangway.

STRANGWAY. [Turning with a start] Ah! Ivy. Thank you. [He puts his flute down on a chair against the far wall] Where are the others?

As he speaks, GLADYS FREMAN, a dark gipsyish girl, and CONNIE TRUSTAFORD, a fair, stolid, blue-eyed Saxon, both about sixteen, come in through the front door, behind which they have evidently been listening. They too have prayer-books in their hands. They sidle past IVY, and also sit down under the window.

GLADYS. Mercy's comin', Mr. Strangway.

STRANGWAY. Good morning, Gladys; good morning, Connie.

He turns to a book-case on a table against the far wall, and taking out a book, finds his place in it. While he stands thus with his back to the girls, MERCY JARLAND comes in from the green. She also is about sixteen with fair hair and china-blue eyes. She glides in quickly, hiding something behind her, and sits down on the seat next the door. And at once there is a whispering.

STRANGWAY. [Turning to them] Good morning, Mercy.

MERCY. Good morning, Mr. Strangway.

STRANGWAY. Now, yesterday I was telling you what our Lord's coming meant to the world. I want you to understand that before He came there wasn't really love, as we know it. I don't mean to say that there weren't many good people; but there wasn't love for the sake of loving. D'you think you understand what I mean?

MERCY fidgets. GLADY'S eyes are following a fly.

IVY. Yes, Mr. Strangway.

STRANGWAY. It isn't enough to love people because they're good to you, or because in some way or other you're going to get something by it. We have to love because we love loving. That's the great thing—without that we're nothing but Pagans.

GLADYS. Please, what is Pagans?

STRANGWAY. That's what the first Christians called the people who lived in the villages and were not yet Christians, Gladys.

MERCY. We live in a village, but we're Christians.

STRANGWAY. [With a smile] Yes, Mercy; and what is a Christian?

MERCY kicks a foot sideways against her neighbour, frowns over her china-blue eyes, is silent; then, as his question passes on, makes a quick little face, wriggles, and looks behind her.

STRANGWAY. Ivy?

IVY. 'Tis a man—whü—whü——

STRANGWAY. Yes?—Connie?

CONNIE. [Who speaks rather thickly, as if she had a permanent slight cold] Please, Mr. Strangway, 'tis a man whu goes to church.

GLADYS. He 'as to be baptised—and confirmed; and—and—buried.

IVY. 'Tis a man whü—whü's güde and——

GLADYS. He don't drink, an' he don't beat his horses, an' he don't hit back.

MERCY. [Whispering] 'Tisn't your turn. [To STRANGWAY] 'Tis a man like us.

IVY. I know what Mrs. Strangway said it was, 'cause I asked her once, before she went away.

STRANGWAY. [Startled] Yes?

IVY. She said it was a man whü for gave everything.

STRANGWAY. Ah!

The note of a cuckoo comes travel ling. The girls are gazing a STRANGWAY. who seems to hav gone off into a dream. They begi to fidget and whisper.

CONNIE. Please, Mr. Strangway Father says if yü hit a man and he don hit yü back, he's no güde at all.

MERCY. When Tommy Morse would n't fight, us pinched him—he did squeal [She giggles] Made me laugh!

STRANGWAY. Did I ever tell you abou St. Francis of Assisi?

IVY. [Clasping her hands] No.

STRANGWAY. Well, he was the be Christian, I think, that ever lived—sim ply full of love and joy.

IVY. I expect he's dead.

STRANGWAY. About seven hundr years, Ivy.

IVY. [Softly] Oh!

STRANGWAY. Everything to him w brother or sister—the sun and the moo and all that was poor and weak a sad, and animals and birds, so that th even used to follow him about.

MERCY. I know. He had crumbs in h pocket.

STRANGWAY. No; he had love in h eyes.

IVY. 'Tis like about Orpheus, that told us.

STRANGWAY. Ah! But St. Fran was a Christian, and Orpheus was pagan.

IVY. Oh!

STRANGWAY. Orpheus drew everyth after him with music; St. Francis love.

IVY. Perhaps it was the same, reall

STRANGWAY. [Looking at his fi Perhaps it was, Ivy.

GLADYS. Did 'e 'ave a flute like y'

IVY. The flowers smell sweeter w they 'ear music; they dü.

[She holds up the glass of flow

STRANGWAY. [Touching one of the chis] What's the name of this one?

The girls cluster, save MERCY, is taking a stealthy interes what she has behind her.

CONNIE. We call it a cuckoo, Mr. trangway.

GLADYS. 'Tis awful common down by ie streams. We've got one medder here 'tis so thick almost as the goldie ips.

STRANGWAY. Odd! I've never noticed

IVY. Please, Mr. Strangway, yü don't otice when yü're walkin'; yü go along re this.

[She holds up her face as one looking at the sky.

STRANGWAY. Bad as that, Ivy?

IVY. Mrs. Strangway often used to ck it last spring.

STRANGWAY. Did she? Did she?

[He has gone off again into a kind of dream.

MERCY. I like being confirmed.

STRANGWAY. Ah! Yes. Now—— hat's that behind you, Mercy?

MERCY. [Engagingly producing a cage ittle bigger than a mouse-trap, coning a skylark] My skylark.

STRANGWAY. What!

MERCY. It can fly; but we're goin' to o its wings. Bobbie caught it.

STRANGWAY. How long ago?

MERCY. [Conscious of impending diser] Yesterday.

STRANGWAY. [White hot] Give me the e!

MERCY. [Puckering] I want my skyk. [As he steps up to her and takes cage—thoroughly alarmed] I gave bby thrippence for it!

STRANGWAY. [Producing a sixpence] ere!

MERCY. [Throwing it down—passionly] I want my skylark!

STRANGWAY. God made this poor bird the sky and the grass. And you put n that! Never cage any wild thing! ver!

MERCY. [Faint and sullen] I want my lark.

STRANGWAY. [Taking the cage to the r] No! [He holds up the cage and ns it] Off you go, poor thing!

The bird flies out and away.

The girls watch with round eyes the fling up of his arm, and the freed bird flying away.

VY. I'm glad!

MERCY kicks her viciously and sobs.

STRANGWAY comes from the door, looks at MERCY sobbing, and suddenly clasps his head. The girls watch him with a queer mixture of wonder, alarm, and disapproval.

GLADYS. [Whispering] Don't cry, Mercy. Bobbie'll soon catch yü another.

STRANGWAY has dropped his hands, and is looking again at MERCY. IVY sits with hands clasped, gazing at STRANGWAY. MERCY continues her artificial sobbing.

STRANGWAY. [Quietly] The class is over for to-day.

He goes up to MERCY, and holds out his hand. She does not take it, and runs out knuckling her eyes. STRANGWAY turns on his heel and goes into the house.

CONNIE. 'Twasn't his bird.

IVY. Skylarks belong to the sky. Mr Strangway said so.

GLADYS. Not when they'm caught, they don't.

IVY. They dü.

CONNIE. 'Twas her bird.

IVY. He gave her sixpence for it.

GLADYS. She didn't take it.

CONNIE. There it is on the ground.

IVY. She might have.

GLADYS. He'll p'raps take my squirrel, tü.

IVY. The bird sang—I 'eard it! Right up in the sky. It wouldn't have sanged if it weren't glad.

GLADYS. Well, Mercy cried.

IVY. I don't care.

GLADYS. 'Tis a shame! And I know something. Mrs. Strangway's at Durford.

CONNIE. She's—never!

GLADYS. I saw her yesterday. An' if she's there she ought to be here. I told Mother, an' she said: "Yü mind yer business." An' when she goes in to market to-morrow she'm goin' to see. An' if she's really there, Mother says, 'tis a fine tü-dü an' a praaper scandal. So I know a lot more'n yü dü.

IVY stares at her.

CONNIE. Mrs. Strangway told Mother she was goin' to France for the winter because her mother was ill.

GLADYS. 'Tisn't winter now—Ascension Day. I saw her comin' out o' Dr. Desart's house. I know 'twas her because she had on a blue dress an' a proud liike. Mother says the doctor come over here tü often before Mrs. Strangway went away, just afore Christmas. They was old sweethearts before she married Mr. Strangway. [To IVY] 'Twas yüre mother told Mother that.

IVY gazes at them more and more wide-eyed.

CONNIE. Father says if Mrs. Bradmere an' the old Rector knew about the doctor, they wouldn't 'ave Mr. Strangway 'ere for curate any longer; because Mother says it takes more'n a year for a güde wife to leave her 'usband, an' 'e so fond of her. But 'tisn't no business of ours, Father says.

GLADYS. Mother says so tü. She's praaper set against gossip. She'll know all about it to-morrow after market.

IVY. [Stamping her foot] I don't want to 'ear nothin' at all; I don't, an' I won't.

A rather shame-faced silence falls on the girls.

GLADYS. [In a quick whisper] 'Ere's Mrs. Burlacombe.

There enters from the house a stout motherly woman with a round grey eye and very red cheeks.

MRS. BURLACOMBE. Ivy, take Mr. Strangway his ink, or we'll never 'ave no sermon to-night. He'm in his thinkin' box, but 'tis not a bit o' yüse 'im thinkin' without 'is ink. [She hands her daughter an inkpot and blotting-pad. IVY takes them and goes out] Whatever's this?

[She picks up the little bird-cage.

GLADYS. 'Tis Mercy Jarland's. Mr. Strangway let her skylark go.

MRS. BURLACOMBE. Aw! Did 'e now? Serve 'er right, bringin' an 'eathen bird to confirmation class.

CONNIE. I'll take take it to her.

MRS. BURLACOMBE. No. Yü leave it there, an' let Mr. Strangway dü what 'e likes with it. Bringin' a bird like that! Well, I never!

The girls, perceiving that they have lighted on stony soil, look at each other and slide towards the door.

MRS. BURLACOMBE. Yes, yü just be off, an' think on what yü've been told in class, an' be'ave like Christians, that güde maids. An' don't yü come nó mor in the 'avenin's dancin' them 'eathe dances in my barn, naighther, till afte yü'm confirmed—'tisn't right. I've tol Ivy I won't 'ave it.

CONNIE. Mr. Strangway don't mind—he likes us to; 'twas Mrs. Strangwa began teachin' us. He's goin' to give prize.

MRS. BURLACOMBE. Yü just dü what tell yü an' never mind Mr. Strangway—he'm tü kind to everyone. D'yü thin I don't know how gells oughter be'av before confirmation? Yü be'ave like did! Now, goo ahn! Shoo!

She hustles them out, rather as sh might hustle her chickens, and be gins tidying the room. Ther comes a wandering figure to th open window. It is that of a ma of about thirty-five, of feeble ga leaning the weight of all one sid of him on a stick. His dark fac with black hair, one lock of whi has gone white, was evidently on that of an ardent man. Now it slack, weakly smiling, and t brown eyes are lost, and seem q ways to be asking something which there is no answer.

MRS. BURLACOMBE. [With that forc cheerfulness always assumed in the fa of too great misfortune] Well, Jim! b ter? [At the faint brightening of t smile] That's right! Yü'm gettin' bravely. Want Parson?

JIM. [Nodding and smiling, and spea ing slowly] I want to tell 'un about cat. [His face loses its sm

MRS. BURLACOMBE. Why! what's been düin' then? Mr. Strangway's bu Won't I dü?

JIM. [Shaking his head] No. I want tell him.

MRS. BURLACOMBE. Whatever she b düin'? Havin' kittens?

JIM. No. She'm lost.

MRS. BURLACOMBE. Dearie me! A she'm not lost. Cats be like maids; t must get out a bit.

JIM. She'm lost. Maybe he'll k where she'll be.

MRS. BURLACOMBE. Well, well. I'll an' find 'im.

JIM. He'm a güde man. He'm very de.

MRS. BURLACOMBE. That's certain re.

STRANGWAY. [Entering from the use] Mrs. Burlacombe, I can't think iere I've put my book on St. Francis the large, squarish pale blue one?

MRS. BURLACOMBE. Aw! there now! mü there was somethin' on me mind. iss Willis she came in yesterday arter-ne when yü was out, to borrow it. Oh! s—I said—I'm zure Mr. Strangway'll d it 'ee. Now think o' that!

STRANGWAY. Of course, Mrs. Burla-nbe; very glad she's got it.

MRS. BURLACOMBE. Aw! but that's not When I tuk it up there come out a ole flutter o' little bits o' paper wi' le rhymes on 'em, same as I see yü itin'. Aw! my güdeness! I say to me-f, Mr. Strangway widn' want no one in' them.

STRANGWAY. Dear me! No! certainly !

MRS. BURLACOMBE. An' so I putt 'em your secretary.

STRANGWAY. My—ah! Yes. Thank ı; yes.

MRS. BURLACOMBE. But I'll goo over get the büke for yü. 'Twon't take me a minit.

[She goes out on to the green. JIM BERE has come in.

STRANGWAY. [Gently] Well, Jim?

JIM. My cat's lost.

STRANGWAY. Lost?

JIM. Day before yesterday. She'm not ıe back. They've shot 'er, I think; or 'm caught in one o' they rabbit-traps.

STRANGWAY. Oh! no; my dear fellow, 'll come back. I'll speak to Sir Her-t's keepers.

JIM. Yes, zurr. I feel lonesome with-'er.

STRANGWAY. [With a faint smile—e to himself than to JIM] Lonesome! ! That's bad, Jim! That's bad!

JIM. I miss 'er when I sits thar in the nin'.

STRANGWAY. The evenings—— They-the worst—and when the blackbirds g in the morning.

JIM. She used to lie on my bed, ye w, zurr.

STRANGWAY turns his face away, contracted with pain.

JIM. She'm like a Christian.

STRANGWAY. The beasts are.

JIM. There's plenty folk ain't 'alf as Christian as 'er be.

STRANGWAY. Well, Jim, I'll do my very best. And any time you're lonely, come up, and I'll play the flute to you.

JIM. [Wriggling slightly] No, zurr. Thank 'ee, zurr.

STRANGWAY. What—don't you like music?

JIM. Ye-es, zurr. [A figure passes the window. Seeing it he says with his slow smile:] 'Ere's Mrs. Bradmere, comin' from the Rectory. [With queer malice] She don't like cats. But she'm a cat 'erself, I think.

STRANGWAY. [With his smile] Jim!

JIM. She'm always tellin' me I'm lük-in' better. I'm not better, zurr.

STRANGWAY. That's her kindness.

JIM. I don't think it is. 'Tis laziness, an' 'avin' 'er own way. She'm very fond of 'er own way.

A knock on the door cuts off his speech. Following closely on the knock, as though no doors were licensed to be closed against her, a grey-haired lady enters; a capable, brown-faced woman of seventy, whose every tone and movement exhale authority. With a nod and a "good morning" to STRANGWAY she turns at once to JIM BERE.

MRS. BRADMERE. Ah! Jim! you're looking better.

JIM BERE shakes his head.

MRS. BRADMERE. Oh! yes, you are. Getting on splendidly. And now, I just want to speak to Mr. Strangway.

JIM BERE touches his forelock, and slowly, leaning on his stick, goes out.

MRS. BRADMERE. [Waiting for the door to close] You know how that came on him? Caught the girl he was engaged to, one night, with another man, the rage broke something in here. [She touches her forehead] Four years ago.

STRANGWAY. Poor fellow!

MRS. BRADMERE. [Looking at him sharply] Is your wife back?

STRANGWAY. [Starting] No.

MRS. BRADMERE. By the way, poor Mrs. Cremer—is she any better?

STRANGWAY. No; going fast. Wonderful—so patient.

MRS. BRADMERE. [With gruff sympathy] Um! Yes. They know how to die! [With another sharp look at him] D'you expect your wife soon?

STRANGWAY. I—I—hope so.

MRS. BRADMERE. So do I. The sooner the better.

STRANGWAY. [Shrinking] I trust the Rector's not suffering so much this morning?

MRS. BRADMERE. Thank you! His foot's very bad.

As she speaks MRS. BURLACOMBE returns with a large pale-blue book in her hand.

MRS. BURLACOMBE. Good day, m'm! [Taking the book across to STRANGWAY] Miss Willis, she says she'm very sorry, zurr.

STRANGWAY. She was very welcome, Mrs. Burlacombe. [To MRS. BRADMERE] Forgive me—my sermon.

[He goes into the house. The two women gaze after him. Then, at once, as it were, draw into themselves, as if preparing for an encounter, and yet seem to expand as if losing the need for restraint.

MRS. BRADMERE. [Abruptly] He misses his wife very much, I'm afraid.

MRS. BURLACOMBE. Ah! Don't he? Poor dear man; he keeps a terrible tight 'and over 'imself, but 'tis suthin' cruel the way he walks about at night. He'm just like the cow when its calf's weaned. 'T'as gone to me 'eart truly to see 'im these months past. T'other day when I went up to dü his rüme, I yeard a noise like this [she sniffs]; an' ther' 'e was at the wardrobe, snuffin' at 'er things. I did never think a man cud care for a woman so much as that.

MRS. BRADMERE. H'm!

MRS. BURLACOMBE. 'Tis funny rest—an' 'e comin' 'ere for quiet after that tearin' great London parish! 'E'm terrible absent-minded tü—don't take no interest in 'is füde. Yesterday, goin' on for one o'clock, 'e says to me, "I expect 'tis nearly breakfast-time, Mrs. Burlacombe!" 'E'd 'ad it twice already!

MRS. BRADMERE. Twice! Nonsense!

MRS. BURLACOMBE. Zurely! I give 'i a nummit afore 'e gets up; an' 'e 'as 'i brekjus reg'lar at nine. Must feed u up. He'm on 'is feet all day, goin' t zee folk that widden want to zee a angel, they'm that busy; an' when comes in 'e'll play 'is flüte there. He' wastin' away for want of 'is wife. That what 'tis. An' 'im so sweet-spoken, t 'tes a pleasure to year 'im—— Neve says a word!

MRS. BRADMERE. Yes, that's the kin of man who gets treated badly. I'm afraid she's not worthy of him, Mr Burlacombe.

MRS. BURLACOMBE. [Plaiting he apron] 'Tesn't for me to zay that. She' a very pleasant lady.

MRS. BRADMERE. Too pleasant. What this story about her being seen in Du ford?

MRS. BURLACOMBE. Aw! I dü nev year no gossip, m'm.

MRS. BRADMERE. [Drily] Of cour not! But you see the Rector wishes know.

MRS. BURLACOMBE. [Flustered] W —folk will talk! But, as I says to Burl combe— " Tes paltry," I says; and th only married eighteen months, and M Strangway so devoted-like. 'Tes nothi but love, with 'im.

MRS. BRADMERE. Come!

MRS. BURLACOMBE. There's puzziva tin' folk as'll set an' gossip the feathe off of an angel. But I dü never listen.

MRS. BRADMERE. Now then, Mrs. Bu lacombe?

MRS. BURLACOMBE. Well, they dü s as how Dr. Desart over to Durford a Mrs. Strangway was sweethearts af she wer' married.

MRS. BRADMERE. I knew that. W was it saw her coming out of Dr. D art's house yesterday?

MRS. BURLACOMBE. In a manner spakin' 'tes Mrs. Freman that says Gladys seen her.

MRS. BRADMERE. That child's got eye like a hawk.

MRS. BURLACOMBE. 'Tes wonde how things dü spread. 'Tesn't as if Mrs. Bradmere. Old puss-cat!

She turns to go, and in the doorway encounters a very little, red-cheeked girl in a peacock-blue cap, and pink frock, who curtsies stolidly.

Mrs. Bradmere. Well, Tibby Jarland, what do you want here? Always sucking something, aren't you?

Getting no reply from Tibby Jarland, she passes out. Tibby comes in, looks round, takes a large sweet out of her mouth, contemplates it, and puts it back again. Then, in a perfunctory and very stolid fashion, she looks about the floor, as if she had been told to find something. While she is finding nothing and sucking her sweet, her sister Mercy comes in furtively, still frowning and vindictive.

Mercy. What! Haven't you found it, Tibby! Get along with 'ee, then!

She accelerates the stolid Tibby's departure with a smack, searches under the seat, finds and picks up the deserted sixpence. Then very quickly she goes to the door. But it is opened before she reaches it, and, finding herself caught, she slips behind the chintz window-curtain. A woman has entered, who is clearly the original of the large photograph. She is not strictly pretty, but there is charm in her pale, resolute face, with its mocking lips, flexible brows, and greenish eyes, whose lids, square above them, have short, dark lashes. She is dressed in blue, and her fair hair is coiled up under a cap and motor-veil. She comes in swiftly, and closes the door behind her; becomes irresolute; then, suddenly deciding, moves towards the door into the house. Mercy slips from behind her curtain to make off, but at that moment the door into the house is opened, and she has at once to slip back again into covert. It is Ivy who has appeared.

Ivy. [Amazed] Oh! Mrs. Strangway!

Evidently disconcerted by this appearance, Beatrice Strangway pulls herself together and confronts the child with a smile.

BEATRICE. Why, Ivy—you've grown! You didn't expect me, did you?

IVY. No, Mrs. Strangway; but I hoped yü'd be comin' soon.

BEATRICE. Ah! Yes. Is Mr. Strangway in?

IVY. [Hypnotised by those faintly smiling lips] Yes—oh, yes! He's writin' his sermon in the little room. He will be glad!

BEATRICE. [Going a little closer, and never taking her eyes off the child] Yes. Now, Ivy, will you do something for me?

IVY. [Fluttering] Oh, yes, Mrs. Strangway.

BEATRICE. Quite sure?

IVY. Oh, yes!

BEATRICE. Are you old enough to keep a secret?

IVY. [Nodding] I'm fourteen now.

BEATRICE. Well, then—I don't want anybody but Mr. Strangway to know I've been here; nobody, not even your mother. D'you understand?

IVY. [Troubled] No. Only, I can keep a secret.

BEATRICE. Mind, if anybody hears, it will hurt—Mr. Strangway.

IVY. Oh! I wouldn't—hurt—him. Must yü go away again? [Trembling towards her] I wish yü were goin' to stay. And perhaps someone has seen yü—— They——

BEATRICE. [Hastily] No, no one. I came motoring; like this. [She moves her veil to show how it can conceal her face] And I came straight down the little lane, and through the barn, across the yard.

IVY. [Timidly] People dü see a lot.

BEATRICE. [Still with that hovering smile] I know, but—— Now go and tell him quickly and quietly.

IVY. [Stopping at the door] Mother's pluckin' a duck. Only, please, Mrs. Strangway, if she comes in even after yü've gone, she'll know, because—because yü always have that particular nice scent.

BEATRICE. Thank you, my child. I'll see to that.

IVY looks at her as if she would speak again, then turns suddenly, and goes out. BEATRICE'S face darkens; she shivers. Taking o a little cigarette case, she ligh a cigarette, and watches the pu of smoke wreathe about her a die away. The frightened MERC peers out, spying for a chance escape. Then from the hou STRANGWAY comes in. All h dreaminess is gone.

STRANGWAY. Thank God! [He sto at the look on her face] I don't unde stand, though. I thought you were st out there.

BEATRICE. [Letting her cigarette fa and putting her foot on it] No.

STRANGWAY. You're staying? O Beatrice; come! We'll get away fro here at once—as far, as far—anywhe you like. Oh! my darling—only com If you knew——

BEATRICE. It's no good, Michael; I tried and tried.

STRANGWAY. Not! Then, why—— Beatrice! You said, when you were rig away—I've waited—— BEATRICE. I know. It's cruel—it's h rible. But I told you not to hope, M chael. I've done my best. All th months at Mentone, I've been wond ing why I ever let you marry m when that feeling wasn't dead!

STRANGWAY. You can't have co back just to leave me again?

BEATRICE. When you let me go there with Mother I thought—I think I would be able! and I had gun—and then—spring came!

STRANGWAY. Spring came here t Never so—aching! Beatrice, can't yo

BEATRICE. I've something to say.

STRANGWAY. No! No! No!

BEATRICE. You see—I've—fallen.

STRANGWAY. Ah! [In a voice sh ened by pain] Why, in the name mercy, come here to tell me that? W he out there, then?

[She shakes her h

BEATRICE. I came straight back him.

STRANGWAY. To Durford?

BEATRICE. To the Crossway H miles out—in my own name. They d know me there. I told you not to h Michael. I've done my best; I swea

STRANGWAY. My God!

Beatrice. It was your God that ught us to live near him!

Strangway. Why have you come to like this?

Beatrice. To know what you're going do. Are you going to divorce me? 're in your power. Don't divorce —— Doctor and patient—you must ow—it ruins him. He'll lose everyng. He'll be disqualified, and he hasn't enny without his work.

Strangway. Why should I spare him?

Beatrice. Michael, I came to beg. It's d.

Strangway. No; don't beg! I can't nd it.

Beatrice. [Recovering her pride] nat are you going to do, then? Keep apart by the threat of a divorce? rve us and prison us? Cage me up e with you? I'm not brute enough to n him.

Strangway. Heaven!

Beatrice. I never really stopped lov- him. I never loved you, Michael.

Strangway. [Stunned] Is that true?

Beatrice bends her head.

Strangway. Never loved me? Not— t night—on the river—not——?

Beatrice. [Under her breath] No.

Strangway. Were you lying to me, n? Kissing me, and—hating me?

Beatrice. One doesn't hate men like ; but it wasn't love.

Strangway. Why did you tell me it s?

Beatrice. Yes. That was the worst ng I've ever done.

Strangway. Do you think I would ve married you? I would have burned t! I never dreamed you didn't. I ear it!

Beatrice. [Very low] Forget it!

Strangway. Did he try to get you ay from me?

Beatrice gives him a swift look.

Strangway. Tell me the truth!

Beatrice. No. It was—I—alone. But e loves me.

Strangway. One does not easily ow love, it seems.

But her smile, faint, mysterious, pitying, is enough, and he turns away from her.

Beatrice. It was cruel to come, I know. For me, too. But I couldn't write. I had to know.

Strangway. Never loved me? Never loved me? That night at Tregaron? [At the look on her face] You might have told me before you went away! Why keep me all these——

Beatrice. I meant to forget him again. I did mean to. I thought I could get back to what I was, when I married you; but, you see, what a girl can do, a woman that's been married—can't.

Strangway. Then it was I—my kisses that——! [He laughs] How did you stand them? [His eyes dart at her face] Imagination helped you, perhaps!

Beatrice. Michael, don't, don't! And —oh! don't make a public thing of it! You needn't be afraid I shall have too good a time!

He stays quite still and silent, and that which is writhing in him makes his face so strange that Beatrice stands aghast. At last she goes stumbling on in speech.

Beatrice. If ever you want to marry someone else—then, of course—that's only fair, ruin or not. But till then—till then—— He's leaving Durford, going to Brighton. No one need know. And you—this isn't the only parish in the world.

Strangway. [Quietly] You ask me to help you live in secret with another man?

Beatrice. I ask for mercy.

Strangway. [As to himself] What am I to do?

Beatrice. What you feel in the bottom of your heart.

Strangway. You ask me to help you live in sin?

Beatrice. To let me go out of your life. You've only to do—nothing.

He goes, slowly, close to her.

Strangway. I want you. Come back to me! Beatrice, come back!

Beatrice. It would be torture, now.

Strangway. [Writhing] Oh!

Beatrice. Whatever's in your heart—do!

Strangway. You'd come back to me sooner than ruin him. Would you?

Beatrice. I can't bring him harm.

Strangway. [Turning away] God!—

if there be one—help me! [He stands leaning his forehead against the window. Suddenly his glance falls on the little bird-cage, still lying on the window-seat] Never cage any wild thing! [He gives a laugh that is half a sob; then, turning to the door, says in a low voice] Go! Go please, quickly! Do what you will. I won't hurt you—can't—— But—go! [He opens the door.

BEATRICE. [Greatly moved] Thank you!

She passes him with her head down, and goes out quickly. STRANGWAY stands unconsciously tearing at the little bird-cage. And while he tears at it he utters a moaning sound. The terrified MERCY, peering from behind the curtain, and watching her chance, slips to the still open door; but in her haste and fright she knocks against it, and STRANGWAY sees her. Before he can stop her she has fled out on to the green and away.

While he stands there, paralysed, the door from the house is opened, and MRS. BURLACOMBE approaches him in a queer, hushed way.

MRS. BURLACOMBE. [Her eyes mechanically fixed on the twisted bird-cage in his hands] 'Tis poor Sue Cremer, zurr, I didn't 'ardly think she'd last thrü the mornin'. An' zure enough she'm passed away. [Seeing that he has not taken in her words] Mr. Strangway—yü'm feelin' giddy?

STRANGWAY. No, no! What was it? You said——

MRS. BURLACOMBE. 'Tes Jack Cremer. His wife's gone. 'E'm in a terrible way. 'Tes only yü 'e ses, can dü 'im any güde. He'm in the kitchen.

STRANGWAY. Cremer? Yes! Of course! Let him——

MRS. BURLACOMBE. [Still staring at the twisted cage] Yü ain't wantin' that—'tes all twizzled. [She takes it from him] Sure yü'm not feelin' yer 'ead?

STRANGWAY. [With a resolute effort] No!

MRS. BURLACOMBE. [Doubtfully] I'll send 'im in, then. [She goes.

When she is gone, STRANGWAY passes his handkerchief across his forehead, and his lips move fa He is standing motionless wh

CREMER, a big man in labourer clothes, with a thick, broad fa and tragic, faithful eyes, com in, and stands a little in from t closed door, quite dumb.

STRANGWAY. [After a moment's s lence—going up to him and laying a ha on his shoulder] Jack! Don't give wa If we give way—we're done.

CREMER. Yes, zurr.

A quiver passes over his face.

STRANGWAY. She didn't. Your wi was a brave woman. A dear woman.

CREMER. I never thought to lüse 'e She never told me 'ow bad she wa afore she tuk to 'er bed. 'Tis a dread thing to lüse a wife, zurr.

STRANGWAY. [Tightening his lips, th tremble] Yes. But don't give way! Be up, Jack!

CREMER. Seems funny 'er goin' blu bell time, an' the sun shinin' so war I picked up an 'orse shü yesterday. can't never 'ave 'er back, zurr.

[His face quivers aga

STRANGWAY. Some day you'll jo her. Think! Some lose their wives f ever.

CREMER. I don't believe as there's future life, zurr. I think we goo to sle like the beasts.

STRANGWAY. We're told otherwi But come here! [Drawing him to t window] Look! Listen! To sleep that! Even if we do, it won't be so b Jack, will it?

CREMER. She wer' a güde wife to —no man cüdn't 'ave no better wife.

STRANGWAY. [Putting his hand o Take hold—hard—harder. I want yo as much as you want mine. Pray for Jack, and I'll pray for you. And won't give way, will we?

CREMER. [To whom the strangen of these words has given some reli No, zurr; thank 'ee, zurr. 'Tes no gu I expect. Only, I'll miss 'er. Thank zurr; kindly.

He lifts his hand to his head, tu and uncertainly goes out to kitchen. And STRANGWAY st where he is, not knowing wha do. Then blindly he takes up flute, and hatless, hurries out into the air.

Curtain.

ACT II

SCENE I

bout seven o'clock in the taproom of the village inn. The bar, with the appurtenances thereof, stretches across one end, and, opposite, is the porch door on to the green. The wall between is nearly all window, with leaded panes, one wide-open casement whereof lets in the last of the sunlight. A narrow bench runs under this broad window. And this is all the furniture, save three spittoons.

DLEIGH, the innkeeper, a smallish man with thick ruffled hair, a loquacious nose, and apple-red cheeks above a reddish-brown moustache, is reading the paper. To him enters TIBBY JARLAND with a shilling in her mouth.

GODLEIGH. Well, Tibby Jarland, what-yü come for, then? Glass o' beer?

TIBBY takes the shilling from her mouth and smiles stolidly.

GODLEIGH. [Twinkling] I shid zay ss o' 'arf an' 'arf's about yüre form.

TIBBY smiles more broadly.

GODLEIGH. Yü'm a praaper master-ce. Well! 'Ave sister Mercy borrowed e tongue?

TIBBY shakes her head.

GODLEIGH. Aw, she 'aven't. Well, id?

TIBBY. Father wants six clay pipes, ase.

GODLEIGH. 'E dü, dü 'ee? Yü tell yüre ner 'e can't 'ave more'n one, not this nin'. And 'ere 'tis. Hand up yüre lin'.

TIBBY reaches up her hand, parts with the shilling, and receives a long clay pipe and eleven pennies. In order to secure the coins in her pinafore she places the clay pipe in her mouth. While she is still thus engaged, MRS. BRADMERE enters the porch and comes in. TIBBY curtsies stolidly.

MRS. BRADMERE. Gracious, child! What are you doing here? And what have you got in your mouth? Who is it? Tibby Jarland?

TIBBY curtsies again.

MRS. BRADMERE. Take that thing out. And tell your father from me that if I ever see you at the inn again I shall tread on his toes hard. Godleigh, you know the law about children?

GODLEIGH. [Cocking his eye, and not at all abashed] Surely, m'm. But she will come. Go away, my dear.

TIBBY, never taking her eyes off MRS. BRADMERE, or the pipe from her mouth, has backed stolidly to the door, and vanished.

MRS. BRADMERE. [Eyeing GODLEIGH] Now, Godleigh, I've come to talk to you. Half the scandal that goes about the village begins here. [She holds up her finger to check expostulation] No, no—it's no good. You know the value of scandal to your business far too well.

GODLEIGH. Wi' all respect, m'm, I knows the value of it to yourn, tü.

MRS. BRADMERE. What do you mean by that?

GODLEIGH. If there weren't no Rector's lady there widden' be no notice taken o' scandal; an' if there weren't no notice taken, 'twidden' be scandal, to my thinkin'.

MRS. BRADMERE. [Winking out a grim little smile] Very well! You've given me your views. Now for mine. There's a piece of scandal going about that's got to be stopped, Godleigh. You turn the tap of it off here, or we'll turn your tap off. You know me. See?

GODLEIGH. I shouldn' never presume, m'm, to know a lady.

MRS. BRADMERE. The Rector's quite determined, so is Sir Herbert. Ordinary scandal's bad enough, but this touches the Church. While Mr. Strangway remains curate here, there must be no talk about him and his affairs.

GODLEIGH. [Cocking his eye] I was just thinkin' how to dü it, m'm. 'Twid be a brave notion to putt the men in chokey, and slit the women's tongues-like, same as they dü in outlandish places, as I'm told.

MRS. BRADMERE. Don't talk nonsense,

Godleigh; and mind what I say, because I mean it.

GODLEIGH. Make yüre mind aisy, m'm—there'll be no scandal-monkeyin' here wi' my permission.

MRS. BRADMERE gives him a keen stare, but seeing him perfectly grave, nods her head with approval.

MRS. BRADMERE. Good! You know what's being said, of course?

GODLEIGH. [With respectful gravity] Yü'll pardon me, m'm, but ef an' in case yü was goin' to tell me, there's a rüle in this 'ouse: "No scandal 'ere!"

MRS. BRADMERE. [Twinkling grimly] You're too smart by half, my man.

GODLEIGH. Aw fegs, no, m'm—child in yüre 'ands.

MRS. BRADMERE. I wouldn't trust you a yard. Once more, Godleigh! This is a Christian village, and we mean it to remain so. You look out for yourself.

The door opens to admit the farmers TRUSTAFORD and BURLACOMBE. They doff their hats to MRS. BRADMERE, who, after one more sharp look at GODLEIGH, moves towards the door.

MRS. BRADMERE. Evening, Mr. Trustaford. [To BURLACOMBE] Burlacombe, tell your wife that duck she sent up was in hard training.

With one of her grim winks, and a nod, she goes.

TRUSTAFORD. [Replacing a hat which is black, hard, and not very new, on his long head, above a long face, clean-shaved but for little whiskers] What's the old grey mare want, then? [With a horse laugh] 'Er's lükin' awful wise!

GODLEIGH. [Enigmatically] Ah!

TRUSTAFORD. [Sitting on the bench close to the bar] Drop o' whisky, an' potash.

BURLACOMBE. [A taciturn, slim, yellowish man, in a worn soft hat] What's nüse, Godleigh? Drop o' cider.

GODLEIGH. Nüse? There's never no nüse in this 'ouse. Aw, no! Not wi' my permission. [In imitation] This is a Christian village.

TRUSTAFORD. Thought the old grey mare seemed mighty busy. [To BURLACOMBE] 'Tes rather quare about the curate's wife a-comin' motorin' this mornin'. Passed me wi' her face all smothered up in a veil, goggles an' all. Haw, haw!

BURLACOMBE. Aye!

TRUSTAFORD. Off again she was in 'alf an hour. 'Er didn't give poor old curate much of a chance, after six months.

GODLEIGH. Havin' an engagement elsewhere—— No scandal, please, gentlemen.

BURLACOMBE. [Acidly] Never asked to see my missis. Passed me in the yard like a stone.

TRUSTAFORD. 'Tes a little bit rümour some lately about 'er doctor.

GODLEIGH. Ah! he's the favourite. But 'tes a dead secret, Mr. Trustaford. Don't yü never repate it—there's not a ca don't know it already!

BURLACOMBE frowns, and TRUSTAFORD utters his laugh. The door is opened and FREMAN, a dark gipsyish man in the dress of a farmer comes in.

GODLEIGH. Don't yü never tell Wi Freman what 'e told me!

FREMAN. Avenin'!

TRUSTAFORD. Avenin', Will; what yüre glass o' trouble?

FREMAN. Drop o' cider, clove, a dash o' gin. There's blood in the sky t night.

BURLACOMBE. Ah! We'll 'ave fi weather now, with the full o' t müne.

FREMAN. Dust o' wind an' a drop tü, virst, I reckon. 'Eard t' nüse abo curate an' 'is wife?

GODLEIGH. No, indeed; an' don't tell us. We'm Christians 'ere in this v lage.

FREMAN. 'Tain't no very Christi nüse, neither. He's sent 'er off to doctor. "Go an' live with un," 'e say "my blessin' on ye." If 'er'd a-been mi I'd 'a tuk the whip to 'er. Tam J land's maid, she yeard it all. Christi indeed! That's brave Christianity! "G an' live with un!" 'e told 'er.

BURLACOMBE. No, no; that's not se —a man to say that. I'll not 'ear t against a man that bides in my 'ouse.

FREMAN. 'Tes sure, I tell 'ee. T maid was hid-up, scared-like, behind rtain. At it they went, and parson 'e ys: "Go," 'e says, "I won't kape 'ee om 'im," 'e says, "an' I won't divorce , as yü don't wish it!" They was 'is rds, same as Jarland's maid told my iid, an' my maid told my missis. If it's parson's talk, 'tes funny work go- to church.

TRUSTAFORD. [Brooding] 'Tes won- ful quare, zurely.

FREMAN. Tam Jarland's fair mad wi' ate for makin' free wi' his maid's lark. Parson or no parson, 'e've no l to meddle wi' other people's prap- y. He cam' pokin' 'is nose into my airs. I told un I knew a sight more ut 'orses than 'e ever would!

TRUSTAFORD. He'm a bit crazy 'bout tes an' birds.

They have been so absorbed that they have not noticed the entrance of CLYST, a youth with tousled hair, and a bright, quick, Celtic eye, who stands listening, with a bit of paper in his hand.

LYST. Ah! he'm that zurely, Mr. staford. [He chuckles.

ODLEIGH. Now, Tim Clyst, if an' in yü've a-got some scandal on yer gue, don't yü never unship it here. go up to Rectory where 'twill be e relished-like.

LYST. [Waving the paper] Will y' me a drink for thic, Mr. Godleigh? rale funny. Aw! 'tes somethin' te. Bütiful readin'. Poetry. Rale e. Yü've a luv'ly voice for readin', Godleigh.

ODLEIGH. [All ears and twinkle] Aw, t is it then?

LYST. Ah! Yü want t'know tü much. [Putting the paper in his pocket. While he is speaking, JIM BERE has entered quietly, with his feeble step and smile, and sits down.

YST. [Kindly] Hallo, Jim! Cat 'ome?

M BERE. No.

All nod, and speak to him kindly. And JIM BERE smiles at them, and his eyes ask of them the question, to which there is no answer. And after that he sits motionless and silent, and they talk as if he were not there.

GODLEIGH. What's all this, now—no scandal in my 'ouse!

CLYST. 'Tes awful peculiar—like a drame. Mr. Burlacombe 'e don't like to hear tell about drames. A guess a won't tell 'ee, arter that.

FREMAN. Out wi' it, Tim.

CLYST. 'Tes powerful thirsty to-day, Mr. Godleigh.

GODLEIGH. [Drawing him some cider] Yü're all wild cat's talk, Tim; yü've a-got no tale at all.

CLYST. [Moving for the cider] Aw, in- dade!

GODLEIGH. No tale, no cider!

CLYST. Did ye ever year tell of Or- phus?

TRUSTAFORD. What? The old vet.: up to Drayleigh?

CLYST. Fegs, no; Orphus that lived in th' old time, an' drawed the bastes after un wi' his music, same as curate was tellin' the maids.

FREMAN. I've 'eard as a gipsy over to Yellacott could dü that wi' 'is viddle.

CLYST. 'Twas no gipsy I see'd this arternüne; 'twas Orphus, down to Mr. Burlacombe's long medder; settin' there all dark on a stone among the dimsy- white flowers an' the cowflops, wi' a bird upon 'is 'ead, playin' his whistle to the ponies.

FREMAN. [Excitedly] Yü did never zee a man wi' a bird on 'is 'ead.

CLYST. Didn' I?

FREMAN. What sort o' bird, then? Yü tell me that.

TRUSTAFORD. Praaper old barndoor cock. Haw, haw!

GODLEIGH. [Soothingly] 'Tes a vairy- tale; us mustn't be tü partic'lar.

BURLACOMBE. In my long medder? Where were yü, then, Tim Clyst?

CLYST. Passin' down the lane on my bike. Wonderful sorrowful-fine music 'e played. The ponies they did come round 'e—yü cud zee the tears runnin' down their chakes; 'twas powerful sad. 'E 'adn't no 'at on.

FREMAN. [Jeering] No; 'e 'ad a bird on 'is 'ead.

CLYST. [With a silencing grin] He went on playin' an' playin'. The ponies they never müved. An' all the dimsy- white flowers they waved and waved, an'

the wind it went over 'em. Gav' me a funny feelin'.

GODLEIGH. Clyst, yü take the cherry bun!

CLYST. Where's that cider, Mr. Godleigh?

GODLEIGH. [Bending over the cider] Yü've a-'ad tü much already, Tim.

The door is opened, and TAM JARLAND appears. He walks rather unsteadily; a man with a heavy jowl, and sullen, strange, epileptic-looking eyes.

CLYST. [Pointing to JARLAND] 'Tis Tam Jarland there 'as the cargo aboard.

JARLAND. Avenin', all! [To GODLEIGH] Pint o' beer. [To JIM BERE] Avenin', Jim.

JIM BERE looks at him and smiles.

GODLEIGH. [Serving him after a moment's hesitation] 'Ere y'are, Tam. [To CLYST, who has taken out his paper again] Where'd yü get thiccy paper?

CLYST. [Putting down his cider-mug empty] Yüre tongue dü watter, don't it, Mr. Godleigh? [Holding out his mug] No zider, no poetry. 'Tis amazin' sorrowful; Shakespeare over again. "The boy stüde on the burnin' deck."

FREMAN. Yü and yer yap!

CLYST. Ah! Yü wait a bit. When I come back down t'lane again, Orphus 'e was vanished away; there was naught in the field but the ponies, an' a praaper old magpie, a-top o' the hedge. I zee somethin' white in the beak o' the fowl, so I giv' a "Whisht," an' 'e drops it smart, an' off 'e go. I gets over bank an' picks un up, and here't be.

[He holds out his mug.

BURLACOMBE. [Tartly] Here, give 'im 'is cider. Rade it yurself, ye young teasewings.

CLYST, having secured his cider, drinks it off. Holding up the paper to the light, he makes as if to begin, then slides his eye round, tantalising.

CLYST. 'Tes a pity I bain't dressed in a white gown, an' flowers in me 'air.

FREMAN. Read it, or we'll 'ave yü out o' this.

CLYST. Aw, don't 'ee shake my nerve, now!

He begins reading with mock heroism, in his soft, high, hurrin voice. Thus, in his rustic accen go the lines:

God lighted the zun in 'eaven far,
Lighted the virefly an' the ztar.
My 'eart 'E lighted not!

God lighted the vields fur lambs to pla
Lighted the bright strames, an' the ma
My 'eart 'E lighted not!

God lighted the müne, the Arab's wa
He lights to-morrer, an' to-day.
My 'eart 'E 'ath vorgot!

When he has finished, there is s lence. Then TRUSTAFORD, scratc ing his head, speaks:

TRUSTAFORD. 'Tes amazin' funny stu

FREMAN. [Looking over CLYST shoulder] Be danged! 'Tes the curat 'andwritin'. 'Twas curate wi' the pom after that.

CLYST. Fancy, now! Aw, Will Fr man, an't yü bright!

FREMAN. But 'e 'adn't no bird on 'ead.

CLYST. Ya-as, 'e 'ad.

JARLAND. [In a dull, threatening voic 'E 'ad my maid's bird, this arternü 'Ead or no, and parson or no, I'll gie one for that.

FREMAN. Ah! And 'e meddled wi' 'orses.

TRUSTAFORD. I'm thinkin' 'twas old cuckoo bird 'e 'ad on 'is 'ead. Ha haw!

GODLEIGH. "His 'eart she 'ath vorgo

FREMAN. 'E's a fine one to be tach our maids convirmation.

GODLEIGH. Would ye 'ave it the Rector then? Wi' 'is gouty shoe? Rac the maids wid rather 'twas curate; Mr. Burlacombe?

BURLACOMBE. [Abruptly] Curate' güde man.

JARLAND. [With the comatose fero of drink] I'll be even wi' un.

FREMAN. [Excitedly] Tell 'ee thing—'tes not a proper man o' Go 'ave about, wi' 'is lüse goin's on. vrom 'ere he oughter go.

BURLACOMBE. You med go further fare worse.

FREMAN. What's 'e düin' then, lettin' s wife run off?

TRUSTAFORD. [Scratching his head] If ı' in case 'e can't kape 'er, 'tes a funny ay o' düin' things not to divorce 'er, ter that. If a parson's not to dü the hristian thing whü is, then?

BURLACOMBE. 'Tes a bit immoral-like pass over a thing like that. 'Tes nny if women's goin's on's to be en-uraged.

FREMAN. Act of a coward, I zay.

BURLACOMBE. The curate ain't no cow-d.

FREMAN. He bides in yüre house; 'tes tural for yü to stand up for un; I'll ıger Mrs. Burlacombe don't though. y missis was fair shocked. "Will," she ys, "if yü ever make vur to let me go e that, I widden never stay wi' yü," e says.

TRUSTAFORD. 'Tes settin' a bad exam-for zure.

BURLACOMBE. 'Tes all very aisy talk-; what shüde 'e dü, then?

FREMAN. [Excitedly] Go over to Dur-d and say to that doctor: "Yü come ut my missis, an' zee what I'll dü to " An' take 'er 'ome an' zee she don't be'ave again.

CLYST. 'E can't take 'er ef 'er don' n't t'come—I've 'eard lawyer, that ged wi' us, say that.

FREMAN. All right, then, 'e ought to e the law of 'er and 'er doctor; an' zee goin's on don't prosper; 'e'd get dam-s, tü. But this way 'tes a nice example n settin' folks. Parson indade! My sis an' the maids they won't goo r the church to-night, an' I wager no else won't, neither.

ARLAND. [Lurching with his pewter to GODLEIGH] The beggar! I'll be ı wi' un.

ODLEIGH. [Looking at him in doubt] s the last, then, Tam.

Having received his beer, JARLAND stands, leaning against the bar, drinking.

URLACOMBE. [Suddenly] I don' goo ı what curate's düin'—'tes tü soft ted; he'm a müney kind o' man alto-ter, wi' 'is flute an' 'is poetry; but e a-lodged in my 'ouse this year more. and always 'ad an 'elpin' 'and for everyone. I've got a likin' for him an' there's an end of it.

JARLAND. The coward!

TRUSTAFORD. I don' trouble nothin' about that, Tam Jarland. [Turning to BURLACOMBE] What gits me is 'e don't seem to 'ave no zense o' what's his own praperty.

JARLAND. Take other folk's property fast enough! [He saws the air with his empty pewter. The others have all turned to him, drawn by the fascination that a man in liquor has for his fellowmen. The bell for church has begun to ring, the sun is down, and it is getting dusk] He wants one on his crop, an' one in 'is belly; 'e wants a man to take an' gie un a güde hidin'—zame as he oughter give 'is fly-be-night of a wife.

STRANGWAY in his dark clothes has entered, and stands by the door, his lips compressed to a colourless line, his thin, darkish face grey-white.

JARLAND. Zame as a man wid ha' gi'en the doctor, for takin' what isn't his'n.

All but JARLAND have seen STRANGWAY. He steps forward, JARLAND sees him now; his jaw drops a little, and he is silent.

STRANGWAY. I came for a little brandy, Mr. Godleigh—feeling rather faint. Afraid I mightn't get through the service.

GODLEIGH. [With professional composure] Martell's Three Star, zurr, or 'Ennessy's?

STRANGWAY. [Looking at JARLAND] Thank you; I believe I can do without, now. [He turns to go.

In the deadly silence, GODLEIGH touches the arm of JARLAND, who, leaning against the bar with the pewter in his hand, is staring with his strange lowering eyes straight at STRANGWAY.

JARLAND. [Galvanised by the touch into drunken rage] Lave me be—I'll talk to un—parson or no. I'll tache un to meddle wi' my maid's bird. I'll tache un to kape 'is thievin' 'ands to 'imself.

STRANGWAY turns again.

CLYST. Be quiet, Tam.

JARLAND. [Never loosing STRANGWAY with his eyes—like a bulldog who sees red] That's for one chake; zee un turn t'other, the white-livered büty! Whü lets another man 'ave 'is wife, an' never the sperit to go vor un!

BURLACOMBE. Shame, Jarland; quiet, man!

They are all looking at STRANGWAY, who, under JARLAND'S drunken insults is standing rigid, with his eyes closed, and his hands hard clenched. The church bell has stopped slow ringing, and begun its five minutes' hurrying note.

TRUSTAFORD. [Rising, and trying to hook his arm into JARLAND'S] Come away, Tam; yü've a-'ad tü much, man.

JARLAND. [Shaking him off] Zee, 'e darsen't touch me; I might 'it un in the vace an' 'e darsen't; 'e's afraid—like 'e was o' the doctor.

He raises the pewter as though to fling it, but it is seized by GODLEIGH from behind, and falls clattering to the floor. STRANGWAY has not moved.

JARLAND. [Shaking his fist almost in his face] Lüke at un, lüke at un! A man wi' a slut for a wife——

As he utters the word "wife" STRANGWAY seizes the outstretched fist, and with a ju-jitsu movement, draws him into his clutch, helpless. And as they sway and struggle in the open window, with the false strength of fury he forces JARLAND through. There is a crash of broken glass from outside. At the sound STRANGWAY comes to himself. A look of agony passes over his face. His eyes light on JIM BERE, who has suddenly risen, and stands feebly clapping his hands. STRANGWAY rushes out.

Excitedly gathering at the window, they all speak at once.

CLYST. Tam's hatchin' of yüre cucumbers, 'Mr. Godleigh.

TRUSTAFORD. 'E did crash; haw, haw!

FREMAN. 'Twas a brave throw, zurely. Whü wid a' thought it?

CLYST. Tam's crawlin' out. [Leaning through window] Hallo, Tam—'ow's t' base, old man?

FREMAN. [Excitedly] They'm all comin' up from churchyard to zee.

TRUSTAFORD. Tam dü lüke wonderf aztonished; haw, haw! Poor old Ta CLYST. Can yü zee curate? Rack 'e'm gone into church. Aw, yes; gett a bit dimsy—sarvice time.

A moment's hush.

TRUSTAFORD. Well, I'm jiggered. 'alf an hour he'm got to prache.

GODLEIGH. 'Tes a Christian villa boys.

Feebly, quietly, JIM BERE laug
There is silence; but the bell heard still ringing.
Curtain.

SCENE II

The same—in daylight dying fast. lamp is burning on the bar. A ch has been placed in the centre of room, facing the bench under window, on which are seated fr right to left, GODLEIGH, SOL POT the village shopman, TRUSTAFO BURLACOMBE, FREMAN, JIM BE and MORSE the blacksmith. CLYS squatting on a stool by the bar, at the other end JARLAND, sobe and lowering, leans against the tel of the porch leading to the d round which are gathered five or sturdy fellows, dumb as fishes. one sits in the chair. In the natural silence that reigns, the tant sound of the wheezy church gan and voices singing can be he TRUSTAFORD. [After a prolonged cle ing of his throat] What I mean to za that 'tes no yüse, not a bit o' yüse in world, not düin' of things properly an' in case we'm to carry a resolu disapprovin' o' curate, it must all be so as no one can't zay nothin'.

SOL POTTER. That's what I zay, Trustaford; ef so be as 'tis to be a lage meetin', then it must be all proper.

FREMAN. That's right, Sol Potte purpose Mr. Sol Potter into the c Whü seconds that?

A silence. Voices from among dumb-as-fishes: "I dü."

CLYST. [Excitedly] Yü can't putt to the meetin'. Only a chairman can to the meetin'. I purpose that Mr. Burcombe—bein' as how he's chairman o' e Parish Council—take the chair.

FREMAN. Ef so be as I can't putt it, i can't putt that neither.

TRUSTAFORD. 'Tes not a bit o' yüse; us n't 'ave no meetin' without a chairan.

GODLEIGH. Us can't 'ave no chairman thout a meetin' to elect un, that's zure.

A silence.

MORSE. [Heavily] To my way o' inkin', Mr. Godleigh speaks zense; us ust 'ave a meetin' before us can 'ave a airman.

CLYST. Then what we got to dü's to ct a meetin'.

BURLACOMBE. [Sourly] Yü'll not find procedure for that.

Voices from among the dumb-asfishes: "Mr. Burlacombe 'e oughter know."

SOL POTTER. [Scratching his head—th heavy solemnity] 'Tes my belief re's no other way to dü, but to elect hairman to call a meetin'; an' then that meetin' to elect a chairman.

CLYST. I purpose Mr. Burlacombe as airman to call a meetin'.

FREMAN. I purpose Sol Potter.

GODLEIGH. Can't 'ave tü propositions ether before a meetin'; that's applezüre vur zurtain.

Voice from among the dumb-asfishes: "There ain't no meetin' yet, Sol Potter says."

TRUSTAFORD. Us must get the rights of settled some'ow. 'Tes like the darned chicken an' the egg—meetin' or airman—which come virst?

SOL POTTER. [Conciliating] To my ikin' there shid be another way o' n' it, to get round it like with a cirbendibus. 'Tall comes from takin' erent vüse, in a manner o' spakin'.

FREMAN. Yü goo an' zet in that chair.

SOL POTTER. [With a glance at BURLAIBE—modestly] I shid'n never like fur dü that, with Mr. Burlacombe zetthere.

BURLACOMBE. [Rising] 'Tes all darned shness.

Amidst an uneasy shufflement of feet he moves to the door, and goes out into the darkness.

CLYST. [Seeing his candidate thus depart] Rackon curate's pretty well thrü by now, I'm goin' to zee. [As he passes JARLAND] 'Ow's ta base, old man?

[He goes out.

One of the dumb-as-fishes moves from the door and fills the space left on the bench by BURLACOMBE'S departure.

JARLAND. Darn all this puzzivantin'! [To SOL POTTER] Goo an' zet in that chair.

SOL POTTER. [Rising and going to the chair; there he stands, changing from one to the other of his short broad feet and sweating from modesty and worth] 'Tes my düty now, gentlemen, to call a meetin' of the parishioners of this parish. I beg therefore to declare that this is a meetin' in accordance with my düty as chairman of this meetin' which elected me chairman to call this meetin'. And I purceed to vacate the chair so that this meetin' may now purceed to elect a chairman.

He gets up from the chair, and wiping the sweat from his brow, goes back to his seat.

FREMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order.

GODLEIGH. There ain't no chairman.

FREMAN. I don't give a darn for that. I rise on a point of order.

GODLEIGH. 'Tes a chairman that decides points of order. 'Tes certain yü can't rise on no points whatever till there's a chairman.

TRUSTAFORD. 'Tes no yüse yüre risin', not the least bit in the world, till there's someone to zet yü down again. Haw, haw!

Voice from the dumb-as-fishes: "Mr. Trustaford 'e's right."

FREMAN. What I zay is the chairman ought never to 'ave vacated the chair till I'd risen on my point of order. I purpose that he goo and zet down again.

GODLEIGH. Yü can't purpose that to this meetin'; yü can only purpose that to the old meetin' that's not zettin' any longer.

FREMAN. [Excitedly] I don' care what old meetin' 'tis that's zettin'. I purpose that Sol Potter goo an' zet in that chair again, while I rise on my point of order.

TRUSTAFORD. [Scratching his head] 'Tesn't regular—but I guess yü've got to goo, Sol, or us shan't 'ave no peace.

SOL POTTER, still wiping his brow, goes back to the chair.

MORSE. [Stolidly—to FREMAN] Zet down, Will Freman.

[He pulls at him with a blacksmith's arm.

FREMAN. [Remaining erect with an effort] I'm not a-goin' to zet down till I've arisen.

JARLAND. Now then, there 'e is in the chair. What's yüre point of order?

FREMAN. [Darting his eyes here and there, and flinging his hand up to his gipsy-like head] 'Twas — 'twas—— Darned ef y'aven't putt it clean out o' my 'ead.

JARLAND. We can't wait for yüre points of order. Come out o' that chair, Sol Potter.

SOL POTTER rises and is about to vacate the chair.

FREMAN. I know! There ought to 'a been minutes taken. Yü can't 'ave no meetin' without minutes. When us comes to electin' a chairman o' the next meetin', 'e won't 'ave no minutes to read.

SOL POTTER. 'Twas only to putt down 'hat I was elected chairman to elect a meetin' to elect a chairman to preside over a meetin' to pass a resolution dalin' wi' the curate. That's aisy set down, that is.

FREMAN. [Mollified] We'll 'ave that zet down, then, while we're electin' the chairman o' the next meetin'.

A silence.

TRUSTAFORD. Well then, seein' this is the praaper old meetin' for carryin' the resolution about the curate, I purpose Mr. Sol Potter take the chair.

FREMAN. I purpose Mr. Trustaford. I 'aven't a-got nothin' against Sol Potter, but seein' that he elected the meetin' that's to elect 'im, it might be said that 'e was electin' of himzelf in a manner of spakin'. Us don't want that said.

MORSE. [Amid meditative grunts from the dumb-as-fishes] There's some-at in that. One o' they tü purposals must be putt to the meetin'.

FREMAN. Second must be putt| virs fur züre.

TRUSTAFORD. I dunno as I wants to z in that chair. To hiss the curate, 'tis ticklish sort of a job after that. Vur comes afore second, Will Freman.

FREMAN. Second is amendment virst. 'Tes the amendments is put virs TRUSTAFORD. 'Ow's that, Mr. Goleigh? I'm not particular eggzac-ly to dilly zort of a point like that.

SOL POTTER. [Scratching his hea 'Tes a very nice point, for züre.

GODLEIGH. 'Tes undoubtedly for t chairman to decide.

Voice from the dumb-as-fishe

"But there ain't no chairman ye

JARLAND. Sol Potter's chairman.

FREMAN. No, 'e ain't.

MORSE. Yes, 'e is—'e's chairman t this second old meetin' gets on the g FREMAN. I depy that. What dü say, Mr. Trustaford?

TRUSTAFORD. I can't 'ardly tell. It zeem a darned long-sufferin' sort of business altogether.

A silence.

MORSE. [Slowly] Tell 'ee what 'tis, shan't dü no güde like this.

GODLEIGH. 'Tes for Mr. Freman Mr. Trustaford, one or t'other to wit draw their motions.

TRUSTAFORD. [After a pause, w cautious generosity] I've no objectio to withdrawin' mine, if Will Frema withdraw his'n.

FREMAN. I won't never be be'indha If Mr. Trustaford withdraws, I wi draws mine.

MORSE. [With relief] That's zensib Putt the motion to the meetin'.

SOL POTTER. There ain't no motion to putt.

Silence of consternation.

In the confusion JIM BERE is se to stand up.

GODLEIGH. Jim Bere to spake. Sile for Jim!

VOICES. Aye! Silence for Jim!

SOL POTTER. Well, Jim?

JIM. [Smiling and slow] Noth düin'.

TRUSTAFORD. Bravo, Jim! Yü'm rig Best zense yet!

Applause from the dumb-as-fis

With his smile brightening, JIM resumes his seat.

SOL POTTER. [Wiping his brow] Dü 'm to me, gentlemen, seein' as we'm t into a bit of a tangle in a manner of akin', 'twid be the most zimplest and rest way to begin all over vrom the ginnin', so's t'ave it all vair an' square everyone.

In the uproar of "Aye" and "No," it is noticed that TIBBY JARLAND is standing in front of her father with her finger, for want of something better, in her mouth.

TIBBY. [In her stolid voice] Please, 'er Mercy says, curate 'ave got to istly."

JARLAND picks her up, and there is silence.

TIBBY. An' please to come quick.

ARLAND. Come on, mates; quietly !

[He goes out, and all begin to follow him.

ORSE. [Slowest, save for SOL POT-] 'Tes rare lucky us was all agreed hiss the curate afore us began botherin' old meetin', or us widn' ly 'ave 'ad time to settle what to OL POTTER. [Scratching his head] , 'tes rare lucky, but I dunno if 'tes gether reg'lar.

SCENE III

A village green before the churchyard and the yew-trees at the gate. Into the pitch dark under the yews, light comes out through the half-open church door. Figures are lurking, or moving stealthily—people waiting and listening to the sound of a voice speaking in the church words that are inaudible. Excited whispering and faint giggles come from the deepest yew-tree shade, made ghostly by the white faces and the frocks of young girls continually flitting up and back in the blackness. A girl's figure comes flying out from the porch, down the path of light, and joins the stealthy group.

WHISPERING VOICE OF MERCY. Where-'ve 'e got to now, Gladys?

WHISPERING VOICE OF GLADYS. 'E've a just finished.

VOICE OF CONNIE. Whü pushed t'door open?

VOICE OF GLADYS. Tim Clyst—I giv' it a little push, meself.

VOICE OF CONNIE. Oh!

VOICE OF GLADYS. Tim Clyst's gone in!

ANOTHER VOICE. O-o-o-h!

VOICE OF MERCY. Whü else is there, tü?

VOICE OF GLADYS. Ivy's there, an' old Mrs. Potter, an' tü o' the maids from th' Hall; that's all as ever.

VOICE OF CONNIE. Not the old grey mare?

VOICE OF GLADYS. No. She ain't ther'. 'Twill just be th'ymn now, an' the Blessin'. Tibby gone for 'em?

VOICE OF MERCY. Yes.

VOICE OF CONNIE. Mr. Burlacombe's gone in home, I saw 'im pass by just now —'e don' like it. Father don't like it neither.

VOICE OF MERCY. Mr. Strangway shouldn' 'ave taken my skylark, an' thrown Father out o' winder. 'Tis goin' to be awful fun! Oh!

She jumps up and down in the darkness. And a voice from far in the shadow says: "Hsssh! Quiet, yü maids!" The voice has ceased speaking in the church. There is a moment's dead silence. The voice speaks again; then from the wheezy little organ come the first faint chords of a hymn.

GLADYS. "Nearer, my God, to Thee!"

VOICE OF MERCY. 'Twill be funny, with no one 'ardly singin'.

The sound of the old hymn sung by just six voices comes out to them rather sweet and clear.

GLADYS. [Softly] 'Tis pretty, tü. Why! They're only singin' one verse!

A moment's silence, and the voice speaks, uplifted, pronouncing the Blessing: "The peace of God——" As the last words die away, dark figures from the inn approach over the grass, till quite a crowd seems standing there without a word spoken. Then from out the church porch come the congregation. TIM CLYST first, hastily lost among the waiting figures in the dark; old Mrs. Potter, a half-blind old lady groping her way and perceiving nothing out of the ordinary; the two maids from the Hall, self-conscious and scared, scuttling along. Last, IVY BURLACOMBE quickly, and starting back at the dim, half-hidden crowd.

VOICE OF GLADYS. [Whispering] Ivy! Here, quick!

IVY sways, darts off towards the voice, and is lost in the shadow.

VOICE OF FREMAN. [Low] Wait, boys, till I give signal.

Two or three squirks and giggles; TIM CLYST'S voice: "Ya-as! Don't 'ee tread on my toe!" A soft, frightened "O-o-h!" from a girl. Some quick, excited whisperings: "Lüke!" "Zee there!" "He's comin'!" And then a perfectly dead silence. The figure of STRANGWAY is seen in his dark clothes, passing from the vestry to the church porch. He stands plainly visible in the lighted porch, locking the door, then steps forward. Just as he reaches the edge of the porch, a low hiss breaks the silence. It swells very gradually into a long, hissing groan. STRANGWAY stands motionless, his hand over his eyes, staring into the darkness. A girl's figure can be seen to break out of the darkness and rush away. When at last the groaning has died into sheer expectancy, STRANGWAY drops his hand.

STRANGWAY. [In a low voice] Yes! I'm glad. Is Jarland there?

FREMAN. He's 'ere—no thanks to yü! Hsss!

The hiss breaks out again, then dies away.

JARLAND'S VOICE. [Threatening] Try if yü can dü it again.

STRANGWAY. No, Jarland, no! I ask you to forgive me. Humbly!

A hesitating silence, broken by muttering.

CLYST'S VOICE. Bravo!

A VOICE. That's vair!

A VOICE. E's afraid o' the sack—tha what 'tis.

A VOICE. [Groaning] 'E's a praap coward.

A VOICE. Whü funked the doctor

CLYST'S VOICE. Shame on 'ee, therr

STRANGWAY. You're right—all of yo I'm not fit!

An uneasy and excited mutteri and whispering dies away into newed silence.

STRANGWAY. What I did to Tam J land is not the real cause of what you doing, is it? I understand. But don't troubled. It's all over. I'm going—yo get someone better. Forgive me, J land. I can't see your face—it's v dark.

FREMAN'S VOICE. [Mocking] Wait the full müne.

GODLEIGH. [Very low] "My 'eart lighted not!"

STRANGWAY. [Starting at the so of his own words thus mysterio given him out of the darkness] Whoe found that, please tear it up! [Afte moment's silence] Many of you h been very kind to me. You won't see again—— Good-bye, all!

He stands for a second motion then moves resolutely down the darkness so peopled shadows.

UNCERTAIN VOICES AS HE PAS Good-bye, zurr! Good luck, zurr!

He has gone.

CLYST'S VOICE. Three cheers for Strangway!

And a queer, strangled cheer, groans still threading it, aris Curtain.

ACT II

SCENE I

In the BURLACOMBES' hall sitting- the curtains are drawn, a burns, and the door stands BURLACOMBE and his wife are ering there, listening to the sou mingled cheers and groaning.

IRS. BURLACOMBE. Aw! my güdeness hat a thing t'appen! I'd süner 'a lost

RS. BURLACOMBE. Poor soul! What-dü now, I wonder? [Under her th] 'E's comin'!

She goes hurriedly. BURLACOMBE, with a startled look back, wavers and makes to follow her, but stops undecided in the inner doorway. STRANGWAY comes in from the darkness. He turns to the window and drops overcoat and hat and the church key on the window-seat, looking about him as men do when too hard driven, and never fixing his eyes long enough on anything to see it. BURLACOMBE, closing the door into the house, advances a step. At the sound STRANGWAY faces round.

URLACOMBE. I wanted for yü to STRANGWAY. Look at me, Burlacombe.

BURLACOMBE looks up, trying hard to keep his eyes on STRANGWAY'S that seem to burn in his thin face.

STRANGWAY. Do I look like that? Please, please! [He touches his breast] I've too much here. Please!

BURLACOMBE. [With a sort of startled respect] Well, zurr, 'tes not for me to zay nothin', certainly.

[He turns and after a slow look back at STRANGWAY goes out.

STRANGWAY. [To himself] Passions! No passions! Ha!

The outer door is opened and IVY BURLACOMBE appears, and, seeing him, stops. Then, coming softly towards him, she speaks timidly.

IVY. Oh! Mr. Strangway, Mrs. Bradmere's comin' from the Rectory. I ran an' told 'em. Oh! 'twas awful.

STRANGWAY starts, stares at her, and turning on his heel, goes into the house. IVY'S face is all puckered, as if she were on the point of tears. There is a gentle scratching at the door, which has not been quite closed.

VOICE OF GLADYS. [Whispering] Ivy! Come on!

IVY. I won't!

VOICE OF MERCY. Yü must. Us can't dü without yü.

IVY. [Going to the door] I don't want to.

VOICE OF GLADYS. "Naughty maid, she won't come out." Ah! dü 'ee!

VOICE OF CONNIE. Tim Clyst an' Bobbie's comin'; us'll only be six anyway. Us can't dance "figure of eight" without yü.

IVY. [Stamping her foot] I don't want to dänce at all! I don't.

MERCY. Aw! She's temper. Yü can bang on tambourine, then!

GLADYS. [Running in] Quick, Ivy! Here's the old grey mare comin' down the green. Quick.

With whispering and scuffling, gurgling and squeaking, the reluctant IVY'S hand is caught and she is jerked away. In their haste they have left the door open behind them.

VOICE OF MRS. BRADMERE. [Outside] Who's that?

She knocks loudly, and rings a bell; then, without waiting, comes in through the open door.

Noting the overcoat and hat on the window-sill, she moves across to ring the bell. But as she does so, MRS. BURLACOMBE, followed by BURLACOMBE, comes in from the house.

MRS. BRADMERE. This disgraceful business! Where's Mr. Strangway? I see he's in.

MRS. BURLACOMBE. Yes, m'm, h'm in —but—but Burlacombe dü zay he'm terrible upzet.

MRS. BRADMERE. I should think so. I must see him—at once.

MRS. BURLACOMBE. I doubt bed's the best place for 'un, an' a güde 'ot drink. Burlacombe zays he'm like a man standin' on the edge of a cliff, and the laste tipsy o' wind might throw 'un over.

MRS. BRADMERE. [To BURLACOMBE] You've seen him, then?

BURLACOMBE. Yeas; an' I don't like the lüke of un—not a little bit, I don't.

MRS. BURLACOMBE. [Almost to herself] Poor soul; 'e've a-'ad tü much to try 'un this yer long time past. I've aseen 'is sperrit comin' thrü 'is body, as yü might zay. He's torn to bits, that's what 'tis.

BURLACOMBE. 'Twas a praaper cowardly thing to hiss a man when he's down. But 'twas natural tü, in a manner of spakin'. But 'tesn't that troublin' 'im. 'Tes in here [touching his forehead], along of his wife, to my thinkin'. They zay 'e've a-known about 'er afore she went away. Think of what 'e've 'ad to kape in all this time. 'Tes enough to drive a man silly after that. I've a-locked my gun up. I see a man lüke like that once before—an' sure enough 'e was dead in the mornin'!

MRS. BRADMERE. Nonsense, Burlacombe! [To MRS. BURLACOMBE] Go and tell him I want to see him—must him.

MRS. BURLACOMBE goes into house.

MRS. BRADMERE. And look here, B lacombe; if we catch anyone, man woman, talking of this outside the lage, it'll be the end of their tena whoever they may be. Let them know that. I'm glad he threw drunken fellow out of the wind though it was a little——

BURLACOMBE. Aye! The nüspa would be praaper glad of that, for a dy bit o' nüse.

MRS. BRADMERE. My goodness! The men are all up at the inn. Go tell them what I said—it's not to about. Go at once, Burlacombe.

BURLACOMBE. Must be a turrable for 'im, everyone's knowin' about wife like this. He'm a proud man I think. 'Tes a funny business a gether!

MRS. BRADMERE. Horrible! Poor low! Now, come! Do your best, Burlacombe!

BURLACOMBE touches his fore and goes. MRS. BRADMERE st quite still, thinking. Then g to the photograph, she stares at it.

MRS. BRADMERE. You baggage!

STRANGWAY has come in noise ly, and is standing just behind She turns, and sees him. The something so still, so startli still in his figure and white that she cannot for the mo find her voice.

MRS. BRADMERE. [At last] Thi most distressing. I'm deeply s [Then, as he does not answer, she a step closer] I'm an old woman; old women must take liberties, know, or they couldn't get on at Come now! Let's try and talk it calmly and see if we can't put t right.

STRANGWAY. You were very go come; but I would rather not.

MRS. BRADMERE. I know you're grievous trouble as a man can be.

STRANGWAY. Yes.

MRS. BRADMERE. [With a little s sympathy] What are you—thirty-e? I'm sixty-eight if I'm a day, old ough to be your mother. I can feel at you must have been through all se months, I can indeed. But you w you've gone the wrong way to

k. We aren't angels down here be-
! And a son of the Church can't as if for himself alone. The eyes of ryone are on him.

TRANGWAY. [Taking the church key n the window-sill] Take this, please.

IRS. BRADMERE. No, no, no! Jarland erved all he got. You had great proation——

TRANGWAY. It's not Jarland. [Hold-out the key] Please take it to the tor. I beg his forgiveness. [Touch-his breast] There's too much I can't k of—can't make plain. Take it to , please.

IRS. BRADMERE. Mr. Strangway—I t accept this. I am sure my husband e Church—will never accept——

TRANGWAY. Take it!

RS. BRADMERE. [Almost unconsciousaking it] Mind! We don't accept it. must come and talk to the Rector orrow. You're overwrought. You'll it all in another light, then.

TRANGWAY. [With a strange smile] naps. [Lifting the blind] Beautiful t! Couldn't be more beautiful!

IRS. BRADMERE. [Startled—softly]
't turn away from those who want elp you! I'm a grumpy old woman,
I can feel for you. Don't try and it all back, like this! A woman d cry, and it would all seem er at once. Now won't you let
—?

TRANGWAY. No one can help, thank

RS. BRADMERE. Come! Things have-one beyond mending, really, if you-ace them. [Pointing to the photo-h] You know what I mean. We not foster immorality.

RANGWAY. [*Quivering as at a jabbed
e*] Don't speak of that?

RS. BRADMERE. But think what youlone, Mr. Strangway! If you can't your wife back, surely you must ce her. You can never help her to n like this in secret sin.

STRANGWAY. Torture her—one way or the other?

MRS. BRADMERE. No, no; I want you to do as the Church—as all Christian society would wish. Come! You can't let this go on. My dear man, do your duty at all costs?

STRANGWAY. Break her heart!

MRS. BRADMERE. Then you love that woman—more than God!

STRANGWAY. [His face quivering] Love!

MRS. BRADMERE. They told me——Yes, and I can see you're in a bad way. Come, pull yourself together! You can't defend what you're doing.

STRANGWAY. I do not try.

MRS. BRADMERE. I must get you to see! My father was a clergyman; I'm married to one; I've two sons in the Church. I know what I'm talking about. It's a priest's business to guide the people's lives.

STRANGWAY. [Very low] But not mine! No more!

MRS. BRADMERE. [Looking at him shrewdly] There's something very queer about you to-night. You ought to see a doctor.

STRANGWAY. [A smile coming and going on his lips] If I am not better soon——

MRS. BRADMERE. I know it must be terrible to feel that everybody——

A convulsive shiver passes over STRANGWAY, and he shrinks against the door.

MRS. BRADMERE. But come! Live it down! [With anger growing at his silence] Live it down, man! You can't desert your post—and let these villagers do what they like with us? Do you realise that you're letting a woman, who has treated you abominably—yes, abominably—go scot-free, to live comfortably with another man? What an example!

STRANGWAY. Will you, please, not speak of that!

MRS. BRADMERE. I must! This great Church of ours is based on the rightful condemnation of wrong-doing. There are times when forgiveness is a sin, Michael Strangway. You must keep the whip hand. You must fight!

STRANGWAY. Fight! [Touching his heart] My fight is here. Have you ever been in hell? For months and months—burned and longed; hoped against hope; killed a man in thought day by day? Never rested, for love and hate? I—condemn! I—judge! No! It's rest I have to find—somewhere—somehow—rest! And how—how can I find rest?

MRS. BRADMERE. [Who has listened to his outburst in a sort of coma] You are a strange man! One of these days you'll go off your head if you don't take care.

STRANGWAY. [Smiling] One of these days the flowers will grow out of me; and I shall sleep.

MRS. BRADMERE stares at his smiling face a long moment in silence, then with a little sound, half sniff, half snort, she goes to the door. There she halts.

MRS. BRADMERE. And you mean to let all this go on—— Your wife——

STRANGWAY. Go! Please go!

MRS. BRADMERE. Men like you have been buried at crossroads before now! Take care! God punishes!

STRANGWAY. Is there a God?

MRS. BRADMERE. Ah! [With finality] You must see a doctor.

Seeing that the look on his face does not change, she opens the door, and hurries away into the moonlight.

STRANGWAY crosses the room to where his wife's picture hangs, and stands before it, his hands grasping the frame. Then he takes it from the wall, and lays it face upwards on the window-seat.

STRANGWAY. [To himself] Gone! What is there, now?

The sound of an owl's hooting is floating in, and of voices from the green outside the inn.

STRANGWAY. [To himself] Gone! Taken faith—hope—life!

JIM BERE comes wandering into the open doorway.

JIM BERE. Güde avenin', zurr.

At his slow gait, with his feeble smile, he comes in, and standing by the window-seat beside the long dark coat still lying there, he looks down at STRANGW with his lost eyes.

JIM. Yü threw mun out of winde cud 'ave, once, I cud.

STRANGWAY neither moves speaks; and JIM BERE goes with his unimaginably s speech.

JIM. They'm laughin' at yü, zurr. so I come to tell 'ee how to dü. 'T full müne—when I caught 'em, him my girl. I caught 'em. [With a stra and awful flash of fire] I did; an' I mun [he takes up STRANGWAY'S and grips it with his trembling ha as a man grips another's neck] like —I tuk mun.

As the coat falls, like a body ou which the breath has squeezed, STRANGWAY, ris catches it.

STRANGWAY. [Gripping the coat] he fell!

He lets the coat fall on the fl and puts his foot on it. T staggering back, he leans aga the window.

JIM. Yü see, I loved 'er—I did. [lost look comes back to his eyes] T somethin'—I dunno—and—and—— lifts his hand and passes it up and d his side] 'Twas like this for ever.

They gaze at each other in sile

JIM. [At last] I come to tell They'm all laughin' at yü. But y strong—yü go over to Durford to doctor man, an' take mun like I [He tries again to make the sign squeezing a man's neck] They c laugh at yü no more, then. Tha's w I come to tell yü. Tha's the way fo Christian man to dü. Güde naight, z I come to tell 'ee.

STRANGWAY motions to him in lence. And, very slowly, JIM B passes out.

The voices of men coming down green are heard.

VOICES. Güde naight, Tam. G naight, old Jim!

VOICES. Güde naight, Mr. Trusta 'Tes a wonderful fine müne.

VOICE OF TRUSTAFORD. Ah! 'T brave müne for th' poor old curate

VOICE. "My 'eart 'E lighted not

TRUSTAFORD'S laugh, and the rattling, fainter and fainter, of wheels. A spasm seizes on STRANGWAY'S face, as he stands there by the open door; his hand grips his throat; he looks from side to side, as if seeking a way of escape.

SCENE II

BURLACOMBES' high and nearly empty barn. A lantern is hung by a rope that lifts the bales of straw, to a long ladder leaning against a rafter. This gives all the light there is, save for a slender track of moonlight, slanting in from the end, where the two great doors are not quite closed. On a rude bench in front of a few remaining, stacked, square-cut bundles of last year's hay, sits TIBBY JARLAND, a bit of apple in her mouth, sleepily beating on a tambourine. With stockinged feet GLADYS, IVY, CONNIE, and MERCY, TIM CLYST, and BOBBIE JARLAND, a boy of fifteen, are dancing a truncated "Figure of Eight"; and their shadows are dancing alongside on the walls. Shoes and some apples have been thrown down close to the side door through which they have come in. Now and then IVY, the smallest and best of the dancers, ejaculates words of direction, and one of the youths grunts or breathes loudly out of the confusion of his mind. Save for this and the dumb beat and jingle of the sleepy tambourine, there is no sound. The dance comes to its end, but the drowsy TIBBY goes on beating.

ERCY. That'll dü, Tibby; we're fin-
l. Ate yüre apple.

The stolid TIBBY eats her apple.

YST. [In his teasing, excitable
] Yü maids don't dance 'alf's well s dü. Bobbie 'e's a great dancer. 'E e vine. I'm a güde dancer, meself.
ADYS. A'n't yü conceited just?

YST. Aw! Ah! Yü'll give me kiss for that. [He chases, but cannot catch that slippery white figure] Can't she glimmer!

MERCY. Gladys! Up ladder!

CLYST. Yü go up ladder; I'll catch 'ee then. Naw, yü maids, don't yü give her succour. That's not vair.

Catching hold of MERCY, who gives a little squeal.

CONNIE. Mercy, don't! Mrs. Burlacombe'll hear. Ivy, go an' peek.

IVY goes to the side door and peers through.

CLYST. [Abandoning the chase and picking up an apple—they all have the joyous irresponsibility that attends forbidden doings] Ya-as, this is a güde apple. Lüke at Tibby!

TIBBY, overcome by drowsiness, has fallen back into the hay, asleep. GLADYS, leaning against the hay breaks into humming:

"There cam' three dükes a-ridin', a-ridin', a-ridin',
There cam' three dükes a-ridin'
With a ransy-tansy tay!"

CLYST. Us 'as got on vine; us'll get prize for our dancin'.

CONNIE. There won't be no prize if Mr. Strangway goes away. 'Tes funny 'twas Mrs. Strangway started us.

IVY. [From the door] 'Twas wicked to hiss him.

A moment's hush.

CLYST. 'Twasn't I.

BOBBIE. I never did.

GLADYS. Oh! Bobbie, yü did! Yü blew in my ear.

CLYST. 'Twas the praaper old wind in the trees. Did make a brave noise, zurely.

MERCY. 'E shuldn't 'a let my skylark go.

CLYST. [Out of sheer contradictoriness] Ya-as, 'e shüde, then. What dü yü want with th' birds of the air? They'm no güde to yü.

IVY. [Mournfully] And now he's go-in' away.

CLYST. Ya-as; 'tes a pity. He'm the best man I ever seen since I was comin' from my mother. He's a güde man. He'm got a zad face, sure enough, though!

IVY. Güde folk always 'ave zad faces.

CLYST. I knü a güde man—'e sold pigs —very güde man: 'e 'ad a büdiful bright vace like the müne. [Touching his stomach] I was sad, meself, once. 'Twas a funny scrabblin'-like feelin'.

GLADYS. If 'e go away, whü's goin' to finish us for confirmation?

CONNIE. The Rector and the old grey mare.

MERCY. I don' want no more finishin'; I'm confirmed enough.

CLYST. Ya-as; yü'm a büty.

GLADYS. Suppose we all went an' asked 'im not to go?

IVY. 'Twouldn't be no güde.

CONNIE. Where's 'e goin'?

MERCY. He'll go to London, of course.

IVY. He's so gentle; I think 'e'll go to an island, where there's nothin' but birds and beasts and flowers.

CLYST. Aye! He'm awful fond o' the dumb things.

IVY. They're kind and peaceful; that's why.

CLYST. Aw! Yü see tü praaper old tom cats; they'm not tü peaceful, after that, nor kind naighther.

BOBBIE. [Surprisingly] If 'e's sad, per-'aps 'e'll go to 'Eaven.

IVY. Oh! not yet Bobbie. He's tü young.

CLYST. [Following his own thoughts] Ya-as. 'Tes a funny place, tü, nowadays, judgin' from the papers.

GLADYS. Wonder if there's dancin' in 'Eaven?

IVY. There's beasts, and flowers, and waters, and trees—'e told us.

CLYST. Naw! There's no dumb things in 'Eaven. Jim Bere 'e says there is! 'E thinks 'is old cat's there.

IVY. Yes. [Dreamily] There's stars, an' owls, an' a man playin' on the flute. Where 'tes güde, there must be müsic.

CLYST. Old brass band, shuldn' wonder, like Salvation Army.

IVY. [Putting up her hands to an imaginary pipe] No; 'tis a boy that goes so; an' all the dumb things an' all the people goo after 'im—like this.

She marches slowly, playing her imaginary pipe, and one by one they all fall in behind her, paddling round the barn in their stockinged feet. Passing the doors, IVY throws them open.

IVY. An' 'tes all like that in 'Eav

She stands there gazing out, playing on her imaginary p And they all stand a moment lent, staring into the moonlig

CLYST. 'Tes a glory-be full müne night!

IVY. A goldie-cup—a big one. millions o' little goldie-cups on the fl of 'Eaven.

MERCY. Oh! Bother 'Eaven! L dance "Clapperclaws!" Wake up, T by!

GLADYS. Clapperclaws, clapperclav Come on, Bobbie—make circle!

CLYST. Clapperclaws! I dance t one fine.

IVY. [Taking the tambourine] S Tibby; like this.

She hums and beats gently, then stores the tambourine to sleepy TIBBY, who, waking, placed a piece of apple in mouth.

CONNIE. 'Tes awful difficult, this o

IVY. [Illustrating] No; yü just jur an' clap yüre hands. Lovely, lovely!

CLYST. Like ringin' bells! Come al

TIBBY begins her drowsy beati

IVY hums the tune; they dan and their shadows dance ag upon the walls. When she beaten but a few moments on tambourine, TIBBY is overco once more by sleep and falls b again into her nest of hay, w her little shoed feet just visi over the edge of the bench. catches up the tambourine, to her beating and humming dancers dance on.

Suddenly GLADYS stops like a animal surprised, and cranes neck towards the side door.

CONNIE. [Whispering] What is it?

GLADYS. [Whispering] I hear—son one—comin' across the yard.

She leads a noiseless scamper wards the shoes. BOBBIE JARL shins up the ladder and seizes lantern. IVY drops the tambo ine. They all fly to the big do and vanish into the moonli pulling the doors nearly to again after them.

There is the sound of scrabbling at the latch of the side door, and STRANGWAY comes into the nearly dark barn. Out in the night the owl is still hooting. He closes the door, and that sound is lost. Like a man walking in his sleep, he goes up to the ladder, takes the rope in his hand, and makes a noose. He can be heard breathing, and in the darkness the motions of his hands are dimly seen, freeing his throat and putting the noose round his neck. He stands swaying to and fro at the foot of the ladder; then, with a sigh, sets his foot on it to mount. One of the big doors creaks and opens in the wind, letting in a broad path of moonlight.

STRANGWAY stops; freeing his neck from the noose, he walks quickly up the track of moonlight, whitened from head to foot, to close the doors.

The sound of his boots on the bare floor has awakened TIBBY JARLAND. Struggling out of her hay nest she stands staring at his whitened figure, and bursts suddenly into a wail.

IBY. O-oh! Mercy! Where are yü? rightened! I'm frightened! O-oooo! ANGWAY. [Turning — startled] s that? Who is it?

IBY. O-oh! A ghosty! Oo-ooo!

ANGWAY. [Going to her quickly] ne, Tibby—Tib—only me!

IBY. I see'd a ghosty.

ANGWAY. [Taking her up] No, no, rd, you didn't! It was me.

BY. [Burying her face against him] righted. It was a big one. [She tongue again] O-o-oh!

ANGWAY. There, there! It's noth- t me. Look!

BY. No.

[She peeps out all the same.

ANGWAY. See! It's the moonlight me all white! See! You're a brave ow?

BY. [Cautiously] I want my ap-

She points towards her nest. STRANGWAY carries her there, picks up an apple, and gives it her. TIBBY takes a bite.

TIBBY. I want my tambouline.

STRANGWAY. [Giving her the tambourine, and carrying her back into the track of moonlight] Now we're both ghosties! Isn't it funny?

TIBBY. [Doubtfully] Yes.

STRANGWAY. See! The moon's laughing at us! See? Laugh then!

TIBBY, tambourine in one hand and apple in the other, smiles stolidly. He sets her down on the ladder, and stands, holding her level with him.

TIBBY. [Solemnly] I'se still frightened.

STRANGWAY. No! Full moon, Tibby! Shall we wish for it?

TIBBY. Full müne.

STRANGWAY. Moon! We're wishing for you. Moon, moon!

TIBBY. Müne, we're wishin' for yü.

STRANGWAY. What do you wish it to be?

TIBBY. Bright new shillin'!

STRANGWAY. A face.

TIBBY. Shillin', a shillin'!

STRANGWAY. [Taking out a shilling and spinning it so that it falls into her pinafore] See! Your wish comes true.

TIBBY. Oh! [Putting the shilling in her mouth] Müne's still there!

STRANGWAY. Wish for me, Tibby!

TIBBY. Müne, I'm wishin' for yü!

STRANGWAY. Not yet!

TIBBY. Shall I shake my tambouline?

STRANGWAY. Yes, shake your tambouline.

TIBBY. [Shaking her tambourine] Müne, I'm shakin' at yü.

STRANGWAY lays his hand suddenly on the rope, and swings it up on to the beam.

TIBBY. What d'yü dü that for?

STRANGWAY. To put it out of reach. It's better——

TIBBY. Why is it better?

[She stares up at him.

STRANGWAY. Come along, Tibby! [He carries her to the big doors, and sets her down] See! All asleep! The birds, and the fields, and the moon!

TIBBY. Müne, müne, we're wishing for yü!

STRANGWAY. Send her your love, and say good night.

TIBBY. [Blowing a kiss] Good night, müne!

From the barn roof a little white dove's feather comes floating down in the wind. TIBBY follows it with her hand, catches it, and holds it up to him.

TIBBY. [Chuckling] Lüke. The müne's sent a bit o' love!

STRANGWAY. [Taking the feather] Thank you, Tibby! I want that bit o' love. [Very faint, comes the sound of music] Listen!

TIBBY. It's Miss Willis, playin' on the pianny!

STRANGWAY. No; it's Love; walking and talking in the world.

TIBBY. [Dubiously] Is it?

STRANGWAY. [Pointing] See! Everything coming out to listen! See them, Tibby! All the little things with pointed ears, children, and birds, and flowers, and bunnies; and the bright rocks, and —men! Hear their hearts beating! And the wind listening!

TIBBY. I can't hear—nor I can't see!

STRANGWAY. Beyond—— [To himself] They are—they must be; I swear they are! [Then, catching sight of TIBBY'S amazed eyes] And now say goodbye to me.

TIBBY. Where yü goin'?

STRANGWAY. I don't know, Tibby.

VOICE OF MERCY. [Distant and cautious] Tibby! Tibby! Where are yü?

STRANGWAY. Mercy calling; run to her!

TIBBY starts off, turns back and lifts her face. He bends to kiss her, and flinging her arms round his neck, she gives him a good hug. Then, knuckling the sleep out of her eyes, she runs.

STRANGWAY stands, uncerta

THE FOUNDATIONS

AN EXTRAVAGANT PLAY IN THREE ACTS

"Hey, diddle diddle!
The cat and the fiddle;
The cow jumped over the moon!"

ACT I

WILLIAM DROMONDY'S mansion in Park Lane. Eight o'clock of the evening. LITTLE ANNE DROMONDY and the large footman, JAMES, gaunt and grim, discovered in the wine cellar, by light of gas. JAMES, in plush breeches, is selecting wines.

ANNE. James, are you really ...s?

...ES. No, my proper name's John.

ANNE. Oh! [A pause] And is ...e's an improper name too?

...ES. His proper name's Mark.

ANNE. Then is Thomas Matthew?

...ES. Miss Anne, stand clear o' that ... You'll put your foot through one ...se 'ock bottles.

ANNE. No, but James—Henry ... be Luke, really?

...ES. Now shut it, Miss Anne!

ANNE. Who gave you those ...? Not your godfathers and god-...rs?

...ES. Poulder. Butlers think they're ... Almighty. [Gloomily] But his ... s Bartholomew.

ANNE. Bartholomew Poulder? It's ... jolly.

...ES. It's hidjeous.

ANNE. Which do you like to be —John or James?

...ES. I don't give a darn.

ANNE. What is a darn?

...ES. 'Tain't in the dictionary.

ANNE. Do you like my name? Dromondy? It's old, you know.

...'s funny, isn't it?

...ES. [Indifferently] It'll pass.

L. ANNE. How many bottles have you got to pick out?

JAMES. Thirty-four.

L. ANNE. Are they all for the dinner or for the people who come in to the Anti-Sweating Meeting afterwards?

JAMES. All for the dinner. They give the Sweated—tea.

L. ANNE. All for the dinner? They'll drink too much, won't they?

JAMES. We've got to be on the safe side.

L. ANNE. Will it be safer if they drink too much?

JAMES pauses in the act of dusting a bottle to look at her, as if suspecting irony.

L. ANNE. [Sniffing] Isn't the smell delicious here—like the taste of cherries when they've gone bad—[She sniffs again] and mushrooms; and boot blacking——

JAMES. That's the escape of gas.

L. ANNE. Has the plumber's man been?

JAMES. Yes.

L. ANNE. Which one?

JAMES. Little blighter I've never seen before.

L. ANNE. What is a little blighter? Can I see?

JAMES. He's just gone.

L. ANNE. [Straying] Oh . . . James, are these really the foundations?

JAMES. You might 'arf say so. There's a lot under a woppin' big house like this; you can't hardly get to the bottom of it.

L. ANNE. Everything's built on something, isn't it? And what's that built on?

JAMES. Ask another.

L. ANNE. If you wanted to blow it up, though, you'd have to begin from here, wouldn't you?

JAMES. Who'd want to blow it up?

L. ANNE. It would make a mess in Park Lane.

JAMES. I've seen a lot bigger messes than this'd make, out in the war.

L. ANNE. Oh! but that's years ago! Was it like this in the trenches, James?

JAMES. [Grimly] Ah! 'Cept that you couldn't lay your 'and on a bottle o' port when you wanted one.

L. ANNE. Do you, when you want it, here?

JAMES. [On guard] I only suggest it's possible.

L. ANNE. Perhaps Poulder does.

JAMES. [Icily] I say nothin' about that.

L. ANNE. Oh! Do say something!

JAMES. I'm ashamed of you, Miss Anne, pumpin' me!

L. ANNE. [Reproachfully] I'm not pumpin'! I only want to make Poulder jump when I ask him.

JAMES. [Grinning] Try it on your own responsibility, then; don't bring me in!

L. ANNE. [Switching off] James, do you think there's going to be a bloody revolution?

JAMES. [Shocked] I shouldn't use that word, at your age.

L. ANNE. Why not? Daddy used it this morning to Mother. [Imitating] "The country's in an awful state, darling; there's going to be a bloody revolution, and we shall all be blown sky-high." Do you like Daddy?

JAMES. [Taken aback] Like Lord William? What do you think? We chaps would ha' done anything for him out there in the war.

L. ANNE. He never says that—he always says he'd have done anything for you!

JAMES. Well—that's the same thing.

L. ANNE. It isn't—it's the opposite. What is class hatred, James?

JAMES. [Wisely] Ah! A lot o' people thought when the war was over there'd be no more o' that. [He sniggers] Used to amuse me to read in the papers abo the wonderful unity that was comin'. could ha' told 'em different.

L. ANNE. Why should people hat I like everybody.

JAMES. You know such a lot o' pe ple, don't you?

L. ANNE. Well, Daddy likes ever body, and Mother likes everybody, e cept the people who don't like Daddy. bar Miss Stokes, of course; but the who wouldn't?

JAMES. [With a touch of philosoph That's right—we all bars them that tri to get something out of us.

L. ANNE. Who do you bar, James

JAMES. Well—[Enjoying the luxu of thought]—Speaking generally, I h everybody that looks down their noses me. Out there in the trenches, there come a shell, and orf'd go some orficer head, an' I'd think: That might ha' be me—we're all equal in the sight o' t stars. But when I got home again amo the torfs, I says to meself: Out ther ye know, you filled a hole as well me; but here you've put it on aga with mufti.

L. ANNE. James, are your breech made of mufti?

JAMES. [Contemplating his legs w a certain contempt] Ah! Footmen we to ha' been off; but Lord William w scared we wouldn't get jobs in the ru We're on his conscience, and it's on conscience that I've been on his lo enough—so, now I've saved a bit, I goin' to take meself orf it.

L. ANNE. Oh! Are you goin Where?

JAMES. [Assembling the last bottl Out o' Blighty!

L. ANNE. Is a little blighter a li Englishman?

JAMES. [Embarrassed] Well—'e be.

L. ANNE. [Musing] James—w quite safe down here, aren't we, i revolution? Only, we wouldn't have Which would you rather—be safe, have fun?

JAMES. [Grimly] Well, I had my o' fun in the war.

L. ANNE. I like fun that happ when you're not looking.

AMES. Do you? You'd ha' been just ed.

. ANNE. James, is there a future ? Miss Stokes says so.

AMES. It's a belief, in the middle ses.

. ANNE. What are the middle class-

AMES. Anything from two 'undred a r to super-tax.

. ANNE. Mother says they're ter-e. Is Miss Stokes middle class?

AMES. Yes.

. ANNE. Then I expect they are ter-e. She's awfully virtuous, though, : she?

AMES. 'Tisn't so much the bein' vir-s, as the lookin' it, that's awful.

. ANNE. Are all the middle classes ous? Is Poulder?

AMES. [Dubiously] Well. . . . Ask !

. ANNE. Yes, I will. Look!

From an empty bin on the ground level she picks up a lighted taper, burnt almost to the end.

AMES. [Contemplating it] Careless!

ANNE. Oh! And look! [She points rounded metal object lying in the close to where the taper was] It's mb!

She is about to pick it up when JAMES takes her by the waist and puts her aside.

MES. [Sternly] You stand back e! I don't like the look o' that!

ANNE. [With intense interest] Is it y a bomb? What fun!

MES. Go and fetch Poulder while ep an eye on it.

ANNE. [On tiptoe of excitement] nly I can make him jump! Oh, es! we needn't put the light out, we?

MES. No. Clear off and get him, and you come back.

ANNE. Oh! but I must! I found

MES. Cut along.

ANNE. Shall we bring a bucket?

MES. Yes.

ANNE flies off.

MES. [Gazing at the object] Near Thought I'd seen enough o' them st my time. That little gas blighter! He looked a rum 'un, too—one o' these 'ere Bolshies.

In the presence of this grim object the habits of the past are too much for him. He sits on the ground, leaning against one of the bottle baskets, keeping his eyes on the bomb, his large, lean gorgeous body spread, one elbow on his plush knee. Taking out an empty pipe, he places it mechanically, bowl down, between his lips. There enter, behind him, as from a communication trench, POULDER, in swallow-tails, with LITTLE ANNE behind him.

L. ANNE. [Peering round him—ecstatic] Hurrah! Not gone off yet! It can't—can it—while James is sitting on it?

POULDER. [Very broad and stout, with square shoulders, a large ruddy face, and a small mouth] No noise, Miss. James!

JAMES. Hallo!

POULDER. What's all this?

JAMES. Bomb!

POULDER. Miss Anne, off you go, and don't you——

L. ANNE. Come back again! I know! [She flies.

JAMES. [Extending his hand with the pipe in it] See!

POULDER. [Severely] You've been at it again! Look here, you're not in the trenches now. Get up! What are your breeches goin' to be like? You might break a bottle any moment!

JAMES. [Rising with a jerk to a sort of "Attention!"] Look here, you starched antiquity, you and I and that bomb are here in the sight of the stars. If you don't look out I'll stamp on it and blow us all to glory! Drop your civilian swank!

POULDER. [Seeing red] Ho! Because you had the privilege of fightin' for your country, you still think you can put it on, do you? Take up your wine! 'Pon my word, you fellers have got no nerve left!

JAMES makes a sudden swoop, lifts the bomb and poises it in both hands. POULDER recoils against a bin and gazes at the object.

JAMES. Put up your hands!

POULDER. I defy you to make me ridiculous.

JAMES. [Fiercely] Up with 'em!

POULDER'S hands go up in an uncontrollable spasm, which he subdues almost instantly, pulling them down again.

JAMES. Very good.

[He lowers the bomb.

POULDER. [Surprised] I never lifted 'em.

JAMES. You'd have made a first-class Boche, Poulder. Take the bomb yourself; you're in charge of this section.

POULDER. [Pouting] It's no part of my duty to carry menial objects; if you're afraid of it I'll send 'Enry.

JAMES. Afraid! You 'Op o' me thumb!

From the "communication trench" appears LITTLE ANNE, followed by a thin, sharp, sallow-faced man of thirty-five or so, and another FOOTMAN, carrying a wine cooler.

L. ANNE. I've brought the bucket, and the Press.

PRESS. [In front of POULDER'S round eyes and mouth] Ah, major domo, I was just taking the names of the Anti-Sweating dinner. [He catches sight of the bomb in JAMES'S hand] By George! What A.I. irony! [He brings out a note-book and writes] "Highest class dining to relieve distress of lowest class—bombed by same!" Tipping!

[He rubs his hands.

POULDER. [Drawing himself up] Sir? This is present!

[He indicates ANNE with the flat of his hand.

L. ANNE. I found the bomb.

PRESS. [Absorbed] By Jove! This is a piece of luck! [He writes.

POULDER. [Observing him] This won't do—it won't do at all!

PRESS. [Writing—absorbed] "Beginning of the British Revolution!"

POULDER. [To JAMES] Put it in the cooler. 'Enry, 'old up the cooler. Gently! Miss Anne, get be'ind the Press.

JAMES. [Grimly—holding the bomb above the cooler] It won't be the Press that'll stop Miss Anne goin' to 'Eaven if one o' this sort goes off. Look out! I'm goin' to drop it.

All recoil. HENRY puts the cooler down and backs away.

L. ANNE. [Dancing forward] Oh! Let me see! I missed all the war, you know.

JAMES lowers the bomb into the cooler.

POULDER. [Regaining courage — to THE PRESS, who is scribbling in his note-book] If you mention this before the police lay their hands on it, it'll be contempt o' Court.

PRESS. [struck] I say, major domo, don't call in the police! That's the last resort. Let me do the Sherlocking for you. Who's been down here?

L. ANNE. The plumber's man about the gas—a little blighter we'd never seen before.

JAMES. Lives close by, in Royal Court Mews—No. 3. I had a word with him before he came down. Lemmy his name is.

PRESS. "Lemmy." [Noting the address] Right-o!

L. ANNE. Oh! Do let me come with you!

POULDER. [Barring the way] I've got to lay it all before Lord William.

PRESS. Ah! What's he like?

POULDER. [With dignity] A gentleman, sir.

PRESS. Then he won't want the police in.

POULDER. Nor the Press, if I may go so far as to say so.

PRESS. One to you. But I defy you to keep this from the Press, major domo. This is the most significant thing that has happened in our time. Guy Fawkes is nothing to it. The foundations of Society reeling! By George, it's a second Bethlehem! [He writes.

POULDER. [To JAMES] Take up your wine and follow me. 'Enry, bring the cooler. Miss Anne, precede us. [To THE PRESS] You defy me? Very well, I'm goin' to lock you up here.

PRESS. [Uneasy] I say—this is medieval. [He attempts to pass.

POULDER. [Barring the way] Not so, James, put him up in that empty 'ox bin. We can't have dinner disturbed in any way.

JAMES. [Putting his hands on THE PRESS'S shoulders] Look here—go quiet

e had a grudge against you yellow vspaper boys ever since the war—
:hin' up your daily hate, an' makin' Huns desperate. You nearly took my five hundred times out there. If you eal, I'm goin' to take yours once—that'll be enough.

'RESS. That's awfully unjust. I'm not ow!

AMES. Well, you look it. Hup!

'RESS. Little Lady Anne, haven't you authority with these fellows?

. ANNE. [Resisting POULDER's pres-
?] I won't go! I simply must see ies put him up!

RESS. Now, I warn you all plainly iere'll be a leader on this.

[He tries to bolt, but is seized by JAMES.

AMES. [Ironically] Ho!

RESS. My paper has the biggest in-nce——

AMES. That's the one! Git up in
'ock bin, and mind your feet among claret.

RESS. This is an outrage on the ss.

AMES. Then it'll wipe out one by the ss on the Public—an' leave just a ion over! Hup!

OULDER. 'Enry, give 'im an 'and.

THE PRESS mounts, assisted by JAMES and HENRY.

. ANNE. [Ecstatic] It's lovely!

OULDER. [Nervously] Mind the '87!
d!

AMES. Mind your feet in Mr. Poul-s favourite wine!

A WOMAN'S voice is heard, as from the depths of a cave, calling "Anne! Anne!"

. ANNE. [Aghast] Miss Stokes—I t hide!

She gets behind POULDER. The three Servants achieve dignified positions in front of the bins. The voice comes nearer. THE PRESS sits dangling his feet, grinning. MISS STOKES appears. She is a woman of forty-five and terribly good manners. Her greyish hair is rolled back off her forehead. She is in a high evening dress, and in the dim light radiates a startled composure.

MISS S. Poulder, where is Miss Anne?

ANNE lays hold of the backs of his legs.

POULDER. [Wincing] I am not in a position to inform you, Miss.

MISS S. They told me she was down here. And what is all this about a bomb?

POULDER. [Lifting his hand in a calming manner] The crisis is past; we have it in ice, Miss. 'Enry, show Miss Stokes.

HENRY indicates the cooler.

MISS S. Good gracious! Does Lord William know?

POULDER. Not at present, Miss.

MISS S. But he ought to, at once.

POULDER. We 'ave 'ad complications.

MISS S. [Catching sight of the legs of THE PRESS] Dear me! What are those?

JAMES. [Gloomily] The complications.

MISS STOKES puts up her glasses and stares at them.

PRESS. [Cheerfully] Miss Stokes, would you kindly tell Lord William I'm here from the Press, and would like to speak to him?

MISS S. But—er—why are you up there?

JAMES. 'E got up out o' remorse, Miss.

MISS S. What do you mean, James?

PRESS. [Warmly] Miss Stokes, I appeal to you. Is it fair to attribute responsibility to an unsigned journalist for what he has to say?

JAMES. [Sepulchrally] Yes, when you've got 'im in a nice dark place.

MISS S. James, be more respectful! We owe the Press a very great debt.

JAMES. I'm goin' to pay it, Miss.

MISS S. [At a loss] Poulder, this is really most——

POULDER. I'm bound to keep the Press out of temptation, Miss, till I've laid it all before Lord William. 'Enry, take up the cooler. James, watch 'im till we get clear, then bring on the rest of the wine and lock up. Now, Miss.

MISS S. But where is Anne?

PRESS. Miss Stokes, as a lady——!

MISS S. I shall go and fetch Lord William!

POULDER. We will all go, Miss.

L. ANNE. [Rushing out from behind his legs] No—me!

She eludes MISS STOKES and vanishes, followed by that distracted but still well-mannered lady.

POULDER. [Looking at his watch] 'Enry, leave the cooler, and take up the wine; tell Thomas to lay it out; get the champagne into ice, and 'ave Charles 'andy in the 'all in case some literary bounder comes punctual.

HENRY takes up the wine and goes.

PRESS. [Above his head] I say, let me down. This is a bit undignified, you know. My paper's a great organ.

POULDER. [After a moment's hesitation] Well—take 'im down, James; he'll do some mischief among the bottles.

JAMES. 'Op off your base, and trust to me.

THE PRESS slides off the bin's edge, is received by JAMES, and not landed gently.

POULDER. [Contemplating him] The incident's closed; no ill-feeling, I hope?

PRESS. No-o.

POULDER. That's right. [Clearing his throat] While we're waitin' for Lord William—if you're interested in wine—[Philosophically] you can read the history of the times in this cellar. Take 'ock. [He points to a bin] Not a bottle gone. German product, of course. Now, that 'ock is 'avin' the time of its life—maturin' grandly; got a wonderful chance. About the time we're bringing ourselves to drink it, we shall be havin' the next great war. With luck that 'ock may lie there another quarter of a century, and a sweet pretty wine it'll be. I only hope I may be here to drink it. Ah! [He shakes his head]—but look at claret! Times are hard on claret. We're givin' it an awful doin'. Now, there's a Ponty Canny [He points to a bin]—if we weren't so 'opelessly allied with France, that wine would have a reasonable future. As it is—none! We drink it up and up; not more than sixty dozen left. And where's its equal to come from for a dinner wine—ah! I ask you? On the other hand, port is steady; made in a little country, all but the cobwebs and the old boot flavour; guaranteed by the British Navy; we may 'ope for the best with port. Do you drink it?

PRESS. When I get the chance.

POULDER. Ah! [Clears his throat] I've often wanted to ask: What do they pay you—if it's not indelicate?

THE PRESS shrugs his shoulders.

POULDER. Can you do it at the money?

THE PRESS shakes his head.

POULDER. Still—it's an easy life! I've regretted sometimes that I didn't have a shot at it myself; influencin' other people without disclosin' your identity—something very attractive about that. [Lowering his voice] Between man and man, now—what do you think of the situation of the country—these processions of the unemployed—the Red Flag an' the Marsillaisy in the streets—all this talk about an upheaval?

PRESS. Well, speaking as a Socialist——

POULDER. [Astounded] Why, I thought your paper was Tory!

PRESS. So it is. That's nothing!

POULDER. [Open-mouthed] Dear me! [Pointing to the bomb] So you really think there's something in this?

JAMES. [Sepulchrally] 'Igh explosive.

PRESS. [Taking out his note-book] Too much, anyway, to let it drop.

A pleasant voice calls "Poulder! Hallo!"

POULDER. [Forming a trumpet with his hand] Me Lord!

As LORD WILLIAM appears, JAMES overcome by reminiscences, salutes, and is mechanically answered. LORD WILLIAM has "charm." His hair and moustache are crisp and just beginning to grizzle. His bearing is free, easy, and only faintly armoured. He will go far to meet you any day. He is in full evening dress.

LORD W. [Cheerfully] I say, Poulder, what have you and James been doing to the Press? Liberty of the Press—it isn't what it was, but there is a limit. Where is he?

He turns to JAMES, between whom and himself there is still the freemasonry of the trenches.

JAMES. [Pointing to POULDER] Be'ind the parapet, me Lord.

THE PRESS moves out from where he has involuntarily been screened by POULDER, who looks at JAMES severely. LORD WILLIAM hides a smile.

PRESS. Very glad to meet you, Lord Illiam. My presence down here is te involuntary.

LORD W. [With a charming smile] I ow. The Press has to put its—er—to to the bottom of everything. Where's s bomb, Poulder? Ah!

[He looks into the wine cooler.

PRESS. [Taking out his note-book] uld I have a word with you on the sis, before dinner, Lord William?

LORD W. It's time you and James were Poulder. [Indicating the cooler] ok after this; tell Lady William I'll there in a minute.

POULDER. Very good, me Lord.

[He goes, followed by JAMES carrying the cooler.

As THE PRESS turns to look after them, LORD WILLIAM catches sight of his back.

LORD W. I must apologise, sir. Can I sh you?

PRESS. [Dusting himself] Thanks; it's y behind. [He opens his note-book] w, Lord William, if you'd kindly line your views on the national situa-1; after such a narrow escape from th, I feel they might have a moral ect. My paper, as you know, is con-ned with the deepest aspect of things. the way, what do you value your ise and collection at?

LORD W. [Twisting his little mouche] Really—I can't! Really!

PRESS. Might I say a quarter of a llion—lifted in two seconds and a half undred thousand to the second. It ngs it home, you know.

LORD W. No, no; dash it! No!

PRESS. [Disappointed] I see—not w attention to your property in present excited state of public ling? Well, suppose we approach it m viewpoint of the Anti-Sweating ner. I have the list of guests—very ighty!

LORD W. Taken some lifting—would-they?

PRESS. [Seriously] May I say that u designed the dinner to soften the sion, at this crisis? You saw that se, I suppose, this morning, of the woman dying of starvation in Bethnal Green?

LORD W. [Desperately] Yes—yes! I've been horribly affected. I always knew this slump would come after the war, sooner or later.

PRESS. [Writing] ". . . had predicted slump."

LORD W. You see, I've been an Anti-Sweating man for years, and I thought if only we could come together now . . .

PRESS. [Nodding] I see—I see! Get Society interested in the Sweated, through the dinner. I have the menu here. [He produces it.

LORD W. Good God, man—more than that—! I want to show the people that we stand side by side with them, as we did in the trenches. The whole thing's too jolly awful. I lie awake over it.

[He walks up and down.

PRESS. [Scribbling] One moment, please. I'll just get that down—— "Too jolly awful—lies awake over it. Was wearing a white waistcoat with pearl buttons." [At a sign of resentment from his victim] I want the human touch, Lord William—it's everything in my paper. What do you say about this attempt to bomb you?

LORD W. Well, in a way I think it's d—d natural.

PRESS. [Scribbling] "Lord William thought it d—d natural."

LORD W. [Overhearing] No, no; don't put that down. What I mean is, I should like to get hold of those fellows that are singing the "Marseillaise" about the streets—fellows that have been in the war—real sports they are, you know—thorough good chaps at bottom—and say to them: "Have a feeling heart, boys; put yourself in my position." I don't believe a bit they'd want to bomb me then. [He walks up and down.

PRESS. [Scribbling and muttering] "The idea of brotherhood——" D'you mind my saying that? Word brotherhood—always effective—always—— [He writes.

LORD. W. [Bewildered] "Brotherhood!" Well, it's pure accident that I'm here and they're there. All the same, I can't pretend to be starving. Can't go out into Hyde Park and stand on a tub, can I? But if I could only show them what I feel—they're such good chaps—poor devils.

PRESS. I quite appreciate! [He writes] "Camel and needle's eye." You were at Eton and Oxford? Your constituency I know. Clubs? But I can get all that. Is it your view that Christianity is on the up-grade, Lord William?

LORD W. [Dubious] What d'you mean by Christianity—loving-kindness and that? Of course I think that dogma's got the knock. [He walks.

PRESS. [Writing] "Lord William thought dogma had got the knock." I should like you just to develop your definition of Christianity. "Loving-kindness"—strikes rather a new note.

LORD W. New. What about the Sermon on the Mount?

PRESS. [Writing] "Refers to Sermon on Mount." I take it you don't belong to any Church, Lord William?

LORD W. [Exasperated] Well, really—I've been baptised and that sort of thing. But look here——

PRESS. Oh! you can trust me—I shan't say anything that you'll regret. Now, do you consider that a religious revival would help to quiet the country?

LORD W. Well, I think it would be a deuced good thing if everybody were a bit more kind.

PRESS. Ah! [Musing] I feel that your views are strikingly original, Lord William. If you could just open out on them a little more? How far would you apply kindness in practice?

LORD W. Can you apply it in theory?

PRESS. I believe it is done. But would you allow yourself to be blown up with impunity?

LORD W. Well, that's a bit extreme. But I quite sympathise with this chap. Imagine yourself in his shoes. He sees a huge house, all these bottles, us swilling them down; perhaps he's got a starving wife, or consumptive kids.

PRESS. [Writing and murmuring] Um-m! "Kids."

LORD W. He thinks: "But for the grace of God, there swill I. Why should that blighter have everything and I nothing?" and all that.

PRESS. [Writing] "And all that [Eagerly] Yes?

LORD W. And gradually—you see this contrast—becomes an obsession wi him. "There's got to be an examp made," he thinks; and—er—he makes don't you know?

PRESS. [Writing] Ye-es? And—wh you're the example?

LORD W. Well, you feel a bit blue, course. But my point is that you qui see it.

PRESS. From the other world. Do y believe in a future life, Lord Willian The public took a lot of interest in t question, if you remember, at the tir of the war. It might revive at any m ment, if there's to be a revolution.

LORD W. The wish is always father the thought, isn't it?

PRESS. Yes! But—er—doesn't t question of a future life rather bear your point about kindness? If there is one—why be kind?

LORD W. Well, I should say o oughtn't to be kind for any motive that's self-interest, but just because o feels it, don't you know?

PRESS. [Writing vigorously] Tha very new—very new!

LORD W. [Simply] You chaps a wonderful.

PRESS. [Doubtfully] You mean we —we're——

LORD W. No, really. You have such d—d hard time. It must be perfec beastly to interview fellows like me.

PRESS. Oh! Not at all, Lord Willia Not at all. I assure you, compared w a literary man, it's—it's almost heaven

LORD W. You must have a wond ful knowledge of things.

PRESS. [Bridling a little] Well shouldn't say that.

LORD W. I don't see how you avoid it. You turn your hands to eve thing.

PRESS. [Modestly] Well—yes, yes.

LORD W. I say: Is there really ing to be a revolution, or are you m ing it up, you Press?

PRESS. We don't know. We n know whether we come before event, or it comes before us.

LORD W. That's very deep—

ep. D'you mind lending me your note-ok a moment. I'd like to stick that wn. All right, I'll use the other end.

THE PRESS hands it hypnotically.

LORD W. [Jotting] Thanks awfully. ow what's your real opinion of the uation.

PRESS. As a man or a Press man?

LORD W. Is there any difference?

PRESS. Is there any connection?

LORD W. Well, as a man.

PRESS. As a man, I think it's rotten.

LORD W. [Jotting] "Rotten." And as ress-man?

PRESS. [Smiling] Prime.

LORD W. What! Like a Stilton cheese.
, ha! [He is about to write.

PRESS. My stunt, Lord William. You
d that. [He jots it on his cuff.

LORD W. But look here? Would you y that a strong press movement would lp to quiet the country?

PRESS. Well, as you ask me, Lord illiam, I'll tell you. No newspapers a month would do the trick.

LORD W. [Jotting] By Jove! That's lliant.

PRESS. Yes, but I should starve. [He denly looks up, and his eyes, like nlets, bore their way into LORD WIL-AM'S pleasant, troubled face] Lord illiam, you could do me a real kind-ss. Authorise me to go and inter-w the fellow who left the bomb here;
e got his address. I promise you to it most discreetly. Fact is—well—n in low water. Since the war we nply can't get sensation enough for new taste. Now, if I could have an icle headed: "Bombed and Bomber" sort of double interview, you know, very likely set me on my legs
ain! [Very earnestly] Look!

[He holds out his frayed wrist- bands.

LORD W. [Grasping his hand] My ar chap, certainly. Go and interview s blighter, and then bring him round
e. You can do that for me. I'd very ch like to see him, as a matter of t.

PRESS. Thanks awfully; I shall never get it. Oh! might I have my note-ok?

LORD WILLIAM hands it back.

LORD W. And look here, if there's anything—when a fellow's fortunate and another's not—— [He puts his hand into his breast pocket.

PRESS. Oh, thank you! But you see, I shall have to write you up a bit, Lord William. The old aristocracy—you know what the public still expects; if you were to lend me money, you might feel——

LORD W. By Jove! Never should have dreamt of—— PRESS. No! But it wouldn't do. Have you a photograph of yourself?

LORD W. Not on me.

PRESS. Pity! By the way, has it occurred to you that there may be another bomb on the premises?

LORD W. Phew! I'll have a look.

He looks at his watch, and begins hurriedly searching the bins, bending down and going on his knees. THE PRESS reverses the note-book again and sketches him.

PRESS. [To himself] That'll do. "Lord William examines the foundations of his house."

A voice calls "Bill!" THE PRESS snaps the note-book to, and looks up. There, where the "communication trench" runs in, stands a tall and elegant woman in the extreme of evening dress.

PRESS. [With presence of mind] Lady William? You'll find Lord William—— Oh! Have you a photograph of him?

LADY W. Not on me.

PRESS. [Eyeing her] Er—no—I suppose not—no. Excuse me!

[He sidles past her and is gone.

LADY W. [With lifted eyebrows] Bill!

LORD W. [Emerging, dusting his knees] Hallo, Nell! I was just making sure there wasn't another bomb.

LADY W. Yes; that's why I came down. Who was that person?

LORD W. Press.

LADY W. He looked awfully yellow. I hope you haven't been giving yourself away.

LORD W. [Dubiously] Well, I don't know. They're like corkscrews.

LADY W. What did he ask you?

LORD W. What didn't he?

LADY W. Well, what did you tell him?

LORD W. That I'd been baptised—but he promised not to put it down.

LADY W. Bill, you are absurd.

[She gives a light little laugh.

LORD W. I don't remember anything else, except that it was quite natural we should be bombed, don't you know?

LADY W. Why, what harm have we done?

LORD W. Been born, my dear. [Suddenly serious] I say, Nell, how am I to tell what this fellow felt when he left that bomb here?

LADY W. Why do you want to?

LORD W. Out there one used to know what one's men felt.

LADY W. [Staring] My dear boy, I really don't think you ought to see the Press; it always upsets you.

LORD W. Well! Why should you and I be going to eat ourselves silly to improve the condition of the sweated, when——

LADY W. [Calmly] When they're going to "improve" ours, if we don't look out. We've got to get in first, Bill.

LORD W. [Gloomily] I know. It's all fear. That's it! Here we are, and here we shall stay—as if there'd never been a war.

LADY W. Well, thank heaven there's no "front" to a revolution. You and I can go to glory together this time. Compact! Anything that's on, I'm to share in.

LORD W. Well, in reason.

LADY W. No, in rhyme too.

LORD W. I say, your dress!

LADY W. Yes, Poulder tried to stop me, but I wasn't going to have you blown up without me.

LORD W. You duck. You do look stunning. Give us a kiss!

LADY W. [Starting back] Oh, Bill! Don't touch me—your hands!

LORD W. Never mind, my mouth's clean.

They stand about a yard apart, and bending their faces towards each other, kiss on the lips.

L. ANNE. [Appearing suddenly from the "communication trench," and tip-toeing silently between them] Oh, Mu
You and Daddy are wasting time!

Curtain.

ACT II

The single room of old MRS. LEMM in a small grey house in Beth Green, the room of one cumbe by little save age, and the crock debris of the past. A bed, a c board, a coloured portrait of Qu
Victoria, and—of all things—a dle, hanging on the wall. By side of old MRS. LEMMY in chair is a pile of corduroy trous her day's sweated sewing, an small table. She sits with her b to the window, through which the last of the light, the oppo side of the little grey street visible under the evening sky, w hangs one white cloud shaped a horned beast. She is still sew and her lips move. Being old, lonely, she has that habit of tal to herself, distressing to those cannot overhear. From the sm of her tongue she was once a Country cottage woman; from look of her creased, parchm face, she was once a pretty girl black eyes, in which there is much vitality. The door is op with difficulty and a little gir
ters, carrying a pile of unfin corduroy trousers nearly as as herself. She puts them against the wall, and advances is eleven or twelve years old; l eyed, dark-haired, and sallow.
a woman of this and half of an world, except when as now, as irresponsible a bit of life of a wall. She stands look

MRS. LEMMY with dancing e

L. AIDA. I've brought yer to-m trahsers. Y'nt yer finished wiv to
I want to tyke 'em.

MRS. L. No, me dear. Drat th one—me old fengers!

L. AIDA. I learnt some poytry to-dy—did.

MRS. L. Well, I never!

L. AIDA. [Reciting with unction]

"Little lamb who myde thee?
Dost thou know who myde thee,
Gyve thee life and byde thee feed
By the stream and o'er the mead;
Gyve thee clothing of delight,
Softest clothing, woolly, bright;
Gyve thee such a tender voice,
Myking all the vyles rejoice.
Little lamb who myde thee?
Dost thou know who myde thee?"

MRS. L. 'Tes wonderful what things ıey tache yu nowadays.

L. AIDA. When I grow up I'm goin') 'ave a revolver an' shoot the people ıat steals my jools.

MRS. L. Deary-me, wherever du yu ɛt yure notions?

L. AIDA. An' I'm goin' to ride on an rse be'ind a man; an' I'm goin' to ɾce trynes in my motor car.

MRS. L. [Dryly] Ah! Yu'um gwine) be very busy, that's sartin. Can you ːw?

L. AIDA. [With a smile] Nao.

MRS. L. Don' they tache yu that, ıere?

L. AIDA. [Blending contempt and a ŋgering curiosity] Nao.

MRS. L. 'Tes wonderful genteel.

L. AIDA. I can sing, though.

MRS. L. Let's 'ear yu, then.

L. AIDA. [Shaking her head] I can ply ıe pianer. I can ply a tune.

MRS. L. Whose pianner?

L. AIDA. Mrs. Brahn's when she's one aht.

MRS. L. Well, yu are gettin' edju-ation! Du they tache yu to love yure eighbours?

L. AIDA. [Ineffably] Nao. [Straying) the window] Mrs. Lemmy, what's the ıoon?

MRS. L. The mune? Us yused to zay was made o' crame cheese.

L. AIDA. I can see it.

MRS. L. Ah! Don' yu never go wishin' ɔr it, me dear.

L. AIDA. I daon't.

MRS. L. Folks as wish for the mune ever du no gude.

L. AIDA. [Craning out, brilliant] I'm goin' dahn in the street, I'll come back for yer trahsers.

MRS. L. Well, go yu, then, an' get a breath o' fresh air in yure chakes. I'll sune 'a feneshed.

L. AIDA. [Solemnly] I'm goin' to be a dancer, I am.

[She rushes suddenly to the door, pulls it open, and is gone.

MRS. L. [Looking after her, and talking to herself] Ah! 'Er've a-got all 'er troubles before 'er! "Little lamb, 'u made 'ee?" [Cackling] 'Tes a funny world, tu! [She sings to herself.

"There is a green 'ill far away
Without a city wall,
Where our dear Lord was crucified,
'U died to save us all."

The door is opened, and LEMMY comes in; a little man with a stubble of dark moustache and spiky dark hair; large, peculiar eyes he has, and a look of laying his ears back, a look of doubting, of perversity with laughter up the sleeve, that grows on those who have to do with gas and water. He shuts the door.

MRS. L. Well, Bob, I 'aven't a-seen yu this tu weeks.

LEMMY comes up to his mother, and sits down on a stool, sets a tool-bag between his knees, and speaks in a cockney voice.

LEMMY. Well, old lydy o' leisure! Wot would y' 'ave for supper, if yer could choose—salmon wivaht the tin, an' tipsy cyke?

MRS. L. [Shaking her head and smiling blandly] That's showy. Toad in the 'ole I'd 'ave—and a glass o' port wine.

LEMMY. Providential. [He opens a tool-bag] Wot d'yer think I've got yer?

MRS. L. I 'ope yu've a-got yurself a job, my son!

LEMMY. [With his peculiar smile] Yus, or I couldn't 'ave afforded yer this. [He takes out a bottle] Not 'arf! This'll put the blood into yer. Pork wine—once in the cellars of the gryte. We'll drink the ryyal family in this.

[He apostrophises the portrait of Queen Victoria.

MRS. L. Ah! She was a praaper gude queen. I see 'er once, when 'er was bein' burried.

LEMMY. Ryalties—I got nothin' to sy agynst 'em in this country. But the Styte 'as got to 'ave its pipes seen to. The 'ole show's goin' up pop. Yer'll wyke up one o' these dyes, old lydy, and find yerself on the roof, wiv nuffin' between yer an' the grahnd.

MRS. L. I can't tell what yu'm talkin' about.

LEMMY. We're goin' to 'ave a triumpherat in this country—Liberty, Equality, Fraternity; an' if yer arsk me, they won't be in power six months before they've cut each other's throats. But I don' care—I want to see the blood flow. [Dispassionately] I don't care 'oose blood it is. I want to see it flow!

MRS. L. [Indulgently] Yu'm a funny boy, that's sartin.

LEMMY. [Carving at the cork with a knife] This 'ere cork is like Sasiety—rotten; it's old—old an' moulderin'. [He holds up a bit of cork on the point of the knife] Crumblin' under the wax, it is. In goes the screw an' out comes the cork. [With unction]—An' the blood flows. [Tipping the bottle, he lets a drop fall into the middle of his hand, and licks it up. Gazing with queer and doubting commiseration at his mother] Well, old dear, wot shall we 'ave it aht of—the gold loving-cup, or—what? 'Ave yer supper fust, though, or it'll go to yer 'ead! [He goes to the cupboard and takes out a dish in which a little bread is sopped in a little milk] Cold pap! 'Ow can yer? 'Yn't yer got a kipper in the 'ouse?

MRS. L. [Admiring the bottle] Port wine! 'Tis a brave treat! I'll 'ave it out of the "Present from Margitt," Bob. I tuk 'ee therr by excursion when yu was six months. Yu 'ad a shrimp an' it choked yu praaperly. Yu was always a squeamy little feller. I can't never think 'ow yu managed in the war-time, makin' they shells.

LEMMY, who has brought to the table two mugs and blown the dust out of them, fills them with port, and hands one to his mother, who is eating her bread and milk

LEMMY. Ah! Nothin' worried me 'cept the want o' soap.

MRS. L. [Cackling gently] So it di still, then! Luke at yure face. Yu neve was a clean boy, like Jim.

She puts out a thin finger and touches his cheek, whereon is a black smudge.

LEMMY. [Scrubbing his cheek with his sleeve] All right! Y'see, I come stryte 'ere, to get rid o' this.

[He drinks

MRS. L. [Eating her bread and milk] 'Tes a pity yu'm not got a wife to see tu wash yureself.

LEMMY. [Goggling] Wife! Not m —I daon't want ter myke no food fo pahder. Wot oh!—they said, time o' th war—ye're fightin' for yer children' 'eritage. Well, wot's the 'eritage like now we've got it? Empty as a shell be fore yer put the 'igh explosive in. Wot it like? [Warming to his theme] Like prophecy in the pypers—not a bit mor substantial.

MRS. L. [Slightly hypnotised] How du talk! The gas goes to yure 'ead, think!

LEMMY. I did the gas to-dy in th cellars of an 'ouse where the wine wa mountains 'igh. A regiment couldn't drunk it. Marble pillars in the 'all, bu ler broad as an observytion balloon, a four conscientious khaki footmen. Wh the guns was roarin' the talk was a for no more o' them glorious weeds style an' luxury was orf. See wot it naow. You've got a bare crust in th cupboard 'ere, I works from 'and mouth in a glutted market—an' the they stand abaht agyne in their britch in the 'ouses o' the gryte. I was reg'l overcome by it. I left a thing in th cellar—I left a thing. . . . It'll be a l ork'ard for me to-morrer.

[Drinks from his mu

MRS. L. [Placidly, feeling the warm of the little she has drunk] Wh thing?

LEMMY. Wot thing? Old lydy, ye like a winkle afore yer opens 'er— never see anything so peaceful. 'C d'yer manage it?

MRS. L. Settin' 'ere and thenkin'.

EMMY. Wot abaht?

MRS. L. We-el—Money, an' the works God.

EMMY. Ah! So yer give me a thought retimes.

MRS. L. [Lifting her mug] Yu ought er to ha' spent yure money on this, o!

EMMY. I thought that meself.

MRS. L. Last time I 'ad a glass o' t wine was the day yure brother went to Ameriky. [Smacking her] For a teetotal drink it du warm EMMY. [Raising his mug] Well, 's to the British revolution! 'Ere's he conflygrytion in the sky!

MRS. L. [Comfortably] So as it kape therr, 'twon't du no 'arm.

LEMMY goes to the window and unhooks his fiddle; he stands with it halfway to his shoulder. Suddenly he opens the window and leans out. A confused murmur of voices is heard, and a snatch of the "Marseillaise," sung by a girl. Then the shuffling tramp of feet, and figures are passing in the street.

EMMY. [Turning—excited] Wot'd I yer, old lydy? There it is—there it

MRS. L. [Placidly] What is?

EMMY. The revolution. [He cranes] They've got it on a barrer. erio!

OICE. [Answering] Cheerio!

EMMY. [Leaning out] I sy—you t tykin' the body, are yer?

OICE. Nao.

EMMY. Did she die o' starvytion— ?

OICE. She bloomin' well did; I know brother.

EMMY. Ah! That'll do us a bit o' d!

OICE. Cheerio!

EMMY. So long!

OICE. So long!

The girl's voice is heard again in the distance singing the "Marseillaise." The door is flung open and LITTLE AIDA comes running in again.

EMMY. 'Allo, little Aida!

L. AIDA. 'Allo, I been follerin' the corfin. It's better than a dead 'orse!

MRS. L. What coffin?

L. AIDA. Why, 'er's wot died o' starvytion up the street. They're goin' to tyke it to 'Yde Pawk, and 'oller.

MRS. L. Well, never yu mind wot they'm goin' to du. Yu wait an' take my trousers like a gude gell.

She puts her mug aside and takes up her unfinished pair of trousers. But the wine has entered her fingers, and strength to push the needle through is lacking.

LEMMY. [Tuning his fiddle] Wot'll yer 'ave, little Aida? "Dead March in Saul" or "When the fields was white wiv dysies"?

L. AIDA. [With a hop and a brilliant smile] Aoh yus! "When the fields"——

MRS. L. [With a gesture of despair] Deary me! I 'aven't a-got the strength!

LEMMY. Leave 'em alone, old dear! No one'll be goin' aht wivaht trahsers to-night 'cos yer leaves that one undone. Little Aida, fold 'em up!

LITTLE AIDA methodically folds the five finished pairs of trousers into a pile. LEMMY begins playing. A smile comes on the face of MRS. LEMMY, who is rubbing her fingers. LITTLE AIDA, trousers over arm, goes and stares at LEMMY playing.

LEMMY. [Stopping] Little Aida, one o' vese dyes yer'll myke an actress. I can see it in yer fyce!

LITTLE AIDA looks at him wide-eyed.

MRS. L. Don't 'ee putt things into 'er 'ead, Bob!

LEMMY. 'Tyn't 'er 'ead, old lydy—it's lower. She wants feedin'—feed 'er an' she'll rise. [He strikes into the "Machichi"] Look at 'er naow. I tell yer there's a fortune in 'er.

LITTLE AIDA has put out her tongue.

MRS. L. I'd suner there was a gude 'eart in 'er than any fortune.

L. AIDA. [Hugging her pile of trousers] It's thirteen pence three farthin's I've got to bring yer, an' a penny aht for me, mykes twelve three farthin's. [With the same little hop and sudden smile] I'm goin' to ride back on a bus, I am.

LEMMY. Well, you myke the most of it up there; it's the nearest you'll ever git to 'eaven.

MRS. L. Don' yu discourage 'er, Bob; she'm a gude little thing an't yu, dear?

L. AIDA. [Simply] Yus.

LEMMY. Not 'arf! Wot c'her do wiv yesterdy's penny?

L. AIDA. Movies.

LEMMY. An' the dy before?

L. AIDA. Movies.

LEMMY. Wot'd I tell yer, old lydy—she's got vicious tystes, she'll finish in the theayter yet. Tyke my tip, little Aida; you put every penny into yer foundytions, yer'll get on the boards quicker that wy.

MRS. L. Don' yu pay no 'eed to his talk.

L. AIDA. I daon't.

LEMMY. Would yer like a sip aht o' my mug?

L. AIDA. [Brilliant] Yus.

MRS. L. Not at yure age, me dear, though it is teetotal.

LITTLE AIDA puts her head on one side, like a dog trying to understand.

LEMMY. Well, 'ave one o' my gum-drops. [Holds out a paper.

LITTLE AIDA, brilliant, takes a flat, dark substance from it, and puts it in her mouth.

LEMMY. Give me a kiss, an' I'll give yer a penny.

LITTLE AIDA shakes her head, and leans out of window.

LEMMY. Muvver, she daon't know the valyer of money.

MRS. L. Never mind 'im, me dear.

L. AIDA. [Sucking the gum-drop—with difficulty] There's a taxicab at the corner.

LITTLE AIDA runs to the door. A figure stands in the doorway; she skids round him and out. THE PRESS comes in.

LEMMY. [Dubiously] Wot—oh!

PRESS. Mr. Lemmy?

LEMMY. The syme.

PRESS. I'm from the Press.

LEMMY. Blimy.

PRESS. They told me at your pla you were very likely here.

LEMMY. Yus—I left Downin' Stre a bit early to-dy!

[He twangs the fiddle-strings pon pously.

PRESS. [Taking out his note-boo and writing] "Fiddles while Rome burning!" Mr. Lemmy, it's my busine at this very critical time to find o what the nation's thinking. Now, as representative working man——

LEMMY. That's me.

PRESS. You can help me. What a your views?

LEMMY. [Putting down fiddle] Voos Sit dahn!

THE PRESS sits on the stool whi

LEMMY has vacated.

LEMMY. The Press—my Muvve Seventy-seven. She's a wonder; 'yn yer, old dear?

PRESS. Very happy to make your a quaintance, ma'am. [He writes] "Mr Lemmy, one of the veterans of indu try——" By the way, I've just passe a lot of people following a coffin.

LEMMY. Centre o' the cyclone—cy o' starvytion; you 'ad 'er in the pyp this mornin'.

PRESS. Ah, yes! Tragic occurrenc [Looking at the trousers] Hub of t Sweated Industries just here. I esp cially want to get at the heart——

MRS. L. 'Twasn't the 'eart, 'twas t stomach.

PRESS. [Writing] "Mrs. Lemmy go straight to the point."

LEMMY. Mister, is it my voos Muvver's yer want?

PRESS. Both.

LEMMY. 'Cos if yer get Muvver's, y won't 'ave time for mine. I tell y stryte [Confidentially] she's got glawss o' port wine in 'er. Naow, mi yer, I'm not anxious to be intervoo On the other 'and, anyfink I might 'a to sy of valyer—— There is a clawss politician that 'as nuffin' to sy—— Ao an' daon't 'e sy it just. I dunno w pyper yer represent——

PRESS. [Smiling] Well, Mr. Lemm it has the biggest influ——

LEMMY. They all 'as that; dyli weeklies, evenin's, Sundyes; but it's consequence—my voos are open and ove-board. Naow, wot shall we be- abaht?

Press. Yourself, if you please. And like you to know at once that my er wants the human note, the real rt-beat of things.

Lemmy. I see; sensytion; Well, 'ere I—a fust-clawss plumber's assist- —in a job to-dy an' out to-morrer. ere's a 'eart-beat in that, I tell yer. knows wot the morrer 'as for !

Press. [Writing] "The great human ie—Mr. Lemmy touches it at once."

Lemmy. I sy—keep my nyme aht o' ; I don' go in fer self-advertise- nt.

Press. [Writing] "True working-man nodest as usual."

Lemmy. I daon't want to embarrass Gover'ment. They're so ticklish ever e they got the 'abit, war-time, o' idin' wot people said.

Press. Right-o!

Lemmy. For instance, suppose there's n' to be a revolution——

The Press writes with energy.

Lemmy. 'Ow does it touch me? Like : I my go up—I cawn't come dahn; more can Muvver.

Mrs. L. [Surprisingly] Us all goes yn into the grave.

Press. "Mrs. Lemmy interjects the per note."

Lemmy. Naow, the gryte—they can ne dahn, but they cawn't go up! See! t two an' two together, an' that's 'ow touches me. [He utters a throaty gh] 'Ave yer got that?

Press. [Quizzical] Not go up? What out bombs, Mr. Lemmy?

Lemmy. [Dubious] Wot abaht 'em? s'pose ye're on the comic pypers? ve yer noticed wot a weakness they e for the 'orrible?

Press. [Writing] "A grim humour ped out here and there through the nestness of his talk."

[He sketches Lemmy's profile.

Lemmy. We 'ad an explosion in my tory time o' the war, that would t ha' done for you comics. [He medi- es] Lord! They was after it too,— y an' the Sundyes: but the Censor did 'em. Strike me, I could tell yer things!

Press. That's what I want, Mr. Lemmy; tell me things!

Lemmy. [Musing] It's a funny world, 'yn't it? 'Ow we did blow each other up! [Getting up to admire] I sy, I shall be syfe there. That won't betry me anonymiety. Why! I looks like the Prime Minister!

Press. [Rather hurt] You were going to tell me things.

Lemmy. Yus, an' they'll be the troof, too.

Press. I hope so; we don't——

Lemmy. Wot oh!

Press. [A little confused] We always try to verify——

Lemmy. Yer leave it at tryin', daon't yer? Never mind, ye're a gryte institootion. Blimy, yer do have jokes wiv it, spinnin' rahnd on yer own tyles, denyin' to-dy wot ye're goin' to print to-morrer. Ah, well! Ye're like all of us below the line o' comfort—live dyngerously—every dy yer last. That's wy I'm interested in the future.

Press. Well now—the future. [Writing] "He prophesies."

Lemmy. It's syfer, 'yn't it? [He winks] No one never looks back on prophecies. I remembers an editor—spring o' 1915—stykin' his reputytion the war'd be over in the follerin' October. Increased 'is circulytion abaht 'arf a million by it. 1917—an' war still on— 'ad 'is readers gone back on 'im? Nao! They was increasin' like rabbits. Prophesy wot people want to believe, an' ye're syfe. Naow, I'll styke my reputytion on somethin', you tyke it dahn word for word. This country's goin' to the dawgs—now, 'ere's the sensytion—unless we gets a new religion.

Press. Ah! Now for it—yes?

Lemmy. In one word: "Kindness." Daon't mistyke me, nao sickly sentiment and nao patronisin'. Me as kind to the millionaire as 'im to me.

[Fills his mug and drinks.

Press. [Struck] That's queer! Kindness! [Writing] "Extremes meet. Bombed and bomber breathing the same music."

LEMMY. But 'ere's the interestin' pynt. Can it be done wivaht blood?

PRESS. [Writing] "He doubts."

LEMMY. No daht wotever. It cawn't! Blood—and—kindness! Spill the blood o' them that aren't kind—an' there ye are!

PRESS. But pardon me, how are you to tell?

LEMMY. Blimy, they leaps to the heye!

PRESS. [Laying down his note-book] I say, let me talk to you as man to man for a moment.

LEMMY. Orl right. Give it a rest!

PRESS. Your sentiments are familiar to me. I've got a friend on the Press who's very keen on Christ and kindness; and wants to strangle the last king with the—hamstrings of the last priest.

LEMMY. [Greatly intrigued] Not 'arf! Does 'e?

PRESS. Yes. But have you thought it out? Because he hasn't.

LEMMY. The difficulty is—where to stop.

PRESS. Where to begin.

LEMMY. Lawd! I could begin almost anywhere. Why, every month abaht, there's a cove turns me aht of a job 'cos I daon't do just wot 'e likes. They'd 'ave to go. I tell yer stryte—the Temple wants cleanin' up.

PRESS. Ye-es. If I wrote what I thought, I should get the sack as quick as you. D'you say that justifies me in shedding the blood of my bosses?

LEMMY. The yaller Press 'as got no blood—'as it? You shed their ile an' vinegar—that's wot you've got to do. Stryte—do yer believe in the noble mission o' the Press?

PRESS. [Enigmatically] Mr. Lemmy, I'm a Pressman.

LEMMY. [Goggling] I see. Not much! [Gently jogging his mother's elbow] Wyke up, old lydy!

For MRS. LEMMY, who has been sipping placidly at her port, is nodding. The evening has drawn in. LEMMY strikes a match on his trousers and lights a candle.

LEMMY. Blood an' kindness—that's what's wanted—'specially blood! The 'istory o' me an' my family'll show ye that. Tyke my bruvver Fred—crushed by burycrats. Tyke Muvver 'erself! Talk o' the wrongs o' the people! I tell yer the foundytions is rotten. [He empties the bottle into his mother's mug] Daon't mind the mud at the bottom, old lydy—it's all strengthenin'. You tell the Press, Muvver. She can talk abaht the pawst.

PRESS. [Taking up his note-book, and becoming again his professional self] Yes, Mrs. Lemmy? "Age and Youth—Past and Present——"

MRS. L. Were yu talkin' about Fred? [The port has warmed her veins, the colour in her eyes and cheeks has deepened] My son Fred was always a gud boy—never did nothin' before 'e married. I can see Fred [She bends forward a little in her chair, looking straight before her] comin' in wi' a pheasant 'e'd found—terrible 'e was at findin' pheasants. When father died, an' yu was comin', Bob, Fred 'e said to me: "Don't yu never cry, Mother, I'll look after 'ee." An' so 'e did, till 'e married that day six months an' tuke to the drink in sorrer. 'E wasn't never the same boy again—not Fred. An' now 'e's in That. I can see poor Fred——

She slowly wipes a tear out of the corner of an eye with the back of her finger.

PRESS. [Puzzled] In—That?

LEMMY. [Sotto voce] Come orf it. Prison! 'S wot she calls it.

MRS. L. [Cheerful] They say life's a vale o' sorrows. Well, so 'tes, but don du to let yurself thenk so.

PRESS. And so you came to London, Mrs. Lemmy?

MRS. L. Same year as Father died. With the four o' them—that's my son Fred, an' my son Jim, an' my son Tom an' Alice. Bob there, 'e was born in London—an' a praaper time I 'ad of et.

PRESS. [Writing] "Her heroic struggles with poverty——"

MRS. L. Worked in a laundry, I did at fifteen shellin's a week, an' brought 'em all up on et till Alice 'ad the galopin' consumption. I can see poor Alice wi' the little red spots in 'er cheeks—an' I not knowin' wot to du wi' her-it I always kept up their buryin' mon-

. Funerals is very dear; Mr. Lemmy as six pound ten.

PRESS. "High price of Mr. Lemmy."

MRS. L. I've a-got the money for hen my time come; never touch et, matter 'ow things are. Better a tle goin' short here below, an' enter e kingdom of 'eaven independent.

PRESS. [Writing] "Death before disnour—heroine of the slums. Dickens
Betty Higden."

MRS. L. No, sir. Mary Lemmy. I've en a-many die, I 'ave; an' not one ievin'. I often says to meself: [*With
'ittle laugh*] "Me dear, when yu go, yu
'appy. Don' yu never fret about that."
ays. An' so I will; I'll go 'appy.

She stays quite still a moment, and behind her LEMMY draws one finger across his face.

MRS. L. [Smiling] "Yure old fengers-'ave a rest. Think o' that!" I says.
Twill be a brave change." I can see rself lyin' there an' duin' nothin'.

Again a pause, while MRS. LEMMY sees herself doing nothing.

LEMMY. Tell abaht Jim, old lydy.

MRS. L. My son Jim 'ad a family o' ven in six years. "I don't know 'ow s, Mother," 'e used to say to me; ney just sim to come!" That was Jim never knu from day to day what was min'. "Therr's another of 'em dead," used to say, "'tes funny, tu." "Well," used to say tc 'im; "no wonder, poor tle things, livin' in they model dwells. Therr's no air for 'em," I used to
y. "Well," 'e used to say, "what can I , Mother? Can't afford to live in rk Lane." An' 'e tuke an' went to neriky. [Her voice for the first time truly doleful] An' never came back.
ne feller. So that's my four sons—ie's dead, an' one's in—That, an' one's Ameriky, an' Bob 'ere, poor boy, 'e ways was a talker.

LEMMY, who has re-seated himself in the window and taken up his fiddle, twangs the strings.

PRESS. And now a few words about ur work, Mrs. Lemmy?

MRS. L. Well, I sews.

PRESS. [Writing] "Sews." Yes?

MRS. L. [Holding up her unfinished pair of trousers] I putt in the button-'oles, I stretches the flies, I lines the crutch, I putt on this bindin' [She holds up the calico that binds the top] I sews on the buttons, I presses the seams—Tuppence three farthin's the pair.

PRESS. Twopence three farthings a pair! Worse than a penny a line!

MRS. L. In a gude day I gets thru four pairs, but they'm gettin' plaguey 'ard for my old fengers.

PRESS. [Writing] "A monumental figure, on whose labour is built the mighty edifice of our industrialism."

LEMMY. I sy—that's good. Yer'll keep that, won't yer?

MRS. L. I finds me own cotton, tuppence three farthin's, and other expension is a penny three farthin's.

PRESS. And are you an exception, Mrs. Lemmy?

MRS. L. What's that?

LEMMY. Wot price the uvvers, old lydy? Is there a lot of yer sewin' yer fingers orf at tuppence 'ypenny the pair?

MRS. L. I can't tell yu that. I never sees nothin' in 'ere. I pays a penny to that little gell to bring me a dozen pair an' fetch 'em back. Poor little thing, she'm 'ardly strong enough to carry 'em. Feel! They'm very 'eavy!

PRESS. On the conscience of Society!

LEMMY. I sy—put that dahn, won't yer?

PRESS. Have things changed much since the war, Mrs. Lemmy?

MRS. L. Cotton's a lot dearer.

PRESS. All round, I mean.

MRS. L. Aw! Yu don' never get no change, not in my profession. [She oscillates the trousers] I've a-been in trousers fifteen year; ever since I got tu old for laundry.

PRESS. [Writing] "For fifteen years sewn trousers." What would a good week be, Mrs. Lemmy?

MRS. L. 'Tes a very gude week, seven shellin's.

LEMMY. [From the window] Bloomin' millionaire, Muvver. She's lookin' forward to 'eaven, where vey don't wear no trahsers.

MRS. L. [With spirit] 'Tidn' for me tc zay whether they du. An' 'tes on'y when I'm a bit low-sperrity-like as I wants to go therr. What I am a-lukin' forward to, though, 'tes a day in the country. I've not a-had one since before the war. A kind lady brought me in that bit of 'eather; 'tes wonderful sweet stuff when the 'oney's in et. When I was a little gell I used to zet in the 'eather gatherin' the whorts, an' me little mouth all black wi' eatin' them. 'Twas in the 'eather I used to zet, Sundays, courtin'. All flesh is grass—an' 'tesn't no bad thing—grass.

PRESS. [Writing] "The old paganism of the country." What is your view of life, Mrs. Lemmy?

LEMMY. [Suddenly] Wot is 'er voo of life? Shall I tell yer mine? Life's a disease—a blinkin' oak-apple! Daon't myke no mistyke. An' 'uman life's a yumourous disease; that's all the difference. Why—wot else can it be? See the bloomin' promise an' the blighted performance—different as a 'eadline to the noos inside. But yer couldn't myke Muvver see vat—not if yer talked to 'er for a week. Muvver still believes in fings. She's a country gell; at a 'undred and fifty she'll be a country gell, won't yer, old lydy?

MRS. L. Well, 'tesn't never been 'ome to me in London. I lived in the country forty year—I did my lovin' there; I burried Father therr. Therr bain't nothin' in life, yu know, but a bit o' lovin',—all said an' done; bit o' lovin', with the wind, an' the stars out.

LEMMY. [In a loud apologetic whisper] She 'yn't often like this. I told yer she'd got a glawss o' port in 'er.

MRS. L. 'Tes a brave pleasure, is lovin'. I likes to zee et in young folk. I likes to zee 'em kissin'; shows the 'eart in 'em. 'Tes the 'eart makes the world go round; 'tesn't nothin' else, in my opinion.

PRESS. [Writing] "—sings the swan song of the heart."

MRS. L. [Overhearing] No, I never yeard a swan sing—never! But I tell 'ee what I 'ave 'eard; the gells singin' in th' orchard 'angin' up the clothes to dry, an' the cuckoos callin' back to 'em. [Smiling] There's a-many songs in the country—the 'eart is free-like in th country!

LEMMY. [Sotto voce] Gi' me th Strand at ar' past nine.

PRESS. [Writing] "Town and coun try——"

MRS. L. 'Tidn't like that in London one day's jest like another. Not bu what therr's a 'eap o' kind-'eartednes 'ere.

LEMMY. [Gloomily] Kind'eartedness I daon't fink! "Boys an' gells come ou to play."

[He plays the old tune on his fiddle

MRS. L. [Singing] "Boys an' gell come out to play, The mune is shinin bright as day." [She laughs] I used t sing like a lark when I was a gell.

LITTLE AIDA enters.

L. AIDA. There's 'undreds follerin the corfin. 'Yn't you goin', Mr. Lemm —it's dahn your wy!

LEMMY. [Dubiously] Well yus— s'pose they'll miss me.

L. AIDA. Aoh! Tyke me!

PRESS. What's this?

LEMMY. The revolution in 'Yde Park

PRESS. [Struck] In Hyde Park? Th very thing. I'll take you down. M taxi's waiting.

L. AIDA. Yus; it's breathin' 'ard, a the corner.

PRESS. [Looking at his watch] Ah and Mrs. Lemmy. There's an Anti Sweating Meeting going on at a hous in Park Lane. We can get there i twenty minutes if we shove along. want you to tell them about the trouser making. You'll be a sensation!

LEMMY. [To himself] Sensytion! cawn't keep orf it!

MRS. L. Anti-Sweat. Poor fellers! 'ad one comes to see me before the wa an' they'm still goin' on? Wonderfu an't it?

PRESS. Come, Mrs. Lemmy; drive i a taxi, beautiful moonlit night; and the 'll give you a splendid cup of tea.

MRS. L. [Unmoved] Ah! I cudn never du without my tea. There's u an avenin' but I thinks to meself: No me dear, yu've a-got one more to fe ish, an' then yu'll 'ave yure cup o' te Thank you for callin', all the same.

LEMMY. Better siccumb to the tempt n, old lydy; joyride wiv the Press; rble floors, pillars o' gold; conscien- us footmen; lovely lydies; scuppers nin' tea! An' the revolution goin' on oss the wy. 'Eaven's nuffink to wk Lyne.

?RESS. Come along, Mrs. Lemmy!

MRS. L. [Seraphically] Thank yu. ı a-feelin' very comfortable. 'Tes nderful what a drop o' wine'll du the stomach.

?RESS. A taxi-ride!

MRS. L. [Placidly] Ah! I know 'em. ey'm very busy things.

.EMMY. Muvver shuns notority. )tto voce to THE PRESS] But you :ch me! I'll rouse 'er.

He takes up his fiddle and sits on the window seat. Above the little houses on the opposite side of the street, the moon has risen in the dark blue sky, so that the cloud shaped like a beast seems leaping over it. LEMMY plays the first notes of the "Marseillaise." A black cat on the window-sill outside, looks in, hunching its back. LITTLE AIDA barks at her. MRS. LEMMY struggles to her feet, sweeping the empty dish and spoon to the floor in the effort.

.EMMY. The dish ran awy wiv the on! That's right, old lydy!

[He stops playing.

MRS. L. [Smiling, and moving her ·ds] I like a bit o' music. It du that ve 'ee.

?RESS. Bravo, Mrs. Lemmy. Come

.EMMY. Come on, old dear! We'll be time for the revolution yet.

MRS. L. 'Tes 'earin' the Old 'Undred in!

.EMMY. [To THE PRESS] She 'yn't n aht tnese two years. [To his moth- who has put up her hands to her d] Nao, never mind yer 'at. [To E PRESS] She 'yn't got none! 'oud] No West-End lydy wears any- : at all in the evenin'!

MRS. L. 'Ow'm I lukin', Bob?

.EMMY. Fust-clawss; yer've got a our fit to toast by. We'll show 'em 've got a kick in yer. [He takes her arm] Little Aida, ketch 'old o' the sen- sytions. [He indicates the trousers.

THE PRESS takes MRS. LEMMY'S other arm.

MRS. L. [With an excited little laugh] Quite like a gell!

And, smiling between her son and THE PRESS, she passes out, LITTLE AIDA, with a fling of her heels and a wave of the trousers, follows.

Curtain.

ACT III

An octagon ante-room off the hall at LORD WILLIAM DROMONDY'S. A shining room lighted by gold candelabra, with gold-curtained pillars, through which the shining hall and a little of the grand stairway are visible. A small table with a gold-coloured cloth occupies the very centre of the room, which has a polished parquet floor and high white walls. Gold-coloured doors on the left. Opposite these doors a window with gold-coloured curtains looks out on Park Lane. LADY WILLIAM is standing restlessly between the double doors and the arch which leads to the hall. JAMES is stationary by the double doors, from behind which come sounds of speech and applause.

POULDER. [Entering from the hall] His Grace the Duke of Exeter, my lady.

HIS GRACE enters. He is old, and youthful, with a high colour and a short rough white beard. LADY WILLIAM advances to meet him. POULDER stands by.

LADY W. Oh! Father, you are late.

HIS G. Awful crowd in the streets, Nell. They've got a coffin—couldn't get by.

LADY W. Coffin? Whose?

HIS G. The Government's I should think—no flowers, by request. I say, have I got to speak?

LADY W. Oh! no, dear.

HIS G. H'm! That's unlucky. I've got it here. [He looks down his cuff] Found something I said in 1914—just have done.

LADY W. Oh! If you've got it—James, ask Lord William to come to me for a moment.

JAMES vanishes through the door.

LADY W. [To the DUKE] Go in, Grand-dad; they'll be so awfully pleased to see you. I'll tell Bill.

HIS G. Where's Anne?

LADY W. In bed, of course.

HIS G. I got her this—rather nice?

He has taken from his breast-pocket one of those street toy-men that jump head over heels on your hand; he puts it through its paces.

LADY W. [Much interested] Oh! no, but how sweet! She'll simply love it.

POULDER. If I might suggest to Your Grace to take it in and operate it. It's sweated, Your Grace. They—er—make them in those places.

HIS G. By Jove! D'you know the price, Poulder?

POULDER. [Interrogatively] A penny, is it? Something paltry, Your Grace!

HIS G. Where's that woman who knows everything; Miss Munday?

LADY W. Oh! She'll be in there, somewhere.

HIS GRACE moves on, and passes through the doors. The sound of applause is heard.

POULDER. [Discreetly] Would you care to see the bomb, my lady?

LADY W. Of course—first quiet moment.

POULDER. I'll bring it up, and have a watch put on it here, my lady.

LORD WILLIAM comes through the double doors, followed by JAMES. POULDER retires.

LORD W. Can't you come, Nell?

LADY W. Oh! Bill, your Dad wants to speak.

LORD W. The deuce he does—that's bad.

LADY W. Yes, of course, but you must let him; he's found something he said in 1914.

LORD W. I knew it. That's what they'll say. Standing stock still, while hell's on the jump around us.

LADY W. Never mind that; it'll please him; and he's got a lovely little sweated toy that turns head over heels at one penny.

LORD W. H'm! Well, come on.

LADY W. No, I must wait for strag glers. There's sure to be an editor in hurry.

POULDER. [Announcing] Mis-ter Gold rum!

LADY W. [Sotto voce] And there h is! [She advances to meet a thin, strag gling man in eyeglasses, who is smilin absently] How good of you!

MR. G. Thanks awfully. I just—er—and then I'm afraid I must—er—Things look very—— Thanks—thank so much.

[He straggles through the doors and is enclosed by JAMES.

POULDER. Miss Mun-day.

LADY W. There! I thought she wa in already—— She really is the mos unexpected woman! How do you do How awfully sweet of you!

MISS M. [An elderly female school boy] How do you do? There's a spiffin crowd. I believe things are really goin Bolshy. How do you do, Lord William Have you got any of our people to show I told one or two, in case—they do s simply love an outing.

JAMES. There are three old chips i the lobby, my lord.

LORD W. What? Oh! I say! Brin them in at once. Why—they're the hu of the whole thing.

JAMES. [Going] Very good, m lord.

LADY W. I am sorry. I'd no notion and they're such dears always.

MISS M. I must tell you what one them said to me. I'd told him not t use such bad language to his wife. "Don you worry, Ma!" he said, "I expect yo can do a bit of that yourself!"

LADY W. How awfully nice! It's like them.

MISS M. Yes. They're wonderful.

LORD W. I say, why do we alwa call them they?

LADY W. [Puzzled] Well, why not

LORD W. They!

MISS M. [Struck] Quite right, Lo William! Quite right! Another speci They! I must remember that. They!

[She passes

LADY W. [About to follow] Well, don't see; aren't they?

ORD W. Never mind, old girl; fol- on. They'll come in with me.

MISS MUNDAY and LADY WILLIAM pass through the double doors.

OULDER. [Announcing] Some sweat- workers, my lord.

There enter a tall, thin, oldish woman; a short, thin, very lame man, her husband; and a stoutish middle-aged woman with a rolling eye and gait, all very poorly dressed, with lined and heated faces.

ORD W. [Shaking hands] How d'you Delighted to see you all. It's aw- y good of you to have come.

AME M. Mr. and Mrs. Tomson. We some trouble to find it. You see, I've er been in these parts. We 'ad to ie in the oven; and the bus-bloke us dahn wrong. Are you the pro- tor?

ORD W. [Modestly] Yes, I—er——

AME M. You've got a nice plyce. I to the missis, I says: "'E's got a plyce 'ere," I says; "there's room urn rahnd."

ORD W. Yes—shall we——?

AME M. An' Mrs. Annaway she ; "Shouldn't mind livin' 'ere me- " she says; "but it must cost 'im dy penny," she says.

ORD W. It does—it does; much too . Shall we——?

RS. ANN. [Rolling her eye] I'm pleased to 'ave come. I've often to 'em: "Any time you want me," said, "I'd be pleased to come."

ORD W. Not so pleased as we are to you.

RS. ANN. I'm sure you're very kind.

AMES. [From the double doors, ugh which he has received a mes- ·] Wanted for your speech, my .

ORD W. Oh! God! Poulder, bring e ladies and gentlemen in, and put n where everybody can—where they see everybody, don't you know.

[He goes out hurriedly through the double doors.

AME M. Is 'e a lord?

OULDER. He is. Follow me.

[He moves towards the doors, the three workers follow.

MRS. ANN. [Stopping before JAMES] You 'yn't one, I suppose?

JAMES stirs no muscle.

POULDER. Now please. [He opens the doors. The voice of LORD WILLIAM speaking is heard] Pass in.

THE THREE WORKERS pass in, POULDER and JAMES follow them. The doors are not closed, and through this aperture comes the voice of LORD WILLIAM, punctuated and supported by decorous applause.

LITTLE ANNE runs in, and listens at the window to the confused and distant murmurs of a crowd.

VOICE OF LORD W. We propose to move for a further advance in the chain-making and—er—er—match-box industries.

Applause.

LITTLE ANNE runs across to the door, to listen.

VOICE OF LORD W. [On rising voice] I would conclude with some general remarks. Ladies and gentlemen, the great natural, but—er—artificial expansion which trade experienced the first years after the war has—er—collapsed. These are hard times. We who are fortunate feel more than ever—er—responsible—[He stammers, loses the thread of his thoughts.—Applause] — er — responsible—[The thread still eludes him]—er——

L. ANNE. [Poignantly] Oh, Daddy!

LORD W. [Desperately] In fact—er—you know how—er—responsible we feel.

L. ANNE. Hooray!

Applause.

There float in through the windows the hoarse and distant sounds of the "Marseillaise," as sung by London voices.

LORD W. There is a feeling in the air—that I for one should say deliberately was—er—a feeling in the air—er—a feeling in the air——

L. ANNE. [Agonised] Oh, Daddy! Stop!

JAMES enters, and closes the door behind him.

JAMES. Look here! 'Ave I got to report you to Miss Stokes?

L. ANNE. No-o-o!

JAMES. Well, I'm goin' to.

L. ANNE. Oh, James, be a friend to me! I've seen nothing yet.

JAMES. No; but you've eaten a good bit, on the stairs. What price that Peach Melba?

L. ANNE. I can't go to bed till I've digested it—can I? There's such a lovely crowd in the street!

JAMES. Lovely? Ho!

L. ANNE. [Wheedling] James, you couldn't tell Miss Stokes! It isn't in you, is it?

JAMES. [Grinning] That's right.

L. ANNE. So—I'll just get under here. [She gets under the table] Do I show?

JAMES. [Stooping] Not 'arf!

POULDER enters from the hall.

POULDER. What are you doin' there?

JAMES. [Between him and the table—raising himself] Thinkin'.

POULDER purses his mouth to repress his feelings.

POULDER. My orders are to fetch the bomb up here for Lady William to inspect. Take care no more writers stray in.

JAMES. How shall I know 'em?

POULDER. Well—either very bald or very hairy.

JAMES. Right-o! [He goes.

POULDER, with his back to the table, busies himself with the set of his collar.

POULDER. [Addressing an imaginary audience—in a low but important voice] The—ah—situation is seerious. It is up to us of the—ah—leisured classes——

The face of LITTLE ANNE is poked out close to his legs, and tilts upwards in wonder towards the bow of his waistcoat.

POULDER. —to—ah—keep the people down. The olla polloi are clamourin'——

MISS STOKES appears from the hall, between the pillars.

MISS S. Poulder!

POULDER. [Making a volte face towards the table] Miss?

MISS S. Where is Anne?

POULDER. [Vexed at the disturbance of his speech] Excuse me, Miss—to keep track of Miss Anne is fortunately no part of my dooties.

MISS S. She really is naughty.

POULDER. She is. If she was mine, I spank her.

The smiling face of LITTLE ANN becomes visible again close to h legs.

MISS S. Not a nice word.

POULDER. No; but a pleasant hactio Miss Anne's the limit. In fact, Lord ar Lady William are much too kind-'earte all round. Take these sweated workers that class o' people are quite 'opeles Treatin' them as your equals, shaki 'ands with 'em, givin' 'em tea—it on puffs 'em out. Leave it to the Churc I say.

MISS S. The Church is too bus Poulder.

POULDER. Ah! That "Purity an' F ture o' the Race Campaign." I'll te you what I think's the danger o' tha Miss. So much purity that there won't l a future race. [Expanding] Purity 'eart's an excellent thing, no doubt, b there's a want of nature about it. San with this Anti-Sweating. Unless you' anxious to come down, you must not p the lower classes up.

MISS S. I don't agree with you at a Poulder.

POULDER. Ah! You want it both way Miss. I should imagine you're a Liber

MISS S. [Horrified] Oh, no! I ce tainly am not.

POULDER. Well, I judged from yo takin' cocoa. Funny thing that, abo cocoa—how it still runs through t Liberal Party! It's virtuous, I suppo Wine, beer, tea, coffee—all of 'em vic But cocoa—you might dring a gallon day and annoy no one but yourse There's a lot o' deep things in li Miss!

MISS S. Quite so. But I must fi Anne. [She reced

POULDER. [Suavely] Well, I wish y every success; and I hope you'll spa her. This modern education—there's fruitiness in it.

L. ANNE. [From under the tab Poulder, are you virtuous?

POULDER. [Jumping] Good Ged!

L. ANNE. D'you mind my asking promised James I would.

POULDER. Miss Anne, come out.

The four footmen appear in the hall, HENRY carrying the wine cooler.

AMES. Form fours—by your right—k march!

They enter, marching down right of table.

AMES. Right incline—Mark time!
e! Left turn! 'Alt! 'Enry, set the ib! Stand easy!

HENRY places the wine cooler on the table and covers it with a blue embroidered Chinese mat, which has occupied the centre of the tablecloth.

OULDER. Ah! You will 'ave your

CHARLES and HENRY go out, the other two move to their stations.

POULDER stands by the table looking at the covered bomb. The hoarse and distant sounds of the "Marseillaise" float in again from Park Lane.

OULDER. [Moved by some deep feel-

MES. Act o' God! Why not?

POULDER. It's not an act o' God.

JAMES. It is; and I sympathise with it.

POULDER. You—what?

JAMES. I do—only—hands off the gov'nor.

POULDER. Oh! Reelly! Well, that's something. I'm glad to see you stand behind him, at all events.

JAMES. I stand in front of 'im when the scrap begins!

POULDER. Do you insinuate that my heart's not in the right place?

JAMES. Well, look at it! It's been creepin' down ever since I knew you. Talk of your sacrifices in the war—they put you on your honour, and you got stout on it. Rations—not 'arf!

POULDER. [Staring at him] For independence, I've never seen your equal, James. You might be an Australian!

JAMES. [Suavely] Keep a civil tongue, or I'll throw you to the crowd! [He comes forward to the table] Shall I tell you why I favour the gov'nor? Because, with all his pomp, he's a gentleman, as much as I am. Never asks you to do what he wouldn't do himself. What's more, he never comes it over you. If you get drunk, or—well, you understand me, Poulder—he'll just say: "Yes, yes; I know, James!" till he makes you feel he's done it himself. [Sinking his voice mysteriously] I've had experience with him, in the war and out. Why! he didn't even hate the Huns, not as he ought. I tell you he's no Christian.

POULDER. Well, for irreverence——!

JAMES. [Obstinately] And he'll never be. He's got too soft a heart.

L. ANNE. [Beneath the table—shrilly] Hurrah!

POULDER. [Jumping] Come out, Miss Anne!

JAMES. Let 'er alone!

POULDER. In there, under the bomb?

JAMES. [Contemptuously] Silly ass! You should take 'em lying down!

POULDER. Look here, James! I can't go on in this revolutionary spirit; either you or I resign.

JAMES. Crisis in the Cabinet!

POULDER. I give you your marchin' orders.

JAMES. [Ineffably] What's that you give me?

POULDER. Thomas, remove James!

THOMAS grins.

L. ANNE. [Who, with open mouth, has crept out to see the fun] Oh! Do remove James, Thomas!

POULDER. Go on, Thomas!

THOMAS takes one step towards JAMES, who lays a hand on the Chinese mat covering the bomb.

JAMES. [Grimly] If I lose control of meself——

L. ANNE. [Clapping her hands] Oh! James! Do lose control! Then I shall see it go off!

JAMES. [To POULDER] Well, I'll merely empty the pail over you!

POULDER. This is not becomin'!

[He walks out into the hall.

JAMES. Another strategic victory! What a Boche he'd have made. As you were, Tommy!

THOMAS returns to the door. The sound of prolonged applause comes from within.

JAMES. That's a bishop.

L. ANNE. Why?

JAMES. By the way he's drawin'. It's the fine fightin' spirit in 'em. They were the backbone o' the war. I see there's a bit o' the old stuff left in you, Tommy.

L. ANNE. [Scrutinising the widely-grinning THOMAS] Where? Is it in his mouth?

JAMES. You've still got a sense of your superiors. Didn't you notice how you moved to Poulder's orders, my boy; an' when he was gone, to mine?

L. ANNE. [To THOMAS] March!

The grinning THOMAS remains immovable.

L. ANNE. He doesn't, James!

JAMES. Look here, Miss Anne—your lights ought to be out before ten. Close in, Tommy!

[He and THOMAS move towards her.

L. ANNE. [Dodging] Oh, no! Oh, no! Look!

The footmen stop and turn. There between the pillars stands LITTLE AIDA with the trousers, her face brilliant with surprise.

JAMES. Good Lord! What's this?

Seeing LITTLE ANNE, LITTLE AI approaches, fascinated, and t two children sniff at each oth as it were like two little do walking round and round.

L. ANNE. [Suddenly] My name Anne; what's yours?

L. AIDA. Aida.

L. ANNE. Are you lost?

L. AIDA. Nao.

L. ANNE. Are those trousers?

L. AIDA. Yus.

L. ANNE. Whose?

L. AIDA. Mrs. Lemmy's.

L. ANNE. Does she wear them?

LITTLE AIDA smiles brilliantly.

L. AIDA. Nao. She sews 'em.

L. ANNE. [Touching the trouser They are hard. James's are much so er; aren't they, James?

JAMES deigns no reply.

L. ANNE. What shall we do? Wou you like to see my bedroom?

L. AIDA. [With a hop] Aoh, yus!

JAMES. No.

L. ANNE. Why not?

JAMES. Have some sense of wha fittin'.

L. ANNE. Why isn't it fittin'? [LITTLE AIDA] Do you like me?

L. AIDA. Yus-s.

L. ANNE. So do I. Come on!

[She takes LITTLE AIDA's ha

JAMES. [Between the pillars] To my, ketch 'em!

THOMAS retains them by the skir

L. ANNE. [Feigning indifference] right, then! [To LITTLE AIDA] Ha you ever seen a bomb?

L. AIDA. Nao.

L. ANNE. [Going to the table lifting a corner of the cover] Look!

L. AIDA. [Looking] What's it for

L. ANNE. To blow up this house.

L. AIDA. I daon't fink!

L. ANNE. Why not?

L. AIDA. It's a beautiful big 'ouse.

L. ANNE. That's why. Isn't it, Jam

L. AIDA. You give the fing to I'll blow up our 'ouse—it's an ugly tle 'ouse.

L. ANNE. [Struck] Let's all blow our own; then we can start fair. L dy would like that.

L. AIDA. Yus. [Suddenly brilli

e 'ad a ride in a taxi, an' we're goin' ne in it agyne!

. ANNE. Were you sick?

. AIDA. [Brilliant] Nao.

. ANNE. I was, when I first went in , but I was quite young then. James, ld you get her a Pêche Melba?

ere was one.

AMES. No.

. ANNE. Have you seen the revolu- ı?

. AIDA. Wot's that?

. ANNE. It's made of people.

. AIDA. I've seen the corfin, it's le o' wood.

. ANNE. Do you hate the rich?

. AIDA. [Ineffably] Nao. I hates poor.

. ANNE. Why?

. AIDA. 'Cos they 'yn't got nuffin'.

. ANNE. I love the poor. They're ı dears.

. AIDA. [Shaking her head with a ıd smile] Nao.

. ANNE. Why not?

AIDA. I'd tyke and lose the lot, I ld.

ANNE. Where?

AIDA. In the water.

ANNE. Like puppies?

AIDA. Yus.

ANNE. Why?

AIDA. Then I'd be shut of 'em.

ANNE. [Puzzled] Oh!

The voice of THE PRESS is heard in the hall. "Where's the little girl!"

MES. That's you. Come 'ere!

He puts a hand behind LITTLE AIDA'S back and propels her towards the hall. THE PRESS enters with old MRS. LEMMY.

ESS. Oh! Here she is, major domo. going to take this old lady to the ing; they want her on the platform. : after our friend, Mr. Lemmy ; Lord William wants to see him ntly.

ANNE. [In an awed whisper] s, it's the little blighter!

She dives again under the table.

LEMMY enters.

MMY. 'Ere! 'Arf a mo'! Yer said drop me at my plyce. Well, I tell :andid—this 'yn't my plyce!

PRESS. That's all right, Mr. Lemmy. [He grins] They'll make you wonderfully comfortable, won't you, major domo?

He passes on through the room, to the door, ushering old MRS. LEMMY and LITTLE AIDA.

POULDER blocks LEMMY'S way, with CHARLES and HENRY behind him.

POULDER. James, watch it; I'll report.

He moves away, following THE PRESS through the door. JAMES between table and window. THOMAS has gone to the door. HENRY and CHARLES remain at the entrances to the hall. LEMMY looks dubiously around, his cockney assurance gradually returns.

LEMMY. I think I knows the gas 'ere. This is where I came to-dy, yn't it? Excuse my hesitytion—these little 'ouses is so much the syme!

JAMES. [Gloomily] They are!

LEMMY. [Looking at the four immovable footmen, till he concentrates on JAMES] Ah! I 'ad a word wiv you, 'adn't I? You're the four conscientious ones wot's wyin' on your gov'nor's chest. 'Twas you I spoke to, wasn't it? [His eyes travel over them again] Ye're so monotonous. Well, ye're busy now, I see. I won't wyste yer time.

He turns towards the hall, but CHARLES and HENRY bar the way in silence.

LEMMY. [Skidding a little, and regarding the four immovables once more] I never see such pytient men? Compared wiv yer, mountains is restless!

He goes to the table. JAMES watches him. ANNE barks from underneath.

LEMMY. [Skidding again] Why! There's a dawg under there. [Noting the grin on THOMAS'S face] Glad it amooses yer. Yer want it, daon't yer, wiv a fyce like that? Is this a ply wivaht words? 'Ave I got into the movies by mistyke? Turn aht, an' let's 'ave siv penn'orth o' darkness.

L. ANNE. [From beneath the table] No, no! Not dark!

LEMMY. [Musingly] The dawg talks anywy. Come aht, Fido!

LITTLE ANNE emerges, and regards him with burning curiosity.

LEMMY. I sy: Is this the lytest fashion o' receivin' guests?

L. ANNE. Mother always wants people to feel at home. What shall we do? Would you like to hear the speeches? Thomas, open the door a little, do!

JAMES. 'Umour 'er a couple o' inches, Tommy!

THOMAS draws the door back stealthily an inch or so.

L. ANNE. [After applying her eye—in a loud whisper] There's the old lady. Daddy's looking at her trousers. Listen!

For MRS. LEMMY'S voice is floating faintly through: "I putt in the buttonholes, I stretches the flies; I 'ems the bottoms; I lines the crutch; I putt on this bindin'; I sews on the buttons; I presses the seams—Truppence three farthin's the pair."

LEMMY. [In a hoarse whisper] That's it, old lydy: give it 'em!

L. ANNE. Listen!

VOICE OF LORD W. We are indebted to our friends the Press for giving us the pleasure—er—pleasure of hearing from her own lips—the pleasure——

L. ANNE. Oh! Daddy!

THOMAS abruptly closes the doors.

LEMMY. [To ANNE] Now yer've done it. See wot comes o' being impytient. We was just gettin' to the marrer.

L. ANNE. What can we do for you now?

LEMMY. [Pointing to ANNE, and addressing JAMES] Wot is this one, anywy?

JAMES. [Sepulchrally] Daughter o' the house.

LEMMY. Is she insured agynst 'er own curiosity?

L. ANNE. Why?

LEMMY. As I daon't believe in a life beyond the gryve, I might be tempted to send yer there.

L. ANNE. What is the gryve?

LEMMY. Where little gells goes to.

L. ANNE. Oh, when?

LEMMY. [Pretending to look at a watch, which is not there] Well, I dunno if I've got time to finish yer this minute. Sy to-morrer at 'arf past.

L. ANNE. Half past what?

LEMMY. [Despairingly] 'Arf pa wot!

The sound of applause is heard.

JAMES. That's 'is Grace. 'E's getti wickets, too.

POULDER. Lord William is slippin' i

He makes a cabalistic sign with h head. JAMES crosses to the doo

LEMMY looks dubiously at POU DER.

LEMMY. [Suddenly—as to himsel Wot oh! I am the portly one!

POULDER. [Severely] Any such all sion aggeravates your offence.

LEMMY. Oh, ah! Look 'ere, it was corked bottle. Now, tyke care, ty care, 'aughty! Daon't curl yer lip! shall myke a clean breast o' my betry when the time comes!

There is a slight movement of t door. ANNE makes a dive towar the table but is arrested POULDER grasping her waistban LORD WILLIAM slips in, follow by THE PRESS, on whom JAM and THOMAS close the door soon.

HALF OF THE PRESS. [Indignant! Look out!

JAMES. Do you want him in or o me lord?

LEMMY. I sy, you've divided t Press; 'e was unanimous.

The FOOTMEN let THE PRE through.

LORD W. [To THE PRESS] I'm sorry.

LEMMY. Would yer like me to see 'is gas?

LORD W. So you're my friend of cellars?

LEMMY. [Uneasy] I daon't deny i

POULDER begins removing LIT ANNE.

L. ANNE. Let me stay, Daddy; I ha n't seen anything yet! If I go, I s only have to come down again w they loot the house. Listen!

The hoarse strains of the "Mar laise" are again heard from distance.

LORD W. [Blandly] Take her Poulder!

L. ANNE. Well, I'm coming d

ain—and next time I shan't have any thes on, you know.

They vanish between the pillars.

LORD WILLIAM makes a sign of dismissal. The FOOTMEN file out.

LEMMY. [Admiringly] Luv'ly pyces!

LORD W. [Pleasantly] Now then; let's e our talk, Mr.——

LEMMY. Lemmy.

'RESS. [Who has slipped his notebook out] "Bombed and Bomber face face——"

LEMMY. [Uneasy] I didn't come 'ere ne on me own, yer know. The Press 'yed me.

'ORD W. Is that old lady your mother?

LEMMY. The syme. I tell yer stryte, it for 'er I took that old bottle o' . It was orful old.

ORD W. Ah! Port! Probably the '63. e you both enjoyed it.

EMMY. So far—yus. Muvver'll suf- a bit to-morrer, I expect.

ORD W. I should like to do something your mother, if you'll allow me.

EMMY. Oh! I'll allow yer. But I 10 wot she'll sy.

ORD W. I can see she's a fine indelent old lady! But suppose you were ay her ten bob a week, and keep name out of it?

EMMY. Well, that's one wy o' you somefink, 'yn't it?

ORD W. I giving you the money, of se.

RESS. [Writing] "Lord William, kingly generosity——"

EMMY. [Drawing attention to THE SS with his thumb] I sy—I daon't l, meself—if you daon't——

ORD W. He won't write anything to y me.

RESS. This is the big thing, Lord iam; it'll get the public bang in the it.

MMY. [Confidentially] Bit dynger- 'yn't it?—trustin' the Press? Their 'ands never knows wot their left is writin'. [To THE PRESS] 'Yn't true, speakin' as a man?

ESS. Mr. Lemmy, even the Press pable of gratitude.

MMY. Is it? I should ha' thought as too important for a little thing that. [To LORD WILLIAM] But ye-'re quite right; we couldn't do wivaht the Press—there wouldn't be no distress, no corfin, no revolution—'cos nobody'd know nuffin' abaht it. Why! There wouldn't be no life at all on Earf in these dyes, wivaht the Press! It's them wot says: "Let there be Light —an' there is Light."

LORD W. Umm! That's rather a new thought to me. [Writes on his cuff.

LEMMY. But abaht Muvver, I'll tell yer 'ow we can arrynge. You send 'er the ten bob a week wivaht syin' anyfink, an' she'll fink it comes from Gawd or the Gover'ment—yer cawn't tell one from t'other in Befnal Green.

LORD W. All right; we'll do that.

LEMMY. Will yer reely? I'd like to shyke yer 'and.

LORD WILLIAM puts out his hand, which LEMMY grasps.

PRESS. [Writing] "The heart-beat of humanity was in that grasp between the son of toil and the son of leisure."

LEMMY. [Already ashamed of his emotion] 'Ere, 'art a mo'! Which is which? Daon't forget I'm aht o' work; Lord William, if that's 'is nyme, is workin' 'ard at 'is Anti-Sweats! Wish I could get a job like vat—jist suit me!

LORD W. That hits hard, Mr. Lemmy!

LEMMY. Daon't worry! Yer cawn't 'elp bein' born in the purple!

LORD W. Ah! Tell me, what would you do in my place?

LEMMY. Why—as the nobleman said in 'is well-known wy: "Sit in me Club winder' an' watch it ryne on the dam people!" That's if I was a average nobleman! If I was a bit more noble, I might be tempted to come the kind-'earted on twenty thou' a year. Some prefers yachts, or ryce 'orses. But philanthropy on the 'ole is syfer, in these dyes.

LORD W. So you think one takes to it as a sort of insurance, Mr. Lemmy? Is that quite fair?

LEMMY. Well, we've all got a weakness towards bein' kind, somewhere abaht us. But the moment wealf comes in, we 'yn't wot I call single-'earted. If yer went into the foundytions of your wealf—would yer feel like 'avin' any? It all comes from uvver peoples' 'ard, unpleasant lybour—it's all built on Muvver as yer might sy. An' if yer daon't get rid o' some of it in bein' kind—yer daon't feel syfe nor comfy.

LORD W. [Twisting his moustache] Your philosophy is very pessimistic.

LEMMY. Well, I call meself an optimist; I sees the worst of everyfink. Never disappynted, can afford to 'ave me smile under the blackest sky. When deaf is squeezin' of me windpipe, I shall 'ave a laugh in it! Fact is, if yer've 'ad to do wiv gas an' water pipes, yer can fyce anyfing. [The distant "Marseillaise" blares up] 'Ark at the revolution!

LORD W. [Rather desperately] I know—hunger and all the rest of it! And here am I, a rich man, and don't know what the deuce to do.

LEMMY. Well, I'll tell yer. Throw yer cellars open, an' while the populyce is gettin' drunk, sell all yer 'ave an' go an' live in Ireland; they've got the millennium chronic over there.

LORD WILLIAM utters a short, vexed laugh, and begins to walk about.

LEMMY. That's speakin' as a practical man. Speakin' as a synt—"Bruvvers, all I 'ave is yours. To-morrer I'm goin' dahn to the Lybour Exchynge to git put on the wytin' list, syme as you!"

LORD W. But, dash it, man, there we should be, all together! Would that help?

LEMMY. Nao; but it'd syve a lot o' blood.

LORD WILLIAM stops abruptly, and looks first at LEMMY, then at the cooler, still covered with the Chinese mat.

LEMMY. Yer thought the Englishman could be taught to shed blood wiv safety. Not 'im! Once yer git 'im into an 'abit, yer cawn't git 'im out of it agyne. 'E'll go on sheddin' blood mechanical—Conservative by nyture. An' 'e won't myke nuffin' o' yours. Not even the Press wiv 'is 'oneyed words'll sty 'is 'and.

LORD W. And what do you suggest we could have done, to avoid trouble?

LEMMY. [Warming to his theme] I'll tell yer. If all you wealfy nobs wiv kepitel 'ad come it kind from the start after the war yer'd never a' been 'earin' the "Marseillaisy" naow. Lord! 'Ow ye did talk abaht Unity and a noo spirit the Country. Noo spirit! Why, soon ever there was no dynger from outsid yer stawted to myke it inside, wiv iron 'and. Naow, you've been in the w an' it's given yer a feelin' 'eart; b most of the nobs wiv kepitel was too o or too important to fight. They were born agyne. So naow that bad times come, we're 'owlin' for their blood.

LORD W. I quite agree; I quite agre I've often said much the same thing.

LEMMY. Voice cryin' in the wilde ness—I daon't sy we was yngels—the was faults on bofe sides. [He looks THE PRESS] The Press could ha' help yer a lot. Shall I tell yer wot the Pre did? "It's vital," said the Press, "th the country should be united, or it w never recover." Nao strikes, nao 'um nature, nao nuffink. Kepitel an' Lybo like the Siamese twins. And, fust di pute that come along, the Press orfs w its coat an' goes at it bald-'eaded. A wot abaht since? Sich a riot o' nyn called, in Press and Pawlyement—U patriotic an' outrygeous demands o' L bour. Blood-suckin' tyranny o' Kepite thieves an' dawgs an' 'owlin' Jackybin —gents throwin' books at each other; the resources of edjucytion exhauste If I'd been Prime Minister I'd 'ave the Press's gas cut 'orf at the met Puffect liberty of course, nao Censo ship; just sy wot yer like—an' nev be 'eard of no more.

Turning suddenly to THE PRE who has been scribbing in pe with this harangue, and now h developed a touch of write cramp.

LEMMY. Why! 'Is 'and's out o' brea Fink o' vet!

LORD W. Great tribute to your e quence, Mr. Lemmy!

A sudden stir of applause and scr ing of chairs is heard; the mu ing is evidently breaking LADY WILLIAM comes in, follow by MRS. LEMMY with her th sers, and LITTLE AIDA. LEM stares fixedly at this sudden r ant apparition. His gaze beco as that of a rabbit regardin snake. And suddenly he puts up his hand and wipes his brow.

LADY WILLIAM, going to the table, lifts one end of the Chinese mat, and looks at LEMMY. Then she turns to LORD WILLIAM.

ADY W. Bill!

EMMY. [To his mother—in a hoarse ısper] She calls 'im Bill! 'Ow! 'Yn't IT?

ADY W. [Apart] Have you spoken to ?

LORD WILLIAM shakes his head.

ADY W. Not? What have you been ıg, then?

ORD W. Nothing, he's talked all the ADY W. [Very low] What a little on!

RD W. Steady, old girl! He's got his ın you!

LADY WILLIAM looks at LEMMY, whose eyes are still fixed on her.

DY W. [With resolution] Well, I'm to tackle him.

She moves towards LEMMY, who again wipes his brow, and wrings out his hand.

RS. LEMMY. Don't 'ee due that, Bob. must forgive 'im, ma'am; it's 'is ration. 'E was always one for the , and he'm not used to seein' so of 'em.

DY W. Don't you think you owe us planation?

S. L. Speak up, Bob.

But LEMMY only shifts his feet.

S. L. My gudeness! 'E've a-lost 'is e. I never knu that 'appen to 'e e.

RD W. [Trying to break the embssment] No ill-feeling, you know, ıy.

But LEMMY still only rolls his eyes.

DY W. Don't you think it was rather onsiderate of you?

MMY. Muvver, tyke me aht, I'm ' fynte!

Spurts of the "Marseillaise" and the mutter of the crowd have been coming nearer; and suddenly a knocking is heard. POULDER and JAMES appear between the pillars.

ULDER. The populace, me lord!

DY W. What!

LORD W. Where've you put 'em, Poulder?

POULDER. They've put theirselves in the portico, me lord.

LORD W. [Suddenly wiping his brow] Phew! I say, this is awful, Nell! Two speeches in one evening. Nothing else for it, I suppose. Open the window, Poulder!

POULDER. [Crossing to the window] We are prepared for any sacrifice, me lord. [He opens the window.

PRESS. [Writing furiously] "Lady William stood like a statue at bay."

LORD W. Got one of those lozenges or you, Nell?

But LADY WILLIAM has almost nothing on her.

LEMMY. [Producing a paper from his pocket] 'Ave one o' my gum-drops?

[He passes it to LORD WILLIAM.

LORD W. [Unable to refuse, takes a large flat gum-drop from the paper, and looks at it in embarrassment] Ah! thanks! Thanks awfully!

LEMMY turns to LITTLE AIDA, and puts a gum-drop in her mouth. A burst of murmurs from the crowd.

JAMES. [Towering above the wine cooler] If they get saucy, me lord, I can always give 'em their own back.

LORD W. Steady, James; steady!

He puts the gum-drop absently into his mouth, and turns up to the open window.

VOICE. [Outside] 'Ere they are—the bally plutocrats.

Voices in chorus: "Bread! Bread!"

LORD W. Poulder, go and tell the chef to send out anything there is in the house—nicely, as if it came from nowhere in particular.

POULDER. Very good, me lord. [Sotto voce] Any wine? If I might suggest—German—'ock?

LORD W. What you like.

POULDER. Very good, me lord.

[He goes.

LORD W. I say, dash it, Nell, my teeth are stuck!

[He works his finger in his mouth.

LADY W. Take it out, darling.

LORD. W. [Taking out the gum-drop and looking at it] What the deuce did I put it in for?

PRESS. [Writing] "With inimitable coolness Lord William prepared to address the crowd."

Voices in chorus: "Bread! Bread!"

LORD W. Stand by to prompt, old girl. Now for it. This ghastly gum-drop!

LADY WILLIAM takes it from his agitated hand, and flips it through the window.

VOICE. Dahn with the aristo——

[Chokes.

LADY W. Oh! Bill—oh! It's gone into a mouth!

LORD W. Good God!

VOICE. Wot's this? Throwin' things? Mind aht, or we'll smash yer winders!

As the voices in chorus chant: "Bread! Bread!" LITTLE ANNE, night-gowned, darts in from the hall. She is followed by MISS STOKES. They stand listening.

LORD W. [To the crowd] My friends, you've come to the wrong shop. There's nobody in London more sympathetic with you.

The crowd laughs hoarsely.

LORD W. [Whispering] Look out, old girl; they can see your shoulders.

LADY WILLIAM moves back a step.

LORD W. If I were a speaker, I could make you feel——

VOICE. Look at his white weskit! Blood-suckers—fattened on the people!

JAMES dives his hand at the wine cooler.

LORD W. I've always said the Government ought to take immediate steps——

VOICE. To shoot us dahn.

LORD W. Not a bit. To relieve the—er——

LADY W. [Prompting] Distress.

LORD W. Distress, and ensure—er—ensure——

LADY W. [Prompting] Quiet.

LORD W. [To her] No, no. To ensure—ensure——

L. ANNE. [Agonised] Oh, Daddy!

VOICE. 'E wants to syve 'is dirty great 'ouse.

LORD W. [Roused] Damned if I do!

Rude and hoarse laughter from the crowd.

JAMES. [With fury] Me lord, let me blow 'em to glory!

[He raises the cooler and advance towards the window.

LORD W. [Turning sharply on hi] Drop it, James; drop it!

PRESS. [Jumping] No, no; don't dr it!

JAMES retires crestfallen to t table, where he replaces the cool

LORD W. [Catching hold of his b Look here, I must have fought alon side some of you fellows in the w Weren't we jolly well like brothers!

A VOICE. Not so much bloom "Kamerad"; hand over yer 'ouse.

LORD W. I was born with this beas great house, and money, and goodn knows what other entanglements- wife and family——

VOICE. Born with a wife and fami

Jeers and laughter.

LORD W. I feel we're all in the sa boat, and I want to pull my weight. you can show me the way, I'll take fast enough.

A DEEP VOICE. Step dahn then, we'll step up.

ANOTHER VOICE. 'Ear, 'Ear!

A fierce little cheer.

LORD W. [To LADY WILLIAM—in pair] By George! I can't get in a where!

LADY W. [Calmly] Then shut window, Bill.

LEMMY. [Who has been moving wards them slowly] Lemme sy a w to 'em.

All stare at him. LEMMY proaches the window, follo by LITTLE AIDA. POULDER re ters with the three other foot

LEMMY. [At the window] Chee Cockies!

The silence of surprise falls on crowd.

LEMMY. I'm one of yer. Gas an' w I am. Got more grievances an' op employment than any of yer. I wan see their blood flow, syme as you.

PRESS. [Writing] "Born orat ready cockney wit—saves situation

MMY. They calls 'im Bill.

ICE. Bill what?

L. ANNE. Dromondy.

LADY W. Anne!

LEMMY. Dromedary 'is nyme is.

VOICE. [From the crowd] Three cheers for Bill Dromedary.

LEMMY. I sy, there's veal an' 'am, an' pork wine at the back for them as wants it; I 'eard the word passed. An' look 'ere, if yer want a flag for the revolution, tyke muvver's trahsers an' tie 'em to the corfin. Yer cawn't 'ave no more inspirin' banner. Ketch! [He throws the trousers out] Give Bill a double-barrel fust, to show there's no ill-feelin'. 'Ip, 'ip!

The crowd cheers, then slowly passes away, singing its hoarse version of the "Marseillaise," till all that is heard is a faint murmuring and a distant barrel-organ playing the same tune.

PRESS. [Writing] "And far up in the clear summer air the larks were singing."

LORD W. [Passing his hand over his hair, and blinking his eyes] James! Ready?

JAMES. Me lord!

ANNE. Daddy!

LADY W. [Taking his arm] Bill! It's all right, old man—all right!

LORD W. [Blinking] Those infernal larks! Thought we were going over the top again! Ah! Mr. Lemmy [Still rather dreamy] no end obliged to you; you're so decent. Now, why did you want to blow us up before dinner?

LEMMY. Blow yer up? [Passing his hand over his hair in travesty] "Is it a dream? Then wykin' would be pyne."

MRS. LEMMY. Bo-ob! Not so saucy, my boy!

LEMMY. Blow yer up? Wot abaht it?

LADY W. [Indicating the bomb] This, Mr. Lemmy!

LEMMY looks at it, and his eyes roll and goggle.

LORD W. Come, all's forgiven! But why did you?

LEMMY. Orl right! I'm goin' to tyke it awy; it'd a-been a bit ork'ard for me. I'll want it to-morrer.

LORD W. What! To leave somewhere else?

LEMMY. Yus, of course!

LORD W. No, no; dash it; Tell us—what's it filled with?

LEMMY. Filled wiv? Nuffin'. Wot did yer expect? Toof-pahder? It's got a bit o' my lead soldered on to it. That's why it's 'eavy!

LORD W. But what is it?

LEMMY. Wot is it? [His eyes are fearfully fixed on LADY WILLIAM] I fought everybody knew 'em.

LADY W. Mr. Lemmy, you must clear this up, please.

LEMMY. [To LORD WILLIAM, with his eyes still fixed on LADY WILLIAM—mysteriously] Wiv lydies present? 'Adn't I better tell the Press?

LORD W. All right; tell someone—anyone!

LEMMY goes down to THE PRESS, who is reading over his last note. Everyone watches and listens with the utmost discretion, while he whispers into the ear of THE PRESS, who shakes his head violently.

PRESS. No, no; it's too horrible. It destroys my whole——

LEMMY. Well, I tell yer it is.

[Whispers again violently.

PRESS. No, no; I can't have it. All my article! All my article! It can't be—no!

LEMMY. I never see sich an obstinate thickhead! Yer 'yn't worvy of yer tryde.

[He whispers still more violently and makes cabalistic signs.

LADY WILLIAM lifts the bomb from the cooler into the sight of all. LORD WILLIAM, seeing it for the first time in full light, bends double in silent laughter, and whispers to his wife. LADY WILLIAM drops the bomb and gives way too. Hearing the sound, LEMMY turns, and his goggling eyes pass them all in review. LORD and LADY WILLIAM in fits of laughter, LITTLE ANNE stamping her feet, for MISS STOKES, red, but composed, has her hands placed firmly over her pupil's eye and ears; LITTLE AIDA smilin brilliantly, MRS. THE SKIN GAME

A TRAGI-COMEDY IN THREE ACTS

"Who touches pitch shall be defiled"

ACT I

LCRIST'S study. A pleasant room, with books in calf bindings, and signs that the HILLCRISTS have traveled, such as a large photograph of the Taj Mahal, of Table Mountain, and the Pyramids of Egypt. A large bureau, devoted to the business of a country estate. Two foxes' masks. Flowers in bowls. Deep armchairs. A large French window open, with a lovely view of a slight rise of fields and trees in August sunlight. A fine stone fireplace. Doors left and right, opposite each other. General colour effect—stone, and cigar-leaf brown, with spots of bright colour.

CRIST sits in a swivel chair at the bureau, busy with papers. He has gout, and his left foot is encased accordingly. He is a thin, dried-up man of about fifty-five, with a rather refined, rather kindly, and rather cranky countenance. Close to him stands his very upstanding eighteen-year-old daughter JILL, with clubbed hair round a pretty, manly face.

L. You know, Dodo, it's all pretty rot in these days.

LLCRIST. Cads are cads, Jill, even ese days.

L. What is a cad?

LLCRIST. A self-assertive fellow, ut a sense of other people.

L. Well, Old Hornblower I'll give

LLCRIST. I wouldn't take him.

L. Well, you've got him. Now, les—Chearlie—I say—the impor- of not being Charlie—— HILLCRIST. Good heavens! do you know their Christian names?

JILL. My dear Father, they've been here seven years.

HILLCRIST. In old days we only knew their Christian names from their tombstones.

JILL. Charlie Hornblower isn't really half a bad sport.

HILLCRIST. About a quarter of a bad sport—I've always thought out hunting.

JILL. [Pulling his hair] Now, his wife —Chloe——

HILLCRIST. [Whimsical] Gad! your mother'd have a fit if she knew you called her Chloe.

JILL. It's a ripping name.

HILLCRIST. Chloe! H'm! I had a spaniel once——

JILL. Dodo, you're narrow. Buck up, old darling, it won't do. Chloe has seen life, I'm pretty sure; that's attractive, anyway. No, Mother's not in the room; don't turn your uneasy eyes.

HILLCRIST. Really, my dear, you are getting——

JILL. The limit. Now, Rolf——

HILLCRIST. What's Rolf? Another dog?

JILL. Rolf Hornblower's a topper; he really is a nice boy.

HILLCRIST. [With a sharp look] Oh! He's a nice boy?

JILL. Yes, darling. You know what a nice boy is, don't you?

HILLCRIST. Not in these days.

JILL. Well, I'll tell you. In the first place, he's not amorous——

HILLCRIST. What! Well, that's some comfort.

JILL. Just a jolly good companion.

HILLCRIST. To whom?

JILL. Well, to anyone—me.

HILLCRIST. Where?

JILL. Anywhere. You don't suppose I confine myself to the home paddocks, do you? I'm naturally rangey, Father.

HILLCRIST. [Ironically] You don't say so!

JILL. In the second place, he doesn't like discipline.

HILLCRIST. Jupiter! He does seem attractive.

JILL. In the third place, he bars his father.

HILLCRIST. Is that essential to nice girls too?

JILL. [With a twirl of his hair] Don't fish! Fourthly, he's got ideas.

HILLCRIST. I knew it!

JILL. For instance, he thinks—as I do——

HILLCRIST. Ah! Good ideas.

JILL. [Pulling gently] Careful! He thinks old people run the show too much. He says they oughtn't to, because they're so dam touchy. Are you, darling?

HILLCRIST. Well, I'm——! I don't know about touchy.

JILL. He says there'll be no world fit to live in till we get rid of the old. We must make them climb a tall tree, and shake them off it.

HILLCRIST. [Drily] Oh! he says that!

JILL. Otherwise, with the way they stand on each other's rights, they'll spoil the garden for the young.

HILLCRIST. Does his father agree?

JILL. Oh! Rolf doesn't talk to him, his mouth's too large. Have you ever seen it, Dodo?

HILLCRIST. Of course.

JILL. It's considerable, isn't it? Now yours is—reticent, darling.

[Rumpling his hair.

HILLCRIST. It won't be in a minute. Do you realise that I've got gout?

JILL. Poor ducky! How long have we been here, Dodo?

HILLCRIST. Since Elizabeth, anyway.

JILL. [Looking at his foot] It has its drawbacks. D'you think Hornblower had a father? I believe he was spontaneous. But, Dodo, why all this—this attitude to the Hornblowers?

She purses her lips and makes a gesture as of pushing person away.

HILLCRIST. Because they're pushing.

JILL. That's only because we are, mother would say, and they're not—ye But why not let them be?

HILLCRIST. You can't.

JILL. Why?

HILLCRIST. It takes generations learn to live and let live, Jill. Peop like that take an ell when you gi them an inch.

JILL. But if you gave them the e they wouldn't want the inch. Why shou it all be such a skin game?

HILLCRIST. Skin game? Where do y get your lingo?

JILL. Keep to the point, Dodo.

HILLCRIST. Well, Jill, all life's a stru gle between people at different stag of development, in different positio with different amounts of social infl ence and property. And the only thi is to have rules of the game and ke them. New people like the Hornblowe haven't learnt those rules; their o rule is to get all they can.

JILL. Darling, don't prose. They're n half as bad as you think.

HILLCRIST. Well, when I sold Hor blower Longmeadow and the cottages certainly found him all right. All t same, he's got the cloven hoof. [Warming up] His influence in Deepwater thoroughly bad; those potteries of are demoralising—the whole atmosphe of the place is changing. It was a thc sand pities he ever came here and d covered that clay. He's brought in modern cut-throat spirit.

JILL. Cut our throat spirit, you mea What's your definition of a gentlem Dodo?

HILLCRIST. [Uneasily] Can't descr —only feel it.

JILL. Oh! Try!

HILLCRIST. Well—er—I suppose might say—a man who keeps his fc and doesn't let life scupper him out his standards.

JILL. But suppose his standards low?

HILLCRIST. [With some earnestn I assume, of course, that he's ho tolerant, gentle to the weak, and self-seeking.

ILL. Ah! self-seeking? But aren't we Dodo? I am.

HILLCRIST. [With a smile] You!

ILL. [Scornfully] Oh! yes—too young know.

HILLCRIST. Nobody knows till they're er pretty heavy fire, Jill.

ILL. Except, of course, Mother.

HILLCRIST. How do you mean—Moth-

ILL. Mother reminds me of England ording to herself—always right what- she does.

HILLCRIST. Ye-es. Your mother is per- s—the perfect woman——

ILL. That's what I was saying. Now, one could call you perfect, Dodo. ides, you've got gout.

HILLCRIST. Yes; and I want Fellows. g that bell.

ILL. [Crossing to the bell] Shall I you my definition of a gentleman? an who gives the Hornblower his [She rings the bell] And I think her ought to call on them. Rolf says Hornblower resents it fearfully that s never made a sign to Chloe the e years she's been here.

HILLCRIST. I don't interfere with mother in such matters. She may and call on the devil himself if likes.

ILL. I know you're ever so much r than she is.

HILLCRIST. That's respectful.

ILL. You do keep your prejudices out our phiz. But Mother literally looks n her nose. And she never forgives h." They'd get the "hell" from her ey took the "hinch."

HILLCRIST. Jill—your language!

ILL. Don't slime out of it, Dodo. I Mother ought to call on the Horn- ers. [No answer] Well?

HILLCRIST. My dear, I always let le have the last word. It makes —feel funny. Ugh! My foot!

Enter FELLOWS, Left.

HILLCRIST. Fellows, send into the vil- and get another bottle of this stuff.

ILL. I'll go, darling.

She blows him a kiss, and goes out at the window.

HILLCRIST. And tell cook I've got to go on slops. This foot's worse.

FELLOWS. [Sympathetic] Indeed, sir.

HILLCRIST. My third go this year, Fellows.

FELLOWS. Very annoying, sir.

HILLCRIST. Ye-es. Ever had it?

FELLOWS. I fancy I have had a twinge, sir.

HILLCRIST. [Brightening] Have you? Where?

FELLOWS. In my cork wrist, sir.

HILLCRIST. Your what?

FELLOWS. The wrist I draw corks with.

HILLCRIST. [With a cackle] You'd have had more than a twinge if you'd lived with my father. H'm!

FELLOWS. Excuse me, sir—Vichy water corks, in my experience, are worse than any wine.

HILLCRIST. [Ironically] Ah! The country's not what it was, is it, Fellows?

FELLOWS. Getting very new, sir.

HILLCRIST. [Feelingly] You're right. Has Dawker come?

FELLOWS. Not yet, sir. The Jackmans would like to see you, sir.

HILLCRIST. What about?

FELLOWS. I don't know, sir.

HILLCRIST. Well, show them in.

FELLOWS. [Going] Yes, sir.

HILLCRIST turns his swivel chair round. The JACKMANS come in. He, a big fellow about fifty, in a labourer's dress, with eyes which have more in them than his tongue can express; she, a little woman with a worn face, a bright, quick glance, and a tongue to match.

HILLCRIST. Good morning, Mrs. Jackman! Morning, Jackman! Haven't seen you for a long time. What can I do?

[He draws in foot, and breath, with a sharp hiss.

JACKMAN. [In a down-hearted voice] We've had notice to quit, sir.

HILLCRIST. [With emphasis] What!

JACKMAN. Got to be out this week.

MRS. J. Yes, sir, indeed.

HILLCRIST. Well, but when I sold Longmeadow and the cottages, it was on the express understanding that there was to be no disturbance of tenancies.

MRS. J. Yes, sir; but we've all got to go. Mrs. 'Arvey, and the Drews, an' us, and there isn't another cottage to be had anywhere in Deepwater.

HILLCRIST. I know; I want one for my cowman. This won't do at all. Where do you get it from?

JACKMAN. Mr. 'Ornblower, 'imself, sir. Just an hour ago. He come round and said: "I'm sorry; I want the cottages, and you've got to clear."

MRS. J. [Bitterly] He's no gentleman, sir; he put it so brisk. We been there thirty years, and now we don't know what to do. So I hope you'll excuse us coming round, sir.

HILLCRIST. I should think so, indeed! H'm! [He rises and limps across to the fireplace on his stick. To himself] The cloven hoof. By George! this is a breach of faith. I'll write to him, Jackman. Confound it! I'd certainly never have sold if I'd known he was going to do this.

MRS. J. No, sir, I'm sure, sir. They do say it's to do with the potteries. He wants the cottages for his workmen.

HILLCRIST. [Sharply] That's all very well, but he shouldn't have led me to suppose that he would make no change.

JACKMAN. [Heavily] They talk about his havin' bought the Centry to put up more chimneys there, and that's why he wants the cottages.

HILLCRIST. The Centry! Impossible!

MRS. J. Yes, sir; it's such a pretty spot—looks beautiful from here. [She looks out through the window] Loveliest spot in all Deepwater, I always say. And your father owned it, and his father before 'im. It's a pity they ever sold it, sir, beggin' your pardon.

HILLCRIST. The Centry!

[He rings the bell.

MRS. J. [Who has brightened up] I'm glad you're goin' to stop it, sir. It does put us about. We don't know where to go. I said to Mr. Hornblower, I said, "I'm sure Mr. Hillcrist would never 'ave turned us out." An' 'e said: "Mr. Hillcrist be ——" beggin' your pardon, sir. "Make no mistake," 'e said, "you must go, missis." He don't even know our name; an' to come it like this over us! He's a dreadful new man, I think, with his overridin' notions. And sich heavy-footed man, to look at. [With sort of indulgent contempt] But he from the North, they say.

FELLOWS has entered, Left.

HILLCRIST. Ask Mrs. Hillcrist if she come.

FELLOWS. Very good, sir.

HILLCRIST. Is Dawker here?

FELLOWS. Not yet, sir.

HILLCRIST. I want to see him at one

FELLOWS retires.

JACKMAN. Mr. Hornblower said he was comin' on to see you, sir. So we thought we'd step along first.

HILLCRIST. Quite right, Jackman.

MRS. J. I said to Jackman: "Mr. Hillcrist'll stand up for us, I know. He's a gentleman." I said: "This man," I said, "don't care for the neighbourhood, or the people; he don't care for anything so long as he makes his money, and his importance. You can't expect it, I suppose," I said; [Bitterly] "havin' got rich so sudden." The gentry don't do things like that.

HILLCRIST. [Abstracted] Quite, Mrs. Jackman, quite! [To himself] The Centry! No!

MRS. HILLCRIST enters. A well-dressed woman, with a fine clear-cut face.

HILLCRIST. Oh! Amy! Mr. and Mrs. Jackman turned out of their cottage, and Mrs. Harvey, and the Drews. When I sold to Hornblower, I stipulated that they shouldn't be.

MRS. J. Our week's up on Saturday, ma'am, and I'm sure I don't know where we shall turn, because of course Jackman must be near his work, and I shall lose me washin' if we have to go far.

HILLCRIST. [With decision] I'll leave it to me, Mrs. Jackman. Good morning! Morning, Jackman! Sorry I can't move with this gout.

MRS. J. [For them both] I'm sure we're very sorry, sir. Good morning, ma'am. Good morning, ma'am; and thank you kindly. [They go.

HILLCRIST. Turning people out who have been there thirty years. I will not have it. It's a breach of faith.

MRS. H. Do you suppose this Hor-er will care two straws about that, ?

ILLCRIST. He must, when it's put to if he's got any decent feeling.

RS. H. He hasn't.

ILLCRIST. [Suddenly] The Jackmans of his having bought the Centry ut up more chimneys.

RS. H. Never! [At the window, ing out] Impossible! It would ruin place utterly, besides cutting us off the Duke's. Oh, no! Miss Mullins d never sell behind our backs.

:LLCRIST. Anyway I must stop his ng these people out.

RS. H. [With a little smile, almost :mptuous] You might have known do something of the sort. You imagine people are like yourself, . You always ought to make Daw- ıave things in black and white.

LLCRIST. I said quite distinctly: "Of ie you won't want to disturb the ıcies; there's a great shortage of ges." Hornblower told me as dis- y that he wouldn't. What more do want?

RS. H. A man like that thinks of ng but the short cut to his own [Looking out of the window to- s the rise] If he buys the Centry ›uts up chimneys, we simply could- :op here.

LLCRIST. My father would turn in rave.

RS. H. It would have been more l if he'd not dipped the estate, and the Centry. This Hornblower hates ıe thinks we turn up our noses at LLCRIST. As we do, Amy.

:S. H. Who wouldn't? A man with- raditions, who believes in nothing noney and push.

LLCRIST. Suppose he won't budge, ve do anything for the Jackmans?

:S. H. There are the two rooms :r used to have, over the stables.

'ELLOWS enters.

:LOWS. Mr. Dawker, sir.

)AWKER is a short, square, rather red-faced terrier of a man, in riding clothes and gaiters.

LLCRIST. Ah! Dawker, I've got gout .

DAWKER. Very sorry, sir. How de do, ma'am?

HILLCRIST. Did you meet the Jackmans?

DAWKER. Yeh.

He hardly ever quite finishes a word, seeming to snap off their tails.

HILLCRIST. Then you heard?

DAWKER. [Nodding] Smart man, Hornblower; never lets grass grow.

HILLCRIST. Smart?

DAWKER. [Grinning] Don't do to underrate your neighbours.

MRS. H. A cad—I call him.

DAWKER. That's it, ma'am—got all the advantage.

HILLCRIST. Heard anything about the Centry, Dawker?

DAWKER. Hornblower wants to buy.

HILLCRIST. Miss Mullins would never sell, would she?

DAWKER. She wants to.

HILLCRIST. The deuce she does!

DAWKER. He won't stick at the price either.

MRS. H. What's it worth, Dawker?

DAWKER. Depends on what you want it for.

MRS. H. He wants it for spite; we want it for sentiment.

DAWKER. [Grinning] Worth what you like to give, then; but he's a rich man.

MRS. H. Intolerable!

DAWKER. [To HILLCRIST] Give me your figure, sir. I'll try the old lady before he gets at her.

HILLCRIST. [Pondering] I don't want to buy, unless there's nothing else for it. I should have to raise the money on the estate; it won't stand much more. I can't believe the fellow would be such a barbarian. Chimneys within three hundred yards, right in front of this house! It's a nightmare.

MRS. H. You'd much better let Dawker make sure, Jack.

HILLCRIST. [Uncomfortable] Jackman says Hornblower's coming round to see me. I shall put it to him.

DAWKER. Make him keener than ever. Better get in first.

HILLCRIST. Ape his methods!—Ugh! Confound this gout! [He gets back to his chair with difficulty] Look here, Dawker, I wanted to see you about gates——

FELLOWS. [Entering] Mr. Hornblower.

HORNBLOWER enters—a man of medium height, thoroughly broadened, blown out, as it were, by success. He has thick, coarse dark hair, just grizzled, very bushy eyebrows, a wide mouth. He wears quite ordinary clothes, as if that department were in charge of someone who knew about such things. He has a small rose in his buttonhole, and carries a Homburg hat, which one suspects will look too small on his head.

HORNBLOWER. Good morning! good morning! How are ye, Dawker? Fine morning! Lovely weather!

His voice has a curious blend in its tone of brass and oil, and an accent not quite Scotch nor quite North country.

HORNBLOWER. Haven't seen ye for a long time, Hillcrist.

HILLCRIST. [Who has risen] Not since I sold you Longmeadow and those cottages, I believe.

HORNBLOWER. Dear me, now! that's what I came about.

HILLCRIST. [Subsiding again into his chair] Forgive me! Won't you sit down?

HORNBLOWER. [Not sitting] Have ye got gout? That's unfortunate. I never get it. I've no disposition that way. Had no ancestors, you see. Just me own drinkin' to answer for.

HILLCRIST. You're lucky.

HORNBLOWER. I wonder if Mrs. Hillcrist thinks that! Am I lucky to have no past, ma'am? Just the future?

MRS. H. You're sure you have the future, Mr. Hornblower?

HORNBLOWER. [With a laugh] That's your aristocratic rapier thrust. You aristocrats are very hard people underneath your manners. Ye love to lay a body out. But I've got the future all right.

HILLCRIST. [Meaningly] I've had the Jackmans here, Mr. Hornblower.

HORNBLOWER. Who are they—m with the little spitfire wife?

HILLCRIST. They're very excelle good people, and they've been in th cottage quietly thirty years.

HORNBLOWER. [Throwing out forefinger—a favourite gesture] A ye've wanted me to stir ye up a Deepwater needs a bit o' go put into There's generally some go where I a I daresay you wish there'd been "come." [He laug

MRS. H. We certainly like people keep their word, Mr. Hornblower.

HILLCRIST. Amy!

HORNBLOWER. Never mind, Hillcris takes more than that to upset me.

MRS. HILLCRIST exchanges a lo with DAWKER, who slips out observed.

HILLCRIST. You promised me, y know, not to change the tenancies.

HORNBLOWER. Well, I've come to ye that I have. I wasn't expecting have the need when I bought. Thou the Duke would sell me a bit do there; but devil a bit he will; and no must have those cottages for my wor men. I've got important works, know.

HILLCRIST. [Getting heated] The Ja mans have their importance too, Their heart's in that cottage.

HORNBLOWER. Have a sense of p portion, man. My works supply th sands of people, and my heart's in the What's more, they make my fortu I've got ambitions—I'm a serious m Suppose I were to consider this that, and every little potty objectio where should I get to?—nowhere!

HILLCRIST. All the same, this sor thing isn't done, you know.

HORNBLOWER. Not by you because 've got no need to do it. Here ye quite content on what your fath made for ye. Ye've no ambitions; ye want other people to have n How d'ye think your fathers got y land?

HILLCRIST. [Who has risen] Not breaking their word.

HORNBLOWER. [Throwing out his ger] Don't ye believe it. They go by breaking their word and turnin' mans, if that's their name, all over place.

RS. H. That's an insult, Mr. Hornblower.

ORNBLOWER. No; it's a repartee. If hink so much of these Jackmans, ! them a cottage yourselves; ye've the space.

LLCRIST. That's beside the point. promised me, and I sold on that rstanding.

ORNBLOWER. And I bought on the rstandin' that I'd get some more from the Duke.

LLCRIST. That's nothing to do with

ORNBLOWER. Ye'll find it has; be- : I'm going to have those cottages.

LLCRIST. Well, I call it simply—— [He checks himself.

ORNBLOWER. Look here, Hillcrist, not had occasion to understand like me. I've got the guts, and I've he money, and I don't sit still on m going ahead because I believe :self. I've no use for sentiment and sort of thing. Forty of your Jack- aren't worth me little finger.

LLCRIST. [Angry] Of all the blatant -s I ever heard said!——

ORNBLOWER. Well, as we're speaking ly, I've been thinkin'. Ye want the (e run your old-fashioned way, and nt it run mine. I fancy there's not for the two of us here.

:S. H. When are you going?

ORNBLOWER. Never fear, I'm not .

LLCRIST. Look here, Mr. Horn- er—this infernal gout makes me ble—puts me at a disadvantage. I should be glad if you'd kindly in yourself.

RNBLOWER. [With a great smile] anny; I'm fra' the North.

LLCRIST. I'm told you wish to buy entry and put more of your chim- up there, regardless of the fact points through the window] that uld utterly ruin the house we've or generations, and all our pleas- ere.

RNBLOWER. How the man talks! ! Ye'd think he owned the sky, be- his fathers built him a house with a pretty view, where he's nothing to do but live. It's sheer want of something to do that gives ye your fine sentiments, Hillcrist.

HILLCRIST. Have the goodness not to charge me with idleness. Dawker—where is he?—[He shows the bureau] When you do the drudgery of your works as thoroughly as I do that of my estate—— Is it true about the Centry?

HORNBLOWER. Gospel true. If ye want to know, my son Chearlie is buyin' it this very minute.

MRS. H. [Turning with a start] What do you say?

HORNBLOWER. Ay, he's with the old lady; she wants to sell, an' she'll get her price, whatever it is.

HILLCRIST. [With deep anger] If that isn't a skin game, Mr. Hornblower, I don't know what is.

HORNBLOWER. Ah! Ye've got a very nice expression there. "Skin game!" Well, bad words break no bones, an' they're wonderful for hardenin' the heart. If it wasn't for a lady's presence, I could give ye a specimen or two.

MRS. H. Oh! Mr. Hornblower, that need not stop you, I'm sure.

HORNBLOWER. Well, and I don't know that it need. Ye're an obstruction—the like of you—ye're in my path. And anyone in my path doesn't stay there long; or, if he does, he stays there on my terms. And my terms are chimneys in the Centry where I need 'em. It'll do ye a power of good, too, to know that ye're not almighty.

HILLCRIST. And that's being neighbourly!

HORNBLOWER. And how have ye tried bein' neighbourly to me? If I haven't a wife, I've got a daughter-in-law. Have ye called on her, ma'am? I'm new, and ye're an old family. Ye don't like me, ye think I'm a pushin' man. I go to chapel, an' ye don't like that. I make things and sell them, and ye don't like that. I buy land, and ye don't like that. It threatens the view from your windies. Well, I don't like you, and I'm not goin' to put up with your attitude. Ye've had things your own way too long, and now ye're not going to have them any longer.

HILLCRIST. Will you hold to your word over those cottages?

HORNBLOWER. I'm goin' to have the cottages. I need them, and more besides, now I'm to put up me new works.

HILLCRIST. That's a declaration of war.

HORNBLOWER. Ye never said a truer word. It's one or the other of us, and I rather think it's goin' to be me. I'm the risin' and you're the settin' sun, as the poet says.

HILLCRIST. [Touching the bell] We shall see if you can ride rough-shod like this. We used to have decent ways of going about things here. You want to change all that. Well, we shall do our damnedest to stop you. [To FELLOWS at the door] Are the Jackmans still in the house? Ask them to be good enough to come in.

HORNBLOWER. [With the first sign of uneasiness] I've seen these people. I've nothing more to say to them. I told 'em I'd give 'em five pounds to cover their moving.

HILLCRIST. It doesn't occur to you that people, however humble, like to have some say in their own fate?

HORNBLOWER. I never had any say in mine till I had the brass, and nobody ever will. It's all hypocrisy. You county folk are fair awful hypocrites. Ye talk about good form and all that sort o' thing. It's just the comfortable doctrine of the man in the saddle; sentimental varnish. Ye're every bit as hard as I am, underneath.

MRS. H. [Who has been standing very still all this time] You flatter us.

HORNBLOWER. Not at all. God helps those who 'elp themselves—that's at the bottom of all religion. I'm goin' to help meself, and God's going to help me.

MRS. H. I admire your knowledge.

HILLCRIST. We are in the right, and God helps——

HORNBLOWER. Don't ye believe it; ye 'aven't got the energy.

MRS. H. Nor perhaps the conceit.

HORNBLOWER. [Throwing out his forefinger] No, no; 'tisn't conceit to believe in yourself when ye've got reason to.

The JACKMANS have entered.

HILLCRIST. I'm very sorry, Mrs. Jackman, but I just wanted you realise that I've done my best with th gentleman.

MRS. J. [Doubtfully] Yes, sir. thought if you spoke for us, he'd f different-like.

HORNBLOWER. One cottage is the sa as another, missis. I made ye a fair fer of five pounds for the moving.

JACKMAN. [Slowly] We would take fifty to go out of that 'ouse. brought up three children there, buried two from it.

MRS. J. [To MRS. HILLCRIST] We attached to it like, ma'am.

HILLCRIST. [To HORNBLOWER] H would you like being turned out of place you were fond of?

HORNBLOWER. Not a bit. But lit considerations have to give way to ones. Now, missis, I'll make it pounds, and I'll send a wagon to sh your things. If that isn't fair——! Y better accept, I shan't keep it open.

The JACKMANS look at each oth their faces show deep anger—o the question they ask each othe which will speak.

MRS. J. We won't take it; eh, Georg

JACKMAN. Not a farden. We co there when we was married.

HORNBLOWER. [Throwing out finger] Ye're very improvident folk.

HILLCRIST. Don't lecture them, Hornblower; they come out of t miles above you.

HORNBLOWER. [Angry] Well, I going to give ye another week, but y go out next Saturday; and take c ye're not late, or your things'll be out—in the rain.

MRS. H. [To MRS. JACKMAN] W send down for your things, and y can come to us for the time being.

MRS. JACKMAN drops a curts her eyes stab HORNBLOWER.

JACKMAN. [Heavily, clenching fists] You're no gentleman! Don't temptation in my way, that's all.

HILLCRIST. [In a low voice] Ja man!

HORNBLOWER. [Triumphantly] hear that? That's your protegee! K out o' my way, me man, or I'll put police on to ye for utterin' threats

ILLCRIST. You'd better go now, Jack-

The JACKMANS move to the door.
RS. J. [Turning] Maybe you'll re-it some day, sir.
They go out, MRS. HILLCRIST following.
ORNBLOWER. We—ell, I'm sorry
're such unreasonable folk. I never people with less notion of which their bread was buttered.
ILLCRIST. And I never met anyone achydermatous.
ORNBLOWER. What's that, in Heav-name? Ye needn't wrap it up in words now your good lady's gone.
ILLCRIST. [With dignity] I'm not g in for a slanging match. I resent conduct much too deeply.
ORNBLOWER. Look here, Hillcrist, I object to you personally; ye seem e a poor creature that's bound to eft with your gout and your dig-but of course ye can make your-very disagreeable before ye're done.
I want to be the movin' spirit
I'm full of plans. I'm goin' to for Parliament; I'm goin' to make a prosperous place. I'm a good-na-man if you'll treat me as such.
you take me on as a neighbour all that, and I'll manage without neys on the Centry. Is it a bargain?
[He holds out his hand.
LCRIST. [Ignoring it] I thought you you didn't keep your word when ted you to break it?
RNBLOWER. Now, don't get on the horse. You and me could be very friends; but I can be a very nasty
y. The chimneys will not look nice that windie, ye know.
LCRIST. [Deeply angry] Mr. Horn-r, if you think I'll take your hand this Jackman business, you're y mistaken. You are proposing shall stand in with you while you nise over the neighbourhood.
e realise that unless you leave those ies undisturbed as you said you
, we don't know each other.
NBLOWER. Well, that won't trouble
uch. Now, ye'd better think it ye've got gout and that makes
sty. I tell ye again: I'm not the man to make an enemy of. Unless ye're friendly, sure as I stand here I'll ruin the look of your place. [The toot of a car is heard] There's my car. I sent Chearlie and his wife in it to buy the Centry. And make no mistake—he's got it in his pocket. It's your last chance, Hillcrist. I'm not averse to you as a man; I think ye're the best of the fossils round here; at least, I think ye can do me the most harm socially. Come now!

[He holds out his hand again.

HILLCRIST. Not if you'd bought the Centry ten times over. Your ways are not mine, and I'll have nothing to do with you.

HORNBLOWER. [Very angry] Really! Is that so? Very well. Now ye're goin' to learn something, an' it's time ye did. D'ye realise that I'm very nearly round ye? [He draws a circle slowly in the air] I'm at Uphill, the works are here, here's Longmeadow, here's the Centry that I've just bought, there's only the Common left to give ye touch with the world. Now between you and the Common there's the high road. I come out on the high road here to your north, and I shall come out on it there to your west. When I've got me new works up on the Centry, I shall be makin' a trolley track between the works up to the road at both ends, so my goods will be running right round ye. How'll ye like that for a country place?

For answer HILLCRIST, who is angry beyond the power of speech, walks, forgetting to use his stick, up to the French window. While he stands there, with his back to HORNBLOWER, the door Left is flung open, and JILL enters, preceding CHARLES, his wife CHLOE, and ROLF. CHARLES is a goodish-looking, moustached young man of about twenty-eight, with a white rim to the collar of his waistcoat, and spats. He has his hand behind CHLOE'S back, as if to prevent her turning tail. She is rather a handsome young woman, with dark eyes, full red lips, and a suspicion of powder, a little underdressed for the country. ROLF, who brings up the rear, is about twenty, with an open face and stiffish butter-coloured hair. JILL runs over to her father at the window. She has a bottle.

JILL. [Soto voce] Look, Dodo, I've brought the lot! Isn't it a treat, dear Papa? And here's the stuff. Hallo!

The exclamation is induced by the apprehension that there has been a row. HILLCRIST gives a stiff little bow, remaining where he is in the window. JILL stays close to him, staring from one to the other, then blocks him off and engages him in conversation. CHARLES has gone up to his father, who has remained maliciously still, where he delivered his last speech. CHLOE and ROLF stand awkwardly waiting between the fireplace and the door.

HORNBLOWER. Well, Chearlie?

CHARLES. Not got it.

HORNBLOWER. Not!

CHARLES. I'd practically got her to say she'd sell at three thousand five hundred, when that fellow Dawker turned up.

HORNBLOWER. That bull-terrier of a chap! Why, he was here a while ago. Oh—ho! So that's it!

CHARLES. I heard him gallop up. He came straight for the old lady, and got her away. What he said I don't know; but she came back looking wiser than an owl; said she'd think it over, thought she had other views.

HORNBLOWER. Did ye tell her she might have her price?

CHARLES. Practically I did.

HORNBLOWER. Well?

CHARLES. She thought it would be fairer to put it up to auction. There were other enquiries. Oh! She's a leery old bird—reminds me of one of those pictures of Fate, don't you know.

HORNBLOWER. Auction! Well, if it's not gone we'll get it yet. That damned little Dawker! I've had a row with Hillcrist.

CHARLES. I thought so.

They are turning cautiously to look at HILLCRIST, when JILL steps forward.

JILL. [Flushed and determined] That's not a bit sporting of you, Mr. Hor blower.

At her words ROLF comes forwa too.

HORNBLOWER. Ye should hear bo sides before ye say that, missy.

JILL. There isn't another side to tur ing out the Jackmans after you'd pro ised.

HORNBLOWER. Oh! dear me, yes. Th don't matter a row of gingerbread to t schemes I've got for betterin' this neig bourhood.

JILL. I had been standing up for ye now I won't.

HORNBLOWER. Dear, dear! What'll b come of me?

JILL. I won't say anything about t other thing because I think it's benea dignity to notice it. But to turn poor pe ple out of their cottages is a shame.

HORNBLOWER. Hoity me!

ROLF. [Suddenly] You haven't be doing that, Father?

CHARLES. Shut up, Rolf!

HORNBLOWER. [Turning on ROLF] H Here's a league o' youth! My you whipper-snapper, keep your mouth sh and leave it to your elders to kn what's right.

Under the weight of this rejoind ROLF stands biting his lips. Th he throws his head up.

ROLF. I hate it!

HORNBLOWER. [With real venom] O Ye hate it? Ye can get out of my hou then.

JILL. Free speech, Mr. Hornblow don't be violent.

HORNBLOWER. Ye're right, young la Ye can stay in my house, Rolf, a learn manners. Come, Chearlie!

JILL. [Quite softly] Mr. Hornblow

HILLCRIST. [From the window] Jil

JILL. [Impatiently] Well, what's good of it? Life's too short for ro and too jolly!

ROLF. Bravo!

HORNBLOWER. [Who has shown a s of weakening] Now, look here! I not have revolt in my family. Ye'll have to learn that a man who's wor as I have, who's risen as I have, who knows the world, is the pro judge of what's right and wrong.

ver to God for me actions, and not ou young people.
LL. Poor God!
ORNBLOWER. [Genuinely shocked] blasphemous young thing! [To] And ye're just as bad, ye young hinker. I won't have it.
LLCRIST. [Who has come down, t] Jill, I wish you would kindly not
L. I can't help it.
ARLES. [Putting his arm through NBLOWER'S] Come along, Father! s, not words.
ORNBLOWER. Ay! Deeds!
MRS. HILLCRIST and DAWKER have entered by the French window.
S. H. Quite right!
They all turn and look at her.
RNBLOWER. Ah! So ye put your dog it. [He throws out his finger at KER] Very smart, that—I give ye
S. H. [Pointing to CHLOE, who has by herself, forgotten and uncomble throughout the scene] May I who this lady is?
CHLOE turns round startled, and her vanity bag slips down her dress to the floor.
RNBLOWER. No, ma'am, ye may not, e know perfectly well.
L. I brought her in, Mother.
[She moves to CHLOE'S side.
S. H. Will you take her out again,
LLCRIST. Amy, have the goodness to nber——
S. H. That this is my house so far lies are concerned!
L. Mother!
She looks astonished at CHLOE, who, about to speak, does not, passing her eyes, with a queer, half-scared expression, from MRS. HILLCRIST to DAWKER.
L. [To CHLOE] I'm awfully sorry. on!
They go out, Left. ROLF hurries after them.
ARLES. You've insulted my wife.
What do you mean by it?
IRS. HILLCRIST simply smiles.
LCRIST. I apologise. I regret exly. There is no reason why the ladies of your family or of mine should be involved in our quarrel. For Heaven's sake, let's fight like gentlemen.

HORNBLOWER. Catchwords—sneers! No; we'll play what ye call a skin game, Hillcrist, without gloves on; we won't spare each other. Ye look out for yourselves, for, begod, after this morning, I mean business. And as for you, Dawker, ye sly dog, ye think yourself very clever; but I'll have the Centry yet. Come, Chearlie!

They go out, passing JILL, who is coming in again, in the doorway.

HILLCRIST. Well, Dawker?

DAWKER. [Grinning] Safe for the moment. The old lady'll put it up to auction. Couldn't get her to budge from that. Says she don't want to be unneighbourly to either. But, if you ask me, it's money she smells!

JILL. [Advancing] Now, mother!

MRS. H. Well?

JILL. Why did you insult her?

MRS. H. I think I only asked you to take her out.

JILL. Why? Even if she is Old Combustion's daughter-in-law?

MRS. H. My dear Jill, allow me to judge the sort of acquaintances I wish to make. [She looks at DAWKER.

JILL. She's all right. Lots of women powder and touch up their lips nowadays. I think she's rather a good sort; she was awfully upset.

MRS. H. Too upset.

JILL. Oh! don't be so mysterious, Mother. If you know something, do spit it out!

MRS. H. Do you wish me to—er—"spit it out," Jack?

HILLCRIST. Dawker, if you don't mind——

DAWKER, with a nod, passes away out of the French window.

HILLCRIST. Jill, be respectful, and don't talk like a bargee.

JILL. It's no good, Dodo. It made me ashamed. It's just as—as caddish to insult people who haven't said a word, in your own house, as it is to be—old Hornblower.

MRS. H. You don't know what you're talking about.

HILLCRIST. What's the matter with young Mrs. Hornblower?

MRS. H. Excuse me, I shall keep my thoughts to myself at present.

[She looks coldly at JILL, and goes out through the French window.

HILLCRIST. You've thoroughly upset your mother, Jill.

JILL. It's something Dawker's told her; I saw them. I don't like Dawker, Father, he's so common.

HILLCRIST. My dear, we can't all be uncommon. He's got lots of go. You must apologise to your mother.

JILL. [Shaking her clubbed hair] They'll make you do things you don't approve of, Dodo, if you don't look out. Mother's fearfully bitter when she gets her knife in. If old Hornblower's disgusting, it's no reason we should be.

HILLCRIST. So you think I'm capable —that's nice, Jill!

JILL. No, no, darling! I only want to warn you solemnly that Mother'll tell you you're fighting fair, no matter what she and Dawker do.

HILLCRIST. [Smiling] Jill, I don't think I ever saw you so serious.

JILL. No. Because—[She swallows a lump in her throat] Well—I was just beginning to enjoy myself; and now—everything's going to be bitter and beastly, with Mother in that mood. That horrible old man! Oh, Dodo! Don't let them make you horrid! You're such a darling. How's your gout, ducky?

HILLCRIST. Better; lot better.

JILL. There, you see! That shows! It's going to be half interesting for you, but not for—us.

HILLCRIST. Look here, Jill—is there anything between you and young what's-his-name—Rolf?

JILL. [Biting her lip] No. But—now it's all spoiled.

HILLCRIST. You can't expect me to regret that.

JILL. I don't mean any tosh about love's young dream; but I do like being friends. I want to enjoy things, Dodo, and you can't do that when everybody's on the hate. You're going to wallow in it, and so shall I—oh! I know I shall! —we shall all wallow, and think of nothing but "one for his nob."

HILLCRIST. Aren't you fond of yo home?

JILL. Of course. I love it.

HILLCRIST. Well, you won't be able live in it unless we stop that ruffia Chimneys and smoke, the trees c down, piles of pots. Every kind abomination. There! [He points] Ima ine! [He points through the Fren window, as if he could see those chi neys rising and marring the beauty the fields] I was born here, and m father, and his, and his, and his. Th loved those fields, and those old tre And this barbarian, with his "improv ment" schemes, forsooth! I learned ride in the Centry meadows—prettie spring meadows in the world; I' climbed every tree there. Why my fat er ever sold——! But who could ha imagined this? And come at a bad m ment, when money's scarce.

JILL. [Cuddling his arm] Dodo!

HILLCRIST. Yes. But you don't lo the place as I do, Jill. You youngste don't love anything, I sometimes thin

JILL. I do, Dodo, I do!

HILLCRIST. You've got it all befo you. But you may live your life a never find anything so good and beautiful as this old home. I'm not g ing to have it spoiled without a fight.

Conscious of having betrayed se timent, he walks out at the Fren window, passing away to t Right. JILL, following to the w dow, looks. Then throwing ba her head, she clasps her hands t hind it.

JILL. Oh—oh—oh!

*A voice behind her says, "*JIL She turns and starts back, le ing against the lintel of the w dow. ROLF appears outside window.

JILL. Who goes there?

ROLF. [Butressed against the L lintel] Enemy—after Chloe's bag.

JILL. Pass, enemy! And all's ill!

ROLF passes through the wind and retrieves the vanity bag f the floor where CHLOE drop it, then again takes his st against the Left lintel of French window.

OLF. It's not going to make any difnce, is it?
LL. You know it is.
OLF. Sins of the fathers.
LL. Unto the third and fourth genion. What sin has my father comed?
OLF. None, in a way; only, I've often you I don't see why you should us as outsiders. We don't like it.
LL. Well, you shouldn't be, then; I ı, he shouldn't be.
OLF. Father's just as human as your ır; he's wrapped up in us, and all 'getting on" is for us. Would you to be treated as your mother treated e? Your mother's set the stroke for ɔther big-wigs about here; nobody on Chloe. And why not? Why not? nk it's contemptible to bar people because they're new, as you call ıd have to make their position in- of having it left them.
L. It's not because they're new, it's ıse—if your father behaved like a eman, he'd be treated like one.
LF. Would he? I don't believe it. ather's a very able man; he thinks entitled to have influence here. , everybody tries to keep him down. yes, they do. That makes him mad more determined than ever to get ray. You ought to be just, Jill.
L. I am just.
LF. No, you're not. Besides, what's it to do with Charlie and Chloe? 's particularly harmless. It's pretty ning for her. Father didn't expect e to call until Charlie married, but

---

L. I think it's all very petty.
F. It is—a dog-in-the-manger ess; I did think you were above it.
L. How would you like to have home spoiled?
F. I'm not going to argue. Only ; don't stand still. Homes aren't ıore proof against change than anyelse.
L. All right! You come and try to ours.
F. We don't want to take your
. Like the Jackmans'?
F. All right. I see you're hopelessly prejudiced. [He turns to go.

JILL. [Just as he is vanishing—softly] Enemy?

ROLF. [Turning] Yes, enemy.

JILL. Before the battle—let's shake hands.

They move from the lintels and grasp each other's hands in the centre of the French window.

Curtain.

ACT II

SCENE I

A room in a provincial hotel, where things are bought and sold. The scene is set well forward, and is not very broad; it represents the auctioneer's end of the room, having, rather to stage Left, a narrow table with two chairs facing the audience, where the auctioneer will sit and stand. The table which is set forward to the footlights, is littered with green-covered particulars of sale. The audience are in effect public and bidders. There is a door on the Left, level with the table. Along the back wall, behind the table, are two raised benches with two steps up to them, such as billiard rooms often have, divided by a door in the middle of a wall, which is panelled in oak. Late September sunlight is coming from a skylight (not visible) on to these seats. The stage is empty when the curtain goes up, but DAWKER and MRS. HILLCRIST are just entering through the door at the back.

DAWKER. Be out of their way here, ma'am. See old Hornblower with Chearlie? [He points down to the audience.

MRS. H. It begins at three, doesn't it?

DAWKER. They won't be over punctual; there's only the Centry selling. There's young Mrs. Hornblower with the other boy—[Pointing] over at the entrance. I've got that chap I told you of down from town.

MRS. H. Ah! make quite sure of her, Dawker. Any mistake would be fatal.

DAWKER. [Nodding] That's right, ma'am. Lot of people—always spare time to watch an auction—ever remark that? The Duke's agent's here; shouldn't be surprised if he chipped in.

MRS. H. Where did you leave my husband?

DAWKER. With Miss Jill, in the courtyard. He's coming to you. In case I miss him, tell him when I reach his limit to blow his nose if he wants me to go on; when he blows it a second time, I'll stop for good. Hope we shan't get to that. Old Hornblower doesn't throw his money away.

MRS. H. What limit did you settle?

DAWKER. Six thousand!

MRS. H. That's a fearful price. Well, good luck to you, Dawker!

DAWKER. Good luck, ma'am. I'll go and see to that little matter of Mrs. Chloe. Never fear, we'll do them in somehow.

He winks, lays his finger on the side of his nose, and goes out at the door.

MRS. HILLCRIST mounts the two steps, sits down Right of the door, and puts up a pair of long-handled glasses. Through the door behind her come CHLOE and ROLF. She makes a sign for him to go, and shuts the door.

CHLOE. [At the foot of the steps—in the gangway—in a slightly common accent] Mrs. Hillcrist!

MRS. H. [Not quite starting] I beg your pardon?

CHLOE. [Again] Mrs. Hillcrist——

MRS. H. Well?

CHLOE. I never did you any harm.

MRS. H. Did I ever say you did?

CHLOE. No! but you act as if I had.

MRS. H. I'm not aware that I've acted at all—as yet. You are nothing to me, except as one of your family.

CHLOE. 'Tisn't I that wants to spoil your home.

MRS. H. Stop them then. I see your husband down there with his father.

CHLOE. I—I have tried.

MRS. H. [Looking at her] Oh! I suppose such men don't pay attention to what women ask them.

CHLOE. [With a flash of spirit] I'm fond of my husband. I——

MRS. H. [Looking at her steadily] I don't quite know why you spoke to me.

CHLOE. [With a sort of pathetic suavelenness] I only thought perhaps you'd like to treat me as a human being.

MRS. H. Really, if you don't mind, I should like to be left alone just now.

CHLOE. [Unhappily acquiescent] Certainly! I'll go to the other end.

[She moves to the Left, mounts the steps and sits down.

ROLF, looking in through the door and seeing where she is, joins her. MRS. HILLCRIST resettles herself a little further in on the Right.

ROLF. [Bending over to CHLOE, after a glance at MRS. HILLCRIST] Are you all right?

CHLOE. It's awfully hot.

[She fans herself with the particulars of sale.

ROLF. There's Dawker. I hate the chap!

CHLOE. Where?

ROLF. Down there; see?

[He points down to stage Right of the room.

CHLOE. [Drawing back in her seat with a little gasp] Oh!

ROLF. [Not noticing] Who's that next him, looking up here?

CHLOE. I don't know.

She has raised her auction programme suddenly, and sits fanning herself, carefully screening her face.

ROLF. [Looking at her] Don't you feel well? Shall I get you some water?

[He gets up at her nod.

As he reaches the door, HILLCRIST and JILL come in. HILLCRIST passes him abstractedly with a nod, and sits down beside his wife.

JILL. [To ROLF] Come to see us turned out?

ROLF. [Emphatically] No. I'm looking after Chloe; she's not well.

JILL. [Glancing at her] Sorry. She needn't have come, I suppose?

ROLF deigns no answer, and goes out.

JILL glances at CHLOE, then at her parents talking in low voices, and sits down next her father, who makes room for her.

[RS. H. Can Dawker see you there, ?

HILLCRIST nods.

RS. H. What's the time?

ILLCRIST. Three minutes to three.

LL. Don't you feel beastly all down backs of your legs, Dodo?

ILLCRIST. Yes.

LL. Do you, Mother?

RS. H. No.

LL. A wagon of old Hornblower's passed while we were in the yard. an omen.

RS. H. Don't be foolish, Jill.

:L. Look at the old brute! Dodo, my hand.

RS. H. Make sure you've got a kerchief, Jack.

ILLCRIST. I can't go beyond the six sand; I shall have to raise every y on mortgage as it is. The estate ly won't stand more, Amy.

He feels in his breast pocket, and pulls up the edge of his handkerchief.

L. Oh! Look! There's Miss Mul- at the back; just come in. Isn't spidery old chip?

S. H. Come to gloat. Really, I her not accepting your offer is dis- g. Her impartiality is all hum-LLCRIST. Can't blame her for get- what she can—it's human nature. ! I used to feel like this before a oice. Who's that next to Dawker?

L. What a fish!

S. H. [To herself] Ah! yes. Her eyes slide round at CHLOE, sitting motionless and rather sunk in her seat, slowly fanning herself with the particulars of the sale.

S. H. Jack, go and offer her my ng salts.

LCRIST. [Taking the salts] Thank or a human touch!

S. H. [Taken aback] Oh! I——

. [With a quick look at her mother, snatching the salts] I will. [She goes to CHLOE with the salts] Have a you look awfully white.

CHLOE. [Looking up, startled] Oh! no thanks. I'm all right.

JILL. No, do! You must.

CHLOE takes them.

JILL. D'you mind letting me see that a minute?

She takes the particulars of the sale and studies it, but CHLOE has buried the lower part of her face in her hand and the smelling salts bottle.

JILL. Beastly hot, isn't it? You'd better keep that.

CHLOE. [Her dark eyes wandering and uneasy] Rolf's getting me some water.

JILL. Why do you stay? You didn't want to come, did you?

CHLOE shakes her head.

JILL. All right! Here's your water.

She hands back the particulars and slides over to her seat, passing ROLF in the gangway, with her chin well up.

MRS. HILLCRIST, who has watched CHLOE and JILL and DAWKER and his friend, makes an enquiring movement with her hand, but gets a disappointing answer.

JILL. What's the time, Dodo?

HILLCRIST. [Looking at his watch] Three minutes past.

JILL. [Sighing] Oh, hell!

HILLCRIST. Jill!

JILL. Sorry, Dodo. I was only thinking. Look! Here he is! Phew!—isn't he——?

MRS. H. 'Sh!

The AUCTIONEER comes in Left and goes to the table. He is a square, short, brown-faced, common-looking man, with clipped grey hair fitting him like a cap, and a clipped grey moustache. His lids come down over his quick eyes, till he can see you very sharply, and you can hardly see that he can see you. He can break into a smile at any moment, which has no connection with him, as it were. By a certain hurt look, however, when bidding is slow, he discloses that he is not merely an auctioneer, but has in him elements of the human being. He can wink with anyone, and is dressed in a snuff-brown suit, with a perfectly unbuttoned waistcoat, a low, turned-down collar, and small black and white sailor-knot tie. While he is settling his papers, the HILLCRISTS settle themselves tensely. CHLOE has drunk her water and leaned back again, with the smelling salts to her nose. ROLF leans forward in the seat beside her, looking sideways at JILL. A SOLICITOR, with a grey beard, has joined the AUCTIONEER at his table.

AUCTIONEER. [Tapping the table] Sorry to disappoint you, gentlemen, but I've only one property to offer you today. No. 1, The Centry, Deepwater. The second on the particulars has been withdrawn. The third—that's Bidcot, desirable freehold mansion and farmlands in the Parish of Kenway—we shall have to deal with next week. I shall be happy to sell it you then without reservation. [He looks again through the particulars in his hand, giving the audience time to readjust themselves to his statements] Now, gen'lemen, as I say, I've only the one property to sell. Freehold No. 1—all that very desirable corn and stock-rearing and parklike residential land known as the Centry, Deepwater, unique property—an A.1. chance to an A.1. audience. [With his smile] Ought to make the price of the three we thought we had. Now you won't mind listening to the conditions of sale; Mr. Blinkard'll read 'em, and they won't wirry you, they're very short.

[He sits down and gives two little taps on the table.

The SOLICITOR rises and reads the conditions of sale in a voice which practically no one can hear. Just as he begins to read these conditions of sale, CHARLES HORNBLOWER enters at back. He stands a moment, glancing round at the HILLCRISTS and twirling his moustache, then moves along to his wife and touches her.

CHARLES. Chloe, aren't you well?

In the start which she gives, her face is fully revealed to the audience.

CHARLES. Come along, out of the wa of these people.

He jerks his head towards the HILL CRISTS. CHLOE gives a swift loo down to the stage Right of th audience.

CHLOE. No; I'm all right; it's hott there.

CHARLES. [To ROLF] Well, look aft her—I must go back.

ROLF nods. CHARLES slides back the door, with a glance at th HILLCRISTS, of whom MRS. HILL CRIST has been watching like lynx. He goes out, just as th SOLICITOR, finishing, sits down.

AUCTIONEER. [Rising and tapping Now, gen'lemen, it's not often a pie of land like this comes into the marke What's that? [To a friend in front him] No better land in Deepwater that's right, Mr. Spicer. I know th village well, and a charming place is; perfect locality, to be sure. Now don't want to wirry you by singing th praises of this property; there it is well-watered, nicely timbered—no rese vation of the timber, gen'lemen—a tenancy to hold you up; free to do wh you like with it to-morrow. You've g a jewel of a site there, too; perfect p sition for a house. It lies between t Duke's and Squire Hillcrist's—an eme ald isle. [With his smile] No allusion Ireland, gen'lemen—perfect peace in t Centry. Nothing like it in the county a gen'leman's site, and you don't g that offered you every day. [He loo down towards HORNBLOWER, stage Le Carries the mineral rights, and as y know, perhaps, there's the very valua Deepwater clay there. What am I start it at? Can I say three thousan Well, anything you like to give me. I not particular. Come now, you've t more time than me, I expect. Two hu dred acres of first-rate grazin' and co land, with a site for a residence equalled in the county; and all the p sibilities! Well, what shall I say?

[Bid from SPI Two thousand? [With his smile] T won't hurt you, Mr. Spicer. Why, th that to overlook the Duke, For thousand?

[Bid from HORNBLOWER, stage Left. five. Thank you, sir. Two thousand hundred bid. [To a friend just below] Come, Mr. Sandy, don't scratch head over it.

[Bid from DAWKER, stage Right. five. Three thousand bid for this de- ble property. Why, you'd think it n't desirable. Come along, gen'le- . A little spirit. [A slight pause. LL. Why can't I see the bids, Dodo? ILLCRIST. The last was Dawker's. UCTIONEER. For three thousand. RNBLOWER] Three thousand five lred? May I say four? [A bid from centre] No, I'm not particular; I'll hundreds. Three thousand six hun- bid. [HORNBLOWER] And seven. e thousand seven hundred, and— pauses, quartering the audience].

L. Who was that, Dodo?

LLCRIST. Hornblower. It's the Duke e centre.

JCTIONEER. Come, gen'lemen, don't me all day. Four thousand may I [DAWKER] Thank you. We're be- ng. And one? [A bid from the cen- Four thousand one hundred. NBLOWER] Four thousand two hun- May I have yours, sir? [To KER] And three. Four thousand hundred bid. No such site in the y, gen'lemen. I'm going to sell this for what it's worth. You can't bid nuch for me. [He smiles] [HORN- ER] Four thousand five hundred bid. from the centre] And six. [DAW- And seven. [HORNBLOWER] And Nine, may I say? [But the centre dried up] [DAWKER] And nine. NBLOWER] Five thousand. Five and bid. That's better; there's spirit in it. For five thousand.

He pauses while he speaks to the SOLICITOR.

LCRIST. It's a duel now.

CTIONEER. Now, gen'lemen, I'm not to give this property away. Five and bid. [DAWKER] And one. NBLOWER] And two. [DAWKER] hree. Five thousand three hundred nd five, did you say, sir? [HORN- ER] Five thousand five hundred bid.

[He looks at his particulars.

JILL. [Rather agonised] Enemy, Do- do.

AUCTIONEER. This chance may never come again.

"How you'll regret it
If you don't get it,"

as the poet says. May I say five thousand six hundred, sir? [DAWKER] Five thousand six hundred bid. [HORNBLOWER] And seven. [DAWKER] And eight. For five thousand eight hundred pounds. We're gettin' on, but we haven't got the value yet.

A slight pause, while he wipes his brow at the success of his own efforts.

JILL. Us, Dodo?

HILLCRIST nods. JILL looks over at ROLF, whose face is grimly set. CHLOE has never moved. MRS. HILLCRIST whispers to her husband.

AUCTIONEER. Five thousand eight hundred bid. For five thousand eight hundred. Come along, gen'lemen, come along. We're not beaten. Thank you, sir. [HORNBLOWER] Five thousand nine hundred. And——? [DAWKER] Six thousand. Six thousand bid. Six thousand bid. For six thousand! The Centry—most desirable spot in the county—going for the low price of six thousand.

HILLCRIST. [Muttering] Low! Heavens!

AUCTIONEER. Any advance on six thousand? Come, gen'lemen, we haven't dried up? A little spirit. Six thousand? For six thousand? For six thousand pounds? Very well, I'm selling. For six thousand once—[He taps] For six thousand twice—[He taps].

JILL. [Low] Oh! we've got it!

AUCTIONEER. And one, sir? [HORNBLOWER] Six thousand one hundred bid.

The SOLICITOR touches his arm and says something, to which the AUCTIONEER responds with a nod.

MRS. H. Blow your nose, Jack.

HILLCRIST blows his nose.

AUCTIONEER. For six thousand one hundred. [DAWKER] And two. Thank you. [HORNBLOWER] And three. For six thousand three hundred. [DAWKER] And four. For six thousand four hundred pounds. This coveted property. For six thousand four hundred pounds. Why, it's giving it away, gen'lemen. [A pause.

MRS. H. Giving!

AUCTIONEER. Six thousand four hundred bid. [HORNBLOWER] And five. [DAWKER] And six. [HORNBLOWER] And seven. [DAWKER] And eight.

A pause, during which, through the door Left, someone beckons to the SOLICITOR, who rises and confers.

HILLCRIST. [Muttering] I've done if that doesn't get it.

AUCTIONEER. For six thousand eight hundred. For six thousand eight hundred—once—[He taps] twice—[He taps] For the last time. This dominating site. [HORNBLOWER] And nine. Thank you. For six thousand nine hundred.

HILLCRIST has taken out his handkerchief.

JILL. Oh! Dodo!

MRS. H. [Quivering] Don't give in!

AUCTIONEER. Seven thousand may I say? [DAWKER] Seven thousand.

MRS. H. [Whispers] Keep it down; don't show him.

AUCTIONEER. For seven thousand—going for seven thousand—once—[Taps] twice—[Taps] [HORNBLOWER] And one. Thank you, sir.

HILLCRIST blows his nose. JILL, with a choke, leans back in her seat and folds her arms tightly on her chest. MRS. HILLCRIST passes her handkerchief over her lips, sitting perfectly still. HILLCRIST too is motionless.

The AUCTIONEER has paused, and is talking to the SOLICITOR, who has returned to his seat.

MRS. H. Oh! Jack.

JILL. Stick it, Dodo; stick it!

AUCTIONEER. Now, gen'lemen, I have a bid of seven thousand one hundred for the Centry. And I'm instructed to sell if I can't get more. It's a fair price, but not a big price. [To his friend MR. SPICER] A thumpin' price? [With his smile] Well, you're a judge of thumpin', I admit. Now, who'll give me seven thousand two hundred? What, no one? Well, I can't make you, gen'lemen. For seven thousand one hundred. Once [Taps] Twice—[Taps]

JILL utters a little groan.

HILLCRIST. [Suddenly, in a que voice] Two.

AUCTIONEER. [Turning with surpri and looking up to receive HILLCRIS nod] Thank you, sir. And two. Sev thousand two hundred. [He screws hi self round so as to command both HI CRIST and HORNBLOWER] May I ha yours, sir? [HORNBLOWER] And thr [HILLCRIST] And four. Seven thousa four hundred. For seven thousand fo hundred. [HORNBLOWER] Five. [HI CRIST] Six. For seven thousand six hu dred. [A pause] Well, gen'lemen, this better, but a record property shid fe a record price. The possibilities are en mous. [HORNBLOWER] Eight thousa did you say, sir? Eight thousand. ing for eight thousand pounds. [HI CRIST] And one. [HORNBLOWER] A two. [HILLCRIST] And three. [HO BLOWER] And four. [HILLCRIST] A five. For eight thousand five hundred wonderful property for eight thousa five hundred. [He wipes his br

JILL. [Whispering] Oh, Dodo!

MRS. H. That's enough, Jack, we m stop some time.

AUCTIONEER. For eight thousand hundred. Once—[Taps] Twice—[Ta [HORNBLOWER] Six hundred. [H CRIST] Seven. May I have yours, [HORNBLOWER] Eight.

HILLCRIST. Nine thousand.

AUCTIONEER. Nine thousand for astounding property. Why, the would pay that if he realised he overlooked. Now, sir? [To H BLOWER. No response] Just a little on that. [No response] For nine t sand. The Centry, Deepwater, for thousand. Once—[Taps] Twi [Taps]

JILL. [Under her breath] Ours!

A VOICE. [From far back in the tre] And five hundred.

AUCTIONEER. [Surprised and thro out his arms towards the voice] five hundred. For nine thousand hundred. May I have yours, sir?

[He looks at HORNBLOWER. No response.

The SOLICITOR speaks to him.

IRS. H. [Whispering] It must be the ce again.

HILLCRIST. [Passing his hand over his w] That's stopped him, anyway.

AUCTIONEER. [Looking at HILLCRIST] nine thousand five hundred?

HILLCRIST shakes his head.

UCTIONEER. Once more. The Centry, pwater, for nine thousand five hun-d. Once—[Taps] Twice—[Taps] pauses and looks again at HORN-NER and HILLCRIST] For the last —at nine thousand five hundred. ps] [*With a look towards the bid-*Mr. Smalley. Well! [With great faction] That's that! No more to-gen'lemen.

The AUCTIONEER and SOLICITOR busy themselves. The room begins to empty.

RS. H. Smalley? Smalley? Is that Duke's agent? Jack!

ILLCRIST. [Coming out of a sort of a, after the excitement he has been g through] What! What!

LL. Oh, Dodo! How splendidly you c it!

ILLCRIST. Phew! What a squeak! I clean out of my depth. A mercy the e chipped in again.

RS. H. [Looking at ROLF and CHLOE, are standing up as if about to go] e care; they can hear you. Find ker, Jack.

Below, the AUCTIONEER and SOLICI-TOR take up their papers, and move out Left.

HILLCRIST stretches himself, standing up, as if to throw off the strain. The door behind is opened, and HORNBLOWER appears.

ORNBLOWER. Ye ran me up a pretty . Ye bid very pluckily, Hillcrist. ve didn't quite get my measure.

LLCRIST. Oh! It was my nine thou-the Duke capped. Thank God, the y's gone to a gentleman!

RNBLOWER. The Duke? [He laughs] the Centry's not gone to a gentle-nor to a fool. It's gone to me.

LLCRIST. What!

ORNBLOWER. I'm sorry for ye; ye're not fit to manage these things. Well, it's a monstrous price, and I've had to pay it because of your obstinacy. I shan't forget that when I come to build.

HILLCRIST. D'you mean to say that bid was for you?

HORNBLOWER. Of course I do. I told ye I was a bad man to be up against. Perhaps ye'll believe me now.

HILLCRIST. A dastardly trick!

HORNBLOWER. [With venom] What did ye call it—a skin game? Remember we're playin' a skin game, Hillcrist.

HILLCRIST. [Clenching his fists] If we were younger men——

HORNBLOWER. Ay! 'Twouldn't look pretty for us to be at fisticuffs. We'll leave the fightin' to the young ones. [He glances at ROLF and JILL; suddenly throwing out his finger at ROLF] No makin' up to that young woman! I've watched ye. And as for you, missy, you leave my boy alone.

JILL. [With suppressed passion] Dodo, may I spit in his eye or something?

HILLCRIST. Sit down.

JILL sits down. He stands between her and HORNBLOWER.

HILLCRIST. You've won this round, sir, by a foul blow. We shall see whether you can take any advantage of it. I believe the law can stop you ruining my property.

HORNBLOWER. Make your mind easy; it can't. I've got ye in a noose, and I'm goin' to hang ye.

MRS. H. [Suddenly] Mr. Hornblower, as you fight foul—so shall we.

HILLCRIST. Amy!

MRS. H. [Paying no attention] And it will not be foul play towards you and yours. You are outside the pale.

HORNBLOWER. That's just where I am, outside your pale all round ye. Ye're not long for Deepwater, ma'am. Make your dispositions to go; ye'll be out in six months, I prophesy. And good riddance to the neighbourhood.

They are all down on the level now.

CHLOE. [Suddenly coming closer to MRS. HILLCRIST] Here are your salts, thank you. Father, can't you——?

HORNBLOWER. [Surprised] Can't I what?

CHLOE. Can't you come to an arrangement?

MRS. H. Just so, Mr. Hornblower. Can't you?

HORNBLOWER. [Looking from one to the other] As we're speakin' out, ma'am, it's your behaviour to my daughter-in-law—who's as good as you—and better, to my thinking—that's more than half the reason why I've bought this property. Ye've fair got my dander up. Now it's no use to bandy words. It's very forgivin' of ye, Chloe, but come along!

MRS. H. Quite seriously, Mr. Hornblower, you had better come to an arrangement.

HORNBLOWER. Mrs. Hillcrist, ladies should keep to their own business.

MRS. H. I will.

HILLCRIST. Amy, do leave it to us men. You, young man [He speaks to ROLF] do you support your father's trick this afternoon?

JILL looks round at ROLF, who tries to speak, when HORNBLOWER breaks in.

HORNBLOWER. My trick? And what d'ye call it, to try and put me own son against me?

JILL. [To ROLF] Well?

ROLF. I don't, but——

HORNBLOWER. Trick? Ye young cub, be quiet. Mr. Hillcrist had an agent bid for him—I had an agent bid for me. Only his agent bid at the beginning, an' mine bid at the end. What's the trick in that? [He laughs.

HILLCRIST. Hopeless; we're in different worlds.

HORNBLOWER. I wish to God we were! Come you, Chloe. And you, Rolf, you follow. In six months I'll have those chimneys up, and me lorries runnin' round ye.

MRS. H. Mr. Hornblower, if you build——

HORNBLOWER. [Looking at MRS. HILLCRIST] Ye know—it's laughable. Ye make me pay nine thousand five hundred for a bit o' land not worth four, and ye think I'm not to get back on ye. I'm goin' on with as little consideration as if ye were a family of blackbeetles. Good afternoon!

ROLF. Father!

JILL hugs his arm.

MRS. H. It will not be if Mr. Hornblower is wise. If he is not wise, it must be spoken of.

HILLCRIST. I say no, Amy. I won't have it. It's a dirty weapon. Who touches pitch shall be defiled.

MRS. H. Well, what weapons does he use against us? Don't be quixotic. For all we can tell, they know it quite well already, and if they don't they ought to. Anyway, to know this is our salvation, and we must use it.

JILL. [Sotto voce] Pitch! Dodo! Pitch!

DAWKER. The threat's enough! J.P. —Chapel—Future member for the constituency——

HILLCRIST. [A little more doubtfully] To use a piece of knowledge about a woman—it's repugnant. I—I won't do it.

MRS. H. If you had a son tricked into marrying such a woman, would you wish to remain ignorant of it?

HILLCRIST. [Struck] I don't know—I don't know.

MRS. H. At least you'd like to be in a position to help him, if you thought it necessary?

HILLCRIST. Well—that—perhaps.

MRS. H. Then you agree that Mr. Hornblower at least should be told. What he does with the knowledge is not our affair.

HILLCRIST. [Half to the STRANGER and half to DAWKER] Do you realise that an imputation of that kind may be ground for a criminal libel action?

STRANGER. Quite. But there's no shadow of doubt; not the faintest. You saw her just now?

HILLCRIST. I did. [Revolting again] No; I don't like it.

DAWKER has drawn the STRANGER a step or two away, and they talk together.

MRS. H. [In a low voice] And the ruin of our home? You're betraying your fathers, Jack.

HILLCRIST. I can't bear bringing a woman into it.

MRS. H. We don't. If anyone brings her in, it will be Hornblower himself.

HILLCRIST. We use her secret as a lever.

MRS. H. I tell you quite plainly: I will only consent to holding my tongue about her, if you agree to Hornblower being told. It's a scandal to have a woman like that in the neighbourhood.

JILL. Mother means that, Father.

HILLCRIST. Jill, keep quiet. This is a very bitter position. I can't tell what to do.

MRS. H. You must use this knowledge. You owe it to me—to us all. You'll see that when you've thought it over.

JILL. [Softly] Pitch, Dodo, pitch!

MRS. H. [Furiously] Jill, be quiet!

HILLCRIST. I was brought up never to hurt a woman. I can't do it, Amy—I can't do it. I should never feel like a gentleman again.

MRS. H. [Coldly] Oh! Very well.

HILLCRIST. What d'you mean by that?

MRS. H. I shall use the knowledge in my own way.

HILLCRIST. [Staring at her] You would—against my wishes?

MRS. H. I consider it my duty.

HILLCRIST. If I agree to Hornblower being told——

MRS. H. That's all I want.

HILLCRIST. It's the utmost I'll consent to, Amy; and don't let's have any humbug about its being morally necessary. We do it to save our skins.

MRS. H. I don't know what you mean by humbug?

JILL. He means humbug, Mother.

HILLCRIST. It must stop at old Hornblower. Do you quite understand?

MRS. H. Quite.

JILL. Will it stop?

MRS. H. Jill, if you can't keep your impertinence to yourself——

HILLCRIST. Jill, come with me.

[He turns towards door, Back.

JILL. I'm sorry, Mother.

MRS. H. You pride yourself on plain speech, Jill. I pride myself on plain thought. You will thank me afterwards that I can see realities. I know we are better people than these Hornblowers. Here we are going to stay, and they—are not.

NA. Aren't you going in to dinna'am?

LOE. [With closed eyes] No.

NA. Will you take anything here, n?

LOE. I'd like a biscuit and a glass ampagne.

The MAID, who is standing between sofa and door, smiles. CHLOE, with a swift look, catches the smile.

HLOE, with a sort of moan, turns over and buries her face in the cushions.

CHLOE. [Sitting up] If I could see that man—if only—or Dawker——

She springs up and goes to the door, but hesitates, and comes back to the head of the sofa, as ROLF comes in. During this scene the door is again opened stealthily, an inch or two.

ROLF. How's the head?

CHLOE. Beastly, thanks. I'm not going in to dinner.

ROLF. Is there anything I can do for you?

CHLOE. No, dear boy. [Suddenly looking at him] You don't want this quarrel with the Hillcrists to go on, do you, Rolf?

ROLF. No; I hate it.

CHLOE. Well, I think I might be able to stop it. Will you slip round to Dawker's—it's not five minutes—and ask him to come and see me.

ROLF. Father and Charlie wouldn't—

CHLOE. I know. But if he comes to the window here while you're at dinner, I'll let him in, and out, and nobody'd know.

ROLF. [Astonished] Yes, but what—I mean how——

CHLOE. Don't ask me. It's worth the shot—that's all. [Looking at her wristwatch] To this window at eight o'clock exactly. First long window on the terrace, tell him.

ROLF. It's nothing Charlie would mind?

CHLOE. No; only I can't tell him—he and Father are so mad about it all.

ROLF. If there's a real chance——

CHLOE. [Going to the window and opening it] This way, Rolf. If you don't come back I shall know he's coming. Put your watch by mine. [Looking at his watch] It's a minute fast, see!

ROLF. Look here, Chloe——

CHLOE. Don't wait; go on.

She almost pushes him out through the window, closes it after him, draws the curtains again, stands a minute, thinking hard; goes to the bell and rings it; then, crossing to the writing table, Right Back, she takes out a chemist's prescription.

ANNA comes in.

CHLOE. I don't want that champagne. Take this to the chemist and get him to make up some of these cachets quick, and bring them back yourself.

ANNA. Yes, ma'am; but you have some.

CHLOE. They're too old; I've taken two—the strength's out of them. Quick, please; I can't stand this head.

ANNA. [Taking the prescription—with her smile] Yes, ma'am. It'll take some time—you don't want me?

CHLOE. No; I want the cachets.

ANNA goes out.

CHLOE looks at her wrist-watch, goes to the writing-table, which is old-fashioned, with a secret drawer, looks round her, dives at the secret drawer, takes out a roll of notes and a tissue paper parcel. She counts the notes: "Three hundred." Slips them into her breast and unwraps the little parcel. It contains pearls. She slips them too into her dress, looks round startled, replaces the drawer, and regains her place on the sofa, lying prostrate as the door opens, and HORNBLOWER comes in. She does not open her eyes, and he stands looking at her a moment before speaking.

HORNBLOWER. [Almost softly] How are ye feelin', Chloe?

CHLOE. Awful head!

HORNBLOWER. Can ye attend a moment? I've had a note from that woman.

CHLOE sits up.

HORNBLOWER. [Reading] "I have something of the utmost importance to tell you in regard to your daughter-in-law. I shall be waiting to see you at eleven o'clock to-morrow morning. The matter is so utterly vital to the happiness of all your family, that I cannot imagine you will fail to come." Now, what's the meaning of it? Is it sheer impudence, or lunacy, or what?

CHLOE. I don't know.

HORNBLOWER. [Not unkindly] Chloe, if there's anything—ye'd better tell me. Forewarned's forearmed.

CHLOE. There's nothing; unless —[With a quick look at him]—Un it's that my father was a—a ba rupt.

HORNBLOWER. [Lost in his feud ing] Ah! but there's such a thing the laws o' slander. If they play pra I'll have them up for it.

HORNBLOWER. Stop it? Now bought? Na, no! The snobs defied and I'm going to show them. I hate lot of them, and I hate that little l ker worst of all.

He sits down at her writing-table.
HLOE starts up from the sofa feverishly, looking at her watch, at the window, at her watch; then softly crosses to the window and opens it.

NBLOWER. [Finishing] Listen! urns round towards the sofa] Hal-here are ye?

OE. [At the window] It's so hot.

NBLOWER. Here's what I've said:

MADAM,—You can tell me nothof my daughter-in-law which can t the happiness of my family. I rd your note as an impertinence,
I shall not be with you at eleven ck to-morrow morning.

"Yours truly——"

OE. [*With a suffering movement
head*] Oh!—Well!—— he gong is touched a second time.

HORNBLOWER. [Crossing to the door] Lie ye down, and get a sleep. I'll tell them not to disturb ye; and I hope ye'll be all right to-morrow. Good night, Chloe.

CHLOE. Good night.

He goes out.

After a feverish turn or two, CHLOE returns to the open window and waits there, half screened by the curtains. Suddenly CHLOE backs in from the window.

CHLOE. [In a low voice] Come in.

[She darts to the door and locks it.

DAWKER has come in through the window and stands regarding her with a half smile.

DAWKER. Well, young woman, what do you want of me?

In the presence of this man of her own class, there comes a distinct change in CHLOE'S voice and manner; a sort of frank commonness, adapted to the man she is dealing with, but she keeps her voice low.

CHLOE. You're making a mistake, you know.

DAWKER. [With a broad grin] No. I've got a memory for faces.

CHLOE. I say you are.

DAWKER. [Turning to go] If that's all, you needn't 'ave troubled me to come.

CHLOE. No. Don't go! [With a faint smile] You are playing a game with me. Aren't you ashamed? What harm have I done you? Do you call this cricket?

DAWKER. No, my girl—business.

CHLOE. [Bitterly] What have I to do with this quarrel? I couldn't help their falling out.

DAWKER. That's your misfortune.

CHLOE. [Clasping her hands] You're a cruel fellow if you can spoil a woman's life who never did you an ounce of harm.

DAWKER. So they don't know about you. That's all right. Now, look here, I serve my employer. But I'm flesh and blood too, and I always give as good as I get. I hate this family of yours. There's no name too bad for 'em to call me this last month, and no looks too black to give me. I tell you frankly, I hate 'em.

CHLOE. There's good in them same as in you.

DAWKER. [With a grin] There's no good Hornblower but a dead Hornblower.

CHLOE. But—but I'm not one.

DAWKER. You'll be the mother of some, I shouldn't wonder.

CHLOE. [Stretching out her hand—pathetically] Oh! leave me alone, do! I'm happy here. Be a sport! Be a sport!

DAWKER. [Disconcerted for a second] You can't get at me, so don't try it on.

CHLOE. I had such a bad time in old days.

DAWKER shakes his head; his grin has disappeared and his face is like wood.

CHLOE. [Panting] Ah! do! You might! You've been fond of some woman, I suppose. Think of her!

DAWKER. [Decisively] It won't do, Mrs. Chloe. You're a pawn in the game, and I'm going to use you.

CHLOE. [Despairingly] What is it to you? [With a sudden touch of the tigress] Look here! Don't you make an enemy of me. I haven't dragged through hell for nothing. Women like me can bite, I tell you.

DAWKER. That's better. I'd rather have a woman threaten than whine, any day. Threaten away! You'll let 'em know that you met me in the Promenade one night. Of course you'll let 'em know that, won't you?—or that——

CHLOE. Be quiet! Oh! Be quiet! [Taking from her bosom the notes and the pearls] Look! There's my savings—there's all I've got! The pearls'll fetch nearly a thousand. [Holding it out to him] Take it, and drop me out—won't you? Won't you?

DAWKER. [Passing his tongue over his lips—with a hard little laugh] You mistake your man, missis. I'm a plain dog, if you like, but I'm faithful, and I hold fast. Don't try those games on me.

CHLOE. [Losing control] You're a beast!—a beast! a cruel, cowardly beast! And how dare you bribe that woman here to spy on me? Oh! yes, you do; you know you do. If you drove me mad, you wouldn't care. You beast!

DAWKER. Now, don't carry on! T won't help you.

CHLOE. What d'you call it—to d woman down like this, just because happen to have a quarrel with a ma DAWKER. Who made the quar Not me, missis. You ought to know in a row it's the weak and helpless— won't say the innocent—that get i the neck. That can't be helped.

CHLOE. [Regarding him intently hope your mother or your siste you've got any, may go through w I'm going through ever since you on my track. I hope they'll know w fear means. I hope they'll love and out that it's hanging on a thread, a and—— Oh! you coward, you p cuting coward! Call yourself a man DAWKER. [With his grin] Ah! look quite pretty like that. By Ge you're a handsome woman when yo roused.

CHLOE's passion fades out as q ly as it blazed up. She sinks d on the sofa, shudders, looks and there, and then for a mo up at him.

CHLOE. Is there anything you'll not to spoil my life? [Clasping her h on her breast; under her breath]

DAWKER. [Wiping his brow] By That's an offer. [He recoils toward window] You—you touched me t Look here! I've got to use you an going to use you, but I'll do my be let you down as easy as I can. don't want anything you can give that is—[He wipes his brow again like it—but I won't take it.

CHLOE buries her face in her h

DAWKER. There! Keep your p up; don't cry. Good night!

[He goes through the win

CHLOE. [Springing up] Ugh! F a trap! Rat——!

She stands listening; flies t door, unlocks it, and goes to the sofa, lies down and her eyes. CHARLES comes in quietly and stands over her ing to see if she is asleep opens her eyes.

CHARLES. Well, Clo! Had a sle girl?

LOE. Ye-es.
ARLES. [Sitting on the arm of the and caressing her] Feel better,

LOE. Yes, better, Charlie.
ARLES. That's right. Would you some soup?
LOE. [With a shudder] No.
ARLES. I say—what gives you these ? You've been very on and off all ast month.
LOE. I don't know. Except that—t that I am going to have a child, ie.
ARLES. After all! By Jove! Sure?
LOE. [Nodding] Are you glad?
ARLES. Well—I suppose I am. The or will be mighty pleased, anyway.
OE. Don't tell him—yet.
ARLES. All right! [Bending over raving her to him] My poor girl, o sorry you're seedy. Give us a HLOE puts up her face and kisses him passionately.

ARLES. I say, you're like fire. You-t feverish?
OE. [With a laugh] It's a won-I'm not. Charlie, are you happy ne?
ARLES. What do you think?
OE. [Leaning against him] You n't easily believe things against ould you?
ARLES. What! Thinking of those sts? What the hell that woman by her attitude towards you—— I saw her there to-day, I had all rk cut out not to go up and give bit of my mind.
OE. [Watching him stealthily] It's od for me, now I'm like this. It's ng me, Charlie.
RLES. Yes; and we won't forget. make 'em pay for it.
OE. It's wretched in a little place is. I say, must you go on spoil-ir home?
RLES. The woman cuts you and you. That's enough for me.
OE. [Timidly] Let her. I don't can't bear feeling enemies about, ; I—get nervous—I—— RLES. My dear girl! What is it?
[He looks at her intently.

CHLOE. I suppose it's—being like this. [Suddenly] But, Charlie, do stop it for my sake. Do, do!

CHARLES. [Patting her arm] Come, come; I say, Chloe! You're making mountains. See things in proportion. Father's paid nine thousand five hundred to get the better of those people, and you want him to chuck it away to save a woman who's insulted you. That's not sense, and it's not business. Have some pride.

CHLOE. [Breathless] I've got no pride, Charlie. I want to be quiet—that's all.

CHARLES. Well, if the row gets on your nerves, I can take you to the sea. But you ought to enjoy a fight with people like that.

CHLOE. [With calculated bitterness] No, it's nothing, of course—what I want.

CHARLES. Hallo! Hallo! You are on the jump!

CHLOE. If you want me to be a good wife to you, make Father stop it.

CHARLES. [Standing up] Now, look here, Chloe, what's behind this?

CHLOE. [Faintly] Behind?

CHARLES. You're carrying on as if—as if you were really scared! We've got these people. We'll have them out of Deepwater in six months. It's absolute ruination to their beastly old house; we-'ll put the chimneys on the very edge, not three hundred yards off, and our smoke'll be drifting over them half the time. You won't have this confounded stuck-up woman here much longer. And then we can really go ahead and take our proper place. So long as she's here, we shall never do that. We've only to drive on now as fast as we can.

CHLOE. [With a gesture] I see.

CHARLES. [Again looking at her] If you go on like this, you know, I shall begin to think there's something you——

CHLOE. [Softly] Charlie!

He comes to her.

CHLOE. Love me!

CHARLES. [Embracing her] There, old girl! I know women are funny at these times. You want a good night, that's all.

CHLOE. You haven't finished dinner, have you? Go back, and I'll go to bed quite soon. Charlie, don't stop loving me.

CHARLES. Stop? Not much.

While he is again embracing her, the maid opens the door, but, seeing CHARLES there, shuts it again.

CHLOE. [Starting violently] Oh—h!

CHARLES. What is it? What is it? You are nervy, my dear.

CHLOE. [Looking round with a little laugh] I don't know. Go on Charlie. I'll be all right when this head's gone.

CHARLES. [Stroking her forehead and looking at her doubtfully] You go to bed; I won't be late coming up.

He turns and goes, blowing a kiss from the doorway. When he is gone, CHLOE gets up and stands in precisely the attitude in which she stood at the beginning of the Act, thinking, and thinking. And the door is opened, and the face of the MAID peers round at her.

Curtain.

ACT III

SCENE I

MORNING

HILLCRIST'S study next morning.

JILL, coming from Left, looks in at the open French window.

JILL. [Speaking to ROLF, invisible] Come in here. There's no one.

[She goes in. ROLF joins her, coming from the garden.

ROLF. Jill, I just wanted to say—Need we?

JILL nods.

ROLF. Seeing you yesterday—it did seem rotten.

JILL. We didn't begin it.

ROLF. No; but you don't understand. If you'd made yourself, as Father has—

JILL. I hope I should be sorry.

ROLF. [Reproachfully] That isn't like you. Really he can't help thinking he's a public benefactor.

JILL. And we can't help thinking he's a pig. Sorry!

ROLF. If the survival of the fittes right——

JILL. He may be fitter, but he's going to survive.

ROLF. [Distracted] It looks like though.

JILL. Is that all you came to say

ROLF. No. Suppose we joined, cou we stop it?

JILL. I don't feel like joining.

ROLF. We did shake hands.

JILL. One can't fight and not g bitter.

ROLF. I don't feel that.

JILL. Wait; you'll feel it soon eno

ROLF. Why? [Attentively] A Chloe? I do think your mother's r ner to her is——

JILL. Well?

ROLF. Snobbish.

JILL laughs.

ROLF. She may not be your class; that's just why it's snobbish.

JILL. I think you'd better shut u

ROLF. What my father said was t your mother's rudeness to her that she came here, has made both him Charlie ever so much more bitter.

JILL whistles the Habanera "Carmen."

ROLF. [Staring at her, rather ang Is it a whistling matter?

JILL. No.

ROLF. I suppose you want me to JILL. Yes.

ROLF. All right. Aren't we ever to be friends again?

JILL. [Looking steadily at him] I expect so.

ROLF. That's very—horrible.

JILL. Lots of horrible things i world.

ROLF. It's our business to make fewer, Jill.

JILL. [Fiercely] Don't be moral

ROLF. [Hurt] That's the last th want to be. I only want to be fri

JILL. Better be real first.

ROLF. From the big point of vie

JILL. There isn't any. We're a for our own. And why not?

ROLF. By Jove, you have got—

JILL. Cynical? Your father's m "Every man for himself." That winner—hands down. Good-bye!

ROLF. Jill! Jill!

JILL. [Putting her hands behind her ck, hums]—

"If auld acquaintance be forgot
And days of auld lang syne"——

ROLF. Don't!

With a pained gesture he goes out towards Left, through the French window.

JILL, who has broken off the song, stands with her hands clenched and her lips quivering.

FELLOWS enters Left.

FELLOWS. Mr. Dawker, Miss, and two ıtlemen.

ILL. Let the three gentlemen in, and out.

[She passes him and goes out Left. And immediately DAWKER and the TWO STRANGERS come in.

ELLOWS. I'll inform Mrs. Hillcrist, The Squire is on his rounds.

[He goes out Left.

The THREE MEN gather in a discreet knot at the big bureau, having glanced at the two doors and the open French window.

)AWKER. Now this may come into ırt, you know. If there's a screw se anywhere, better mention it. [To :OND STRANGER] You knew her perally?

ECOND S. What do you think? I don't e girls on trust for that sort of job. came to us highly recommended, ; and did her work very well. It was louble stunt—to make sure—wasn't George?

IRST S. Yes; we paid her for the two s.

ECOND S. I should know her in a ute; striking looking girl; had some- g in her face. Daresay she'd seen l times.

IRST S. We don't want publicity.

AWKER. Not likely. The threat'll do but the stakes are heavy—and the 's a slogger; we must be able to it home. If you can both swear to it'll do the trick.

ECOND S. And about—I mean, we're ıg time, you know, coming down .

AWKER. [With a nod at FIRST ANGER] George here knows me. That'll be all right. I'll guarantee it well worth your while.

SECOND S. I don't want to do the girl harm, if she's married.

DAWKER. No, no; nobody wants to hurt her. We just want a cinch on this fellow till he squeals.

They separate a little as MRS. HILLCRIST enters from Right.

DAWKER. Good morning, ma'am. My friend's partner. Hornblower coming?

MRS. H. At eleven. I had to send up a second note, Dawker.

DAWKER. Squire not in?

MRS. H. I haven't told him.

DAWKER. [Nodding] Our friends might go in here [Pointing Right] and we can use 'em as we want 'em.

MRS. H. [To the STRANGERS] Will you make yourselves comfortable?

[She holds the door open, and they pass her into the room, Right.

DAWKER. [Showing document] I've had this drawn and engrossed. Pretty sharp work. Conveys the Centry, and Longmeadow, to the Squire at four thousand five hundred. Now, ma'am, suppose Hornblower puts his hand to that, he'll have been done in the eye, and six thousand all told out o' pocket. You'll have a very nasty neighbour here.

MRS. H. But we shall still have the power to disclose that secret at any time.

DAWKER. Yeh! But things might happen here you could never bring home to him. You can't trust a man like that. He isn't goin' to forgive me, I know.

MRS. H. [Regarding him keenly] But if he signs, we couldn't honourably—— DAWKER. No, ma'am, you couldn't; and I'm sure I don't want to do that girl a hurt. I just mention it because, of course, you can't guarantee that it doesn't get out.

MRS. H. Not absolutely, I suppose.

A look passes between them, which neither of them has quite sanctioned.

MRS. H. There's his car. It always seems to make more noise than any other.

DAWKER. He'll kick and flounder—but you leave him to ask what you want, ma'am; don't mention this. [He puts the deed back into his pocket] The Centry's no mortal good to him if he's not going to put up works; I should say he'd be glad to save what he can.

MRS. HILLCRIST inclines her head.

FELLOWS enters Left.

FELLOWS. [Apologetically] Mr. Hornblower, ma'am; by appointment, he says.

MRS. H. Quite right, Fellows.

HORNBLOWER comes in, and FELLOWS goes out.

HORNBLOWER. [Without salutation] I've come to ask ye point blank what ye mean by writing me these letters. [He takes out two letters] And we'll discuss it in the presence of nobody, if ye please.

MRS. H. Mr. Dawker knows all that I know, and more.

HORNBLOWER. Does he? Very well! Your second note says that my daughter-in-law has lied to me. Well, I've brought her, and what ye've got to say—if it's not just a trick to see me again—ye'll say to her face.

[He takes a step towards the window.

MRS. H. Mr. Hornblower, you had better decide that after hearing what it is—we shall be quite ready to repeat it in her presence; but we want to do as little harm as possible.

HORNBLOWER. [Stopping] Oh! ye do! Well, what lies have ye been hearin'? Or what have ye made up? You and Mr. Dawker? Of course ye know there's a law of libel and slander. I'm not the man to stop at that.

MRS. H. [Calmly] Are you familiar with the law of divorce, Mr. Hornblower?

HORNBLOWER. [Taken aback] No, I'm not. That is——

MRS. H. Well, you know that misconduct is required. And I suppose you've heard that cases are arranged.

HORNBLOWER. I know it's all very shocking—what about it?

MRS. H. When cases are arranged, Mr. Hornblower, the man who is to be divorced often visits an hotel with a strange woman. I am extremely sorry to say that your daughter-in-law, before her marriage, was in the habit of being employed as such a woman.

HORNBLOWER. Ye dreadful creature!

DAWKER. [Quickly] All proved, up to the hilt!

HORNBLOWER. I don't believe a word of it. Ye're lyin' to save your skins. How dare ye tell me such monstrosities? Dawker, I'll have ye in a criminal court.

DAWKER. Rats! You saw a gent with me yesterday? Well, he's employed her.

HORNBLOWER. A put-up job! Conspiracy!

MRS. H. Go and get your daughter-in-law.

HORNBLOWER. [With the first sensation of being in a net] It's a foul sham—a lying slander!

MRS. H. If so, it's easily disproved. Go and fetch her.

HORNBLOWER. [Seeing them unmoved] I will. I don't believe a word of it.

MRS. H. I hope you are right.

HORNBLOWER goes out by the French window. DAWKER slips to the door Right, opens it, and speaks to those within. MRS. HILLCRIST stands moistening her lips, and passing her handkerchief over them. HORNBLOWER returns, preceding CHLOE, strung to hardness and defiance.

HORNBLOWER. Now then, let's have this impudent story torn to rags.

CHLOE. What story?

HORNBLOWER. That you, my dear, were a woman—it's too shockin'—don't know how to tell ye——

CHLOE. Go on!

HORNBLOWER. Were a woman that went with men, to get them their divorce.

CHLOE. Who says that?

HORNBLOWER. That lady [Sneering] there, and her bull-terrier here.

CHLOE. [Facing MRS. HILLCRIST] That's a charitable thing to say, isn't it?

MRS. H. Is it true?

CHLOE. No.

HORNBLOWER. [Furiously] There! I have ye both on your knees to her!

DAWKER. [Opening the door Right] Come in.

The FIRST STRANGER comes

CHLOE, with a visible effort, turns to face him.

IRST S. How do you do, Mrs. ne?

HLOE. I don't know you.

IRST S. Your memory is bad, ma'am. I knew me yesterday well enough. e day is not a long time, nor are three rs.

HLOE. Who are you?

IRST S. Come, ma'am, come! The ter case.

HLOE. I don't know you, I say. [To s. HILLCRIST] How can you be so ?

IRST S. Let me refresh your mem- ma'am. [Producing a notebook] on three years ago: "Oct. 3. To and expenses Mrs. Vane with Mr. —, Hotel Beaulieu, Twenty pounds. 10, Do., Twenty pounds." [To NBLOWER] Would you like to glance his book, sir? You'll see they're line entries.

HORNBLOWER makes a motion to do so, but checks himself and looks at CHLOE.

HLOE. [Hysterically] It's all lies—

RST S. Come, ma'am, we wish you arm.

HLOE. Take me away. I won't be ed like this.

RS. H. [In a low voice] Confess.

HLOE. Lies!

ORNBLOWER. Were ye ever called e?

HLOE. No, never.

She makes a movement towards the window, but DAWKER is in the way, and she halts.

RST S. [Opening the door Right] y.

AWKER. Are you convinced?

ORNBLOWER. Take those men away.

DAWKER. If you're not satisfied, we can get other evidence; plenty.

HORNBLOWER. [Looking at CHLOE] That's enough. Take them out. Leave me alone with her.

MRS. HILLCRIST passes HORNBLOWER and goes out at the window. HORNBLOWER moves down a step or two towards CHLOE.

HORNBLOWER. My God!

CHLOE. [With an outburst] Don't tell Charlie! Don't tell Charlie!

HORNBLOWER. Chearlie! So that was your manner of life!

CHLOE utters a moaning sound.

HORNBLOWER. So that's what ye got out of by marryin' into my family! Shame on ye, ye godless thing!

CHLOE. Don't tell Charlie!

HORNBLOWER. And that's all ye can say for the wreck ye've wrought. My family, my works, my future! How dared ye!

CHLOE. If you'd been me!——

HORNBLOWER. An' these Hillcrists The skin game of it!

CHLOE. [Breathless] Father!

HORNBLOWER. Don't call me that, woman!

CHLOE. [Desperate] I'm going to have a child.

HORNBLOWER. God! Ye are!

CHLOE. Your grandchild. For the sake of it, do what these people want; and don't tell anyone—Don't tell Charlie!

HORNBLOWER. [Again wiping his forehead] A secret between us. I don't know that I can keep it. It's horrible. Poor Chearlie!

CHLOE. [Suddenly fierce] You must keep it, you shall! I won't have him told. Don't make me desperate! I can be —I didn't live that life for nothing.

HORNBLOWER. [Staring at her revealed in a new light] Ay; ye look a strange, wild woman, as I see ye. And we thought the world of ye!

CHLOE. I love Charlie; I'm faithful to him. I can't live without him. You'll forgive me, I know; but Charlie——!

[Stretching out her hands.

HORNBLOWER makes a bewildered gesture with his large hands.

HORNBLOWER. I'm all at sea here. Go out to the car and wait for me.

HORNBLOWER. [Muttering to himself] So I'm down! Me enemies put their heels on me head! Ah! but we'll see yet!

[He goes up to the window and beckons towards the Right.

MRS. HILLCRIST comes in.

HORNBLOWER. What d'ye want for this secret?

MRS. H. Nothing.

HORNBLOWER. Indeed! Wonderful!—the trouble ye've taken for—nothing.

MRS. H. If you harm us we shall harm you. Any use whatever of the Centry—— HORNBLOWER. For which ye made me pay nine thousand five hundred pounds.

MRS. H. We will buy it from you.

HORNBLOWER. At what price?

MRS. H. The Centry at the price Miss Mullins would have taken at first, and Longmeadow at the price you gave us—four thousand five hundred altogether.

HORNBLOWER. A fine price, and me six thousand out of pocket. Na, no! I'll keep it and hold it over ye. Ye daren't tell this secret so long as I've got it.

MRS. H. No, Mr. Hornblower. On second thoughts, you must sell. You broke your word over the Jackmans. We can't trust you. We would rather have our place here ruined at once, than leave you the power to ruin it as and when you like. You will sell us the Centry and Longmeadow now, or you know what will happen.

HORNBLOWER. [Writhing] I'll not. It's blackmail.

MRS. H. Very well then! Go your own way and we'll go ours. There is no witness to this conversation.

HORNBLOWER. [Venomously] By heaven, ye're a clever woman. Will ye swear by Almighty God that you and your family, and that agent of yours, won't breathe a word of this shockin' thing to mortal soul?

MRS. S. Yes, if you sell.

HORNBLOWER. Where's Dawker?

MRS. H. [Going to the door, Right] Mr. Dawker!

DAWKER comes in.

HORNBLOWER. I suppose ye've go your iniquity ready.

DAWKER grins and produces th document.

HORNBLOWER. It's mighty near con spiracy, this. Have ye got a Testament

MRS. H. My word will be enoug Mr. Hornblower.

HORNBLOWER. Ye'll pardon me—can't make it solemn enough for you.

MRS. H. Very well; here is a Bible.

[She takes a small Bible from th bookshelf.

DAWKER. [Spreading document o bureau] This is a short conveyance o the Centry and Longmeadow—recite sale to you by Miss Mullins of the firs John Hillcrist of the second, and where as you have agreed for the sale to sai John Hillcrist, for the sum of fou thousand five hundred pounds, in con sideration of the said sum, recei whereof you hereby acknowledge, yo do convey all that, etc. Sign here. I witness.

HORNBLOWER. [To MRS. HILLCRIS Take that Book in your hand, and swea first. I swear by Almighty God never breathe a word of what I know co cerning Chloe Hornblower to any li ing soul.

MRS. H. No, Mr. Hornblower; yo will please sign first. We are not in th habit of breaking our words.

HORNBLOWER, after a furious lo at them, seizes a pen, runs his e over the deed, and signs, DAWK witnessing.

MRS. H. To that oath, Mr. Hor blower, we shall add the words, " long as the Hornblower family do no harm."

HORNBLOWER. [With a snarl] Take in your hands, both of ye, and togeth swear.

MRS. H. [Taking the Book] I sw that I will breathe no word of wha know concerning Chloe Hornblower any living soul, so long as the Ho blower family do us no harm.

DAWKER. I swear that too.

MRS. H. I engage for my husband

HORNBLOWER. Where are those fellows?

DAWKER. Gone. It's no business of irs.

HORNBLOWER. It's no business of any ye what has happened to a woman in past. Ye know that. Good day!

He gives them a deadly look, and goes out, Left, followed by DAWKER.

MRS. H. [With her hand on the Deed] e!

HILLCRIST enters at the French window, followed by JILL.

MRS. H. [Holding up the Deed] ok! He's just gone! I told you it only necessary to use the threat. caved in and signed this; we are rn to say nothing. We've beaten

HILLCRIST studies the deed.

ILL. [Awed] We saw Chloe in the How did she take it, Mother?

RS. H. Denied, then broke down n she saw our witnesses. I'm glad were not here, Jack.

ILL. [Suddenly] I shall go and see

RS. H.—Jill, you will not; you don't w what she's done.

ILL. I shall. She must be in an awstate.

ILLCRIST. My dear, you can do her good.

ILL. I think I can, Dodo.

RS. H. You don't understand human re. We're enemies for life with e people. You're a little donkey if think anything else.

ILL. I'm going, all the same.

RS. H. Jack, forbid her.

ILLCRIST. [Lifting an eyebrow] Jill, easonable.

ILL. Suppose I'd taken a knock like Dodo, I'd be glad of friendliness someone.

RS. H. You never could take a knock that.

ILL. You don't know what you can do ou try, Mother.

ILLCRIST. Let her go, Amy. I'm sorry hat young woman.

RS. H. You'd be sorry for a man picked your pocket, I believe.

ILLCRIST. I certainly should! Deuced he'd get out of it, when I've paid he Centry.

MRS. H. [Bitterly] Much gratitude I get for saving you both our home!

JILL. [Disarmed] Oh! Mother, we are grateful! Dodo, show your gratitude.

HILLCRIST. Well, my dear, it's an intense relief. I'm not good at showing my feelings, as you know. What d'you want me to do? Stand on one leg and crow?

JILL. Yes, Dodo, yes! Mother, hold him while I—— [Suddenly she stops, and all the fun goes out of her] No! I can't!—I can't help thinking of her.

Curtain falls for a Minute.

SCENE II

EVENING

When it rises again, the room is empty and dark, save for moonlight coming in through the French window, which is open.

The figure of CHLOE, in a black cloak, appears outside in the moonlight; she peers in, moves past, comes back, hesitatingly enters. The cloak, fallen back, reveals a white evening dress; and that magpie figure stands poised watchfully in the dim light, then flaps unhappily Left and Right, as if she could not keep still. Suddenly she stands listening.

ROLF'S VOICE. [Outside] Chloe! Chloe! [He appears.

CHLOE. [Going to the window] What are you doing here?

ROLF. What are you? I only followed you.

CHLOE. Go away!

ROLF. What's the matter? Tell me!

CHLOE. Go away, and don't say anything.

ROLF. What did Jill want this afternoon?

CHLOE. I'll tell you nothing. Go away!

ROLF. I don't like leaving you here in this state.

CHLOE. What state? I'm all right. Wait for me down in the drive, if you want to.

ROLF starts to go, stops, looks at her, and does go.

CHLOE, with a little moaning sound, flutters again, magpie-like, up and down, then stands by the window listening. Voices are heard, Left. She darts out of the window and away to the Right, as HILLCRIST and JILL come in. They have turned up the electric light, and come down in front of the fireplace, where HILLCRIST stands and JILL sits on the arm of the big chair. They are in undress evening attire.

HILLCRIST. Now, tell me.

JILL. There isn't much, Dodo. I was in an awful funk for fear I should meet any of the others, and of course I did meet Rolf, but I told him some lie, and he took me to her room—boudoir, they call it—isn't boudoir a "dug-out" word?

HILLCRIST. [Meditatively] The sulking room. Well?

JILL. She was sitting like this. [She buries her chin in her hands, with her elbows on her knees] And she said in a sort of fierce way: "What do you want?" And I said: "I'm awfully sorry, but I thought you might like it."

HILLCRIST. Well?

JILL. She looked at me hard, and said: "I suppose you know all about it." And I said: "Only vaguely," because of course I don't. And she said: "Well, it was decent of you to come." Dodo, she looks like a lost soul. What has she done?

HILLCRIST. She committed her real crime when she married young Hornblower without telling him. She came out of a certain world to do it.

JILL. Oh! [Staring in front of her] Is it very awful in that world, Dodo?

HILLCRIST. [Uneasy] I don't know, Jill. Some can stand it, I suppose; some can't. I don't know which sort she is.

JILL. One thing I'm sure of: she's awfully fond of Chearlie.

HILLCRIST. That's bad; that's very bad.

JILL. And she's frightened, horribly. I think she's desperate.

HILLCRIST. Women like that are pretty tough, Jill; don't judge her too much by your own feelings.

JILL. No; only—— Oh! it was beastly; and of course I dried up.

HILLCRIST. [Feelingly] H'm! One always does. But perhaps it was as well you'd have been blundering in a dar passage.

JILL. I just said: "Father and I fe awfully sorry; if there's anything w can do——"

HILLCRIST. That was risky, Jill.

JILL. [Disconsolately] I had to sa something. I'm glad I went, anyway. feel more human.

HILLCRIST. We had to fight for o home. I should have felt like a traitor I hadn't.

JILL. I'm not enjoying home to-nigh Dodo.

HILLCRIST. I never could hate pro erly; it's a confounded nuisance.

JILL. Mother's fearfully bucked, a Dawker's simply oozing triumph. I do trust him, Dodo; he's too—not pug listic—the other one with a pug—n ceous.

HILLCRIST. He is rather.

JILL. I'm sure he wouldn't care tu pence if Chloe committed suicide.

HILLCRIST. [Rising uneasily] No sense! Nonsense!

JILL. I wonder if Mother would.

HILLCRIST. [Turning his face towar the window] What's that? I thought heard—[Louder] Is there anybody o there?

No answer. JILL springs up a runs to the window.

JILL. You! [She dives through to Right, and returns, holding CHLO hand and drawing her forward] Co in! It's only us! [To HILLCRIST] Doo HILLCRIST. [Flustered, but makin show of courtesy] Good evening! W you sit down?

JILL. Sit down; you're all shaky.

She makes CHLOE sit down in armchair, out of which they h risen, then locks the door, crosing the windows, draws curtains hastily over them.

HILLCRIST. [Awkward and expect Can I do anything for you?

CHLOE. I couldn't bear it—he's o ing to ask you——

HILLCRIST. Who?

CHLOE. My husband. [She draws in r breath with a long shudder, then ms to seize her courage in her hands] e got to be quick. He keeps on ask- —he knows there's something.

HILLCRIST. Make your mind easy. We n't tell him.

CHLOE. [Appealing] Oh! that's not ough. Can't you tell him something to t him back to thinking it's all right. e done him such a wrong. I didn't lise till after—I thought meeting him s just a piece of wonderful good k, after what I'd been through. I'm such a bad lot—not really.

[She stops from the over-quivering of her lips.

JILL, standing beside the chair, strokes her shoulder. HILLCRIST stands very still, painfully biting at a finger.

CHLOE. You see, my father went bank- t, and I was in a shop till—— HILLCRIST. [Soothingly, and to pre- t disclosures] Yes, yes; yes, yes!

CHLOE. I never gave a man away or anything I was ashamed of—at least mean, I had to make my living in sorts of ways, and then I met Char-

[Again she stops from the quivering of her lips.

JILL. It's all right.

CHLOE. He thought I was respectable, that was such a relief, you can't k, so—so I let him.

JILL. Dodo! It's awful!

HILLCRIST. It is!

CHLOE. And after I married him, you I fell in love. If I had before, per- s I wouldn't have dared—only, I t know—you never know, do you? en there's a straw going, you catch t.

JILL. Of course you do.

CHLOE. And now, you see, I'm going ave a child.

JILL. [Aghast] Oh! Are you!

HILLCRIST. Good God!

CHLOE. [Dully] I've been on hot ks all this month, ever since—that here. I knew it was in the wind. t gets in the wind never gets out. [rises and throws out her arms] er! It just blows here and there, [Desolately] and then blows home. [Her voice changes to resentment] But I've paid for being a fool—'tisn't fun, that sort of life, I can tell you. I'm not ashamed and repentant, and all that. If it wasn't for him; I'm afraid he'll never forgive me; it's such a disgrace for him —and then, to have his child! Being fond of him, I feel it much worse than anything I ever felt, and that's saying a good bit. It is.

JILL. [Energetically] Look here! He simply mustn't find out.

CHLOE. That's it; but it's started, and he's bound to keep on because he knows there's something. A man isn't going to be satisfied when there's something he suspects about his wife. Charlie wouldn't—never. He's clever, and he's jealous; and he's coming here.

[She stops, and looks round wildly, listening.

JILL. Dodo, what can we say to put him clean off the scent?

HILLCRIST. Anything in reason.

CHLOE. [Catching at this straw] You will! You see, I don't know what I'll do. I've got soft, being looked after— And if he throws me off, I'll go under —that's all.

HILLCRIST. Have you any suggestion?

CHLOE. [Eagerly] The only thing is to tell him something positive, something he'll believe, that's not too bad—like my having been a lady clerk with those people who came here, and having been dismissed on suspicion of taking money. I could get him to believe that wasn't true.

JILL. Yes; and it isn't—that's splendid! You'd be able to put such conviction into it. Don't you think so, Dodo?

HILLCRIST. Anything I can. I'm deeply sorry.

CHLOE. Thank you. And don't say I've been here, will you? He's very suspicious. It's in the air. He puts two and two together. But I've told him there's nothing he need worry about; nothing that's true.

HILLCRIST. What a coil!

CHLOE. [With a touch of defiance] I'm a true wife to him.

JILL. Of course we know that.

HILLCRIST. It's all unspeakably sad.

CHLOE. [Eagerly] When I deceived him, I'd have deceived God Himself—I was so desperate. You've never been right down in the mud. You can't understand what I've been through.

HILLCRIST. Yes, yes. I should be the last to judge——

CHLOE covers her eyes with her hands.

HILLCRIST. There, there! Cheer up!

[He puts his hand on her arm.

JILL. [To herself] Darling Dodo!

CHLOE. [Starting] There's somebody at the door. I must go; I must go.

[She runs to the window and slips through the curtains.

The handle of the door is again turned.

JILL. [Dismayed] Oh! It's locked—I forgot.

She springs to the door, unlocks and opens it, while HILLCRIST goes to the bureau and sits down.

JILL. It's all right, Fellows; I was only saying something rather important.

FELLOWS. [Coming in a step or two and closing the door behind him] Certainly, Miss. Mr. Charles 'Ornblower is in the hall. Wants to see you, sir, or Mrs. Hillcrist.

JILL. What a bore! Can you see him, Dodo?

HILLCRIST. Er—yes. I suppose so. Show him in here, Fellows.

As FELLOWS goes out, JILL runs to the window, but has no time to do more than adjust the curtains and spring over to stand by her father, before CHARLES comes in. Though in evening clothes, he is white and dishevelled for so spruce a young man.

CHARLES. Is my wife here?

HILLCRIST. No, sir.

CHARLES. Has she been?

HILLCRIST. This morning, I believe, Jill?

JILL. Yes, she came this morning.

CHARLES. [Staring at her] I know that—now, I mean?

JILL. No.

HILLCRIST shakes his head.

CHARLES. Tell me what was said this morning.

HILLCRIST. I was not here this morning.

CHARLES. Don't try to put me off. I know too much. [To JILL] You.

JILL. Shall I, Dodo?

HILLCRIST. No; I will. Won't you sit down?

CHARLES. No. Go on.

HILLCRIST. [Moistening his lips] It appears, Mr. Hornblower, that my agent, Mr. Dawker——

CHARLES, who is breathing hard, utters a sound of anger.

HILLCRIST. —that my agent happens to know a firm, who in old days employed your wife. I should greatly prefer not to say any more, especially as we don't believe the story.

JILL. No; we don't.

CHARLES. Go on!

HILLCRIST. [Getting up] Come! If I were you, I should refuse to listen to anything against my wife.

CHARLES. Go on, I tell you.

HILLCRIST. You insist? Well, they say there was some question about the accounts, and your wife left them under a cloud. As I told you, we don't believe it.

CHARLES. [Passionately] Liars!

[He makes a rush for the door.

HILLCRIST. [Starting] What did you say?

JILL. [Catching his arm] Dodo! [Sotto voce] We are, you know.

CHARLES. [Turning back to them] Why do you tell me that lie? Why I've just had the truth out of that little scoundrel! My wife's been here; she put you up to it.

The face of CHLOE is seen transfixed between the curtains, parted by her hands.

CHARLES. She—she put you up to it! Liar that she is—a living lie. For three years a living lie!

HILLCRIST, whose face alone has turned towards the curtains, stares at that listening face. His hand goes up from uncontrollable emotion.

CHARLES. And hasn't now the pluck to tell me. I've done with her. I won't live a child by such a woman.

With a little sighing sound CHLOE drops the curtain and vanishes.

HILLCRIST. For God's sake, man, nk of what you're saying. She's in at distress.

CHARLES. And what am I?

ILL. She loves you, you know.

CHARLES. Pretty love! That scoun- l Dawker told me—told me—— Hor- le! Horrible!

HILLCRIST. I deeply regret that our rrel should have brought this about.

CHARLES. [With intense bitterness] s, you've smashed my life.

Unseen by them, MRS. HILLCRIST has entered and stands by the door, Left.

IRS. H. Would you have wished to on in ignorance?

They all turn to look at her.

HARLES. [With a writhing move- nt] I don't know. But—you—you did

IRS. H. You shouldn't have attacked

HARLES. What did we do to you— pared with this?

IRS. H. All you could.

ILLCRIST. Enough, enough! What we do to help you?

HARLES. Tell me where my wife is.

JILL *draws the curtains apart—the window is open—*JILL looks out. They wait in silence.

LL. We don't know.

HARLES. Then she was here?

ILLCRIST. Yes, sir; and she heard

HARLES. All the better if she did. knows how I feel.

ILLCRIST. Brace up; be gentle with

HARLES. Gentle? A woman who——

ILLCRIST. A most unhappy creature. ie!

HARLES. Damn your sympathy!

[He goes out into the moonlight, passing away Left.

LL. Dodo, we ought to look for her; awfully afraid.

ILLCRIST. I saw her there—listen- To the gravel pit, Jill; I'll go to pond. No, we'll go together.

[They go out.

MRS. HILLCRIST comes down to the fireplace, rings the bell and stands there, thinking. FELLOWS enters.

MRS. H. I want someone to go down to Mr. Dawker's.

FELLOWS. Mr. Dawker is here, ma'am, waitin' to see you.

MRS. H. Ask him to come in. Oh! and Fellows, you can tell the Jackmans that they can go back to their cottage.

FELLOWS. Very good, ma'am.

[He goes out.

MRS. HILLCRIST searches at the bureau, finds and takes out the deed. DAWKER comes in; he has the appearance of a man whose temper has been badly ruffled.

MRS. H. Charles Hornblower—how did it happen?

DAWKER. He came to me. I said I knew nothing. He wouldn't take it; went for me, abused me up hill and down dale; said he knew everything, and then he began to threaten me. Well, I lost my temper, and I told him.

MRS. H. That's very serious, Dawker, after our promise. My husband is most upset.

DAWKER. [Sullenly] It's not my fault, ma'am; he shouldn't have threatened and goaded me on. Besides, it's got out that there's a scandal; common talk in the village—not the facts, but quite enough to cook their goose here. They- 'll have to go. Better have done with it, anyway, than have enemies at your door.

MRS. H. Perhaps; but—— Oh! Dawker, take charge of this. [She hands him the deed] These people are desperate—and—I'm not sure of my husband when his feelings are worked on.

The sound of a car stopping.

DAWKER. [At the window, looking to the Left] Hornblower's, I think. Yes, he's getting out.

MRS. H. [Bracing herself] You'd better wait, then.

DAWKER. He mustn't give me any of his sauce; I've had enough.

The door is opened and HORNBLOWER enters, pressing so on the heels of FELLOWS that the announcement of his name is lost.

HORNBLOWER. Give me that deed! Ye got it out of me by false pretences and treachery. Ye swore that nothing should be heard of this. Why! me own servants know!

MRS. H. That has nothing to do with us. Your son came and wrenched the knowledge out of Mr. Dawker by abuse and threats; that is all. You will kindly behave yourself here, or I shall ask that you be shown out.

HORNBLOWER. Give me that deed, I say! [He suddenly turns on DAWKER] Ye little ruffian, I see it in your pocket.

The end is indeed projecting from DAWKER'S breast pocket.

DAWKER. [Seeing red] Now, look 'ere, 'Ornblower, I stood a deal from your son, and I'll stand no more.

HORNBLOWER. [To MRS. HILLCRIST] I'll ruin your place yet! [To DAWKER] Ye give me that deed, or I'll throttle ye.

He closes on DAWKER, and makes a snatch at the deed. DAWKER springs at him, and the two stand swaying, trying for a grip at each other's throats. MRS. HILLCRIST tries to cross and reach the bell, but is shut off by their swaying struggle.

Suddenly ROLF appears in the window, looks wildly at the struggle, and seizes DAWKER'S hands, which have reached HORNBLOWER'S throat. JILL, who is following, rushes up to him and clutches his arm.

JILL. Rolf! All of you! Stop! Look!

DAWKER'S hand relaxes, and he is swung round. HORNBLOWER staggers and recovers himself, gasping for breath. All turn to the window, outside which in the moonlight HILLCRIST and CHARLES HORNBLOWER have CHLOE'S motionless body in their arms.

JILL. In the gravel pit. She's just breathing; that's all.

MRS. H. Bring her in. The brandy, Jill!

HORNBLOWER. No. Take her to the car. Stand back, young woman! I want no help from any of ye. Rolf—Chearlie—take her up.

They lift and bear her away, Left. JILL follows.

HORNBLOWER. Hillcrist, ye've got m beaten and disgraced hereabouts, ye'v destroyed my son's married life, an ye've killed my grandchild. I'm n staying in this cursed spot, but if eve I can do you or yours a hurt, I will.

DAWKER. [Muttering] That's righ Squeal and threaten. You began it.

HILLCRIST. Dawker, have the gooc ness! Hornblower, in the presence what may be death, with all my hea I'm sorry.

HORNBLOWER. Ye hypocrite!

He passes them with a certain di nity, and goes out at the windo following to his car.

HILLCRIST, who has stood for a m ment stockstill, goes slowly fo ward and sits in his swivel cha

MRS. H. Dawker, please tell Fellow to telephone to Dr. Robinson to go rou to the Hornblowers at once.

DAWKER, fingering the deed, a with a noise that sounds like "T cur!" goes out, Left.

MRS. H. [At the fireplace] Jack! D you blame me?

HILLCRIST. [Motionless] No.

MRS. H. Or Dawker? He's done h best.

HILLCRIST. No.

MRS. H. [Approaching] What is then?

HILLCRIST. Hypocrite!

JILL comes running in at the wi dow.

JILL. Dodo, she's moved; she's spok It may not be so bad.

HILLCRIST. Thank God for that!

FELLOWS enters, Left.

FELLOWS. The Jackmans, ma'am.

HILLCRIST. Who? What's this?

The JACKMANS have entered, sta ing close to the door.

MRS. J. We're so glad we can back, sir—ma'am, we just wanted thank you.

There is a silence. They see t they are not welcome.

MRS. J. Thank you kindly, sir. G night, ma'am. [They shuffle

HILLCRIST. I'd forgotten their e ence. [He gets up] What is it that loose when you begin a fight, and n you what you think you're not? W nding evil! Begin as you may, it ends this—skin game!

ILL. [Rushing to him] It's not you, do.

HILLCRIST. It is me. For I am, or ould be, master in this house!

MRS. H. I don't understand.

HILLCRIST. When we began this fight, we had clean hands—are they clean now? What's gentility worth if it can't stand fire?

A FAMILY MAN

A COMEDY IN THREE ACTS

ACT I

SCENE I

e study of JOHN BUILDER in the provincial town of Breconridge. A panelled room wherein nothing is ever studied, except perhaps BUILDER'S face in the mirror over the fireplace. It is, however, comfortable, and has large leather chairs and a writing-table in the centre, on which is a typewriter, and many papers. At the back is a large window with French outside shutters, overlooking the street, for the house is an old one, built in an age when the homes of doctors, lawyers and so forth were part of a provincial town, and not yet suburban. There are two or three fine old prints on the walls, Right and Left; and a fine old fireplace, Left, with a fender on which one can sit. A door, Left back, leads into the dining-room, and a door, Right forward, into the hall.

N BUILDER is sitting in his after-breakfast chair before the fire with "The Times" in his hands. He has breakfasted well, and is in that condition of first-pipe serenity in which the affairs of the nation seem almost bearable. He is a tallish, square, personable man of forty-seven, with a well-coloured, jolly, fullish face, marked under the eyes, which have very small pupils and a good deal of light in them. His bearing has force and importance, as of a man accustomed to rising and ownerships, sure in his opinions, and not lacking in geniality when things go his way. Essentially a Midlander. His wife, a woman of forty-one, of ivory tint, with a thin, trim figure and a face so strangely composed as to be almost like a mask (essentially from Jersey) is putting a nib into a pen-holder, and filling an inkpot at the writing-table.

As the curtain rises CAMILLE enters with a rather broken-down cardboard box containing flowers. She is a young woman with a good figure, a pale face, the warm brown eyes and complete poise of a Frenchwoman. She takes the box to MRS. BUILDER.

MRS. BUILDER. The blue vase, please, Camille.

CAMILLE fetches a vase. MRS. BUILDER puts the flowers into the vase. CAMILLE gathers up the débris; and with a glance at BUILDER goes out.

BUILDER. Glorious October! I ought to have a damned good day's shooting with Chantrey to-morrow.

MRS. BUILDER. [Arranging the flowers] Aren't you going to the office this morning?

BUILDER. Well, no, I was going to take a couple of days off. If you feel at the top of your form, take a rest—then you go on feeling at the top. [He looks at her, as if calculating] What do you say to looking up Athene?

MRS. BUILDER. [Palpably astonished] Athene? But you said you'd done with her?

BUILDER. [Smiling] Six weeks ago; but, dash it, one can't have done with one's own daughter. That's the weakness of an Englishman; he can't keep up his resentments. In a town like this it doesn't do to have her living by herself. One of these days it'll get out we've had a row. That wouldn't do me any good.

MRS. BUILDER. I see.

BUILDER. Besides, I miss her. Maud's so self-absorbed. It makes a big hole in the family, Julia. You've got her address, haven't you?

MRS. BUILDER. Yes. [Very still] But do you think it's dignified, John?

BUILDER. [Genially] Oh, hang dignity! I rather pride myself on knowing when to stand on my dignity and when to sit on it. If she's still crazy about Art, she can live at home, and go out to study.

MRS. BUILDER. Her craze was for liberty.

BUILDER. A few weeks' discomfort soon cures that. She can't live on her pittance. She'll have found that out by now. Get your things on and come with me at twelve o'clock.

MRS. BUILDER. I think you'll regret it. She'll refuse.

BUILDER. Not if I'm nice to her. A child could play with me to-day. Shall I tell you a secret, Julia?

MRS. BUILDER. It would be pleasant for a change.

BUILDER. The Mayor's coming round at eleven, and I know perfectly well what he's coming for.

MRS. BUILDER. Well?

BUILDER. I'm to be nominated for Mayor next month. Harris tipped me the wink at the last Council meeting. Not so bad at forty-seven—h'm? I can make a thundering good Mayor. I can do things for this town that nobody else can.

MRS. BUILDER. Now I understand about Athene.

BUILDER. [Good-humouredly] Well it's partly that. But [more seriously] it's more the feeling I get that I'm not doing my duty by her. Goodness knows whom she may be picking up with! Artists are a loose lot. And young people in these days are the limit. I quite believe in moving with the times, but one's either born a Conservative, or one isn't. So you be ready at twelve, see. By the way, that French maid of yours, Julia

---

MRS. BUILDER. What about her?

BUILDER. Is she—er—is she all right? We don't want any trouble with Topping.

MRS. BUILDER. There will be none with —Topping. [She opens the door Left.

BUILDER. I don't know; she strikes me as—very French.

MRS. BUILDER smiles and passes out.

BUILDER fills his second pipe. He is just taking up the paper again when the door from the hall is opened, and the manservant TOPPING, dried, dark, sub-humorous, in a black cut-away, announces:

TOPPING. The Mayor, sir, and Mr Harris!

THE MAYOR of Breconridge enters. He is clean-shaven, red-faced, light-eyed, about sixty, shrewd, poll-parroty, naturally jovial, dressed with the indefinable wrongness of a burgher; he is followed by his Secretary HARRIS, a man all eyes and cleverness.

TOPPING retires.

BUILDER. [Rising] Hallo, Mayor! What brings you so early? Glad to see you. Morning, Harris!

MAYOR. Morning, Builder, morning.

HARRIS. Good morning, sir.

BUILDER. Sit down—sit down! Have a cigar!

The MAYOR takes a cigar, HARRIS a cigarette from his own case.

BUILDER. Well, Mayor, what's gone wrong with the works?

He and HARRIS exchange a look.

MAYOR. [With his first puff] After you left the Council the other day, Builder, we came to a decision.

BUILDER. Deuce you did! Shall I agree with it?

MAYOR. We shall see. We want to nominate you for Mayor. You willing to stand?

BUILDER. [Stolid] That requires consideration.

MAYOR. The only alternative is Chantrey; but he's a light weight, and rather too much County. What's your objection?

BUILDER. It's a bit unexpected, May. [Looks at HARRIS] Am I the right man? Following you, you know. I'm shoving with Chantrey to-morrow. What does he feel about it?

AYOR. What do you say, 'Arris?
ARRIS. Mr. Chantrey's a public l and University man, sir; he's hat I call ambitious.
ILDER. Nor am I, Harris.
ARRIS. No, sir; of course you've a sense of duty. Mr. Chantrey's rathlettante.
AYOR. We want a solid man.
ILDER. I'm very busy, you know,
r.
AYOR. But you've got all the quali-ons—big business, family man, live town, church-goer, experience on ouncil and the Bench. Better say Builder.
ILDER. It's a lot of extra work. I take things up lightly.
YOR. Dangerous times, these. Au-y questioned all over the place. We a man that feels his responsibilind we think we've got him in you.
ILDER. Very good of you, Mayor. I know, I'm sure. I must think of ood of the town.
RRIS. I shouldn't worry about that,

YOR. The name John Builder carveight. You're looked up to as a who can manage his own affairs.
m and the young ladies well?
ILDER. First-rate.
YOR. [Rises] That's right. Well, if like to talk it over with Chantrey rrow. With all this extremism, we a man of principle and common

RRIS. We want a man that'll grasp ttle, sir—and that's you.
ILDER. H'm! I've got a temper, you

YOR. [Chuckling] We do—we do!
I say "yes," I see. No false mod-
Come along, 'Arris, we must go.
ILDER. Well, Mayor, I'll think it and let you have an answer. You my faults, and you know my ies, such as they are. I'm just a Englishman.
YOR. We don't want anything bet-an that. I always say the great about an Englishman is that he's ottom; you may knock him off his but you find him on 'em again be-ou can say "Jack Robinson." He may have his moments of aberration, but he's a sticker. Morning, Builder, morning! I hope you'll say "yes."

[He shakes hands and goes out, followed by HARRIS.

When the door is closed BUILDER stands a moment quite still with a gratified smile on his face; then turns and scrutinises himself in the glass over the hearth. While he is doing so the door from the dining-room is opened quietly and CAMILLE comes in. BUILDER suddenly seeing her reflected in the mirror, turns.

BUILDER. What is it, Camille?

CAMILLE. Madame send me for a letter she say you have, Monsieur, from the dyer and cleaner, with a bill.

BUILDER. [Feeling in his pockets] Yes—no. It's on the table.

CAMILLE goes to the writing-table and looks.

BUILDER. That blue thing.

CAMILLE. [Taking it up] Non, Monsieur, this is from the gas.

BUILDER. Oh! Ah!

He moves up to the table and turns over papers. CAMILLE stands motionless close by with her eyes fixed on him.

BUILDER. Here it is! [He looks up, sees her looking at him, drops his own gaze, and hands her the letter. Their hands touch. Putting his hands in his pockets] What made you come to England?

CAMILLE. [Demure] It is better pay, Monsieur, and [with a smile] the English are so amiable.

BUILDER. Deuce they are! They haven't got that reputation.

CAMILLE. Oh! I admire Englishmen. They are so strong and kind.

BUILDER. [Bluffly flattered] H'm! We've no manners.

CAMILLE. The Frenchman is more polite, but not in the 'eart.

BUILDER. Yes. I suppose we're pretty sound at heart.

CAMILLE. And the Englishman have his life in the family—the Frenchman have his life outside.

BUILDER. [With discomfort] H'm!

CAMILLE. [With a look] Too mooch

in the family—like a rabbit in a 'utch.

BUILDER. Oh! So that's your view of us!

[His eyes rest on her, attracted but resentful.

CAMILLE. Pardon, Monsieur, my tongue run off with me.

BUILDER. [Half conscious of being led on] Are you from Paris?

CAMILLE. [Clasping her hands] Yes. What a town for pleasure—Paris!

BUILDER. I suppose so. Loose place, Paris.

CAMILLE. Loose? What is that, Monsieur?

BUILDER. The opposite of strict.

CAMILLE. Strict! Oh! certainly we like life, we other French. It is not like England. I take this to Madame, Monsieur. [She turns as if to go] Excuse me.

BUILDER. I thought you Frenchwomen all married young.

CAMILLE. I 'ave been married; my 'usband did die—en Afrique.

BUILDER. You wear no ring.

CAMILLE. [Smiling] I prefare to be mademoiselle, Monsieur.

BUILDER. [Dubiously] Well, it's all the same to us. [He takes a letter up from the table] You might take this to Mrs. Builder too.

Again their fingers touch, and there is a suspicion of encounter between their eyes.

CAMILLE goes out.

BUILDER. [Turning to his chair] Don't know about that woman—she's a tantaliser.

He compresses his lips, and is settling back into his chair, when the door from the hall is opened and his daughter MAUD comes in; a pretty girl, rather pale, with fine eyes. Though her face has a determined cast her manner at this moment is by no means decisive. She has a letter in her hand, and advances rather as if she were stalking her father, who, after a "Hallo, Maud!" has begun to read his paper.

MAUD. [Getting as far the table] Father.

BUILDER. [Not lowering the paper] Well? I know that tone. What do want—money?

MAUD. I always want money, course; but——but——

BUILDER. [Pulling out a note—stractedly] Here's five pounds for y

MAUD, advancing, takes it, i seems to find what she has co for more on her chest than ev

BUILDER. [Unconscious] Will take a letter for me?

MAUD sits down Left of table prepares to take down the let

BUILDER. [Dictating] "Dear Mayor,—Referring to your call morning, I have—er—given the ma very careful consideration, and tho somewhat reluctant——"

MAUD. Are you really reluct Father?

BUILDER. Go on—"To assume gre responsibilities, I feel it my duty come forward in accordance with y wish. The—er—honour is one of w I hardly feel myself worthy, but may rest assured——"

MAUD. Worthy. But you do, know.

BUILDER. Look here! Are you tr to get a rise out of me?—because won't succeed this morning.

MAUD. I thought you were tryin get one out of me.

BUILDER. Well, how would you press it?

MAUD. "I know I'm the best man the place, and so do you——"

BUILDER. The disrespect of you yo people is something extraordinary. that reminds me: where do you every evening now after tea?

MAUD. I—I don't know.

BUILDER. Come now, that won't you're never in the house from si seven.

MAUD. Well! It has to do with education.

BUILDER. Why, you finished that years ago!

MAUD. Well, call it a hobby, if like, then, Father.

She takes up the letter she bri in and seems on the poi broaching it.

BUILDER. Hobby? Well, what is

AUD. I don't want to irritate you, er.

ILDER. You can't irritate me more by having secrets. See what that o in your sister's case. And, by the I'm going to put an end to that norning. You'll be glad to have her won't you?

AUD. [Startled] What!

ILDER. Your mother and I are go- ound to Athene at twelve o'clock. ill make it up with her. She must back here.

AUD. [Aghast, but hiding it] Oh! it's no good, Father. She won't.

ILDER. We shall see that. I've quite ver my tantrum, and I expect she

UD. [Earnestly] Father! I do really e you she won't; it's only wasting time, and making you eat humble ILDER. Well, I can eat a good deal norning. It's all nonsense! A fam- a family.

AUD. [More and more disturbed, but g it] Father, if I were you, I would- eally! It's not—dignified.

ILDER. You can leave me to judge at. It's not dignified for the Mayor is town to have an unmarried ter as young as Athene living by lf away from home. This idea that on a visit won't wash any longer. finish that letter—"worthy, but nay rest assured that I shall do my to sustain the—er—dignity of the "

MAUD types desperately.

ILDER. Got that? "And—er—pre- the tradition so worthily——" No staunchly"—er—er——

UD. Upheld.

ILDER. Ah; "—upheld by yourself. fully yours."

AUD. [Finishing] Father, you ht Athene went off in a huff. It t that a bit. She always meant to he just got you into a rage to make ier. She hated living at home.

ILDER. Nonsense! Why on earth d she?

AUD. Well, she did! And so do—— king herself] And so you see it'll make you ridiculous to go.

BUILDER. [Rises] Now what's behind this, Maud?

MAUD. Behind—— Oh! nothing!

BUILDER. The fact is, you girls have been spoiled, and you enjoy twisting my tail; but you can't make me roar this morning. I'm too pleased with things. You'll see, it'll be all right with Athene.

MAUD. [Very suddenly] Father!

BUILDER. [Grimly humourous] Well! Get it off your chest. What's that letter about?

MAUD. [Failing again and crumpling the letter behind her back] Oh! nothing.

BUILDER. Everything's nothing this morning. Do you know what sort of people Athene associates with now—I suppose you see her?

MAUD. Sometimes.

BUILDER. Well?

MAUD. Nobody much. There isn't anybody here to associate with. It's all hopelessly behind the times.

BUILDER. Oh! you think so! That's the inflammatory fiction you pick up. I tell you what, young woman—the sooner you and your sister get rid of your silly notions about not living at home, and making your own way, the sooner you'll both get married and make it. Men don't like the new spirit in women—they may say they do, but they don't.

MAUD. You don't, Father, I know.

BUILDER. Well, I'm very ordinary. If you keep your eyes open, you'll soon see that.

MAUD. Men don't like freedom for anybody but themselves.

BUILDER. That's not the way to put it. [Tapping out his pipe] Women in your class have never had to face realities.

MAUD. No, but we want to.

BUILDER. [Good-humouredly] Well, I'll bet you what you like, Athene's dose of reality will have cured her.

MAUD. And I'll bet you—— No, I won't!

BUILDER. You'd better not. Athene will come home, and only too glad to do it. Ring for Topping and order the car at twelve.

As he opens the door to pass out,

MAUD starts forward, but checks herself.

MAUD. [Looking at her watch] Half-past eleven! Good heavens!

She goes to the bell and rings. Then goes back to the table, and writes an address on a bit of paper.

TOPPING enters Right.

TOPPING. Did you ring, Miss?

MAUD. [With the paper] Yes. Look here, Topping! Can you manage—on your bicycle—now at once? I want to send a message to Miss Athene—awfully important. It's just this: "Look out! Father is coming!" [Holding out the paper] Here's her address. You must get there and away again by twelve. Father and mother want the car then to go there. Order it before you go. It won't take you twenty minutes on your bicycle. It's down by the river near the ferry. But you mustn't be seen by them either going or coming.

TOPPING. If it should fall into their hands, Miss, shall I eat the despatch?

MAUD. Rather! You're a brick, Topping. Hurry up!

TOPPING. Nothing more precise, Miss?

MAUD. M—m—— No.

TOPPING. Very good, Miss Maud. [Conning the address] "Briary Studio, River Road. Look out! Father is coming!" I'll go out the back way. Any answer?

MAUD. No.

TOPPING nods his head and goes out.

MAUD. [To herself] Well, it's all I can do.

[She stands, considering, as the Curtain falls.

SCENE II

The Studio, to which are attached living-rooms, might be rented at eighty pounds a year—some painting and gear indeed, but an air of life rather than of work. Things strewn about. Bare walls, a sloping skylight, no windows; no fireplace visible; a bedroom door, stage Right; a kitchen door, stage Left. A door, Centre back, into the street. The door knocker is going. From the kitchen door, Left, comes the very young person, ANNIE, in b ting-paper blue linen, with a w Dutch cap. She is pretty, her ch rosy, and her forehead pucke She opens the street door. Sta ing outside is TOPPING. He step a pace or two.

TOPPING. Miss Builder live here

ANNIE. Oh! no, sir; Mrs. Herri hame.

TOPPING. Mrs. Herringhame? young lady with dark hair and l expressive eyes?

ANNIE. Oh! yes, sir.

TOPPING. With an "A. B." on linen? [Moves to t

ANNIE. Yes, sir.

TOPPING. And "Athene Builder" her drawings?

ANNIE. [Looking at one] Yes, s

TOPPING. Let's see. [He examines drawing] Mrs. Herringhame, you s

ANNIE. Oh! yes, sir.

TOPPING. Wot oh!

ANNIE. Did you want anything, s

TOPPING. Drop the "sir," my d I'm the Builders' man. Mr. Herr hame in?

ANNIE. Oh! no, sir.

TOPPING. Take a message. I wait. From Miss Maud Builder. "L out! Father is coming." Now, wh ever of 'em comes in first—that's message, and don't you forget it.

ANNIE. Oh! no, sir.

TOPPING. So they're married?

ANNIE. Oh! I don't know, sir.

TOPPING. I see. Well, it ain't kn to Builder, J.P., either. That's there's a message. See?

ANNIE. Oh! yes, sir.

TOPPING. Keep your head. I hop it. From Miss Maud Builder. "L out! Father is coming."

He nods, turns and goes, pullin door to behind him. ANNIE s "baff" for a moment.

ANNIE. Ah!

She goes across to the bedroo the Right, and soon returns, a suit of pyjamas, a tooth-b a pair of slippers and a ca razors, which she puts o table, and disappears int kitchen. She reappears with a bread-pan, which she deposits in the centre of the room; then crosses again to the bedroom, and once more reappears with a clothes-brush, two hair-brushes, and a Norfolk jacket. As she stuffs all these into the bread-pan and bears it back into the kitchen, there is the sound of a car driving up and stopping. ANNIE reappears at the kitchen door just as the knocker sounds.

IE. Vexin' and provokin'! ker again. She opens the door]

R. and MRS. BUILDER enter.

DER. Mr. and Mrs. Builder. My er in?

IE. [Confounded] Oh! sir, no,

DER. My good girl, not "Oh! sir, " Simply: "No, sir. See?

IE. Oh! sir, yes, sir.

DER. Where is she?

IE. Oh! sir, I don't know, sir.

DER. [Fixing her as though he ed her of banter] Will she be oon?

IE. No, sir.

DER. How do you know?

IE. I d-don't, sir.

DER. Then why do you say so? to mutter "She's an idiot!" he it her blushing face and panting pats her on the shoulder, and Never mind; don't be nervous.

IE. Oh! yes, sir. Is that all, sir?

BUILDER. [With a side look at sband and a faint smile] Yes; n go.

IE. Thank you, ma'am.

e turns and hurries out into the itchen, Left. BUILDER gazes after ier, and MRS. BUILDER gazes at BUILDER with her faint smile.

DER. [After the girl is gone] and Dutch—pretty little figure! g round] H'm! Extraordinary e! Fancy Athene preferring this e. What?

BUILDER. I didn't say anything.

DER. [Placing a chair for his nd sitting down himself] Well, we must wait, I suppose. Confound that Nixon legacy! If Athene hadn't had that potty little legacy left her, she couldn't have done this. Well, I daresay it's all spent by now. I made a mistake to lose my temper with her.

MRS. BUILDER. Isn't it always a mistake to lose one's temper?

BUILDER. That's very nice and placid; sort of thing you women who live sheltered lives can say. I often wonder if you women realise the strain on a business man.

MRS. BUILDER. [In her softly ironical voice] It seems a shame to add the strain of family life.

BUILDER. You've always been so passive. When I want a thing, I've got to have it.

MRS. BUILDER. I've noticed that.

BUILDER. [With a short laugh] Odd if you hadn't, in twenty-three years. [Touching a canvas standing against the chair with his toe] Art! Just a pretext. We shall be having Maud wanting to cut loose next. She's very restive. Still, I oughtn't to have had that scene with Athene. I ought to have put quiet pressure.

MRS. BUILDER smiles.

BUILDER. What are you smiling at?

MRS. BUILDER. shrugs her shoulders.

BUILDER. Look at this—— Cigarettes! [He examines the brand on the box] Strong, very—and not good! [He opens the door] Kitchen! [He shuts it, crosses, and opens the door, Right] Bedroom!

MRS. BUILDER. [To his disappearing form] Do you think you ought, John?

He has disappeared, and she ends with an expressive movement of her hands, a long sigh, and a closing of her eyes. BUILDER'S peremptory voice is heard: "Julia!"

MRS. BUILDER. What now?

[She follows into the bedroom. The maid ANNIE puts her head out of the kitchen door; she comes out a step as if to fly; then, at BUILDER'S voice, shrinks back into the kitchen.

BUILDER, reappearing with a razor-strop in one hand and a shaving- brush in the other, is followed by MRS. BUILDER.

BUILDER. Explain these! My God! Where's that girl?

MRS. BUILDER. John. Don't! [Getting between him and the kitchen door] It's not dignified.

BUILDER. I don't care a damn.

MRS. BUILDER. John, you mustn't. Athene has the tiny beginning of a moustache, you know.

BUILDER. What! I shall stay and clear this up if I have to wait a week. Men who let their daughters——! This age is the limit.

He makes a vicious movement with the strop, as though laying it across someone's back.

MRS. BUILDER. She would never stand that. Even wives object, nowadays.

BUILDER. [Grimly] The war's upset everything. Women are utterly out of hand. Why the deuce doesn't she come?

MRS. BUILDER. Suppose you leave me here to see her.

BUILDER. [Ominously] This is my job.

MRS. BUILDER. I think it's more mine.

BUILDER. Don't stand there opposing everything I say! I'll go and have another look—— [He is going towards the bedroom when the sound of a latch-key in the outer door arrests him. He puts the strop and brush behind his back, and adds in a low voice] Here she is!

MRS. BUILDER has approached him, and they have both turned towards the opening door. GUY HERRINGHAME comes in. They are a little out of his line of sight, and he has shut the door before he sees them. When he does, his mouth falls open, and his hand on to the knob of the door. He is a comely young man in Harris tweeds. Moreover, he is smoking. He would speak if he could, but his surprise is too excessive.

BUILDER. Well, sir?

GUY. [Recovering a little] I was about to say the same to you, sir.

BUILDER. [Very red from repression] These rooms are not yours, are they?

GUY. Nor yours, sir?

BUILDER. May I ask if you k whose they are?

GUY. My sister's.

BUILDER. Your—you——!

MRS. BUILDER. John!

BUILDER. Will you kindly tell me your sister signs her drawings by name of my daughter, Athene Bu —and has a photograph of my wife h ing there?

The YOUNG MAN looks at BUILDER and winces, but reco himself.

GUY. [Boldly] As a matter of this is my sister's studio; she's in Fr —and has a friend staying here.

BUILDER. Oh! And you have a ke

GUY. My sister's.

BUILDER. Does your sister shave

GUY. I—I don't think so.

BUILDER. No. Then perhaps you'l me what these mean?

[He takes out the strop and sha brush.

GUY. Oh! Ah! Those things!

BUILDER. Yes. Now then?

GUY. [Addressing MRS. BUI Need we go into this in your pres ma'am? It seems rather delicate.

BUILDER. What explanation have got?

GUY. Well, you see——

BUILDER. No lies; out with it!

GUY. [With decision] I prefer t nothing.

BUILDER. What's your name?

GUY. Guy Herringhame.

BUILDER. Do you live here?

GUY makes no sign.

MRS. BUILDER. [To GUY] I you had better go.

BUILDER. Julia, will you leave r manage this?

MRS. BUILDER. [To GUY] Wh you expect my daughter in?

GUY. Now—directly.

MRS. BUILDER. [Quietly] Are married to her?

GUY. Yes. That is—no-o; not gether, I mean.

BUILDER. What's that? Say that

GUY. [Folding his arms] I'm going to say another word.

BUILDER. I am.

MRS. BUILDER. John,—please!

ILDER. Don't put your oar in! I've wonderful patience so far. [He puts oot through a drawing] Art! This hat comes of it! Are you an ?

Y. No; a flying man. The truth -

ILDER. I don't want to hear you the truth. I'll wait for my daugh-

Y. If you do, I hope you'll be so good as to be gentle. If you get I might too, and that would be ly ugly.

ILDER. Well, I'm damned!

Y. I quite understand that, sir. But, man of the world, I hope you'll a pull before she comes, if you to stay.

ILDER. If we mean to stay! That's

Y. Will you have a cigarette?

ILDER. I—I can't express——

Y. [Soothingly] Don't try, sir. [He up his chin, listening] I think that's [Goes to the door] Yes. Now, ! [He opens the door] Your fath- mother, Athene.

THENE enters. She is flushed and graceful. Twenty-two, with a short upper lip, a straight nose, dark hair, and glowing eyes. She wears bright colours, and has a slow, musical voice, with a slight lisp.

THENE. Oh! How are you, Mother This is rather a surprise. Father s keeps his word, so I certainly expect him.

She looks steadfastly at BUILDER, but does not approach.

LDER. [Controlling himself with ort] Now, Athene, what's this?

THENE. What's what?

LDER. [The strop held out] Are arried to this—this——?

THENE. [Quietly] To all intents and es.

LDER. In law?

ENE. No.

LDER. My God! You—you——!

ENE. Father, don't call names,

LDER. Why aren't you married to ATHENE. Do you want a lot of reasons, or the real one?

BUILDER. This is maddening!

[Goes up stage.

ATHENE. Mother dear, will you go into the other room with Guy?

[She points to the door Right.

BUILDER. Why?

ATHENE. Because I would rather she didn't hear the reason.

GUY. [To ATHENE, sotto voce] He's not safe.

ATHENE. Oh! yes; go on.

GUY follows MRS. BUILDER, and after hesitation at the door they go out into the bedroom.

BUILDER. Now then!

ATHENE. Well, Father, if you want to know the real reason, it's—you.

BUILDER. What on earth do you mean?

ATHENE. Guy wants to marry me. In fact, we—— But I had such a scunner of marriage from watching you at home, that I——

BUILDER. Don't be impudent! My patience is at breaking-point, I warn you.

ATHENE. I'm perfectly serious, Father. I tell you, we meant to marry, but so far I haven't been able to bring myself to it. You never noticed how we children have watched you.

BUILDER. Me?

ATHENE. Yes. You and mother, and other things; all sorts of things——

BUILDER. [Taking out a handkerchief and wiping his brow] I really think you're mad.

ATHENE. I'm sure you must, dear.

BUILDER. Don't "dear" me! What have you noticed? D'you mean I'm not a good husband and father?

ATHENE. Look at mother. I suppose you can't, now; you're too used to her.

BUILDER. Of course I'm used to her. What else is marrying for?

ATHENE. That; and the production of such as me. And it isn't good enough, Father. You shouldn't have set us such a perfect example.

BUILDER. You're talking the most arrant nonsense I ever heard. [He lifts his hands] I've a good mind to shake it out of you.

ATHENE. Shall I call Guy?

He drops his hands.

ATHENE. Confess that being a good husband and father has tried you terribly. It has us, you know.

BUILDER. [Taking refuge in sarcasm] When you've quite done being funny, perhaps you'll tell me why you've behaved like a common street flapper.

ATHENE. [Simply] I couldn't bear to think of Guy as a family man. That's all —absolutely. It's not his fault; he's been awfully anxious to be one.

BUILDER. You've disgraced us, then; that's what it comes to.

ATHENE. I don't want to be unkind, but you've brought it on yourself.

BUILDER. [Genuinely distracted] I can't even get a glimmer of what you mean. I've never been anything but firm. Impatient, perhaps. I'm not an angel; no ordinary healthy man is. I've never grudged you girls any comfort, or pleasure.

ATHENE. Except wills of our own.

BUILDER. What do you want with wills of your own till you're married?

ATHENE. You forget mother!

BUILDER. What about her?

ATHENE. She's very married. Has she a will of her own?

BUILDER. [Sullenly] She's learnt to know when I'm in the right.

ATHENE. I don't ever mean to learn to know when Guy's in the right. Mother's forty-one, and twenty-three years of that she's been your wife. It's a long time, Father. Don't you ever look at her face?

BUILDER. [Troubled in a remote way] Rubbish!

ATHENE. I don't want my face to get like that.

BUILDER. With such views about marriage, what business had you to go near a man? Come, now!

ATHENE. Because I fell in love.

BUILDER. Love leads to marriage—and to nothing else, but the streets. What an example to your sister!

ATHENE. You don't know Maud any more than you knew me. She's got a will of her own too, I can tell you.

BUILDER. Now, look here, Athene. It's always been my way to face accomplished facts. What's done can't be undone; but it can be remedied. You must marry this young —— at once, be it gets out. He's behaved like a ruff but, by your own confession, you've haved worse. You've been bitten by modern disease, this—this utter lac common decency. There's an eternal der in certain things, and marriag one of them; in fact, it's the chief. C now. Give me a promise, and I'll try utmost to forget the whole thing.

ATHENE. When we quarrelled, F er, you said you didn't care what bec of me.

BUILDER. I was angry.

ATHENE. So you are now.

BUILDER. Come, Athene, don't childish! Promise me!

ATHENE. [With a little shudder] W e were on the edge of it. But I've seen you again—— Poor moth

BUILDER. [Very angry] This is si blasphemous. What do you mea harping on your mother? If you t that—that—she doesn't—that she n't——

ATHENE. Now, Father!

BUILDER. I'm damned if I'll sit under this injustice. Your mother is pretty irritating, I can tell you. —she—— Everything suppressed. —and no—blood in her!

ATHENE. I knew it!

BUILDER. [Aware that he has firmed some thought in her that h no intention of confirming] What's ATHENE. Don't you ever look at own face, Father? When you shav instance.

BUILDER. Of course I do.

ATHENE. It isn't satisfied, is it?

BUILDER. I don't know what on you mean.

ATHENE. You can't help it, but be ever so much happier if you w Mohammedan, and two or three, i of one, had—had learned to know you were in the right.

BUILDER. 'Pon my soul! This i rageous!

ATHENE. Truth often is.

BUILDER. Will you be quiet?

ATHENE. I don't ever want sorry for Guy in that way.

BUILDER. I think you're the m modest—— I'm ashamed that you ter. If your mother had ever carn as you are now——

IENE. Would you have been firm
ier?
LDER. [Really sick at heart at this ted mockery which meets him at turn] Be quiet, you——!
ENE. Has mother never turned?
LDER. You're an unnatural girl!
ur own way to hell!
ENE. I am not coming back home,
.
DER. [Wrenching open the door,
Julia! Come! We can't stay
RS. BUILDER comes forth, followed by GUY.
DER. As for you, sir, if you start owing a woman to impose her deas about marriage on you, all I y is—I despise you. [He crosses outer door, followed by his wife.
HENE] I've done with you!
[He goes out.
RS. BUILDER, who has so far seemed to accompany him, shuts the door quickly and remains in the studio. She stands there with that faint smile on her face, lookng at the two young people.
ENE. Awfully sorry, Mother; but ou see what a scunner father's ne?
BUILDER. My dear, all men are ke.
I've always told her that, ma'am.
ENE. [Softly] Oh! Mother, I'm y for you.
e handle of the door is rattled, a ist is beaten on it.
ENE. [*She stamps, and covers her Disgusting!
Shall I——?
BUILDER. [Shaking her head]
ng in a moment. [To ATHENE]
ve it to me, Athene.
ENE. Oh! if somebody would give lesson!
ILDER'S voice: "Julia!"
ENE. Have you ever tried, Moth-
S. BUILDER looks at the YOUNG MAN, who turns away out of earing.
BUILDER. Athene, you're mistaken. I've always stood up to him in my own way.

ATHENE. Oh! but, Mother—listen!

The beating and rattling have recommenced, and the voice: "Are you coming?"

ATHENE. [Passionately] And that's family life! Father was all right before he married, I expect. And now it's like this. How you survive——!

MRS. BUILDER. He's only in a passion, my dear.

ATHENE. It's wicked.

MRS. BUILDER. It doesn't work otherwise, Athene.

A single loud bang on the door.

ATHENE. If he beats on that door again, I shall scream.

MRS. BUILDER smiles, shakes her head, and turns to the door.

MRS. BUILDER. Now, my dear, you're going to be sensible, to please me. It's really best. If I say so, it must be. It's all comedy, Athene.

ATHENE. Tragedy!

GUY. [Turning to them] Look here! Shall I shift him?

MRS. BUILDER shakes her head and opens the door. BUILDER stands there, a furious figure.

BUILDER. Will you come, and leave that baggage and her cad?

MRS. BUILDER steps quickly out and the door is closed. GUY makes an angry movement towards it.

ATHENE. Guy!

GUY. [Turning to her] That puts the top hat on. So persuasive! [He takes out of his pocket a wedding ring, and a marriage licence] Well! What's to be done with these pretty things, now?

ATHENE. Burn them!

GUY. [Slowly] Not quite. You can't imagine I should ever be like that, Athene?

ATHENE. Marriage does wonders.

GUY. Thanks.

ATHENE. Oh! Guy, don't be horrid. I feel awfully bad.

GUY. Well, what do you think I feel? "Cad!"

They turn to see ANNIE in hat and coat, with a suit-case in her hand, coming from the door Left.

ANNIE. Oh! Ma'am, please, Miss, I want to go home.

GUY. [Exasperated] She wants to go home—she wants to go home!

ATHENE. Guy! All right, Annie.

ANNIE. Oh! thank you, Miss.

[She moves across in front of them.

ATHENE. [Suddenly] Annie!

ANNIE stops and turns to her.

ATHENE. What are you afraid of?

ANNIE. [With comparative boldness] I—I might catch it, Miss.

ATHENE. From your people?

ANNIE. Oh! no, Miss; from you. You see, I've got a young man that wants to marry me. And if I don't let him, I might get into trouble meself.

ATHENE. What sort of father and mother have you got, Annie?

ANNIE. I never thought, Miss. And of course. I don't want to begin.

ATHENE. D'you mean you've never noticed how they treat each other?

ANNIE. I don't think they do, Miss.

ATHENE. Exactly.

ANNIE. They haven't time. Father's an engine driver.

GUY. And what's your young man, Annie?

ANNIE. [Embarrassed] Somethin' like you, sir. But very respectable.

ATHENE. And suppose you marry him, and he treats you like a piece of furniture?

ANNIE. I—I could treat him the same, Miss.

ATHENE. Don't you believe that, Annie!

ANNIE. He's very mild.

ATHENE. That's because he wants you. You wait till he doesn't.

ANNIE looks at GUY.

GUY. Don't you believe her, Annie; if he's decent——

ANNIE. Oh! yes, sir.

ATHENE. [Suppressing a smile] Of course—but the point is, Annie, that marriage makes all the difference.

ANNIE. Yes, Miss; that's what I thought.

ATHENE. You don't see. What I mean is that when once he's sure of you, he may change completely.

ANNIE. [Slowly, looking at her thumb] Oh! I don't—think—he'll hammer me, Miss. Of course, I know can't tell till you've found out.

ATHENE. Well, I've no right to fluence you.

ANNIE. Oh! no, Miss; that's I've been thinking.

GUY. You're quite right, Annie— is no place for you.

ANNIE. You see, we can't be ried, sir, till he gets his wages ra So it'll be a continual temptation to ATHENE. Well, all right, Anni hope you'll never regret it.

ANNIE. Oh! no, Miss.

GUY. I say, Annie, don't go thinking evil of us; we didn't re you knew we weren't married.

ATHENE. We certainly did not.

ANNIE. Oh! I didn't think it rig take notice.

GUY. We beg your pardon.

ANNIE. Oh! no, sir. Only, seein' and Mrs. Builder so upset, broug 'ome like. And father can be 'andy a strap.

ATHENE. There you are! Force jeure!

ANNIE. Oh! yes, Miss.

ATHENE. Well, good-bye, Annie. are you going to say to your peop

Y. Well, they don't stick out.

HENE. He works fearfully hard; upright, and plucky. He's not r. But he's smothered his animal e—and that's done it. I don't want you smother anything, Guy.

Y. [Gloomily] I suppose one never s what one's got under the lid. If idn't come here to-day—— [He the wedding ring] He certainly one pause. Used he to whack you?

IENE. Yes.

r. Brute!

IENE. With the best intentions. ee, he's a Town Councillor, and a trate. I suppose they have to be ' Maud and I sneaked in once to to him. There was a woman who for protection from her husband. d known we were there, he'd iad a fit.

r. Did he give her the protection?

IENE. Yes; he gave her back to isband. Wasn't it—English?

r. [With a grunt] Hang it! We're l like that.

IENE. [Twisting his button] I it's really a sense of property so nat they don't know they've got it. ' can talk about freedom like a ician.

r. [Fitting the wedding ring on ger] Well! Let's see how it looks, y.

IENE. Don't play with fire, Guy.

. There's something in atavism, r; there really is. I like it—I do. knock on the door.

ENE. That sounds like Annie Just see.

r. [Opening the door] It is. Come nie. What's wrong now?

ATHENE. But you did your best; you left us.

ANNIE. Oh! yes, Miss; that's why 'e's horrified.

GUY. Good for your young man.

ANNIE. [Flattered] Yes, sir. 'E said I 'ad no strength of mind.

ATHENE. So you want to come back?

ANNIE. Oh! yes, Miss.

ATHENE. All right.

GUY. But what about catching it?

ANNIE. Oh, sir, 'e said there was nothing like Epsom salts.

GUY. He's a wag, your young man.

ANNIE. He was in the Army, sir.

GUY. You said he was respectable.

ANNIE. Oh! yes, sir; but not so respectable as that.

ATHENE. Well, Annie, get your things off, and lay lunch.

ANNIE. Oh! yes, Miss.

[She makes a little curtsey and passes through into the kitchen.

GUY. Strength of mind! Have a little, Athene—won't you?

[He holds out the marriage licence before her.

ATHENE. I don't know—I don't know! If—it turned out——

GUY. It won't. Come on. Must take chances in this life.

ATHENE. [Looking up into his face] Guy, promise me—solemnly that you'll never let me stand in your way, or stand in mine!

GUY. Right! That's a bargain.

ATHENE quivers towards him. They embrace fervently as ANNIE enters with the bread-pan. They spring apart.

ANNIE. Oh!

GUY. It's all right, Annie. There's only one more day's infection before you. We're to be married to-morrow morning.

ANNIE. Oh! yes, sir. Won't Mr. Builder be pleased?

GUY. H'm! That's not exactly our reason.

ANNIE. [Right] Oh! no, sir. Of course you can't be a family without, can you?

GUY. What have you got in that thing?

ANNIE is moving across with the bread-pan. She halts at the bedroom door.

ANNIE. Oh! please, Ma'am, I was to give you a message—very important—from Miss Maud Builder: "Look out! Father is coming!" [She goes out. The curtain falls.

ACT II

BUILDER'S study. At the table, MAUD has just put a sheet of paper into a typewriter. She sits facing the audience, with her hands stretched over the keys.

MAUD. [To herself] I must get that expression.

Her face assumes a furtive, listening look. Then she gets up, whisks to the mirror over the fireplace, scrutinises the expression in it, and going back to the table, sits down again with hands outstretched above the keys, and an accentuation of the expression. The door up Left is opened, and TOPPING appears. He looks at MAUD, who just turns her eyes.

TOPPING. Lunch has been ready some time, Miss Maud.

MAUD. I don't want any lunch. Did you give it?

TOPPING. Miss Athene was out. I gave the message to a young party. She looked a bit green, Miss. I hope nothing'll go wrong with the works. Shall I keep lunch back?

MAUD. If something's gone wrong, they won't have any appetite, Topping.

TOPPING. If you think I might risk it, Miss, I'd like to slip round to my dentist. [He lays a finger on his cheek.

MAUD. [Smiling] Oh! What race is being run this afternoon, then, Topping?

TOPPING. [Twinkling, and shifting his finger to the side of his nose] Well, I don't suppose you've 'eard of it, Miss; but as a matter of fact it's the Cesarwitch.

MAUD. Got anything on?

TOPPING. Only my shirt, Miss.

MAUD. Is it a good thing, then?

TOPPING. I've seen worse roll [With a touch of enthusiasm] horse, Miss Maud, at twenty to one.

MAUD. Put me ten bob on, Topp I want all the money I can get, just

TOPPING. You're not the first, Mis

MAUD. I say, Topping, do you k anything about the film?

TOPPING. [Nodding] Rather a cialty of mine, Miss.

MAUD. Well, just stand there, give me your opinion of this.

TOPPING moves down Left.

She crouches over the typewr lets her hands play on the k stops; assumes that listening, tive look; listens again, and her head go slowly round, ceded by her eyes; breaks i and says:

MAUD. What should you say I w

TOPPING. Guilty, Miss.

MAUD. [With triumph] There! you think I've got it?

TOPPING. Well, of course, I cou say just what sort of a crime you'd mitted, but I should think pretty stuff.

MAUD. Yes; I've got them here [She pats her

TOPPING. Really, Miss.

MAUD. Yes. There's just one p Topping; it's psychological.

TOPPING. Indeed, Miss?

MAUD. Should I naturally put hand on them; or would there reaction quick enough to stop me? see, I'm alone—and the point is wh the fear of being seen would stop although I knew I couldn't be seen rather subtle.

TOPPING. I think there'd be a re tion, Miss.

MAUD. So do I. To touch them [clasps her chest] is a bit obvious, it?

TOPPING. If the haudience knows 've got 'em there.

MAUD. Oh! yes, it's seen me put Look here, I'll show you that too

She opens an imaginary dr takes out some bits of sc wax, and with every circumst of stealth in face and hands ceals them in her bosom.

UD. All right?

PING. [Nodding] Fine, Miss. You got a film face. What are they, if ask?

ID. [Reproducing the sealing-wax] anshawe diamonds. There's just ing here too, Topping. In real hich should I naturally do—put n here [She touches her chest] ny bag?

PING. [Touching his waistcoat—ly] Well! To put 'em in here, should say is more—more pish-cal.

D. [Subduing her lips] Yes; but

ING. You see, then you've got you.

D. But that's just the point. n't I naturally think: Safer in ; then I can pretend somebody m there. You see, nobody could m on me.

ING. Well, I should say that de-on your character. Of course I now what your character is.

D. No; that's the beastly part of author doesn't either. It's all left

ING. In that case, I should please Miss. To put 'em in 'ere's

D. Yes, I think you're right. It's uman.

ING. I didn't know you 'ad a is way, Miss Maud.

D. More than a taste, Topping—

ING. Well, in my belief, we all vice about us somewhere. But if you, Miss, I wouldn't touch bet-t with this other on you. You et to feel a bit crowded.

D. Well, then, only put the ten if you're sure he's going to win. l post the money on after me. I'll u an address, Topping, because I e here.

NG. [Disturbed] What! You're g, too, Miss Maud?

D. To seek my fortune.

NG. Oh! Hang it all, Miss, think you'll leave behind. Miss Ath-avin' home has made it pretty t this'll touch bottom—this will.

MAUD. Yes; I expect you'll find it rather difficult for a bit when I'm gone. Miss Baldini, you know. I've been studying with her. She's got me this chance with the movie people. I'm going on trial as the guilty typist in "The Heartache of Miranda."

TOPPING. [Surprised out of politeness] Well, I never! That does sound like 'em! Are you goin' to tell the guv'nor, Miss?

MAUD nods.

TOPPING. In that case, I think I'll be gettin' off to my dentist before the band plays.

MAUD. All right, Topping; hope you won't lose a tooth.

TOPPING. [With a grin] It's on the knees of the gods, Miss, as they say in the headlines.

[He goes. MAUD stretches herself and listens.

MAUD. I believe that's them. Shivery funky. [She runs off up Left.

BUILDER. [Entering from the hall and crossing to the fireplace] Monstrous! Really monstrous!

CAMILLE enters from the hall. She has a little collecting book in her hand.

BUILDER. Well, Camille?

CAMILLE. A sistare from the Sacred 'Eart, Monsieur—her little book for the orphan children.

BUILDER. I can't be bothered—What is it?

CAMILLE. Orphan, Monsieur.

BUILDER. H'm! Well![Feeling in his breast pocket] Give her that. [He hands her a five-pound note.

CAMILLE. I am sure she will be veree grateful for the poor little beggars. Madame says she will not be coming to lunch, Monsieur.

BUILDER. I don't want any, either. Tell Topping I'll have some coffee.

CAMILLE. Topping has gone to the dentist, Monsieur; 'e 'as the toothache.

BUILDER. Toothache—poor devil! H'm! I'm expecting my brother, but I don't know that I can see him.

CAMILLE. No, Monsieur?

BUILDER. Ask your mistress to come here.

[He looks up, and catching her eye, looks away.

CAMILLE. Yes, Monsieur.

As she turns he looks swiftly at her, sweeping her up and down. She turns her head and catches his glance, which is swiftly dropped.

CAMILLE. Will Monsieur not 'ave anything to eat?

BUILDER. [Shaking his head—abruptly] No. Bring the coffee!

CAMILLE. Is Monsieur not well?

BUILDER. Yes—quite well.

CAMILLE. [Sweetening her eyes] A cutlet soubise? No?

BUILDER. [With a faint response in his eyes, instantly subdued] Nothing! nothing!

CAMILLE. And Madame nothing too —— Tt! Tt!

With her hand on the door she looks back, again catches his eyes in an engagement instantly broken off, and goes out.

BUILDER. [Stock-still, and staring at the door] That girl's a continual irritation to me! She's dangerous! What a life! I believe that girl——

The door Left is opened, and MRS. BUILDER comes in.

BUILDER. There's some coffee coming; do your head good. Look here, Julia. I'm sorry I beat on that door. I apologise. I was in a towering passion. I wish I didn't get into these rages. But—dash it all——! I couldn't walk away and leave you there.

MRS. BUILDER. Why not?

BUILDER. You keep everything to yourself, so; I never have any notion what you're thinking. What did you say to her?

MRS. BUILDER. Told her it would never work.

BUILDER. Well, that's something. She's crazy. D'you suppose she was telling the truth about that young blackguard wanting to marry her?

MRS. BUILDER. I'm sure of it.

BUILDER. When you think of how she's been brought up. You would have thought that religion alone——

MRS. BUILDER. The girls haven't wanted to go to church for years. They've always said they didn't see why they should go to keep up your pos I don't know if you remember that once caned them for running off Sunday morning.

BUILDER. Well?

MRS. BUILDER. They've never had religion since.

BUILDER. H'm! [He takes a turn up the room] What's to be about Athene?

MRS. BUILDER. You said you had with her.

BUILDER. You know I didn't that. I might just as well have sai done with you! Apply your wits, At any moment this thing might out. In a little town like this yo keep nothing dark. How can I take nomination for Mayor?

MRS. BUILDER. Perhaps Ralph help.

BUILDER. What? His daughters never done anything disgraceful, his wife's a pattern.

MRS. BUILDER. Yes; Ralph is all a family man.

BUILDER. [Staring at her] I do you wouldn't turn things upside in that ironical way. It isn't—Eng

MRS. BUILDER. I can't help h been born in Jersey.

BUILDER. No; I suppose it's in blood. The French—— [He stops

MRS. BUILDER. Yes?

BUILDER. Very irritating sometin a plain Englishman—that's all.

MRS. BUILDER. Shall I get rid o mille?

BUILDER. [Staring at her, then ping his glance] Camille? What' got to do with it?

MRS. BUILDER. I thought perhap found her irritating.

BUILDER. Why should I?

CAMILLE comes in from the ing-room with the coffee.

BUILDER. Put it there. I want brandy, please.

CAMILLE. I bring it, Monsieur

[She goes back demurely in dining-room.

BUILDER. Topping's got toot poor chap! [Pouring out the Can't you suggest any way of r Athene see reason? Think of th

:. BUILDER. It is irritating.
LDER. Be explicit.
. BUILDER. We have lived together
-three years, John. No talk will LDER. Is it a question of money?

an always have more. You know

RS. BUILDER smiles.
LDER. Oh! don't smile like that;
es me feel quite sick!
AMILLE enters with a decanter and little glasses, from the dining-room.
ILLE. The brandy, sir. Monsieur
Builder has just come.
BUILDER. Ask him in, Camille.
ILLE. Yes, Madame.
he goes through the doorway into the hall.
RS. BUILDER, following towards the door, meets RALPH BUILDER, a man rather older than BUILDER and of opposite build and manner. He has a pleasant, whimsical face and grizzled hair.
BUILDER. John wants to consult alph.
H. That's very gratifying.
e passes him and goes out, leavng the two brothers eyeing one nother.
H. About the Welsh contract?
DER. No. Fact is, Ralph, someery horrible's happened.
H. Athene gone and got mar-

DER. No. It's—it's that she's gone
d not got married.
LPH utters a sympathetic whis-
le.
DER. Jolly, isn't it?
H. To whom?
DER. A young flying bounder.
H. And why?

BUILDER. Some crazy rubbish about family life, of all things.

RALPH. Athene's a most interesting girl. All these young people are so queer and delightful.

BUILDER. By George, Ralph, you may thank your stars you haven't got a delightful daughter. Yours are good, decent girls.

RALPH. Athene's tremendously good and decent, John. I'd bet any money she's doing this on the highest principles.

BUILDER. Behaving like a——

RALPH. Don't say what you'll regret, old man! Athene always took things seriously—bless her!

BUILDER. Julia thinks you might help. You never seem to have any domestic troubles.

RALPH. No-o. I don't think we do.

BUILDER. How d'you account for it?

RALPH. I must ask at home.

BUILDER. Dash it! You must know!

RALPH. We're all fond of each other.

BUILDER. Well, I'm fond of my girls too; I suppose I'm not amiable enough. H'm?

RALPH. Well, old man, you do get blood to the head. But what's Athene's point, exactly?

BUILDER. Family life isn't idyllic, so she thinks she and the young man oughtn't to have one.

RALPH. I see. Home experience?

BUILDER. Hang it all, a family's a family! There must be a head.

RALPH. But no tail, old chap.

BUILDER. You don't let your women folk do just as they like?

RALPH. Always.

BUILDER. What happens if one of your girls wants to do an improper thing?

RALPH shrugs his shoulders.

BUILDER. You don't stop her?

RALPH. Do you?

BUILDER. I try to.

RALPH. Exactly. And she does it. I don't and she doesn't.

BUILDER. [With a short laugh] Good Lord! I suppose you'd have me eat humble pie and tell Athene she can go on living in sin and offending society, and have my blessing to round it off.

RALPH. I think if you did she'd probably marry him.

BUILDER. You've never tested your theory, I'll bet.

RALPH. Not yet.

BUILDER. There you are.

RALPH. The suaviter in modo pays, John. The times are not what they were.

BUILDER. Look here! I want to get to the bottom of this. Do you tell me I'm any stricter than nine out of ten men?

RALPH. Only in practice.

BUILDER. [Puzzled] How do you mean?

RALPH. Well, you profess the principles of liberty, but you practise the principles of government.

BUILDER. H'm! [Taking up the decanter] Have some?

RALPH. No, thank you.

BUILDER fills and raises his glass.

CAMILLE. [Entering] Madame left her coffee.

She comes forward, holds out a cup for BUILDER to pour into, takes it and goes out. BUILDER'S glass remains suspended. He drinks the brandy off as she shuts the door.

BUILDER. Life isn't all roses, Ralph.

RALPH. Sorry, old man.

BUILDER. I sometimes think I try myself too high. Well, about that Welsh contract?

RALPH. Let's take it.

BUILDER. If you'll attend to it. Frankly, I'm too upset.

As they go towards the door into the hall, MAUD comes in from the dining-room, in hat and coat.

RALPH. [Catching sight of her] Hallo! All well in your cosmogony, Maud?

MAUD. What is a cosmogony, Uncle?

RALPH. My dear, I—I don't know.

He goes out, followed by BUILDER. MAUD goes quickly to the table, sits down and rests her elbows on it, her chin on her hands, looking at the door.

BUILDER. [Re-entering] Well, Maud! You'd have won your bet!

MAUD. Oh! Father, I—I've got some news for you.

BUILDER. [Staring at her] News—what?

MAUD. I'm awfully sorry, but I—I've got a job.

BUILDER. Now, don't go saying y going in for Art, too, because I have it.

MAUD. Art? Oh! no! It's the [With a jerk] the Movies.

BUILDER, who has taken up a pi fill, puts it down.

BUILDER. [Impressively] I'm not joking mood.

MAUD. I'm not joking, Father.

BUILDER. Then what are you ta about?

MAUD. You see, I—I've got a face, and——

BUILDER. You've what? [Going his daughter, he takes hold of her Don't talk nonsense. Your sister just tried me to the limit.

MAUD. [Removing his hand fro chin] Don't oppose it, Father, pl I've always wanted to earn my living.

BUILDER. Living! Living!

MAUD. [Gathering determination can't stop me, Father, because I need support. I've got quite good BUILDER. [Almost choking, but tering himself] Do you mean t you've gone as far as that?

MAUD. Yes. It's all settled.

BUILDER. Who put you up to thi

MAUD. No one. I've been meanu ever so long. I'm twenty-one, you

BUILDER. A film face! Good Now, look here! I will not h daughter of mine mixed up wit stage. I've spent goodness knows on your education—both of you.

MAUD. I don't want to be un ful; but I—I can't go on living at BUILDER. You can't——! Why? 've every indulgence.

MAUD. [Clearly and coldly] I member occasions when your indu hurt, Father. [She wriggles her ders and back] We never forgot gave that.

BUILDER. [Uneasily] That! Yo just kids.

MAUD. Perhaps you'd like t again?

BUILDER. Don't twist my tail, I had the most painful scene with this morning. Now come! Give silly notion! It's really too chil IAUD. [Looking at him curiously] heard you say ever so many times no man was any good who couldn't e his own way, Father. Well, women the same as men, now. It's the law he country. I only want to make my way.

UILDER. [Trying to subdue his anger] v, Maud, don't be foolish. Consider position here—a Town Councillor, a gistrate, and Mayor next year. With daughter living with a man she isn't ried to——

AUD. [With lively interest] Oh! So did catch them out?

UILDER. D'you mean to say you v?

AUD. Of course.

JILDER. My God! I thought we were ristian family.

AUD. Oh! Father.

JILDER. Don't sneer at Christianity!

AUD. There's only one thing wrong Christians—they aren't!

BUILDER seizes her by the shoulders and shakes her vigorously. When he drops her shoulders, she gets up, gives him a vicious look, and suddenly stamps her foot on his toe with all her might.

ILDER. [With a yowl of pain] You devil!

AUD. [Who has put the table be- s them] I won't stand being n.

ILDER. [Staring at her across the You've got my temper up and take the consequences. I'll make oe the line.

UD. If you knew what a Prussian ssion you've got!

BUILDER passes his hand across his face uneasily, as if to wipe something off.

UD. No! It's too deep!

ILDER. Are you my daughter or are ot?

UD. I certainly never wanted to be. always disliked you, Father, ever I was so high. I've seen through Do you remember when you used ne into the nursery because Jenny retty? You think we didn't notice ut we did. And in the schoolroom s Tipton. And d'you remember knocking our heads together? No, you don't; but we do. And——

BUILDER. You disrespectful monkey! Will you be quiet?

MAUD. No; you've got to hear things. You don't really love anybody but yourself, Father. What's good for you has to be good for everybody. I've often heard you talk about independence, but it's a limited company and you've got all the shares.

BUILDER. Rot; only people who can support themselves have a right to independence.

MAUD. That's why you don't want me to support myself.

BUILDER. You can't! Film, indeed! You'd be in the gutter in a year. Athene's got her pittance, but you—you've got nothing.

MAUD. Except my face.

BUILDER. It's the face that brings women to ruin, my girl.

MAUD. Well, when I'm there I won't come to you to rescue me.

BUILDER. Now, mind—if you leave my house, I've done with you.

MAUD. I'd rather scrub floors now, than stay.

BUILDER. [Almost pathetically] Well, I'm damned! Look here, Maud—all this has been temper. You got my monkey up. I'm sorry I shook you; you've had your revenge on my toes. Now, come! Don't make things worse for me than they are. You've all the liberty you can reasonably want till you marry.

MAUD. He can't see it—he absolutely can't!

BUILDER. See what?

MAUD. That I want to live a life of my own.

He edges nearer to her, and she edges to keep her distance.

BUILDER. I don't know what's bitten you.

MAUD. The microbe of freedom; it's in the air.

BUILDER. Yes, and there it'll stay—that's the first sensible word you've uttered. Now, come! Take your hat off, and let's be friends!

MAUD looks at him and slowly takes off her hat

BUILDER. [Relaxing his attitude, with a sigh of relief] That's right!

[Crosses to fireplace.

MAUD. [Springing to the door leading to the hall] Good-bye, Father!

BUILDER. [Following her] Monkey!

At the sound of a bolt shot, BUILDER goes up to the window. There is a fumbling at the door, and CAMILLE appears.

BUILDER. What's the matter with that door?

CAMILLE. It was bolted, Monsieur.

BUILDER. Who bolted it?

CAMILLE. [Shrugging her shoulders] I can't tell, Monsieur. [She collects the cups, and halts close to him. Softly] Monsieur is not 'appy.

BUILDER. [Surprised] What? No! Who'd be happy in a household like mine?

CAMILLE. But so strong a man—I wish I was a strong man, not a weak woman.

BUILDER. [Regarding her with reluctant admiration] Why, what's the matter with you?

CAMILLE. Will Monsieur have another glass of brandy before I take it?

BUILDER. No! Yes—I will.

She pours it out, and he drinks it, hands her the glass and sits down suddenly in an armchair. CAMILLE puts the glass on a tray, and looks for a box of matches from the mantel-shelf.

CAMILLE. A light, Monsieur?

BUILDER. Please.

CAMILLE. [She trips over his feet and sinks on to his knee] Oh! Monsieur!

BUILDER flames up and catches her in his arms.

CAMILLE. Oh! Monsieur!

BUILDER. You little devil!

She suddenly kisses him, and he returns the kiss. While they are engaged in this entrancing occupation, MRS. BUILDER opens the door from the hall, watches unseen for a few seconds, and quietly goes out again.

BUILDER. [Pushing her back from him, whether at the sound of the door or of a still small voice] What am I doing?

CAMILLE. Kissing.

BUILDER. I—I forgot myself.

They rise.

CAMILLE. It was na-ice.

BUILDER. I didn't mean to. You away—go away!

CAMILLE. Oh! Monsieur, that spoil

BUILDER. [Regarding her fixedly] my opinion you're a temptation of devil. You know you sat down on pose.

CAMILLE. Well, perhaps.

BUILDER. What business had you I'm a family man.

CAMILLE. Yes. What a pity! But d it matter?

BUILDER. [Much beset] Look here, know! This won't do! It won't do! I've got my reputation to think of!

CAMILLE. So 'ave I! But there is of time to think of it in between.

BUILDER. I knew you were dangero I always knew it.

CAMILLE. What a thing to say o little woman!

BUILDER. We're not in Paris.

CAMILLE. [Clasping her hands] 'Ow I wish we was!

BUILDER. Look here—I can't st this; you've got to go. Out with y I've always kept a firm hand on self, and I'm not going to——

CAMILLE. But I admire you so!

BUILDER. Suppose my wife had c in?

CAMILLE. Oh! Don't suppose any a disagreeable thing! If you were so strict, you would feel much 'appie

BUILDER. [Staring at her] You temptress!

CAMILLE. I lofe pleasure, and I get any. And you 'ave such a duty, don't get any sport. Well, I am 'ere!

[She stretches herself, and BU utters a deep sound.

BUILDER. [On the edge of succumb It's all against my—I won't do it! —it's wrong!

CAMILLE. Oh! La, la!

BUILDER. [Suddenly revolting] N you thought it a sin—I—might. you don't; you're nothing but a—a tle heathen.

CAMILLE. Why should it be bet I thought it a sin?

Builder. Then—then I should know ere I was. As it is——

Camille. The English 'ave no idea pleasure. They make it all so coarse l virtuous.

Builder. Now, out you go before —! Go on!

He goes over to the door and opens it. His wife is outside in a hat and coat. She comes in.

Builder. [Stammering] Oh! Here are—I wanted you.

Camille, taking up the tray, goes out Left, swinging her hips a very little.

Builder. Going out?

Mrs. Builder. Obviously.

Builder. Where?

Mrs. Builder. I don't know at pres-

Builder. I wanted to talk to you it—Maud.

Mrs. Builder. It must wait.

Builder. She's—she's actually gone

Mrs. Builder. I must tell you that I ened to look in a minute ago.

Builder. [In absolute dismay] You! what?

Mrs. Builder. Yes. I will put no ob- e in the way of your pleasures.

Builder. [Aghast] Put no obstacle? t do you mean? Julia, how can you a thing like that? Why, I've only

s. Builder. Don't! I saw.

Builder. The girl fell on my knees. , she did. She's—she's a little devil. resisted her. I give you my word 's been nothing beyond a kiss, un- reat provocation. I—I apologise.

s. Builder. [Bows her head] k you! I quite understand. But you forgive my feeling it impossible main a wet blanket any longer.

lder. What! Because of a little like that—all over in two minutes, doing my utmost.

s. Builder. My dear John, the fact ou had to do your utmost is quite h. I feel continually humiliated ur house, and I want to leave it e quietly, without fuss of any lder. But—my God! Julia, this is awful—it's absurd! How can you! I'm your husband. Really—your saying you don't mind what I do—it's not right; it's immoral!

Mrs. Builder. I'm afraid you don't see what goes on in those who live with you. So, I'll just go. Don't bother!

Builder. Now, look here, Julia, you can't mean this seriously. You can't! Think of my position! You've never set yourself up against me before.

Mrs. Builder. But I do now.

Builder. [After staring at her] I've given you no real reason. I'll send the girl away. You ought to thank me for resisting a temptation that most men would have yielded to. After twenty-three years of married life, to kick up like this—you ought to be ashamed of yourself.

Mrs. Builder. I'm sure you must think so.

Builder. Oh! for heaven's sake don't be sarcastic! You're my wife, and there's an end of it; you've no legal excuse. Don't be absurd!

Mrs. Builder. Good-bye!

Builder. D'you realise that you're encouraging me to go wrong? That's a pretty thing for a wife to do. You ought to keep your husband straight.

Mrs. Builder. How beautifully put!

Builder. [Almost pathetically] Don't rile me, Julia! I've had an awful day. First Athene—then Maud—then that girl—and now you! All at once like this! Like a swarm of bees about one's head. [Pleading] Come, now, Julia, don't be so—so impracticable! You'll make us the laughing-stock of the whole town. A man in my position, and can't keep his own family; it's preposterous!

Mrs. Builder. Your own family have lives and thoughts and feelings of their own.

Builder. Oh! This damned Woman's business! I knew how it would be when we gave you the vote. You and I are married, and our daughters are our daughters. Come, Julia. Where's your common sense? After twenty-three years! You know I can't do without you!

Mrs. Builder. You could—quite easily. You can tell people what you like.

BUILDER. My God! I never heard anything so immoral in all my life from the mother of two grown-up girls. No wonder they've turned out as they have! What is it you want, for goodness sake?

MRS. BUILDER. We just want to be away from you, that's all. I assure you it's best. When you've shown some consideration for our feelings and some real sign that we exist apart from you—we could be friends again—perhaps—I don't know.

BUILDER. Friends! Good heavens! With one's own wife and daughters! [With great earnestness] Now, look here, Julia, you haven't lived with me all this time without knowing that I'm a man of strong passions; I've been a faithful husband to you—yes, I have. And that means resisting all sorts of temptations you know nothing of. If you withdraw from my society I won't answer for the consequences. In fact, I can't have you withdrawing. I'm not going to see myself going to the devil and losing the good opinion of everybody round me. A bargain's a bargain. And until I've broken my side of it, and I tell you I haven't—you've no business to break yours. That's flat. So now, put all that out of your head.

MRS. BUILDER. No.

BUILDER. [Intently] D'you realise that I've supported you in luxury and comfort?

MRS. BUILDER. I think I've earned it.

BUILDER. And how do you propose to live? I shan't give you a penny. Come, Julia, don't be such an idiot! Fancy letting a kiss which no man could have helped, upset you like this!

MRS. BUILDER. The Camille, and the last straw!

BUILDER. [Sharply] I won't have it! So now you know.

But MRS. BUILDER has very swiftly gone.

BUILDER. Julia, I tell you—— [The outer door is heard being closed] Damnation! I will not have it! They're all mad! Here—where's my hat?

He looks distractedly round him, wrenches open the door, and a moment later the street door heard to shut with a bang. Curtain.

ACT III

SCENE I

Ten o'clock the following morning, the study of the Mayor of Breco ridge, a panelled room with no wi dow visible, a door Left back and door Right forward. The entire ba wall is furnished with books fro floor to ceiling; the other walls a panelled and bare. Before the fi place, Left, are two armchairs, a other chairs are against the wal On the Right is a writing-bure at right angles to the footligh with a chair behind it. At its ba corner stands HARRIS, telephoni

HARRIS. What—[Pause] Well, it's fernally awkward, Sergeant. . . . T Mayor's in a regular stew. . . . [L tens] New constable? I should thi so! Young fool! Look here, Mart the only thing to do is to hear t charge here at once. I've sent for M Chantrey; he's on his way. Bring M Builder and the witnesses round sha See? And, I say, for God's sake ke it dark. Don't let the Press get on to Why you didn't let him go home— Black eye? The constable! Well, se him right. Blundering young ass! mean, it's undermining all author . . . Well, you oughtn't—at least, I Damn it all!—it's a nine days' wonde it gets out——! All right! As soon you can. [He hangs up the recei puts a second chair behind the bure and other chairs facing it. To hims Here's a mess! Johnny Builder, of men! What price Mayors!

The telephone rings.

HARRIS. Hallo? . . . Poaching char Well, bring him too; only, I say, k him back till the other's over. By way, Mr. Chantrey's going shoot He'll want to get off by eleven. Wh . . . Righto!

As he hangs up the receiver

MAYOR enters. He looks worried, and is still dressed with the indefinable wrongness of a burgher.

[AYOR. Well, 'Arris?

[ARRIS. They'll be over in five min-, Mr. Mayor.

[AYOR. Mr. Chantrey?

ARRIS. On his way, sir.

AYOR. I've had some awkward things eal with in my time, 'Arris, but this ist about the [Sniffs] limit.

ARRIS. Most uncomfortable, sir; : uncomfortable!

AYOR. Put a book on the chair, 'Ar- I like to sit 'igh.

HARRIS puts a volume of Encyclopedia on the MAYOR'S chair behind the bureau.

AYOR. [Deeply] Our fellow-magis- ! A family man! In my shoes next I suppose he won't be, now. You keep these things dark.

ARRIS. I've warned Martin, sir, to he utmost discretion. Here's Mr. trey.

By the door Left, a pleasant and comely gentleman has entered, dressed with indefinable rightness in shooting clothes.

AYOR. Ah. Chantrey!

ANTREY. How de do, Mr. Mayor? ding to HARRIS] This is extraordi- unpleasant.

The MAYOR nods.

ANTREY. What on earth's he been ?

ARRIS. Assaulting one of his own iters with a stick; and resisting olice.

ANTREY. [With a low whistle] ater! Charity begins at home.

ARRIS. There's a black eye.

YOR. Whose?

ARRIS. The constable's.

ANTREY. How did the police come ?

ARRIS. I don't know, sir. The worst is he's been at the police station our o'clock yesterday. The Super- ent's away, and Martin never will esponsibility.

ANTREY. By George! he will be John Builder's a choleric fellow.

YOR. [Nodding] He is. 'Ot tem- nd an 'igh sense of duty.

HARRIS. There's one other charge, Mr. Mayor—poaching. I told them to keep that back till after.

CHANTREY. Oh, well, we'll make short work of that. I want to get off by eleven, Harris. I shall be late for the first drive anyway. John Builder! I say, Mayor—but for the grace of God, there go we!

MAYOR. Harris, go out and bring them in yourself—don't let the servants——

HARRIS goes out Left.

The MAYOR takes the upper chair behind the bureau, sitting rather higher because of the book than CHANTREY, who takes the lower. Now that they are in the seats of justice, a sort of reticence falls on them, as if they were afraid of giving away their attitudes of mind to some unseen presence.

MAYOR. [Suddenly] H'm!

CHANTREY. Touch of frost. Birds ought to come well to the guns—no wind. I like these October days.

MAYOR. I think I 'ear them. H'm.

CHANTREY drops his eyeglass and puts on a pair of "grandfather" spectacles. The MAYOR clears his throat and takes up a pen. They neither of them look up as the door is opened and a little procession files in. First HARRIS; then RALPH BUILDER, ATHENE, HERRINGHAME, MAUD, MRS. BUILDER, SERGEANT MARTIN, carrying a heavy Malacca cane with a silver knob; JOHN BUILDER and the CONSTABLE MOON, a young man with one black eye. No funeral was ever attended by mutes so solemn and dejected. They stand in a sort of row.

MAYOR. [Without looking up] Sit down, ladies; sit down.

HARRIS and HERRINGHAME succeed in placing the three women in chairs. RALPH BUILDER also sits. HERRINGHAME stands behind. JOHN BUILDER remains standing between the TWO POLICEMEN. His face is unshaved and menacing, but he stands erect staring straight at the MAYOR. HARRIS goes to the side of the bureau, Back, to take down the evidence.

MAYOR. Charges!

SERGEANT. John Builder, of The Cornerways, Breconridge, Contractor and Justice of the Peace, charged with assaulting his daughter Maud Builder by striking her with a stick in the presence of Constable Moon and two other persons; also with resisting Constable Moon in the execution of his duty, and injuring his eye. Constable Moon!

MOON. [Stepping forward—one, two—like an automaton, and saluting] In River Road yesterday afternoon, Your Worship, about three-thirty p.m., I was attracted by a young woman callin' "Constable" outside a courtyard. On hearing the words "Follow me, quick," I followed her to a painter's studio inside the courtyard, where I found three persons in the act of disagreement. No sooner 'ad I appeared than the defendant, who was engaged in draggin' a woman towards the door, turns to the young woman who accompanied me, with violence. "You dare, Father," she says; whereupon he hit her twice with the stick the same which is produced, in the presence of myself and the two other persons, which I'm given to understand is his wife and other daughter.

MAYOR. Yes; never mind what you're given to understand.

MOON. No, sir. The party struck turns to me and says, "Come in. I give this man in charge for assault." I moves accordingly with the words: "I saw you. Come along with me." The defendant turns to me sharp and says: "You stupid lout—I'm a magistrate." "Come off it," I says to the best of my recollection. "You struck this woman in my presence," I says, "and you come along!" We were then at close quarters. The defendant gave me a push with the words "Get out, you idiot!" "Not at all," I replies, and took 'old of his arm. A struggle ensues, in the course of which I receives the black eve which I herewith produce.

[He touches his eye with awful solemnity.

The MAYOR clears his throat; CHANTREY'S eyes goggle; HARRI bends over and writes rapidly.

MOON. During the struggle, Yo Worship, a young man has appeared the scene, and at the instigation of t young woman, the same who was a saulted, assists me in securing the pri oner, whose language and resistance w violent in the extreme. We placed hi in a cab which we found outside, and conveyed him to the station.

CHANTREY. What was his—er—co duct in the—er—cab?

MOON. He sat quiet.

CHANTREY. That seems——

MOON. Seein' I had his further ar twisted behind him.

MAYOR. [Looking at BUILDER] A questions to ask him?

BUILDER makes not the faintest sig and the MAYOR drops his glan

MAYOR. Sergeant?

MOON steps back two paces, and t

SERGEANT steps two paces fo ward.

SERGEANT. At ten minutes to fo Your Worship, yesterday afterno Constable Moon brought the defend to the station in a four-wheeled c On his recounting the circumstances the assault, they were taken down a read over to the defendant with t usual warning. The defendant said not ing. In view of the double assault a the condition of the constable's eye, a in the absence of the Superintendent, thought it my duty to retain the defe dant for the night.

MAYOR. The defendant said nothin

SERGEANT. He 'as not opened his l to my knowledge, Your Worship, fr that hour to this.

MAYOR. Any questions to ask the S geant?

BUILDER continues to stare at MAYOR without a word.

MAYOR. Very well!

The MAYOR and CHANTREY consult each other inaudibly, the MAYOR nods.

MAYOR. Miss Maud Builder, will tell us what you know of this—er—currence?

MAUD. [Rising; with eyes turni here and there] Must I?

[AYOR. I'm afraid you must.
[AUD. [After a look at her father, never turns his eyes from the YOR'S face] I—I wish to withdraw charge of striking me, please. I—I er meant to make it. I was in a tem—I saw red.
[AYOR. I see. A—a domestic disagreet. Very well, that charge is withvn. You do not appear to have been , and that seems to me quite proper. r, tell me what you know of the ult on the constable. Is his account ect?
AUD. [Timidly] Ye-yes. Only——
AYOR. Yes? Tell us the truth.
AUD. [Resolutely] Only, I don't t my father hit the constable. I think stick did that.
AYOR. Oh, the stick? But—er—the was in 'is 'and, wasn't it?
AUD. Yes; but I mean, my father red, and the constable saw red, and stick flew up between them and hit in the eye.
ANTREY. And then he saw black?
AYOR. [With corrective severity] did 'e 'it 'im with the stick?
AUD. No-no. I don't think he did.
AYOR. Then who supplied the—er—entum?
AUD. I think there was a struggle he cane, and it flew up.
AYOR. Hand up the cane.
The SERGEANT hands up the cane. The MAYOR and CHANTREY examine it.
AYOR. Which end—do you suggest icted this injury?
UD. Oh! the knob end, sir.
YOR. What do you say to that, con-?
ON. [Stepping the mechanical two I don't deny there was a strug- our Worship, but it's my impres- was 'it.
ANTREY. Of course you were hit; n see that. But with the cane or the fist?
ON. [A little flurried] I—I—with t, sir.
YOR. Be careful. Will you swear to

ON. [With that sudden uncertainty comes over the most honest in such circumstances] Not—not so to speak in black and white, Your Worship; but that was my idea at the time.

MAYOR. You won't swear to it?

MOON. I'll swear he called me an idiot and a lout; the words made a deep impression on me.

CHANTREY. [To himself] Mort aux vaches!

MAYOR. Eh? That'll do, constable; stand back. Now, who else saw the struggle? Mrs. Builder. You're not obliged to say anything unless you like. That's your privilege as his wife.

While he is speaking the door has been opened, and HARRIS has gone swiftly to it, spoken to someone and returned. He leans forward to the MAYOR.

MAYOR. Eh? Wait a minute. Mrs. Builder, do you wish to give evidence?

MRS. BUILDER. [Rising] No, Mr. Mayor. [MRS. BUILDER sits.

MAYOR. Very good. [To HARRIS] Now then, what is it?

HARRIS says something in a low and concerned voice. The MAYOR'S face lengthens. He leans to his right and consults CHANTREY, who gives a faint and deprecating shrug. A moment's silence.

MAYOR. This is an open Court. The Press have the right to attend if they wish.

HARRIS goes to the door and admits a young man in glasses, of a pleasant C.3 appearance, and indicates to him a chair at the back. At this untimely happening BUILDER'S eyes have moved from side to side, but now he regains his intent and bull-like stare at his fellow-justices.

MAYOR. [To MAUD] You can sit down, Miss Builder.

MAUD resumes her seat.

MAYOR. Miss Athene Builder, you were present, I think?

ATHENE. [Rising] Yes, sir.

MAYOR. What do you say to this matter?

ATHENE. I didn't see anything very clearly, but I think my sister's account is correct, sir.

MAYOR. Is it your impression that the cane inflicted the injury?

ATHENE. [In a low voice] Yes.

MAYOR. With or without deliberate intent?

ATHENE. Oh! without.

BUILDER looks at her.

MAYOR. But you were not in a position to see very well?

ATHENE. No, sir.

MAYOR. Your sister having withdrawn her charge, we needn't go into that. Very good!

[He motions her to sit down.

ATHENE, turning her eyes on her father's impassive figure, sits.

MAYOR. Now, there was a young man. [Pointing to HERRINGHAME] Is this the young man?

MOON. Yes, Your Worship.

MAYOR. What's your name?

GUY. Guy Herringhame.

MAYOR. Address?

GUY. Er—the Aerodrome, sir.

MAYOR. Private, I mean?

The moment is one of considerable tension.

GUY. [With an effort] At the moment, sir, I haven't one. I've just left my diggings, and haven't yet got any others.

MAYOR. H'm! The Aerodrome. How did you come to be present?

GUY. I—er——

BUILDER'S eyes go round and rest on him for a moment.

GUY. It's in my sister's studio that Miss Athene Builder is at present working, sir. I just happened to—to turn up.

MAYOR. Did you appear on the scene, as the constable says, during the struggle?

GUY. Yes, sir.

MAYOR. Did he summon you to his aid?

GUY. Ye—— No, sir. Miss Maud Builder did that.

MAYOR. What do you say to this last blow?

GUY. [Jerking his chin up a little] Oh! I saw that clearly.

MAYOR. Well, let us hear.

GUY. The constable's arm struck the cane violently and it flew up and land him in the eye.

MAYOR. [With a little grunt] You a sure of that?

GUY. Quite sure, sir.

MAYOR. Did you hear any language

GUY. Nothing out of the ordina sir. One or two damns and blasts.

MAYOR. You call that ordinary?

GUY. Well, he's a—magistrate, sir.

The MAYOR utters a profound gru CHANTREY smiles. There is a lence. Then the MAYOR leans ov to CHANTREY for a short col quy.

CHANTREY. Did you witness any p ticular violence other than a resista to arrest?

GUY. No, sir.

MAYOR. [With a gesture of dismiss Very well. That seems to be the e dence. Defendant John Builder—wh do you say to all this?

BUILDER. [In a voice different fr any we have heard from him] Sa What business had he to touch me magistrate? I gave my daughter t taps with a cane in a private house, interfering with me for taking my w home——

MAYOR. That charge is not press and we can't go into the circumstan What do you wish to say about y conduct towards the constable?

BUILDER. [In his throat] Not a dar ed thing!

MAYOR. [Embarrassed] I—I did catch.

CHANTREY. Nothing—nothing, said, Mr. Mayor.

MAYOR. [Clearing his throat] I derstand, then, that you do not wish h'offer any explanation?

BUILDER. I consider myself abom ably treated, and I refuse to say anot word.

MAYOR. [Drily] Very good. Maud Builder.

MAUD stands up.

MAYOR. When you spoke of the fendant seeing red, what exactly you mean?

MAUD. I mean that my father w angry that he didn't know what he doing.

HANTREY. Would you say as angry

Walks out of the room. The JOURNALIST, grabbing his pad, starts up and follows. The BUILDERS rise and huddle, and, with HERRINGHAME, are ushered out by HARRIS.

MAYOR. [Pulling out a large handkerchief and wiping his forehead] My Aunt!

CHANTREY. These new constables, Mayor! I say, Builder'll have to go! Damn the Press, how they nose everything out! The Great Unpaid!—We shall get it again! [He suddenly goes off into a fit of laughter] "Come off it," I says, "to the best of my recollection." Oh! Oh! I shan't hit a bird all day! That poor devil Builder! It's no joke for him. You did it well, Mayor; you did it well. British justice is safe in your hands. He blacked the fellow's eye all right. "Which I herewith produce." Oh! my golly! It beats the band!

His uncontrollable laughter and the MAYOR'S rueful appreciation are exchanged with lightning rapidity for a preternatural solemnity, as the door opens, admitting SERGEANT MARTIN and the lugubrious object of their next attentions.

MAYOR. Charges.

SERGEANT steps forward to read the charge as

The curtain falls.

SCENE II

Noon the same day.

BUILDER'S study. TOPPING is standing by the open window, looking up and down the street. A newspaper boy's voice is heard calling the first edition of his wares. It approaches from the Right.

TOPPING. Here!

BOY'S VOICE. Right, guv'nor! Johnny Builder up before the beaks!

[A paper is pushed up.

TOPPING. [Extending a penny] What's that you're sayin'? You take care!

BOY'S VOICE. It'll all 'ere. Johnny Builder—beatin' his wife! Dischawged.

TOPPING. Stop it, you young limb!

BOY'S VOICE. 'Allo! What's the matter wiv you? Why, it's Johnny Builder's house! [Gives a cat-call] 'Ere, buy anuvver. 'E'll want to read about 'isself. [Appealing] Buy annuver, guv-'nor!

TOPPING. Move on!

[He retreats from the window, opening the paper.

BOY'S VOICE. [Receding] Payper! First edition! J.P. chawged! Payper!

TOPPING. [To himself as he reads] Crimes! Phew! That accounts for them bein' away all night.

While he is reading, CAMILLE enters from the hall.

TOPPING. Here! Have you seen this, Camel—in the Stop Press?

CAMILLE. No.

They read eagerly side by side.

TOPPING. [Finishing aloud] "Tried to prevent her father from forcing her mother to return home with him, and he struck her for so doing. She did not press the charge. The arrested gentleman, who said he acted under great provocation, was discharged with a caution." Well, I'm blowed! He has gone and done it!

CAMILLE. A black eye!

TOPPING. [Gazing at her] Have you had any hand in this? I've seen you making your lovely black eyes at him. You foreigners—you're a loose lot!

CAMILLE. You are drunk!

TOPPING. Not yet, my dear. [Reve ing to the paper; philosophically] W this little lot's bust up! The favouri will fall down. Johnny Builder! Wh have thought it?

CAMILLE. He is an obstinate man

TOPPING. Ah! He's right up agai it now. Comes of not knowin' when stop bein' firm. If you meet a wall w your 'ead, it's any odds on the w Camel. Though, if you listened to so you wouldn't think it. What'll he now, I wonder? Any news of the m tress?

CAMILLE. [Shaking her head] I h pack her tr-runks.

TOPPING. Why?

CAMILLE. Because she take her jew yesterday.

TOPPING. Deuce she did! They g erally leave 'em. Take back yer gi She throws the baubles at 'is [Again staring at her] You're a n one, you know!

There is the sound of a cab st ping.

TOPPING. Wonder if that's him!

MAUD. Is my father back, Topping

TOPPING. Not yet, Miss.

MAUD. I've come for mother's thi

CAMILLE. They are r-ready.

MAUD. [Eyeing her] Topping, them down, please.

TOPPING, after a look at them b goes out into the hall.

MAUD. Very clever of you to have them ready.

CAMILLE. I am clevare.

MAUD. [Almost to herself] Y father may, and he may not!

CAMILLE. Look! If you think I a designing woman, you are mistoo know when things are too 'ot. I am sorry to go.

MAUD. Oh! you are going?

CAMILLE. Yes, I am going. How I stay when there is no lady in 'ouse?

MAUD. Not even if you're asked

CAMILLE. Who will ask me?

MAUD. That we shall see.

AMILLE. Well, you will see I have pinion of my own.

AUD. Oh! yes, you're clear-headed gh.

MAUD regards her stolidly as she goes out into the dining-room, then takes up the paper and reads.

AUD. Horrible!

TOPPING re-enters from the hall.

PPING. I've got 'em on the cab, . I didn't put your ten bob on yes- y, because the animal finished last. can't depend on horses.

AUD. [Touching the newspaper] is a frightful business, Topping.

PPING. Ah! However did it happen, Maud?

UD. [Tapping the newspaper] It's ue. He came after my mother to Athene's, and I—I couldn't stand lid what it says here; and now I'm . Mother's dreadfully upset. You father as well as anyone, Top- what do you think he'll do now?

PING. [Sucking in his cheeks] you see, Miss, it's like this: Up v Mr. Builder's always had the re- of everybody——

LAUD moves her head impatiently.

PING. Outside his own house, of . Well, now he hasn't got it. ological ly that's bound to touch

UD. Of course; but which way? ie throw up the sponge, or try and it out here?

PING. He won't throw up the , Miss; more likely to squeeze it the back of their necks.

UD. He'll be asked to resign, of he NEWSPAPER BOY'S VOICE is heard again approaching: "First edition! Great sensation! Local magistrate before the Bench! Pay-per!"

UD. Oh, dear! I wish I hadn't! couldn't see mother being——

PING. Don't you fret, Miss; he'll hrough. His jaw's above his brow, might say.

UD. What?

PING. [Nodding] Phreenology, Miss. I rather follow that. When the jaw's big and the brow is small, it's a sign of character. I always think the master might have been a Scotchman, except for his fishionomy.

MAUD. A Scotsman?

TOPPING. So down on anything soft, Miss. Haven't you noticed whenever one of these 'Umanitarians writes to the papers, there's always a Scotchman after him next morning? Seems to be a fact of 'uman nature, like introducin' rabbits into a new country and then weasels to get rid of 'em. And then something to keep down the weasels. But I never can see what could keep down a Scotchman! You seem to reach the hapex there!

MAUD. Miss Athene was married this morning, Topping. We've just come from the Registrar's.

TOPPING. [Immovably] Indeed, Miss! I thought perhaps she was about to be.

MAUD. Oh!

TOPPING. Comin' events. I saw the shadder yesterday.

MAUD. Well, it's all right. She's coming on here with my uncle. [A cab is heard driving up] That's them, I expect. We all feel awful about father.

TOPPING. Ah! I shouldn't be surprised if he felt awful about you, Miss.

MAUD. [At the window] It is them.

TOPPING goes out into the hall; ATHENE and RALPH enter Right.

MAUD. Where's father, Uncle Ralph?

RALPH. With his solicitor.

ATHENE. We left Guy with mother at the studio. She still thinks she ought to come. She keeps on saying she must, now father's in a hole.

MAUD. I've got her things on the cab; she ought to be perfectly free to choose.

RALPH. You've got freedom on the brain, Maud.

MAUD. So would you, Uncle Ralph, if you had father about.

RALPH. I'm his partner, my dear.

MAUD. Yes; how do you manage him?

RALPH. I've never yet given him in charge.

ATHENE. What do you do, Uncle Ralph?

RALPH. Undermine him when I can.

MAUD. And when you can't?

RALPH. Undermine the other fellow. You can't go to those movie people now, Maud. They'd star you as the celebrated Maud Builder who gave her father into custody. Come to us instead, and have perfect freedom, till all this blows over.

MAUD. Oh! what will father be like now?

ATHENE. It's so queer you and he being brothers, Uncle Ralph.

RALPH. There are two sides to every coin, my dear. John's the head—and I'm the tail. He has the sterling qualities. Now, you girls have got to smooth him down, and make up to him. You've tried him pretty high.

MAUD. [Stubbornly] I never wanted him for a father, Uncle.

RALPH. They do wonderful things nowadays with inherited trouble. Come, are you going to be nice to him, both of you?

ATHENE. We're going to try.

RALPH. Good! I don't even now understand how it happened.

MAUD. When you went out with Guy, it wasn't three minutes before he came. Mother had just told us about—well, about something beastly. Father wanted us to go, and we agreed to go out for five minutes while he talked to mother. We went, and when we came back he told me to get a cab to take mother home. Poor mother stood there looking like a ghost, and he began hunting and hauling her towards the door. I saw red, and instead of a cab I fetched that policeman. Of course father did black his eye. Guy was splendid.

ATHENE. You gave him the lead.

MAUD. I couldn't help it, seeing father standing there all dumb.

ATHENE. It was awful! Uncle, why didn't you come back with Guy?

MAUD. Oh, yes! why didn't you, Uncle?

ATHENE. When Maud had gone for the cab, I warned him not to use force. I told him it was against the law, but he only said: "The law be damned!"

RALPH. Well, it all sounds pretty undignified.

MAUD. Yes; everybody saw red.

They have not seen the door opened from the hall, and BUILDER standing there. He is still unshaven, little sunken in the face, with glum, glowering expression. He has a document in his hand. He advances a step or two and they see him.

ATHENE AND MAUD. [Aghast] Father!

BUILDER. Ralph, oblige me! See the off the premises!

RALPH. Steady, John!

BUILDER. Go!

MAUD. [Proudly] All right! I thought you might like to know that Athene's married, and that I've given the movies. Now we'll go.

BUILDER turns his back on them and, sitting down at his writing table, writes.

After a moment's whispered conversation with their uncle, the girls go out.

RALPH BUILDER stands gazing with whimsical commiseration at brother's back. As BUILDER ishes writing, he goes up and his hand on his brother's shoul

RALPH. This is an awful jar, old man.

BUILDER. Here's what I've said to the fellow:—

"MR. MAYOR,—You had the effrontery to-day to discharge me with a contion—forsooth!—your fellow-magistrate. I've consulted my solicitor as to whether an action will lie for false imprisonment. I'm informed that it won't. I take the opportunity of saying that justice in this town is a travesty. I have no wish to be associated further with you or your fellows; but you are vastly mistaken if you imagine that I shall resign my position on the Bench or the Town Council.—Yours,

"JOHN BUILDER."

RALPH. I say—keep your sense of humour, old boy.

BUILDER. [Grimly] Humour? I've spent a night in a cell. See this! [He holds out the document] It disinherits my family.

RALPH. John!

BUILDER. I've done with those ladies. As to my wife—if she does come back——! When I suffer, I make others suffer.

ALPH. Julia's very upset, my dear w; we all are. The girls came here y and—— UILDER. [Rising] They may go to If that lousy Mayor thinks I'm with—he's mistaken! [He rings bell] I don't want any soft sawder. a fighter.

ALPH. [In a low voice] The enemy ls within the gate, old chap.

UILDER. What's that?

ALPH. Let's boss our own natures 'e we boss those of other people. e a sleep on it, John, before you do ning.

UILDER. Sleep? I hadn't a wink last . If you'd passed the night I had ALPH. I hadn't many myself.

TOPPING enters.

UILDER. Take this note to the Mayor my compliments, and don't bring an answer.

PPING. Very good, sir. There's a eman from the Comet in the hall, Would you see him for a minute, he

UILDER. Tell him to go to——

A voice says, "Mr. Builder!"

BUILDER turns to see the figure of the JOURNALIST in the hall doorway. TOPPING goes out.

URNALIST. [Advancing with his Mr. Builder, it's very good of you e me. I had the pleasure this morn- I mean—I tried to reach you when left the Mayor's. I thought you d probably have your own side of unfortunate matter. We shall be to give it every prominence.

TOPPING has withdrawn, and RALPH BUILDER, at the window, stands listening.

ILDER. [Drily, regarding the JOUR- ST, who has spoken in a pleasant olite voice] Very good of you!

URNALIST. Not at all, sir. We felt you would almost certainly have reasons of your own which would ne matter in quite a different light.

ILDER. Good reasons? I should so! I tell you—a very little more is liberty—licence I call it—and isn't a man who'll be able to call lf head of a family.

JOURNALIST. [Encouragingly] Quite!

BUILDER. If the law thinks it can back up revolt, it's damned well mistaken. I struck my daughter—I was in a passion, as you would have been.

JOURNALIST. [Encouraging] I'm sure ——

BUILDER. [Glaring at him] Well, I don't know that you would; you look a soft sort; but any man with any blood in him.

JOURNALIST. Can one ask what she was doing, sir? We couldn't get that point quite clear.

BUILDER. Doing? I just had my arm round my wife, trying to induce her to come home with me after a little family tiff, and this girl came at me. I lost my temper, and tapped her with my cane. And—that policeman brought by my own daughter—a policeman! If the law is going to enter private houses and abrogate domestic authority, where the hell shall we be?

JOURNALIST. [Encouraging] No, I'm sure—I'm sure!

BUILDER. The maudlin sentimentality in these days is absolutely rotting this country. A man can't be master in his own house, can't require his wife to fulfil her duties, can't attempt to control the conduct of his daughters, without coming up against it and incurring odium. A man can't control his employees; he can't put his foot down on rebellion anywhere, without a lot of humanitarians and licence-lovers howling at him!

JOURNALIST. Excellent, sir; excellent!

BUILDER. Excellent? It's damnable. Here am I—a man who's always tried to do his duty in private life and public—brought up before the Bench—my God! because I was doing that duty; with a little too much zeal, perhaps—I'm not an angel!

JOURNALIST. No! No! of course.

BUILDER. A proper Englishman never is. But there are no proper Englishmen nowadays.

[He crosses the room in his fervour.

RALPH. [Suddenly] As I look at faces ——

BUILDER. [Absorbed] What! I told this young man I wasn't an angel.

JOURNALIST. [Drawing him on] Yes, sir; I quite understand.

BUILDER. If the law thinks it can force me to be one of your weak-kneed sentimentalists who let everybody do what they like——

RALPH. There are a good many who stand on their rights left, John.

BUILDER. [Absorbed] What! How can men stand on their rights left?

JOURNALIST. I'm afraid you had a painful experience, sir.

BUILDER. Every kind of humiliation. I spent the night in a stinking cell. I haven't eaten since breakfast yesterday. Did they think I was going to eat the muck they shoved in? And all because in a moment of anger—which I regret, I regret!—I happened to strike my daughter, who was interfering between me and my wife. The thing would be funny if it weren't so disgusting. A man's house used to be sanctuary. What is it now? With all the world poking their noses in?

He stands before the fire with his head bent, excluding as it were his interviewer and all the world.

JOURNALIST. [Preparing to go] Thank you very much, Mr. Builder. I'm sure I can do you justice. Would you like to see a proof?

BUILDER. [Half conscious of him] What?

JOURNALIST. Or will you trust me?

BUILDER. I wouldn't trust you a yard.

JOURNALIST. [At the door] Very well, sir; you shall have a proof, I promise. Good afternoon, and thank you.

BUILDER. Here!

But he is gone, and BUILDER is left staring at his brother, on whose face is still that look of whimsical commiseration.

RALPH. Take a pull, old man! Have a hot bath and go to bed.

BUILDER. They've chosen to drive me to extremes, now let them take the consequences. I don't care a kick what anybody thinks.

RALPH. [Sadly] Well, I won't worry you any more, now.

BUILDER. [With a nasty laugh] N come again to-morrow!

RALPH. When you've had a sleep. F the sake of the family name, John, do be hasty.

BUILDER. Shut the stable door? I my boy, the horse has gone.

RALPH. Well, well!

With a lingering look at his bro er, who has sat down sullenly the writing-table, he goes out i the hall.

BUILDER remains staring in fr of him. The dining-room do opens, and CAMILLE'S head thrust in. Seeing him, she dro back, but he catches sight of h

BUILDER. Here!

CAMILLE comes doubtfully up the writing-table. Her forehe is puckered as if she were thi ing hard.

BUILDER. [Looking at her, unsmilin So you want to be my mistress, do yo

CAMILLE makes a nervous gestu

BUILDER. Well, you shall. Come he

CAMILLE. [Not moving] You f-frig en me.

BUILDER. I've paid a pretty price f you. But you'll make up for it; you a others.

CAMILLE. [Starting back] No; I do like you to-day! No!

BUILDER. Come along! [She is ju within reach and he seizes her arm] my married life I've put a curb on m self for the sake of respectability. I been a man of principle, my girl, as y saw yesterday. Well, they don't wa that! [He draws her close] You can on my knee now.

CAMILLE. [Shrinking] No; I do want to, to-day.

BUILDER. But you shall. They've ask for it!

CAMILLE. [With a supple movem slipping away from him] They? Wha all that? I don't want any trouble. I no; I am not taking any.

[She moves back towards the do

BUILDER utters a sardonic lau

CAMILLE. Oh! you are a danger man! No, no! Not for me! Good-b sare!

[She turns swiftly and goes

BUILDER again utters his glum laugh. And then, as he sits alone staring before him, perfect silence reigns in the room. Over the window-sill behind him a BOY'S face is seen to rise; it hangs there a moment with a grin spreading on it.

Y'S VOICE. [Sotto] Johnny Builder!

As BUILDER turns sharply, it vanishes.

Y'S VOICE. 'Oo beat 'is wife?

BUILDER rushes to the window.

Y'S VOICE. [More distant and a little intative] Johnny Builder!

ILDER. You little devil! If I catch I'll wring your blasted little neck!

Y'S VOICE. [A little distant] 'Oo ed the copper's eye?

BUILDER, in an ungovernable passion, seizes a small flower-pot from the sill and flings it with all his force. The sound of a crash.

Y'S VOICE. [Very distant] Ya-a-ah! ed!

BUILDER stands leaning out, face injected with blood, shaking his fist. e curtain falls for a few seconds.

ing the same day.

DER'S study is dim and neglected-ooking; the window is still open, hough it has become night. A street amp outside shines in, and the end f its rays fall on BUILDER asleep. He is sitting in a high chair at the reside end of the writing-table, ith his elbows on it, and his cheek esting on his hand. He is still unhaven, and his clothes unchanged. l BOY'S head appears above the vel of the window-sill, as if beaded and fastened there.

'S VOICE. [In a forceful whisper] y Builder!

BUILDER stirs uneasily. The BOY'S head vanishes. BUILDER, raising his other hand, makes a sweep before his face, as if to brush away a mosquito. He wakes. Takes in remembrance. and sits a moment staring gloomily before him. The door from the hall is opened and TOPPING comes in with a long envelope in his hand.

TOPPING. [Approaching] From the Comet, sir. Proof of your interview, sir; will you please revise, the messenger says; he wants to take it back at once.

BUILDER. [Taking it] All right. I'll ring.

TOPPING. Shall I close in, sir?

BUILDER. Not now.

TOPPING withdraws.

BUILDER turns up a standard lamp on the table, opens the envelope, and begins reading the galley slip. The signs of uneasiness and discomfort grow on him.

BUILDER. Did I say that? Muck! Muck! [He drops the proof, sits a moment moving his head and rubbing one hand uneasily on the surface of the table, then reaches out for the telephone receiver] Town, 245. [Pause] The Comet? John Builder. Give me the Editor. [Pause] That you, Mr. Editor? John Builder speaking. That interview. I've got the proof. It won't do. Scrap the whole thing, please. I don't want to say anything. [Pause] Yes. I know I said it all; I can't help that. [Pause] No; I've changed my mind. Scrap it, please. [Pause] No, I will not say anything. [Pause] You can say what you dam' well please. [Pause] I mean it; if you put a word into my mouth, I'll sue you for defamation of character. It's undignified muck. I'm tearing it up. Good night.

He replaces the receiver, and touches a bell; then, taking up the galley slip, he tears it viciously across into many pieces, and rams them into the envelope.

TOPPING enters.

BUILDER. Here, give this to the messenger—sharp, and tell him to run with it.

TOPPING. [Whose hand can feel the condition of the contents, with a certain surprise] Yes, sir. [He goes, with a look back from the door] The Mayor is here, sir. I don't know whether you would wish——

BUILDER, rising, takes a turn up and down the room.

BUILDER. Nor do I. Yes! I'll see him.

TOPPING goes out, and BUILDER stands over by the fender, with his head a little down.

TOPPING. [Re-entering] The Mayor, sir. [He retires up Left. The MAYOR is overcoated, and carries, of all things, a top hat. He reaches the centre of the room before he speaks.

MAYOR. [Embarrassed] Well, Builder?

BUILDER. Well?

MAYOR. Come! That caution of mine was quite parliamentary. I 'ad to save face, you know.

BUILDER. And what about my face?

MAYOR. Well, you—you made it difficult for me. 'Ang it all! Put yourself into my place!

BUILDER. [Grimly] I'd rather put you into mine, as it was last night.

MAYOR. Yes, yes! I know; but the Bench has got a name to keep up—must stand well in the people's eyes. As it is, I sailed very near the wind. Suppose we had an ordinary person up before us for striking a woman?

BUILDER. I didn't strike a woman—I struck my daughter.

MAYOR. Well, but she's not a child, you know. And you did resist the police, if no worse. Come! You'd have been the first to maintain British justice. Shake 'ands!

BUILDER. Is that what you came for?

MAYOR. [Taken aback] Why—yes; nobody can be more sorry than I——

BUILDER. Eye-wash! You came to beg me to resign.

MAYOR. Well, it's precious awkward, Builder. We all feel——

BUILDER. Save your powder, Mayor! I've slept on it since I wrote you that note. Take my resignations.

MAYOR. [In relieved embarrassment] That's right. We must face your position.

BUILDER. [With a touch of grim humour] I never yet met a man who couldn't face another man's position.

MAYOR. After all, what is it?

BUILDER. Splendid isolation. No wife, no daughters, no Councillorship, Magistracy, no future—[With a laugh not even a French maid. And why? Because I tried to exercise a little whole some family authority. That's the position you're facing, Mayor.

MAYOR. Dear, dear! You're devilish bitter, Builder. It's unfortunate, the publicity. But it'll all blow over; and you'll be back where you were. You've a good sound practical sense underneath your temper. [A pause] Come, now [A pause] Well, I'll say good night then.

BUILDER. You shall have them in writing tomorrow.

MAYOR. [With sincerity] Come Shake 'ands.

BUILDER, after a long look, holds out his hand. The two men exchange a grip. The MAYOR, turning abruptly, goes out.

BUILDER remains motionless for a minute, then resumes his seat at the side of the writing-table, leaning his head on his hands.

The BOY'S head is again seen rising above the level of the window sill, and another and another follows, till the three, as decapitated, heads are seen in a row.

BOYS' VOICES. [One after another in a whispered crescendo] Johnny Builder! Johnny Builder! Johnny Builder!

BUILDER rises, turns and stares at them. The THREE HEADS disappear, and a BOY'S voice cries shrilly: "Johnny Builder!" BUILDER moves towards the window voices are now crying in various pitches and keys: "Johnny Builder!" "Beatey Builder!" "Beat wife-er!" "Beatey Builder BUILDER stands quite motionless staring, with the street lamp lighting up a queer, rather pitiful defiance on his face. The voices swell. There comes a sudden sudden splash of water, and broken yells of dismay.

TOPPING'S VOICE. Scat! you you devils!

The sound of scuffling feet and long-drawn-out and distant "Miaou!"

BUILDER stirs, shuts the window, draws the curtains, goes to the armchair before the fireplace and sits down in it.

TOPPING enters with a little tray on which is a steaming jug of fluid, some biscuits and a glass. He comes stealthily up level with the chair. BUILDER stirs and looks up at him.

PPING. Excuse me, sir, you must ligested yesterday morning's break- by now—must live to eat, sir.

ILDER. All right. Put it down.

PPING. [Putting the tray down on ible and taking up BUILDER'S pipe] copped those young devils.

ILDER. You're a good fellow.

PPING. [Filling the pipe] You'll ex- me, sir; the Missis—has come sir——

BUILDER stares at him and TOPPING stops. He hands BUILDER the filled pipe and a box of matches.

LDER. [With a shiver] Light the Topping. I'm chilly.

While TOPPING lights the fire BUILDER puts the pipe in his mouth and applies a match to it. TOPPING, having lighted the fire, turns to go, gets as far as half way, then comes back level with the table and regards the silent brooding figure in the chair.

LDER. [Suddenly] Give me that on the table. No; the other one— 'ill.

OPPING takes up the Will and gives it to him.

PING. [With much hesitation] Exne, sir. It's pluck that gets 'em sir—begging your pardon.

BUILDER. has resumed his attitude and does not answer.

TOPPING. [In a voice just touched with feeling] Good night, sir.

BUILDER. [Without turning his head] Good night.

TOPPING has gone.

BUILDER sits drawing at his pipe between the firelight and the light from the standard lamp. He takes the pipe out of his mouth and a quiver passes over his face. With a half angry gesture he rubs the back of his hand across his eyes.

BUILDER. [To himself] Pluck! Pluck! His lips quiver again. He presses them hard together, puts his pipe back into his mouth, and, taking the Will, thrusts it into the newly-lighted fire and holds it there with a poker.

While he is doing this the door from the hall is opened quietly, and MRS. BUILDER enters without his hearing her. She has a work-bag in her hand. She moves slowly to the table, and stands looking at him. Then going up to the curtains she mechanically adjusts them, and still keeping her eyes on BUILDER, comes down to the table and pours out his usual glass of whisky toddy. BUILDER, who has become conscious of her presence, turns in his chair as she hands it to him. He sits a moment motionless, then takes it from her, and squeezes her hand. MRS. BUILDER goes silently to her usual chair below the fire, and taking out some knitting begins to knit. BUILDER makes an effort to speak, does not succeed, and sits drawing at his pipe.

The curtain falls.

NSOR. Hallo! Adela!

OF LADY A. [From her bedroom] !

NSOR. In bed?

OF LADY A. No.

he appears in the doorway in un-der-garment and a wrapper. She, too, is fair, about thirty-five, rath-er delicious, and suggestive of porcelain.

NSOR. Win at bridge?

Y A. No fear.

NSOR. Who did?

Y A. Lord St. Erth and Ferdy De

NSOR. That young man has too uck—the young bounder won two o-day; and he's as rich as Cœ-

LADY A. Oh! Charlie, he did look so exactly as if he'd sold me a carpet when I was paying him.

WINSOR. [Changing into slippers] His father did sell carpets, wholesale, in the City.

LADY A. Really? And you say I haven't intuition! [With a finger on her lips] Morison's in there.

WINSOR. [Motioning towards the door, which she shuts] Ronny Dancy took a tenner off him, anyway, before dinner.

LADY A. No! How?

WINSOR. Standing jump on to a book-case four feet high. De Levis had to pay up, and sneered at him for making money by parlour tricks. That young Jew gets himself disliked.

LADY A. Aren't you rather prejudiced?

WINSOR. Not a bit. I like Jews. That's not against him—rather the contrary these days. But he pushes himself. The General tells me he's deathly keen to get into the Jockey Club. [Taking off his tie] It's amusing to see him trying to get round old St. Erth.

LADY A. If Lord St. Erth and General Canynge backed him he'd get in if he did sell carpets!

WINSOR. He's got some pretty good horses. [Taking off his waistcoat] Ronny Dancy's on his bones again, I'm afraid. He had a bad day. When a chap takes to doing parlour stunts for a bet—it's a sure sign. What made him chuck the Army?

LADY A. He says it's too dull, now there's no fighting.

WINSOR. Well, he can't exist on backing losers.

LADY A. Isn't it just like him to get married now? He really is the most reckless person.

WINSOR. Yes. He's a queer chap. I've always liked him, but I've never quite made him out. What do you think of his wife?

LADY A. Nice child; awfully gone on him.

WINSOR. Is he?

LADY A. Quite indecently—both of them. [Nodding towards the wall, Left] They're next door.

WINSOR. Who's beyond them?

LADY A. De Levis; and Margaret Orme at the end. Charlie, do you realise that the bathroom out there has to wash those four?

WINSOR. I know.

LADY A. Your grandfather was crazy when he built this wing; six rooms in a row with balconies like an hotel, and only one bath—if we hadn't put ours in.

WINSOR. [Looking at his watch] Half-past eleven. [Yawns] Newmarket always makes me sleepy. You're keeping Morison up.

LADY ADELA goes to the door, blowing a kiss.

WINSOR goes up to his dressing-table and begins to brush his hair, sprinkling on essence. There is a knock on the corridor door.

WINSOR. Come in.

DE LEVIS enters, clad in pyjamas and flowered dressing-gown. He is a dark, good-looking, rather Eastern young man. His face is long and disturbed.

WINSOR. Hallo! De Levis! Anything I can do for you?

DE LEVIS. [In a voice whose faint exoticism is broken by a vexed excitement] I say, I'm awfully sorry, Winsor, but I thought I'd better tell you at once. I've just had—er—rather a lot of money stolen.

WINSOR. What! [There is something of outrage in his tone and glance, as who should say: "In my house?"] How do you mean stolen?

DE LEVIS. I put it under my pillow and went to have a bath; when I came back it was gone.

WINSOR. Good Lord! How much?

DE LEVIS. Nearly a thousand—nine hundred and seventy, I think.

WINSOR. Phew!

Again the faint tone of outrage, a man should have so much mo about him.

DE LEVIS. I sold my Rosemary to-day on the course to Kentman bookie, and he paid me in notes.

WINSOR. What? That weed Da gave you in the Spring?

DE LEVIS. Yes. But I tried her pr high the other day; and she's in Cambridgeshire. I was only out of room a quarter of an hour, and I loc my door.

WINSOR. [Again outraged] You l ed——

DE LEVIS. [Not seeing the fine sh Yes, and had the key here. [He taps pocket] Look here! [He holds o pocket-book] It's been stuffed with shaving papers.

WINSOR. [Between feeling that things don't happen, and a sense tha will have to clear it up] This is dan awkward, De Levis.

DE LEVIS. [With steel in his vo Yes. I should like it back.

WINSOR. Have you got the num of the notes?

DE LEVIS. No.

WINSOR. What were they?

DE LEVIS. One hundred, three fi and the rest tens and fives.

WINSOR. What d'you want me to

DE LEVIS. Unless there's anybody think——

WINSOR. [Eyeing him] Is it like

DE LEVIS. Then I think the p ought to see my room. It's a l money.

WINSOR. Good Lord! We're n Town; there'll be nobody nearer Newmarket at this time of night— miles.

The door from the bedroom is denly opened and LADY ADEL pears. She has on a lace cap her finished hair, and the wr LADY A. [Closing the door] W it? Are you ill, Mr. De Levis?

WINSOR. Worse; he's had a money stolen. Nearly a thousand p

LADY A. Gracious! Where?

DE LEVIS. From under my Lady Adela—my door was lock was in the bathroom.

ADY A. But how fearfully thrilling!
/INSOR. Thrilling! What's to be e? He wants it back.
ADY A. Of course! [With sudden isation] Oh! But—— Oh! it's quite unpleasant!
/INSOR. Yes! What am I to do!
ch the servants out of their rooms?
rch the grounds? It'll make the devil scandal.
E LEVIS. Who's next to me?
ADY A. [Coldly] Oh! Mr. De Levis!
/INSOR. Next to you? The Dancys his side, and Miss Orme on the other.
at's that to do with it?
E LEVIS. They may have heard ething.
'INSOR. Let's get them. But Dancy downstairs when I came up. Get ison, Adela! No. Look here! When this exactly? Let's have as many s as we can.
E LEVIS. Within the last twenty min-certainly.
'INSOR. How long has Morison been
ith you?
ADY A. I came up at eleven, and rang ier at once.
INSOR. [Looking at his watch] Half

E LEVIS. [Stung by the faint con- t in his tone of voice] Yes, I do.
INSOR. Then, look here, dear! Slip my study and telephone to the po-at Newmarket. There'll be somethere; they're sure to have drunks.
ave Treisure up, and speak to him.
[He rings the bell.
LADY ADELA goes out into her room
and closes the door.
INSOR. Look here, De Levis! This an hotel. It's the sort of thing that 'n't happen in a decent house. Are sure you're not mistaken, and didn't them stolen on the course?
E LEVIS. Absolutely. I counted them just before putting them under my pillow; then I locked the door and had the key here. There's only one door, you know.

WINSOR. How was your window?

DE LEVIS. Open.

WINSOR. [Drawing back the curtains of his own window] You've got a balcony like this. Any sign of a ladder or anything?

DE LEVIS. No.

WINSOR. It must have been done from the window, unless someone had a skeleton key. Who knew you'd got that money? Where did Kentman pay you?

DE LEVIS. Just round the corner in the further paddock.

WINSOR. Anybody about?

DE LEVIS. Oh, yes!

WINSOR. Suspicious?

DE LEVIS. I didn't notice anything.

WINSOR. You must have been marked down and followed here.

DE LEVIS. How would they know my room?

WINSOR. Might have got it somehow. [A knock from the corridor] Come in.

TREISURE, the Butler, appears, a silent, grave man of almost supernatural conformity. DE LEVIS gives him a quick, hard look, noted and resented by WINSOR.

TREISURE. [To WINSOR] Yes, sir?

WINSOR. Who valets Mr. De Levis?

TREISURE. Robert, sir.

WINSOR. When was he up last?

TREISURE. In the ordinary course of things, about ten o'clock, sir.

WINSOR. When did he go to bed?

TREISURE. I dismissed at eleven.

WINSOR. But did he go?

TREISURE. To the best of my knowledge. Is there anything I can do, sir?

WINSOR. [Disregarding a sign from DE LEVIS] Look here, Treisure, Mr. De Levis has had a large sum of money taken from his bedroom within the last half hour.

TREISURE. Indeed, sir!

WINSOR. Robert's quite all right, isn't he?

TREISURE. He is, sir.

DE LEVIS. How do you know?

TREISURE'S eyes rest on DE LEVIS.

TREISURE. I am a pretty good judge of character, sir, if you'll excuse me.

WINSOR. Look here, De Levis, eighty or ninety notes must have been pretty bulky. You didn't have them on you at dinner?

DE LEVIS. No.

WINSOR. Where did you put them?

DE LEVIS. In a boot, and the boot in my suitcase, and locked it.

TREISURE smiles faintly.

WINSOR. [Again slightly outraged by such precautions in his house] And you found it locked—and took them from there to put under your pillow?

DE LEVIS. Yes.

WINSOR. Run your mind over things, Treisure—has any stranger been about?

TREISURE. No, sir.

WINSOR. This seems to have happened between 11.15 and 11.30. Is that right?

DE LEVIS nods.

WINSOR. Any noise—anything outside—anything suspicious anywhere?

TREISURE. [Running his mind—very still] No, sir.

WINSOR. What time did you shut up?

TREISURE. I should say about eleven-fifteen, sir. As soon as Major Colford and Captain Dancy had finished billiards. What was Mr. De Levis doing out of his room, if I may ask, sir.

WINSOR. Having a bath; with his room locked and the key in his pocket.

TREISURE. Thank you, sir.

DE LEVIS. [Conscious of indefinable suspicion] Damn it! What do you mean? I was.

TREISURE. I beg your pardon, sir.

WINSOR. [Concealing a smile] Look here, Treisure, it's infernally awkward for everybody.

TREISURE. It is, sir.

WINSOR. What do you suggest?

TREISURE. The proper thing, sir, I suppose, would be a cordon and a complete search—in our interests.

WINSOR. I entirely refuse to suspect anybody.

TREISURE. But if Mr. De Levis feels otherwise, sir?

DE LEVIS. [Stammering] I? All I know is—the money was there, and it's gone.

WINSOR. [Compunctious] Quite! pretty sickening for you. But so i for anybody else. However, we mus our best to get it back for you.

A knock on the door.

WINSOR. Hallo!

TREISURE opens the door, and G ERAL CANYNGE enters.

WINSOR. Oh! It's you, General. C in. Adela's told you?

GENERAL CANYNGE nods. He slim man of about sixty, very preserved, intensely neat and contained, and still in eve dress. His eyelids droop slig but his eyes are keen and hi pression astute.

WINSOR. Well, General, what's first move?

CANYNGE. [Lifting his eyebrows] De Levis presses the matter?

DE LEVIS. [Flicked again] Unless think it's too plebeian of me, Ge Canynge—a thousand pounds.

CANYNGE. [Drily] Just so! The must wait for the police, Winsor. Adela has got through to them. height are these rooms from the gr Treisure?

TREISURE. Twenty-three feet fro terrace, sir.

CANYNGE. Any ladders near?

TREISURE. One in the stables, sir, heavy. No others within three hu yards.

CANYNGE. Just slip down, an whether that's been moved.

TREISURE. Very good, General.

[He goe

DE LEVIS. [Uneasily] Of course I suppose you——

WINSOR. We do.

CANYNGE. You had better lea in our hands, De Levis.

DE LEVIS. Certainly; only, th he——

WINSOR. [Curtly] Treisure ha here since he was a boy. I sho soon suspect myself.

DE LEVIS. [Looking from one other—with sudden anger] Yo to think——! What was I to do it lying down and let whoever it clear off? I suppose it's natural t my money back?

'ANYNGE looks at his nails; WIN-SOR out of the window.
NSOR. [Turning] Of course, De
!
LEVIS. [Sullenly] Well, I'll go to om. When the police come, perhaps let me know. [He goes out.
NSOR. Phew! Did you ever see a dressing-gown?
he door is opened. LADY ADELA and MARGARET ORME come in.
The latter is a vivid young lady of about twenty-five in a vivid wrapper; she is smoking a cigarette.
DY A. I've told the Dancys—she
1 bed. And I got through to Newt, Charles, and Inspector Dede ning like the wind on a motor

RGARET. Did he say "like the wind,"
? He must have imagination. Isn't orgeous? Poor little Ferdy!
NSOR. [Vexed] You might take it sly, Margaret; it's pretty beastly
3 all. What time did you come

RGARET. I came up with Adela. Am ected, Charles? How thrilling!
NSOR. Did you hear anything?
RGARET. Only little Ferdy splash-

NSOR. And saw nothing?
RGARET. Not even that, alas!
DY A. [With a finger held up]
' Un peu leste! Oh! Here are the
'S. Come in, you two!
[ABEL and RONALD DANCY enter.
She is a pretty young woman with bobbed hair, fortunately, for she has just got out of bed, and is in her nightgown and a wrapper.
DANCY is in his smoking-jacket.
He has a pale, determined face with high cheekbones, small, deep-set dark eyes, reddish crisp hair, and looks like a horseman.
NSOR. Awfully sorry to disturb Irs. Dancy; but I suppose you and r haven't heard anything. De s room is just beyond Ronny's ng-room, you know.
BEL. I've been asleep nearly half ur, and Ronny's only just come

CANYNGE. Did you happen to look out of your window, Mrs. Dancy?

MABEL. Yes. I stood there quite five minutes.

CANYNGE. When?

MABEL. Just about eleven, I should think. It was raining hard then.

CANYNGE. Yes, it's just stopped. You saw nothing?

MABEL. No.

DANCY. What time does he say the money was taken?

WINSOR. Between the quarter and half past. He'd locked his door and had the key with him.

MARGARET. How quaint! Just like an hotel. Does he put his boots out?

LADY A. Don't be so naughty, Meg.

CANYNGE. When exactly did you come up, Dancy?

DANCY. About ten minutes ago. I'd only just got into my dressing-room before Lady Adela came. I've been writing letters in the hall since Colford and I finished billiards.

CANYNGE. You weren't up for anything in between?

DANCY. No.

MARGARET. The mystery of the grey room.

DANCY. Oughtn't the grounds to be searched for footmarks?

CANYNGE. That's for the police.

DANCY. The deuce! Are they coming?

CANYNGE. Directly. [A knock] Yes?

TREISURE enters.

CANYNGE. Well?

TREISURE. The ladder has not been moved, General. There isn't a sign.

WINSOR. All right. Get Robert up, but don't say anything to him. By the way, we're expecting the police.

TREISURE. I trust they will not find a mare's nest, sir, if I may say so.

[He goes.

WINSOR. De Levis has got wrong with Treisure. [Suddenly] But, I say, what would any of us have done if we'd been in his shoes?

MARGARET. A thousand pounds? I can't even conceive having it.

DANCY. We probably shouldn't have found it out.

LADY A. No—but if we had?

DANCY. Come to you—as he did.

WINSOR. Yes; but there's a way of doing things.

CANYNGE. We shouldn't have wanted the police.

MARGARET. No. That's it. The hotel touch.

LADY A. Poor young man; I think we're rather hard on him.

WINSOR. He sold that weed you gave him, Dancy, to Kentman, the bookie, and these were the proceeds.

DANCY. Oh!

WINSOR. He tried her high, he said.

DANCY. [Grimly] He would.

MABEL. Oh! Ronny, what bad luck!

WINSOR. He must have been followed here. [At the window] After rain like that, there ought to be footmarks.

The splutter of a motor cycle is heard.

MARGARET. Here's the wind!

WINSOR. What's the move now, General?

CANYNGE. You and I had better see the Inspector in De Levis's room, Winsor. [To the others] If you'll all be handy, in case he wants to put questions for himself.

MARGARET. I hope he'll want me; it's just too thrilling.

DANCY. I hope he won't want me; I'm dog-tired. Come on, Mabel. [He puts his arm in his wife's.

CANYNGE. Just a minute, Charles.

He draws close to WINSOR as the others are departing to their rooms.

WINSOR. Yes, General?

CANYNGE. We must be careful with this Inspector fellow. If he pitches hastily on somebody in the house it'll be very disagreeable.

WINSOR. By Jove! It will!

CANYNGE. We don't want to rouse any ridiculous suspicion.

WINSOR. Quite. [A knock] Come in!

TREISURE enters.

TREISURE. Inspector Dede, sir.

WINSOR. Show him in.

TREISURE. Robert is in readiness, sir; but I could swear he knows nothing about it.

WINSOR. All right.

TREISURE re-opens the door, and says: "Come in, please." The SPECTOR enters, blue, fo moustachioed, with a peaked in his hand.

WINSOR. Good evening, Insp Sorry to have brought you out at time of night.

INSPECTOR. Good evenin', sir. Winsor? You're the owner he think?

WINSOR. Yes. General Canynge.

INSPECTOR. Good evenin', Gener understand, a large sum of mone WINSOR. Yes. Shall we go straig the room it was taken from? One guests, Mr. De Levis. It's the third on the left.

CANYNGE. We've not been in yet, Inspector; in fact, we've done ing, except to find out that the ladder has not been moved. We h even searched the grounds.

INSPECTOR. Right, sir; I've brou man with me.

They go out.

SPECTOR. [Finishing a note] Now, this is the room as you left it for bath, just show us exactly what did after takin' the pocketbook the suit-case. Where was that, by ay?

LEVIS. [Pointing] Where it is -under the dressing-table.

He comes forward to the front of the chair, opens the pocket-book, goes through the pretence of counting his shaving papers, closes the pocket-book, takes it to the head of the bed and slips it under the pillow. Makes the motion of taking up his pyjamas, crosses below the INSPECTOR to the washstand, takes up a bath sponge, crosses to the door, takes out the key, opens the door.

PECTOR. [Writing] We now have om as it was when the theft was itted. Reconstruct accordin' to nature, gentlemen—assumin' the to be in the room, what would first?—the clothes, the dressin'- the suit-case, the chest of draw- nd last the bed.

He moves accordingly, examining the glass of the dressing-table, the surface of the suit-cases, and the handles of the drawers, with a spy-glass, for finger-marks.

TYNGE. [Sotto voce to WINSOR] rder would have been just the way.

The INSPECTOR goes on hands and knees and examines the carpet between the window and the bed.

LEVIS. Can I come in again?

PECTOR. [Standing up] Did you the window, sir, or was it open you first came in?

LEVIS. I opened it.

PECTOR. Drawin' the curtains back

LEVIS. Yes.

PECTOR. [Sharply] Are you sure was nobody in the room al- ?

LEVIS. [Taken aback] I don't know. I never thought. I didn't look under the bed, if you mean that.

INSPECTOR. [Jotting] Did not look under bed. Did you look under it after the theft?

DE LEVIS. No. I didn't.

INSPECTOR. Ah! Now, what did you do after you came back from your bath? Just give us that precisely.

DE LEVIS. Locked the door and left the key in. Put back my sponge, and took off my dressing-gown and put it there. [He points to the footrails of the bed] Then I drew the curtains, again.

INSPECTOR. Shutting the window?

DE LEVIS. No. I got into bed, felt for my watch to see the time. My hand struck the pocket-book, and somehow it felt thinner. I took it out, looked into it, and found the notes gone, and these shaving papers instead.

INSPECTOR. Let me have a look at those, sir. [He applies the spy-glasses] And then?

DE LEVIS. I think I just sat on the bed.

INSPECTOR. Thinkin' and cursin' a bit, I suppose. Ye-es?

DE LEVIS. Then I put on my dressing-gown and went straight to Mr. Winsor.

INSPECTOR. Not lockin' the door?

DE LEVIS. No.

INSPECTOR. Exactly. [With a certain finality] Now, sir, what time did you come up?

DE LEVIS. About eleven.

INSPECTOR. Precise, if you can give it me.

DE LEVIS. Well, I know it was eleven-fifteen when I put my watch under my pillow, before I went to the bath, and I suppose I'd been about a quarter of an hour undressing. I should say after eleven, if anything.

INSPECTOR. Just undressin'? Didn't look over your bettin' book?

DE LEVIS. No.

INSPECTOR. No prayers or anything?

DE LEVIS. No.

INSPECTOR. Pretty slippy with your undressin' as a rule?

DE LEVIS. Yes. Say five past eleven.

INSPECTOR. Mr. Winsor, what time did the gentleman come to you?

WINSOR. Half-past eleven.

INSPECTOR. How do you fix that, sir?

WINSOR. I'd just looked at the time, and told my wife to send her maid off.

INSPECTOR. Then we've got it fixed between 11.15 and 11.30. [Jots] Now, sir, before we go further I'd like to see your butler and the footman that valets this gentleman.

WINSOR. [With distaste] Very well, Inspector; only—my butler has been with us from a boy.

INSPECTOR. Quite so. This is just clearing the ground, sir.

WINSOR. General, d'you mind touching that bell?

CANYNGE rings a bell by the bed.

INSPECTOR. Well, gentlemen, there are four possibilities. Either the thief was here all the time, waiting under the bed, and slipped out after this gentleman had gone to Mr. Winsor. Or he came in with a key that fits the lock; and I'll want to see all the keys in the house. Or he came in with a skeleton key and out by the window, probably droppin' from the balcony. Or he came in by the window with a rope or ladder and out the same way. [Pointing] There's a footmark here from a big boot which has been out of doors since it rained.

CANYNGE. Inspector—you er—walked up to the window when you first came into the room.

INSPECTOR. [Stiffly] I had not overlooked that, General.

CANYNGE. Of course.

A knock on the door relieves a certain tension.

WINSOR. Come in.

The footman ROBERT, a fresh-faced young man, enters, followed by TREISURE.

INSPECTOR. You valet Mr.—Mr. De Levis, I think?

ROBERT. Yes, sir.

INSPECTOR. At what time did you take his clothes and boots?

ROBERT. Ten o'clock, sir.

INSPECTOR. [With a pounce] Did you happen to look under his bed?

ROBERT. No, sir.

INSPECTOR. Did you come up again, to bring the clothes back?

ROBERT. No, sir; they're still downstairs.

INSPECTOR. Did you come up a for anything?

ROBERT. No, sir.

INSPECTOR. What time did you g bed?

ROBERT. Just after eleven, sir.

INSPECTOR. [Scrutinising him] be careful. Did you go to bed at al

ROBERT. No, sir.

INSPECTOR. Then why did you you did? There's been a theft here anything you say may be used ag you.

ROBERT. Yes, sir. I meant, I we my room.

INSPECTOR. Where is your roon

ROBERT. On the ground floor, a other end of the right wing, sir.

WINSOR. It's the extreme end o house from this, Inspector. He's the other two footmen.

INSPECTOR. Were you there alo

ROBERT. No, sir. Thomas and Fr ick was there too.

TREISURE. That's right; I've them.

INSPECTOR. [Holding up his ha silence] Were you out of the room after you went in?

ROBERT. No, sir.

INSPECTOR. What were you do you didn't go to bed?

ROBERT. [To WINSOR] Beggin' pardon, sir, we were playin' bridge

INSPECTOR. Very good. You ca I'll see them later on.

ROBERT. Yes, sir. They'll say the as me.

He goes out, leaving a smile face of all except the INS and DE LEVIS.

SPECTOR. Did you look for it?
BERT. No, sir; I meant to draw his tion to it in the morning.
SPECTOR. Very good.
BERT. Yes, sir. [He goes again.
SPECTOR. [Looking at DE LEVIS] , sir, there's your story corrobor-

LEVIS. [Stiffly] I don't know it should need corroboration, In- or.
SPECTOR. In my experience, you can have too much of that. [To WIN- I understand there's a lady in the on this side [pointing Left] and a man on this [pointing Right]. they in their rooms?
NSOR. Miss Orme was; Captain y was not.
SPECTOR. Do they know of the af-

NSOR. Yes.
SPECTOR. Well, I'd just like the keys eir doors for a minute. My man et them.
He goes to the door, opens it, and speaks to a constable in the corridor.
SPECTOR. [To TREISURE] You can go him.
SPECTOR. In the meantime I'll just ine the balcony.
He goes out on the balcony, followed by DE LEVIS.
NSOR. [To CANYNGE] Damn De and his money! It's deuced invidi- ll this, General.
NYNGE. The Inspector's no earth-

There is a simultaneous re-entry of the INSPECTOR from the balcony and of TREISURE and the CONSTABLE from the corridor.
NSTABLE. [Handing key] Room on ft, sir. [Handing key] Room on ght, sir.
The INSPECTOR tries the keys in the door, watched with tension by the others. The keys fail.
PECTOR. Put them back.

Hands keys to CONSTABLE, who goes out, followed by TREISURE.
INSPECTOR. I'll have to try every key in the house, sir.
WINSOR. Inspector, do you really think it necessary to disturb the whole house and knock up all my guests? It's most disagreeable, all this, you know. The loss of the money is not such a great matter. Mr. De Levis has a very large income.
CANYNGE. You could get the numbers of the notes from Kentman the bookmaker, Inspector; he'll probably have the big ones, anyway.
INSPECTOR. [Shaking his head] A bookie. I don't suppose he will, sir. It's come and go with them, all the time.
WINSOR. We don't want a Meldon Court scandal, Inspector.
INSPECTOR. Well, Mr. Winsor, I've formed my theory.
As he speaks, DE LEVIS comes in from the balcony.
INSPECTOR. And I don't say to try the keys is necessary to it; but strictly, I ought to exhaust the possibilities.
WINSOR. What do you say, De Levis? D'you want everybody in the house knocked up so that their keys can be tried?
DE LEVIS. [Whose face, since his return, expresses a curious excitement] No, I don't.
INSPECTOR. Very well, gentlemen. In my opinion the thief walked in before the door was locked, probably during dinner; and was under the bed. He escaped by dropping from the balcony—the creeper at that corner [he points stage Left] has been violently wrenched. I'll go down now, and examine the grounds, and I'll see you again, sir. [He makes another entry in his notebook] Good night, then, gentlemen!
CANYNGE. Good night!
WINSOR. [With relief] I'll come with you, Inspector.
[He escorts him to the door, and they go out.
DE LEVIS. [Suddenly] General, I know who took them!
CANYNGE. The deuce you do! Are you following the Inspector's theory?
DE LEVIS. [Contemptuously] That

ass! [Pulling the shaving papers out of the case] No! The man who put those there was clever and cool enough to wrench that creeper off the balcony, as a blind. Come and look here, General. [He goes to the window; the GENERAL follows. DE LEVIS points stage Right] See the rail of my balcony, and the rail of the next? [He holds up the cords of his dressing-gown, stretching his arms out] I've measured it with this. Just over seven feet, that's all! If a man can take a standing jump on to a narrow book-case four feet high and balance there, he'd make nothing of that. And, look here! [He goes out on the balcony and returns with a bit of broken creeper in his hand, and holds it out into the light] Someone's stood on that—the stalk's crushed—the inner corner too, where he'd naturally stand when he took his jump back.

CANYNGE. [After examining it—stiffly] That other balcony is young Dancy's, Mr. De Levis; a soldier and a gentleman. This is an extraordinary insinuation.

DE LEVIS. Accusation.

CANYNGE. What!

DE LEVIS. I have intuitions, General; it's in my blood. I see the whole thing. Dancy came up, watched me into the bathroom, tried my door, slipped back into his dressing-room, saw my window was open, took that jump, sneaked the notes, filled the case up with these, wrenched the creeper there [He points stage Left] for a blind, jumped back, and slipped downstairs again. It didn't take him four minutes altogether.

CANYNGE. [Very gravely] This is outrageous, De Levis. Dancy says he was downstairs all the time. You must either withdraw unreservedly, or I must confront you with him.

DE LEVIS. If he'll return the notes and apologise, I'll do nothing—except cut him in future. He gave me that filly, you know, as a hopeless weed, and he's been pretty sick ever since, that he was such a flat as not to see how good she was. Besides, he's hard up, I know.

CANYNGE. [After a vexed turn up and down the room] It's mad, sir, to jump to conclusions like this.

DE LEVIS. Not so mad as the co sion Dancy jumped to when he lig on my balcony.

CANYNGE. Nobody could have t this money who did not know you it.

DE LEVIS. How do you know tha didn't?

CANYNGE. Do you know that did?

DE LEVIS. I haven't the least dou it.

CANYNGE. Without any proof. is very ugly, De Levis. I must tell sor.

DE LEVIS. [Angrily] Tell the w blooming lot. You think I've no fe but I've felt the atmosphere here, I tell you, General. If I were in Da shoes and he in mine, your tone t would be very different.

CANYNGE. [Suavely frigid] I'm aware of using any tone, as you c But this is a private house, Mr Levis, and something is due to our and to the esprit de corps that among gentlemen.

DE LEVIS. Since when is a th gentleman? Thick as thieves—a motto, isn't it?

CANYNGE. That's enough! [He to the door, but stops before openi Now, look here! I have some know of the world. Once an accusatio this passes beyond these walls n can foresee the consequences. C Dancy is a gallant fellow, with record as a soldier; and only just ried. If he's as innocent as—Ch mud will stick to him, unless th thief is found. LEVIS. Not so far as I shall go, al Canynge, if those notes aren't back.

VINSOR comes in.

NSOR. Well, De Levis, I'm afraid all we can do for the present. So sorry this should have happened house.

NYNGE. [After a silence] There's a pment, Winsor. Mr. De Levis ac- one of your guests.

NSOR. What?

NYNGE. Of jumping from his bal- o this, taking the notes, and jump- ck. I've done my best to dissuade om indulging the fancy—without s. Dancy must be told.

LEVIS. You can deal with Dancy r own way. All I want is the mon- k.

NYNGE. [Drily] Mr. De Levis feels e is only valued for his money, so t is essential for him to have it NSOR. Damn it! This is mon- , De Levis. I've known Ronald since he was a boy.

NYNGE. You talk about adding in- o insult, De Levis. What do you tch treatment of a man who gave e mare out of which you made ousand pounds?

LEVIS. I didn't want the mare; I er as a favour.

NYNGE. With an eye to possibilities, ure to think—the principle guides many transactions.

LEVIS. [As if flicked on a raw In my race, do you mean?

NYNGE. [Coldly] I said nothing of rt.

LEVIS. No; you don't say these any of you.

NYNGE. Nor did I think it.

LEVIS. Dancy does.

NSOR. Really, De Levis, if this is y you repay hospitality——

LEVIS. Hospitality that skins my s and costs me a thousand !

CANYNGE. Go and get Dancy, Winsor; but don't say anything to him.

WINSOR goes out.

CANYNGE. Perhaps you will kindly control yourself, and leave this to me.

DE LEVIS turns to the window and lights a cigarette. WINSOR comes back, followed by DANCY.

CANYNGE. For Winsor's sake, Dancy, we don't want any scandal or fuss about this affair. We've tried to make the police understand that. To my mind the whole thing turns on our finding who knew that De Levis had this money. It's about that we want to consult you.

WINSOR. Kentman paid De Levis round the corner in the further paddock, he says.

DE LEVIS turns round from the window, so that he and DANCY are staring at each other.

CANYNGE. Did you hear anything that throws light, Dancy? As it was your filly originally, we thought perhaps you might.

DANCY. I? No.

CANYNGE. Didn't hear of the sale on the course at all?

DANCY. No.

CANYNGE. Then you can't suggest anyone who could have known? Nothing else was taken, you see.

DANCY. De Levis is known to be rolling, as I am known to be stony.

CANYNGE. There are a good many people still rolling, besides Mr. De Levis, but not many people with so large a sum in their pocket-books.

DANCY. He won two races.

DE LEVIS. Do you suggest that I bet in ready money?

DANCY. I don't know how you bet, and I don't care.

CANYNGE. You can't help us, then?

DANCY. No. I can't. Anything else?

[He looks fixedly at DE LEVIS.

CANYNGE. [Putting his hand on DANCY'S arm] Nothing else, thank you, Dancy.

DANCY goes. CANYNGE puts his hand up to his face. A moment's silence.

WINSOR. You see, De Levis? He didn't even know you'd got the money.

DE LEVIS. Very conclusive.

WINSOR. Well! You are——

There is a knock on the door, and the INSPECTOR enters.

INSPECTOR. I'm just going, gentlemen. The grounds, I'm sorry to say, have yielded nothing. It's a bit of a puzzle.

CANYNGE. You've searched thoroughly?

INSPECTOR. We have, General. I can pick up nothing near the terrace.

WINSOR. [After a look at DE LEVIS, whose face expresses too much] H'm! You'll take it up from the other end, then, Inspector?

INSPECTOR. Well, we'll see what we can do with the bookmakers about the numbers, sir. Before I go, gentlemen—you've had time to think it over—there's no one you suspect in the house, I suppose?

DE LEVIS'S face is alive and uncertain. CANYNGE is staring at him very fixedly.

WINSOR. [Emphatically] No.

DE LEVIS turns and goes out on to the balcony.

INSPECTOR. If you're coming in to the racing, to-morrow, sir, you might give us a call. I'll have seen Kentman by then.

WINSOR. Right you are, Inspector. Good night, and many thanks.

INSPECTOR. You're welcome, sir.

[He goes out.

WINSOR. Gosh! I thought that chap [With a nod towards the balcony] was going to——! Look here, General, we must stop his tongue. Imagine it going the rounds. They may never find the real thief, you know. It's the very devil for Dancy.

CANYNGE. Winsor! Dancy's sleeve was damp.

WINSOR. How d'you mean?

CANYNGE. Quite damp. It's been raining.

The two look at each other.

WINSOR. I—I don't follow——

His voice is hesitative and lower, showing that he does.

CANYNGE. It was coming down hard; a minute out in it would have been enough——

[He motions with his chin towards the balcony.

WINSOR. [Hastily] He must have out on his balcony since.

CANYNGE. It stopped before I up, half an hour ago.

noon, three weeks later, in the card-oom of a London Club. A fire is urning, Left. A door, Right, leads o the billiard-room. Rather Left of Centre, at a card-table, LORD ST. ERTH, an old John Bull, sits facing he audience; to his right is GEN-RAL CANYNGE, to his left AUGUSTUS BORRING, an essential Club-nan, about thirty-five years old, with a very slight and rather be-oming stammer or click in his peech. The fourth bridge player, HARLES WINSOR, stands with his ack to the fire.
RRING. And the r-rub.
NSOR. By George! You do hold . Borring.
ERTH. [Who has lost] Not a on the old whist—this game. Don't why I play it—never did.
NYNGE. St. Erth, shall we raise the or whist again?
NSOR. No go, General. You can't go on pace. No getting a man to walk he knows he can fly. The young won't look at it.
RRING. Better develop it so that can sit out, General.
ERTH. We ought to have stuck to d game. Wish I'd gone to New-t, Canynge, in spite of the weather.
NYNGE. [Looking at his watch] hear what's won the Cambridge-Ring, won't you, Winsor?
WINSOR rings.
ST. ERTH. By the way, Canynge, young De Levis was blackballed.
CANYNGE. What!
ST. ERTH. I looked in on my way down.
CANYNGE sits very still, and WINSOR utters a disturbed sound.
BORRING. But of c-course he was, General. What did you expect?
A FOOTMAN enters.
FOOTMAN. Yes, my Lord?
ST. ERTH. What won the Cambridgeshire?
FOOTMAN. Rosemary, my lord. Sherbet second; Barbizon third. Nine to one the winner.
WINSOR. Thank you. That's all.
FOOTMAN goes.
BORRING. Rosemary! And De Levis sold her! But he got a good p-price, I suppose.
The other three look at him.
ST. ERTH. Many a slip between price and pocket, young man.
CANYNGE. Cut! [They cut.
BORRING. I say, is that the yarn that's going round about his having had a lot of m-money stolen in a country house? By Jove! He'll be pretty s-sick.
WINSOR. You and I, Borring.
He sits down in CANYNGE'S chair, and the GENERAL takes his place by the fire.
BORRING. Phew! Won't Dancy be mad! He gave that filly away to save her keep. He was rather pleased to find somebody who'd take her. Kentman must have won a p-pot. She was at thirty-threes a fortnight ago.
ST. ERTH. All the money goes to fellows who don't know a horse from a haystack.
CANYNGE. [Profoundly] And care less. Yes! We want men racing to whom a horse means something.
BORRING. I thought the horse m-meant the same to everyone, General—chance to get the b-better of one's neighbour.
CANYNGE. [With feeling] The horse is a noble animal, sir, as you'd know if you'd owed your life to them as often as I have.
BORRING. They always try to take mine, General. I shall never belong to the noble f-fellowship of the horse.

ST. ERTH. [Drily] Evidently. Deal!

As BORRING begins to deal the door is opened and MAJOR COLFORD appears—a lean and moustached cavalryman.

BORRING. Hallo, C-Colford.

COLFORD. General!

Something in the tone of his voice brings them all to a standstill.

COLFORD. I want your advice. Young De Levis in there [He points to the billiard-room from which he has just come] has started a blasphemous story——

CANYNGE. One moment. Mr. Borring, d'you mind——

COLFORD. It makes no odds, General. Four of us in there heard him. He's saying it was Ronald Dancy robbed him down at Winsor's. The fellow's mad over losing the price of that filly now she's won the Cambridgeshire.

BORRING. [All ears] Dancy! Great S-Scott!

COLFORD. Dancy's in the Club. If he hadn't been I'd have taken it on myself to wring the bounder's neck.

WINSOR and BORRING have risen.

ST. ERTH alone remains seated.

CANYNGE. [After consulting ST. ERTH with a look] Ask De Levis to be good enough to come in here. Borring, you might see that Dancy doesn't leave the Club. We shall want him. Don't say anything to him, and use your tact to keep people off.

BORRING goes out, followed by COLFORD.

WINSOR. Result of hearing he was blackballed—pretty slippy.

CANYNGE. St. Erth, I told you there was good reason when I asked you to back young De Levis. Winsor and I knew of this insinuation; I wanted to keep his tongue quiet. It's just wild assertion; to have it bandied about was unfair to Dancy. The duel used to keep people's tongues in order.

ST. ERTH. H'm! It never settled anything, except who could shoot straightest.

COLFORD. [Re-appearing] De Levis says he's nothing to add to what he said to you before, on the subject.

CANYNGE. Kindly tell him that if wishes to remain a member of this C he must account to the Committee such a charge against a fellow-mem Four of us are here, and form a quor

CANYNGE. What!

DE LEVIS. Well, I shall tell people you and Lord St. Erth backed m for one Club, and asked me to r from another.

INSOR. Well—if he did?

: Levis. Dancy told you he didn't of it in General Canynge's pres- and mine. [To Canynge] You deny that, if you want to.

NYNGE. Choose your expressions nicely, please!

Levis. Proof! Did they find any iarks in the grounds below that creeper? Not a sign! You saw how n jump; he won ten pounds from iat same evening betting on what iew was a certainty. That's your y—a common sharper!

Erth. [To himself] This Club has s had a decent, quiet name.

NSOR. Are you going to retract, pologise in front of Dancy and embers who heard you?

Levis. No fear!

Erth. You must be a very rich sir. A jury is likely to take the that money can hardly compen- or an accusation of that sort.

E Levis stands silent.

YNGE. Courts of law require proof.

Erth. He can make it a criminal

NSOR. Unless you stop this at once, you may find yourself in prison. If you can stop it, that is.

St. Erth. If I were young Dancy, nothing should induce me.

De Levis. But you didn't steal my money, Lord St. Erth.

St. Erth. You're deuced positive, sir. So far as I could understand it, there were a dozen ways you could have been robbed. It seems to me you value other men's reputations very lightly.

De Levis. Confront me with Dancy and give me fair play.

Winsor. [Aside to Canynge] Is it fair to Dancy not to let him know?

Canynge. Our duty is to the Club now, Winsor. We must have this cleared up.

Colford comes in, followed by Borring and Dancy.

St. Erth. Captain Dancy, a serious accusation has been made against you by this gentleman in the presence of several members of the Club.

Dancy. What is it?

St. Erth. That you robbed him of that money at Winsor's.

Dancy. [Hard and tense] Indeed! On what grounds is he good enough to say that?

De Levis. [Tense too] You gave me that filly to save yourself her keep, and you've been mad about it ever since; you knew from Goole that I had sold her to Kentman and been paid in cash, yet I heard you myself deny that you knew it. You had the next room to me, and you can jump like a cat, as we saw that evening; I found some creepers crushed by a weight on my balcony on that side. When I went to the bath your door was open, and when I came back it was shut.

Canynge. That's the first we have heard about the door.

De Levis. I remembered it afterwards.

St. Erth. Well, Dancy?

Dancy. [With intense deliberation] I'll settle this matter with any weapons, when and where he likes.

St. Erth. [Drily] It can't be settled that way—you know very well. You must take it to the Courts, unless he retracts.

Dancy. Will you retract?

De Levis. Why did you tell General

Canynge you didn't know Kentman had paid me in cash?

DANCY. Because I didn't.

DE LEVIS. Then Kentman and Goole lied—for no reason?

DANCY. That's nothing to do with me.

DE LEVIS. If you were downstairs all the time, as you say, why was your door first open and then shut?

DANCY. Being downstairs, how should I know? The wind, probably.

DE LEVIS. I should like to hear what your wife says about it.

DANCY. Leave my wife alone, you damned Jew!

ST. ERTH. Captain Dancy!

DE LEVIS. [White with rage] Thief!

DANCY. Will you fight?

DE LEVIS. You're very smart—dead men tell no tales. No! Bring your action, and we shall see.

DANCY takes a step towards him, but CANYNGE and WINSOR interpose.

ST. ERTH. That'll do, Mr. De Levis; we won't keep you. [He looks round] Kindly consider your membership suspended till this matter has been threshed out.

DE LEVIS. [Tremulous with anger] Don't trouble yourselves about my membership. I resign it. [To DANCY] You called me a damned Jew. My race was old when you were all savages. I am proud to be a Jew. Au revoir, in the Courts.

[He goes out, and silence follows his departure.

ST. ERTH. Well, Captain Dancy?

DANCY. If the brute won't fight, what am I to do, sir?

ST. ERTH. We've told you—take action, to clear your name.

DANCY. Colford, you saw me in the hall writing letters after our game.

COLFORD. Certainly I did; you were there when I went to the smoking-room.

CANYNGE. How long after you left the billiard-room?

COLFORD. About five minutes.

DANCY. It's impossible for me to prove that I was there all the time.

CANYNGE. It's for De Levis to prove what he asserts. You heard what he said about Goole?

DANCY. If he told me, I didn't it in.

ST. ERTH. This concerns the ho of the Club. Are you going to take tion?

DANCY. [Slowly] That is a very pensive business, Lord St. Erth, I'm hard up. I must think it over. looks round from face to face] Am take it that there is a doubt in minds, gentlemen?

COLFORD. [Emphatically] No.

CANYNGE. That's not the ques Dancy. This accusation was overh by various members, and we repre the Club. If you don't take action, ment will naturally go by default.

DANCY. I might prefer to look o whole thing as beneath contempt.

MABEL. But it's monstrous!

MARGARET. Of course! [She lights a cigarette and hands the case to MABEL, who, however, sees nothing but her own thoughts] De Levis might just as well have pitched on me, except that I can't jump more than six inches in these skirts.

MABEL. It's wicked! Yesterday afternoon at the Club, did you say? Ronny hasn't said a word to me. Why?

MARGARET. [With a long puff of smoke] Doesn't want you bothered.

MABEL. But—— Good heavens!—— Me!

MARGARET. Haven't you found out, Mabel, that he isn't exactly communicative? No desperate character is.

MABEL. Ronny?

MARGARET. Gracious! Wives are at a disadvantage, especially early on. You've never hunted with him, my dear. I have. He takes more sudden decisions than any man I ever knew. He's taking one now, I'll bet.

MABEL. That beast, De Levis! I was in our room next door all the time.

MARGARET. Was the door into Ronny's dressing-room open?

MABEL. I don't know; I—I think it was.

MARGARET. Well, you can say so in Court anyway. Not that it matters. Wives are liars by law.

MABEL. [Staring down at her] What do you mean—Court?

MARGARET. My dear, he'll have to bring an action for defamation of character, or whatever they call it.

MABEL. Were they talking of this last night at the Winsors'?

MARGARET. Well, you know a dinner-table, Mabel—Scandal is heaven-sent at this time of year.

MABEL. It's terrible, such a thing—terrible!

MA GARET. [Gloomily] If only Ronny weren't known to be so broke.

MABEL. [With her hands to her forehead] I can't realise—I simply can't. If there's a case would it be all right afterwards?

MARGARET. Do you remember St. Offert—cards? No, you wouldn't—you were in high frocks. Well, St. Offert got damages, but he also got the hoof, underneath. He lives in Ireland. There isn't the slightest connection, so far as I can see, Mabel, between innocence and reputation. Look at me!

MABEL. We'll fight it tooth and nail!

MARGARET. Mabel, you're pure wool, right through; everybody's sorry for you.

MABEL. It's for him they ought——

MARGARET. [Again handing the cigarette case] Do smoke, old thing.

MABEL takes a cigarette this time, but does not light it.

MARGARET. It isn't altogether simple. General Canynge was there last night. You don't mind my being beastly frank, do you?

MABEL. No, I want it.

MARGARET. Well, he's all for esprit de corps and that. But he was awfully silent.

MABEL. I hate half-hearted friends. Loyalty comes before everything.

MARGARET. Ye-es; but loyalties cut up against each other sometimes, you know.

MABEL. I must see Ronny. D'you mind if I go and try to get him on the telephone?

MARGARET. Rather not.

MABEL goes out by the door Left.

MARGARET. Poor kid!

She curls herself into a corner of the sofa, as if trying to get away from life. The bell rings. MARGARET stirs, gets up, and goes out into the corridor, where she opens the door to LADY ADELA WINSOR, whom she precedes into the sitting-room.

MARGARET. Enter the second murderer! D'you know that child knew nothing?

LADY A. Where is she?

MARGARET. Telephoning. Adela, if there's going to be an action, we shall be witnesses. I shall wear black georgette with an écru hat. Have you given evidence?

LADY A. Never.

MARGARET. It must be too frightfully thrilling.

LADY A. Oh! Why did I ever meet that wretch De Levis? I used to think him pathetic. Meg—did you know—Ronald Dancy's coat was wet? The General happened to feel it.

MARGARET. So that's why he was silent.

LADY A. Yes; and after the scene at the Club yesterday he went to see the bookmakers, and Goole—what a name—is sure he told Dancy about the MARGARET. [Suddenly] I don't care. He's my third cousin. Don't you feel couldn't, Adela?

LADY A. Couldn't—what?

LADY A. That's very narrow, Meg.

MARGARET. Oh! I know lots of splendid Jews, and I rather liked little Fenella; but when it comes to the point—They all stick together; why should we? It's in the blood. Open your jugular and see if you haven't got it.

LADY A. My dear, my great grandmother was a Jewess. I'm very proud of her.

MARGARET. Inoculated. [Stretching herself] Prejudices, Adela—or are they loyalites—I don't know—criss-cross—all cut each other's throats from the point of motives.

LADY A. Oh! I shall remember that! Delightful! [Holding up a finger] I've got it from Bergson, Meg. Isn't he wonderful?

MARGARET. Yes; have you ever met him?

LADY A. Well—No. [Looking at the bedroom door] That poor child! I quite agree. I shall tell everybody it's ridiculous. You don't really think Ronald Dancy——?

MARGARET. I don't know, Adela. There are people who simply can't live without danger. I'm rather like that myself. They're all right when they're getting the D.S.O. or shooting man-eaters, but if there's no excitement going, they make it—out of sheer craving. I've ıy Dancy do the maddest things for ıortal reason except the risk. He's a past, you know.

ADY A. Oh! Do tell!
ARGARET. He did splendidly in the
of course, because it suited him;
-just before—don't you remember—
-y queer bit of riding?
ADY A. No.
ARGARET. Most dare-devil thing—ıot quite. You must remember—it awfully talked about. And then, of ıe, right up to his marriage——
[She lights a cigarette.
DY A. Meg, you're very tantalising!
ARGARET. A foreign-looking girl—plummy. Oh! Ronny's got charm ɜ Mabel child doesn't know in the what she's got hold of!
DY A. But they're so fond of each
!
.RGARET. That's the mistake. The :al isn't mentioning the coat, is he?
DY A. Oh, no! It was only to es.
MABEL returns.
.RGARET. Did you get him?
.BEL. No; he's not at Tattersall's,
t the Club.
.ADY ADELA rises and greets her with an air which suggests bereavement.
DY A. Nobody's going to believe my dear.
BEL. [Looking straight at her] No-who does need come here, or
.e to speak to us again.
DY A. That's what I was afraid of; going to be defiant. Now don't!
)e perfectly natural.
-BEL. So easy, isn't it? I could kill dy who believes such a thing.
.RGARET. You'll want a solicitor,
., Go to old Mr. Jacob Twisden.
DY A. Yes; he's so comforting.
RGARET. He got my pearls back -without loss of life. A frightfully fireside manner. Do get him here,
, and have a heart-to-heart talk,
ree of you!
BEL. [Suddenly] Listen! There's
!
ANCY comes in.
NCY. [With a smile] Very good
ı to have come.

MARGARET. Yes. We're just going. Oh! Ronny, this is quite too——

But his face dries her up; and sidling past, she goes.

LADY A. Charles sent his—love——

[Her voice dwindles on the word, and she, too, goes.

DANCY. [Crossing to his wife] What have they been saying?

MABEL. Ronny! Why didn't you tell me?

DANCY. I wanted to see De Levis again first.

MABEL. That wretch! How dare he? Darling! [She suddenly clasps and kisses him. He does not return the kiss, but remains rigid in her arms, so that she draws away and looks at him] It's hurt you awfully, I know.

DANCY. Look here, Mabel! Apart from that muck—this is a ghastly tame-cat sort of life. Let's cut it and get out to Nairobi. I can scare up the money for that.

MABEL. [Aghast] But how can we? Everybody would say——

DANCY. Let them! We shan't be here.

MABEL. I couldn't bear people to think ——

DANCY. I don't care a damn what people think—monkeys and cats. I never could stand their rotten menagerie. Besides, what does it matter how I act; if I bring an action and get damages—if I pound him to a jelly—it's all no good! I can't prove it. There'll be plenty of people unconvinced.

MABEL. But they'll find the real thief.

DANCY. [With a queer little smile] Will staying here help them to do that?

MABEL. [In a sort of agony] Oh! I couldn't—it looks like running away. We Must stay and fight it!

DANCY. Suppose I didn't get a verdict—you never can tell.

MABEL. But you must—I was there all the time, with the door open.

DANCY. Was it?

MABEL. I'm almost sure.

DANCY. Yes. But you're my wife.

MABEL. [Bewildered] Ronny, I don't understand—suppose I'd been accused of stealing pearls!

DANCY. [Wincing] I can't.

MABEL. But I might—just as easily.

What would you think of me if I ran away from it?

DANCY. I see. [A pause] All right! You shall have a run for your money. I'll go and see old Twisden.

MABEL. Let me come!

DANCY shakes his head.

MABEL. Why not? I can't be happy a moment unless I'm fighting this.

DANCY puts out his hand suddenly and grips hers.

DANCY. You are a little brick!

MABEL. [Pressing his hand to her breast and looking into his face] Do you know what Margaret called you?

RONNY. No.

MABEL. A desperate character.

DANCY. Ha! I'm not a tame cat, any more than she.

The bell rings. MABEL goes out to the door and her voice is heard saying coldly.

MABEL. Will you wait a minute, please? [Returning] It's De Levis—to see you. [In a low voice] Let me see him alone first. Just for a minute! Do!

DANCY. [After a moment's silence] Go ahead!

[He goes out into the bedroom.

MABEL. [Going to the door, Right] Come in.

DE LEVIS comes in, and stands embarrassed.

MABEL. Yes?

DE LEVIS. [With a slight bow] Your husband, Mrs. Dancy?

MABEL. He is in. Why do you want to see him?

DE LEVIS. He came round to my rooms just now, when I was out. He threatened me yesterday. I don't choose him to suppose I'm afraid of him.

MABEL. [With a great and manifest effort at self-control] Mr. De Levis, you are robbing my husband of his good name.

DE LEVIS. [Sincerely] I admire your trustfulness, Mrs. Dancy.

MABEL. [Staring at him] How can you do it? What do you want? What's your motive? You can't possibly believe that my husband is a thief!

DE LEVIS. Unfortunately.

MABEL. How dare you? How dare you? Don't you know that I was in our bedroom all the time with the d open? Do you accuse me too?

DE LEVIS. No, Mrs. Dancy.

MABEL. But you do. I must have s I must have heard.

DE LEVIS. A wife's memory is very good when her husband is in d ger.

MABEL. In other words, I'm lyin

DE LEVIS. No. Your wish is mo to your thought, that's all.

MABEL. [After staring again wi sort of horror, turns to get contro herself. Then turning back to him] De Levis, I appeal to you as a gentle to behave to us as you would we sh behave to you. Withdraw this wi charge, and write an apology that l ald can show.

DE LEVIS. Mrs. Dancy, I am n gentleman, I am only a—damned Yesterday I might possibly have w drawn to spare you. But when my ra insulted—! I have nothing to sa your husband, but as he wishes to see I've come. Please let him know.

MABEL. [Regarding him again that look of horror—slowly] I t what you are doing is too horrible words.

DE LEVIS gives her a slight and as he does so DANCY c quickly in, Left. The two stand with the length of the between them. MABEL, behin sofa, turns her eyes on her band, who has a paper in his hand.

DE LEVIS. You came to see me.

DANCY. Yes. I want you to this.

DE LEVIS. I will sign nothing.

DANCY. Let me read it: "I apol to Captain Dancy for the reckless monstrous charge I made against and I retract every word of it."

DE LEVIS. Not much!

DANCY. You will sign.

DE LEVIS. I tell you this is usel will sign nothing. The charge is you wouldn't be playing this gam weren't. I'm going. You'll hardl violence in the presence of your and if you try it anywhere else out for yourself.

ANCY. Mabel. I want to speak to alone.

ABEL. No, no!

E LEVIS. Quite right, Mrs. Dancy. k and tan swashbuckling will only e things worse for him.

ANCY. So you shelter behind a wom- lo you, you skulking cur!

DE LEVIS takes a step, with fists clenched and eyes blazing. DANCY, too, stands ready to spring—the moment is cut short by MABEL going quickly to her husband.

ABEL. Don't, Ronny. It's undigni- He isn't worth it.

DANCY suddenly tears the paper in two, and flings it into the fire.

ANCY. Get out of here, you swine!

DE LEVIS stands a moment irresolute, then, turning to the door, he opens it, stands again for a moment with a smile on his face, then goes. MABEL crosses swiftly to the door, and shuts it as the outer door closes. Then she stands quite still, looking at her husband—her face expressing a sort of startled suspense.

ANCY. [Turning and looking at her] ! Do you agree with him?

ABEL. What do you mean?

ANCY. That I wouldn't be playing game unless——

ABEL. Don't! You hurt me!

ANCY. Yes. You don't know much , Mabel.

ABEL. Ronny!

ANCY. What did you say to that ?

ABEL. [Her face averted] That he obbing us. [Turning to him sud-] Ronny—you—didn't? I'd rather

ANCY. Ha! I thought that was com-

ABEL. [Covering her face] Oh! How ble of me—how horrible!

ANCY. Not at all. The thing looks

ABEL. [Dropping her hands] If I believe in you, who can? [Going n, throwing her arms round him, oking up into his face] Ronny! If e world—I'd believe in you. You I would.

DANCY. That's all right, Mabs! That's all right! [His face, above her head, is contorted for a moment, then hardens into a mask] Well, what shall we do?

MABEL. Oh! Let's go to that lawyer —let's go at once!

DANCY. All right. Get your hat on.

MABEL passes him, and goes into the bedroom, Left. DANCY, left alone, stands quite still, staring before him. With a sudden shrug of his shoulders he moves quickly to his hat and takes it up just as MABEL returns, ready to go out. He opens the door; and crossing him she stops in the doorway, looking up with a clear and trustful gaze as

The curtain falls.

ACT III

SCENE I

YOUNG CLERK. [Entering] A Mr. Gilman, sir, to see Mr. Twisden.

GRAVITER. By appointment?

YOUNG CLERK. No, sir. But important, he says.

GRAVITER. I'll see him.

The CLERK goes.

GRAVITER sits right of table. The CLERK returns, ushering in an oldish MAN, who looks what he is, the proprietor of a large modern grocery store. He wears a dark overcoat and carries a pot hat. His gingery-grey moustache and mutton-chop whiskers give him the expression of a cat.

GRAVITER. [Sizing up his social standing] Mr. Gilman? Yes.

GILMAN. [Doubtfully] Mr. Jacob Twisden?

GRAVITER. [Smiling] His partner. Graviter my name is.

GILMAN. Mr. Twisden's not in, then?

GRAVITER. No. He's at the Courts. They're just up; he should be in directly. But he'll be busy.

GILMAN. Old Mr. Jacob Twisden—I've heard of him.

GRAVITER. Most people have.

A pause.

GILMAN. It's this Dancy De Levis case that's keepin' him at the Courts, I suppose?

GRAVITER nods.

GILMAN. Won't be finished for a day or two?

GRAVITER shakes his head.

GILMAN. No. Astonishin' the interest taken in it.

GRAVITER. As you say.

GILMAN. The Smart Set, eh? This Captain Dancy got the D.S.O., didn't he?

GRAVITER nods.

GILMAN. Sad to have a thing like that said about you. I thought he gave his evidence well; and his wife too. Looks as if this De Levis had got some private spite. Searchy la femme, I said to Mrs. Gilman only this morning, before I—— GRAVITER. By the way, sir, what is your business?

GILMAN. Well, my business here—— No, if you'll excuse me, I'd rather wait and see old Mr. Jacob Twisden. It's delicate, and I'd like his experience.

GRAVITER. [With a shrug] Very well; then, perhaps, you'll go in there.

[He moves towards the door, Left Back.

GILMAN. Thank you. [Followi

was that?

GRAVITER. Ask him, sir; ask him.

GILMAN. I said to my wife at time, "He's holdin' out for a barc cy."

GRAVITER closes the door with exasperated smile.

YOUNG CLERK. [Opening the d

Miss Orme.

They enter, and the CLERK draws.

GRAVITER. How d'you do, Miss Or
How do you do, Winsor?

WINSOR. Twisden not back, Grav

GRAVITER. Not yet.

WINSOR. Well, they've got thr
De Levis's witnesses. Sir Frederic at the very top of his form. It's loo quite well. But I hear they've just pœnaed Canynge after all. His evi is to be taken to-morrow.

GRAVITER. Oho!

WINSOR. I said Dancy ought to called him.

GRAVITER. We considered it. Sir eric decided that we could use him ter in cross-examination.

WINSOR. Well! I don't know
Can I go and see him before he

GRAVITER. I should like to hea
Jacob on that, Winsor. He'll be rectly.

WINSOR. They had Kentman
Goole, the Inspector, the other footman, Dancy's banker, and his

AVITER. Did we shake Kentman or e?

INSOR. Very little. Oh! by the way, numbers of those two notes were

RGARET. Just a whiff.

[She lights a cigarette.

NSOR. [Suddenly] It's becoming a quite outside the evidence.

RGARET. There are more of the ave you noticed the two on the RGARET. Oh; but quite distinctly.

you think they ought to have been

AVITER. De Levis might have chal-
the other ten, Miss Orme.

RGARET. Dear me, now! I never it of that.

s she speaks, the door Left Forward is opened and old MR. JACOB TWISDEN comes in. He is tallish and narrow, sixty-eight years old, grey, with narrow little whiskers curling round his narrow ears, and a narrow bow ribbon curling round his collar. He wears a long, narrow-tailed coat, and strapped trousers on his narrow legs. His nose and face are narrow, shrewd, and kindly. He has a way of narrowing his shrewd and kindly eyes. His nose is seen to twitch and sniff.

TWISDEN. Ah! How are you, Charles? How do you do, my dear?

MARGARET. Dear Mr. Jacob, I'm smoking. Isn't it disgusting? But they don't allow it in Court, you know. Such a pity! The Judge might have a hookah. Oh! wouldn't he look sweet—the darling!

TWISDEN. [With a little, old-fashioned bow] It does not become everybody as it becomes you, Margaret.

MARGARET. Mr. Jacob, how charming!

With a slight grimace she puts out her cigarette.

GRAVITER. Man called Gilman waiting in there to see you specially.

TWISDEN. Directly. Turn up the light, would you, Graviter?

GRAVITER. [Turning up the light] Excuse me. [He goes.

WINSOR. Look here, Mr. Twisden——

TWISDEN. Sit down; sit down, my dear.

And he himself sits behind the table, as a cup of tea is brought in to him by the YOUNG CLERK, with two Marie biscuits in the saucer.

TWISDEN. Will you have some, Margaret?

MARGARET. No, dear Mr. Jacob.

TWISDEN. Charles?

WINSOR. No, thanks.

The door is closed.

TWISDEN. [Dipping a biscuit in the tea] Now, then?

WINSOR. The General knows something which on the face of it looks rather queer. Now that he's going to be called, oughtn't Dancy to be told of it, so that he may be ready with his explanation, in case it comes out?

TWISDEN. [Pouring some tea into the saucer] Without knowing, I can't tell you.

WINSOR and MARGARET exchange looks, and TWISDEN drinks from the saucer.

MARGARET. Tell him, Charles.

WINSOR. Well! It rained that evening at Meldon. The General happened to put his hand on Dancy's shoulder, and it was damp.

TWISDEN puts the saucer down and replaces the cup in it. They both look intently at him.

TWISDEN. I take it that General Canynge won't say anything he's not compelled to say.

MARGARET. No, of course; but, Mr. Jacob, they might ask; they know it rained. And he is such a George Washington.

TWISDEN. [Toying with a pair of tortoise-shell glasses] They didn't ask either of you. Still—no harm in your telling Dancy.

WINSOR. I'd rather you did it, Margaret.

MARGARET. I daresay.

She mechanically takes out her cigarette case, catches the lift of TWISDEN'S eyebrows, and puts it back.

WINSOR. Well, we'll go together. I don't want Mrs. Dancy to hear.

MARGARET. Do tell me, Mr. Jacob; is he going to win?

TWISDEN. I think so, Margaret; I think so.

MARGARET. It'll be too frightful if he doesn't get a verdict, after all this. But I don't know what we shall do when it's over. I've been sitting in that Court all these three days, watching, and it's made me feel there's nothing we like better than seeing people skinned. Well, bye-bye, bless you!

TWISDEN rises and pats her hand.

WINSOR. Half a second, Margaret. Wait for me.

She nods and goes out.

WINSOR. Mr. Twisden, what do you really think?

TWISDEN. I am Dancy's lawyer, my dear Charles, as well as yours.

WINSOR. Well, can I go and see Canynge?

TWISDEN. Better not.

WINSOR. If they get that out of him, and recall me, am I to say he told me of it at the time?

TWISDEN. You didn't feel the coat yourself? And Dancy wasn't present? Then what Canynge told you is not evidence. We'll stop your being asked.

WINSOR. Thank goodness. Good-b

WINSOR goes out.

TWISDEN, behind his table, moti less, taps his teeth with the glasses in his narrow, well- hand. After a long shake of head and a shrug of his ra high shoulders he sniffs, goe the window and opens it. T crossing to the door, Left B he throws it open and says:

TWISDEN. At your service, sir.

GILMAN comes forth, nursing pot hat.

TWISDEN. Be seated.

TWISDEN closes the window bel him, and takes his seat.

GILMAN. [Taking the client's chai the left of the table] Mr. Twisden, I lieve? My name's Gilman, head of man's Department Stores. You have card.

TWISDEN. [Looking at the card] What can we do for you?

GILMAN. Well, I've come to you f a sense of duty, sir, and also a fe of embarrassment. [He takes from breast pocket an evening paper] see, I've been followin' this Dancy —it's a good deal talked of in Putn and I read this at half-past two afternoon. To be precise, at 2.25. rises and hands the paper to Twis and with a thick gloved forefinge dicates a passage] When I read numbers, I 'appened to remember g change for a fifty-pound note— often 'ave one in, you know—so I to the cash-box out of curiosity, t that I 'adn't got it. Well, I 'ad here it is. [He draws out from his b pocket and lays before TWISDEN a pound banknote] It was brought change by a customer of mine three ago, and he got value for it. Now, a stolen note, it seems, and you'd l know what I did. Mind you, that tomer of mine I've known 'im—v eight or nine years; an Italian h wine salesman, and so far's I kn respectable man—foreign-lookin, nothin' more. Now, this was at 'a two, and I was at my head brar Putney, where I live. I want y mark the time, so as you'll see I ed a minute. I took a cab and I e straight to my customer's private ence in Putney, where he lives with daughter—Ricardos his name is, io Ricardos. They tell me there that at his business shop in the City. So go in the cab again, and there I im. Well, sir, I showed this paper n and I produced the note. "Here," d, "you brought this to me and you alue for it." Well, that man was aback. If I'm a judge, Mr. Twis-he was taken aback, not to speak guilty way, but he was, as you t say, flummoxed. "Now," I said to "where did you get it—that's the

?" He took his time to answer, and he said: "Well, Mr. Gilman," he
"you know me; I am an honour-man. I can't tell you offhand, but I ove the board." He's foreign, you
, in his expressions. "Yes," I said, s all very well," I said, "but here ot a stolen note and you've got the for it. Now I tell you," I said, t I'm going to do; I'm going lit with this note to Mr. Jacob len, who's got this Dancy De Levis n 'and. He's a well-known Society
r," I said, "of great experience."
' he said, "that is what you do?"
ny the way he speaks! "Then I with you!"—And I've got him in ib below. I want to tell you every-before he comes up. On the way d to get something out of him, but ldn't—I could not. "This is very ard," I said at last. "It is, Mr. n," was his reply; and he began k about his Sicilian claret—a very wine, mind you; but under the cir-ances it seemed to me uncalled lave I made it clear to you.

ISDEN. [Who has listened with ex-attention] Perfectly, Mr. Gilman.
nd down for him.

[He touches a hand-bell.
he YOUNG CLERK appears at the door, Left Forward.

ISDEN. A gentleman in a taxi—
ig. Ask him to be so good as to
p. Oh! and send Mr. Graviter here he YOUNG CLERK goes out.

MAN. As I told you, sir, I've been followin' this case. It's what you might call piquant. And I should be very glad if it came about that this helped Captain Dancy. I take an interest, because, to tell you the truth, [Confidentially] I don't like—well, not to put too fine a point upon it—'Ebrews. They work harder; they're more sober; they're honest; and they're everywhere. I've nothing against them, but the fact is—they get on so.

TWISDEN. [Cocking an eye] A thorn in the flesh, Mr. Gilman.

GILMAN. Well, I prefer my own countrymen, and that's the truth of it.

As he speaks, GRAVITER comes in by the door Left Forward.

TWISDEN. [Pointing to the newspaper and the note] Mr. Gilman has brought this, of which he is holder for value. His customer, who changed it three days ago, is coming up.

GRAVITER. The fifty-pounder. I see.

[His face is long and reflective.

YOUNG CLERK. [Entering] Mr. Ricardos, sir. [He goes out.

RICARDOS is a personable, Italian-looking man in a frock coat, with a dark moustachioed face and dark hair a little grizzled. He looks anxious, and bows.

TWISDEN. Mr. Ricardos? My name is Jacob Twisden. My partner. [Holding up a finger, as RICARDOS would speak] Mr. Gilman has told us about this note. You took it to him, he says, three days ago; that is, on Monday, and received cash for it?

RICARDOS. Yes, sare.

TWISDEN. You were not aware that it was stolen?

RICARDOS. [With his hand to his breast] Oh! no, sare.

TWISDEN. You received it from——?

RICARDOS. A minute, sare; I would weesh to explain—— [With an expressive shrug] in private.

TWISDEN. [Nodding] Mr. Gilman, your conduct has been most prompt. You may safely leave the matter in our hands, now. Kindly let us retain this note; and ask for my cashier as you go out and give him [He writes] this. He will reimburse you. We will take any necessary steps ourselves.

GILMAN. [In slight surprise, with modest pride] Well, sir, I'm in your 'ands. I must be guided by you, with your experience. I'm glad you think I acted rightly.

TWISDEN. Very rightly, Mr. Gilman very rightly. [Rising] Good afternoon!

GILMAN. Good afternoon, sir. Good afternoon, gentlemen! [To TWISDEN] I'm sure I'm very 'appy to have made your acquaintance, sir. It's a well-known name.

TWISDEN. Thank you.

GILMAN retreats, glances at RICARDOS, and turns again.

GILMAN. I suppose there's nothing else I ought to do, in the interests of the law? I'm a careful man.

TWISDEN. If there is, Mr. Gilman, we will let you know. We have your address. You may make your mind easy; but don't speak of this. It might interfere with Justice.

GILMAN. Oh! I shouldn't dream of it. I've no wish to be mixed up in anything conspicuous. That's not my principle at all. Good day, gentlemen.

[He goes.

TWISDEN. [Seating himself] Now, sir, will you sit down.

But RICARDOS does not sit; he stands looking uneasily across the table at GRAVITER.

TWISDEN. You may speak out.

RICARDOS. Well, Mr. Tweesden and sare, this matter is very serious for me, and very delicate—it concairns my honour. I am in a great difficulty.

TWISDEN. When in difficulty—complete frankness, sir.

RICARDOS. It is a family matter, sare, I——

TWISDEN. Let me be frank with you. [Telling his points off on his fingers] We have your admission that you changed this stopped note for value. It will be our duty to inform the Bank of England that it has been traced to you. You will have to account to them for your possession of it. I suggest to you that it will be far better to account frankly to us.

RICARDOS. [Taking out a handkerchief and quite openly wiping his hands and forehead] I received this note, sare, with others, from a gentleman, sare settlement of a debt of honour, an know nothing of where he got them.

TWISDEN. H'm! that is very va If that is all you can tell us, I'm afr ——

RICARDOS. Gentlemen, this is painful for me. It is my daughter's g name. [He again wipes his br

TWISDEN. Come, sir, speak out!

[Taking the paper] Here it gives the numbe another note—a 'undred-pound not 'ave that too.

[He takes a note from his br pocket.

GRAVITER. How much did he give in all?

RICARDOS. For my daughter's se ment one thousand pounds. I underst he did not wish to give a cheque bec of his marriage. So I did not think thing about it being in notes, you se TWISDEN. When did he give you money?

RICARDOS. The middle of Octo last.

TWISDEN. [Suddenly looking up] Ricardos, was it Captain Dancy?

RICARDOS. [Again wiping his head] Gentlemen, I am so fond o daughter. I have only the one, an wife.

TWISDEN. [With an effort] Yes, but I must know.

RICARDOS. Sare, if I tell you, wil give me your good word that my da ter shall not hear of it?

TWISDEN. So far as we are ab prevent it—certainly.

RICARDOS. Sare, I trust you.—[T Captain Dancy.

A long pause.

RAVITER. [Suddenly] Were you mailing him?

VISDEN. [Holding up his hand] My ier means, did you press him for settlement?

CARDOS. I did think it my duty to my hter to ask that he make compen- n to her.

VISDEN. With threats that you d tell his wife?

CARDOS. [With a shrug] Captain y was a man of honour. He said: ourse I will do this." I trusted him. a month later I did remind him, ie gave me this money for her. I ot know where he got it—I do not . Gentlemen, I have invested it all r—every penny—except this note, hich I had the purpose to buy her klace. That is the swearéd truth.

ISDEN. I must keep this note. [He es the hundred-pound note] You ot speak of this to anyone. I may nise that you were a holder for received—others might take a dif- view. Good day, sir. Graviter, see Ricardos out, and take his address.

ARDOS. [Pressing his hands over east of his frock coat—with a sigh] emen, I beg you—remember what I. [With a roll of his eyes] My ter—I am not happee. Good day.

He turns and goes slowly, Left Forward, followed by GRAVITER.

ISDEN. [To himself] Young Dan-

He pins the two notes together and places them in an envelope, then stands motionless except for his eyes and hands, which restlessly express the disturbance within him.

RAVITER returns, carefully shuts the door, and going up to him, hands him RICARDOS' card.

ISDEN. [Looking at the card] Vil- venuto. This will have to be veri- ut I'm afraid it's true. That man ot acting.

VITER. What's to be done about ?

ISDEN. Can you understand a gen- ——?

VITER. I don't know, sir. The war loosened "form" all over the place. I saw plenty of that myself. And some men have no moral sense. From the first I've had doubts.

TWISDEN. We can't go on with the case.

GRAVITER. Phew! . . . [A moment's silence] Gosh! It's an awful thing for his wife.

TWISDEN. Yes.

GRAVITER. [Touching the envelope] Chance brought this here, sir. That man won't talk—he's too scared.

TWISDEN. Gilman.

GRAVITER. Too respectable. If De Levis got those notes back, and the rest of the money anonymously?

TWISDEN. But the case, Graviter; the case.

GRAVITER. I don't believe this alters what I've been thinking.

TWISDEN. Thought is one thing—knowledge another. There's duty to our profession. Ours is a fine calling. On the good faith of solicitors a very great deal hangs.

[He crosses to the hearth as if warmth would help him.

GRAVITER. It'll let him in for a prosecution. He came to us in confidence.

TWISDEN. Not as against the law.

GRAVITER. No. I suppose not. [A pause] By Jove, I don't like losing this case. I don't like the admission we backed such a wrong 'un.

TWISDEN. Impossible to go on. Apart from ourselves, there's Sir Frederic. We must disclose to him—can't let him go on in the dark. Complete confidence between solicitor and counsel is the essence of professional honour.

GRAVITER. What are you going to do then, sir?

TWISDEN. See Dancy at once. Get him on the 'phone.

GRAVITER. [Taking up the telephone] Get me Captain Dancy's flat. . . . What? . . . [To TWISDEN] Mrs. Dancy is here. That's à propos with a vengeance. Are you going to see her, sir?

TWISDEN. [After a moment's painful hesitation] I must.

GRAVITER. [Telephoning] Bring Mrs. Dancy up. [He turns to the window.

MABEL DANCY is shown in, look- ing very pale. TWISDEN advances from the fire, and takes her hand.

MABEL. Major Colford's taken Ronny off in his car for the night. I thought it would do him good. I said I'd come round in case there was anything you wanted to say before to-morrow.

TWISDEN. [Taken aback] Where have they gone?

MABEL. I don't know, but he'll be home before ten o'clock to-morrow. Is there anything?

TWISDEN. Well, I'd like to see him before the Court sits. Send him on here as soon as he comes.

MABEL. [With her hand to her forehead] Oh! Mr. Twisden, when will it be over? My head's getting awful sitting in that Court.

TWISDEN. My dear Mrs. Dancy, there's no need at all for you to come down to-morrow; take a rest and nurse your head.

MABEL. Really and truly?

TWISDEN. Yes; it's the very best thing you can do.

GRAVITER turns his head, and looks at them unobserved.

MABEL. How do you think it's going?

TWISDEN. It went very well to-day; very well indeed.

MABEL. You must be awfully fed up with us.

TWISDEN. My dear young lady, that's our business. [He takes her hand.

MABEL'S face suddenly quivers. She draws her hand away, and covers her lips with it.

TWISDEN. There, there! You want a day off badly.

MABEL. I'm so tired of——! Thank you so much for all you're doing. Good night! Good night, Mr. Graviter!

GRAVITER. Good night, Mrs. Dancy.

MABEL goes.

GRAVITER. D'you know, I believe she knows.

TWISDEN. No, no! She believes in him implicitly. A staunch little woman. Poor thing!

GRAVITER. Hasn't that shaken you, sir? It has me.

TWISDEN. No, no! I—I can't go on with the case. It's breaking faith. Get Sir Frederic's chambers.

GRAVITER. [Telephoning, and getti
a reply, looks round at TWISDEN] Yes

TWISDEN. Ask if I can come rou and see him.

GRAVITER. [Telephoning] Can
Frederic spare Mr. Twisden a few m utes now if he comes round? [Receiv
reply] He's gone down to Brighton the night.

TWISDEN. H'm! What hotel?

GRAVITER. [Telephoning] What's address? What . . .? [To TWISDE
The Bedford.

TWISDEN. I'll go down.

GRAVITER. [Telephoning] Thank y
All right. [He rings

TWISDEN. Just look out the tra down and up early to-morrow.

GRAVITER takes up an A B C,
TWISDEN takes up the Ricar card.

GRAVITER nods.

TWISDEN. I'll be up in time to father clock.

The YOUNG CLERK is ushering in D
CY, whose face is perceptibly h er than it was three months ago, that of a man who has lived u great restraint.

DANCY. He wanted to see me be the Court sat.

YOUNG CLERK. Yes, sir. Mr. Twi will see you in one minute. He had out of town last night.

[He prepares to open the wai room door.

ANCY. Were you in the war?
OUNG CLERK. Yes.
ANCY. How can you stick this?
OUNG CLERK. [With a smile] My ble was to stick that, sir.
ANCY. But you get no excitement year's end to year's end. It'd drive nad.
OUNG CLERK. [Shyly] A case like is pretty exciting. I'd give a lot to is win it.
ANCY. [Staring at him] Why? What to you?
OUNG CLERK. I don't know, sir. It's like football—you want your side
in. [*He opens the waiting-room

DANCY enters the waiting-room, and the YOUNG CLERK, shutting the door, meets TWISDEN as he comes in, Left Forward, and takes from him overcoat, top hat, and a small bag.

OUNG CLERK. Captain Dancy's wait-sir.
[He indicates the waiting-room.
VISDEN. [Narrowing his lips] Very
Mr. Graviter gone to the ts?
OUNG CLERK. Yes, sir.
VISDEN. Did he leave anything for
?
OUNG CLERK. On the table, sir.
VISDEN. [Taking up an envelope]
ik you.
The CLERK goes.
VISDEN. [Opening the envelope and ng] "All corroborates." H'm! [He it in his pocket and takes out of an ope the two notes, lays them on able, and covers them with a sheet otting-paper; stands a moment pre-g himself, then goes to the door of vaiting-room, opens it, and says:]
, Captain Dancy. Sorry to have you waiting.
NCY. [Entering] Winsor came to esterday about General Canynge's nce. Is that what you wanted to to me about?
VISDEN. No. It isn't that.
NCY. [Looking at his wrist-watch]
e it's just on the half-hour, sir.

TWISDEN. Yes. I don't want you to go to the Court?

DANCY. Not?

TWISDEN. I have very serious news for you.

DANCY. [Wincing and collecting himself] Oh!

TWISDEN. These two notes. [He uncovers the notes] After the Court rose yesterday we had a man called Ricardos here. [A pause] Is there any need for me to say more?

DANCY. [Unflinching] No. What now?

TWISDEN. Our duty was plain; we could not go on with the case. I have consulted Sir Frederic. He felt—he felt that he must throw up his brief, and he will do that the moment the Court sits. Now I want to talk to you about what you're going to do.

DANCY. That's very good of you, considering.

TWISDEN. I don't pretend to understand, but I imagine you may have done this in a moment of reckless bravado, feeling, perhaps, that as you gave the mare to De Levis, the money was by rights as much yours as his.

Stopping DANCY, who is about to speak, with a gesture.

TWISDEN. To satisfy a debt of honour to this—lady; and, no doubt, to save your wife from hearing of it from the man Ricardos? Is that so?

DANCY. To the life.

TWISDEN. It was mad, Captain Dancy, mad!—— But the question now is: What do you owe to your wife? She doesn't dream—I suppose?

DANCY. [With a twitching face] No.

TWISDEN. We can't tell what the result of this collapse will be. The police have the theft in hand. They may issue a warrant. The money could be refunded, and the costs paid—somehow that can all be managed. But it may not help. In any case, what end is served by your staying in the country? You can't save your honour—that's gone. You can't save your wife's peace of mind. If she sticks to you—do you think she will?

DANCY. Not if she's wise.

TWISDEN. Better go! There's a war in Morocco.

DANCY. [With a bitter smile] Good old Morocco!

TWISDEN. Will you go, then, at once, and leave me to break it to your wife?

DANCY. I don't know yet.

TWISDEN. You must decide quickly, to catch a boat train. Many a man has made good. You're a fine soldier.

DANCY. There are alternatives.

TWISDEN. Now, go straight from this office. You've a passport, I suppose; you won't need a visa for France, and from there you can find means to slip over. Have you got money on you?

DANCY nods.

TWISDEN. We will see what we can do to stop or delay proceedings.

DANCY. It's all damned kind of you. [With difficulty] But I must think of my wife. Give me a few minutes.

TWISDEN. Yes, yes; go in there and think it out.

He goes to the door, Right, and opens it. DANCY passes him and goes out. TWISDEN rings a bell and stands waiting.

CLERK. [Entering] Yes, sir?

TWISDEN. Tell them to call a taxi.

CLERK. [Who has a startled look] Yes, sir. Mr. Graviter has come in, sir, with General Canynge. Are you disengaged?

TWISDEN. Yes.

The CLERK goes out, and almost immediately GRAVITER and CANYNGE enter.

TWISDEN. Good morning, General. [To GRAVITER] Well?

GRAVITER. Sir Frederic got up at once and said that since the publication of the numbers of those notes, information had reached him which forced him to withdraw from the case. Great sensation, of course. I left Bromley in charge. There'll be a formal verdict for the defendant, with costs. Have you told Dancy?

TWISDEN. Yes. He's in there deciding what he'll do.

CANYNGE. [Grave and vexed] This is a dreadful thing, Twisden. I've been afraid of it all along. A soldier! A gallant fellow, too. What on earth got into him?

TWISDEN. There's no end to human nature, General.

GRAVITER. You can see queerer thin in the papers, any day.

CANYNGE. That poor young wife his! Winsor gave me a message for yo Twisden. If money's wanted quickly save proceedings, draw on him. Is the anything I can do?

TWISDEN. I've advised him to straight off to Morocco.

CANYNGE. I don't know that an as lum isn't the place for him. He mu be off his head at moments. That jun —crazy! He'd have got a verdict on th alone—if they'd seen those balconi I was looking at them when I was dov there last Sunday. Daring thing, Twi den. Very few men, on a dark nig —— He risked his life twice. That's shrewd fellow—young De Levis. spotted Dancy's nature.

The YOUNG CLERK enters.

CLERK. The taxi's here, sir. Will y see Major Colford and Miss Orme?

TWISDEN. Graviter—— No; sh them in.

The YOUNG CLERK goes.

CANYNGE. Colford's badly cut up.

MARGARET ORME and COLFORD e ter.

COLFORD. [Striding forward] The must be some mistake about this, M Twisden.

TWISDEN. Hssh! Dancy's in the He's admitted it.

Voices are subdued at once.

COLFORD. What? [With emotion] it were my own brother, I couldn't f it more. But—damn it! What right h that fellow to chuck up the case—wi out letting him know, too. I came do with Dancy this morning, and he kn nothing about it.

TWISDEN. [Coldly] That was unf tunately unavoidable.

COLFORD. Guilty or not, you ought have stuck to him—it's not playing game, Mr. Twisden.

TWISDEN. You must allow me judge where my duty lay, in a v hard case.

COLFORD. I thought a man was with his solicitor.

CANYNGE. Colford, you don't un stand professional etiquette.

COLFORD. No, thank God!

WISDEN. When you have been as long your profession as I have been in e, Major Colford, you will know duty to your calling outweighs duty friend or client.

COLFORD. But I serve the Country.

WISDEN. And I serve the Law, sir.

ANYNGE. Graviter, give me a sheet paper. I'll write a letter for him.

[ARGARET. [Going up to TWISDEN] r Mr. Jacob—pay De Levis. You w my pearls—put them up the spout n. Don't let Ronny be——

WISDEN. Money isn't the point, Mar- t.

[ARGARET. It's ghastly! It really is.

OLFORD. I'm going in to shake hands him. [He starts to cross the room.

WISDEN. Wait! We want him to go ight off to Morocco. Don't upset [To COLFORD and MARGARET] I k you had better go. If, a little later, garet, you could go round to Mrs. cy—— OLFORD. Poor little Mabel Dancy! perfect hell for her.

They have not seen that DANCY has opened the door behind them.

ANCY. It is!

They all turn round in consternation.

OLFORD. [With a convulsive move-] Old boy!

ANCY. No good, Colford. [Gazing d at them] Oh! clear out—I can't d commiseration; and let me have air.

TWISDEN motions to COLFORD and MARGARET to go; and as he turns to DANCY, they go out. GRAVITER also moves towards the door. The GENERAL sits motionless. GRAVITER goes out.

WISDEN. Well?

ANCY. I'm going home, to clear up s with my wife. General Canynge, 't quite know why I did the damned . But I did, and there's an end ANYNGE. Dancy, for the honour of Army, avoid further scandal if you I've written a letter to a friend of in the Spanish War Office. It get you a job in their war.

[CANYNGE closes the envelope.

DANCY. Very good of you. I don't know if I can make use of it.

CANYNGE stretches out the letter, which TWISDEN hands to DANCY, who takes it. GRAVITER re-opens the door.

TWISDEN. What is it?

GRAVITER. De Levis is here.

TWISDEN. De Levis? Can't see him.

DANCY. Let him in!

After a moment's hesitation TWISDEN nods, and GRAVITER goes out. The three wait in silence with their eyes fixed on the door, the GENERAL sitting at the table, TWISDEN by his chair, DANCY between him and the door Right. DE LEVIS comes in and shuts the door. He is advancing towards TWISDEN when his eyes fall on DANCY, and he stops.

TWISDEN. You wanted to see me?

DE LEVIS. [Moistening his lips] Yes. I came to say that—that I overheard—I am afraid a warrant is to be issued. I wanted you to realise—it's not my doing. I'll give it no support. I'm content. I don't want my money. I don't even want costs. Dancy, do you understand?

DANCY does not answer, but looks at him with nothing alive in his face but his eyes.

TWISDEN. We are obliged to you, sir. It was good of you to come.

DE LEVIS. [With a sort of darting pride] Don't mistake me. I didn't come because I feel Christian; I am a Jew. I will take no money—not even that which was stolen. Give it to a charity. I'm proved right. And now I'm done with the damned thing. Good morning!

He makes a little bow to CANYNGE and TWISDEN, and turns to face DANCY, who has never moved. The two stand motionless, looking at each other, then DE LEVIS shrugs his shoulders and walks out. When he is gone there is a silence.

CANYNGE. [Suddenly] You heard what he said, Dancy. You have no time to lose.

But DANCY does not stir.

TWISDEN. Captain Dancy?

Slowly, without turning his head, rather like a man in a dream,

DANCY walks across the room, and goes out.

Curtain.

SCENE III

The DANCY'S sitting-room, a few minutes later.

MABEL DANCY is sitting alone on the sofa with a newspaper on her lap; she is only just up, and has a bottle of smelling-salts in her hand. Two or three other newspapers are dumped on the arm of the sofa. She topples the one off her lap and takes up another as if she couldn't keep away from them; drops it in turn, and sits staring before her, sniffing at the salts. The door, Right, is opened and DANCY comes in.

MABEL. [Utterly surprised] Ronny! Do they want me in Court?

DANCY. No.

MABEL. What is it, then? Why are you back?

DANCY. Spun.

MABEL. [Blank] Spun? What do you mean? What's spun?

DANCY. The case. They've found out through those notes.

MABEL. Oh! [Staring at his face] Who?

DANCY. Me!

MABEL. [After a moment of horrified stillness] Don't, Ronny! Oh! No! Don't!

[She buries her face in the pillows of the sofa.

DANCY stands looking down at her.

DANCY. Pity you wouldn't come to Africa three months ago.

MABEL. Why didn't you tell me then? I would have gone.

DANCY. You wanted this case. Well, it's fallen down.

MABEL. Oh! Why didn't I face it? But I couldn't—I had to believe.

DANCY. And now you can't. It's the end, Mabel.

MABEL. [Looking up at him] No.

DANCY goes suddenly on his knees and seizes her hand.

DANCY. Forgive me!

MABEL. [Putting her hand on his head] Yes; oh, yes! I think I've known a lon time, really. Only—why? What ma you?

DANCY. [Getting up and speaking jerks] It was a crazy thing to do; bu damn it, I was only looting a loote The money was as much mine as hi A decent chap would have offered m half. You didn't see the brute look me that night at dinner as much as say: "You blasted fool!" It made m mad. That wasn't a bad jump—twi over. Nothing in the war took qui such nerve. [Grimly] I rather enjoy that evening.

MABEL. But—money! To keep it!

DANCY. [Sullenly] Yes, but I had debt to pay.

MABEL. To a woman?

DANCY. A debt of honour—it wouldn wait.

MABEL. It was—it was to a woma Ronny, don't lie any more.

DANCY. [Grimly] Well! I wanted save your knowing. I'd promised a tho sand. I had a letter from her father th morning, threatening to tell you. All t same, if that tyke hadn't jeered at m for parlour tricks!—— But what's t good of all this now? [Suddenly] W —it may cure you of loving me. Get ov that, Mab; I never was worth it—a I'm done for!

MABEL. The woman—have you since——?

DANCY. [Energetically] No! You st planted her. But if you'd known I w leaving a woman for you, you'd nev have married me.

[He walks over to the hear

MABEL too gets up. She presses h hands to her forehead, then wa blindly round to behind the s and stands looking straight front of her.

MABEL. [Coldly] What has happen exactly?

DANCY. Sir Frederic chucked up case. I've seen Twisden; they want to run for it to Morocco.

MABEL. To the war there?

DANCY. Yes. There's to be a war out.

MABEL. A prosecution? Prison? go! Don't wait a minute! Go!

ANCY. Blast them!
ABEL. Oh, Ronny! Please! Please! k what you'll want. I'll pack. Quick! Don't wait to take things. Have you noney?
ANCY. [Nodding] This'll be good- then!
ABEL. [After a moment's struggle] No! No, no! I'll follow—I'll come o you there.
NCY. D'you mean you'll stick to

ABEL. Of course I'll stick to you.
Dancy seizes her hand and puts it to his lips. The bell rings.
ABEL. [In terror] Who's that?
The bell rings again. Dancy moves towards the door.
BEL. No! Let me!
She passes him and steals out to the outer door of the flat, where she stands listening. The bell rings again. She looks through the slit of the letter-box. While she is gone Dancy stands quite still, till she comes back.
BEL. Through the letter-box—I can —It's—it's police. Oh! God! . . . y! I can't bear it.
NCY. Heads up, Mab! Don't show utes!
BEL. Whatever happens, I'll go on you. If it's prison—I'll wait. Do nderstand? I don't care what you I don't care! I'm just the same. I e just the same when you come to me.
NCY. [Slowly] That's not in human
BEL. It is. It's in me.
NCY. I've crocked up your life.
BEL. No, no! Kiss me!
long kiss, till the bell again startles them apart, and there is a loud knock.
NCY. They'll break the door in. It's od—we must open. Hold them in a little. I want a minute or two.
BEL. [Clasping him] Ronny! Oh, y! It won't be for long—I'll be g! I'll be waiting—I swear it.
NCY. Steady, Mab! [Putting her rom him] Now!
e opens the bedroom door, Left, and stands waiting for her to go. Summoning up her courage, she goes to open the outer door. A sudden change comes over Dancy's face; from being stony it grows almost maniacal.

DANCY. [Under his breath] No! No! By God! No!

[He goes out into the bedroom, closing the door behind him.

MABEL has now opened the outer door, and disclosed INSPECTOR DEDE and the YOUNG CONSTABLE who were summoned to Meldon Court on the night of the theft, and have been witnesses in the case. Their voices are heard.

MABEL. Yes?

INSPECTOR. Captain Dancy in, madam?

MABEL. I am not quite sure—I don't think so.

INSPECTOR. I wish to speak to him a minute. Stay here, Grover. Now, madam!

MABEL. Will you come in while I see?

[She comes in, followed by the INSPECTOR.

INSPECTOR. I should think you must be sure, madam. This is not a big place.

MABEL. He was changing his clothes to go out. I think he has gone.

INSPECTOR. What's that door?

MABEL. To our bedroom.

INSPECTOR. [Moving towards it] He'll be in there, then.

MABEL. What do you want, Inspector?

INSPECTOR. [Melting] Well, madam, it's no use disguising it. I'm exceedingly sorry, but I've a warrant for his arrest.

MABEL. Inspector!

INSPECTOR. I'm sure I've every sympathy for you, madam; but I must carry out my instructions.

MABEL. And break my heart?

INSPECTOR. Well, madam, we're—we're not allowed to take that into consideration. The Law's the Law.

MABEL. Are you married?

INSPECTOR. I am.

MABEL. If you—your wife——

The INSPECTOR raises his hand, deprecating.

MABEL. [Speaking low] Just half an hour! Couldn't you? It's two lives—two whole lives! We've only been married four months. Come back in half an hour.

It's such a little thing—nobody will know Nobody. Won't you?

INSPECTOR. Now, madam—you must know my duty.

MABEL. Inspector, I beseech you—just half an hour.

INSPECTOR. No, no—don't you try to undermine me—I'm sorry for you; but don't you try it!

[He tries the handle, then knocks at the door.

DANCY'S VOICE. One minute!

INSPECTOR. It's locked. [Sharply] Is there another door to that room? Come, now!

The bell rings.

INSPECTOR. [Moving towards the door, Left; to the CONSTABLE] Who's that out there?

CONSTABLE. A lady and gentleman, sir.

INSPECTOR. What lady and—— Stand by, Grover!

DANCY'S VOICE. All right! You can come in now.

There is the noise of a lock being turned. And almost immediately the sound of a pistol shot in the bedroom. MABEL rushes to the door, tears it open, and disappears within, followed by the INSPECTOR, just as MARGARET ORME and COLFORD come in from the passage, pursued by the CONSTABLE. They, too, all hurry to the bedroom door and disappear for a moment; then COLFORD and MARGARET reappear, supporting MABEL, who faints as they lay her on the sofa. COLFORD takes from her hand an envelope, and tears it open.

COLFORD. It's addressed to me.

He reads it aloud to MARGARET in low voice.

"DEAR COLFORD,—This is the only d cent thing I can do. It's too damn unfair to her. It's only another jum A pistol keeps faith. Look after he Colford—my love to her, and you."

MARGARET gives a sort of chokin sob, then, seeing the smellin bottle, she snatches it up, a turns to revive MABEL.

COLFORD. Leave her! The longer she unconscious, the better.

INSPECTOR. [Re-entering] This is very serious business, sir.

COLFORD. [Sternly] Yes, Inspecto you've done for my best friend.

INSPECTOR. I, sir? He shot himself.

COLFORD. Hara-kiri!

INSPECTOR. Beg pardon?

COLFORD. [He points with the letter MABEL] For her sake, and his own.

INSPECTOR. [Putting out his hand] I want that, sir.

COLFORD. [Grimly] You shall have read at the inquest. Till then—it's a dressed to me, and I stick to it.

INSPECTOR. Very well, sir. Do y want to have a look at him?

COLFORD comes quickly back. MA GARET looks up at him. He stan very still.

COLFORD. Neatly—through the heart

MARGARET. [Wildly] Keeps fai We've all done that. It's not enough.

COLFORD. [Looking down at MAB All right, old boy!

The curtain falls.

A COMEDY IN THREE ACTS

PERSONS OF THE PLAY

GEOFFREY MARCH, freelance in literature
JOAN MARCH, his wife
MARY MARCH, their daughter
JOHNNY MARCH, their son
COOK, their cook
MR. BLY, their window cleaner
FAITH BLY, his daughter
BLUNTER, a strange young man
MR. BARNABAS, in plain clothes

The action passes in Geoffrey March's house, Highgate—Springtime.

ACT I. Thursday morning. The dining-room—after breakfast.

ACT II. Thursday, a fortnight later. The dining-room—after lunch.

ACT III. The same day. The dining-room—after dinner.

WINDOWS

A COMEDY IN THREE ACTS

ACT I

The MARCHS' dining-room opens through French windows on one of those gardens which seem infinite, till they are seen to be coterminous with the side walls of the house, and finite at the far end, because only the thick screen of acacias and sumachs prevents another house from being seen. The French and other windows form practically all the outer wall of that dining-room, and between them and the screen of trees lies the difference between the characters of Mr. and Mrs. March, with dots and dashes of Mary and Johnny thrown in. For instance, it has been formalised by MRS. MARCH but the grass has not been cut by MR. MARCH, and daffodils have sprung up there, which MRS. MARCH desires for the dining-room, but of which MR. MARCH says: "For God's sake, Joan, let them grow." About half therefore are now in a bowl on the breakfast table, and the other half still in the grass, in the compromise essential to lasting domesticity. A hammock under the acacias shows that MARY lies there sometimes with her eyes on the gleam of sunlight that comes through: and a trail in the longish grass, bordered with cigarette ends, proves that JOHNNY tramps there with his eyes on the ground or the stars, according. But all this is by the way, because except for a yard or two of gravel terrace outside the windows, it is all painted on the backcloth. The MARCHES have been at breakfast, and the round table, covered with blue linen, is thick with remains, seven baskets full. The room is gifted with old oak furniture: there is a door, stage Left, Forward; a hearth, where a fire is burning, and a high fender on which one can sit, stage Right, Middle; and in the wall below the fireplace, a service hatch covered with a sliding shutter, for the passage of dishes into the adjoining pantry. Against the wall, stage Left, is an old oak dresser, and a small writing table across the Left Back corner. MRS. MARCH still sits behind the coffee-pot, making up her daily list on tablets with a little gold pencil fastened to her wrist. She is personable, forty-eight, trim, well-dressed, and more matter-of-fact than seems plausible. MR. MARCH is sitting in an armchair, sideways to the windows, smoking his pipe and reading his newspaper, with little explosions to which no one pays any attention, because it is his daily habit. He is a fine-looking man of fifty odd, with red-grey moustaches and hair, both of which stiver partly by nature and partly because his hands often push them up. MARY and JOHNNY are close to the fireplace, stage Right. JOHNNY sits on the fender, smoking a cigarette and warming his back. He is a commonplace-looking young man, with a decided jaw, tall, neat, soulful, who has been in the war and writes poetry. MARY is less ordinary; you cannot tell exactly what is the matter with her. She too is tall, a little absent, fair, and well-looking. She has a small china dog in her hand, taken from the mantelpiece, and faces the audience. As the curtain rises she is saying in her soft and pleasant voice: "Well, what is the matter with us all, Johnny?"

JOHNNY. Stuck, as we were in the trenches—like china dogs.

[He points to the ornament in her hand.

MR. MARCH. [Into his newspaper] Damn these people!

MARY. If there isn't an ideal left, Johnny, it's no good pretending one.

JOHNNY. That's what I'm saying: Bankrupt!

MARY. What do you want?

MRS. MARCH. [To herself] Mutton cutlets. Johnny, will you be in to lunch?

JOHNNY shakes his head.

MRS. MARCH. Mary?

MARY nods.

MRS. MARCH. Geof?

MR. MARCH. [Into his paper] Swine!

MRS. MARCH. That'll be three. [To herself] Spinach.

JOHNNY. If you'd just missed being killed for three blooming years for no spiritual result whatever, you'd want something to bite on, Mary.

MRS. MARCH. [Jotting] Soap.

JOHNNY. What price the little and weak, now? Freedom and self-determination, and all that?

MARY. Forty to one—no takers.

JOHNNY. It doesn't seem to worry you.

MARY. Well, what's the good?

JOHNNY. Oh, you're a looker-on, Mary.

MR. MARCH. [To his newspaper] Of all God-forsaken time-servers!

MARY is moved so far as to turn and look over his shoulder a minute.

JOHNNY. Who?

MARY. Only the Old-Un.

MR. MARCH. This is absolutely Prussian!

MRS. MARCH. Soup, lobster, chicken salad. Go to Mrs. Hunt's.

MR. MARCH. And this fellow hasn't the nous to see that if ever there were a moment when it would pay us to take risks, and be generous—— My hat! He ought to be—knighted.

[Resumes his paper.

JOHNNY. [Muttering] You see, even dad can't suggest chivalry without talking of payment for it. That shows how we've sunk.

MARY. [Contemptuously] Chivalry! Pouf! Chivalry was "off" even befo the war, Johnny. Who wants chivalr JOHNNY. Of all shallow-pated humb —that sneering at chivalry's the wor Civilisation—such as we've got—is b on it.

MARY. [Airily] Then it's built sand.

[She sits beside him on the fend

JOHNNY. Sneering and smartne Pah!

MARY. [Roused] I'll tell you wh Johnny, it's mucking about with chiva that makes your poetry rotten.

JOHNNY seizes her arm and tw it.

MARY. Shut up—that hurts.

JOHNNY twists it more.

MARY. You brute!

JOHNNY lets her arm go.

JOHNNY. Ha! So you don't mind t ing advantage of the fact that you cheek me with impunity, because yo weaker. You've given the whole sh away, Mary. Abolish chivalry and make you sit up.

MRS. MARCH. What are you two q relling about? Will you bring ho cigarettes, Johnny—not Bogdogun Mamelukes—something more An American.

JOHNNY. All right! D'you want more illustrations, Mary?

MARY. Pig!

She has risen and stands rubb her arm and recovering her pla ity, which is considerable.

MRS. MARCH. Geof, can you eat served peaches?

MR. MARCH. Hell! What a pol Um?

MRS. MARCH. Can you eat prese peaches?

MR. MARCH. Yes. [To his pa Making the country stink in the of the world!

MR. BLY, with a pail of water and cloths, has entered, and stands near the window, Left.

BLY. Beg pardon, Mr March; d'you mind me cleanin' the winders here?

MR. MARCH. Not a bit.

JOHNNY. Bankrupt of ideals. That's it!

MR. BLY stares at him, and puts his pail down by the window.

MARY has entered with her father's writing materials which she puts on a stool beside him.

MARY. Here you are, Dad! I've filled up the ink-pot. Do be careful! Come on, Johnny!

She looks curiously at MR. BLY, who has begun operations at the bottom of the left-hand window, and goes, followed by JOHNNY.

MR. MARCH. [Relighting his pipe and preparing his materials] What do you think of things, Mr. Bly?

BLY. Not much, sir.

MR. MARCH. Ah! [He looks up at MR. BLY, struck by his large philosophical eyes and moth-eaten moustache] Nor I.

BLY. I rather thought that, sir, from your writin's.

MR. MARCH. Oh! Do you read?

BLY. I was at sea, once—formed the 'abit.

MR. MARCH. Read any of my novels?

BLY. Not to say all through—I've read some of your articles in the Sunday papers, though. Make you think!

MR. MARCH. I'm at sea now—don't see dry land anywhere, Mr. Bly.

BLY. [With a smile] That's right.

MR. MARCH. D'you find that the general impression?

BLY. No. People don't think. You 'ave to 'ave some cause for thought.

MR. MARCH. Cause enough in the papers.

BLY. It's nearer 'ome with me. I've often thought I'd like a talk with you, sir. But I'm keepin' you.

[He prepares to swab the pane.

MR. MARCH. Not at all. I enjoy it. Anything to put off work.

BLY. [Looking at MR. MARCH, then giving a wipe at the window] What's drink to one is drought to another. I've seen two men take a drink out of the same can—one die of it and the other get off with a pain in his stomach.

MR. MARCH. You've seen a lot, I expect.

BLY. Ah! I've been on the beach in my day. [He sponges at the window] It's given me a way o' lookin' at things that I don't find in other people. Look at the 'Ome Office. They got no philosophy.

MR. MARCH. [Pricking his ears] What? Have you had dealings with them?

BLY. Over the reprieve that was got up for my daughter. But I'm keepin' you.

He swabs at the window, but always at the same pane, so that he does not advance at all.

MR. MARCH. Reprieve?

BLY. Ah! She was famous at eighteen. The Sunday Mercury was full of her, when she was in prison.

MR. MARCH. [Delicately] Dear me! I'd no idea.

BLY. She's out now; been out a fortnight. I always say that fame's ephemereal. But she'll never settle to that weavin'. Her head got turned a bit.

MR. MARCH. I'm afraid I'm in the dark, Mr. Bly.

BLY. [Pausing—dipping his sponge in the pail and then standing with it in his hand] Why! Don't you remember the Bly case? They sentenced 'er to be 'anged by the neck until she was dead, for smotherin' her baby. She was only eighteen at the time of speakin'.

MR. MARCH. Oh! yes! An inhuman business!

BLY. Ah! The jury recommended 'er to mercy. So they reduced it to Life.

MR. MARCH. Life! Sweet Heaven!

BLY. That's what I said; so they give her two years. I don't hold with the Sunday Mercury, but it put that over. It's a misfortune to a girl to be good-lookin'.

MR. MARCH. [Rumpling his hair] No, no! Dash it all! Beauty's the only thing left worth living for.

BLY. Well, I like to see green grass and a blue sky; but it's a mistake in a 'uman bein'. Look at any young chap that's good-lookin'—'e's doomed to the screen, or hair-dressin'. Same with the girls. My girl went into an 'airdresse at seventeen and in six months she w in trouble. When I saw 'er with a r round her neck, as you might say, I s to meself: "Bly," I said, "you're respo sible for this—— If she 'adn't been go lookin'—it'd never 'ave 'appened."

During this speech MARY has co in with a tray, to clear the bre fast, and stands unnoticed at dining-table, arrested by the cu ous words of MR. BLY.

MR. MARCH. Your wife might have thought that you were wholly cause, Mr. Bly.

BLY. Ah! My wife. She's passed But Faith—that's my girl's name—s never was like her mother; there's 'eredity in 'er on that side.

MR. MARCH. What sort of girl is sh

BLY. One for colour—likes a bit music—likes a dance, and a flower.

MARY. [Interrupting softly] Dad was going to clear, but I'll come b later.

MR. MARCH. Come here and lis to this! Here's a story to get your bl up! How old was the baby, Mr. Bly?

BLY. Two days—'ardly worth m tionin'. They say she 'ad the 'ighstri after—an' when she comes to she sa "I've saved my baby's life." An' th true enough when you come to th what that sort o' baby goes through a rule; dragged up by somebody el hand, or took away by the Law. W can a workin' girl do with a baby b under the rose, as they call it? W derful the difference money makes w it comes to bein' outside the Law.

MR. MARCH. Right you are, Mr. God's on the side of the big battalion

BLY. Ah! Religion! [His eyes philosophically] Did you ever 'Aigel?

MR. MARCH. Hegel, or Haekel?

BLY. Yes; with an aitch. There balance abart 'im that I like. There doubt the Christian religion went far. Turn the other cheek! What! An' this Anti-Christ, Neesha, what in with the war—he went too far i other direction. Neither of 'em p cal men. You've got to strike a bal and foller it.

R. MARCH. Balance! Not much bal- about us. We just run about and Jim Crow.

I don't do either. ? Becos my instincts tells me not.

. MARCH. Yes, but my doubt is ier our instincts at this moment of vorld's history are leading us up wn.

. What is up and what is down? you answer me that? Is it up or to get so soft that you can't take of yourself?

. MARCH. Down.

. Well, is it up or down to get so hat you can't take care of others?

. MARCH. Down.

. Well, there you are!

. MARCH. Then our instincts are us down?

. Nao. They're strikin' a balance, nownst, all the time.

MARCH. You're a philosopher, lly.

. [Modestly] Well, I do a bit in ine, too. In my opinion Nature the individual believe he's goin' e after 'e's dead just to keep 'im while 'e's alive—otherwise he'd 'a ut.

MARCH. Quite a thought—quite a it!

. But I go one better than Nature. your instincts is my motto.

MARCH. Excuse me, Mr. Bly, I Nature got hold of that before

; [Slightly chilled] Well, I'm you.

MARCH. Not at all. You're a be- in conscience, or the little voice . When my son was very small, other asked him once if he didn't little voice within, telling him was right. [MR. MARCH touches diaphragm] And he said: "I often hear little voices in here, but they never say anything."

MR. BLY cannot laugh, but he smiles.

MR. MARCH. Mary, Johnny must have been awfully like the Government.

BLY. As a matter of fact, I've got my daughter here—in obeyance.

MR. MARCH. Where? I didn't catch.

BLY. In the kitchen. Your cook told me you couldn't get hold of an 'ouse parlour-maid. So I thought it was just a chance—you bein' broad-minded.

MR. MARCH. Oh! I see. What would your mother say, Mary?

MARY. Mother would say: "Has she had experience?"

BLY. I've told you about her experience.

MR. MARCH. Yes, but—as a parlour-maid.

BLY. Well! She can do hair. [Observing the smile exchanged between MR. MARCH and MARY] And she's quite handy with a plate.

MR. MARCH. [Tentatively] I'm a little afraid my wife would feel——

BLY. You see, in this weavin' shop—all the girls 'ave 'ad to be in trouble, otherwise they wouldn't take 'em. [Apologetically towards MARY] It's a kind of a disorderly 'ouse without the disorders. Excusin' the young lady's presence.

MARY. Oh! You needn't mind me, Mr. Bly.

MR. MARCH. And so you want her to come here? H'm!

BLY. Well I remember when she was a little bit of a thing—no higher than my knee—— [He holds out his hand.

MR. MARCH. [Suddenly moved] My God! yes. They've all been that. [To MARY] Where's your mother?

MARY. Gone to Mrs. Hunt's. Suppose she's engaged one, Dad?

MR. MARCH. Well, it's only a month's wages.

MARY. [Softly] She won't like it.

MR. MARCH. Well, let's see her, Mr. Bly; let's see her, if you don't mind.

BLY. Oh, I don't mind, sir, and she won't neither; she's used to bein' inspected by now. Why! she 'ad her bumps gone over just before she came out!

MR. MARCH. [Touched on the raw again] H'm! Too bad! Mary, go and fetch her.

MARY, with a doubting smile, goes out.

MR. MARCH. [Rising] You might give me the details of that trial, Mr. Bly. I'll see if I can't write something that'll make people sit up. That's the way to send Youth to hell! How can a child who's had a rope round her neck——!

BLY. [Who has been fumbling in his pocket, produces some yellow paper-cuttings clipped together] Here's her references—the whole literature of the case. And here's a letter from the chaplain in one of the prisons sayin' she took a lot of interest in him; a nice young man, I believe. [He suddenly brushes a tear out of his eye with the back of his hand] I never thought I could 'a felt like I did over her bein' in prison. Seemed a crool senseless thing—that pretty girl o' mine. All over a baby that hadn't got used to bein' alive. Tain't as if she'd been follerin' her instincts; why, she missed that baby something crool.

MR. MARCH. Of course, human life—even an infant's——

BLY. I know you've got to 'ave a close time for it. But when you come to think how they take 'uman life in Injia and Ireland, and all those other places, it seems 'ard to come down like a cartload o' bricks on a bit of a girl that's been carried away by a moment's abiration.

MR. MARCH. [Who is reading the cuttings] H'm! What hypocrites we are!

BLY. Ah! And 'oo can tell 'oo's the father? She never give us his name. I think the better of 'er for that.

MR. MARCH. Shake hands, Mr. Bly. So do I.

BLY wipes his hand, and MR. MARCH shakes it.

MR. MARCH. Loyalty's loyalty—especially when we men benefit by it.

BLY. That's right, sir.

MARY has returned with FAITH BLY, who stands demure and pretty on the far side of the table, her face an embodiment of the pathetic watchful prison faculty of adapting itself to whatever may be best for its owner at the moment. At this moment it is obviously best for her to look at ground, and yet to take in faces of MR. MARCH and MA without their taking her face A moment, for all, of consid able embarrassment.

MR. MARCH. [Suddenly] Well, h we are!

The remark attracts FAITH; raises her eyes to his softly u a little smile, and drops th again.

MR. MARCH. So you want to be parlour-maid?

FAITH. Yes, please.

MR. MARCH. Well, Faith can rem mountains; but—er—I don't know she can clear tables.

BLY. Ah! I wouldn't be surprise see a change of Government before I've seen 'uge trees in Brazil wi any roots—see 'em come down w crash.

MR. MARCH. Good image, Mr. Hope you're right!

Y. Well, Governments! They're all same—butter when they're out of r, and blood when they're in. And ! 'ow they do abuse other Gov- ents for doin' the things they do selves. Excuse me, I'll want her er back, sir, when you've done it.

ITH. Oh! Yes, I can do hair.

Again that little soft look, and smile so carefully adjusted.

. MARCH. That's important, don't hink, Mary?

Mary, accustomed to candour, smiles dubiously.

RY. You haven't—so far?

ITH. Only tin things.

. MARCH. [Feeling a certain awk- ess] Well, I daresay we can find for you. Can you—er—be firm on lephone?

TH. Tell them you're engaged you're not? Oh! yes.

. MARCH. Excellent! Let's see, what else is there?

RY. Waiting, and house-work.

. MARCH. Exactly.

ITH. I'm very quick. I—I'd like to [She looks down] I don't care for I'm doing now. It makes you feel osition.

RY. Aren't they nice to you?

ITH. Oh! yes—kind; but—— [She up] it's against my instincts.

MARCH. Oh! [Quizzically] e got a disciple, Mr. Bly.

. [Rolling his eyes at his daugh- h! but you mustn't 'ave instincts you know. You've got a chance, ou must come to stay, and do lf credit.

TH. [Adapting her face] Yes, I I'm very lucky.

MARCH. [Deprecating thanks and precept] That's all right! Only, ly, I can't absolutely answer for March. She may think——

MARY. There is mother; I heard the door.

BLY. [Taking up his pail] I quite understand, sir; I've been a married man myself. It's very queer the way women look at things. I'll take her away now, and come back presently and do these other winders. You can talk it over by yourselves. But if you do see your way, sir, I shan't forget it in an 'urry. To 'ave the responsibility of her—really, it's dreadful.

FAITH'S face has grown sullen during this speech, but it clears up in another little soft look at MR. MARCH, as she and MR. BLY go out.

MR. MARCH. Well, Mary, have I done it?

MARY. You have, Dad.

MR. MARCH. [Running his hands through his hair] Pathetic little figure! Such infernal inhumanity!

MARY. How are you going to put it to mother?

MR. MARCH. Tell her the story, and pitch it strong.

MARY. Mother's not impulsive.

MR. MARCH. We must tell her, or she'll think me mad.

MARY. She'll do that, anyway, dear.

MR. MARCH. Here she is! Stand by!

He runs his arm through MARY'S, and they sit on the fender, at bay.

MRS. MARCH enters, Left.

MR. MARCH. Well, what luck?

MRS. MARCH. None.

MR. MARCH. [Unguardedly] Good!

MRS. MARCH. What?

MR. MARCH. [Cheerfully] Well, the fact is, Mary and I have caught one for you; Mr. Bly's daughter——

MRS. MARCH. Are you out of your senses? Don't you know that she's the girl who——

MR. MARCH. That's it. She wants a lift.

MRS. MARCH. Geof!

MR. MARCH. Well, don't we want a maid?

MRS. MARCH. [Ineffably] Ridiculous!

MR. MARCH. We tested her, didn't we, Mary?

MRS. MARCH. [Crossing to the bell, and ringing] You'll just send for Mr. Bly and get rid of her again.

MR. MARCH. Joan, if we comfortable people can't put ourselves a little out of the way to give a helping hand——

MRS. MARCH. To girls who smother their babies?

MR. MARCH. Joan, I revolt. I won't be a hypocrite and a Pharisee.

MRS. MARCH. Well, for goodness sake let me be one.

MARY. [As the door opens] Here's Cook!

COOK stands—sixty, stout, and comfortable—with a crumpled smile.

COOK. Did you ring, ma'am?

MR. MARCH. We're in a moral difficulty, Cook, so naturally we come to you.

COOK beams.

MRS. MARCH. [Impatiently] Nothing of the sort, Cook; it's a question of common sense.

COOK. Yes, ma'am.

MRS. MARCH. That girl, Faith Bly, wants to come here as parlour-maid. Absurd!

MR. MARCH. You know her story, Cook? I want to give the poor girl a chance. Mrs. March thinks it's taking chances. What do you say?

COOK. Of course, it is a risk, sir; but there! you've got to take 'em to get maids nowadays. If it isn't in the past, it's in the future. I daresay I could learn 'er.

MRS. MARCH. It's not her work, Cook, it's her instincts. A girl who smothered a baby that she oughtn't to have had——

MR. MARCH. [Remonstrant] If she hadn't had it how could she have smothered it?

COOK. [Soothingly] Perhaps she's repented, ma'am.

MRS. MARCH. Of course she's repented. But did you ever know repentance change anybody, Cook?

COOK. [Smiling] Well, generally it's a way of gettin' ready for the next.

MRS. MARCH. Exactly.

MR. MARCH. If we never get another chance because we repent——

COOK. I always think of Master Johnny, ma'am, and my jam; he used to repent so beautiful, dear little feller—such a conscience! I never could to lock it away.

MRS. MARCH. Cook, you're wan ing. I'm surprised at your encoura the idea; I really am.

COOK plaits her hands.

MR. MARCH. Cook's been in the f ily longer than I have—haven't Cook?

COOK beams.

MR. MARCH. She knows much about a girl like that than we do.

COOK. We had a girl like her, I member, in your dear mother's t Mr. Geoffrey.

MR. MARCH. How did she turn COOK. Oh! She didn't.

MRS. MARCH. There!

MR. MARCH. Well, I can't bear bel ing like everybody else. Don't you t we might give her a chance, Cook?

COOK. My 'eart says yes, ma'am.

MR. MARCH. Ha!

COOK. And my 'ead says no, sir.

MRS. MARCH. Yes!

MR. MARCH. Strike your bala Cook.

COOK involuntarily draws her jo hands sharply in upon her a tude.

MR. MARCH. Well? . . . I didn't the little voice within.

COOK. Ask Master Johnny, sir; been in the war.

MR. MARCH. [To MARY] Get Joh

MARY goes out.

MRS. MARCH. What on earth ha war to do with it?

COOK. The things he tells me, m is too wonderful for words. He's do with prisoners and generals, sort of 'orror.

MR. MARCH. Cook's quite right. war destroyed all our ideals and ably created the baby.

MRS. MARCH. It didn't smother condemn the girl.

MR. MARCH. [Running his through his hair] The more I thi that——! [He turns

MRS. MARCH. [Indicating her band] You see, Cook, that's the in which I have to engage a pa maid. What am I to do with your ter?

OOK. It's an 'ealthy rage, ma'am.
RS. MARCH. I'm tired of being the sober person in this house.
OOK. [Reproachfully] Oh! ma'am, I r touch a drop.
RS. MARCH. I didn't mean anything hat sort. But they do break out

OOK. Not Master Johnny.
RS. MARCH. Johnny! He's the worst ll. His poetry is nothing but one explosion.
R. MARCH. [Coming from the win-] I say: We ought to have faith and).
RS. MARCH. If we do have Faith, we jump.
OOK. [Blankly] Of course, in the e they 'ad faith, and just look what l to them!
R. MARCH. I mean faith in human ucts, human nature, Cook.
OOK. [Scandalised] Oh! no, sir, uman nature; I never let that get pper hand.
R. MARCH. You talk to Mr. Bly. a remarkable man.
OOK. I do, sir, every fortnight when es the kitchen windows.
R. MARCH. Well, doesn't he impress

OOK. Ah! When he's got a drop o' in 'im—Oh! dear!

[She smiles placidly.

OHNNY has come in.

. MARCH. Well, Johnny, has Mary you?
S. MARCH. [Looking at his face] my dear boy, don't be hasty and h!
HNNY. Of course you ought to take Mother.
S. MARCH. [Fixing him] Have you ier, Johnny?
HNNY. She's in the hall, poor little waiting for her sentence.
S. MARCH. There are plenty of chances, Johnny. Why on earth l we——?
NNY. Mother, it's just an instance. something comes along that takes of doing—Give it to the other

MARCH. Bravo, Johnny!
S. MARCH. [Drily] Let me see, which of us will have to put up with her shortcomings—Johnny or I?

MARY. She looks quick, Mother.

MRS. MARCH. Girls pick up all sorts of things in prison. We can hardly expect her to be honest. You don't mind that, I suppose?

JOHNNY. It's a chance to make something decent out of her.

MRS. MARCH. I can't understand this passion for vicarious heroism, Johnny.

JOHNNY. Vicarious!

MRS. MARCH. Well, where do you come in? You'll make poems about the injustice of the Law. Your father will use her in a novel. She'll wear Mary's blouses, and everybody will be happy—except Cook and me.

MR. MARCH. Hang it all, Joan, you might be the Great Public itself!

MRS. MARCH. I am—get all the kicks and none of the ha'pence.

JOHNNY. We'll all help you.

MRS. MARCH. For Heaven's sake—no, Johnny!

MR. MARCH. Well, make up your mind!

MRS. MARCH. It was made up long ago.

JOHNNY. [Gloomily] The more I see of things the more disgusting they seem. I don't see what we're living for. All right. Chuck the girl out, and let's go rooting along with our noses in the dirt.

MR. MARCH. Steady, Johnny!

JOHNNY. Well, Dad, there was one thing anyway we learned out there—When a chap was in a hole—to pull him out, even at a risk.

MRS. MARCH. There are people who—the moment you pull them out—jump in again.

MARY. We can't tell till we've tried, Mother.

COOK. It's wonderful the difference good food'll make, ma'am.

MRS. MARCH. Well, you're all against me. Have it your own way, and when you regret it—remember me!

MR. MARCH. We will—we will! That's settled, then. Bring her in and tell her. We'll go on to the terrace.

[He goes out through the window, followed by JOHNNY.

MARY. [Opening the door] Come in, please.

FAITH enters and stands beside COOK, close to the door. MARY goes out.

MRS. MARCH. [Matter of fact in defeat as in victory] You want to come to us, I hear.

FAITH. Yes.

MRS. MARCH. And you don't know much?

FAITH. No.

COOK. [Softly] Say ma'am, dearie.

MRS. MARCH. Cook is going to do her best for you. Are you going to do yours for us?

FAITH. [With a quick look up] Yes—ma'am.

MRS. MARCH. Can you begin at once?

FAITH. Yes.

MRS. MARCH. Well, then, Cook will show you where things are kept, and how to lay the table and that. Your wages will be thirty until we see where we are. Every other Sunday, and Thursday afternoon. What about dresses?

FAITH. [Looking at her dress] I've only got this—I had it before, of course, it hasn't been worn.

MRS. MARCH. Very neat. But I meant for the house. You've no money, I suppose?

FAITH. Only one pound thirteen, ma'am.

MRS. MARCH. We shall have to find you some dresses, then. Cook will take you to-morrow to Needham's. You needn't wear a cap unless you like. Well, I hope you'll get on. I'll leave you with Cook now.

After one look at the girl, who is standing motionless, she goes out.

FAITH. [With a jerk, as if coming out of plaster of Paris] She's never been in prison!

COOK. [Comfortably] Well, my dear, we can't all of us go everywhere, 'owever 'ard we try!

She is standing back to the dresser, and turns to it, opening the right-hand drawer.

COOK. Now, 'ere's the wine. The master likes 'is glass. And 'ere's the spirits in the tantaliser—'tisn't ever kept locked, in case Master Johnny should bring a friend in. Have you noticed Mast Johnny?

FAITH nods.

COOK. Ah! He's a dear boy; and wo derful high-principled since he's be in the war. He'll come to me som times and say: "Cook, we're all g to the devil!" They think 'igh of 'im as a poet. He spoke up for y beautiful.

FAITH. Oh! He spoke up for me?

COOK. Well, of course they had to ta you over.

FAITH. I wonder if they think I got feelings.

COOK. [Regarding her moody, pret face] Why! We all have feelin's!

FAITH. Not below three hundred year.

COOK. [Scandalised] Dear, de Where were you educated?

FAITH. I wasn't.

COOK. Tt! Well—it's wonderful wh a change there is in girls since young days. [Pulling out a draw Here's the napkins. You change the n ter's every day at least because of moustache; and the others every days, but always clean ones Sunda Did you keep Sundays in there?

FAITH. [Smiling] Yes. Longer cha

COOK. It'll be a nice change for y here. They don't go to Church; the agnosticals. [Patting her shoulder] H old are you?

FAITH. Twenty.

COOK. Think of that—and such a l Now, dearie, I'm your friend. Let present bury the past—as the sayin Forget all about yourself, and you' a different girl in no time.

FAITH. Do you want to be a diffe woman?

COOK is taken flat aback by so den a revelation of the pharis of which she has not been scious.

COOK. Well! You are sharp! [Op another dresser drawer] Here's the gar! And here's the sweets, and [r anxiously] you mustn't eat them.

FAITH. I wasn't in for theft.

COOK. [Shocked at such rudime exposure of her natural misgivings no! But girls have appetites.

ITH. They didn't get much chance e I've been.

OK. Ah! You must tell me all about id you have adventures?

ITH. There isn't such a thing in a n.

OK. You don't say! Why, in the s they're escapin' all the time. But s is books; I've always said so. were the men?

ITH. Never saw a man—only a ain.

OK. Dear, dear! They must be quite to you, then! How long was it?

ITH. Two years.

OK. And never a day out? What did o all the time? Did they learn you ing?

K. Oh! dear—what things do come our head! Why! No one can take r from its mother.

TH. Except the Law.

K. Tt! Tt! Well! Here's the d onions. Miss Mary loves 'em! then, let me see you lay the cloth. he takes a tablecloth out, hands it to FAITH, and while the girl begins to unfold the cloth she crosses to the service shutter.

K. And here's where we pass the through into the pantry. he door is opened, and MRS. MARCH'S voice says: "Cook—a minute!"

K. [Preparing to go] Salt cellars each corner—four, and the pep- From the door] Now the decan- h! you'll soon get on.

. MARCH. Cook!

K. Yes, ma'am. [She goes.

ITH, left alone, stands motionless, biting her pretty lip, her eyes mutinous. Hearing footsteps, she looks up. MR. BLY, with his pail and cloths, appears outside.

[Preparing to work, while FAITH es to set the salt cellars] So you- it! You never know your luck. Up to-day and down to-morrow. I'll 'ave a glass over this to-night. What d'you get?

FAITH. Thirty.

BLY. It's not the market price, still, you're not the market article. Now, put a good heart into it and get to know your job; you'll find Cook full o' philosophy if you treat her right—she can make a dumplin' with anybody. But look 'ere; you confine yourself to the ladies!

FAITH. I don't want your advice, Father.

BLY. I know parents are out of date; still, I've put up with a lot on your account, so gimme a bit of me own back.

FAITH. I don't know whether I shall like this. I've been shut up so long. I want to see some life.

BLY. Well, that's natural. But I want you to do well. I suppose you'll be comin' 'ome to fetch your things to-night?

FAITH. Yes.

BLY. I'll have a flower for you. What'd you like—daffydils?

FAITH. No; one with a scent to it.

BLY. I'll ask at Mrs. Bean's round the corner. She'll pick 'em out from what's over. Never 'ad much nose for a flower meself. I often thought you'd like a flower when you was in prison.

FAITH. [A little touched] Did you? Did you—really?

BLY. Ah! I suppose I've drunk more glasses over your bein' in there than over anything that ever 'appened to me. Why! I couldn't relish the war for it! And I suppose you 'ad none to relish. Well, it's over. So, put an 'eart into it.

FAITH. I'll try.

BLY. "There's compensation for everything"—'Aigel says. At least, if it wasn't 'Aigel it was one o' the others. I'll move on to the study now. Ah! He's got some winders there lookin' right over the country. And a wonderful lot o' books, if you feel inclined for a read one of these days.

COOK'S VOICE. Faith!

FAITH sets down the salt cellar in her hand, puts her tongue out a very little, and goes out into the hall. MR. BLY is gathering up his pail and cloths when MR. MARCH enters at the window.

MR. MARCH. So it's fixed up, Mr. Bly.

BLY. [Raising himself] I'd like to shake your 'and, sir. [They shake hands] It's a great weight off my mind.

MR. MARCH. It's rather a weight on my wife's, I'm afraid. But we must hope for the best. The country wants rain, but—I doubt if we shall get it with this Government.

BLY. Ah! We want the good old times—when you could depend on the seasons. The further you look back the more dependable the times get; 'ave you noticed that, sir?

MR. MARCH. [Suddenly] Suppose they'd hanged your daughter, Mr. Bly. What would you have done?

BLY. Well, to be quite frank, I should 'ave got drunk on it.

MR. MARCH. Public opinion's always in advance of the Law. I think your daughter's a most pathetic little figure.

BLY. Her looks are against her. I never found a man that didn't.

MR. MARCH. [A little disconcerted] Well, we'll try and give her a good show here.

BLY. [Taking up his pail] I'm greatly obliged; she'll appreciate anything you can do for her. [He moves to the door and pauses there to say] Fact is—her winders wants cleanin', she 'ad a dusty time in there.

MR. MARCH. I'm sure she had.

MR. BLY passes out, and MR. MARCH busies himself in gathering up his writing things preparatory to seeking his study. While he is so engaged FAITH comes in. Glancing at him, she resumes her placing of the decanters, as JOHNNY enters by the window, and comes down to his father by the hearth.

JOHNNY. [Privately] If you haven't begun your morning, Dad, you might just tell me what you think of these verses.

He puts a sheet of notepaper before his father, who takes it and begins to con over the verses thereon, while JOHNNY looks carefully at his nails.

MR. MARCH. Er—I—I like the line awfully, Johnny.

JOHNNY. [Gloomily] What about other eleven?

MR. MARCH. [Tentatively] Well—man, I—er—think perhaps it'd be stro er if they were out.

JOHNNY. Good God!

He takes back the sheet of pa clutches his brow, and crosse the door. As he passes FA she looks up at him with full of expression. JOHNNY ca es the look, jibs ever so little, goes out.

COOK'S VOICE. [Through the d which is still ajar] Faith!

FAITH puts the decanters on table, and goes quickly out.

MR. MARCH. [Who has seen this tle by-play—to himself—in a voice dismay] Oh! oh! I wonder!

. MARCH. The girl's past makes it sible to say anything to her.
RY. Well, I warn you. Johnny's queer just now; he's in the "lose the to save your soul" mood. It really bad of that girl. After all, we did most people wouldn't.
. MARCH. Come! Get your hat on, , or we shan't make the tube be- he next shower.
RY. [Going to the door] Some- must be done.
. MARCH. As you say, something Ah! Mr. Bly!
[R. BLY, in precisely the same case as a fortnight ago, with his pail and cloths, is coming in.
. Afternoon, sir! Shall I be dis- g you if I do the winders here?
MARCH. Not at all.
R. BLY crosses to the windows.
AY. [Pointing to MR. BLY'S back]

. Showery, sir.
MARCH. Ah!
. Very tryin' for winders. [*Rest- My daughter givin' satisfaction, I

MARCH. [With difficulty] Er—in ork, I believe, coming on well. e question is, Mr. Bly, do—er— us ever really give satisfaction to ourselves?
. [Taking it as an invitation to his phical vein] Ah! that's one as to the roots of 'uman nature. There's a lot of disposition in all of us. And what I always say is: One man's disposition is another man's indisposition.

MR. MARCH. By George! Just hits the mark.

BLY. [Filling his sponge] Question is: How far are you to give rein to your disposition? When I was in Durban, Natal, I knew a man who had the biggest disposition I ever come across. 'E struck 'is wife, 'e smoked opium, 'e was a liar, 'e gave all the rein 'e could, and yet withal one of the pleasantest men I ever met.

MR. MARCH. Perhaps in giving rein he didn't strike you.

BLY. [With a big wipe, following his thought] He said to me once: "Joe," he said, "if I was to hold meself in, I should be a devil." There's where you get it. Policemen, priests, prisoners. Cab'net Ministers, anyone who leads an unnatural life, see how it twists 'em. You can't suppress a thing without it swellin' you up in another place.

MR. MARCH. And the moral of that is——?

BLY. Follow your instincts. You see—if I'm not keepin' you—now that we ain't got no faith, as we were sayin' the other day, no Ten Commandments in black an' white—we've just got to be 'uman bein's—raisin' Cain, and havin' feelin' hearts. What's the use of all these lofty ideas that you can't live up to? Liberty, Fraternity, Equality, Democracy—see what comes o' fightin' for 'em! 'Ere we are—wipin' out the lot. We thought they was fixed stars; they was only comets—hot air. No; trust 'uman nature, I say, and follow your instincts.

MR. MARCH. We were talking of your daughter—I—I——

BLY. There's a case in point. Her instincts was starved goin' on for three years, because, mind you, they kept her hangin' about in prison months before they tried her. I read your article, and I thought to meself after I'd finished: Which would I feel smallest—if I was—the Judge, the Jury, or the 'Ome Secretary? It was a treat, that article! They ought to abolish that in'uman "To be hanged by the neck until she is dead." It's my belief they only keep it because it's poetry; that and the wigs —they're hard up for a bit of beauty in the Courts of Law. Excuse my 'and, sir; I do thank you for that article.

He extends his wiped hand, which MR. MARCH shakes with the feeling that he is always shaking MR. BLY'S hand.

MR. MARCH. But, àpropos of your daughter, Mr. Bly. I suppose none of us ever change our natures.

BLY. [Again responding to the appeal that he senses to his philosophical vein.] Ah! but 'oo can see what our natures are? Why, I've known people that could see nothin' but theirselves and their own families, unless they was drunk. At my daughter's trial, I see right into the lawyers, judge and all. There she was, hub of the whole thing, and all they could see of her was 'ow far she affected 'em personally—one trying to get 'er guilty, the other tryin' to get 'er off, and the judge summin' 'er up cold-blooded.

MR. MARCH. But that's what they're paid for, Mr. Bly.

BLY. Ah! But which of 'em was thinkin': "'Ere's a little bit o' warm life on its own. 'Ere's a little dancin' creature. What's she feelin', wot's 'er complaint?" —impersonal-like. I like to see a man do a bit of speculatin', with his mind off of 'imself, for once.

MR. MARCH. "The man that hath not speculation in his soul."

BLY. That's right, sir. When I see a mangy cat or a dog that's lost, or a fellow-creature down on his luck, I always try to put meself in his place. It's a weakness I've got.

MR. MARCH. [Warmly] A deuced good one. Shake——

[He checks himself, but MR. BLY has wiped his hand and extended it. While the shake is in progress MARY returns, and, having seen it to a safe conclusion, speaks.

MARY. Coming, Dad?

MR. MARCH. Excuse me, Mr. Bly, I must away.

[He goes towards the door, and BLY dips his sponge.

MARY. [In a low voice] Well?

MR. MARCH. Mr. Bly is like all greater men I know—he can't listen.

MARY. But you were shaking——

MR. MARCH. Yes; it's a weakness have—every three minutes.

MARY. [Bubbling] Dad—— Silly!

MR. MARCH. Very!

As they go out MR. BLY pauses his labours to catch, as it were philosophical reflection. He sumes the wiping of a pane, wi quietly, behind him, FAITH co in with a tray. She is dressed n in lilac-coloured linen, withou cap, and looks prettier than e She puts the tray down on sideboard with a clap that attr her father's attention, and sta contemplating the debris on table.

BLY. They spoiled your dispositio that place, I'm afraid.

FAITH. Try it, and see what the with yours.

BLY. Well, I may come to it yet.

FAITH. You'll get no windows to out of there; a little bit of a thing bars to it, and lucky if it's not glass. [Standing still and gazing MR. BLY] No sun, no trees, no fa people don't pass in the sky, not angels.

BLY. Ah! But you shouldn't over it. I knew a man in Valpiras

FAITH puts another chocolate into her mouth, and taking up a flower, twirls round with it held to her nose, and looks at herself in the glass over the hearth. She is still looking at herself when she sees in the mirror a reflection of JOHNNY, who has come in. Her face grows just a little scared, as if she had caught the eye of a warder peering through the peep-hole of her cell door, then brazens, and slowly sweetens as she turns round to him.

JOHNNY. Sorry! [He has a pipe in his hand and wears a Norfolk jacket] Fond of flowers?

FAITH. Yes. [She puts back the flower] Ever so!

JOHNNY. Stick to it. Put it in your hair; it'll look jolly. How do you like it here?

FAITH. It's quiet.

JOHNNY. Ha! I wonder if you've got the feeling I have. We've both had hell, you know; I had three years of it out there, and you've had three years of it here. The feeling that you can't catch up; can't live fast enough to get even.

FAITH nods.

JOHNNY. Nothing's big enough; nothing's worth while enough—is it?

FAITH. I don't know. I know I'd like to bite. [She draws her lips back.

JOHNNY. Ah! Tell me all about your beastly time; it'll do you good. You and I are different from anybody else in this house. We've lived—they've just vegetated. Come on; tell me!

FAITH, who up to now has looked on him as a young male, stares at him for the first time without sex in her eyes.

FAITH. I can't. We didn't talk in there, you know.

JOHNNY. Were you fond of the chap who——?

FAITH. No. Yes. I suppose I was—once.

JOHNNY. He must have been rather a swine.

FAITH. He's dead.

JOHNNY. Sorry! Oh, sorry!

FAITH. I've forgotten all that.

JOHNNY. Beastly things, babies; and absolutely unnecessary in the present state of the world.

FAITH. [With a faint smile] My baby wasn't beastly; but I—I got upset.

JOHNNY. Well, I should think so!

FAITH. My friend in the manicure came and told me about hers when I was lying in the hospital. She couldn't have it with her, so it got neglected and died.

JOHNNY. Um! I believe that's quite common.

FAITH. And she told me about another girl—the Law took her baby from her. And after she was gone, I—got all worked up—— [She hesitates, then goes swiftly on] And I looked at mine; it was asleep just here, quite close. I just put out my arm like that, over its face—quite soft—I didn't hurt it. I didn't really. [She suddenly swallows, and her lips quiver] I didn't feel anything under my arm. And—and a beast of a nurse came on me, and said: "You've smothered your baby, you wretched girl!" I didn't want to kill it—I only wanted to save it from living. And when I looked at it, I went off screaming.

JOHNNY. I nearly screamed when I saved my first German from living. I never felt the same again. They say the human race has got to go on, but I say they've first got to prove that the human race wants to. Would you rather be alive or dead?

FAITH. Alive.

JOHNNY. But would you have in prison?

FAITH. I don't know. You can't tell anything in there. [With sudden vehemence] I wish I had my baby back, though. It was mine; and I—I don't like thinking about it.

JOHNNY. I know. I hate to think about anything I've killed, really. At least, I should—but it's better not to think.

FAITH. I could have killed that judge.

JOHNNY. Did he come the heavy father? That's what I can't stand. When they jaw a chap and hang him afterwards. Or was he one of the joking ones?

FAITH. I've sat in my cell and cr all night—night after night, I ha [With a little laugh] I cried all the sc ness out of me.

JOHNNY. [Suddenly, removing his arm] Gosh! If I could write a poem that would show everybody what was in the heart of everybody else——!

FAITH. It'd be too long for the papers, wouldn't it?

JOHNNY. It'd be too strong.

FAITH. Besides, you don't know.

[Her eyelids go up.

JOHNNY. [Staring at her] I could tell what's in you now.

FAITH. What?

JOHNNY. You feel like a flower that's been picked.

FAITH'S smile is enigmatic.

FAITH. [Suddenly] Why do you go on about me so?

JOHNNY. Because you're weak—little and weak. [Breaking out again] Damn it! We went into the war to save the little and weak; at least we said so; and look at us now! The bottom's out of all that. [Bitterly] There isn't a faith or an illusion left. Look here! I want to help you.

FAITH. [Surprisingly] My baby was little and weak.

JOHNNY. You never meant—— You didn't do it for your own advantage.

FAITH. It didn't know it was alive. [Suddenly] D'you think I'm pretty?

JOHNNY. As pie.

FAITH. Then you'd better keep away, hadn't you?

JOHNNY. Why?

FAITH. You might want a bite.

JOHNNY. Oh! I can trust myself.

FAITH. [Turning to the window, through which can be seen the darkening of a shower] It's raining. Father says windows never stay clean.

They stand close together, unaware that COOK has thrown up the service shutter, to see why the clearing takes so long. Her astounded head and shoulders pass into view just as FAITH suddenly puts up her face. JOHNNY'S lips hesitate, then move towards her forehead. But her face shifts, and they find themselves upon her lips. Once there, the emphasis cannot help but be considerable. COOK'S mouth falls open.

COOK. Oh!

[She closes the shutter, vanishing.

FAITH. What was that?

JOHNNY. Nothing. [Breaking away] Look here! I didn't mean—I oughtn't to have—— Please forget it!

FAITH. [With a little smile] Didn't you like it?

JOHNNY. Yes—that's just it. I didn't mean to—— It won't do.

FAITH. Why not?

JOHNNY. No, no! It's just the opposite of what—— No, no!

[He goes to the door, wrenches it open and goes out.

FAITH, still with that little half-mocking, half-contented smile, resumes the clearing of the table. She is interrupted by the entrance through the French windows of MR. MARCH and MARY, struggling with one small wet umbrella.

MARY. [Feeling his sleeve] Go and change, Dad.

MR. MARCH. Women's shoes! We could have made the tube but for your shoes.

MARY. It was your cold feet, not mine, dear. [Looking at FAITH and nudging him] Now!

She goes towards the door, turns to look at FAITH still clearing the table, and goes out.

MR. MARCH. [In front of the hearth] Nasty spring weather, Faith.

FAITH. [Still in the mood of the kiss] Yes, sir.

MR. MARCH. [Sotto voce] "In the spring a young man's fancy." I—I wanted to say something to you in a friendly way.

FAITH regards him as he struggles on.

MR. MARCH. Because I feel very friendly towards you.

FAITH. Yes.

MR. MARCH. So you won't take what I say in bad part?

FAITH. No.

MR. MARCH. After what you've been through, any man with a sense of chivalry——

FAITH gives a little shrug.

MR. MARCH. Yes, I know—but we don't all support the Government.

FAITH. I don't know anything abo the Government.

MR. MARCH. [Side-tracked on to hobby] Ah! I forgot. You saw no new papers. But you ought to pick up threads now. What paper does C take?

FAITH. Cosy.

MR. MARCH. Cosy? I don't seem What are its politics?

FAITH. It hasn't any—only funny b and fashions. It's full of corsets.

MR. MARCH. What does Cook w with corsets?

FAITH. She likes to think she lo like that.

MR. MARCH. By George! Cook idealist! Let's see!—er—I was speak of chivalry. My son, you know—e my son has got it.

FAITH. Badly?

MR. MARCH. [Suddenly alive to fact that she is playing with him] started by being sorry for you.

MR. MARCH. Of course. You can ways take what flowers you like—i is—if—er——

Mr. March's hands instinctively go up to it.

.. March. You mightn't think it, 'm talking to you seriously.

ITH. I was, too.

.. March. [Out of his depth] Well! wet; I must go and change.

'AITH follows him with her eyes as he goes out, and resumes the clearing of the table.

he has paused and is again smelling at the flower when she hears the door, and quickly resumes her work. It is Mrs. March, who comes in and goes to the writing-table, Left Back, without looking at Faith. She sits there writing a cheque, while Faith goes on clearing.

TH. [Tossing her head] All right!

Mrs. March. I'll speak to your father, if he isn't gone.

Faith. Why do you send me away—just for a kiss! What's a kiss?

Mrs. March. That will do.

Faith. [Desperately] He wanted to—to save me.

Mrs. March. You know perfectly well people can only save themselves.

Faith. I don't care for your son; I've got a young—— [She checks herself] I —I'll leave your son alone, if he leaves me.

Mrs. March rings the bell on the table.

Faith. [Desolately] Well? [She moves towards the door. Suddenly holding out the flower] Mr. March gave me that flower; would you like it back?

Mrs. March. Don't be absurd! If you want more money till you get a place, let me know.

Faith. I won't trouble you.

[She goes out.

Mrs. March goes to the window and drums her fingers on the pane. Cook enters.

Mrs. March. Cook, if Mr. Bly's still here, I want to see him. Oh! And it's three now. Have a cab at four o'clock.

Cook. [Almost tearful] Oh, ma'am—anybody but Master Johnny, and I'd 'ave been a deaf an' dummy. Poor girl! She's not responsive, I daresay. Suppose I was to speak to Master Johnny?

Mrs. March. No, no, Cook! Where's Mr. Bly?

Cook. He's done his windows; he's just waiting for his money.

Mrs. March. Then get him; and take that tray.

Cook. I remember the master kissin' me, when he was a boy. But then he never meant anything; so different from Master Johnny. Master Johnny takes things to 'eart.

Mrs. March. Just so, Cook.

Cook. There's not an ounce of vice in 'im. It's all his goodness, dear little feller.

Mrs. March. That's the danger, with a girl like that.

Cook. It's eatin' hearty all of a sudden that's made her poptious. But, there, ma'am, try her again. Master Johnny'll be so cut up!

MRS. MARCH. No playing with fire, Cook. We were foolish to let her come.

COOK. Oh! dear, he will be angry with me. If you hadn't been in the kitchen and heard me, ma'am, I'd ha' let it pass.

MRS. MARCH. That would have been very wrong of you.

COOK. Ah! But I'd do a lot of wrong things for Master Johnny. There's always someone you'll go wrong for!

MRS. MARCH. Well, get Mr. Bly; and take that tray, there's a good soul.

COOK goes out with the tray; and while waiting, MRS. MARCH finishes clearing the table. She has not quite finished when MR. BLY enters.

BLY. Your service, ma'am!

MRS. MARCH. [With embarrassment] I'm very sorry, Mr. Bly, but circumstances over which I have no control ——

BLY. [With deprecation] Ah! we all has them. The winders ought to be done once a week now the Spring's on 'em.

MRS. MARCH. No, no; it's your daughter——

BLY. [Deeply] Not been givin' way to 'er instincts, I do trust.

MRS. MARCH. Yes. I've just had to say good-bye to her.

BLY. [Very blank] Nothing to do with property, I hope?

MRS. MARCH. No, no! Giddiness with my son. It's impossible; she really must learn.

BLY. Oh! but 'oo's to learn 'er? Couldn't you learn your son instead?

MRS. MARCH. No. My son is very high-minded.

BLY. [Dubiously] I see. How am I goin' to get over this? Shall I tell you what I think, ma'am?

MRS. MARCH. I'm afraid it'll be no good.

BLY. That's it. Character's born, not made. You can clean yer winders and clean 'em, but that don't change the colour of the glass. My father would have given her a good hidin', but I shan't. Why not? Because my glass ain't as thick as his. I see through it; I see my girl's temptations, I see what sh —likes a bit o' life, likes a flower, a dance. She's a natural morganatic.

MRS. MARCH. A what?

BLY. Nothin'll ever make her r lar. Mr. March'll understand how I Poor girl! In the mud again. Well, must keep smilin'. [His face is as lon his arm] The poor 'ave their trou there's no doubt. [He turns to There's nothing can save her but m ey, so as she can do as she likes. T she wouldn't want to do it.

MRS. MARCH. I'm very sorry, there it is.

BLY. And I thought she was goi be a success here. Fact is, you can't anything till it 'appens. There's win all round, but you can't see. Follow y instincts—it's the only way.

MRS. MARCH. It hasn't helped daughter.

BLY. I was speakin' philosophic! W I'll go 'ome now, and prepare m for the worst.

MRS. MARCH. Has Cook given your money?

BLY. She 'as.

He goes out gloomily and is ne overthrown in the doorway by violent entry of JOHNNY.

JOHNNY. What's this, Mother? I w have it—it's pre-war.

MRS. MARCH. [Indicating MR. B Johnny!

JOHNNY waves BLY out of the r and closes the door.

JOHNNY. I won't have her go. She pathetic little creature.

MRS. MARCH. [Unruffled] She minx.

JOHNNY. Mother!

MRS. MARCH. Now, Johnny, be sible. She's a very pretty girl, and is my house.

pping the thing up in catchwords?
n touch! A young man like you never saved a girl like her. It's as fantastic as—as Tolstoi's "Resurrection."

JOHNNY. Tolstoi was the most truthful writer that ever lived.

MRS. MARCH. Tolstoi was a Russian—always proving that what isn't, is.

JOHNNY. Russians are charitable, anyway, and see into other people's souls.

MRS. MARCH. That's why they're hopeless.

JOHNNY. Well—for cynicism——

MRS. MARCH. It's at least as important, Johnny, to see into ourselves as into other people. I've been trying to make your father understand that ever since we married. He'd be such a good writer if he did—he wouldn't write at all.

JOHNNY. Father has imagination.

MRS. MARCH. And no business to meddle with practical affairs. You and he always ride in front of the hounds. Do you remember when the war broke out, how angry you were with me because I said we were fighting from a sense of self-preservation? Well, weren't we?

JOHNNY. That's what I'm doing now, anyway.

MRS. MARCH. Saving this girl, to save yourself?

JOHNNY. I must have something decent to do sometimes. There isn't an ideal left.

MRS. MARCH. If you knew how tired I am of the word, Johnny!

JOHNNY. There are thousands who feel like me—that the bottom's out of everything. It sickens me that anything in the least generous should get sat on by all you people who haven't risked your lives.

MRS. MARCH. [With a smile] I risked mine when you were born, Johnny. You were always very difficult.

JOHNNY. That girl's been telling me—I can see the whole thing.

MRS MARCH. The fact that she suffered doesn't alter her nature; or the danger to you and us.

JOHNNY. There is no danger—I told her I didn't mean it.

MRS. MARCH. And she smiled? Didn't she?

JOHNNY. I—I don't know.

MRS. MARCH. If you were ordinary, Johnny, it would be the girl's look-out.

But you're not, and I'm not going to have you in the trap she'll set for you.

JOHNNY. You think she's a designing minx. I tell you she's got no more design in her than a rabbit. She's just at the mercy of anything.

MRS. MARCH. That's the trap. She'll play on your feelings, and you'll be caught.

JOHNNY. I'm not a baby.

MRS. MARCH. You are—and she'll smother you.

JOHNNY. How beastly women are to each other!

MRS. MARCH. We know ourselves, you see. The girl's father realises perfectly what she is.

JOHNNY. Mr. Bly is a dodderer. And she's got no mother. I'll bet you've never realised the life girls who get outed lead. I've seen them—I saw them in France. It gives one the horrors.

MRS. MARCH. I can imagine it. But no girl gets "outed," as you call it, unless she's predisposed that way.

JOHNNY. That's all you know of the pressure of life.

MRS. MARCH. Excuse me, Johnny. I worked three years among factory girls, and I know how they manage to resist things when they've got stuff in them.

JOHNNY. Yes, I know what you mean by stuff—good hard self-preservative instinct. Why should the wretched girl who hasn't got that be turned down? She wants protection all the more.

MRS. MARCH. I've offered to help with money till she gets a place.

JOHNNY. And you know she won't take it. She's got that much stuff in her. This place is her only chance. I appeal to you, Mother—please tell her not to go.

MRS. MARCH. I shall not, Johnny.

JOHNNY. [Turning abruptly] Then we know where we are.

MRS. MARCH. I know where you'll be before a week's over.

JOHNNY. Where?

MRS. MARCH. In her arms.

JOHNNY. [From the door, grimly] If I am, I'll have the right to be!

MRS. MARCH. Johnny!

[But he is gone.

MRS. MARCH follows to call back, but is met by MARY.

MARY. So you've tumbled, Mother

MRS. MARCH. I should think I ha Johnny is making an idiot of him about that girl.

MARY. He's got the best intention

MRS. MARCH. It's all your fat What can one expect when your fat carries on like a lunatic over his pa every morning?

MARY. Father must have opinions his own.

MRS. MARCH. He has only one: Wh ever is is wrong.

MARY. He can't help being intell tual, Mother.

MRS. MARCH. If he would only le that the value of a sentiment is amount of sacrifice you are prepared make for it!

MARY. Yes: I read that in The Ti yesterday. Father's much safer t Johnny. Johnny isn't safe at all, he mi make a sacrifice any day. What w they doing?

MRS. MARCH. Cook caught them k ing.

MARY. How truly horrible!

As she speaks MR. MARCH co in.

MR. MARCH. I met Johnny using most poetic language. What's happen

MR. MARCH. No. I was only sayin Mary——

MRS. MARCH. Oh! You were!

MR. MARCH. But I can't quite see Johnny——

MRS. MARCH. The Government, I pose!

MR. MARCH. Certainly.

MRS. MARCH. Well, perhaps you'l us out of the mess you've got us in

MR. MARCH. Where's the girl?

MRS. MARCH. In her room—pac

MR. MARCH. We must devise m ——

MRS. MARCH smiles.

R. MARCH. The first thing is to see them—and find out exactly——

RS. MARCH. Heavens! Are you go- o have them X-rayed? They haven't chest trouble, Geof.

R. MARCH. They may have heart ble. It's no good being hasty, Joan.

RS. MARCH. Oh! For a man that see an inch into human nature, give —psychological novelist!

R. MARCH. [With dignity] Mary, nd see where Johnny is.

ARY. Do you want him here?

R. MARCH. Yes.

ARY. [Dubiously] Well—if I can.

[She goes out.

A silence, during which the MARCHES look at each other by those turns which characterise exasperated domesticity.

RS. MARCH. If she doesn't go, John- ust. Are you going to turn him out?

. MARCH. Of course not. We must n with him.

RS. MARCH. Reason with young peo- hose lips were glued together half our ago! Why ever did you force take this girl?

. MARCH. [Ruefully] One can't s resist a kindly impulse, Joan. does Mr. Bly say to it?

RS. MARCH. Mr. Bly? "Follow your cts"—and then complains of his ter for following them.

. MARCH. The man's a philosopher.

RS. MARCH. Before we know where e, we shall be having Johnny mar- o that girl.

. MARCH. Nonsense!

RS. MARCH. Oh, Geof! Whenever faced with reality, you say "Non- !" You know Johnny's got chivalry brain.

[ARY comes in.

RY. He's at the top of the servants' ase, outside her room. He's sitting armchair, with its back to her door.

MARCH. Good Lord! Direct ac-

RY. He's got his pipe, a pound of ate, three volumes of "Monte Cris- d his old concertina. He says it's than the trenches.

MARCH. My hat! Johnny's made . This is serious.

MARY. Nobody can get up, and she can't get down. He says he'll stay there till all's blue, and it's no use either of you coming unless mother caves in.

MR. MARCH. I wonder if Cook could do anything with him?

MARY. She's tried. He told her to go to hell.

MR. MARCH. I say! And what did Cook——?

MARY. She's gone.

MR. MARCH. Tt! tt! This is very awkward.

COOK enters through the door which MARY has left open.

MR. MARCH. Ah, Cook! You're back, then? What's to be done?

MRS. MARCH. [With a laugh] We must devise means!

COOK. Oh, ma'am, it does remind me so of the tantrums he used to get into, dear little feller.

[Smiles with recollection.

MRS. MARCH. [Sharply] You're not to take him up anything to eat, Cook!

COOK. Oh; But Master Johnny does get so hungry. It'll drive him wild, ma- 'am. Just a snack now and then!

MRS. MARCH. No, Cook. Mind—that's flat!

COOK. Aren't I to feed Faith, ma'am?

MR. MARCH. Gad! It wants it!

MRS. MARCH. Johnny must come down to earth.

COOK. Ah! I remember how he used to fall down when he was little—he would go about with his head in the air. But he always picked himself up like a little man.

MARY. Listen!

They all listen. The distant sounds of a concertina being played with fury drift in through the open door.

COOK. Don't it sound 'eavenly!

The concertina utters a long wail. Curtain.

ACT III

The MARCHES' dining-room on the same evening at the end of a perfunctory dinner. MRS. MARCH sits at the dining-table with her back to the win- dows, MARY opposite the hearth, and MR. MARCH with his back to it. JOHNNY is not present. Silence and gloom.

MR. MARCH. We always seem to be eating.

MRS. MARCH. You've eaten nothing.

MR. MARCH. [Pouring himself out a liqueur glass of brandy but not drinking it] It's humiliating to think we can't exist without. [Relapses into gloom.

MRS. MARCH. Mary, pass him the walnuts.

MARY. I was thinking of taking them up to Johnny.

MR. MARCH. [Looking at his watch] He's been there six hours; even he can't live on faith.

MRS. MARCH. If Johnny wants to make a martyr of himself, I can't help it.

MARY. How many days are you going to let him sit up there, Mother?

MR. MARCH. [Glancing at MRS. MARCH] I never in my life knew anything so ridiculous.

MRS. MARCH. Give me a little glass of brandy, Geof.

MR. MARCH. Good! That's the first step towards seeing reason.

He pours brandy into a liqueur glass from the decanter which stands between them. MRS. MARCH puts the brandy to her lips and makes a little face, then swallows it down manfully. MARY gets up with the walnuts and goes. Silence. Gloom.

MRS. MARCH. Horrid stuff!

MR. MARCH. Haven't you begun to see that your policy's hopeless, Joan? Come! Tell the girl she can stay. If we make Johnny feel victorious—we can deal with them. It's just personal pride—the curse of this world. Both you and Johnny are as stubborn as mules.

MRS. MARCH. Human nature is stubborn, Geof. That's what you easy-going people never see.

MR. MARCH gets up, vexed, and goes to the fireplace.

MR. MARCH. [Turning] Well! This goes further than you think. It involves Johnny's affection and respect for you.

MRS. MARCH nervously refills little brandy glass, and again empties it, with a grimacing shudd

MR. MARCH. [Noticing] That's ter! You'll begin to see things pently.

MARY re-enters.

MARY. He's been digging himself He's put a screen across the head of stairs, and got Cook's blankets. going to sleep there.

MRS. MARCH. Did he take the nuts?

MARY. No; he passed them in to He says he's on hunger strike. But eaten all the chocolate and smoked self sick. He's having the time of life, Mother.

MR. MARCH. There you are!

MRS. MARCH. Wait till this time morrow.

MARY. Cook's been up again. wouldn't let her pass. She'll have sleep in the spare room.

MR. MARCH. I say!

MARY. And he's got the books out her room.

MRS. MARCH. D'you know what are? "The Scarlet Pimpernel," Wide, Wide World," and the Bible.

MARY. Johnny likes romance.

ARY. Because it's so usual. Do fix alf-way at once.

RS. MARCH. There is no half-way.

ARY. Well, for goodness sake think plan which will make you both look rious. That's always done in the Why not let her stay, and make ny promise only to see her in the nce of a third party?

S. MARCH. Because she'd see him day while he was looking for the party. She'd help him look for it.

RY. [With a gurgle] Mother, I'd a you were so—French.

S. MARCH. It seems to me you none have any idea what I am.

RY. Well, do remember that there- no publicity to make either of you small. You can have Peace with ur, whatever you decide. [Listen- There they are! Now, Mother, be logical! It's so feminine.

s the door opens, MRS. MARCH nervously fortifies herself with the third little glass of brandy. She remains seated. MARY is on her right.

IR. MARCH leads into the room and stands next his daughter, then FAITH in hat and coat to the left of the table, and JOHNNY, pale but determined, last. Assembled thus, in a half fan, of which MRS. MARCH is the apex, so to speak, they are all extremely embarrassed, and no wonder.

uddenly MARY gives a little gurgle.

NNY. You'd think it funnier if just come out of prison and were to be chucked out of your job, on world again.

TH. I didn't want to come down If I'm to go I want to go at once. if I'm not, it's my evening out,

She moves towards the door. JOHN- NY takes her by the shoulders.

NNY. Stand still, and leave it to AITH looks up at him, hypnotised by his determination.

NNY. Now, Mother, I've come down at your request to discuss this; are you ready to keep her? Otherwise up we go again.

MR. MARCH. That's not the way to go to work, Johnny. You mustn't ask people to eat their words raw—like that.

JOHNNY. Well, I've had no dinner, but I'm not going to eat my words I tell you plainly.

MRS. MARCH. Very well then; go up again.

MARY. [Muttering] Mother—logic.

MR. MARCH. Great Scott! You two haven't the faintest idea of how to conduct a parley. We have—to—er—explore every path to find a way to peace.

MRS. MARCH. [To FAITH] Have you thought of anything to do, if you leave here?

FAITH. Yes.

JOHNNY. What?

FAITH. I shan't say.

JOHNNY. Of course, she'll just chuck herself away.

FAITH. No, I won't. I'll go to a place I know of, where they don't want references.

JOHNNY. Exactly!

MRS. MARCH. [To FAITH] I want to ask you a question. Since you came out, is this the first young man who's kissed you?

FAITH has hardly had time to start and manifest what may or may not be indignation when MR. MARCH dashes his hands through his hair.

MR. MARCH. Joan, really!

JOHNNY. [Grimly] Don't condescend to answer!

MRS. MARCH. I thought we'd met to get at the truth.

MARY. But do they ever?

FAITH. I will go out!

JOHNNY. No! [And, as his back is against the door, she can't] I'll see that you're not insulted any more.

MR. MARCH. Johnny, I know you have the best of intentions, but really the proper people to help the young are the old—like——

FAITH suddenly turns her eyes on him, and he goes on rather hurriedly.

MR. MARCH. —your mother. I'm sure that she and I will be ready to stand by Faith.

FAITH. I don't want charity.

MR. MARCH. No, no! But I hope——

MRS. MARCH. To devise means.

MR. MARCH. [Roused] Of course, if nobody will modify their attitude—Johnny, you ought to be ashamed of yourself, and [To MRS. MARCH] so ought you, Joan.

JOHNNY. [Suddenly] I'll modify mine. [To FAITH] Come here—close! [In a low voice to FAITH] Will you give me your word to stay here, if I make them keep you?

FAITH. Why?

JOHNNY. To stay here quietly for the next two years?

FAITH. I don't know.

JOHNNY. I can make them, if you'll promise.

FAITH. You're just in a temper.

JOHNNY. Promise!

During this colloquy the MARCHES have been so profoundly uneasy that MRS. MARCH has poured out another glass of brandy.

MR. MARCH. Johnny, the terms of the Armistice didn't include this sort of thing. It was to be all open and above-board.

JOHNNY. Well, if you don't keep her, I shall clear out.

At this bombshell MRS. MARCH rises.

MARY. Don't joke, Johnny! You'll do yourself an injury.

JOHNNY. And if I go, I go for good.

MR. MARCH. Nonsense, Johnny! Don't carry a good thing too far!

JOHNNY. I mean it.

MRS. MARCH. What will you live on?

JOHNNY. Not poetry.

MRS. MARCH. What, then?

JOHNNY. Emigrate or go into the Police.

MR. MARCH. Good Lord! [Going up to his wife—in a low voice] Let her stay till Johnny's in his right mind.

FAITH. I don't want to stay.

JOHNNY. You shall!

MARY. Johnny, don't be a lunatic!

COOK enters, flustered.

COOK. Mr. Bly, ma'am, come after his daughter.

MR. MARCH. He can have her—he have her!

COOK. Yes, sir. But, you see, he' Well, there! He's cheerful.

MR. MARCH. Let him come and t his daughter away.

But MR. BLY has entered beh him. He has a fixed expressi and speaks with a too perfect curacy.

BLY. Did your two cooks tell you here?

MR. MARCH. If you want your dau ter, you can take her.

JOHNNY. Mr. Bly, get out!

BLY. [Ignoring him] I don't want fuss with your two cooks. [Catch sight of MRS. MARCH] I've prepa myself for this.

MRS. MARCH. So we see.

BLY. I 'ad a bit o' trouble, but I on till I see 'Aigel walkin' at me in loo-lookin'-glass. Then I knew I'd me balance.

They all regard MR. BLY in a fa nated manner.

FAITH. Father! You've been drinki

BLY. [Smiling] What do you think

MR. MARCH. We have a certain sy pathy with you, Mr. Bly.

BLY. [Gazing at his daughter] I d want that one. I'll take the other.

MARY. Don't repeat yourself, Mr. B

BLY. [With a flash of muddled sight] Well! There's two of everybo two of my daughter; an' two of 'Ome Secretary; and two—two of C —an' I don't want either. [He wa COOK aside, and grasps at a void alo side FAITH] Come along!

MR. MARCH. [Going up to him] V well, Mr. Bly! See her home, carefu Good night!

BLY. Shake hands.

He extends his other hand; MARCH grasps it and turns round towards the door.

MR. MARCH. Now, take her aw Cook, go and open the front door Mr. Bly and his daughter.

BLY. Too many cooks!

MR. MARCH. Now then, Mr. Bly, her along!

BLY. [Making no attempt to ac the real FAITH—to an apparition w ads with his right hand] You're the that died when my girl was 'ung.

you go first or shall—I?
The apparition does not answer.
ARY. Don't! It's horrible!
ITH. I did die.
Y. Prepare yourself. Then you'll see you never saw before.
He goes out with his apparition, shepherded by MR. MARCH.
MRS. MARCH drinks off her fourth glass of brandy. A peculiar whistle is heard through the open door, and FAITH starts forward.
NNY. Stand still!
TH. I—I must go.
RY. Johnny—let her!
TH. There's a friend waiting for

NNY. Let her wait! You're not fit out to-night.
RY. Johnny! Really! You're not rl's Friendly Society!
NNY. You none of you care a pin's what becomes of her. Can't you see on the edge?
he whistle is heard again, but fainter.
TH. I'm not in prison now.
NNY. [Taking her by the arm]
ght! I'll come with you.
TH. [Recoiling] No.
oices are heard in the hall.
RY. Who's that with father?
y, for goodness' sake don't make ridiculous.
R. MARCH'S voice is heard say- ing: "Your friend is in here."
He enters, followed by a reluctant young man in a dark suit, with dark hair and a pale square face, enlivened by strange, very living, dark, bull's eyes.
MARCH. [To FAITH, who stands
ing a little] I came on this—er—of yours outside; he's been wait-r you some time, he says.
. MARCH. [To FAITH] You can

NNY. [Suddenly, to the YOUNG
Who are you?
NG M. Ask another! [To FAITH]
ou ready?
NNY. [Seeing red] No, she's not;
ou'll just clear out.

MR. MARCH. Johnny!

YOUNG M. What have you got to do with her?

JOHNNY. Quit.

YOUNG M. I'll quit with her, and not before. She's my girl.

JOHNNY. Are you his girl?

FAITH. Yes.

MRS. MARCH sits down again, and reaching out her left hand, mechanically draws to her the glass of brandy which her husband had poured out for himself and left undrunk.

JOHNNY. Then why did you—[He is going to say: "Kiss me," but checks himself]—let me think you hadn't any friends? Who is this fellow?

YOUNG M. A little more civility, please.

JOHNNY. You look a blackguard, and I believe you are.

MR. MARCH. [With perfunctory authority] I really can't have this sort of thing in my house, Johnny, go upstairs; and you two, please go away.

YOUNG M. [To JOHNNY] We know the sort of chap you are—takin' advantage of workin' girls.

JOHNNY. That's a foul lie. Come into the garden and I'll prove it on your carcase.

YOUNG M. All right!

FAITH. No; he'll hurt you. He's been in the war.

JOHNNY. [To the YOUNG MAN] You haven't, I'll bet.

YOUNG M. I didn't come here to be slanged.

JOHNNY. This poor girl is going to have a fair deal, and you're not going to give it to her. I can see that with half an eye.

YOUNG M. You'll see it with no eyes when I've done with you.

JOHNNY. Come on, then.

[He goes up to the windows.

MR. MARCH. For God's sake, Johnny, stop this vulgar brawl!

FAITH. [Suddenly] I'm not a "poor girl" and I won't be called one. I don't want any soft words. Why can't you let me be? [Pointing to JOHNNY] He talks wild.

JOHNNY clutches the edge of the writing-table.

FAITH. Thinks he can "rescue" me. I don't want to be rescued. I—[All the feeling of years rises to the surface now that the barrier has broken]—I want to be let alone. I've paid for everything I've done—a pound for every shilling's worth. And all because of one minute when I was half crazy. [Flashing round at MARY] Wait till you've had a baby you oughtn't to have had, and not a penny in your pocket! It's money—money—all money!

YOUNG M. Sst. That'll do!

FAITH. I'll have what I like now, not what you think's good for me.

MR. MARCH. God knows we don't want to——

FAITH. You mean very well, Mr. March, but you're no good.

MR. MARCH. I knew it.

FAITH. You were very kind to me. But you don't see; nobody sees.

YOUNG M. There! That's enough! You're gettin' excited. You come away with me.

FAITH'S look at him is like the look of a dog at her master.

JOHNNY. [From the background] I know you're a blackguard—I've seen your sort.

FAITH. [Firing up] Don't call him names! I won't have it. I'll go with whom I choose! [Her eyes suddenly fix themselves on the YOUNG MAN'S face] And I'm going with him!

COOK enters.

MR. MARCH. What now, Cook?

COOK. A Mr. Barnabas in the hall, sir. From the police.

Everybody starts. MRS. MARCH drinks off her fifth little glass of brandy, then sits again.

MR. MARCH. From the police?

He does out, followed by COOK. A moment's suspense.

YOUNG M. Well, I can't wait any longer. I suppose we can go out the back way?

He draws FAITH towards the windows. But JOHNNY stands there, barring the way.

JOHNNY. No, you don't.

FAITH. [Scared] Oh! Let me go! let him go!

JOHNNY. You may go. [He takes h arm to pull her to the window] can't.

FAITH. [Freeing herself] No—n Not if he doesn't.

JOHNNY has an evident moment hesitation, and before it is o MR. MARCH comes in again, f lowed by a man in a neat suit plain clothes.

MR. MARCH. I should like you to s that in front of her.

P. C. MAN. Your service, ma'a Afraid I'm intruding here. Fact is, I been waiting for a chance to speak this young woman quietly. It's rat public here, sir; but if you wish, course, I'll mention it. [He waits some word from someone; no speaks, so he goes on almost apolog cally] Well, now, you're in a good pl here, and you ought to keep it. You do want fresh trouble, I'm sure.

FAITH. [Scared] What do you w with me?

P. C. MAN. I don't want to frigh you; but we've had word passed t you're associating with the young m there. I observed him to-night aga waiting outside here and whistling.

YOUNG M. What's the matter w whistling?

P. C. MAN. [Eyeing him] I sho keep quiet if I was you. As you kn sir [To MR. MARCH] there's a l nowadays against soo-tenors.

MR. MARCH. Soo——?

JOHNNY. I knew it.

P. C. MAN. [Deprecating] I do want to use any plain English—w ladies present——

YOUNG M. I don't know you. W are you after? Do you dare——?

P. C. MAN. We cut the darin', ti necessary. We know all about you.

FAITH. It's a lie!

P. C. MAN. There, miss, don't your feelings——

FAITH. [To the YOUNG MAN] It lie, isn't it?

YOUNG MAN. A blankety lie.

MR. MARCH. [To BARNABAS] H you actual proof?

OUNG M. Proof? It's his job to get s into a mess.
C. MAN. [Sharply] None of your
now!
At the new tone in his voice FAITH turns and visibly quails, like a dog that has been shown a whip.
R. MARCH. Inexpressibly painful!
OUNG M. Ah! How would you like e insulted in front of your girl? If 're a gentleman you'll tell him to the house. If he's got a warrant, im produce it; if he hasn't, let him ut.
C. MAN. [To MR. MARCH] You'll
rstand, sir, that my object in speak-you to-night was for the good of irl. Strictly, I've gone a bit out of ay. If my job was to get men into le, as he says, I'd only to wait till got hold of her. These fellows, you , are as cunning as lynxes and as lent as the devil.
UNG M. Now, look here, if I get nore of this from you—I—I'll con-lawyer.
INNY. Fellows like you——
. MARCH. Johnny!
C. MAN. Your son, sir?
UNG M. Yes; and wants to be e I am. But my girl knows better;
you?
He gives FAITH a look which has a certain magnetism.
C. MAN. If we could have the cleared of ladies, sir, we might a little plainer.
. MARCH. Joan!
ut MRS. MARCH does not vary her smiling immobility; FAITH draws a little nearer to the YOUNG MAN.
MARY turns to the fire.
C. MAN. [With half a smile] I on forgettin' that women are men lays. Well!
UNG M. When you've quite done
, we'll go for our walk.
MARCH. [To BARNABAS] I think better tell her anything you know.
C. MAN. [Eyeing FAITH and the G MAN] I'd rather not be more e, sir, at this stage.
UNG M. I should think not! Police
[To FAITH] You know what the s, once they get a down on you.

P. C. MAN. [To MR. MARCH] It's our business to keep an eye on all this sort of thing, sir, with girls who've just come out.

JOHNNY. [Deeply] You've only to look at his face!

YOUNG M. My face is as good as yours.

FAITH lifts her eyes to his.

P. C. MAN. [Taking in that look] Well, there it is! Sorry I wasted my time and yours, sir!

MR. MARCH. [Distracted] My goodness! Now, Faith, consider! This is the turning-point. I've told you we'll stand by you.

FAITH. [Flashing round] Leave me alone! I stick to my friends. Leave me alone, and leave him alone! What is it to you?

P. C. MAN. [With sudden resolution] Now, look here! This man George Blunter was had up three years ago for livin' on the earnings of a woman called Johnson. He was dismissed with a caution. We got him again last year over a woman called Lee—that time he did——

YOUNG M. Stop it! That's enough of your lip. I won't put up with this—not for any woman in the world. Not I!

FAITH. [With a sway towards him] It's not——!

YOUNG M. I'm off! Bong Swore la Companee!

[He turns on his heel and walks out unhindered.

P. C. MAN. [Deeply] A bad hat, that; if ever there was one. We'll be having him again before long.

He looks at FAITH. They all look at FAITH. But her face is so strange, so tremulous, that they all turn their eyes away.

FAITH. He—he said—he——!

On the verge of an emotional outbreak, she saves herself by an effort. A painful silence.

P. C. MAN. Well, sir—that's all. Good evening!

[He turns to the door, touching his forehead to MR. MARCH, and goes. As the door closes, FAITH sinks into a chair, and burying her face in her hands, sobs silently. MRS. MARCH sits motionless with a faint smile. JOHNNY stands at the window biting his nails. MARY crosses to FAITH.

MARY. [Softly] Don't. You weren't really fond of him?

FAITH bends her head.

MARY. But how could you? He——!

FAITH. I—I couldn't see inside him.

MARY. Yes; but he looked—couldn't you see he looked——?

FAITH. [Suddenly flinging up her head] If you'd been two years without a word, you'd believe anyone that said he liked you.

MARY. Perhaps I should.

FAITH. But I don't want him—he's a liar. I don't like liars.

MARY. I'm awfully sorry.

FAITH. [Looking at her] Yes—you keep off feeling--then you'll be happy! [Rising] Good-bye!

MARY. Where are you going?

FAITH. To my father.

MARY. With him in that state?

FAITH. He won't hurt me.

MARY. You'd better stay. Mother, she can stay, can't she?

MRS. MARCH nods.

FAITH. No!

MARY. Why not? We're all sorry. Do! You'd better.

FAITH. Father'll come over for my things to-morrow.

MARY. What are you going to do?

FAITH. [Proudly] I'll get on.

JOHNNY. [From the window] Stop!

All turn and look at him. He comes down.

JOHNNY. Will you come to me?

FAITH stares at him. MRS. MARCH continues to smile faintly.

MARY. [With a horrified gesture] Johnny!

JOHNNY. Will you? I'll play cricket if you do.

MR. MARCH. [Under his breath] Good God!

He stares in suspense at FAITH, whose face is a curious blend of fascination and live feeling.

JOHNNY. Well?

FAITH. [Softly] Don't be silly! I've got no call on you. You don't care for me, and I don't for you. No! You go and put your head in ice. [She turns to the door] Good-bye, Mr. March! I'm sorry I've been so much trouble.

MR. MARCH. Not at all, not at all!

FAITH. Oh! Yes, I have. There's nothing to be done with a girl like me. [She goes out.

JOHNNY. [Taking up the decanter] I pour himself out a glass of brandy. Empty!

COOK. [Who has entered with a tray] Yes, my dearie, I'm sure you are.

JOHNNY. [Staring at his father] Envision, Dad! Windows of Clubs—men sitting there; and that girl going out with rouge on her cheeks——

COOK. Oh! Master Johnny!

JOHNNY. A blue night—the moon over the Park. And she stops and looks at me——What has she wanted—the beautiful—something better than she's got—something that she'll never get!

COOK. Oh! Master Johnny!

She goes up to JOHNNY and touches his forehead. He comes to himself and hurries to the door, but suddenly MRS. MARCH utters a little feathery laugh. She stands there swaying slightly. There is something unusual and charming in her appearance, as if formality had dropped from her.

MRS. MARCH. [With a sort of delicate slow lack of perfect sobriety] It—it—all. You—can't—help—unless—it—love!

JOHNNY stops and looks round at her.

MR. MARCH. [Moving a little towards her] Joan!

MRS. MARCH. She—wants—to—be loved. It's the way of the world.

MARY. [Turning] Mother!

MRS. MARCH. You thought she was—to be saved. Silly! She—just—wants—to—be—loved. Quite natural!

MR. MARCH. Joan, what's happened to you?

MRS. MARCH. [Smiling and nodding] See—people—as—they—are! Then won't be—disappointed. Don't—have ideals! Have—vision—just simple vision!

MR. MARCH. Your mother's not well.

MRS. MARCH. [Passing her hand over her forehead] It's hot in here!

R. MARCH. Mary!

MARY throws open the French windows.

RS. MARCH. [Delightfully] The 's full of—Gas. Open the windows! ! And let's—walk—out—into the he turns and walks delicately out through the opened windows; JOHNNY and MARY follow her. The moonlight and the air flood in.

OK. [Coming to the table and taking up the empty decanter] My Holy Ma!

MR. MARCH. Is this the Millennium, Cook?

COOK. Oh! Master Geoffrey—there isn't a millehennium. There's too much human nature. We must look things in the face.

MR. MARCH. Ah! Neither up—nor down—but straight in the face! Quite a thought, Cook! Quite a thought!

RELL. Your advantage, Mr. Tre- . trust; sit down, sir.

is noticeable that chairs have been arranged more or less in radiation from a deep armchair with the little table beside it.

GAY. Thought it might have been hief's, Mr. Farrell; [reversing a and sitting astride of it] unless City of London has changed its since I saw it last.

RELL. The City! Oh, no, sir. It t change.

GAY. What's the latest financial circus? Haven't seen you since that Matabeleland racket, three years ago—in '95. How's Adrian Bastaple? Successful as ever?

FARRELL. [With a nervous look at the sanctuary on the Left] Oh! yes, sir—quite!

TREGAY. Well! Why have I been asked into the lion's den? 'Um!

FARRELL. [With again a nervous look] You've been away a long time, Mr. Tregay. China, was it?

TREGAY. And Peru. Good places to study finance while the blood flows. You should go yourself and see finance in flower—generally red!

FARRELL. A little hard on finance; necessary evil, Mr. Tregay, believe me—like—like manure.

TREGAY. Not bad! [Pointing to the chairs] Before they come, put me wise, as the Yanks say. What's Charles Stanforth doing in this galley? Adrian Bastaple and a Liberal Daily is not a marriage made in heaven. Any offspring so far?

FARRELL. Well, they're—they're expecting delivery to-day, sir.

TREGAY. What a little mongrel it'll be! Who else is coming to the ceremony?

FARRELL gives him one of his quick looks.

FARRELL. Er—Lord Elderleigh.

TREGAY. Old Elderleigh of the Bible League? Ye gods! What's the next portent?

FARRELL. Mr. Robert Beton.

FARRELL. Mr. Pole Revers.

TREGAY. Foreign Office!

FARRELL. Oh! Not officially. Under the rose, sir.

TREGAY. You bet! Well, the ingredients are all there for some fine tummy upsets. Am I the bicarbonate of soda?

FARRELL. Didn't Mr. Stanforth tell you?

TREGAY. [Shaking his head] Just got a message to come here at five.

FARRELL. Perhaps I oughtn't——

TREGAY. Out with it, Mr. Farrell.

FARRELL. Well, sir, your experience of Africa, and your reputation for lost causes——

TREGAY. Adrian Bastaple and a lost cause! Something's got loose!

FARRELL. Oh! no! Mr. Bastaple has quite set his heart——

TREGAY. Then there's money in it?

FARRELL. No, sir, a pure matter of benevolence. [One of his looks.

TREGAY. Now I think of it, I have seen his name in charity lists.

FARRELL. You have, sir—I see to that.

TREGAY. Ah! No limit to the things you do for him. Proud position, Mr. Farrell. What's the pure benevolence this time?

FARRELL. I'm sure it'll have your sympathy, sir; it's—the slave trade.

TREGAY. What! in the British Empire?

FARRELL. [With a smile] Oh! no, sir—oh! no!

TREGAY. Where then?

FARRELL. Congo.

TREGAY. But the Belgians rousted them out a year or two ago.

FARRELL. Well—[with one of his looks] yes. [The door on the Left is opened] Here is Mr. Bastaple. Mr. Tregay, sir.

FARRELL. [From the doorway] Pole Revers.

POLE REVERS is quick, tall, and a bit of a dandy. He bows to BASTAPLE, nods to STANFORTH and LORD ELDERLEIGH, stares at TREGAY, and takes a chair.

ARRELL. [From the doorway] Mr. ert Beton.

He stands watching the company a moment. BETON comes in, filling the eye with his large head on a short body and the breadth of his forehead. His eyes have power—epileptic eyes, seeing visions. He takes the end chair to the left of BASTAPLE.

TON. How do, my lord? How do, forth? Revers, yours.

[FARRELL goes.

STAPLE. [Introducing] Mr. Tregay.

BETON leans forward, staring, and makes an amicable movement of the hand at TREGAY.

TON. Ah! Mr. Tregay, glad to you. I suggested your name to Mr. orth. You know a Dr. Franks, I e?

EGAY. Franks! Clement Franks? ousin—Out at Mombasa.

NFORTH. Quite; but we Liberals —

EGAY. That you want a war-cry.

TANFORTH turns on him a stony stare.

ERLEIGH. Mr. Beton, you spoke of a man; is he ready?

TON. At Mombasa, waiting for the "Go." John Strood.

ERS. Strood! H'm!

STANFORTH. The man who discovered——?

REVERS. Not too savoury, that, Beton.

BETON. Well, he's right for this business, it's no child's play. Will the F.O. let him through Uganda? That's what we want to know from you, Revers.

REVERS. [To TREGAY] Where must he start from to get among the slavers?

TREGAY. Albert Edward Nyanza—south end.

BETON. That's what he says himself.

REVERS. What's said here goes no further? [He looks for signs of assent, which are given to him] Uganda's still very disturbed, but I don't think the authorities will hinder a reconnaissance with such an object. Discretion though, our hands are full.

ELDERLEIGH. Beton, you can—what's that nice expression?—tip him the wink, eh? [BETON nods. Good! Now—ways and means? Our League will venture a thousand. What will your paper do, Stanforth?

STANFORTH. Two thousand.

ELDERLEIGH. I'm afraid it'll cost more.

BETON. Mr. Tregay? An expedition starting from the Albert Edward covering country between the lakes and the Upper Congo, or Lualaba River, don't they call it?

TREGAY. [Nodding] About the size of Spain.

BETON. Well? What do you say?

TREGAY. Ten thousand'll be under the mark before you've done.

ELDERLEIGH. Dear me! Ten thousand! Well, for such a cause——

[Looking at BETON.

BETON. Idealism will put up three. What says Finance.

[He turns to BASTAPLE.

BASTAPLE. [Taking his cigar from his mouth] I asked you to come here, gentlemen, at Mr. Beton's suggestion. You'll forgive a little frankness. [During the forthcoming he looks mainly at TREGAY] Financiers are never credited with doing anything for nothing. Admit it! We all have our own fish to fry. Lord Elderleigh fries the devil; Mr. Stanforth the Tories.

STANFORTH. Same thing.

BASTAPLE. Mr. Revers fries the virtue of neighbouring States, and Mr. Beton—fries his dreams. That leaves me. Well! I'd like to fry my reputation a little, gentlemen. I'd like a little kudos—I put up—ten thousand.

[There is a moment's silence.

TREGAY. [Taking his cigar from his mouth] Bra—vo!

ELDERLEIGH. Very generous, sir; very generous indeed. Will you put that in writing for us?

BASTAPLE. Glad to see religion has a sense of business, my lord.

ELDERLEIGH. Grievous experience, Mr. Bastaple. Well, that takes a weight off our minds. We can go ahead, then.

STANFORTH. Do we accept Strood?

REVERS. Properly warned.

BETON. Certainly.

REVERS. Then you want us to cable Mombasa to give them a pass through Uganda to the Albert Edward.

BETON. That's it.

ELDERLEIGH. Would Mr. Tregay go out for us too? There couldn't be a stronger pen to bring things home to the British public.

TREGAY. What do you want brought home, my lord?

ELDERLEIGH. My dear Mr. Tregay, the truth.

TREGAY. Will your people pay two thousand, Stanforth, to be told the truth?

STANFORTH. What do you mean?

TREGAY. Suppose the Belgians are doing their best?

STANFORTH. We mustn't fall foul of the Belgians, of course; but this blind eye of theirs towards the slave trade——

TREGAY. Both ways—I see; true Liberalism.

Again STANFORTH turns on him a stony stare.

BETON. [To TREGAY] Do you know Strood? [TREGAY nods.

BETON. What d'you think of him?

TREGAY. Drives things through; but not Stanley's hold on the black man.

BETON. Ah! But Stanley! Stanley! Well, then I can set Strood in motion? [He rises, and all follow suit] I'll cable him fully, and draw on you, Bastaple?

BASTAPLE nods, and there is a general break up.

BETON. Mr. Tregay, your ad is——?

TREGAY. [Hands him a card; then vancing—rather low] Good-bye, Bastaple. Fine investment!

But we suffered. Until I was nigh on forty I did as I was told, and it didn't suit me. Food I got, but light and air—no. Well, I've shot up among the tops, into the sunlight; but I haven't forgot- ten. I want to save thousands of boys such as I was, want them to have decent lives. What was your boyhood like?

BASTAPLE. [With a slow puff of smoke] Never had one.

BETON. Ah! One feels there's a lot behind you. You're a kind of mystery man. Well, I'm going to code that cable. Here's Tregay's address. [He hands the card] I don't thank you; it's as much your interest as mine. Without coolie labour the shares can't rise. Good-night!

BASTAPLE. [Holding out his hand] Cigar?

BETON. No, thanks.

[He shakes the outstretched hand and goes out, Back.

BASTAPLE sinks deeper in his chair, with a smile flickering about his lips and his brooding eyes. He strikes a bell on the little table.

FARRELL enters.

BASTAPLE. What's my total holding now in all the companies of South Afri- can Concessions?

FARRELL. Three hundred and fifty- seven thousand shares, sir.

BASTAPLE. Standing me—in——?

FARRELL. Three hundred and twelve thousand pounds.

BASTAPLE. How many in my name?

FARRELL. About a hundred thousand, sir; the rest are in dummies.

BASTAPLE. I want them all in dum- mies, Farrell, except—twenty thousand. Get that done quietly, before Christmas.

FARRELL. Yes, sir.

BASTAPLE. Baron Zimbosch here yet?

FARRELL. In the waiting-room, sir.

BASTAPLE. [Nodding] Ask him in.

FARRELL. [Goes to the door, Right, opens it, and says] Will you come in, Baron?

BARON ZIMBOSCH enters; a person- able man with a brown beard parted in two and stiffish hair. He wears a frock-coat and carries a top hat.

FARRELL shuts the door and retires to his own room.

BASTAPLE. Evening, Baron.

ZIMBOSCH. [In goodish English with a slight accent] Good evening, Mr. Bastaple.

BASTAPLE. What news for me?

ZIMBOSCH. [With a shrug] Well—for anything precise it is too early in the morning as you say. But Dr. Leyds is active—my hat! He is active.

BASTAPLE. Well! What of that?

ZIMBOSCH. [Sinking his voice] War, Mr. Bastaple, war.

BASTAPLE. Phew! That's a long jump.

ZIMBOSCH. You think? Dr. Leyds gives Kruger always the impression that Europe is favourable to the Boers. These Hollanders they lead him by the nose. Oom Paul Kruger—they play with that obstinate old man. And they want war, these Hollanders. And Majuba, Mr. Bastaple—the English have never forgotten Majuba—they never will till they wipe the eye. And the Uitlanders—will they get what they want from Paul Kruger? Not much. About this time next year, Mr. Bastaple—war, or I am a Dutchman, as you say.

BASTAPLE. Old Kruger's too slim. What chance have the Boers, Baron?

ZIMBOSCH. Mr. Bastaple, the Englishman never sees his enemy—he eats too much fog and Yorkshire puddin'—so he is never ready. What Englishman believes he is at war till he 'as been beaten three or four time? Then he begins to scratch his head and say, "Dear me, there is a war on!"

BASTAPLE. And how do you Congo people view it?

ZIMBOSCH. [With one of his expressive shrugs] If you lose South Africa, we get what we want from the Boers; they will 'ave more than they want themselves; anyway, your 'ands are full for a long time. In both case we stand in velvet, as you call it.

BASTAPLE. Well, Baron, I think you're riding before the hounds, as we say; but I'm obliged to you. Keep me well informed about Dr. Leyds.

ZIMBOSCH. [Bowing] And for steamers, Mr. Bastaple, you will our scheme?

BASTAPLE. I see nothing against present, Baron; on the contrary.

ZIMBOSCH. Bien! We shall brin the figures, then.

ACT II

SCENE I

The scene is the shack of SAMWAY, the elephant-hunter, on the south shore of the Albert Edward Nyanza. A room divided only by a low wooden partition from a stoep, or low, roof- less verandah, seen through the opening at back.

In long chairs, with drinks and pipes, STROOD and SAMWAY are seated; STROOD has a map on his lap, SAMWAY'S left leg is bandaged.

SAMWAY. [Lean, brown, bearded] Well, Mr. Strood, you sure did hustle. No man could have come through from the coast quicker.

STROOD. From Beton's cables, Samway, what they're really after is trouble with the Belgians. [Putting his finger on the map] They want that Katanga region coloured red, and so do I.

SAMWAY. All one to me what darned flag flies.

STROOD. The slave trade's a stale pretext.

SAMWAY. [After a shrewd glance, holding up a little leather bag which he has taken out of his pocket] If you want to stir mud—see this!

STROOD stares at him. SAMWAY tosses the bag to him, and he undoes it and stares at the contents.

SAMWAY. Yes, sir—diamonds; not very large, but plenty where those come from. Fetch me over that map.

[STROOD rises, spreads it on SAMWAY'S knee, and stands behind him, ready to follow SAMWAY'S finger.

SAMWAY. Down here [putting his finger on the map] between the Kasai River and the Luembe, there's diamonds—all over that country—and no one knows of them but me and one Belgian. Last I heard of that fellow, he was gettin' busy at Basoko, with an expedition to go south. He's after them diamonds. Now, get there first, make a discoverer's claim, and keep some founder's shares for me. How's that for making trouble?

He looks quizzically up at STROOD, who has raised himself and is staring before him—a face brown and sanguine, a jaw of iron.

STROOD. [Shaking his head] Clean away from instructions, Samway.

SAMWAY. Nothing like diamonds to raise brotherly love. It'd make all the fuss they want sure enough.

STROOD. H'm. [Looking at SAMWAY'S leg] Why did you go and get your chawed up like that?

SAMWAY. [Pointing to a lion sk

AMWAY. Hard bit o' goods; go all , and all night too.
TROOD. [Shaking his head] Women!
AMWAY. You won't get hold of ehda without her. And that belt be- en the Lualaba River and the Lo- i River is the darndest bit of country ever spat out—forest and marsh Batetela cannibals savage as hell.
TROOD. [Taking another turn or two] e, Samway—time! I've got to send news before the end of May.
AMWAY. Reach Samehda, and you'll plenty news of slavery. Kill two with one stone, there.
ROOD. Would Herrick go?
AMWAY. Crazy to meet that chim- ee.
ROOD. [Suddenly] Could you get here?
MWAY. Sure.
STROOD strikes his hands together, and SADIG, his Berberine servant, appears from the verandah.
MWAY. Go to Mr. Herrick. Sam- wants palaver say.
[SADIG goes.
MWAY. Mind! If you let on where e going, you'll lose your carriers. 're scared to death of them Bate-
OOD. [Nodding] How long can I on—before that Belgian?
MWAY. Why! He'll be all of five s by the road he'll go.
OOD. By the Lord, Samway, I'll a try!
MWAY. That's great! But pack your you'll have to drive your crowd.
OOD. Mustn't I tell my white men?
MWAY. Not safe. Let 'em think s nothing beyond your original to hunt up what's left of the slave When are you scheduled to OOD. Day after to-morrow.
AWAY. Well! Forced marches play vil. I don't hold with beatin' nig- but take a sjambok; you'll need it.
OOD. [Smiling] This isn't a land for icken-livered, Samway.
AWAY. Well, there's been travellers who never raised a hand, but I they didn't live long.

STROOD. Where does Herrick hail from?
SAMWAY. New Zealand. Independent as a jack rabbit.
STROOD. Bad man to take, Samway. An expedition like this has to be all of a piece, in the leader's hand.
SAMWAY. Well, it's the girl or noth- ing; and she won't go without him.
A tall man, lean and dark, with a good deal of hair, a pointed beard and deep, remarkable eyes, has come on to the stoep.
SAMWAY. Evening, Mr. Herrick!
HERRICK. [Advancing] Evening to you. How's the leg?
SAMWAY. It kind of feels compli- mented when you call it that. Know Mr. Strood?
HERRICK. [With a slight bow] Yes.
STROOD. Good evening.
SAMWAY. Mr. Herrick, we was talkin' about that chimpanzee the other eve- nin'.
HERRICK. Marungensis variety. Well?
SAMWAY. Mr. Strood is goin' into the home of that gentleman. Thought may- be you'd like to ask him to get you a specimen. Your girl comes from there. You don't talk to her about critters, I guess, or she might 'a' told you.
HERRICK. I want to see the fellow liv- ing, Samway.
STROOD. Like to come with us, Mr. Herrick?
HERRICK. What? [Surprised] How long are you to be away?
STROOD. Seven months or so with luck.
SAMWAY. Take your girl; she'll be useful there, I tell you.
HERRICK. Amina? No.
SAMWAY. [Quizzically] You won't be two days out before she'll be with you. That's the worst of these half-Arab girls. Never let 'em get fond of you or they'll follow you like a dog.
HERRICK. Could I leave her with you, Samway?
SAMWAY. [With a secret glance at STROOD] What'll she say to that? Call her in. I judge she'll be around.
HERRICK. Amina!
Instantly the GIRL walks in from the stoep. A fine figure, veiled, not very dark in colour, with black eyes fixed on HERRICK, quite ignoring the other men.

AMINA. [She stands just inside the room with her eyes on HERRICK] You want me?

HERRICK. Listen. I go a journey—six months I leave you with Mr. Samway.

AMINA. [After a moment's silence] No—no! I come.

SAMWAY. [Grinning] What! Amina! Won't you stay with me?

AMINA. No. Go with Herrick.

[She crosses swiftly and puts his hand to her forehead.

SAMWAY. See that, Mr. Strood? You-'ll have to take her, I reckon.

AMINA. [With a swift look at the two men, and some instinctive comprehension] Ya, Mist' Strood, take me with Herrick; I know forest. Good traveller, Mist' Samway—not?

SAMWAY. Sure, you are!

HERRICK. Amina, go home. I come directly. Hear me?

AMINA. I cook for you—know good water—make bandage—mend your clo'es—keep watch.

SAMWAY. Why not, Mr. Herrick? She's good on the road; she won't trouble you any.

HERRICK. [Revolted at the thought of being the only man with a woman in all that crowd] No. If she won't stay, I give up the idea. Good-night!

[He turns from the GIRL and goes out on to the stoep and away.

SAMWAY. [Sharply] Amina!

AMINA, who is following HERRICK, stops.

SAMWAY. Here!

AMINA. [Going to SAMWAY] Herrick angry.

SAMWAY. See here, my girl! Listen! Mr. Strood wants Herrick to go with him; understand?

AMINA looks at STROOD, who nods.

SAMWAY. And I want to send salaam to your brother. Understand? Now, you do what I tell you. You let Herrick go; you stay, be good girl, obedient—let him go.

AMINA makes a movement of refusal.

SAMWAY. Listen! I send you after him one day behind; you follow; you catch him in five days, not before; far to send you back. Then he t you with him—see? Herrick's go after a monkey; he wants that mon good. If he's got to stay here becaus you, he'll certainly get mad with See?

AMINA. [Looking deeply at him] —true?

SAMWAY. Sure!

AMINA. [With a suspicious look STROOD] Why he want take Herrick

SAMWAY. [After a look at STROOD AMINA] Herrick write all about Strood—make much noise in white m country; good for Herrick, good Mr. Strood.

AMINA. [To STROOD] Why you like Herrick?

STROOD. [Taken aback] I?

SAMWAY. You don't understand w men yet, Amina; they're not like A Mr. Strood and Herrick not friends not enemies—all business. Now, will do what I say or not?

AMINA. I go home. If Herrick a at me, then I do what you say—behind—come to you, you send me low. [She touches her heart] You fr to me, Mist' Samway. My brother you good. So?

SAMWAY. So—it is.

She makes a gesture of salute t two men and goes out.

SAMWAY. That's fixed it. He'll be riled, thinkin' of his chimpanzee. mouth's waterin' after that critter. ain't she? These half-caste Arab deep. Simple, too. You may bet their gratitude; and you may bet their revenge.

STROOD. Not much nigger in that

SAMWAY. Half Manyema. Their en are mighty handsome, and ligh oured. The father was pretty pure

From the stoep appears the clothed figure of a you brown-skinned MAN.

STROOD. Well, Sadig?

SADIG. Cap'en Lockyer, D Franks, Missah Collie here, sah.

STROOD. Mind if I see them, Sa

SAMWAY. Sure, no. Bring them in.

LOCKYER, FRANKS, and COLL

ter from the stoep. LOCKYER is in tropical cloth; FRANKS and COLLIE in Holland drill. LOCKYER is soldierly, dry, and brown, with a small, fairish moustache and refined features. FRANKS is dark-haired and sallow-faced. COLLIE, a biggish man, has a good deal of roughish hair and moustache and rugged features. They greet SAMWAY.

'ROOD. Well, gentlemen, all ready? r are your men's feet, Captain Lock-)CKYER. None too sound, sir. I'd er have had Bangalas. The Souda- are bad stragglers, as Barttelot d.

'ROOD. Can't make a soldier out of a gala under three months. How's prospector's kit, Collie?

OLLIE. Ah've known worse, and— known better.

ROOD. Well, if you never commit self beyond that, you won't dis- the north of the Tweed. Through the vaccinations, Doctor?

[FRANKS nods.

ROOD. Got any of Parke's antidote oisoned arrows?

ANKS. Can't get it.

ROOD. Well, take plenty of ammo- carbonate. We start at 4 a.m. , day after to-morrow. I'm going nake long marches till we get orest. See you keep 'em up to ot all the quinine you want, Dr. ks?

[FRANKS nods.

ROOD. Right! Look after your men's Lockyer. I want to get to Manyema ry quick. It's there we'll begin to any slaving that's left. Anything to riend Samway?

CKYER. Are the Manyema active, way?

MWAY. Why! they take a Bank day now and then, Captain. Don't our men stray, or they'll end in the g-pan.

ANKS. [To STROOD] Are we going er south or west than Nyangwe?

ROOD. [After exchanging a look with NWAY] I don't know, Franks. The ans won't love us, so where exactly the job will take us, I can't tell. It's a roving commission.

[He looks from one to another.

LOCKYER. That's all right, sir.

[The others nod.

STROOD. Mr. Herrick may come with us, in search of a new sort of chimpanzee.

COLLIE. Losh! Aren't there enough monkeys in the world a'ready?

SAMWAY. We—ell! I judge we all want ancestors.

COLLIE. Aye! That's a morbid curiosity.

LOCKYER. I'd give all mine to know what's won the Leger.

STROOD. Well, gentlemen, stout hearts, prepared for anything, I hope.

COLLIE. I got a christenin' bottle here, Chief.

[Produces a champagne bottle from his pocket and a corkscrew.

SAMWAY. [To SADIG, who is standing at the back] Glasses, boy!

SADIG. Missa Herrick come back, sah.

[He takes the bottle and goes to fetch the glasses.

HERRICK comes in, with the GIRL following.

HERRICK. [Looking round] Evening to you!

SAMWAY. Thought it over, Mr. Herrick?

HERRICK. [To STROOD] If you really meant it, I'll come, and thanks for the chance.

STROOD. Glad to have you.

HERRICK. [To SAMWAY] She'll stay with you, Samway; if you'll be kind enough to look after her.

SAMWAY. [Looking at AMINA] Sure thing.

STROOD. One word, Mr. Herrick. You understand, of course, that you'll be under my orders, like these gentlemen. In this sort of trip the leader has to be an autocrat. It's queer country.

HERRICK bows. The GIRL, standing with her arm raised, half hiding her face, looks intently at STROOD. The glasses have been brought, and handed round.

SAMWAY. [Raising his glass] Gentlemen—safe return! Luck to you all!

STROOD. Samway—success!

[He drains his glass. The GIRL stands unmoving, looking from STROOD to HERRICK.

Having emptied their glasses, FRANKS, LOCKYER, and COLLIE go out on to the stoep.

STROOD. [Following] A moment, Doctor.

He joins them on the stoep, and they pass away, talking. The GIRL remains motionless, watching HERRICK and listening.

HERRICK. [Approaching SAMWAY] Samway! Why don't I cotton to Strood?

SAMWAY. Strood and me have been in one or two mix-ups together, Mr. Herrick.

HERRICK. You know him all the better, then. Well?

SAMWAY. [Smiling] I judge Strood makes Gawd in his own image. Maybe that's the reason.

HERRICK. Sticks at nothing, you mean?

SAMWAY. You've gotten a habit of plain words. Well, he gets things done, whether in London City or an African forest.

HERRICK. I see.

SAMWAY. Old Man Allah'll need a full flush to knock Strood out; he couldn't die to save his life.

HERRICK. Thanks. [Lowering his voice] The girl will be all right with you?

SAMWAY. So she don't run away. Can't lock her up.

HERRICK. If she can't have me, she won't leave you. Good-night!

He shakes SAMWAY'S hand, and, beckoning to AMINA, goes out. The GIRL comes swiftly down to SAMWAY.

SAMWAY. Well, Amina?

AMINA. You swear by Allah—I follow Herrick?

SAMWAY. By Allah!

AMINA. You friend to me—friend to my brother.

[She leans forward, takes his hand and puts it to her forehead.

SAMWAY. That's right, Amina.

AMINA. I trust.

She rises and goes swiftly out to follow HERRICK, just as STROOD comes in. He passes her with a stare, and she puts up her a to cover her face. He stops, stands looking at her.

STROOD. Girl—understand! You o me just as if you were a man.

AMINA. [Keeping her arm up] O Herrick.

STROOD. That's just what you don't it seems.

AMINA. Obey Herrick when I w him.

STROOD. And no tricks with any ot man.

AMINA. [Dropping her arm. Proud Trick! I no play trick.

STROOD. All right! Remember!

AMINA. [With a flash of eyes teeth] Yes. I remember.

He passes her. She stands look intently back at him over shoulder; then goes out.

SAMWAY. Queer critter, that Knife you as soon as look. Don't wrong with her.

STROOD. So long as she behaves; she'll have to toe the line like all the r What do you think of my crowd, S way? Collie's a rough diamond; Fra knows his job. What about young Lo yer?

SAMWAY. English gentleman, I ju

STROOD. That against him?

SAMWAY. Well, too many points honour are liable to get him eaten i country like that.

STROOD. [With a laugh] Now, S way, write me that letter to the g brother; and tell me every last bit know about the route—I'm going to there.

[He spreads the map, and they over it as

The curtain falls.

SCENE II

Eight weeks later, on the west ban the Lualaba River. Noon. A native hut of the better type. an opening in the centre of the wall some matting has been l revealing trodden mud, w growth, high trees, and glim of river. The hut is of saplings large leaves of the amoma plastered inside with dried mud; it has conical roofing. There is nothing in the hut save white man's kit and mess-tins dumped here and there.

LLIE, wrapped in a blanket, lies asleep on the Left. He is recovering from a bout of fever. Centre, LOCKYER, with the remnants of soldierly neatness, in shirt and breeches, sits cross-legged on the ground writing up his log. A native pitcher stands on the floor close to him. Some clothes are stretched here and there to dry. A Soudanese SENTRY, with rifle, at long intervals crosses and recrosses the opening. Through the opening FRANKS enters. He has a growth of dark beard and is thin, stained, and haggard. He comes forward, takes up the pitcher and raises it to drink.

OCKYER. Steady on, Franks. It's not n boiled. Here!

[He hands his water-bottle, to FRANKS, who drinks.

RANKS. Your Soudanese is food for crocodiles, Lockyer.

OCKYER. Poor devil!

RANKS. Ammonium carbonate hard-ouches this brand of poison. The two iers will die too—tetanus supervening.

He leans against the wall, Right, in an exhausted attitude, looking down at LOCKYER.

OCKYER. How's the chief's fever?

RANKS. Passed off. Strong as a bull. w he's on his legs we shall be off in.

OCKYER. Got fever yourself, haven't ?

[FRANKS nods.

OCKYER. Collie's temp.'s down. [Shut-up his log] Look here, old man, go on guard. Lie down; if we're off n, you'll need a spell.

RANKS. [Fever mounting in him] kyer, why have we crossed the Lua- ? Our job was to lie between this r and the Lakes. Eight hellish weeks ing here, and nothing done! No at- pt to find slave trade—no trace of it. ving—driving these poor wretches Six dead. Two more will die. Eight can't carry—can't march even—have to be left here; at least six more will founder when we start again. All forest in front. Forest again—my God!

[His voice has risen; COLLIE wakes and sits up.

FRANKS. What's Strood doing? Damn him!

LOCKYER. Steady, old son!

COLLIE. Physician, heal thaself! [Rising] Eh! but I'm feelin' fine again. Lie down, Franks; ye've no constitution. I told ye to get out of your wet togs last night.

FRANKS. With three men dying on my hands, and the chief cursing at every man we lose! He's playing some game we know nothing of. I've felt it all along. We can't go on like this; the men are skeletons. We must rest and feed them up.

COLLIE. If we rest, it's not ourselves we'll be feedin' up. Drums all night. We'll be attacked again directly.

LOCKYER. We gave them a pill yesterday, crossing the river.

COLLIE. Aye, but they're forgetfu' loons in this forest. [As FRANKS crosses to the blankets] I'm with the doctor; we want a reason for goin' on the way we are.

FRANKS. They can spare their arrows; we'll all founder in a fortnight, driven on like this. These stinking swamps!

He is seized with a violent fit of shivering. COLLIE wraps him in a blanket, and almost forces him down against the wall, Left.

The Soudanese SENTRY stands to attention in the opening and speaks.

SENTRY. Chief—come! Captain!

[He grunts and is silent, at attention.

STROOD enters. The SENTRY moves on. STROOD, though lined and sallowed, has not lost, like the others, his look of physical strength. He has a revolver in his belt and a cloud on his face.

STROOD. Gentlemen—no officer on guard! Do you happen to remember we were attacked in crossing yesterday? Whose duty?

LOCKYER. I was just going, sir.

STROOD. "Just going" doesn't do, Captain Lockyer. Where's Herrick? Let him take his turn.

LOCKYER. We wanted to ask you, sir

STROOD. [Ominously] Well?

LOCKYER. Why have we crossed the Lualaba? We understood——

STROOD. Thought you were a soldier.

LOCKYER. [Steadily] We consider the position pretty desperate, sir. We signed for an expedition between the Lakes and the Lualaba.

STROOD. You signed to be under my leadership for seven months. You have five months to run, Captain Lockyer, and your reputation in the Army at stake.

LOCKYER. I know that, sir. But you've crossed into cannibal country and the men are scared. We may have wholesale desertions.

STROOD. I've only flogged for desertion so far; I'll shoot the next man who tries it on. [Grimly] But there'll be no straggling between this river and the Lomami. Any straggler now is food for cannibals.

FRANKS. And if we all recross the river?

STROOD. [Putting his hand on his revolver] Dr. Franks!

LOCKYER. [Quietly] Franks has fever, sir. But we shall be grateful if you'll tell us the exact purpose for which the whole expedition is risking its life.

COLLIE. Aye, chief; is it a pure pleasure trip?

STROOD. [Controlling himself] Gentlemen, I've had to be on the safe side and keep my counsel, or lose my carriers. Well, we're on the safe side now. Our real destination is south, in the Lualaba Kasai. [Sensation.

COLLIE. How's that?

STROOD. Diamonds. No one else knows of them but one Belgian. And we're racing his outfit from Basoko.

[FRANKS laughs.

COLLIE. Diamonds! Losh!

LOCKYER. We're not after the slave trade, then?

STROOD. Certainly. I'm expecting news of it hereabouts. But this other object is just as important.

LOCKYER. Frankly, sir, if I'd kno this was a commercial expedition, shouldn't have come.

STROOD. Commercial! You've heard the copper deposits in Katanga? T southeast of the Congo State is a m of minerals, gentlemen. It should ne have been let slip. Samway's shown the diamonds he found further west. we can make a discoverer's claim, should lead to an alteration of the wh frontier, and add one of the richest t of Africa to the British flag. Is t commercial, Lockyer?

LOCKYER. [Steadily] How do mean, sir? A frontier once fixed——

STROOD. Frontiers are never fixed.

LOCKYER. If it's for the flag——

COLLIE. It's a bonnie idea.

STROOD. Worth a few lives and a scruples!

FRANKS. Only twenty-six carriers march at all—and six of them will fo der in a day or two. Eight men c march, and two are dying. What you going to do with them?

STROOD. Put them and you, Franks, and Mr. Herrick, back acr the river to camp until you're fit; t you will take them home the way came, or to Tanganyika, as you best. I hope to send news by you of slave trade.

FRANKS. Slave trade! It's we're slavers—driving on these men——

[He laughs a disordered la

LOCKYER. Franks! . . . with nine Soudanese, sir, and less than th carriers—all in bad shape; it's preci long odds against our getting thro We shall be attacked all the way.

STROOD. Why do you think I bro that girl of Herrick's?

LOCKYER. Yes, sir, why? She's a len little snake.

STROOD. Because she's sister to Arab friend of Samway's, who these parts. From him—we shall safe conduct to the Lomami, and carriers if we need them.

LOCKYER. I see. That sounds enough.

STROOD. Enough said, Lockyer. holds out his hand, which Loc takes] Put Herrick on guard. I'm to send the girl off now, with Samy's letter.

He looks grimly at FRANKS, huddled in his blanket against the wall, and goes out.

LOCKYER takes belt, revolver, and stick, buckles on the belt, and stands looking at FRANKS.

OCKYER. Get a sleep, old chap.

He goes out, speaking to the SENTRY in the entrance. COLLIE begins attending to the gear in the hut.

RANKS. [Huddled on the floor, with es drawn up] Good fellow, Lockyer, a fool, Collie. The Empire's built h the bones of fools like Lockyer.

OLLIE. [Close to him] Na, no! The pire's built by men that's got itch to measure theirsels against the ossible. Strood's a great man in his .

RANKS. Lockyer's worth ten of him.

OLLIE. Doctor, ye're no' just. There's a square mile of civilised airth that n't had a Strood at work on it. But your Stroods we'd all be savages. land was forest no' so verra long .

RANKS. [In the tone of one who ut- an unimaginable word] England!

OLLIE. [Who is bending down] Doc- I'm eaten up wi' critters; the hut I t in last night was fair crawlin' wi'

[He contemplates his stringy legs.

RANKS. [Suddenly] Driving on these devils—the skeletons we've made hem?

OLLIE. [Humouring] Well, ye can se 'em back home.

RANKS. They'll never see home; the st'll have their bones, and he knows OLLIE. Aweel! [Stretching] Ah'd ma conscience for the smell of sky.

HERRICK appears in the opening. He comes forward, impressively gaunt.

ERRICK. Got the map?

OLLIE. Lockyer's told ye, then?

ERRICK. [Nodding] Cat's paw. oking at the map] Franks! We'll e for the Bambara Hills and Tan- yika when your men can march. er?

FRANKS nods. He is now shivering violently.

HERRICK. Pain? Across the back? Like an injection? [He takes a little case from FRANKS's pocket and prepares to inject] Collie, yesterday, crossing the river, I caught a frog with unwebbed toes. He's got long, sharp claws. Now, doctor—— [He injects.

COLLIE. Grand stuff, opium! [Pointing on the map] Losh! Those diamonds are a way off! Heard about your girl?

HERRICK. I have.

COLLIE. Will she go, d'ye think? She's no' friendly to Strood. Ma God, the way she looks at him! Aye, but it's a misfortune ye don't get on with Strood. There's a ween o' plans go wrong because o' personalities.

HERRICK. He's a bully.

COLLIE. [Angrily] Ah! you and the doctor! How would you get a caravan across this country? Ye'd never get beyond your front door.

HERRICK. [To FRANKS] Any easier?

FRANKS nods. He is getting drowsy from the injection.

COLLIE. Ye can't eat pie without cuttin' crust. It's the lives of niggers against the glories of trade and science. I'm thinkin' ye'd be best to go and sit down by the Round Pond, Herrick, and study the chimpanzee in Kensington Gardens —What's the trouble now? [Sounds of commotion without] Another of your men dead, doctor?

FRANKS half raises himself, but droops again somnolently. The sounds of commotion increase.

COLLIE. Aye, well! It's no' a God-fearin' parish this.

[He reaches for his revolver.

HERRICK steps towards the door, but stands aside to let STROOD pass in. He has a sjambok in his hands and looks furious.

The Soudanese SENTRY blocks the entry after him.

STROOD. [Halting at sight of HERRICK] Do you know anything of this?

HERRICK. [Haughtily] Of what?

STROOD. Did you put your girl up to sneaking into my tent?

HERRICK. Don't treat me like your black men, Mr. Strood.

LOCKYER'S VOICE. Into the hut!

Four ragged Soudanese SOLDIERS enter with the girl AMINA between them. LOCKYER follows. By his direction they open out, and, leaving the GIRL between STROOD and HERRICK, block the entrance. The GIRL stands quite still, but her eyes move and glitter dangerously. STROOD has recovered his self-command.

STROOD. Lockyer—Collie—the letter from Samway to this girl's brother is missing from my tent since I was here a few minutes ago. Sadig there? Call him!

LOCKYER looks out through the opening and beckons. SADIG, STROOD'S Berberine servant, enters. The GIRL turns her eyes on him malevolently.

STROOD. Sadig, you saw this girl come out of my tent just now?

SADIG. Yes, sah.

AMINA. Not true; you no see me come out!

SADIG. [With a gesture of solemn affirmation] Sah—that true. I see her come out.

STROOD. With something in her hand?

SADIG. Yes, sah; white thing.

STROOD. A letter?

SADIG. Sah—too far away. Can't say.

AMINA. You no see me.

STROOD. Quiet, you! How did she look—like a thief?

SADIG. Sah—she look this way, that way—[he mimics what he has seen] then see me, and run for Missah Herrick's tent. I follow. Missah Herrick—he not there. This girl stand and look at me and curse. I ask her what she do in my master's tent. She say she not do noting there, she say. Sah, I see her coming out. She bad—she steal something.

STROOD. What did you do then?

SADIG. Keep watch on her, an' call out big. Captain Lockyer he come and take her with these boys and send me fetch you, sah.

STROOD. What did she do while you were watching her?

SADIG. Spit at me—call me dog—she bad woman.

STROOD. Did she try and hide a thing? Move her hands?

SADIG. She make her hands like t [He mimics hands on hips] She is a good one.

STROOD. [To HERRICK] Did you kn of this letter?

HERRICK. Lockyer told me of it j now.

STROOD. Where?

HERRICK. In my tent.

STROOD. Was the girl present?

HERRICK. Yes.

STROOD. Lockyer, go with Sad search Mr. Herrick's tent thoroug and come back quick.

[LOCKYER and SADIG go

HERRICK. By what right?

STROOD. Self-preservation. If the ter is not found in your tent, it is this girl.

HERRICK. [To the GIRL, sternly] you steal this letter?

AMINA. [With a spaniel's look] I steal. Arab girl not steal. Why I s letter? No good for me.

HERRICK. What made you go into Strood's tent?

AMINA. I no go—stand outside.

HERRICK. Why?

AMINA. I go look in—see whether got better tent than Herrick.

STROOD. Mr. Collie, go and search tween my tent and Mr. Herrick's. L well to both sides of a bee-line betw

[COLLIE goes

HERRICK. Whatever she's done, y treat her gently, please.

STROOD. The life of the expedi hangs on this letter. And by God, have it, if I have to flay her alive the life of one tricky baggage agains our lives.

HERRICK. You've been making paws of us.

[But as he speaks, LOCKYER, S and COLLIE appear in the entr

STROOD. Well, Captain Lockyer?

LOCKYER. Not there, sir.

STROOD. Collie?

COLLIE. Not a sign.

STROOD. [Taking a step forward the sjambok raised; to the GIRL] Give me that letter. Quick!

The GIRL stands cowering, her alive with hate. She gives a quick look of supplication at HERRICK, who takes a step towards her.

TROOD. Surround her. [The SOUDA- surround her] Stand still, Mr. Her- [To the GIRL] Will you give me letter?

MINA. I no got letter.

ROOD. Search her!

ERRICK. Stop that! Leave her to me! Two SOUDANESE bar him off with rifles; two seize the GIRL. A moment's pause.

ROOD. Strip her!

CKYER. [Suddenly] Halt! [The DANESE are still] Sorry, sir. Can't iat.

ROOD. [Furiously] Captain Lockyer damned squeamishness! It's your ind mine, and every man's here.

CKYER. Keep her in custody, sir; give up the letter presently.

INA. [With a proud and triumt gesture] I no got letter. I eat it!

TROOD lashes at her, but the blow is intercepted by LOCKYER'S cane, and only falls lightly.

INA. I kill you—one day.

ROOD. [Recovering his self-possesn the strange way peculiar to him] well! Captain Lockyer, raise . We march in an hour. Tell off of your men to guard this girl, on of a flogging if they let her get . She will go with us, and be shot 're attacked. Sadig, bring me the latives we took yesterday, and stand interpret. I'll tell them we've got hda's sister, and release them to d the news of it. [SADIG goes out. LLIE. Chief, have we a chance, now, t through at all?

ROOD. I don't know; but we're going , Collie. Raise camp.

OLLIE shrugs his shoulders, gathers up the two collected kits of himself and LOCKYER, and goes out.

ROOD. Captain Lockyer, bind her fast ake her away. You will leave four ur men here with Dr. Franks, in e of the ten carriers who can't l.

OCKYER and his MEN go out with the GIRL.

STROOD. Dr. Franks, you will take the canoe and re-cross the river as soon as you can; you will camp till your men can march; then make your way back to the Albert Edward, or to Tanganyika, as you find best.

FRANKS, who has risen, stares at him without reply.

STROOD. Herrick, I shall keep your wench till we've crossed the Lomami River. No harm will come to her unless we're attacked. She has brought us to this pass, and she must get us out of it. You object to my ways of conducting a caravan; well, you now have an opportunity of judging how far you can get on without them.

He goes out, detaching the skin covering of the hut and letting it fall over the opening. There is silence, and but a dim light in the hut.

HERRICK. [Crossing to where he can see FRANKS] Marooned, Doctor.

FRANKS breaks into weak laughter.

FRANKS. Lopped off—the rotten branches!

[He stops with a sharp ejaculation and sinks down on to the blankets.

HERRICK. Here!

[He lifts him and prepares to give him another injection.

FRANKS. [Feebly] Thanks, thanks.

[His mouth is distorted with pain.

HERRICK makes the injection; a faint smile comes on FRANKS'S face. He falls back, drowsy.

FRANKS. The forest!

Curtain.

SCENE III

The curtain has been lowered for a few seconds to indicate the lapse of time.

The scene is the same, three days later. Noon.

The hut is empty of all gear except a medicine chest. The matting over the doorway is gone. FRANKS is feebly going through contents of chest. The fever has left him, but he looks wan and exhausted. HERRICK enters, followed by a SOUDANEE.

HERRICK. Doctor, quinine for this man.

FRANKS. [Holding up a bottle] This is all Strood's left me.

He beckons to the SOUDANESE, looks at him searchingly, and gives him a dose. The MAN salutes and goes out.

HERRICK. He's the best man we've got. . . . Still they don't attack—three days! Odd!

FRANKS. They must be following Strood up.

HERRICK. Practically no food, Franks. Daren't let them forage. Are you up to crossing?

FRANKS. [Shrugging] Must be.

HERRICK. Queer thing, colour. Suppose I shall never see that girl again; find I haven't half the feeling for her I'd have for a dog. Got room in that chest for this bottle? 'My frog; don't want to lose him. Quaint chap, isn't he? [He holds up the bottled specimen for FRANKS to see] The variety of creature—the riot of life and death, in this forest!

FRANKS. Remember the carrier's dying wife in Stanley's book: "It's a bad world, master, and you have lost your way in it." We have. How many journeys in that canoe? Fourteen of us, and the loads?

HERRICK. Four, I should say. I'll just label this chap. [FRANKS goes out.

HERRICK sits down, tears a sheet from his pocket-book and writes: "Unwebbed frog, with claws. Found on the Lualaba River, Christmas, '98. C. Herrick."

As he is attaching the label, the girl AMINA comes in; her garments are torn, but her face and body show no great signs of fatigue. She steals round with the swaying movement peculiar to her, and has clasped his knees before he realises that she is there.

AMINA. Amina come back! Escape—come through forest—back to Herrick.

Again she embraces his knees, and is about to kiss his feet.

HERRICK. [Rising] Get up. I don't like you to do that. [Raising her by the shoulder and stroking it] Where did you leave them, Amina?

AMINA. Two marches. [With a s that shows her white teeth] They clever—Amina too clever. At nig she burn rope—look!

[She shows a burnt place on arm.

HERRICK. God! That must have h

AMINA. Five carrier run awa find two dead of arrow. Soon all k now or run away. They not go o marches—many. [Her eyes and gleam] Now I guide Herrick h quick. Amina clever—got letter still

She steals her hand into the ment round her waist and b out the letter.

HERRICK. You little snake!

AMINA. [Proudly] Save it for rick! [She gives him the letter] rick safe now.

HERRICK. [Reading the letter; and puzzled] Tell me now—what you steal this letter?

AMINA. Strood hate Herrick—letter—then leave Herrick behind Batetela kill. Now Batetela kill S instead—soon kill.

HERRICK. [To himself] Who'd understand how their minds w Jezebel!

The word is Greek to AMINA, his gesture disturbs her.

AMINA. Save Herrick's life. He use letter—make my brother frien

HERRICK. [Alive to the expedi danger] Good God! What am I to AMINA. Strood soon die—dog!

HERRICK. Listen, Amina! Strood I not friends, but I never let S Lockyer, Collie die. Understand? N

AMINA. No. Strood die. He strik

HERRICK. Take me to your br Come, now at once.

AMINA. No! Amina cross river —take Herrick home.

HERRICK. Very well then—I join Strood and Lockyer.

AMINA. Ah, no! Why you car Strood—he not care for you!

HERRICK. I don't care for Stroo white men stick together.

AMINA. He enemy.

HERRICK. Come, now! Do what you. Guide me to your brother.

AMINA. [Passionately] I live

r with Herrick—not want my people

ACT III

SCENE I

The tent of LOCKYER and COLLIE in the forest, evening of the following day, four short marches from the Lualaba River. An oil lamp illumines the tent, the front side of which is open. Around is the loom of the forest; the faint outline of another tent is seen on one side and on the other four SOUDANESE are grouped—three squatting, one leaning on his rifle.

LOCKYER and COLLIE, in front of the tent, have just finished their scanty meal of bananas and biscuit, and are lighting their pipes—rifles and revolvers close at hand. Now and then drifts up the sound of native drums beaten out in the forest.

COLLIE. [Listening] Those damned drums! Heh! but 'tis awfu' like the Salvation Army in Glasgow.

LOCKYER. Salvation! Rum idea that! What do you make of it, Collie?

COLLIE. We—el! I've known maself verra queer—times. A wee bit more, and I wouldna've been answerable for the consequences. Have ye never felt lik' that?

LOCKYER. Never!

COLLIE. That's your upbringin'. Ye can always tell an English gentleman—never drunk on anything but liquor.

LOCKYER. Well! He makes up there.

COLLIE. Wish to God I were drunk now. The girl's escape has fair finished us. We won't last to the Lomami River.

LOCKYER. What distance d'you make it still?

COLLIE. Forty miles. We've not come thirty these four days, and lost twelve men. And Strood won't turn; the man's demented.

LOCKYER. [With a shrug] Mahmoud! The SOUDANESE on foot comes up at the call.

LOCKYER. Keep on your rounds, there! The MAN salutes, and goes on his round to the Right.

LOCKYER. I've got fever coming on, Collie; feel so darned talkative.

COLLIE. Aye, that's a sure sign of fever or insanity. Well, I'm no for a sleep meself till I've given Strood me mind. Got a drain of brandy there?

[LOCKYER hands him a flask.

LOCKYER. Collie! Mutton cutlets with new peas and asparagus, and a pint of iced champagne.

COLLIE. Na! A fresh-run salmon and a gallon o' mountain dew!

LOCKYER. Wonder what sort of a season they're having with the Quorn! What on earth brings us out into places like this? Good Lord! I think we're all mad! This tobacco tastes rotten—always does before fever. My brother's got a horse running in the National next spring—wonder if he'll think of putting me anything on? Wonder if he thinks of me at all? Wonder if anyone thinks of fools like us? Collie! Cold pigeon pie and iced claret-cup, what! Or how about marrow-bone and a bottle of Steinberg Cabinet! Oh, damn! at home I never think of what I eat. If we were Belgians, we'd be talking about women. Ever play cricket?

COLLIE. [Shaking his head] Na—golf's ma diversion.

LOCKYER. Rotten game! I say, what do you think death really is?

COLLIE. We'll be no needin' to think if Strood won't turn.

LOCKYER. Change of trains—or a black-out, eh?

COLLIE. I'm no' certain. But it canna be worse than this forest.

LOCKYER. Ah! Imagine haunting this forest!

"And I am black, but oh! my soul is white;
White as an angel is the English child!"

COLLIE. Here! Tak' your temperature.

[Hands him a thermometer.

LOCKYER. [Refusing it] Wonder if the Almighty ever had to keep his wicket up against bowling like this? Almighty? But if Almighty, Collie—He can change the attack whenever it doesn't suit Him.

COLLIE. Na! I'm thinkin' the Deity has a manly vocation. Fancy findin' ye'd made this forest! That'd tak' some livin' down.

LOCKYER. It is a corker. But think how we shall look back on it! By George! I can see myself with a l drink looking back.

COLLIE. Aye! Ye've got fever. T some of these.

[Handing him a little bottle of t loids.

LOCKYER. [Swallowing two tabloi Married, aren't you, Collie?

[COLLIE n

LOCKYER. That's bad. Children?

COLLIE. Two. Bonnie bairns.

LOCKYER. What on earth brought out here?

COLLIE. We—el! Ah've got amb tions for them.

LOCKYER bursts into a sort laughter.

LOCKYER. Sorry, old man! Only—bitions here! It's rather—funny—wh

COLLIE. Aye! And I'm goin' to Strood about it.

[He gets up and passes towards other tent at the back.

LOCKYER. [To himself] Poor old lie!

The sound of the drums rises. LOCKYER leans forward over his cr ed legs, listening. The drum-b swell.

LOCKYER. Gosh!

The SOUDANESE, who have squatting in talk, rise; they joined by MAHMOUD, and down to LOCKYER.

MAHMOUD. Capt'n Sahib! Men no go any more—in morning all away. This too bad country—bad m cannibal.

The beating of the drums seem come from every side. The SOUDANESE manifest an atte alarm.

MAHMOUD. No can go more.

LOCKYER. [Grasping his revolver rising to his feet] 'Shun!

The MEN stand half-hearted attention.

LOCKYER. What's this, Mahmoud I tell Strood Sahib, he'll have you for mutiny.

MAHMOUD. No can shoot all. In ing all go.

LOCKYER. Come, Mahmoud—sol are not afraid. Obey orders.

MAHMOUD. [Touching his mout

OCKYER. You are under my orders, mmoud! I am under Strood Sahib's.

MAHMOUD. [Fiercely] By Allah! No go more.

LOCKYER blows a whistle. There is a stir, and the emaciated forms of CARRIERS gather in the darkness behind the SOUDANESE to the left. COLLIE and STROOD come hurriedly from the darkness Right, with revolvers in their hands. They are followed by SADIG.

TROOD. What's this, Captain Lockyer?

OCKYER. The men refuse to march to-row.

TROOD. Who speaks for them?

OCKYER. [Pointing] Mahmoud—
e.

TROOD. [Covering him with his rever] Put him under arrest.

OCKYER. [To MAHMOUD] Ground

MAHMOUD lays down his rifle and folds his arms with a certain dignity.

TROOD. Now, my man, refuse orders orrow morning, and you'll be shot.
the CARRIERS] Listen, children.
se who run away—all killed by Baa.

Two of the CARRIERS emerge from among the huddled mass of them. They are poor, emaciated creatures.

T CARRIER. Master! No food—got r sores—got fever. Dis bad caravan.
back to ribber—cross ribber—some

2ND CARRIER. We not engage come in dis country, master; hab wife—hab children. Soon we fall down—no able carry load. Look, master! We not go-ee, go-ees. Look! [He lifts the rag of his garment to display his emaciated leg, disfigured by a great sore].

[LOCKYER turns his head away.

STROOD. Listen! [Pointing to MAHMOUD] This man tell you wrong. No can go back. If go back, Batetela attack, kill every man. Now, sons, trust me. No one else can save you. Trust me.

The CARRIERS look at him, beseeching, doubting, trying to see if he is speaking truth.

1ST CARRIER. [A Zanzibari] Master, to-day Khamis die—[pointing to 2nd CARRIER] to-morrow Umari die—[pointing to another] my brother Mabruk he die soon; this too far from our country—bad forest—bad men—eat enemy.

3RD CARRIER. [MABRUK] Master, two moons we travel—carry load too fast—a'l that thick forest not like our country. Sometime no food—our stomach empty. When we try find food—No!—White men drive on—drive on. Sometime want little sleep—sit down—white man come with whip— [He makes the appropriate gesture] We not go-ee go-ees. We men—not dog.

STROOD. Not men, Mabruk—children! The whip saved your lives. You fools! stray away in that forest, you never come back! Manyema in that old forest; Batetela in this forest. Keep together, children, keep on, keep on; if not, death all round to take you, Mabruk.

3RD CARRIER. Inshallah—death come when it come. Me tired—me sick——

STROOD. Listen, my son; listen, all! In four days I bring you out of the forest. Bring you to good country—plenty food—no bad men—more carriers—plenty more! All this way—a little further, and we're safe. Courage, men! Trust me! Now go and sleep! Go and sleep! To-morrow we march quickly!

He waves his hand, and the shadowy figures melt away into the darkness, with murmurs of: "Inshallah! Inshallah!"

STROOD. Mahmoud, take up your rifle! Obey orders!

MAHMOUD resumes his rifle, and the FOUR SOUDANESE retreat to their picket.

LOCKYER. Poor devils!

STROOD. [Turning on him] Our only chance is carrying on. We're in mid-stream. The pressure'll get less.

COLLIE. Ye'll never get 'em forrard. There's a limit; and it's well to know when ye've reached it.

STROOD. No limit to will power, Collie, none!

COLLIE. There's a limit to human strength. Ye're sacrificing the lot of us for no good. Turn back!

STROOD. Never! Never have, never shall. You, Lockyer—a soldier! One spurt and we'll win out. Come!

LOCKYER. If you order me on [with a shrug] I'll go.

STROOD. I do. Collie!

HERRICK'S voice from the darkness; "Don't shoot! Friends!"

LOCKYER. Herrick!

The THREE MEN stand alert and waiting. From Left Back appear HERRICK and AMINA, surrounded by the SOUDANESE picket.

STROOD. Seize that wench!

HERRICK. [Who looks exhausted] No. [He takes the GIRL by the arm] Drink.

LOCKYER hands him a water-bottle, which he passes to the GIRL first. She drinks and sinks down, squatting and watching.

HERRICK, after drinking, takes out the letter.

STROOD. She had it—after all? So much for squeamishness, Captain. Twelve men lost by it!

HERRICK. Do you want this letter delivered now?

STROOD. [Sardonically] Do we want to live?

HERRICK. Amina, go—fetch your brother.

AMINA stands up. Her eyes seem to stab STROOD.

HERRICK. Go! Call him.

As if hypnotised, the GIRL sways out to the edge of the clearing and is lost among the trees. The MEN stand waiting. Presently a long, shrill, peculiar call is heard—repeated—then answered faintly from the forest. Round the WHI MEN grouped in the light fro the tent lantern, and the motio less SOUDANESE, the emaciat forms of the CARRIERS can be se dimly to the Left, gathering the darkness.

COLLIE. Is she for a bit o' new treac ery, d'ye think?

HERRICK. Got any brandy?

LOCKYER hands him the flask a some biscuits.

HERRICK drinks from it and nibb a biscuit.

HERRICK. You're surrounded here.

STROOD. [To LOCKYER] Take yo men and see what she's doing.

HERRICK. Wait! Wait!

There is another moment of sil waiting. Then TWO FIGURES seen coming from the darkne Right Back. The GIRL comes fi and after her, imposing, da hawk-faced, clad in light g ments, her brother, the half-co Arab, SAMEHDA. She leads h up to the group, and the stand silent and apart.

HERRICK. Samehda! Salaam!

AMINA. [To her brother] Herrick good.

HERRICK advances, holding out letter. As he does so, AMINA s something low and rapid to brother in their language.

HERRICK. From Samway.

SAMEHDA steps forward and ta the letter with a salaam. He re it by the light of the oil lan and then retreats and stands w his head drawn back, look from one white man to anot

AMINA at his elbow.

SAMEHDA. Chief man?

AMINA points to STROOD, and a speaks low and rapidly in a guage the white men do not derstand.

SAMEHDA. [Making a movemen silence her] Samway—my brother. Strood?

STROOD advances, holding out hand. SAMEHDA does not tak but salaams.

SAMEHDA. Palaver.

After a certain hesitation they sit down cross-legged. The CARRIERS also squat in the background; only the SOUDANESE remain standing, leaning on their rifles.

AMEHDA. Belgian man here?

ROOD. No; Englishmen—all.

AMEHDA. [With a deep sound] Bel- my enemy. Belgian kill many my le—take away my slave. Why you my country?

ROOD. Samehda, we are no friends elgians. We come to take Belgian try many marches from here. nting to the south[South—far.

MEHDA. [Pointing to HERRICK] man friend of my sister—Samway long time friend?

RRICK. [Bowing] Yes.

MEHDA. [Pointing to LOCKYER] man no Belgian?

CKYER. English.

MEHDA. [Pointing to COLLIE] This

LLIE. Scot.

ROOD. Brother of English.

MEHDA. [With a deep sound which or may not be approval] What you for?

ROOD. I tell you: we pass through country, go far south, take away Belgian country.

MEHDA. [Reserved and ironic] I Zanzibar—I know white men—from across sea—take country—-slave—all that belong Arab. Bel--English—German. And all say: e Allah! Free slave!" All steal Arab.

OOD. Arab stole first from black Samehda.

MEHDA. Then Arab keep if can; men take if can. Arab serve Allah OOD. Allah made men free, Sam- Arab make men slaves.

MEHDA. White men make slave too ier men. If run away—whip,

OOD. Hear me, Samehda. Samway friend.

MEHDA. Samway my brother.

OOD. Help us to cross your coun- ve will make you a large present. ! Do what Samway asks you.

AMINA murmurs rapidly in the unknown tongue.

SAMEHDA. My father chief man. I his son. [Touching AMINA] This one his daughter—daughter of Arab chief man. You—[he makes the motion of striking] Why?

STROOD. She stole that letter from my tent. Suppose you have a great strong letter, Samehda, a woman steal it—what you do?

SAMEHDA. No whip for Arab. Arab not black man.

STROOD. [Pressing him] She did a very bad thing to steal that letter. That letter is from your brother Samway. He saved your life; Arab never forget.

SAMEHDA. [Loftily] Arab good man.

STROOD. Listen! You give us carriers —forty. You make all quiet for us. At the Lomami River we give you good present—some rifles—some cloth. Afterward more present—bigger.

SAMEHDA. How much rifle—how many cloth?

STROOD. Ten pieces of cloth when we reach the Lomami; after crossing, ten rifles.

SAMEHDA. You give me rifle made in Germany?

STROOD. Good rifles.

SAMEHDA. No! You give me ten English rifle now; then I see.

STROOD. At the river, Samehda.

SAMEHDA. Suppose I no help?—Batetela very many—very strong. Got poison arrow; kill all. Take all rifles, then.

STROOD. [Vigorously] If we are killed, a great arm will avenge us. Remember your father—how the white men came.

SAMEHDA. [With a smile] This Belgian country. English soldier no come here. English—Belgian not good friend.

STROOD. Samehda, listen! I, too, am a chief man in my country—a strong chief. My death will make much noise. My Government will make the Belgians send an army—kill you—take your country.

SAMEHDA. [Softly] If you die, no one know. [With a gesture] Forest hide all.

STROOD. You refuse, then?

SAMEHDA. [Elusive] Samway my brother.

STROOD. Well?

SAMEHDA. You give me ten rifle now.

STROOD. [Rising] Palaver finish. I take you both with me to the Lomami River.

SAMEHDA and the GIRL spring up. All are on their feet.

STROOD. No attack, while I have you.

SAMEHDA'S glance slides round, STROOD lifts his revolver.

STROOD. Stand! Don't move!

SAMEHDA. [With dignity] This peace palaver—you no keep word.

STROOD. For our lives—you force me.

While he is speaking the GIRL has glided forward, stooping, and strikes upward at STROOD'S uplifted arm, with a little dagger; he drops the revolver, wounded in the wrist, and tries to seize her with the other hand; but she glides past him and away into the darkness, pursued by TWO SOUDANESE and SADIG. SAMEHDA has sprung back, drawing a knife. LOCKYER dashes forward to seize him; there is a swift ham-stringing cut and LOCKYER stumbles, clinging to the tent-pole for support. SAMEHDA turns and darts away. COLLIE rushes in pursuit of him; they disappear in the darkness to the Right. There are two shots, then a long groan, and in wailing, chattering confusion the CARRIERS disperse into the darkness.

STROOD. Stop them! Herrick! Mahmoud! Lockyer!—stop them!

[He, HERRICK, and the SOUDANESE dash after them.

LOCKYER is left clinging to the tent-pole. One or two more shots are heard; the drum-beats swell furiously. LOCKYER tries to leave the support of the tent-pole and walk, but sinks to the ground. He sits there, feeling and examining his leg.

LOCKYER. Ham-strung! My God!

He crawls back to the tent-pole, takes up his revolver and painfully raises himself till he is leaning against the pole, the lantern hanging quite close to his face. To this one lighted spot STR and HERRICK come back.

STROOD. Lockyer!

LOCKYER. Here!

LOCKYER. Collie?

HERRICK. I stumbled over his body

Savage cries from the forest the beating of drums.

HERRICK. They're on us.

STROOD. Into the bushes, quick! S together. Come!

HERRICK. Any chance?

STROOD. Yes! Yes! Come on! W slip through them yet. Come on—l of you. Stick close to me.

HERRICK. Hurt, Lockyer?

LOCKYER. Nothing.

STROOD. By compass—due west. K close, now! Keep close.

[He moves to the Left, followe HERRICK.

LOCKYER. I'll just put out this ligh

HERRICK. [Returning; in a low vo Lockyer! Lockyer!

STROOD'S VOICE. [From Left] C on! I can hear him—he's ahead.

HERRICK feels the tent-pole peers about.

STROOD'S VOICE. Come on! Come [HERRICK

Silence but for the sound of drums. Then dead silence.

LOCKYER'S VOICE. [Low, in the d ness] Good luck!

He leans forward and listens for the sound of* HERRICK'S breathing; then, at some noise, recoils, every nerve taut, listening to the forest. Nothing! He relaxes a moment in physical exhaustion. Then with an effort, again forces his mind to the forming of that resolve, fixing his queer stare on HERRICK, still unconscious. His shoulders shrug convulsively and he rises. He has taken two stealthy steps away when HERRICK stirs. STROOD stands still, then turns his head. HERRICK'S eyes have opened; they are fixed on his. The two men stare at each other without speaking. A faint smile flickers on HERRICK'S face.

RRICK. It's all right—go!

ROOD. For water.

RRICK. [With the same smile] For ·?

ROOD. Do you think I was leaving

RRICK. Yes. Why not? I've got a left. Our souls are naked here, d. Not worth keeping it from me. e hands.

ROOD. I meant to go. But damn me o. We'll get through yet. Lie here, nd some water. Back—soon!

He goes, treading stealthily away among the trees to the Left. HERRICK, left alone, mumbles his dry lips with his tongue, and leans back against the trunk, the picture of exhaustion, with his hand on his revolver.

RRICK. [Muttering] Back—will he? The face of AMINA is poked out from some bushes on the Right. She steals noiselessly up to HERRICK'S side. With her eyes fixed on his face she waits for him to stir. HERRICK opens his eyes and sees her.

RRICK. You!

INA. Batetela track all night. I —kill one fellow in bush there. shows her dagger] Come with a! Samehda friend to my friend. All safe with Amina! [Putting his hand to her breast] Come!

HERRICK continues to stare at her without speaking.

AMINA. If not quick, too late. Batetela soon here—find dead fellow—kill Herrick then. My brother not far—two three mile.

HERRICK. Strood!

AMINA. Quick!

HERRICK. Wait for him.

AMINA. No. He strike me. He break word. Strood dead man. Batetela all round—all over forest—many—soon find Herrick too.

HERRICK. [Raising his revolver] Not alive.

AMINA. [Embracing his knees] Ah! no! Come! Herrick safe with Samehda. Come quick! Strood leave you here to die.

HERRICK. No. Gone for water.

AMINA. Strood find water; he go on. Strood let all die, if he live.

HERRICK. [Slowly] No, I'll wait.

AMINA. If Strood come back, he shoot me.

HERRICK rises.

AMINA. [Clinging to him, twining round him, trying to draw him away into the bushes] Come! Come!

HERRICK. Let go, girl! I'll wait!

AMINA. [Recoiling suddenly] Strood.

STROOD has appeared from the forest, Left.

HERRICK. [With triumph, to the GIRL] See!

The GIRL shrinks behind the trunk. STROOD lifts his revolver, but the GIRL, interposing the trunk, creeps back into cover.

STROOD. Why didn't you hold her? Are they on us?

HERRICK. She killed a tracker out there. [The sound of drums is heard.

STROOD. [Slicing a length of creeper from the tree] Here! Tie yourself to me. Come on! She'll follow. We'll get her yet.

They tie the creeper around their waists. The almost naked form of a SAVAGE emerges from the bushes on the Right. With a cry, he darts back into the bushes. Yells follow and the beating of drums.

STROOD. Back to back, when we must. Now! Into the thick.

He hastens forward, half dragging HERRICK into the forest. Two dark FIGURES glide from the bushes and pass crouching. Then a splendid SAVAGE is seen standing clear, he leaps on to the fallen trunk, and stretches his bow. There is a shot; the SAVAGE shoots his arrow and leaps forward into the forest. The stage is empty again; three more shots are heard, some fierce cries; then STROOD, half dragging, half supporting HERRICK, comes back towards the trunk. Two arrows have pierced HERRICK'S back, the shafts visible

HERRICK. [Prostrate] Cut, cut! I'm done!

For answer STROOD lifts him. AMINA emerges from the bushes, Right, and leaps towards HERRICK. STROOD, dropping HERRICK, who sinks down dead, levels his revolver and fires. But the revolver clicks. It is empty. He throws it down, and stands quite still, unarmed, exposed, with his eyes fixed on the GIRL, who crouches forward towards him.

STROOD. Well! . . . Come on if you dare, you forest hell-cat!

His face has a kind of exaltation of defiance, as if holding a wild beast at bay with the force of his gaze. The GIRL stands hypnotised. At a sound from the bushes STROOD turns his head for a second. Quick as thought the GIRL springs and drives her dagger into his heart. With a gasp, he falls against the trunk, dead. The GIRL flings herself down by HERRICK'S dead body, stroking it and uttering a crooning lament.

A SAVAGE steals out of the bushes and stops three paces away, looking down at STROOD'S half-recumbent body. A kind of contraction passes over STROOD'S face. The SAVAGE recoils, raising his spear. STROOD'S face relaxes in death. The SAVAGE bends forward, regarding the dead white man with a sort of awe. Drums are beaten in the forest. The stage darkened.

ACT IV

SCENE I

The following June. BASTAPLE'S office sanctum in the City of London. Afternoon.

BASTAPLE is seated at his little table, BARON ZIMBOSCH in a chair to his right.

ZIMBOSCH. Since the middle of May, Mr. Bastaple, they have been sitting there at Bloemfontein, Milner and Oom Paul Kruger. Well, it is over—the Conference.

BASTAPLE. What's the result?

ZIMBOSCH. Impasse. The more Kruger ask, the more Milner refuse; the more Milner ask, the more Kruger stick his heel. No one will know for a fortnight; but take it from me, Mr. Bastaple: this is a certainty—no agreement.

BASTAPLE. H'm!

ZIMBOSCH. [Nodding] War—in the autumn. When the result of this Conference is known—up go the temperatures. A bad attack of war fever—you will see.

BASTAPLE. Quite sure about your news?

ZIMBOSCH. Absolute! Cable this morning; best information from the Colonial stair. You may bottom your dollars on it, Mr. Bastaple. My word—Africa! La! La! But you have a fortnight's grace before the news is out. Your friend Beton has his General Meeting the day after to-morrow, isn't it? If he gets his coolie labour, you have your chance to get out yet. I admire Robert Beton, the idealist to his tiptoes. Bon Dieu! you are all idealists in this country.

[BASTAPLE sighs.

ZIMBOSCH. Ah! not you, Mr. Bastaple—not you!

The door, Back, is opened. FARRELL appears; he closes is about to advance when BASTAPLE waves him back.

ASTAPLE. One minute, Farrell.

[FARRELL retires.

MBOSCH. [Rising] Well, I hope I e brought you some useful news this . You remember how Rothschild the battle of Waterloo. And they that lion up in the sky—the British- ian lion! My Lord! What a mon- ! Curious no country has taken a for its pet animal!

ASTAPLE. No uplift about a tiger, on.

MBOSCH. [Preparing to go] And steamers, Mr. Bastaple? We are ing to you for that loan.

ASTAPLE. You have my word, Baron.

MBOSCH. The word of Adrian Bas- . [With a bow] Good afternoon Mr. Bastaple. You have yet a fort- . [He is moving to the door back.

ASTAPLE. [Rising and motioning to loor, Right] This way, Baron. He shows him out, then presses his bell. FARRELL enters from his room.

RRELL. Mr. Beton is here, sir; but Stanforth and Lord Elderleigh have et come.

STAPLE. What are South African essions at this afternoon?

RRELL. Still sagging, sir—fifteen ngs.

STAPLE. Back about three-six- hs all round, um?

RRELL. Yes, sir. Oh! you saw this, in this morning's paper? [Reads cutting] "Dr. Clement Franks ar- in London yesterday from Mom- He has lately returned from the o, where he accompanied Mr. d, Captain Lockyer, and Mr. Col- the expedition of which as yet no has been received. STAPLE. Yes, I saw that.

RRELL. Will you have Mr. Beton in?

STAPLE. Yes.

RRELL. [Opening the door] Oh, the others have just come, sir. Will you come in, gentlemen?

BETON comes in, followed almost immediately by STANFORTH and LORD ELDERLEIGH.

BETON. Seen that about Franks, Bastaple? I hope to God he'll give us some good news.

ELDERLEIGH. He sent a letter overland to his cousin Mr. Tregay.

BETON. What does he say?

STANFORTH. [Coldly] We have come about that.

ELDERLEIGH. I'm afraid we shall have to speak plainly. Mr. Tregay holds the theory that this expedition has been dust in our eyes, Mr. Beton. It appears you are bringing forward a scheme for coolie labour at your meeting the day after to-morrow which is entirely—entirely contrary to our ideals and views. Mr. Tregay has suggested that you and Mr. Bastaple have tried to blind us with this anti-slavery expedition. He calls it a red herring.

BASTAPLE. Mr. Tregay is a picturesque person, my lord.

ELDERLEIGH. That may be. But this coolie scheme is not a figure of speech, and we—I speak for Nonconformist opinion—are dead against it.

STANFORTH. I speak for Liberalism—dead against it. Africa is for the white man, and we won't have the yellow there, nor that dressed-up slavery, indentured labour.

BETON. Africa will not be for the white man in our time, without my coolie labour. I want to see the white man there, and you don't care two straws about it. No, you don't—neither of you. You just want to air your principles, or whatever you call them. Very well; it's a fight.

ELDERLEIGH. I should like to know: was it a red herring?

BASTAPLE. Really, my lord——

BETON. It was; I don't care a damn whether you know it or not. I'm too sorry about those poor fellows swallowed up in that forest.

ELDERLEIGH. Stanforth, is there anything to stay for?

STANFORTH. No, there's everything to go for.

ELDERLEIGH. Then we meet the day after to-morrow at—Philippi. Good afternoon! [They go out.

BETON. This is a bolt from the blue! We've made a mistake not to have proxies, Bastaple. The cat's out of the bag and might just as well have been out sooner. Well, I shall let myself go at the meeting—they'll get it from the shoulder. "Africa for the white man!" Bunkum! It'll take a hundred years that way. I want to see my dreams come true in my lifetime.

BASTAPLE. The market's got wind; shares are sagging.

BETON. Let 'em; their future's safe.

BASTAPLE. The Boers, Beton?

BETON. Oh! old Kruger will have climbed down all right. If Dr. Franks comes here, let me have the news. I must go to work on this. I shall get it through, yet.

[He goes out, Back. BASTAPLE is left brooding.

BASTAPLE. [To himself] Not he! [He takes a sheet of paper and begins figuring] A damned bad hole!

He crosses over to the telephone, takes up the receiver, but puts it back again. After a turn up and down, he goes to the table, takes a cigar from the box, and is about to light it when FARRELL enters, Right, from the waiting-room.

FARRELL. Dr. Franks, sir, in the waiting-room.

BASTAPLE. Oh! very well!

[FARRELL retires to his own room.

BASTAPLE replaces the cigar, crosses to the waiting-room, and opens the door.

BASTAPLE. Dr. Franks? Adrian Bastaple.

FRANKS comes in. Very sun-dark and thin, with the look of a man who has been through a terrible strain. He is a great contrast to BASTAPLE.

BASTAPLE. Glad to see you, Dr. Franks. Read of your arrival in this morning's paper. What news?

[FARRELL enters.

BASTAPLE. Please leave your address. Many thanks, again. Good-bye!

FRANKS. Good-bye.

FARRELL and FRANKS go out.

BASTAPLE, alone, brings his hands together, presses the palms closely, rubs them; then stands still. On his face is the look of a man who suddenly sees his way. Then, going to the map, he examines it, passing his finger down, as if tracing an imaginary route. When he raises his head, the expression on his face has changed to one of great determination. He rings the bell and stands behind the map, waiting. [FARRELL enters.

FARRELL. Yes, sir?

BASTAPLE. Farrell, Dr. Franks has been telling me about Strood's expedition. Follow me. [He traces with his finger on the map] It seems that when Franks was left behind, here, Strood was making for some diamond fields—there in the Kasai—to secure them for South African Concessions.

FARRELL. [Startled] Indeed, sir?

BASTAPLE. Dr. Franks thinks he cannot possibly have reached those diamond fields, and that the whole expedition has foundered. I think—he is unduly pessimistic.

FARRELL. You—you do, sir?

BASTAPLE. I shouldn't be surprised if at any moment we had news—of his having reached them. My instinct is not often wrong. [As if to himself] A new de Beers discovered for South African Concessions—! God-sent! God-sent, Farrell!

FARRELL. [His mouth opening a little] Yes, sir.

BASTAPLE. But no use, if it doesn't come within a fortnight. When the Transvaal news is out, Africans will drop to nothing.

FARRELL. Oh! . . . If Strood—how should we be likely to hear, sir?

BASTAPLE. [Pointing to map] From the west coast, I imagine—a Portuguese source, probably. [Turning to FARRELL] If coolie labour doesn't go through, Farrell, I am face to face with something like disaster.

FARRELL. [Gazing intently] I—I—see, sir. I heard of the opposition; Mr. Stanforth was most sarcastic. But is there no chance of coolie labour going through?

BASTAPLE. We must wait for the General Meeting. If it does go through, Strood's success is less material. If it doesn't—and it won't, Farrell, it won't—his success is vital. [A pause—with sudden emphasis] But he's no more a man to fail than I.

FARRELL. N—no, sir.

BASTAPLE. [Hardening] Did you ever know my instinct wrong?

FARRELL. N—no, sir.

BASTAPLE. Dr. Franks got through, then why not Strood? We are not all so pessimistic, Farrell.

FARRELL. N—no, sir.

BASTAPLE. What shares are left in my name?

FARRELL. Only the twenty thousand, sir.

BASTAPLE. Good. The rest are to be sold at any price above a pound. [Putting his finger on a spot in the map] Study this map.

[He crosses to the door and goes through into his inner sanctum.

FARRELL is left gazing at the map with round eyes. He blows out his cheeks and lets them slowly subside.

FARRELL. [To himself] What a man!

SCENE II

The same, in the afternoon, four days later.

FARRELL is at the telephone.

FARRELL. No, he's been out of town the last three days. . . . Yes . . . I quite follow—two currents—selling on the coolie failure—buying on this report . . . much the stronger! . . . I see. What have they touched? . . . Thirty shillings! Still upward? . . . Ah, ha! Batson! buy me five thousand for Mr. Bastaple's account; you've just time before they close. . . . Yes, yes. . . . Exactly. . . . Right. [Cutting off. To himself] Buying! [He sits, smiling.] A master stroke.

FARRELL starts up and look him eagerly. But his face is that of a graven image. He p without a word into his sanctum. FARRELL is hesit whether to follow, when he c back without hat or gloves.

FARRELL. There's been a very l rise all day on this report—bu mostly from the general public. [his quick look] There's been heavy ing, too, sir. [A little meaning s

BASTAPLE. Really?

FARRELL. Yes, sir. The demand great, I fully expect all the dummies be sold before closing time. [He rub hands.] In fact, I'm waiting for—

TAPLE. I've read your report, Dr. s. Terrible, that forest! I was just g round to you about this news in pers.

NKS. I came about that.

TAPLE. I thought you unduly pes- c the other day.

NKS. You believe it?

GAY. Striking coincidence, Mr. le.

TAPLE. How do you mean?

TREGAY. On Monday my cousin reports Strood's objective; on Thursday comes the news that he has reached it.

BASTAPLE. You think something let fall by Dr. Franks has inspired the imagination of some journalist?

FRANKS. I've let nothing fall.

BASTAPLE. [Shrugging his shoulders] How about Mr. Tregay——? Walls have ears, Dr. Franks.

FRANKS. [Drawing a cutting from his pocket] "On behalf of South African Concessions?" How could I have said that? I've been away six years—didn't even know there was such a concern.

BASTAPLE. Ever heard of Robert Beton?

FRANKS. Yes, from Strood.

BASTAPLE. Robert Beton is South African Concessions. Beton picked him for this trip.

FRANKS. [Flustered] Yes; but I—I've never spoken of Beton.

BASTAPLE. Well! It looks more and more as if the news were true. We must try and verify it, Dr. Franks.

TREGAY. How about beginning in this office?

BASTAPLE. The report, you mean? . . . Hasn't been out of my personal possession, Mr. Tregay. [He takes it from his breast pocket] And since I saw Dr. Franks, I've been away from town until an hour ago.

TREGAY. Walls have ears, Mr. Bastaple.

BASTAPLE. Not these walls, gentlemen, or a good many projects would have gone agley.

FRANKS. [Excitedly] There's a wild buying of shares, they tell me. See this headline: "Another De Beers."

BASTAPLE. Let's look at that wording. [Reading the cutting] "Another De Beers is reported to have been discovered on behalf of South African Concessions, by the explorer John Strood, who last autumn penetrated the Congo region from the Albert Edward Nyanza." Been down to the office of that journal?

FRANKS. Yes, and to others. The only answer I get is that it comes from a reliable source.

BASTAPLE. The craze for sensation—it may be a canard.

TREGAY. If so, how comes it they pitched on Strood's real objective?

BASTAPLE. [Shrugging] Exactly! how?

FRANKS. People are losing and making fortunes on the strength of this report. I don't believe it; I want my name cleared of it.

BASTAPLE. What are you going to do, then?

FRANKS. Disclaim any connection, in the papers, warn people against the report.

FARRELL appears from his room, with evening papers in his hand. He puts them down on the little table; then hands BASTAPLE a slip of paper, and goes out.

BASTAPLE. [After a glance at the slip of paper, smiles; then, curling it up in his hand, spreads an evening journal] Let's see if there's anything fresh about it. [Reading to himself] Um! It says here: "From a Portuguese source." That absolves you, Dr. Franks.

FRANKS. [Startled] Portuguese! If it's true, after all!

BASTAPLE. Why not? I'm buying on the strength of it. Still, send that denial of your responsibility.

TREGAY. At once, Clement, if it's to be in to-morrow's press.

FRANKS. Could I write it quietly in there? [He points to the door, Right.

BASTAPLE. Certainly. You'll find everything.

FRANKS. Thanks. [He goes out.

TREGAY. Might I have a look at that bit of paper in your left hand?

BASTAPLE. [Involuntarily closing his hand] I beg your pardon!

TREGAY. This is a ramp, Mr. Bastaple.

BASTAPLE. [Slowly] Are you unwell, sir?

TREGAY. Who financed the Strood expedition? You! Why? Because you wanted coolie labour to boost your shares with. Coolie labour fell down two days ago, BASTAPLE makes a gesture of impatience.

TREGAY. And you were in deep—or you'd never have pulled out ten thousand pounds last autumn for a slave-trade story. What then? Shares falling—time pressing; you know why, and so Old Kruger—war coming. And so whispered "diamonds," and som heard you, and—

Again BASTAPLE makes a move

TREGAY. Well! Why not? You wi stead of losing—someone loses in of winning. And you have made Do show me that bit of paper.

BASTAPLE. This is amusing.

TREGAY. Ah! Then, may I ha look?

BASTAPLE. You may be damned!

He takes a cigar and lights it the little flame burning besid cigar box.

TREGAY. [Staring at him] Self self and devil take the hindmost motto, Mr. Bastaple.

BASTAPLE. Confound your impud What business have you——?

BASTAPLE. You must remember whether I did or not.

FARRELL. [Closing up] Certainly, sir; you did not.

TREGAY. Mr. Farrell, be careful.

FARRELL. I am naturally careful, sir.

TREGAY. Will you swear he didn't tell you?

BASTAPLE. This is not a Court of Law.

TREGAY. No; but you may find yourself in one.

BASTAPLE. And you, sir.

TREGAY. [To FARRELL] I say you knew that Strood was after those diamonds in the Kasai. I further say that on Wednesday night, after the General Meeting, when coolie labour was defeated, you wired in cipher to Lisbon instructing your agent there to send this report about Strood. Look at it!

[He thrusts it before FARRELL'S eyes. While FARRELL is reading, all three men are staring hard at him. FARRELL finishes reading and looks up.

FARRELL. I certainly did not.

TREGAY. Pardon me if I've underrated the astuteness of your methods, but somehow you got that message sent. Look at this: "Press Agency Lisbon no knowledge—cannot trace sender." [He shows FARRELL the telegram] Bring an action for slander if you didn't rig that report.

FARRELL. You're talking wild, sir.

TREGAY. [Patting his pocket] That bit of paper you brought in just now? What a nice round figure, isn't it?

Putting his hand in his pocket, bringing it out as if with the paper in it, and looking at the inside of his hand.

FARRELL. [After a moment of suspense] Yes, sir, what is the—the amount?

BASTAPLE. Your bluff called. Ha! My patience is exhausted. [Opening the door into his inner sanctum] Farrell.

[He goes out, followed by FARRELL.

TREGAY. There goes a tiger. But he's FRANKS. [As if to himself] "It's a bad world, master, and you have lost your way in it." Just to make money!

TREGAY. Your own by tooth and claw, my boy. Forest law. [He takes FRANKS's arm] Come on!

The door of the inner sanctum has been reopened, and FARRELL stands there.

TREGAY. [Regarding him steadily] What about that action, Mr. Farrell? You've got two witnesses.

FARRELL. I also have a wife and children. I don't go in for luxuries.

TREGAY. He might pay you better for his dirty work.

FARRELL. [With heat] Whet your tongue on me; but keep it off him, please!

TREGAY. By Jove, Mr. Farrell, there's sand in you. Tell me, isn't he ever ashamed of himself?

FARRELL. No more than you, sir.

TREGAY. [With a shrug] Come along, Clement.

They go out, followed by the gaze of FARRELL.

As the door is shut, BASTAPLE comes from the inner sanctum, still smoking his cigar. He seats himself and opens a drawer of the little table.

FARRELL. [Nervously] Mr. gay——

FARNEY. No, indeed, sir. No one could get you down. Your speech for our General Meeting to-morrow? I suppose I'm to word it according to the decision of the Board this afternoon to buy the Pillin ships. That's a big thing, sir.

HEYTHORP. Never rest on your oars; go forward or you go back. Toujours de l'audace!

FARNEY. I should like to have that on our writing paper, sir: "The Island Navigation Company—Toujours de l'audace." But I must say I hope freights have touched bottom. Sixty thousand pounds is a lump for a small company like ours to lay out; there's bound to be some opposition from the shareholders.

HEYTHORP. They'll come to heel.

FARNEY. By the way, sir, young Mr. Pillin is here. He wants to see you for a minute.

HEYTHORP. Bring him in.

FARNEY goes to the door, Back, opens it and says "Mr. Pillin!" BOB PILLIN enters; a tall young man with round, well-coloured cheeks, round eyes, little moustache, fur coat, spats, diamond pin, and silver-headed Malacca cane.

BOB PILLIN. How de do, Mr. Heythorp?

HEYTHORP. How's your father?

BOB PILLIN. Tha-anks, rather below par, worryin' about our ships. He sent me round to see if you've any news for him. He was comin' himself, only this weather——

HEYTHORP. Your father's got no chest —never had. Tell him from me to drink port—add five years to his life.

[BOB PILLIN chuckles.

HEYTHORP. Beginning to look forward to his shoes, eh? Dibs and no responsibility.

BOB PILLIN stops his own mouth with the head of his cane.

HEYTHORP. Scratch a poll, Poll!

BOB PILLIN evacuates his mouth, startled.

HEYTHORP. Give you a note for him presently. Help me up, Mr. Farney.

FARNEY heaves and HEYTHORP pulls. The old man gets on his feet and passes, unimaginably slow, towards the inner office.

HEYTHORP. You can bring 'em in, now. [He goes.

BOB PILLIN. By Jove! the old boy is gettin' a back number. His nickname fits him down to the ground—"Old English!" He is.

FARNEY. [Loyal to his Chairman] He's a wonderful man. It's a treat to see him cross a road—everything has to wait for him.

BOB PILLIN. I say, those chaps in there ---what have they come for?

FARNEY. I wonder, sir. [Opening the door into the outer office] Come in, gentlemen. Will you wait in here, Mr. Pillin?

SIX GENTLEMEN enter—CHARLES VENTNOR, first, encountering BOB PILLIN in the doorway.

VENTNOR. Hallo, Pillin!

BOB PILLIN. Hallo, Ventnor! How are you?

VENTNOR. Thanks, bobbish!

BOB PILLIN. Mrs. Ventnor well?

VENTNOR. So-so.

They cross each other and BOB PILLIN goes out.

CHARLES VENTNOR is short, squarely built, with a reddish-brown moustache; a certain fulvous-foxy about him. He sits at the The second gentleman to com MR. BROWNBEE, is seventy old, with a pink face and thin grey whiskers. He sits to VENTNOR. The other GENTLEMEN also take seats. NEY goes into the outer offic

VENTNOR. The old chap's got a n keeping us hanging about like this BROWNBEE. I'm afraid he's very f Mr. Ventnor—very feeble; only gets about.

VENTNOR. He sticks to his Boar right, Mr. Brownbee.

BROWNBEE. Can't retire, I fear— on his fees, they tell me.

VENTNOR. Old guinea-pig!

BROWNBEE. I think one must a his resolution; quite a figure in L pool these twenty years—quite.

VENTNOR. [Sinking his voice] A old rip. Got at least one famil oughtn't to.

BROWNBEE. Tt, tt! Is that so?

VENTNOR. [Sinking his voice] Rosamund Larne—the story-wri client of mine—she's the widow of of his born long before his mar Fine-looking woman she is, too.

BROWNBEE. Ah! The early V rians! Before the influence of the old Queen. Well, times change.

VENTNOR. U'm! Don't know that. But I do know he keeps me my money. [Raising his voice] I ask me, gentlemen, we'd better bre old ship up and salve what we can

A CREDITOR. Pretty hard wood Ventnor; real old man-o'-war tea

VENTNOR. Well, his autocrati don't suit me. I'm for putting the on tight.

BROWNBEE. I think—I think, i would leave it to me, Mr. Ventnor suaviter in modo——

VENTNOR. Will never get me m hundred.

OLD HEYTHORP has entered. lence falls. Five of the Cr rise, but VENTNOR contin sit. OLD HEYTHORP a slowly, resumes his seat table, and looks round wit fiant twinkle. They all sit. FARNEY enters from the inner office, bringing a cup of tea which he places before OLD HEYTHORP.

HEYTHORP. [With a bow] Excuse me, tlemen; had a long Board.

He conveys the cup to his mouth and drinks; his CREDITORS watch in suspense with which is blended a sort of admiration at his accomplishment of this difficult feat. OLD HEYTHORP puts the cup down, and feebly removes some drops from the little white tuft on his chin.

EYTHORP. Well! My bankers have n you every information, I hope.

CREDITOR. [A Clergyman] Mr. Heyp, we've appointed Mr. Brownbee oice our views, Mr. Brownbee!

OWNBEE. Mr. Heythorp, we are to represent about £14,000. When ad the pleasure of meeting you last you held out a prospect of some satisfactory arrangement by stmas. But we are now in February, I am bound to say none of us get ger.

YTHORP. Don't you? H'm! I feel boy. [The CREDITORS shuffle.

NTNOR. [To BROWNBEE] He's go- o put us off again.

OWNBEE. [Suavely] I'm sure we're glad to hear it—very glad, indeed. To come to the point, however. eel, Mr. Heythorp, not unreason- I think, that—well—bankruptcy l be the most satisfactory solution. ave waited a long time, and, to be frank, we don't see any prospect of vement; indeed, we fear the oppo-slight embarrassment among the CREDITORS.

NTNOR. Put it that way if you like.

YTHORP. My grandfather lived to hundred, gentlemen; my father -six—three-bottle men, both of Only eighty odd myself; blameless mpared with theirs.

WNBEE. Indeed, we hope you have years of this life before you—HEYTHORP. You're getting a thousand a year out of my fees. I'll make it thirteen hundred. Bankrupt me, I shall lose my directorships, and you won't get a rap.

BROWNBEE. [After a pause, clearing his throat] We think you should make it at least fifteen hundred, Mr. Heythorp. We fancy you greatly underrate the possibilities of your bankruptcy.

HEYTHORP. I know 'em—you don't. My qualifying shares will fetch about a couple of thousand; my bank'll take most of that. House I live in, and everything in it, bar my togs, my wine, and my cigars, belong to my daughter under a settlement fifteen years old. Got nothing else. Position in a nutshell, gentlemen.

BROWNBEE. We understand your income from your fees and dividends to be some two thousand pounds a year, sir.

HEYTHORP. [Shaking his head] Nineteen hundred in a good year. Must eat and drink—must have a man to look after me, not as active as I was. Got people dependent on me. Can't do on less than six hundred. Thirteen hundred a year's all I can give you, gentlemen. No use beating about the bush; take it or leave it.

The CREDITORS rise to consult.

VENTNOR. And if we leave it?

HEYTHORP. Kill the goose that lays the golden eggs—that's all.

BROWNBEE. Mr. Heythorp, in consideration of you—er— [But he stops at the old man's fighting look] we shall accept your offer of thirteen hundred a year.

HEYTHORP. Ah! Keep the bird alive —sound policy.

BROWNBEE. We certainly don't wish to press too hardly on one who for many years has been a man of mark in Liverpool. In fact, we—excuse me—admire your courage in keeping a stiff lip in spite of your—your—infirmities.

OLD HEYTHORP bows to him, and he bows to OLD HEYTHORP.

BROWNBEE. We feel you will do your best to give us all you can; and we—er—wish you many years of life.

CREDITOR. [The Clergyman, rising] I have long felt—not as a man of the world precisely—that Mr. Heythorp would feel his conscience lighter if we could relieve him of——

VENTNOR. Our money.

CREDITOR. [Slightly disconcerted] Well, that is perhaps in effect the position. We—er—are, in fact, a thorn in his side, and for his own good he feels no doubt that he would like to have us—er—removed. [Laughs] If, however, the process must be—er—prolonged——

VENTNOR. Get on with it, sir.

CREDITOR. [Disconcerted] Exactly! With these few words, I am entirely at one with Mr. Brownbee.

VENTNOR. [Sotto voce] Amen!

HEYTHORP. Much obliged to you, gentlemen—very sporting of you. Shall act towards you in the same spirit.

BROWNBEE. Good-day, then, sir. Don't get up, I beg.

CREDITORS. Good-day, sir.

OLD HEYTHORP salutes them. They follow on the heels of MR. BROWNBEE. MR. VENTNOR has remained behind.

VENTNOR. Sorry not to have been able to join the mutual admiration society, Mr. Heythorp. Your debt to me is £300. I think it might be worth your while to consider whether you can't settle that separately. I'm a lawyer, and neither very trustful nor very patient.

HEYTHORP. Go behind their backs, do you? Eh.

VENTNOR, very angry, is about to speak, when the door from the outer office is opened, and FARNEY enters.

VENTNOR. You made a big mistake in saying that, Mr. Heythorp. Good evening! [He goes out.

FARNEY. I beg your pardon. I thought you were alone, sir.

HEYTHORP. That's an ugly dog. What's his name?

FARNEY. Ventnor, sir; a solicitor. There are two ladies to see you, sir.

HEYTHORP. Ladies?

FARNEY. A Mrs. and Miss Larne: there's a boy with them.

HEYTHORP. M'yes! Well, show 'em in.

FARNEY opens the door into the outer office. ROSAMUND LARNE enters, preceded by her children, PHYLLIS, and JOCK, who twee
FARNEY'S coat-tail as he pass then stands seraphic, gazing at ceiling, while FARNEY pursues way out with dignity.

PHYLLIS. Jock, you are an awful b
Guardy, he really is too awful.

PHYLLIS is like a day in April, and fresh, and seventeen. The JOCK has a pink seraphic fa and the just breaking voice fourteen; he wears Eton jac and collar, and carries a sch cap.

PHYLLIS. He won't wear his overc and he will wear that frightful cap w his Eton jacket.

JOCK puts it on dreamily.

PHYLLIS. Look! Isn't he a horror?

MRS. LARNE takes OLD HEYTHO puffy hand and presses it to ample bosom. She is of a florid beauty and perhaps thir eight.

MRS. LARNE. Dear old Guardy!
forgive us for coming. I had to you, and I couldn't leave these child outside, you never know what the do.

While she speaks the boy JOCK quietly pinned his mother's and ter's floating hat-scarves toget and, withdrawing, puts his fin to his mouth and emits a pier whistle. PHYLLIS rushing thump him, the two hats fall and two hands fly to two head

PHYLLIS. Isn't he a pig?

Advancing on JOCK, she hustles out into the outer office and sl with her back against the d
MRS. LARNE adjusts her calmly, with her low, full, se tive laugh.

MRS. LARNE. I really had to come see you, Guardy; we haven't had a s of you for such an age. Phyllis, go see after Jock, there's a darling.

PHYLLIS tosses her head, wrenc open the door and slides out.

MRS. LARNE. How are you, dea
Guardy!

HEYTHORP. Never better. B haven't a penny for you.

MRS. LARNE. [With her laugh]

ghty of you to think I came for that! I am in a terrible fix, Guardy.

EYTHORP. Never knew you not to

IRS. LARNE. Just let me tell you. It'll some relief. I'm having the most dful time. [She subsides into a chair de him, with a luxurious sigh] Ex- to be sold up any moment. We may on the streets to-morrow. And I n't tell the children; they're so y, poor darlings. I've been obliged ake Jock away from school. And lis has had to stop her piano and ing; it's an absolute crisis. But for three hundred, Guardy, you know entirely dependent on my pen. And Midland Syndicate people—I've counting on at least two hundred them for my new story, and the hes have refused it. Such a de- ful story! [She prevents a tear from g on to her powdered cheek with a handkerchief] It is hard, Guardy. I ed my brain silly over it.

YTHORP. Rats!

S. LARNE. Guardy, how can you? h a sigh that would rend no heart] couldn't, I suppose, let me have just ttle hundred?

YTHORP. Not a bob.

IRS. LARNE looks round the room, then leans towards him.

S. LARNE. Guardy, you are so like ar Philip.

YTHORP. Your dear Philip! You led devil of a life, or I'm a Dutchman.

S. LARNE. Guardy! [Her eyes ring] This office looks so rich. I money all the way upstairs. And ovely house. We went there first, rse.

THORP. Not my house. My daugh- She see you?

. LARNE. We saw someone in the when the butler was saying you ere at the office.

THORP. Deuce you did!

. LARNE. Such a lovely house! y, just imagine if your grandchil- vere thrown out into the street. f they don't know it, still you are randfather.

D HEYTHORP only grins.

. LARNE. Do come to my rescue this once. You really might do something for them.

OLD HEYTHORP'S defiant cynicism gives way to an idea which strikes him.

HEYTHORP. H'm! Do something for them! Just got an idea. Yes!

MRS. LARNE. Oh! Guardy!

HEYTHORP. Wait a bit. I'll see. Yes! I'll see. Might be able.

MRS. LARNE. How lovely! But, Guardy, not just fifty now?

OLD HEYTHORP shakes his head.

MRS. LARNE. Well, [Getting up] you'll be sorry when we come round one night and sing for pennies under your window. Isn't Phyllis growing a sweet girl?

Throwing clouds of perfume, to judge by the expression of OLD HEYTHORP'S nose, she goes out calling "Phyllis!"

PHYLLIS. [Entering] There's such a young man in there. He can only just see over his collar. And the way he squints at me—Lawks!

HEYTHORP. Oh! that young pup—I'd clean forgot him. Phyllis! Help me up.

PHYLLIS tries, and they succeed.

HEYTHORP. You a good girl?

PHYLLIS. No, Guardy. Can't be when Jock's at home.

HEYTHORP. [He pats her cheek] Mind! Chaps like that little-headed young pup in there—not for you. All the same mould, no drive, no vices—nothing. Thinks himself a spark. Why! at his age I'd broken my neck, winged a Yankee, been drowned for a bet, and lost my last bob on the Derby.

PHYLLIS. Had you, Guardy? How lovely!

HEYTHORP. H'm! Just keep him looking through his dog-collar, while I write a letter.

He again pats her cheek and goes out into the inner office. A piercing whistle is heard through the open door.

PHYLLIS. [At the fire—to herself] There goes Jock! He's bitten that young man, or something juicy.

[BOB PILLIN comes in.

PHYLLIS. Oh! young man—so you've escaped! Isn't he a terror?

BOB PILLIN. [Who is evidently much struck by her] He is—er—rather. Er—cold, isn't it? [Approaches fire.

PHYLLIS. Yes—jolly.

BOB PILLIN. [Nervously] I say, I've left my hat; do you think it's safe?

PHYLLIS. No, of course it isn't. I'll get it?

BOB PILLIN. [More and more impressed] No, no! Please don't go. It doesn't matter a bit. My name's Pillin—er—Bob. Are you a relation of "Old English"?

PHYLLIS. "Old English!"

BOB PILLIN. What! Don't you know his nickname?

PHYLLIS. No; we call him Guardy. Isn't he a chook?

BOB PILLIN. Er—I don't know that I should have called him that—er—exactly. It's my Dad who's a friend of his, don't you know?

PHYLLIS. Is your Dad like him?

BOB PILLIN. Not much!

PHYLLIS. What a pity!

BOB PILLIN. Ha! D'you mind tellin' me your name?

PHYLLIS. Phyllis.

BOB PILLIN. Rippin'! We live at the last house in Sefton Park.

PHYLLIS. Oh! We live at Millicent Villas. It's a poky little house. We have awful larks though.

BOB PILLIN. Your brother keeps things lively, I expect.

PHYLLIS. Yes. He goes off all the time like a squib.

Sounds are heard from the outer office.

PHYLLIS. That's mother pinching him. We've never been here before. We call Guardy the last of the Stoic-uns.

BOB PILLIN. [Still more struck] I say—that's awfully good—that's—that's very funny.

The outer office door is opened and MRS. LARNE appears, holding JOCK by the ear, and in her other hand BOB PILLIN'S flattened-out top hat.

MRS. LARNE. Is this your h-h-hat, Mr.—Mr.——?

Laughter overcomes her. PHYLLIS is in convulsions. JOCK seraphic.

BOB PILLIN. [Taking it] Er—it—was.

PHYLLIS. I told you so.

MRS. LARNE. I'm so ashamed. thought he was too quiet. And of cour—he—he—was si-itting on it.

BOB PILLIN. [With a sort of galla try] Really! It's—it's—nothing. doesn't matter a bit.

PHYLLIS. Oh! young man. What fib! Such a lovely hat!

MRS. LARNE. What can we do? Y must come and see us, Mr. Billing.

PHYLLIS. Pillin—mother.

BOB PILLIN. Ah! er—yes.

MRS. LARNE. We shall be so pleas if you will.

BOB PILLIN. Thanks. [Gazing at hat] That'll be jolly!

PHYLLIS. We'll tie Jock up.

JOCK rolls his eyes fearfully.

MRS. LARNE. Yes, you horrible bo Ah! Here's dear Guardy. I shall him.

JOCK simulates terror, as OLD HE THORP enters from the inner fice.

MRS. LARNE. Guardy, we must Good-bye! [Lowering her voice] Th very soon you will do something, wo you? The children are so fond of y Guardy! [She presses his hand swings to the door.]

HEYTHORP. [To BOB PILLIN] round and tell your father I want to him—now, at once.

BOB PILLIN. Oh! Thanks awf'ly, I hope you'll cheer the old man up.

HEYTHORP. [Pointing] What's thing?

BOB PILLIN. My—er—hat, sir.

PHYLLIS gives way, JOCK simul terror.

MRS. LARNE. [From the door] C along, you dreadful children. Mr. P will you see us to our train?

BOB PILLIN. Delighted! I—I'll run in to our office—next door. Sh be a shake.

PHYLLIS. [To BOB, who is starin his hat] Oh! put it on. Do put it on.

BOB PILLIN puts it on and PHYLLIS claps her hands.

LARNE and JOCK go out.

PHYLLIS. Good-bye, Guardy dear

HEYTHORP. Fond of me?

'HYLLIS. Oh! Guardy, I adore you. I h you'd come and see us oftener.

LEYTHORP. Well! I'll come to-mor-.

HYLLIS. That'll be lovely. [She es him.]]She goes out.

EYTHORP. [To himself] Fresh as il—clean run stock. By George, I'll t!

FARNEY enters from the outer office.

ARNEY. Miss Heythorp is below, sir, a carriage to take you home; she she'll wait.

EYTHORP. Deuce she is! Devil to ARNEY. And Mr. Joseph Pillin has come in.

EYTHORP. [Sinking into his chair] g him here! Don't want to be dis- d.

RNEY. Very good, sir.

He waits for JOSEPH PILLIN to enter; then crosses and goes out into the inner office. JOSEPH PILLIN is a parchmenty, precise, thin, nervous man, with slight grey whiskering, between seventy and eighty, in a fur coat and top hat.

PILLIN. [In his rather quavering] Well, Sylvanus, I had your mes-

YTHORP. Um, Joe! Have a cigar. puts one in his own mouth, and it.]

PILLIN. Cigar! You know I smoke them. You've a monstrous tution, Sylvanus. If I drank port moked cigars, I should be in my in a fortnight. I'm getting old— ng nervous——

YTHORP. Always were as scary as hen, Joe. Sit down.

PILLIN. Well, my nature's not like About my ships. What news have I'm getting anxious. I want to re- reights are very depressed. I don't they'll recover in my time. I've got mily to think of.

YTHORP. Crack on sail and go —buck you up like anything.

PILLIN. Now, Sylvanus! You a joke of everything. I'm quite s.

HEYTHORP. Never knew you anything else, Joe.

JOE PILLIN. Hasn't your Board decided to-day? The sixty thousand I'm asking is a very small price for four good ships.

OLD HEYTHORP looks at him deeply, twinkles, and blows a puff of smoke.

JOE PILLIN. Well, Sylvanus?

HEYTHORP. Make it worth my while, Joe, or it won't go through.

JOE PILLIN. Worth your while? [Bending forward and lowering his voice] How do you mean—a commission? You could never disclose it.

HEYTHORP. Who wants to? I'll get you sixty thousand for your ships if you'll give me ten per cent of it. If you don't—deal's off, Joe—not a brass rap.

JOE PILLIN. But it means coming down six thousand in my price.

HEYTHORP. Well, try elsewhere.

JOE PILLIN. But I have. There's no market at all.

HEYTHORP. Then take my offer.

JOE PILLIN. My dear Sylvanus—that's —that's positively cynical. A commission —it's not legal.

HEYTHORP. Not going to take a penny piece myself. I want you to settle it on some protégés of mine.

JOE PILLIN. [In agitation] But it's a breach of trust! I really can't be party to a breach of trust. Suppose it came out.

HEYTHORP. Won't come out.

JOE PILLIN. Yes, yes, so you say; but you never know.

HEYTHORP. Nothing to prevent your executing a settlement on some third parties. Who's your lawyer?

JOE PILLIN. My lawyer? Scriven's my lawyer.

HEYTHORP. Well! Get him to draw up a deed poll to-morrow morning. Bring it to me here after the general meeting to-morrow afternoon. If the purchase goes through, you sign it; if it doesn't you tear it up. What stock have you got that gives 4 per cent?

JOE PILLIN. Midland Railway.

HEYTHORP. That'll do—you needn't sell, then.

JOE PILLIN. Yes; but who—who are these—these third parties?

HEYTHORP. Woman and her children—must make provision for 'em. [At JOE PILLIN'S expression] Afraid of being mixed up with a woman, Joe?

JOE PILLIN. Yes, you may laugh. I am afraid of being mixed up with someone else's woman. I don't like it—I don't like it at all. I've not led your life, Sylvanus.

HEYTHORP. Lucky for you—been dead long ago. Tell your lawyer it's an old flame of yours—you old dog.

JOE PILLIN. Yes, there it is at once, you see. I might be subject to blackmail.

HEYTHORP. Tell him to keep your name dark and just pay over the income quarterly.

JOE PILLIN. [Rising] I don't like it, Sylvanus—I don't really.

HEYTHORP. Then leave it and be hanged to you! But there'll be no deal, Joe.

JOE PILLIN. Is there no other way?

HEYTHORP. No. Matter must be settled to-morrow. And if I don't pitch it strong to the shareholders, the sale won't go through, that's flat.

JOE PILLIN. It's playing round the law, Sylvanus.

HEYTHORP. No law to prevent you doing what you like with your money. Taking nothing myself—not a mag. You assist the fatherless and widowed—just your line, Joe.

JOE PILLIN. What a fellow you are, Sylvanus! You don't seem capable of taking anything seriously.

HEYTHORP. Care killed the cat. Well?

JOE PILLIN. No, I—I don't think I can do it. Besides, such a sacrifice—six thousand pounds.

HEYTHORP. Very well! Get another bid if you can—freights'll go lower yet.

JOE PILLIN. Oh! do you think so?

HEYTHORP. Sure of it.

JOE PILLIN. Very well, Sylvanus, very well! I suppose I must.

HEYTHORP. Here's the name for your lawyer. Write it down.

[JOE PILLIN writes.

HEYTHORP. Rosamund Larne—with an "e"—23 Millicent Villas, Liverpool, widow of Philip Larne, late of Dublin, barrister-at-law; income to her, until her children, Phyllis Larne and John Larne, attain the age of twenty-one or marry, then to said Phyllis and said John La in equal shares for life, remainder their children. Got that? Get it dra to-morrow morning.

JOE PILLIN. [Raising himself] seems to me very irregular—very ris

HEYTHORP. Go home and drink a b tle of champagne on it. Good-night, J No deed, no deal! I'll trust you.

JOE PILLIN. Well, good-night, S vanus, good-night. You always were dare-devil. [He quavers to the door the outer office] Good-night.

HEYTHORP. [To himself] He'll jur Better than beggary for 'em. [He s back with a smile. Then closes his e as if in sleep.]

The door back Left is reopened a

ADELA HEYTHORP, his daugh comes in; a woman of thirty-t with dark hair and thin, stra face and figure. She stands just the room regarding him severe ADELA. You really ought not to be late, Father. It's most dangerous at t time of year. Are you ready, now?

HEYTHORP. [Opening his eyes] No

ADELA. It's really terrible the way neglect your health. I've noticed t every time you drink port, you do so thing dangerous the next day. In weat like this you ought always to get b before dark. And of course you much too much. One would think were forty, instead of over eighty.

HEYTHORP. Not if they saw you.

ADELA. Really, Father, is that y idea of repartee? Who were your itors?

HEYTHORP. Ladies and a boy.

ADELA. So I saw. They came to house first. I know their name is La but it conveyed nothing to me.

HEYTHORP. [With a grin] daughter-in-law, and my grandchild that's all.

ADELA. That isn't a bit funny, ei

HEYTHORP. No, it's gospel truth.

ADELA. Then do you mean to say were married before you married mother?

HEYTHORP. No.

ADELA. Not married! I see. I su these people are hanging round

, then. I begin to understand your culties. Are there any more of them?
Old HEYTHORP makes a violent and ineffectual effort to rise.
DELA. You'll hurt yourself. [Seeing motionless again] I suppose you t realize that it's not an agree-discovery. I don't know what to EYTHORP. Dine in my own room in

e. Tell Meller.
DELA. I don't see why you should your temper.
YTHORP. Because I can't get up, hink you can stand there and worry
DELA. Well, really, I've come eslly to fetch you home, and you call rrying.
YTHORP. Paddle my own canoe,
you.
ADELA turns and goes out.
YTHORP. [To himself] Self-righte-
at!
He makes a slow and considered effort to rise, but fails, and sits motionless. He raps the table with a pen. There is no result. Reaching for an inkpot, he rams it on the table twice.
WO YOUNG CLERKS appear at the door, Right.
YTHORP. You young gentlemen had tten me.
ST CLERK. Mr. Farney said you want to be disturbed, sir.
THORP. Give me my hat and coat.
OND CLERK. Yes, sir.
They come, raise him, and help him into hat and coat.
THORP. Thank you. That carriage
ST CLERK. [Crossing to window looking out] Yes, sir.
THORP. All right. Tell Mr. Farney me and see me at noon, about my for the general meeting to-mor-
ST CLERK. Yes, sir.
THORP. Good-night to you.

CLERKS. Good-night, sir.

He passes like a tortoise to the door, Back, opens it feebly, and goes out.

FIRST CLERK. Poor old Chairman, he's on his last.

SECOND CLERK. Gosh! He's a tough old hulk—he'll go down fighting. [Raising the window] There he goes—slow as a barnacle. He's held the whole street up. Look—under the lamp! [The FIRST CLERK joins him at the window] I say —that was a near thing—that cart!

FIRST CLERK. He doesn't give a damn for anything.

SECOND CLERK. He's got his tram all right.

FIRST CLERK. See him raising his hat to that old woman—you'd think he'd got all night before him.

SECOND CLERK. Old school—what!

FIRST CLERK. He's got pluck, and he's got manners. Good "Old English!"

SECOND CLERK. There they go! Tinga-ling!

[He shuts the window down. The curtain is lowered for a minute.

SCENE II

The same, converted to the purposes of the General Meeting. The three chairs back to the fire, on the Right, are those of OLD HEYTHORP and two fellow-Directors, of whom the first is on his feet. FARNEY stands by the Chairman, a little back of him. Facing them are four rows of five chairs each, with fourteen seated SHAREHOLDERS. At a small table, on the far Left, is a REPORTER. OLD HEYTHORP is finishing his Chairman's speech.

HEYTHORP. Come to this arrangement with Messrs. Pillin—owners of the four steamships, Smyrna, Damascus, Tyre, and Sidon— [His voice is failing] — vessels in prime condition. . . .

MR. BUDGEN (A SHAREHOLDER). [From the back] Excuse me, sir, we can't hear a word down here.

HEYTHORP. With a total freight-carrying capacity of fifteen thousand tons.

[THREE SHAREHOLDERS rise.

MR. BUDGEN. We might as well go home. If the Chairman's got no voice, can't somebody read for him?

OLD HEYTHORP takes a sip of water and goes on, a little louder.

HEYTHORP. At the low inclusive price of £60,000. Gentlemen, Vestigia nulla retrorsum.

SHAREHOLDER. Can't hear a word.

OLD HEYTHORP hands his speech to FARNEY and sinks into his seat.

FARNEY. The Chairman has just said, "Vestigia nulla retrorsum."

MR. BUDGEN. Yes, very convincing.

FARNEY. [Reading] "Times are bad, but they are touching bottom. I have said freights will go up. This is the moment for a forward stroke. With the utmost confidence we recommend your ratification of this purchase, which we believe will soon substantially increase the profits of the Company."

FARNEY sits down and glances at OLD HEYTHORP, who nods to the DIRECTOR on his left.

DIRECTOR. [Rising and combing his beard with his fingers] Before moving the adoption of the Report, we welcome any comment from shareholders.

[He sits down.

FARNEY. Mr. Brownbee.

MR. BROWNBEE. I should like, if I may be allowed, to congratulate the Board on having piloted our ship so smoothly through the troublous waters of the past year. ("Hear, hear!") With our worthy Chairman still at the helm, I have no doubt that, in spite of the still low, I might even say falling barometer, and the—er—unseasonable climacteric, we may rely on weathering the—er—storm. I confess that the present dividend of 4 per cent. is not one which satisfies—er—every aspiration; ("Hear, hear!") but speaking for myself, and I hope for others, [He looks round] I recognise that in all the circumstances it is as much as we have the right to expect. ("No, no.") It is very gratifying to have these ample reserves; and by following the bold, but to my mind prudent, development which the Board proposes to make, we may reasonably, not sanguinely, expect a more golden future. ("No, no!") A shareholder keeps on saying, "No, no"—from the lack of confidence I should like to dissociate myself. Our Chairman, whose strategic wisdom has been proved on many a field, would not so strongly advocate the purchase of these Pillin ships without good reason. He well said "Vestigia nulla retororium." I venture to think there can be no better motto for Englishmen. Ahem! Ahem!

[He sits down.

The other SHAREHOLDER rises again.

OLD HEYTHORP nods at him.

FARNEY. Mr. Westgate.

MR. WESTGATE. [A breezy fellow] I want to know much more about the proposition to purchase these ships. I doubt its wisdom; I very much doubt it. To whom was the proposal first made?

HEYTHORP. To me, sir.

MR. WESTGATE. The Chairman says to him. Very well! But what I want to know is why are Pillins sellin'? Are freights are to go up as the Chairman prophesies.

HEYTHORP. Matter of opinion.

MR. WESTGATE. Quite so. And in my opinion they're goin' lower; and Pillins are right to sell. If that's so, we're wrong to buy. ("Hear, hear!") ("No, no!") Pillins are shrewd people.

HEYTHORP. They're rattled.

MR. WESTGATE. Business men! Rattled! I wonder what young Mr. Pillin there says to that.

BOB PILLIN. Er, I'm not in—er—a position to—er—state.

MR. WESTGATE. Well, that's not very conclusive. Perhaps you'll say I'm not rattled too. [OLD HEYTHORP nods] Well, rattled or not, I think it's a rash purchase in times like these. We're in the trough of the sea.

HEYTHORP. Always buy at the bottom of the market.

MR. WESTGATE. And who's to know when we're there? We're losin' the trade hand over hand. The Germans are buildin' us out o' house and home. And the Yanks are goin' ahead like the very devil.

[EYTHORP. The Old Country's sound
igh.
[R. WESTGATE. Well, I can see no
's of it.
A SHAREHOLDER in the front row rises.
ARNEY. Mr. Winkley.
R. WINKLEY. [Lean and cautious] not a large company, and this prod purchase will absorb at least twovour of depleting ourselves in this

? I deprecate the proposal.
EYTHORP. Any other shareholder gate requires answering.

RNEY. Name, please?
AREHOLDER. Budgen.
YTHORP. Mr. Budgen.
. BUDGEN. I don't like this busimore than sound—it's a dam' e; and I stand or fall by it. [He back into his seat.]

A pause. Then an old pink GENTLE-MAN in the second row rises.

FARNEY. Mr. Appleby.

MR. APPLEBY. It has been painful to me—painful—and I have no doubt to others, to hear an attack made on the Chairman. If he is old in body, he is young in mental vigour and courage. I wish we were all as young. We ought to support him, gentlemen; most certainly we ought to support him.

OLD HEYTHORP bows, and MR. APPLEBY bows and sits down.

VENTNOR. [Rising] We don't want sentiment interfering with our judgment in this matter. The question is simply: How are our pockets to be affected? I came here with some misgiving. [In a rather queer voice] I can't say I've lost it; but on the whole—I say on the whole—I favour the proposition. The ships are undoubtedly very cheap. We've got these reserves, and we might as well use them. [A pause] The Chairman knows his way about. [He sits down.]

HEYTHORP. Any more remarks? [Heaved up] Very well, I move the adoption of the Report and accounts.

MR. BROWNBEE. I second that.

HEYTHORP. Those in favour signify the same in the usual way.

Except MR. WESTGATE, MR. BUDGEN, and one other, all hold up their hands.

HEYTHORP. Contrary?

MR. BUDGEN and the other hold up their hands. MR. WESTGATE does not.

HEYTHORP. Carried. Only other business, gentlemen, is the election of a director in place of Mr. Popham who retires, and offers himself for re-election. Mr. Popham's not here to-day—indisposed. [Voice going again] Very valuable director. Those in favour of his re-election?

All hands are held up except MR. BROWNBEE'S and MR. WESTGATE'S.

HEYTHORP. Contrary?

No hands are held up.

HEYTHORP. Carried. All the business, gentlemen.

The meeting breaks up. BOB PILLIN is first out of the room.

The DIRECTORS file out into the inner office. The REPORTER rises and comes to FARNEY.

REPORTER. Name of the last speaker but one—Applepie, was it?

FARNEY. Appleby.

REPORTER. Oh! Haythorp—with an "a"?

FARNEY. "E."

REPORTER. Oh! an "e." He seems an old man. Thank you. Would you like to see a proof? With an "a" you said ——?

FARNEY. "E."

REPORTER. Oh! an "e." Oh! Good afternoon!

FARNEY. [To MR. BROWNBEE, who is lingering] Fancy his not knowing how to spell the Chairman's name after all these years! What does go on inside them?

MR. BROWNBEE. Indeed, yes. The Press is very peculiar—they seem to have no—no passions. I hope I was useful, Mr. Farney. That fellow Westgate was very unpleasant.

FARNEY. Yes, Sir, he wants to come on the Board.

MR. BROWNBEE. [Who also does] Ah! Indeed! Ah! I see.

FARNEY. Yes, Sir; always kicks up a fuss—hopes they'll put him on to keep him quiet.

MR. BROWNBEE. Dear, dear! And will they?

FARNEY. [With a smile] Not while the Chairman lives, Sir. He prefers the other way—services rendered.

MR. BROWNBEE. [Pleased] Ah-h! Yes, I'm glad to hear that. Yes. I suppose there isn't a question of another director at the moment?

FARNEY. I believe not, Sir. But, of course, it's always the unexpected that happens.

MR. BROWNBEE. I know, I know. One must be prepared for everything. I thought that—er—well—that possibly I —I think the Chairman would favour me— [Here he catches sight of VENTNOR, who has approached] But this, perhaps, isn't the moment. On the whole a pleasant meeting. Good afternoon!

He goes, FARNEY looking after him with a smile. The room is now empty but for VENTNOR and F

VENTNOR. No, they just didn't. But there wasn't much in it. I could have turned the scales against you instead of for. And if they'd thrown you over, your other companies would shelvé you too. Your position, Mr. Heythorp, if I may say so, is precarious, in spite of the way you carry it off.
HEYTHORP. Will you come to the point, Sir?
VENTNOR. Yes. It's this: Am I to make it more precarious?
HEYTHORP. How?
VENTNOR. By filing a petition for your bankruptcy. That would be quite enough to tip the beam.
HEYTHORP. File away!
VENTNOR. You won't pay me, then?
HEYTHORP. No.
VENTNOR. Is that wise, Mr. Heythorp—is it wise? Take time. Think it over. By the way, you put the case for that purchase very high, didn't you?
HEYTHORP. [Looking at him steadily] Not a bit too high. Freights have touched bottom—go up soon.
VENTNOR. D'you know what passed through my mind?
HEYTHORP. Not an idea.
VENTNOR. [Smiling] And you won't reconsider your refusal?
HEYTHORP. [With rising choler] You heard the sporting way they treated me yesterday. Let 'em down by giving you preference? Not for Joe!
VENTNOR. Mr. Heythorp, you've had your way all your life, I fancy—— HEYTHORP. Wish I had.
VENTNOR. And it's given you the idea that you can always have it. Well, Humpty Dumpty had a great fall—not all the King's horses nor all the King's men—remember the old rhyme?
HEYTHORP. You're good enough to be mysterious, Sir.
VENTNOR. Once more, won't you reconsider——?

HEYTHORP. Bring me my hat and coat.

[FARNEY brings them.

HEYTHORP. Get me a taxicab; tell the driver Millicent Villas; if he doesn't know it, let him ask.

FARNEY. Yes, Sir. [Helping him on with his coat]

HEYTHORP. That chap Ventnor. What's his holding?

FARNEY. Nohing to speak of, Sir. Ten shares, I believe.

He goes out. OLD HEYTHORP slowly puts on his hat.

ACT II

The LARNES' small drawing-room at Millicent Villas, about three-thirty the same afternoon. A general effect of subdued disorder and chintz. A deep-cushioned sofa; a tea table with not only tea-things, but a liqueur bottle, glasses, and cigarette box on it. Water-colours by MRS. LARNE on the walls; an untidy bureau, Right. A cheerful fire, Left, and on the fender before it PHYLLIS drying her hair. A garden window, Right. A door, Back. MRS. LARNE, at her bureau in a negligée, is scribbling furiously and smoking a cigarette. [Enter LETTY, the little Maid-of-all-work.

MRS. LARNE. Of all ungrateful little wretches!

PHYLLIS rubs her cheek against her mother's.

MRS. LARNE. No! Go away!

PHYLLIS. Mum, don't be grumpsy!

Her mother has taken out a little mirror, and is looking at herself.

PHYLLIS takes a peep.

PHYLLIS. [Rubbing her own cheek] Oh! it's come off on me.

MRS. LARNE. You little cat!

The front door-bell is heard to ring.

MRS. LARNE. Good gracious, there he is! And look at me—look at me! [She gathers herself up and swims to the door. Her voice is heard in the passage saying] Don't open, Letty, till I'm invisible.

PHYLLIS takes the little mirror to the window, for the light is failing, and rubs her cheek more vigorously. Through the open door she can hear voices.

BOB PILLIN. Er—Mrs. Larne at home?

LETTY. Yes, Sir—but she's invisible.

BOB PILLIN. Ha'r! I'm sorry.

LETTY. Miss Phyllis is at 'ome, Sir.

BOB PILLIN. Er—her! Wonder if she'd see me?

LETTY. She's been washin' 'er 'air, but it may be dry be now. I'll see.

[LETTY enters. She is in black with an apron.

LETTY. It's 'im, Miss. Will you see 'im?

PHYLLIS. Oh! Gefoozlem! In a jiff.

She hands LETTY the mirror, tears open the window, and disappears into the garden.

LETTY. [At the door] Come in. She'll see you in a jiff. Oh! and Master Jock's loose, Sir.

BOB PILLIN. [Coming in] Is he—ah!

LETTY takes his cane from him and gives him the little mirror, looks round, takes a towel from the fender, and retires.

BOB PILLIN is beautifully dressed, with a narrow white piping round his waistcoat, a buttonhole of tuberoses, and his hat still in one hand. He stands uneasily twisting the little mirror, then lifts it and examines his face.

PHYLLIS. [Opening the door] Oh! Conceited young man!

Her hair is fluffed out on her shoulders, and the sight of it is almost too much for BOB PILLIN.

BOB PILLIN. I say, how topping!

PHYLLIS. [Shaking her mane] Lawks! It's awful. Have you come to see mother?

BOB PILLIN. Er-r—yes; I'm glad she's not here, though.

PHYLLIS. Don't be foolish! Sit down!

[She sits on the sofa and taps it; he sits beside her.

PHYLLIS. Isn't washing one's head awful?

BOB PILLIN. Er—well! Of course, I haven't much experience.

PHYLLIS. I said head—not hair! [A pause] Why do you know such frightful men?

BOB PILLIN. What! I don't know any frightful men.

PHYLLIS. You know that man who was at Guardy's yesterday—I saw you. He's a horror.

BOB PILLIN. Ventnor—oh! Well, I only just know him. What's the matter with him?

PHYLLIS. He's mother's lawyer. Mother doesn't mind him—but I think he's a beast.

BOB PILLIN. Why? What's he done?

PHYLLIS. It isn't what he's done. It's what he'd like to do. Isn't money horrible?

BOB PILLIN. Well, I don't know, I think money's rather a good thing.

PHYLLIS. Oh! do you? Well, you'd better take care of what you've got then, or you won't have it.

BOB PILLIN. [Staring at her] Look here, Miss Larne—er—Phyllis—look here!

PHYLLIS. Well, I'm looking.

BOB PILLIN. Isn't there something on your mind, or—or something?

PHYLLIS. [Shaking her mane, then looking down] I wish mother wouldn't —I hate it. Beastly!

BOB PILLIN. Really—I mean—if there's anything you want me to do.

PHYLLIS. Yes, go away before mo er comes.

BOB PILLIN. Why?

PHYLLIS. Oh! you know. You've eyes. Why d'you think you're here?

BOB PILLIN. Really—I don't know.

BOB PILLIN. I think you might tell what's the matter with you.

PHYLLIS. [Almost fiercely] Well, will! Can't you see what a poky str we live in? We're always hard up.

BOB PILLIN. What a beastly sham

PHYLLIS. Nobody can come here wit out—disgusting!

[She turns away from him, almo in tears.

BOB PILLIN. I say! What is it?

PHYLLIS. Oh! if you can't see, I not going to tell you.

BOB PILLIN. Well, I'm damned!

PHYLLIS. [Glancing through lashes] That's better!

BOB PILLIN. Look here! Er—Phylli I came here to see you.

PHYLLIS. [Nodding, gravely] Exa ly!

BOB PILLIN. Do you object—really I wouldn't for the world do anythi you don't like.

PHYLLIS. Then you'd better go, or y will. [She sneezes] My hair isn't a dry. [She sits on the fender again fore the fire] Well! Aren't you goin BOB PILLIN. You don't really mean do you?

PHYLLIS. [After a pause] Oh! do breathe so loud!

BOB PILLIN. [Indignant] Breathe; wasn't breathing.

PHYLLIS. You were.

BOB PILLIN. I wasn't—— Well, can stand anything from you. You I've taken the knock.

PHYLLIS. What! Where?

B PILLIN. [Touching his breast et] Here.
YLLIS. Oh! Does it hurt?
B PILLIN. Yes, awfully. It kept me e all last night.
YLLIS. That's why you look so ly.
B PILLIN. You're making it rather for me, aren't you? You see I've a good deal of—er—life.
YLLIS. Oh! Do tell me!
B PILLIN. Well, er—no—I think—

YLLIS. That's mean.
B PILLIN. What I meant was that -seeing—er—you is so different. I it's like—er—going out of a—er— —er.

PILLIN. Ha'r! Oh! Quite.
S. LARNE. Do you really want us to the theatre to-morrow? How f you! I should have loved it, but— oning him to the sofa] Come and wn. We poor Bohemians, my dear man, you can't conceive how we om hand to mouth. Just imagine poor gairl of mine hasn't anyto go in. D'you know, I simply now where to turn. [With a heavy An artist can't be businesslike, it by for this, that, and the other. hey take such advantage of one. now those Midland Syndicate peo- No, of course you don't—you're those rich young men who own and things, aren't you?

BOB PILLIN. Well, my father does—as a matter of fact, we've just sold our ships.

MRS. LARNE. How delightful! What a lovely lot of money you must have! [Absent-mindedly taking his hand and putting it to her head and heart] My poor ships are all here and here, and they don't sell—isn't it tragic? And that gairl of mine absolutely adores the theatre. If I only had the price of a dress for her on me, as the dear old cabbies say. Of course I should be in rags, myself. And in a box—everybody sees you. Still, you wouldn't mind that. But my lovely gairl—because she is lovely, isn't she?

BOB PILLIN. [More and more hypnotised] But I say, you know, if it's only that——

MRS. LARNE. Only! If you knew how rich that sounds! I can't bear money—it's in my blood, I suppose. And yet, you know, every day I find it more and more impossible to live without it.

BOB PILLIN. But, Mrs. Larne—look here—you know, I mean—what's money?

[He dives his hands into his breast pocket.

MRS. LARNE. [Apparently oblivious] You see, I never can help paying my debts. It's almost a disease with me; hereditary. [Watching out of the corner of her eye the slow, mesmerised appearance of a cheque-book] My dear young man, whatever's that?

BOB PILLIN. Oh!—er—I thought perhaps—but of course, if you——

MRS. LARNE. If you only knew what it was to see a cheque-book with so many cheques in it! It gives me the most perfect feeling, here.

[She lays her hand on her heart.

BOB PILLIN. Then won't you let me—er——

But during the foregoing PHYLLIS has softly opened the door, Back, and appears, pushing JOCK before her. He ducks and creeps on hands and feet to the sofa; then raises himself suddenly till his face appears over the top like a full moon between his mother and BOB PILLIN. BOB PILLIN drops the cheque-book and his mouth falls open.

MRS. LARNE clasps her bosom.

MRS. LARNE. You awful boy! How dare you?

She turns and sees PHYLLIS. BOB PILLIN also turns, and sheepishly pockets the cheque-book. PHYLLIS comes circling round to the fire and stands with her back to it, eyeing them. MRS. LARNE has nipped JOCK by the ear.

MRS. LARNE. This boy of mine will be the death of us, Mr. Pillin.

JOCK. I say—that hurts!

MRS. LARNE. [Smoothly] I mean it to.

PHYLLIS. [Meaningly] Mother, I put him up to it.

MRS. LARNE. [Releasing JOCK, and with a gesture of despair] Well, I give it up. When I'm dead of work and anxiety, you'll both be sorry. [To BOB PILLIN] Are we going to have supper before or after, Mr. Pillin?

BOB PILLIN. Oh!—er—both—don't you think? Er—her!

JOCK. I say, you are a topper! Have some toffee?

[He holds out a substance.

PHYLLIS. Look out, young man; it looks exactly like, but it's beeswax.

BOB PILLIN. [Gazing at it] Oh! I say!

JOCK jabs it promptly into his opened mouth, and flies. He is met at the door, however, by LETTY.

LETTY. Mr. Aesop.

OLD HEYTHORP, slow as fate, in his overcoat, hat in hand, advances into the room, and the boy JOCK backs before him, bowing low, as to an idol. MRS. LARNE hastens to greet him, PHYLLIS too. BOB PILLIN, risen, is removing beeswax.

LETTY. [Sotto voce] Kettle's bilin'.

MRS. LARNE. [Majestically] Tea, Letty.

They settle OLD HEYTHORP on the sofa, whence he stares up at BOB PILLIN, and gives him a curt nod.

BOB PILLIN. How are you, Sir? Saw you at the meeting.

HEYTHORP. How did you come here?

BOB PILLIN. [Disconcerted] Oh!—er just dropped in.

MRS. LARNE. Guardy dear, you must try our new liqueur. Jock, get Guar a glass.

The boy JOCK, having put a gl to his eye, fills it rapidly.

MRS. LARNE. You horrible boy! Y could see that glass has been used.

JOCK. Oh! sorry, mother. I'll get of it. [He drinks off the liqu

MRS. LARNE. [Laughing] Guar what am I to do with him?

BOB PILLIN, seeing that PHYLLIS leaving the room, follows JO out.

HEYTHORP. Making up to that you pup, are you?

MRS. LARNE. He's such a nice fello We like him ever so. Guardy, I'm s your coming means good news.

HEYTHORP. Settled six thousand the children.

MRS. LARNE. Guardy! [She becon thoughtful] On the children——?

HEYTHORP. Yes. You can't blow it, don't try!

MRS. LARNE. How unkind! As if—us, Guardy?

EYTHORP. No—additional.
RS. LARNE. How sweet of you!
EYTHORP. Humbug!
RS. LARNE. Guardy!
EYTHORP. About young Pillin. She n't be grabbed up by any fool who s along.
RS. LARNE. Oh! the dear gairl is too young. He's quite harmless; a simple fellow.
EYTHORP. Drop him! Not a word of settlement to anyone.
S. LARNE. N-no, Guardy. But I am essed. Couldn't I have twenty-five and Dundrearys, and ride in the OLD HEYTHORP nods.

PHYLLIS. What larks! And I suppose you had lots of adventures with opera dancers and gambling? The young men are all so good now. That young man, for instance, is a perfect stick of goodness.

OLD HEYTHORP grunts.

PHYLLIS. You wouldn't know how good he was unless you'd sat next him going through a tunnel. Yesterday, coming home with us, he had his waist squeezed, and he simply sat still. And then, when the tunnel ended, it was Jock, after all, not me. His face was—— Oh! ah! ha, ha! he!

OLD HEYTHORP contemplates her charming throat, thrown back in laughter, with a sort of pride in his face.

PHYLLIS. He likes to pretend, of course, that he's fearfully lively. He's going to take us to the theatre to-morrow night, and give us two suppers. Won't it be lummy? Only [With a sigh] I haven't anything to go in.

OLD HEYTHORP begins to fumble in his breast pocket.

PHYLLIS. Isn't money beastly, Guardy? If one could put out a plate over night and have just enough in the morning to use during the day!

HEYTHORP. [Fumbling out a note and putting it in her lap] Little present for you—buy a dress—don't tell your mother.

PHYLLIS. Ten pounds! How lovely! You are a chook. [She throws her arms round him, and bobs her lips against his nose. Sitting back and contemplating him] To-morrow's Valentine's Day. Guardy, you've got the grand manner. Do tell me about that Yankee. Where did you wing him?

HEYTHORP. At Dieppe.

PHYLLIS. No, but where on him?

HEYTHORP. Where he couldn't sit down afterwards.

PHYLLIS. Was he turning his back?

HEYTHORP. Side view.

PHYLLIS. Oh! Yes, of course! Why did you fight the duel?

HEYTHORP. Said old England was played out.

PHYLLIS. Fifty years ago? [OLD HEY-

THORP nods] But, she's still full of beans, isn't she?

HEYTHORP. And always will be.

PHYLLIS. That's what I think—look at Jock, for instance.

OLD HEYTHORP looks at her instead.

PHYLLIS. Why d'you look at me like that, Guardy?

HEYTHORP. You're more like your father than Jock. Listen! When you come of age, you'll have a hundred and twenty a year of your own that you can't get rid of. Don't ever be persuaded into doing what you don't want. Don't marry a fool for his money. And remember; your mother's a sieve—no good giving her anything; keep what you'll get for yourself—only a pittance, you'll want it all, every mag.

PHYLLIS. Mother's a darling, really, Guardy.

HEYTHORP. H'm! I daresay. Only one thing in life matters—independence. Lose that, lose everything. Get old like me, you'll find that out. Keep your independence—only value of money. And—that young pup—'ware fools! Help me up!

PHYLLIS helps him up and puts his hat on her own head; it comes down right over the ears.

PHYLLIS. [Enchanted] Oh! Guardy! What a whopper! You must have a big head! They're all so small now. I shall marry someone with a head like yours. [Pensively] I do wonder about that young man. I bet he's got the dead rat down his back by now. And isn't it niffy! Jock was keeping it for something special. [She wrinkles her nose and plants the hat on OLD HEYTHORP] Why! It only just goes on. Must you go? I do love you to come. [With a sudden warm impulse] And I do love you altogether!

[She trembles up close to him.

HEYTHORP. [Patting her cheek] That's right! Be a good girl. And don't tell your mother what I've been saying. Shall enjoy my dinner to-night.

PHYLLIS. Don't you always? I always think of you having such a good dinner. You look like it, you know.

HEYTHORP. Got a daughter. Mustn't eat, mustn't drink! Always at me.

PHYLLIS. Oh! yes, we saw her in the distance. She looked too good for anything.

HEYTHORP. That's the trouble.

PHYLLIS. Is she married?

HEYTHORP. No.

PHYLLIS. Why not?

HEYTHORP. Too holy.

PHYLLIS. [At the window] I thoug so—Jock's pinned it to his coat behi and he can't tell [Fingers pinching h nose] where it's coming from. Oh! po young man! Oh, well, that's all righ He's safe for to-day—nobody'll be ab to go near him. They're coming Guardy, would you mind taking h away with you in your cab?—you c smoke a cigar, you know. I'll light it f you. [She feels in his pockets, finds h cigar case, gives him a cigar and ligh it] There! It's a good strong cigar. [the window] Oh! he's found it o There it goes, over the wall! Tha goodness! Now, look out, smoke! [S dives for a cigarette from the table a lights it] Good-bye, Guardy darling, I off. I know that rat.

She sidles to the door as BOB P LIN comes in.

HEYTHORP. Give you a lift if you going my way.

BOB PILLIN. [Looking at PHYLL Well, Sir, I wasn't thinking of——

PHYLLIS. Oh! yes he is. Guardy; is.

BOB PILLIN. [Taken aback] Oh! a Tha-anks, then. [PHYLLIS vanish

HEYTHORP. Make the most of your o portunities, I see.

BOB PILLIN. I—I don't know what y mean, Sir. Mrs. Larne is very kind.

HEYTHORP. No doubt. Don't try a pick the flowers, that's all.

BOB PILLIN. [With some dignity] A you a relative of theirs, Sir?

OLD HEYTHORP nods.

BOB PILLIN. I quite understand w you mean. But I should like to kn what your objection to me is.

HEYTHORP. Milk-and-water masqu ading as port wine.

BOB PILLIN. [Outraged] Awf sorry, Sir. if you don't think I'm w enough. Anything I can do for yo that line—be most happy. I—er—kn I'm not in debt, no entanglements, g nt income, pretty good expectations that; but I can soon put that all t, if I'm not fit without.

EYTHORP. [After a silence during h he puffs sturdily] Fatter, but no sand than your father.

He leads out, and BOB PILLIN, hypnotised by such very plain speech, is following, when MRS. LARNE enters.

RS. LARNE. Oh! are you going, dy?

HEYTHORP nods.

RS. LARNE. And you, Mr. Pillin—aven't half——

B PILLIN. Awfully sorry—find I've . I'll send you a line about to-mor-

MRS. LARNE is almost securing his lappel, when her nose apprehends something, and she refrains. BOB PILLIN slides out behind OLD HEYTHORP.

RS. LARNE. [To herself] Dear me! a peculiar——! [She wrinkles her then goes to her bureau, sits down, profoundly, and takes up her pen] red velvet. The gathering was nt in the extreme." Oh, dear! lies the papers do tell!

HYLLIS enters.

S. LARNE. Ah! there you are, you ty gairl. I've just telephoned to wyer to come round.

YLLIS. That horrid man! What want him for, Mother?

S. LARNE. What do I want him for? do I want any man for? Money ey.

YLLIS. I wish Jock hadn't wasted ut. I'm sure he's a beast.

. LARNE. Now, Phyllis; I won't ou call him names. He's very nice lawyer. If he can't get me some , we shall all have to go into the ouse. I want you to be extra sweet .

LLIS. Well, I can't.

. LARNE. Then you'd better go up-

LLIS. I will when he comes. If he is to be nice—I know what it'll

. LARNE. And what is that?

LLIS. That you're what he calls "a fine woman." Ugh! He's a horrid man!

MRS. LARNE. Can I help it if people admire me?

PHYLLIS. Of course we all admire you. Only that sort of man! I'm sure he never does anything for nothing.

MRS. LARNE. You're getting very knowing. [With some dignity] As a matter of fact, Guardy gave me some news, and I expect to be able to—er—use it for our benefit.

PHYLLIS. Guardy told me, too, mother.

MRS. LARNE. Oh! What?

PHYLLIS. That I shall have some money when I come of age, and that I wasn't to give—— But, Mummy, anything I ever have of course you'll have half.

MRS. LARNE. [Putting out her hand] Darling, I know. But by then there won't be any Mummy—she'll have wasted away. [She sighs heavily] Never mind!

"La vie est brève, un peu d'amour.
Un peu de rève, et puis bonjour!"

I wonder if I could work that in!

[Takes up her pen.

PHYLLIS. [Producing the ten pound note, with a sigh] Mum! Guardy gave me this to buy a dress. Would you like it?

MRS. LARNE. [Touched] Ducky! No! Waste it on those wretched tradesmen? You get yourself a lovely frock.

PHYLLIS. Oh! I said you were a darling! [Kisses her nose.

MRS. LARNE. Listen! I believe that's his cab. Now, Phyllis, this is a crisis, and you must help me.

PHYLLIS. [Regarding her] Mother, I believe you love a crisis.

MRS. LARNE. Just open the door a weeny bit.

PHYLLIS. [Doing so] Why?

MRS. LARNE. Hssh!

VENTNOR'S voice without: Mrs. Larne at home?

MRS. LARNE. [Under her breath] It is.

LETTY'S voice: Can't say yet, depends on 'oo you are.

VENTNOR'S voice: I think she is, young woman.

LETTY'S voice: Are you about the water?

MRS. LARNE. [Under her breath] That awful little drumstick!

VENTNOR'S voice: Mr. Charles Ventnor, say! Give her this card.

LETTY'S voice: Just wait outside the door, will yer?

MRS. LARNE, throwing up her hands, goes to the door.

MRS. LARNE. Oh! Is that you, Mr. Ventnor? Do come in.

VENTNOR appears, hat in hand.

MRS. LARNE. Phyllis, dear, Mr. Ventnor.

VENTNOR bows smilingly, PHYLLIS nods.

MRS. LARNE. That appalling little drumstick of mine has got water on the brain. Such a faithful little soul! We Bohemians, you know, Mr. Ventnor—— VENTNOR. Precisely!

MRS. LARNE. Do sit down.

He sits on the sofa.

MRS. LARNE. Tea?—But I'm afraid it's cold. A glass of liqueur—it's really quite nice, and rather original in the afternoon, don't you think? [Handing him a glass] And do smoke; we smoke everywhere. Even that naughty gairl of mine smokes.

VENTNOR. No, thanks. [Tasting the liqueur] Very good tipple, Mrs. Larne. I came at some little inconvenience, so perhaps—— [He glances at PHYLLIS.

PHYLLIS. All right!

[She goes out without a look back.

MRS. LARNE. [Sitting down on the sofa beside him] She's so abrupt, dear child. In my young days——

VENTNOR. [Gallantly] Your young days, Mrs. Larne. And what are these? But now—what is it?

MRS. LARNE. Well, as you know, my affairs are very embarrassed; but today I had some splendid news. A settlement has been made upon us—perfect Godsend, Mr. Ventnor, in the nick of time. Only of course I shan't get any interest from it till Lady Day. And, you see, I simply must have fifty pounds now—so I thought you would be so kind as to advance that on the security of this interest, charging, of course, what you like. It's quite ridiculous, but to-morrow I shall be without gas or coals, a probably have my furniture seized rates. They are so hasty and unreasonable.

VENTNOR. [Dubiously] Settlement?

MRS. LARNE. Yes, I receive the inco quarterly till my children are of a VENTNOR. How much?

MRS. LARNE. Six thousand pounds

VENTNOR. Oh! [Pricking his ea Who made it?

MRS. LARNE. Ah! well—that I'm supposed to tell you.

VENTNOR. Six thousand—— [To h self] Sixty thousand—ten per cent—

MRS. LARNE. Oh! no, not six th sand a year—that would be too he enly; six thousand altogether.

VENTNOR. Quite!

MRS. LARNE. You can verify eve thing for yourself, of course. The la yers are Messrs. Scriven.

VENTNOR. Not Crow & Donkin?

MRS. LARNE. No, the name was Scr en. Aren't they lawyers?

VENTNOR. Oh! certainly—very g firm. Very interesting news, Mrs. Lar I thought Crow & Donkin because— [Suddenly looking at her] they're Mr. Heythorp's solicitors.

MRS. LARNE. Ah! but you see I pro ised not to mention any names, exc of course the solicitor's. If I didn't m tion him, I could hardly expect you lend me the money, could I?

VENTNOR. Afraid I must ask you to more frank, Mrs. Larne. Mr. Heyth is your late husband's father?

MRS. LARNE. Why? How did know that?

VENTNOR. When you first came to me, you spoke of his being behind yo remember? I confess I originally ha —[With a look] Well! a rather m intimate theory, but that didn't tally v my enquiries in Dublin.

MRS. LARNE. [Flattering] What a rible man!

VENTNOR. Ah! We lawyers, L Larne like to know something about clients. So "Old English" has bee see you this——

MRS. LARNE. What a nose you h

VENTNOR. Exactly! [Sniffing] C — not long gone!

RS. LARNE. Wonderful! It's quite that great criminal—Sherlock mes.

ENTNOR. So you want fifty pounds, Larne.

RS. LARNE. Unless you could man- to make it a hundred.

ENTNOR. First you've heard of this ment? Scriven? [Suddenly] Do know a Mr. Pillin?

RS. LARNE. Of course, we met him rday while you were there! De- ful young man, so cheerful.

NTNOR. [Slyly] Very different from ather, isn't he?

S. LARNE. Oh! We don't know his r. Do tell me—they're rich people, they?

NTNOR. Ye-es, warm man, old Pil- foung Pillin's a lucky fellow—only

S. LARNE. [Dreamily] How right!

NTNOR. [Clutching his chest] I've !

S. LARNE. Oh! have you? [Put- ut her hand] Even if it's only fifty, e my salvation.

NTNOR. [With a laugh] No, no, Larne; no, no!

S. LARNE. But you said you'd got

NTNOR. I don't carry fifty pounds with me. [With a peculiar look at Unless I know I've got a use for it. st ask you to give me a little note riven.

S. LARNE. Oh! of course.

She goes to her bureau and writes at his dictation.

NTNOR. [Dictating]

EAR SIR,—Will you be so good as to my lawyer, Mr. Charles Ventnor, s of the settlement of six thousand s just made on my children and f, that he may have record of the r.—Yours faithfully, etc."

oin your card. I'll go and see them hing to-morrow—know 'em quite If it's all right, you shall have the ; and I won't charge you a penny.

S. LARNE. Oh! but—how unusual!

NTNOR. Not at all! Very glad to you the little service. Hope it be the last.

While she finishes writing and pins her card, he moves down to the fire, rubbing his hands.

VENTNOR. [To himself, softly] Got the old rascal! Neat—oh, neat!

MRS. LARNE. [Finishing] There! Such a relief! [Sniffing] Dear me! There's that——! [Sniffing] You don't smell a rat, do you?

VENTNOR looks round at her, startled.

MRS. LARNE. It's my dreadful boy. He keeps them too long sometimes. [Handing him the letter] I suppose you couldn't see Scriven's to-night?

VENTNOR. [Looking at his watch] Too late, Mrs. Larne, I'm afraid; but if you'll add a postcript, you shall have the money by special messenger to-morrow.

MRS. LARNE writes at his dictation.

VENTNOR. "I shall further be glad if you will pay Mr. Ventnor the first fifty pounds of interest when you receive it, in satisfaction of that sum advanced by him." [Taking the letter again] And now I must be off.

MRS. LARNE. [Rising] It was good of you to come. I feel so different. Could I have just five pounds?

VENTNOR. [A little taken aback] Er—well—Oh! yes, certainly.

MRS. LARNE. [Taking the note] How chivalrous!

VENTNOR. Not a bit, not a bit! [He holds her hand impressively, and looks into her eyes] You know, my dear Mrs. Larne, I am very much at your service. Your humble admirer——

While, carried away by sudden fervour and general perfume, he presses closer, the door is opened by PHYLLIS, who stands there with BOB PILLIN behind her.

VENTNOR. And if you—if you liked, you need have no more money troubles, I assure you.

MRS. LARNE. [Not yet aware of the door] But how wonderful!

PHYLLIS. The laundress is here.

MRS. LARNE. Oh! How provoking! I must just see her. Good-bye, Mr. Ventnor! [Seeing BOB PILLIN] Why, my dear young man, I thought you'd gone!

PHYLLIS. [With meaning] He came back for his stick. [As her mother goes, to BOB PILLIN in a low voice, and pointing her chin at VENTNOR] That's your friend.

She crosses to the fire, takes BOB PILLIN'S cane, and holds it out to him by the end. BOB PILLIN takes it; and suddenly, as if moved by some force outside himself, he stretches it out and taps VENTNOR, who is just going through the doorway, on the shoulder. The latter turns sharply. PHYLLIS is at the fire glaring at him. BOB PILLIN is consulting her eyes.

BOB PILLIN. Hold on a minute!

VENTNOR. What's that?

BOB PILLIN. How's Mrs. Ventnor today?

VENTNOR. [Sullenly] Perfectly well.

BOB PILLIN. [Gazing at PHYLLIS and still moved by her face] It's a bit thick!

VENTNOR. It's what?

BOB PILLIN. [More and more moved] Ye-es. And—er—I want an explanation, don't you know.

VENTNOR. Do you? Well, you won't get it. [BOB PILLIN stands nonplussed.

PHYLLIS. [Low] Go on!

BOB PILLIN. I have the honour to be—er—be a—a friend here. And, look here, Ventnor, it's—it's not the conduct of a gentleman!

VENTNOR. [Angrily] You young——! Mind your own business, will you?

BOB PILLIN. I'm going to.

PHYLLIS. Good!

BOB PILLIN. And I won't have it. It's not the thing.

VENTNOR. You—you won't have it! *In*deed! Now I tell you what, you'd better not exasperate me, you [Glancing angrily from BOB to PHYLLIS] moonstruck young calf!

BOB PILLIN. [With real resolution] Phyllis, shall I shift him?

PHYLLIS. Yes.

BOB PILLIN. Clear, Ventnor! And don't come again.

VENTNOR. By George! The impudence! I'll bring the whole pack of cards about your ears, young cock!

BOB PILLIN. Out! [Advancing on him] Going? Once—twice—for the last time——!

VENTNOR. [Goes, turning in the doorway] You wait and see which boot leg is on! [BOB PILLIN closes the do

BOB PILLIN. Phew! What a scorch

PHYLLIS. [Impulsively giving him hand] You've got ever so much m sand than I thought.

BOB PILLIN. [Humbly] Might I kiss it?

PHYLLIS. All right. It's genera dirty.

BOB PILLIN kisses it.

PHYLLIS. [Drawing it away] Moth hated it. Beastly man—you do und stand that mother hated it!

BOB PILLIN. Of course! Of course

PHYLLIS. But you'd better go bef she comes.

BOB PILLIN. [Blankly] Well, I s pose I must go some time. I couldn' [Approaching her face] Could I?

PHYLLIS. No.

BOB PILLIN. Well, I mean to say t —er—I shall dream about it.

PHYLLIS. I don't mind. Ta-ta!

She waves her hand. He backs h notized towards the door and t ishes. PHYLLIS turns to the f with a sneeze, and runs her ha through her hair.

MRS. LARNE. [Entering] Well, th that! The impudent woman took it ne ly all.

PHYLLIS. Has she left my white pe coat, Mother, and my——

MRS. LARNE. Everything. [Sitting her bureau] Have they gone?

PHYLLIS. Um!

MRS. LARNE. [Considering] "La est brève, un peu d'amour." Life brief, a little love! Perhaps it is a cynical for the Liverpool Pilot.

little table, close to him, is a reading lamp, a bell, and a card. A little pink letter has dropped to the floor. There are two doors on the Left—one to the hall, one to his bedroom—and a window at the back looking over an open space with trees. It is about five in the afternoon.

door is opened quietly and ADELA HEYTHORP comes in.

ADELA. Well, Father, are you going ep to that absurd idea of dining here uture—giving twice the trouble?

OLD HEYTHORP looks round at her with the white hairs on his lower lip bristling.

ELA. I'm going out to-night; I have something light early, so it 't matter—but I do hope by to- ow you'll feel more sociable. It so bad.

OLD HEYTHORP resumes his paper. She takes up the card from the little table. It is large and has a naked Cupid.

ELA. Cupid! With nothing on—not a quiver. [Reading] "To be your ıtine." [She picks up the little pink and reads, ironically] EAREST GUARDY,—I'm sorry this is a mangy valentine. I stayed in bed reakfast because I've got a cold g, so I asked Jock, and the pig ıt this. I'm going to get a scrummy this afternoon. I'm frightfully ex- about the theatre to-night. It's y ripping. Just going to have rum oney for my cold. Good-bye.

"Your Phyllis."

ey don't call you grandfather! I'm I feel relieved.

ÆTHORP. [Very angry] Be so good leave my letters alone!

ELA. Now, Father, please don't get rage. [Smelling at the valentine] ouli!

ÆTHORP. How I ever had you for a ter—why I ever put you in the on you are!

ELA. Did my mother know about— ort of thing?

ÆTHORP. No.

ELA. How fortunate!

HEYTHORP. She could have stood it.

ADELA. Is that a sneer or a statement?

HEYTHORP. Your mother was as hard as wood—just like you.

ADELA. Really, Father, they tell me you have the manners of the old school—where do you keep them?

HEYTHORP. Well, you put my back up.

ADELA. I'm sorry. Are you going to Bath, as Dr. Somers wants?

HEYTHORP. No.

ADELA. Are you going, at least, to stop drinking port?

HEYTHORP. No! Carpe diem—live while I can.

ADELA. You know that any day you might have apoplexy!

HEYTHORP. Sooner have done with it than turn teetotaller!

ADELA. There's only one word for it—pagan. If you can't think of this life, you might of the next.

HEYTHORP. When they're roasting me, you'll be able to say "I told you so."

[He rings the bell.

ADELA. Profanity, as usual!

HEYTHORP. Let me alone, then.

ADELA. As if I could.

As she goes out, MELLER, the valet, a discreet, clean-shaven man, comes in.

MELLER. Would you like a hand up, Sir?

HEYTHORP. No! Tell cook I shall want a good dinner to-night.

MELLER. I will, Sir.

HEYTHORP. And get up a bottle of the '68 port.

MELLER. [Dubiously] Yes, Sir.

HEYTHORP. Send me Molly.

MELLER. Just come, Sir, by hand.

[Hands him a note, and goes out.

OLD HEYTHORP, after scrutinising the note, as one does those which suggest the unpleasant, is about to open it, when the housemaid MOLLY comes in—a grey-eyed, dark-haired Irish damsel, who stands, pretty to look at, with her hands folded, her head a little to one side, her lips a little parted.

MOLLY. Yes, Sirr?

HEYTHORP. Want to look at you.

MOLLY. Oh! I'm not tidy, Sirr.

[Puts her hands to her hair.

HEYTHORP. Like pretty faces. Can't bear sour ones. Had a valentine?

MOLLY. No, Sirr. Who would send me one, then?

HEYTHORP. Not got a young man?

MOLLY. Well, I might. But he's over in my counthry.

HEYTHORP [Holding out the valentine] What do you think of this?

MOLLY [Scrutinising the card reverently] Indeed, an' ut's pretty, too.

HEYTHORP. Like to keep it?

MOLLY. Oh! if 'tis not takin' ut from you, Sirr.

HEYTHORP. [Fumbling out a coin] Little present for you.

MOLLY. [Gasping] Oh! Sirr, a sovereign—ut's too much; 'tis kingly.

HEYTHORP. Going to ask you to do something as a human being.

MOLLY. Shure an' I will do annything you like.

HEYTHORP. Then put your nose in here every now and then—can't get up without a hand—don't like ringing—can't bear feeling dependent. Understand me?

MOLLY. Och! an' I do. And you so active in your brain, and such a grand gentleman. 'Tis an honour, ut is. I'll be puttin' me nose in all the time, I will.

HEYTHORP. [With a little courtly bow] Much obliged to you.

MOLLY. Would you be afther wantin' annything now, Sirr? Could I be pullin' you on your feet, or anny thrifle?

HEYTHORP. No, thank you. You're a good girl.

MOLLY. 'Tis proud ye make me, Sirr.

HEYTHORP. Tell me. Have I got bad manners?

MOLLY. Oh! Sir, no. 'Tis lovely manners ye have—the rale old manners.

HEYTHORP. When I was young I was fond of an Irish girl.

MOLLY. An' wouldn't that be the pleasure of her!

HEYTHORP. Blarney! No. I didn't know my luck.

MOLLY. Ah! the luck—'tis a chancey thing.

HEYTHORP. Yes. If you ever get any—stick to it.

MOLLY. I will that. Could I be bringin' you your tay, or a bottle, or annything?

HEYTHORP. No, thank you.

She goes out. He fumbles the l ter open and reads it; drops hand, and sits staring before h

HEYTHORP. Ruffian!

THORP. Where?

ER. In the hall.

HORP. Tell her to come in.

ER. Shall I put them in water, ry partial to water—the 'yacinth.

HORP. Smell 'em first—the dam teetotallers. [He takes a long sniff. Then MELLER takes them out, and PHYLLIS comes in.

PHYLLIS. I've bought my dress, Guardy! It's a oner. I won't kiss you because of my cold. We're going to the "Mikado." Fancy! I've never seen it. Do you like hyacinths?

HEYTHORP. Favourite scent.

PHYLLIS. Oh! what luck! Somehow I thought you would. This is a jolly room. It's got all your lar-es and penat-es, I suppose?

HEYTHORP. Lārēs et penātēs.

PHYLLIS. Oh! I just read it, you know —in a novel. D'you like novels, Guardy?

HEYTHORP. Never read 'em.

PHYLLIS. Ah! but you've had real adventures of your own. Adventures must be lovely.

HEYTHORP. Not for young ladies.

PHYLLIS. I don't care a bit for mother's stories. There's always a baronet. And they're pretty steep.

HEYTHORP. Steep?

PHYLLIS. Hideously good and strong. You know, Guardy, you can't love anyone who isn't a little bad. You never were too good, I'm sure.

HEYTHORP. Human being.

PHYLLIS. That means you had some jolly go's.

HEYTHORP. Come here!

PHYLLIS. My cold, Guardy!

HEYTHORP. Don't catch colds—my age —haven't time. Enjoy yourself, but remember—world's hard; lots of ruffians always on the look-out.

PHYLLIS. I know. There's a man comes to see mother. He makes me squirm. We had rather larks with him, though, yesterday after you'd gone.

HEYTHORP. Oh?

PHYLLIS. Yes, we heard him being insulting to mother, and that young man—Guardy, he's got more sand than you think. You should have heard him say "Out you go! One, two—" and out he did go. I wish he hadn't, then Bob could have knocked him down.

HEYTHORP. Bob?

PHYLLIS. Well, that's his name. He really had quite a nice glare in his eye.

HEYTHORP. Who is this visitor fellow?

PHYLLIS. He's mother's lawyer; Ventnor he's called.

HEYTHORP. The devil he is!

PHYLLIS. Oh yes. You know him, don't you?

HEYTHORP. I do. So he came to see her yesterday! What about?

PHYLLIS. Oh! money. Guardy, I've been thinking about what you told me. It will be lovely to have money of my own. I think it's perfectly splendid of you, because I know you're not well off.

HEYTHORP. Poor as a church mouse.

PHYLLIS. [Clasping her hands] I adore your expressions—they're real old English. Being with you is like being in a boat—it's so breezy. And you've got such a ripping name—Sylvanus. It means made of wood, doesn't it?

HEYTHORP. Not quite. Name in my family old as the hills. When I go, it goes.

PHYLLIS. [Clouding] Don't, Guardy!

HEYTHORP. Can't stop Anno Domini. Never mind! Stick him up all we can. Give me a kiss.

PHYLLIS. On the top of your head only. My cold's coming back. Rum and honey only last three hours. I'm going to sneak Jock's go when I get in. Do you call that low down? He's only trying to have a cold.

HEYTHORP. Young rascal!

PHYLLIS. Do you ever have remorse, Guardy?

HEYTHORP. No.

PHYLLIS. Jock had it once—I never heard such a noise. [She gurgles] You see, he had a pet rabbit, and one day we had it for dinner without knowing.

HEYTHORP. Ate his pet rabbit?

PHYLLIS. His remorse didn't come from that exactly. You see, after we'd eaten it, we found out it wasn't his.

HEYTHORP. Stole it?

PHYLLIS. Not altogether; you see it came into the garden after a bit of lettuce he happened to be holding out, so, of course, he kept it. The owner only came round after we'd eaten it, and Jock got a frightful hiding; it was then he had his remorse. I do hope the pig'll behave tonight. We shall have awful larks, Guardy.

HEYTHORP. Remember! bread and butter with independence better than ch pagne with a fool.

PHYLLIS. Yes. Only somehow I think Bob is a fool; I think he's been too well brought up. Were you in love, Guardy—I mean, really truly?

HEYTHORP nods.

PHYLLIS. Did you marry her?

HEYTHORP shakes his head.

PHYLLIS. Why not?

HEYTHORP. [Grimly] Ask no quest —be told no lies.

PHYLLIS. No. Only—only—you k I have got a sort of feeling——

HEYTHORP. Out with it!

PHYLLIS. That—that you're grandfather.

HEYTHORP. [After a long stare] Q right! Sorry?

PHYLLIS. Rather not! I think awfully jolly. Did she die?

OLD HEYTHORP nods.

PHYLLIS. Poor Guardy! [Cuddl Well, it's all the same now, isn't Here we are! I suppose your daug doesn't know?

HEYTHORP. Told her yesterday. praying for me ever since.

PHYLLIS. M'm! I don't believe praying for other people. I think cheek. Besides, things that are done done, aren't they?

HEYTHORP. [Nodding] Never back—doesn't do.

PHYLLIS. [Switching off] I do wonder what you'll think of me in dress. [Suddenly] I know! [To her Nobby!

MELLER enters with the hyaci

MELLER. Mr. Joseph Pillin, Sir.

PHYLLIS. [Awed] Oh! Is that H father?

HEYTHORP. Yes. Run along.

PHYLLIS gives him a hasty kiss, goes towards the door, loo curiously at JOE PILLIN, who ters behind his top hat, very and grave.

HEYTHORP. Well, Joe, what a de head you look! Sorry you sold ships?

JOE PILLIN. [After making sure door] Who was that?

HEYTHORP. My granddaughter.

PILLIN. What! One of those that Does she come here? She's very YTHORP. Yes. And your son's sweet r.

PILLIN. How you can sit there k the same as ever! Are you sure n't touch me?

THORP. Not they! Keep your up and your mouth shut, and get oad.

PILLIN. Yes, yes, I must. I'm very ut I don't know, I'm sure, with nging over me. What are you g of, Sylvanus? You look very HEYTHORP. [Coming out of a sort of coma] Thinking I'll diddle him yet.

JOE PILLIN. How are you going to do it?

HEYTHORP. Bluff the beggar out of it.

JOE PILLIN. But suppose you can't.

HEYTHORP. Buy him off; he's one of my creditors.

JOE PILLIN You always had such nerve. Do you ever wake up between two and four, and see everything black?

HEYTHORP. Not I! Put a good stiff nightcap on, my boy.

JOE PILLIN. Yes, I sometimes wish I was less temperate. But I couldn't stand it. I'm told your doctor forbids you alcohol.

HEYTHORP. He does.

JOE PILLIN. And yet you drink it. Sylvanus, do you think—if my son is sweet on this young lady, we could—we could give that as a reason for the settlement.

HEYTHORP. [After a moment's thought, stoutly] No! Won't have it. She's too good for him.

JOE PILLIN. Really, Sylvanus! I'm sure I don't want my son to marry her. I only thought it would make it more natural. We could say they were engaged, and break it off later. It would prevent—— HEYTHORP. No! Won't have her dragged in. Pay my own scot.

JOE PILLIN. But if they hold this meeting and my name gets into the papers——

HEYTHORP. Won't! Leave it to me!

JOE PILLIN. He must be stopped, Sylvanus, he really must. And you—you advise me to get off to-morrow?

OLD HEYTHORP nods.

JOE PILLIN. Well, good-bye. I can't forgive you—it was too bad, you know, too bad, altogether. All the same, I wish I had your nerve.

HEYTHORP. Poor shaky chap, you are! All to pieces at the first shot. Buck up, Joe!

He holds out his hand and JOE PILLIN puts his quavering hand into it.

JOE PILLIN. You won't let them, Sylvanus? You can't afford it. It would make a terrible scandal. And without the fees from your Boards, you'd be a pauper. You'll find a way; you owe it to me, you know. Well, good-bye! I don't suppose I shall be back till the summer, if I ever come back.

[He quavers out of the room.

HEYTHORP. [To himself] Pauper. Dependent on that holy woman—byword and a beggar—not if I know it!

MELLER comes in, draws the curtains, then turns up a lamp on the little table beside OLD HEYTHORP.

MELLER. Cup of tea, Sir?

OLD HEYTHORP shakes his head.

HEYTHORP. Have my nap.

MELLER. Excuse me, Sir, can I go out this evening, after dinner? Miss Heythorp's going to a ball, Sir.

HEYTHORP. Ball!

MELLER. Charity ball, Sir, I believe.

HEYTHORP. Ah! it would be!

MELLER. The Mersey Temperance League, I fancy, Sir.

HEYTHORP. Good God!

MELLER. Yes, Sir. Anything else, Sir.

HEYTHORP. Nothing, thank you.

MELLER, going to the door, pauses a moment to look at the old man, who, with a rumbling sigh, has taken out a silk handkerchief to put over his head. A bell sounds.

MELLER. That was the front door, Sir. Do you wish to see anybody?

HEYTHORP. Man called Ventnor—no one else.

MELLER. No, Sir. [He goes out.

OLD HEYTHORP, on whom the light from the reading lamp falls brightly, sits back, listening, his eyes very much alive.

MELLER. [Re-entering, Left forward] Mr. Ventnor, Sir.

VENTNOR comes in, the door is closed, and he stands as if trying to adjust himself, in the dark room, to the pool of light and the richly-coloured old figure in it.

HEYTHORP. Sorry, can't get up—sit down.

VENTNOR draws a chair forward and sits within the radius of the light on the opposite side of the little table where the lamp stands.

VENTNOR. I got your answer, Mr. Heythorp. [OLD HEYTHORP nods] I think it best to give you a chance to plain your conduct before going fur

HEYTHORP. Your letter's Greek to VENTNOR. I can soon make it plain English.

HEYTHORP. Sooner the better.

VENTNOR. Well, Mr. Heythorp, long and the short of the matter is Our friend Mr. Pillin paid you a mission of ten per cent. on the sa his ships.

OLD HEYTHORP makes a move

VENTNOR. Oh! excuse me! money was settled on Mrs. Larne her children—your grandchildren, know.

HEYTHORP. Where did you get ho that cock-and-bull story?

VENTNOR. It won't do, Mr. Heyth My witnesses are Mrs. Larne, Mr. himself, and Mr. Scriven. After I you yesterday, you paid a visit to Larne and told her of this settlem told her to keep it dark, too. I happ be her lawyer, and she telephoned to VENTNOR. Beg pardon? I didn't you. [His voice hardens] I had to d out of Scriven, but I find, as I surm that Mr. Pillin is the settler. Here joke, Mr. Heythorp; Mrs. Larne do know Mr. Pillin, and Mr. Pillin do know Mrs. Larne. I have it from own mouths. Amusing, isn't it? is the sum in settlement—10 per on £60,000—a child could put that and two together.

HEYTHORP. Nothing to me wha Pillin does with his money.

VENTNOR. Can you point to any reason why Mr. Pillin should mak very clandestine sort of settlement woman he doesn't know?

HEYTHORP. You cowardly, pettifogging attorney, do your damnedest!

VENTNOR. [Seeing red] Oho! Bluster it out, do you? You miserable old turkey-cock! You apoplectic old image! I'll have you off your Boards—I'll have you in the gutter. You think in your dotage you can still domineer? Two can play at that game. By George! one foot in bankruptcy, and one foot in the grave—Ha!

OLD HEYTHORP has reached forward for the bell. VENTNOR removes it from his reach, and the old man sinks back. Somewhat relaxed by this assertion of his dominance, VENTNOR stands looking at the old man, who is lying back breathing hard.

VENTNOR. Ah! that's shown you. Well, it's never too late to learn. For once you've come up against someone a leetle bit too much for you. Haven't you now? Better cry "Peccavi" and have done with it. [Putting down the bell on the far edge of the table, he looks again at the old man, then takes a turn up and down, and again stops and looks at him] You shouldn't have called me names. You're an old man, and I don't want to be too hard on you. I'm only showing you that you can't play God Almighty any longer. You've had your own way for too many years. And now you can't have it, see—that's all.

OLD HEYTHORP moves forward in his chair again.

VENTNOR. Now, don't get into a passion again, calm yourself.

The old man is very still.

VENTNOR. That's better. I see you'll come round. For, mind you, this is your last chance. I'm a man of my word; and what I say, I do. Now then, are you going to pay me, and look pleasant?

OLD HEYTHORP, by a violent and unsuspected effort, jerks himself forward and reaches the bell. As it rings, VENTNOR makes a grab at it too late.

VENTNOR. [Angrily] You're going to ruin, then? [MELLER has appeared.

HEYTHORP. Show this hound out!

VENTNOR. [Clenching his fists; then as MELLER moves towards him] That's it, is it? Very well, Mr. Heythorp! Ah! Very well!

Carefully shepherded by MELLER, he goes out. OLD HEYTHORP sits slightly rocking his body from side to side; he puts his hand to his throat as if it had been worried. MELLER comes back.

MELLER. [Close] Hope he hasn't hurt you, Sir?

HEYTHORP. No! Open the window—get the smell of the fellow out. Lost my temper—mistake. Pull me up!

MELLER, who has drawn back the curtains and opened the window, disclosing the shapes of dark trees and the grape-bloom sky of a mild, moist night, now pulls him up.

HEYTHORP. That's better. [He takes a long breath] Get me a hot bath before dinner, and put some pine stuff into it. Evening clothes.

MELLER. Really, Sir?

HEYTHORP. Why not?

MELLER. No, indeed, Sir.

HEYTHORP. Get up a bottle of the Perrier Jouet. What's the menu?

MELLER. Germane soup, Sir; fillÿ de sole; sweetbread; cutlet soubees; rum soufflÿ.

HEYTHORP. H'm! Tell her to get me an oyster, and put on a savoury.

MELLER. Yes, Sir. Excuse me, Sir, but did that—er—fellow—threaten you?

HEYTHORP. Bullied me.

MELLER. Could I do anything about it? I'm pretty handy with the gloves.

[He puts up his fists.

HEYTHORP. No. Trifle. Give me an appetite.

MELLER. Yes, Sir. Then what time shall I turn the bath in?

OLD HEYTHORP returns to his chair and lowers himself into it.

HEYTHORP. Seven o'clock. Have my nap now.

MELLER. Yes, Sir. [He closes the w dow and draws the curtains] Sha turn out the light, Sir?

OLD HEYTHORP nods. MELLER t the lamp out, leaving only light, then goes out.

HEYTHORP. Fill up.

MELLER. [Remonstrative] These the special glasses, Sir, only four to bottle.

HEYTHORP. Fill up! Buzz the bo before the sweet.

MELLER fills the glass, emptying bottle. OLD HEYTHORP drinks

HEYTHORP. Good wine.

MELLER. I frapped it just a little.

HEYTHORP. [Attacking the soufflé fore him] Old fur coat in the wardr no use for it—take it for yourself.

MELLER. Thank you, Sir.

HEYTHORP. Only get moth.

MELLER. It's got it, Sir.

HEYTHORP. M'm! Afraid I've wor you a lot.

MELLER. Oh! no, Sir—not more reason.

HEYTHORP. Very sorry—can't he —find that when you get like me.

MELLER. I've always admired pluck, Sir; keeping the flag flyin'.

HEYTHORP. [Bowing] Much oblig you.

hose.

ER. I'm sure, Sir.

HEYTHORP. Theatre too—old Kemble, Power, Little Robson—once saw Edmund Kean.

MELLER. Indeed, Sir! Would that be a relation of the present Edmund Keen?

HEYTHORP. Who's he?

MELLER. On the Halls, Sir, the great ventriloquist.

HEYTHORP. No actors now. Saw Hermit win his Derby.

MELLER. [Interested] Did you, indeed, Sir? Was he the equal of Pretty Polly, do you think?

HEYTHORP. Don't know the lady.

MELLER. [With a touch of pity] No, Sir, you don't keep up with it, I suppose.

HEYTHORP. All four-in-hands then, tandems, gigs—drove my own cab—tiger behind.

MELLER. Those were little boys, weren't they, Sir?

HEYTHORP. Little rascals in boots—blue liveries—tight as a drum. Cremorne—Star and Garter. Wet sheet and a flowing tide. Great days.

MELLER. Your cigar, Sir?

HEYTHORP. [Drinking off his coffee and taking his cigar, which MELLER lights] All gone! [Following the first puff of smoke, with a feeble wave of his cigar] Smoke! Statesmen then—roast beef. Stout oak! Old Pam!

MELLER. Beg pardon, Sir?

HEYTHORP. Get me the old brandy.

MELLER. [Aghast] Brandy, Sir! I really daren't.

HEYTHORP. Bunkum!

MELLER. You'll forgive me, Sir; but if Miss Heythorp heard——

HEYTHORP. Are you my servant, or hers?

MELLER. Yours, Sir. But the doctor's orders were positive.

HEYTHORP. Damn the doctor! Get the brandy—mother's milk.

MELLER wavers to the sideboard, and brings the bottle.

HEYTHORP. Large glass—want to swing it round, get the aroma.

MELLER fetches a goblet and puts it and the bottle on the little table by the hand-bell, removing the port decanter, glass, and coffee cup.

HEYTHORP. Pour it out.

MELLER pours out a little brandy.

MELLER. You said I might go out, Sir, but perhaps I'd better stay.

HEYTHORP. Why? [With a grin] Where I dines I sleeps. Ever hear of Jorrocks?

MELLER. No, Sir.

HEYTHORP. Good Lord!

MELLER. Yes, Sir. Of course, Molly will be handy. Sir, if you want anything.

He goes to the door, stands a moment, looking at the old man blowing rings from his cigar: throws up his hands suddenly, and goes out.

OLD HEYTHORP very slowly and with a feeble hand takes up the glass and sits revolving it before his nose.

HEYTHORP. [To himself] Send in my resignations to-morrow—not give that cur a chance.

He is drinking the brandy as the door is opened and ADELA HEYTHORP comes in. She is in a white cloak, with one hand and arm in a long white glove and the other glove dangling from it. She has reached him before he sees her.

ADELA. Father! Meller let out you're drinking brandy after champagne and port. That's absolute poison. It'll kill you.

OLD HEYTHORP thrusts out his tufted lower lip and reaches for the bottle.

ADELA. Oh! no. If you behave like a baby, you must be treated like one.

[She seizes the bottle and puts it back on the sideboard.

HEYTHORP. [With his hand to his throat, as if he felt again the sensation of the afternoon] So—you bully me—too—to-night!

ADELA. Well, really, Father! One would think you had no self-control at all. I don't know whether I ought to go out.

OLD HEYTHORP'S passion seems to yield before a thought. His face slowly assumes a sort of grin, in which there is a dash of cunning.

HEYTHORP. Perfectly well. Why not?

ADELA. If it weren't for Temperance I wouldn't. And I tell you, plainly: If you go on like this, I won't have li in the house. Good-night!

PHYLLIS. Oh! you duffy! Is it clear?

BOB PILLIN. [Under his breath] Not quite. It's a pin. I'm so afraid of hurting you.

PHYLLIS. Oh! Gefoozlem! Let it rip! Ouch!

BOB PILLIN. [Cloak in hand] My God! Did I——?

PHYLLIS. [Mending him with a smile] All serene! [She steals into the lamp glow] Guardy! My dress, Guardy!

No answer. She stands twiddling the bunch of lilies; BOB PILLIN closes up.

PHYLLIS. [Whispering] He is fast and deep, isn't he? [Holding up the flower] I'll put it in his buttonhole. When he wakes, won't he jump? [She steals close, bends, and slips the flowers into the buttonhole. Then kisses the tip of her finger, and blows the kiss at him] Good-night, Guardy, dear; bless you! [She skips back, twirls round, reluctant to go without being seen, and blows another kiss] I do wish he'd wake! He'll be sorry he didn't see my dress.

At the disappointed whisper BOB PILLIN walks up to the old man, and bends. Suddenly he stands up and looks back at PHYLLIS.

PHYLLIS. Is he awake?

BOB PILLIN. [In a queer voice] No.

PHYLLIS. I must just try again.

BOB PILLIN. No. [He moves as she comes near, and very decisively places his hands on her shoulders] No. Not fair. Come along.

She looks up at him, intrigued by the firmness of his voice and touch.

PHYLLIS. [Wilfully] I will wake him!

As she speaks, he just turns her round, and pushes her before him quietly and slowly off into the hall.

PHYLLIS. [Under her breath, mockingly, to the air before her] Oo-oh! Aren't we strong!

There is a little laugh from her, outside. Then the sound of a closing door, and of a carriage driving away.

MELLER comes hastening into the room and goes quickly up to the chair.

MELLER. Sir! [Louder] Sir! [He touches the shoulder, then shakes it slightly] Bed-time, Sir!

He bends down, listens; stands up abruptly and beckons to MOLLY in the doorway. The girl comes quickly.

MELLER. [Sharply] That gentleman's right. He's not breathing. Feel his forehead!

The girl, feeling it, draws her h away sharply.

MOLLY. Oh! Ut's cold as ice. Oh! Shure, an' he's niver——!

THE SHOW

A DRAMA IN THREE ACTS

ACT I

ten o'clock on a March morning. The study of a house in Kensington s empty and curtained, but narrow treaks of daylight come in between he window-curtains of the two win-lows, Back. A low-backed armchair s drawn up to the fireplace, Right. There is a door below the fireplace, nd another opposite to it, Left. A ureau stands over on the left. On it a telephone. On a stool by the rmchair is a tray with a decanter f brandy, a syphon, and a glass. The room is tastefully enough ap-arelled, and there is a bookcase be-ween the windows. A small model f a flying-machine stands on the p of it.

door on the right is opened, and ANNE MORECOMBE comes in; about wenty-five years old, dark, very ale, with an excellent figure and reticent beauty. She turns up the ght, stands gazing at the armchair, hudders, passes swiftly across the oom, locks the door, Left, and takes p the receiver of the telephone.

NE. Chelsea 0012. . . . Is that—is ou, Geof?—Anne speaking. [Her is low, quick and tense] An awful s happened. Colin has shot him-. . . Yes . . . through the heart ast night. . . . When I got in from found him here in the study in— rmchair—dead. The doctor said two hours. . . . Yes, the police . . . No, no doubt—no. The pistol ill in his hand—his own. . . . Us. o, no! He didn't know—I'm sure nd if he had, he wouldn't have You know he wouldn't. . . .No! conceive—I don't know anything of his affairs—no more than he knew of mine——

She hears a sound, swiftly replaces the receiver, swiftly unlocks the door, and re-crosses to the door, Right, just as the door Left is opened and a MAID enters, saying:

MAID. This is the room, Sir.

TWO MEN enter. One is a Detective in plain clothes with a valise, the other a Divisional Surgeon of Police.

DETECTIVE. Mrs. Morecombe?

ANNE. Yes.

DETECTIVE. I'm Detective-Inspector Flayne from Scotland Yard. The Superintendent sent me round. The Divisional Surgeon, Ma'am. He was away last night. I'd like him to see the body before it's removed.

ANNE. This way.

DETECTIVE. One moment. This is the chair? Nothing's been touched since the police were here last night?

ANNE. No. Not since they took him upstairs.

DETECTIVE. [Referring to a note, sitting down in the chair, head forward, right hand on lap] Is that right, Ma'am?

ANNE. [In a whisper] Yes.

DETECTIVE. [Touching his own chest] The clothes were undone here, I believe?

ANNE. Yes.

DETECTIVE. [Nodding to the surgeon, and rising] The Superintendent tells me they went carefully through everything in this room last night. I have the Major's papers here. [Lifts the valise] Is there anything upstairs, Ma'am, I ought to have?

ANNE. I don't think so. He kept everything here.

DETECTIVE. We'll just go up, if you'll kindly take us. Excuse me, you were down here to——?

ANNE. I was telephoning.

DETECTIVE. I see. If you'll take the doctor up, I'll come in a minute.

ANNE goes out, followed by the SURGEON, who has eyed her keenly.

The DETECTIVE draws the curtains of one window fully back, and looks out, then round the room. The telephone bell rings. He takes up the receiver and listens.

DETECTIVE. Who's speaking? [There is instant cessation as if he had been cut off] Um! Wrong number, or was mine the wrong voice? [He replaces the receiver; stands a moment considering, then goes to the door, Left, and opens it] Simpson?

A CONSTABLE in uniform appears. You were on duty last night, this beat?

CONSTABLE. Yes, Sir.

DETECTIVE. You didn't hear this shot? [Referring to his notes] The doctor puts his death at about nine, I see.

CONSTABLE. No, Sir, I didn't.

DETECTIVE. See anybody come out of this house?

CONSTABLE. No, Sir. I saw the lady come in.

DETECTIVE. What time?

CONSTABLE. Half-past ten, Sir, I should say.

DETECTIVE. [Referring to his notes] Alone?

CONSTABLE. Yes, Sir.

DETECTIVE. How did you come to notice her?

CONSTABLE. I know her pretty well. She parted from a gentleman half-way up the street, round the corner.

DETECTIVE. Oh! Do you know him?

CONSTABLE. No, Sir, I don't know him; but it's not the first time, by many.

DETECTIVE. Then you'd know him if you saw him? [Receiving a nod] What's he like?

CONSTABLE. Tallish young man with a soft 'at.

DETECTIVE, after a moment's reflection, goes to the telephone and looks at the number on it.

DETECTIVE. [Taking up receiver] Exchange. This house has just been r up and the call was cut off someh . . . Oh! They're still waiting—just me back. . . . Hallo! What number that? . . . Chelsea 0012. Thank y [He replaces the receiver and jots number down. To the CONSTABLE] T my card, and this number, find out what name and address it belongs, bring it back to me at once. Send t maid in here.

CONSTABLE. Yes, Sir. [He goes

The DETECTIVE crosses the ro takes up the glass by its base examines the rim for fing marks. The MAID comes in.

MAID. Yes, Sir?

DETECTIVE. Ah! you. Name?

MAID. Ellen Frost.

DETECTIVE. No one's touched this, course?

MAID. Oh, no.

DETECTIVE. When did Major Mo combe come in last night?

MAID. About eight, Sir.

DETECTIVE. How d'you know?

MAID. I saw him coming from gate. He called down that he'd dinner.

DETECTIVE. Oh! What sort of vo

MAID. Just his usual, Sir.

DETECTIVE. Did you bring him brandy?

MAID. Yes. He rang for it about h past eight. He was finishing a lette he gave it to me to post at once.

DETECTIVE. A letter? Who to?

MAID. I didn't notice, Sir. I just w out with it and dropped it in the b and brought up the brandy. Then was sitting in that chair.

DETECTIVE. How did he look?

MAID. Very quiet-like—had his h on his hand—like this. [Places her h to her forehead.]

DETECTIVE. Said nothing?

MAID. No, Sir.

DETECTIVE. How much brandy sh you say he drank?

MAID. [Scrutinising decanter] A g deal, Sir.

DETECTIVE. Half a tumbler?

MAID. About that, I should think.

DETECTIVE. [Taking a revolver the valise] Do you know this?

AID. [Wincing] Yes, I think so. used to keep it in the bureau ver.

ETECTIVE. You didn't see it when you ght the brandy up?

AID. No, Sir.

ETECTIVE. Did you see him again ?

AID. [Upset] No, Sir.

ETECTIVE. Did you hear the shot?

AID. Well, Sir, I did seem to hear a d when the gramophone was sing- "Butter me 'eart, Charlie." I don't if you know it, it's rather a loud TECTIVE. Where were you?

AID. In the kitchen—[Pointing Left]—that's in the basement, be- he drawing-room. It was just be- our supper.

TECTIVE. What time?

ID. About nine it would be.

TECTIVE. But what you heard didn't you up?

ID. Well, I didn't rightly think it n the house at all like.

TECTIVE. How long have you been

ID. Ever since they were married ome to this house, Sir. Four years

TECTIVE. [Referring to his notes] didn't sleep in the same room, I

ID. No, Sir.

TECTIVE. How long's that been go- ı?

D. It must be—a year, or fifteen s, about, that the Major's been on p floor.

IECTIVE. They weren't on terms,

he MAID hesitates.

ECTIVE. Better be quite frank.

D. There was never any words,

ECTIVE. Come! Were they living er? You know what I mean.

D. No, Sir, they weren't; at least as I know.

ECTIVE. And hadn't been, for a me?

D. No.

ECTIVE. They went out separately l deal?

MAID. Yes.

DETECTIVE. Mrs. Morecombe was out last night?

MAID. Yes; I let her in at half-past ten.

DETECTIVE. I see. The Major a violent man?

MAID. Oh! no, Sir. Very depressed at times.

DETECTIVE. How d'you mean?

MAID. I hardly know. He seemed to come to an end, like.

DETECTIVE. Hold his head in his hands —that sort of thing?

MAID. Yes.

DETECTIVE. Distinguished flying man in the war, I believe?

MAID. Oh! yes, Sir. He was a hero.

DETECTIVE. H'm! There were others. Did he get many letters?

MAID. I don't know what you'd call many—six or seven a day, perhaps.

DETECTIVE. Any money pressure that you know of, eh?

MAID. Oh! no, Sir; I'm sure there wasn't.

DETECTIVE. What makes you sure?

MAID. Well, I've never heard money mentioned, 'ardly.

DETECTIVE. Not much talk between them at all, eh?

MAID. No, that's true. Still, you know what money is. If there's money trouble, you're bound to hear of it.

DETECTIVE. That's right. Which did you like best—the Major or Mrs. Morecombe?

MAID. Oh! well, Sir, I like them both very much. The poor Major.

DETECTIVE. Ah! Sad thing—very! So you like Mrs. Morecombe, too?

MAID. I do.

DETECTIVE. What's her family?

MAID. I think there's only her father, old Colonel Roland.

DETECTIVE. Still in the Service?

MAID. Oh! no; he's too old—near seventy, I should think.

DETECTIVE. No brothers?

MAID. No, Sir. She was an only child, I believe.

DETECTIVE. [Suddenly] Some reason for the Major and her being estranged. What was it?

MAID. I couldn't tell you, really.

DETECTIVE. How d'you mean—couldn't?

MAID. Well, I don't know.

DETECTIVE. Come! A love affair, eh?

MAID. [Flustered] Really, I can't tell you—I've never seen anything.

DETECTIVE. Yes, but straws show the way the wind blows.

MAID. [Suddenly resolute] I never saw any straws.

DETECTIVE. [With a sharp look] I see. Knows, but won't tell.

MAID. [Flustered again] No, Sir, really; and it wasn't my business.

DETECTIVE. It's your business to tell what you know. We've got to find out why this happened; and you've got to help us. Come along with it! Here we have two young people who haven't lived together for fifteen months, you say. Well, that means that one or other of them, or both, was friendly with someone else. Now doesn't it?

MAID. [Stubbornly] Not knowing, I can't say.

DETECTIVE. Very well. Who came here calling? While I go upstairs, sit down and write the names down, and mind you don't leave any out.

MAID. No, Sir.

[He goes out by the door, Right. She sits down at the bureau: and, sucking a pencil, writes down name after name, as they occur to her. The door Left is thrown open, and the COOK, an older woman, appears.

COOK. Here's a young woman—I can't keep her out.

DAISY ODIHAM passes her and comes in: pretty, soft, distracted. The MAID has started up, the COOK hangs, as it were, in the doorway.

DAISY. [Quite abandoned to emotion—not a very educated voice] It's not true—it's not true, is it? Say it's not true! Not dead—I mean; not dead?

MAID. [Affected] Yes, it's true enough.

DAISY. Oh, God! Oh, God!

She sinks down in the chair, burying her forehead against the bureau and rocking her body. The COOK crosses to the brandy, pours out some and brings it to her.

COOK. Here, drink some of this. W are you, my dear?

The GIRL, after repulsing it, drin

DAISY. [Throwing up her hea What's it matter who I am? I'm nobo —Oh, God! [Suddenly] Didn't he le a word for me? Not a word? Nothin MAID. I don't know; I'll ask them you'll tell me your name.

DAISY. Oh! no; what does it mat —if he's dead? Leave me alone. I going.

COOK. You're not going to do an thing rash?

DAISY. [Still wild] Rash? I could see him, could I?

MAID. Mrs. Morecombe's up the with the police.

DAISY. Oh! I'm going—I'm goin [Suddenly calmer—almost hard] It's right—thank you.

She puts aside the COOK'S hand a walks out, with the back of h hand over her face; the MA staring after her.

COOK. Poor thing! [Coming in a litt I say—d'you think she's the skeleton the cupboard?

MAID. [Still much upset] And th worrying me with their questions! Wh am I to say to them now?

COOK. That girl ought to be follen She might throw herself in the river.

Suddenly they see that a YOU MAN is standing in the doorwa a nice-looking young newspa reporter.

REPORTER. It's all right. She is be followed. Don't be alarmed. She left t front door open, so I came in to tell y that my friend won't lose sight of h [Looking at their hostile faces] I afraid I'm giving you trouble. [He g close to the MAID and tries to plac note in her hand] So sorry!

MAID. [Rejecting the note] No; don't know who you are or what bu ness you've got here.

REPORTER. [With an engaging sm Oh! of course, if you feel like that. I it's quite all right. I'm from The E ning Sun.

DETECTIVE. Friend of the Major's, too?

The MAID hesitates.

DETECTIVE. You needn't answer, that's quite enough. There was a row over him—some time back?

MAID. No, Sir—at least, I never——

DETECTIVE. How do you account for his ceasing to come, then?

MAID. I'm sure I don't know; perhaps he's got other things to do.

DETECTIVE. How long since he came?

MAID. About a year, I think.

DETECTIVE. Exactly; and the Major went upstairs fifteen months ago. Now, about that letter you posted. You can't remember who it was to?

MAID. No, Sir; I never read the address.

DETECTIVE. Sure! There's nothing to be ashamed of.

MAID. I'm not ashamed, because I didn't read it.

DETECTIVE. Well now—keep my questions to yourself—see?

MAID. [With quivering lips] Y-yes, Sir.

DETECTIVE. [As the SURGEON and ANNE come in] You can go now.

The MAID goes, Left.

SURGEON. I must be going on, Inspector. The barrel was carefully adjusted and resting against the bare skin; death instantaneous. Quite satisfied with Dr. Mackay's report; nothing to indicate he's got the time wrong. So far as one can judge as yet, and from what this lady says, he was quite a healthy subject. Good day, Madam.

DETECTIVE. The inquest will be the day after to-morrow, Sir. I'll be taking [Lowering his voice] the body round to the mortuary before lunch.

SURGEON. Quite. Good morning.

[He goes out, Left.

DETECTIVE. Sit down, Madam—you must be worn out. I just want to ask you a question or two.

ANNE remains standing.

DETECTIVE. Now, can you tell me why this happened?

ANNE. [With a quick little negative movement] No, I can't. I can't.

DETECTIVE. Both the doctors seem agreed there was no disease. What do you say to that?

ANNE. Oh! None, I'm sure.

DETECTIVE. And no money troubles?

ANNE. No.

DETECTIVE. Comfortably off, eh?

ANNE. Yes, both of us.

DETECTIVE. Now, Ma'am—we have to know everything—Why were you and the Major on distant terms?

ANNE. We weren't on bad terms at all.

DETECTIVE. Were you husband and wife?

ANNE. Not in one sense.

DETECTIVE. Excuse me, there mu have been some reason for that.

ANNE. Only that we agreed not to h some time ago.

DETECTIVE. Did that suggestion em nate from you or from your husband

ANNE. From—from him first.

DETECTIVE. Oh! from him! And y didn't object?

ANNE. No.

DETECTIVE. Now you see, the que tion is: Why did the Major take h life? The Coroner'll want to know ho to direct the Jury. Was it insanity, was there a good reason?

ANNE. What does it matter? Nothi will bring him back?

DETECTIVE. Well, that's a way of loo ing at it, but it's not customary. A vi lent death like this has to be gone in When exactly did you agree to go yo own ways?

ANNE. The Christmas before last.

DETECTIVE. Fifteen months. And y won't give me a reason?

ANNE. You must excuse me.

DETECTIVE. [Drily] Very well, Ma'a It would be better for you to be fran but please yourself. Am I to take it th you know nothing that should make yo husband take his life?

ANNE. No—unless——

DETECTIVE. [Intrigued] Yes?

ANNE. Unless it was in a fit of bla depression. He was very moody.

DETECTIVE. [Disappointed] O Come! Had he ever threatened to?

ANNE. Not to me.

DETECTIVE. It really is a pity, Ma'a that you can't give me a better reaso It simply means we've got to look f one.

ANNE. I don't know anything abo my husband's private affairs.

DETECTIVE. But you know your ow Ma'am.

ANNE. [After a pause] What do y mean?

DETECTIVE. Most of us have them.

ANNE. It sounded insulting.

DETECTIVE. [A little harder] You ca in at ten-thirty, I believe, last night?

ANNE. Yes.

DETECTIVE. What time had you g out?

NNE. At six o'clock.
ETECTIVE. And between those hours?
NNE. [After a pause] No, Inspector, bject to being asked questions that e no bearing on this.

ETECTIVE. Madam, reservations in a of this sort have the worst construc- placed on them; and rightly.
NNE. I can't help that.
ETECTIVE. [Looking at her with a of admiration] Was your husband st evening when you went out?
NNE. No. He went out just before
ETECTIVE. Perhaps you can tell me at if he knew where you were going?
NNE. He didn't.
ETECTIVE. How can you tell that?
NNE. I'm sure.
ETECTIVE. Would he have minded if d known?
NNE. I—I don't think so.
TECTIVE. I'm suggesting, you know, he did happen to know, and that [Pointing to the chair] was the re-

TECTIVE. Well, Ma'am, you're mak- all very mysterious. We shall have ow where you were last night.
NNE. [Twisting her hands] I tell hat where I was has no bearing is. If you persist, it won't help you.
TECTIVE. I should consult your , if I were you, Ma'am, and follow dvice. I'll be seeing you again be- ong. [He looks at the bit of paper him by the CONSTABLE, encloses his notebook, snaps that to, and towards the door, Left] For the nt, Ma'am. [He goes out.
NNE, left alone, twists her hands, clasps them on her breast, and looks restlessly about her. She springs towards the telephone, but stops and shakes her head. Then she rings the bell. The MAID en- ters.
NE. Has that man gone, Ellen?
ID. Yes, Ma'am. [Looking at her] don't seem to have an idea of pri- [After a glance] He wanted to who comes here. I had to write all I could think of—— [A little pause, and ANNE makes a movement with her hands] in the last six months.

ANNE. [Relieved] Oh! yes; of course.

MAID. [About to go, and turning] Please, while you was upstairs—there was a—a young man too—from the Press. [A bell rings.

MAID. The front door, Ma'am. You won't wish to see people, I suppose.

ANNE. Only my father—I'm expecting him.

The MAID goes out and returns immediately.

MAID. It is Colonel Roland, Ma'am.

COLONEL ROLAND follows her in and the MAID goes out. He is tall, grey, slightly bowed, Irish by birth, with a look as of a kindly Bengal tiger in his highly-coloured face. He goes straight up to his daughter and puts his hands on her shoulders.

COL. ROLAND. My poor girl! This is a dreadful thing.

ANNE. [Dully] Yes, Dad.

COL. ROLAND. Why, in the name of the Saints——?

ANNE. I don't know.

COL. ROLAND. Surely, my child——

ANNE. I don't, Dad.

COL. ROLAND. To take his own life—with his record!

[He looks at her searchingly; puzzled.

ANNE. [After a little pause] I've never bothered you, Dad, with our affairs, but Colin and I had been strangers for a long time.

COL. ROLAND. Strangers? How's that, Anne?

ANNE. The whole thing was a mistake, I'm afraid.

COL. ROLAND. [Disturbed] Well, well, I won't ask you any questions now. It hasn't been your fault, I know.

ANNE. Nor his.

COL. ROLAND. I'm glad to hear that; I liked Colin—I liked um. He was a fine fellow—for a flyin' man. Have the police been?

ANNE. Yes; and the Press.

COL. ROLAND. Confound them—they'll make a show of it, if they can. What do the police say?

ANNE. Only that they have to know everything for the inquest. They've taken all his papers.

COL. ROLAND. What's in them, Anne?

ANNE. I tell you, Dad, I know no more of Colin than he knew of me.

COL. ROLAND. Of you? What should there be to know of you, my child?

ANNE. [Lowering her head—suddenly] Father, I don't know what's coming of this. But you must believe there was an absolute compact between us to go our own ways. If it hadn't been for you, we might have thought of a divorce; but I knew you'd hate it so.

COL. ROLAND. Divorce! Indeed, I would! Well, the poor fellow's gone! In his prime! Well—well!

The MAID enters.

MAID. Excuse me, Ma'am. This young man again—from the newspaper.

COL. ROLAND. Tell um to go to ——! No. I'll tell um myself. [He follows the MAID to the door, where he meets the REPORTER coming in] Now then, Sir, what is it you want?

REPORTER. [To ANNE] Mrs. Morecombe?

COL. ROLAND. Will you be good enough to understand that my daughter has just suffered a bereavement? This sort of intrusion is unwelcome.

REPORTER. Colonel Roland, I believe? I'm extremely sorry, Sir. It's very distasteful to me, too. But the Public——

COL. ROLAND. Damn the Public!

ANNE. What is it you want to know?

REPORTER. If you could tell me anything—about the Major's health, for instance; or whether his new aeroplane design had been refused. He was such a distinguished man. Any news——

ANNE. My husband's health was good; and I don't think he had even offered any design lately.

REPORTER. [Nervously] Well, thank you very much. Of course, that adds to the mystery, doesn't it?

COL. ROLAND. I'd be glad if you'll tell your paper, Sir, to keep its nose out of people's private affairs.

REPORTER. [Pleasantly] When you say private, you forget the inquest, don't you?

COL. ROLAND. I presume the inquest will be a decent quiet affair.

REPORTER. Oh! do you, Sir? I wo

ANNE. Are you married?

REPORTER. Yes.

ANNE. If she committed suicide, wou

ANNE. Did you meet my father going way?

DARREL. No—nobody.

ANNE. You mustn't stay. The Police the Press. They want to find his mo-e. They'll drag up everything they n for the inquest.

DARREL. They don't know about us?

ANNE. They suspect something. I'm rified, for Father's sake.

DARREL. Abroad. Couldn't we go now? st you be at the inquest?

ANNE. Of course! I found him. Geof, pose it comes out about us?

DARREL. [Suddenly—low] Listen! The !

ANNE. [Breathless] Oh!

[She moves to the door. The MAID comes in and stands staring at DARREL.

MAID. [Low] It's the Detective again, 'am.

ANNE. I can't see anyone just now.

MAID. Shall I say you're asleep, Ma-'am? I don't think anything else'd stop him.

ANNE. Ask him to come again at twelve.

But as the MAID opens the door to go, the DETECTIVE enters, and shuts the door on her.

DETECTIVE. Excuse me, Madam. Mr. Geoffrey Darrel, I believe?

DARREL. [Startled] Yes.

DETECTIVE. [Showing DARREL his card] I've been round to your rooms, Sir. About this death of Major Morecombe—if you'll kindly answer a question or two.

DARREL. I?

DETECTIVE. Where did you spend last evening?

DARREL. At home. Why?

DETECTIVE. Didn't go out?

DARREL. I went out soon after ten for a bit.

DETECTIVE. Exactly! You parted from Mrs. Morecombe close here about ten-twenty?

DARREL. What? How do you mean?

DETECTIVE. Now, Sir, don't prevaricate, please. The Constable on this beat saw you taking leave of her at that time. Was she with you at your rooms?

DARREL. What right have you to ask these questions?

DETECTIVE. I happen to be in charge of this case, Sir.

DARREL. I've nothing on earth to do with this suicide, and I can't answer you.

DETECTIVE. It's known to us that you've often left this lady close to her house at night. You were with her last evening, and she telephoned to you this morning. It's further known that you used to be a caller here, and ceased to be a year ago. Now, Sir, you received a letter from Major Morecombe this morning. . . .

DARREL. I did not.

DETECTIVE. Excuse me!

DARREL. I tell you I did not.

DETECTIVE. He wrote and posted one just before he committed suicide, and we want it.

DARREL. I give you my word of honour I received no such letter.

DETECTIVE. If you did not receive this letter, it will go far to show that your friendship with Mrs. Morecombe was not the cause of the Major's suicide. Do you mind emptying your pockets? Now, Sir, sensibly. If you haven't got it, it can't do any harm.

DARREL empties his pockets. The DETECTIVE glances at the letters.

DETECTIVE. As a matter of form, Sir. [He runs his hands skilfully over DARREL] Very good! I took the Constable round to your place, and he identified you by a photograph.

DARREL. What! You broke in?

DETECTIVE. [With a smile] You see, I didn't know when I'd get you, and I've no time to waste.

DARREL. This is an outrage!

DETECTIVE. Well, not exactly, Sir; no. There's just one thing I brought away that I'd like you to open for me. [He goes to the door and calls] Simpson!

The CONSTABLE appears with a locked japanned box.

DARREL. This is abominable!

DETECTIVE. [Taking the box—to CONSTABLE] This is the gentleman?

CONSTABLE. Yes, Sir.

DETECTIVE. That'll do, then!

The CONSTABLE goes out.

DARREL. Give me that box.

DETECTIVE. Yes, Sir; I want you to open it.

DARREL. I shall do nothing of the sort.

DETECTIVE. Then I must force the lock.

DARREL. [At his wits' end] Look here, this is a horrible business for everyone. Surely you don't want to make it worse? I've given you my solemn word.

DETECTIVE. A gentleman will always give that, Sir, to save a lady. Kindly unlock it. [Holds out the box.

DARREL. My friendship for Mrs. Morecombe has nothing to do with this suicide. Major Morecombe didn't know of it; if he had, he wouldn't have cared —they were quite apart.

DETECTIVE. Exactly; and if you'll excuse me, I think you're the reason of that.

DARREL. I am not.

DETECTIVE. Then what is?

DARREL. I don't know.

DETECTIVE. In my opinion, the lett I want will tell us.

DARREL. [Passionately] I have h no letter.

DETECTIVE. We shall see that.

DARREL. [Seizing the box] Shall w But as he speaks ANNE comes fro where she has been standing, m tionless.

DETECTIVE. [Uncomfortable] That's may be, Ma'am. But a matter like th has to be cleared up.

ANNE. Why?

DETECTIVE. The law takes no accou of privacy when a thing like this ha pens.

DARREL. The law! It's got no guts.

DETECTIVE. Very sensibly said, S Kindly open this box.

DARREL. It contains nothing but p vate letters from this lady to me.

DETECTIVE. Well, we'll just confi that.

ANNE. Open it, Geof.

DETECTIVE. That's right, Ma'am; view of your admission, there's eve chance we shan't need them. They sh be kept under seal, and returned.

DARREL. Will you give me your card, ase.

The DETECTIVE hands him a card, and the little box, empty of all except the flower.

DETECTIVE. You persist in saying you no letter from Major Morecombe s morning, Sir?

DARREL. Yes.

DETECTIVE. Well, I hope we shall get d of it. [Looking at his face intently] d I sincerely trust we shan't d——

ANNE moves a step, looking at him.

DETECTIVE. [With a gesture of dis- ufort] My duty, Ma'am.

[He goes out. The door is shut. The TWO LOVERS stand side by side without a word.

DARREL. [Suddenly] What could I e done?

ANNE. [Taking his hand] Nothing, f. Don't look like that. It's just lity. I must tell Father now. How rible for him, how horrible! He'll er understand!

DARREL. Wait, darling. There's always nance. This letter——

ANNE. He gave one to Ellen to post, eems, just before——

DARREL. You say he had someone?

ANNE. But who? We never asked each other anything. That was agreed. The letter may have been to his mother, of course.

There is a knock. The door is opened by the REPORTER.

REPORTER. Could I speak to you again for just one minute, Mrs. Morecombe? I'm afraid I must seem very intrusive ——

ANNE. Yes.

The REPORTER stands embarrassed, looking from one to the other.

ANNE. Well?

REPORTER. It's just this. Did you know that a young woman came to your house this morning, in a state of great distress?

ANNE. A young——! [She and DARREL exchange a glance] No.

REPORTER. Perhaps it may throw some light— [He has noted their glance, and looks from one to the other] Luckily I had a friend, who followed her.

ANNE. [Suddenly] Are you going to drag another wretched woman into this?

REPORTER. [Nonplussed] Well, you see, she was in such a state.

ANNE. Do you want to make it worse?

REPORTER. No, indeed! Only, of course —— Then you can't tell me anything about her?

ANNE. I know nothing of her.

REPORTER. Thank you very much. That simplifies things, anyway. I wanted to be sure. I'm very much obliged to you. Good morning.

ANNE. [Suddenly] My husband has a mother, to whom he was a hero.

REPORTER. Oh! Could you give me her address?

ANNE. She's in the country. She must be broken-hearted. She adored him. Don't you realise?

REPORTER. Yes, indeed. It's a terrible drama.

DARREL. [Grimly] Perhaps you'd like to ask why I'm here?

REPORTER. Oh! no, thank you. I can —er—imagine. [He goes out

DARREL. My God!

ANNE is standing motionless.

ACT II

SCENE I

The Editor's room, at the offices of "The Evening Sun," on the following morning. The room, moderately snug, is longish and narrow, the windows at the back have a view of Fleet Street. Right, Forward, there is a door. A large bureau stands between the windows. Left, is a fireplace.

The EDITOR is sitting at the bureau with his back to the fireplace. He is about fifty, short, with an involuted and ironical face and quick eyes. He is dictating to his secretary, a fresh-faced girl.

EDITOR. "The object is good, of course; but in order to strike a note with the public, a much bigger name is required." Umm! it's a pity—the really valuable names are in prison. Whom do you suggest, Miss Price? [Checking her at the first movement of her lips] No, no! Not a novelist—the public are fed up with novelists. Isn't there a cleric?

SECRETARY. Well, of course, there's

EDITOR. Oh! Not him! These humanitarian stunts depend on a touch of novelty. How about a judge. Well—it doesn't press. I want to see the News Editor.

SECRETARY. Yes, Mr. Eagles; he's waiting. [Goes to the door and says] Will you come in, Mr. Kenting?

The NEWS EDITOR enters: he is of a brisk, rather sandy type, with a short-clipped moustache, and a pipe in his hand.

EDITOR. Morning, Kenting. [He takes up a copy of yesterday's issue] That'll do, Miss Price.

She goes out, with a pile of finished letters.

EDITOR. Look here! Who passed this paragraph on the Morecombe suicide—about a young woman calling at the house in a state of distress?

NEWS ED. I did.

EDITOR. I don't like it.

NEWS ED. What's wrong?

EDITOR. Suggestive.

NEWS ED. He can't bring a libel a tion—poor chap.

EDITOR. No; but we shall have t police round about it.

NEWS ED. Well, it's all to our credi they wouldn't have got hold of it wit out.

EDITOR. Yes; but this thing is s judice.

NEWS ED. Not yet.

EDITOR. That's all very well, Kentin but you can't be too careful. Who w the reporter?

NEWS ED. Young Forman's on it. He a very decent chap—there's no nan given. I've got to get news. This Mor combe suicide is bound to make a st He bombed farther into Germany th any flying man we had.

EDITOR. Exactly! But this is going hurt his people.

NEWS ED. Well! Forman says t police are running Mrs. Morecombe private life.

EDITOR. Oh! When's the inquest?

NEWS ED. To-morrow.

The SECRETARY enters with a ca

EDITOR. [After glancing at it, mak a face, and hands it to KENTING] He we are, you see.

NEWS ED. [Reading] Lady Mor combe. Who's that—his mother?

EDITOR. Show her in, Miss Price. T is up to you, Kenting.

They stand at attention. LA MORECOMBE is a little grey-hair lady in black, wiry and of a Hig land type. The contrast betwe her little figure and the tall fo of COLONEL ROLAND, who acco panies her, is striking.

LADY M. Give me that paper, Colo Roland. [Taking a newspaper fr COLONEL ROLAND'S hand] Are you editor?

EDITOR. Yes.

LADY M. [With intense suppres feeling] Why do you put this about son?

EDITOR. We were just discussing t Lady Morecombe. This is the news tor, Mr. Kenting.

LADY M. Is it you who are resp sible?

NEWS ED. I passed it. What do you

ADY M. "A young woman in great

NEWS ED. It's quite vague—no name

ADY M. Don't you know people bet-than that? The worst construction, ourse, will be put.
EWS ED. Very sorry if it hurts you,
y Morecombe; but you don't realise, afraid, that an inquest makes ything public. We're merely help-to get at the truth as quickly as ible.
ADY M. The truth? What is that to

DITOR. Immense subject, that, Lady enquiries are to no one's interest

ADY M. [With passion] That is cant.

ked about on the street.
DITOR. [With a sort of dignity] It's doesn't pay its way, can't live. But ere's a villain in the piece, it's the lieve it to be due to Mrs. Morecombe's conduct?

COL. ROLAND. What?

EDITOR. I beg your pardon.

COL. ROLAND. That lady is my daughter, Sir. Be good enough to explain yourself.

The EDITOR looks at the NEWS EDITOR.

NEWS ED. You'll find that the police are following a clue in that direction.

COL. ROLAND. What devil's gossip's this? Speak out!

NEWS ED. Entirely in confidence—that is the line they're going on. Our reporter——

COL. ROLAND. Ah! What d'you mean by sending people to meddle with private affairs?

NEWS ED. [Angrily] That's not the way to——

EDITOR. One moment, Kenting. [He sounds a bell] Forman, you said?

KENTING nods sullenly. The SECRETARY has appeared.

EDITOR. Miss Price, if Mr. Forman's in, ask him to come here.

[She goes.

EDITOR. Now, excuse me, all this is very human, but we should be glad of civility. It's often very difficult to decide between private susceptibilities and our duty to the Public.

COL. ROLAND. What concern is it of the Public? What business have you to feed their confounded curiosity? Thank God, there's a law of libel!

NEWS ED. Yes; but it won't lie against the police. We haven't said anything about your daughter.

EDITOR. This shows you, Lady Morecombe, how important it is that everything should be known, if the real truth is to come out.

Before LADY MORECOMBE can answer, the REPORTER enters.

EDITOR. Mr. Morman, I understand you have the Morecombe case in hand. Here are Major Morecombe's mother and Mrs. Morecombe's father.

REPORTER. Yes, Sir. [He bows.

COL. ROLAND. What have you been saying about my daughter?

REPORTER. [Uneasy] Well, Sir, after I saw you, I had a question to put to

Mrs. Morecombe about the young woman who came there yesterday morning

LADY M. [Breaking in] It's you, then, who are responsible for this calumny on my son?

REPORTER. [With a glance at KENTING] Really, I simply carry out my orders.

COL. ROLAND. What did you tell your chief about my daughter?

REPORTER. Merely what I gathered from my own observation. There's nothing about that in the paper.

LADY M. Why did you invent that lie about this woman?

REPORTER. [Angry] Lie! She was Major Morecombe's mistress, by her own account.

LADY M. [Mastering herself again] If she was, what has that to do with his death?

NEWS ED. That, I take it, will be for the Jury.

LADY M. Will you give me her address, please?

REPORTER. [To the EDITOR] Am I to give it, Sir?

EDITOR. Yes.

REPORTER. Miss Odiham, 48 Burdells Buildings, Fulham.

LADY M. [Writing it down] Are you coming, Colonel Roland?

COL. ROLAND. Just a moment. [To EDITOR] Do I understand, Sir, that your paper will make no further allusion to this death except to report the inquest?

EDITOR. [After a moment's pause] To give you that assurance would be to admit my paper in the wrong, which I am far from doing. I must be guided by events.

LADY M. It's ghoulish—ghoulish.

[She turns and goes out.

COL. ROLAND. You had better give me that assurance.

EDITOR. No, Sir. The Press is not to be abused and hectored in this manner.

COL. ROLAND. Very well. I shall go straight to my lawyers.

[He follows LADY MORECOMBE out.

EDITOR. This'll never do. If they get hold of the girl and spirit her away, we shan't be able to substantiate our paragraph. We must keep the whip hand. Mr. Forman, cut off at once and get

The MAID goes out. The TWO stand disconsolate.

DAISY. [Suddenly] Oh! Daddy, I can't bear to see her!
ODIHAM. Come now, Daisy; she won't eat you. If they'd done with each other, as you keep tellin' me——
DAISY. Oh! They had—they had!
ODIHAM. Perk up, then, and let's put the hat on it. It's the only way to stop these noospaper chaps.
[He takes a folded paper out of his side pocket. ANNE enters.
ANNE. Yes? You wanted to see me?
[The GIRL gasps.
ODIHAM. That's right, Ma'am. You're keepin' well, I 'ope? [Smoothing his trousers] P'r'aps I oughtn't to 'a brought my daughter 'ere, but fact is—when you can't get out of a thing, you've got to face it.
ANNE. [Looking intently at the GIRL] I see.
ODIHAM. Did you notice this in yesterday's Evenin', Ma'am?
ANNE. [Taking the newspaper] Yes.
ODIHAM. I get it every day with my supper. Of course, when I read it last night, I'd no idea it was my daughter. I just 'appened to show it to 'er' an' that fetched it all out of 'er sudden—about 'er and your 'usband, Ma'am. First I knew of it, an' that's the truth. And of course as to what you know, I can't tell.
ANNE. Nothing.
ODIHAM. Dear, dear! Well, I always say—When you once begin to tell the truth, it don't do to stop sudden. There's no denyin' the liaison, it seems. Of course 'er mother was Irish, an' brought 'er up too strict. And bein' in a restaurant, she's liable to admiration. But I never dreamed of 'er 'avin' a private life, and I can only ask you to look over it.
ANNE. [Coldly] There's no need.
ODIHAM. You see, this noospaper 'ints that "the girl in distress," as they call 'er 'ere, is the cause of the catastrofe. And, of course, she tells me she ain't. Daisy, tell the lady about what you told me about when you saw the Major last.
ANNE. Yes, tell me.
DAISY. [Choking a little, but mastering her voice] Oh, Madam, I—I saw him the evening before—he—he—. He took me down to Richmond. Madam, I'm sure I'm not the cause of—of what happened.

He was just as nice as ever he could be, and I—I didn't give him any—trouble, ever. We never—never had any words. [She covers her face; recovering with a brusque movement] I was too fond of him. I adored him. I wouldn't ever have given him any trouble.

ANNE. [Quietly] You came here yesterday morning, didn't you?

DAISY. I was crazy; and as I went away a man followed me. He told me he'd have to tell the police if I didn't give him the truth. I lost my head, and I don't know what I said. And then they go and put this in the paper. There was no call for anything to come out about me. Oh! if I've done him a mischief! I wouldn't have hurt him for the world!

[She masters herself with difficulty.

ODIHAM. [With heat] Ah! You don't know where to have these noospaper fellers, they're all over it. There's another after 'er now—wants 'er to go away an' 'ide 'erself. I said to him: "What game is this? She's got nothin' to do with this tradegy." But 'e kept on, till I thought to meself: "I got to stop this, some'ow. The only way is to go to 'eadquarters." I didn't like to bring her 'ere, but I 'ave. And, what's more, I believe 'e's followed us.

ANNE. I'm sure he has.

ODIHAM. He'd better watch it. My girl may 'ave done wrong, but she's a good girl, and I stand by her. From what she says, she ain't accessory to the fact, and if you'd just tell this feller the reason of your 'usband's havin' done what he did, Ma'am—and stop 'em gluin' their noses to the shop winder.

ANNE. I don't know the reason.

ODIHAM. [Blank] Aow! "Veiled in mystery." I thought, as the paper said that, you'd be sure to know reely. [Scratching his head] Well, some'ow it's got to be stopped. 'Er name ain't mentioned yet.

ANNE. My father, and my husband's mother have gone down to the office of this newspaper; but I'm afraid it's too late. The police will have seen this paragraph, and follow it up, I suppose.

ODIHAM. [With anger] Call that English! It's a terrible thing for my girl, if they're goin' to make 'er public.

ANNE. It's terrible for us all, I——

ODIHAM. Oddium.

ANNE. [To the GIRL] Did you ge letter from Major Morecombe morning?

DAISY. No. And he never said go bye special when I left him on Sund I can't hardly believe he's gone.

ANNE. Can you think of any reaso

DAISY. [Shaking her head] No! O sometimes he'd be silent suddenly, look——

ANNE. Yes.

ODIHAM. Savin' your presence, M 'am, I don't think a man's the right leave everybody like this gapin' for n of why; I don't, reely.

ANNE. It seems he wrote a letter, to whom we don't know; it might thr light if we could trace it.

ODIHAM. Ah! well—it's a warr against 'avin' a private life.

[The MAID ent

MAID. That young man from the ne paper wants to see this—gentle again.

ODIHAM. Ah! I thought he'd up.

ANNE. Do you wish to see him, Odiham?

ODIHAM. [Shifting from foot to fo Reely, Ma'am, it's so noo to me this. Would you advise me to?

ANNE. Perhaps you'd better. Ask to come in, Ellen.

ELLEN opens the door, and the PORTER enters.

REPORTER. [To ANNE] How do do, Ma'am? Please forgive me—but paper is so anxious to minimise consequences of that paragraph.

ODIHAM. [Sullenly] You should thought o' that before. What call you? I've always read your paper enjoyed it.

REPORTER. Exactly, Mr. Odiham.

ODIHAM. [Agape] 'Ow's that?

REPORTER. If you didn't enjoy c like this, we shouldn't put them in, know.

ODIHAM. Aow!

REPORTER. But you've changed mind, I hope. Do let me see that Odiham goes into the country qu the inquest's over. That's the only to keep her out of it all.

DIHAM. And what about her job?

PORTER. She could be indisposed. We all expenses.

DIHAM. What do you say, Daisy?

AISY. Oh! Yes, yes.

PORTER. Come along, then, at once. I send your things down after you afternoon.

DY M. Is it true that he did this se of you?

ISY. [Louder] No.

DY M. [To the REPORTER, who is to speak] You hear that? Leave ease.

PORTER. I regret——

DY M. Regret what sells your pa-Never!

PORTER. Forgive me, that's very un-I hate this sort of thing as much u, but I can't help the public taste. Mr. Odiham, ask anybody!

[He goes out, Left.

. ROLAND. [Crossing the room] , I want to speak to you.

[He takes her arm and they go out, Right.

LADY M. Did you take my son away from his wife?

DAISY. No! Oh, no!

LADY M. What are you?

ODIHAM. I'd be obliged if you wouldn't tease 'er, Ma'am. She's 'ad a great shock.

LADY M. So have I.

ODIHAM. Excuse me, that ought to give you a fellow-feelin'.

DAISY. I'd have done anything for him.

LADY M. [More softly] I am an old woman, in great grief. I only want the truth, so as to know how best to serve my son's memory.

DAISY. Tell me what to do, and I'll do it, if I can.

ODIHAM. We're all in the same cart, I think.

LADY M. You're right. Will you deny your relationship to my son?

ODIHAM. [Scratching his head] Perjury? That's awk!

LADY M. Is it known to anyone except that newspaper man?

DAISY. Not of my telling.

ODIHAM. You can't keep them sort of things dark if the police get after it. To be irregular's one thing; but to swear you ain't if you are, is askin' for trouble.

LADY M. How long had you known my son?

DAISY. Nearly a year.

LADY M. Had you an allowance from him?

DAISY. Never. It was for love.

LADY M. Will you go quietly away by yourself at once?

DAISY. Oh! yes.

But as she speaks, COLONEL ROLAND returns by the door, Right. He is extremely grave.

LADY M. [To him] She will go away at once.

COL. ROLAND. Impossible.

LADY M. Why?

He shakes his head. LADY MORECOMBE, after staring at him, speaks to the ODIHAMS.

LADY M. Will you wait a minute or two in the dining-room opposite.

The ODIHAMS go out, Left.

LADY M. Why not, Colonel Roland?

COL. ROLAND. Anne.

LADY M. Unfaithful?——

COL. ROLAND. Colin and Anne went their own ways. But Colin had this girl; Anne's conduct could have had no bearing on his death. If the police know the whole, they will see that.

LADY M. You mean to give them this girl's name?

COLONEL ROLAND nods.

LADY M. It's treachery to the dead.

COL. ROLAND. I can't have Anne disgraced.

LADY M. Does she want Colin's name blackened?

COL. ROLAND. No. But Anne's all I've got. To have her tarred and feathered before my eyes!

LADY M. And I? [With emotion] Isn't it enough that my boy's dead?

[She places her hand on the door just as the MAID comes in.

MAID. The detective, my lady. Shall I tell the mistress?

LADY M. [In alarm] Where?

MAID. In the hall, my lady.

LADY M. And those people?

MAID. In the dining-room.

LADY M. Has he seen them?

MAID. I don't think so, my lady.

LADY M. Bring him in here at once.

The MAID goes.

LADY M. Colonel Roland! You won't tell him—you can't!

COLONEL ROLAND throws his head back and stands very still. The DETECTIVE comes in briskly.

DETECTIVE. Lady Morecombe. Your service. Colonel Roland, I believe? I've come to see your daughter, Sir.

COL. ROLAND. I'll fetch her.

[He goes out, Right.

DETECTIVE. Sad business, my lady. Can you tell me of anything that bears on it?

LADY M. Nothing.

DETECTIVE. You had no letter from your son?

LADY M. No.

DETECTIVE. Are you staying here?

LADY M. Yes.

DETECTIVE. Possibly you'd like to withdraw; it must all be very trying.

LADY M. No, thank you. I'll stay.

DETECTIVE. As you wish, my lady. it may be a bit painful for you.

LADY M. I am used to pain.

ETECTIVE. Why?
AISY. I was upset.
ETECTIVE. By what?
DIHAM. [Stepping forward] What want to worry my girl for? She s nothin' o' this.
ETECTIVE. We shall see. [To DAISY] heard of this death—what was it u?
AISY. It's cruel.
She suddenly covers her face.
DIHAM. What do you call this? I tell she knows nothing of why the or shot himself.
ETECTIVE. She'll have to answer on to-morrow in the box, unless she ers me now. [To DAISY] Come! t was the Major's death to you?
AISY. [Freeing her face and flinging he word] The world!

DETECTIVE. You mean he was the world?
DAISY. Yes.
DETECTIVE. And you to him?
LADY M. [Sharply] Only my son could answer that.

DETECTIVE. Where?
DAISY. At Richmond.
DETECTIVE. Now come—speak the truth—you were on terms with him?
DAISY. No.
DETECTIVE. [With a faint smile] And yet he was the world to you. What are you?
DAISY. [Sullenly] Waitress.
DETECTIVE. Respectable profession. You were pursuing this gentleman, then?
DAISY. I loved him.
DETECTIVE. With no result?
DAISY. I won't be questioned any more.
DETECTIVE. [Soothingly] Now, now!
ODIHAM edges closer to his daughter and pulls her sleeve.
DETECTIVE. Ah! You understand that it's no good telling lies to the Law. Your daughter was the Major's— Come, it's only fair to everyone, out with it!
ODIHAM. Can't you see she's 'ighsterical?
DETECTIVE. [To DAISY] Give me the letter you had from Major Morecombe yesterday morning.
DAISY. I never had one.
DETECTIVE. What? When it gave you the news that brought you round here?
DAISY. It's a lie! I read it in the paper.
DETECTIVE. [For the first time sharply] Don't speak to me like that, my girl. Just answer my questions, and give me that letter.
DAISY. Oh! Won't somebody help me?

COL. ROLAND. [With a step forward] Leave the wretched girl alone! [In a tone of old days] Do you hear me, Inspector?

DETECTIVE. Yes, Sir; but we're not in the Army now. And, excuse my saying so, it's not to your interest, or to your daughter's, that she should refuse to answer me.

LADY M. [Rising] She has answered you. What she has said she will repeat on oath. She admired my son—many did—she loved him, if you like. And—that—is—all.

She says this with such incision and finality that the DETECTIVE is for the moment thoroughly taken aback.

DETECTIVE. Tell me why your son committed suicide, and I will leave it at that, my lady.

LADY M. I cannot; but you will leave it at that, all the same.

DETECTIVE. [Recovering himself] Now, this is all very natural, no doubt, but it gets us no further. [To the GIRL] I'll give you a last chance. If you aren't frank, I shall start enquiring, and you best know how that'll suit you.

DAISY. [With sudden passion] I won't tell you a thing—not a thing—not if ever so! I won't say a word to hurt him!

ODIHAM. [Warningly] Daisy!

DAISY. Well, I won't. He's dead.

LADY MORECOMBE puts her little thin hand on the girl's arm and gives it a squeeze.

DETECTIVE. [Impassively] That's the Law defied, if ever I heard it.

COL. ROLAND. "De mortuis nil nisi bonum," Sergeant.

DETECTIVE. Precisely, Colonel; I know the saying. But it's my business to put the case up to the Coroner with every circumstance that'll throw light on this death. [He crosses to the door, opens it and says] Simpson, ask that reporter to come in.

ODIHAM. Why, this is the ruddy Inquisition! Come along, Daisy!

at, neither the Coroner nor the would.
.. ROLAND. But why drag in what
o bearing?
ECTIVE. It's not for me to say what has bearing and what hasn't. You know nothing of inquests, perhaps. The Coroner will ask: When and where did this death take place; by whose hand; if by his own, what was his state of mind at the time? It's his state of mind I have to show to the best of my ability; and these are the only facts I have knowledge of that can have affected him.

LADY M. And will knowing his state of mind console me? What will help me, Inspector, is that no one shall think lightly of my son now he's dead.

DETECTIVE. [With a shrug] The custom's what it is, my lady. There's a feeling a man shouldn't take his life while he's got his wits.

LADY M. Do these facts of yours point to sound or to unsound mind?

DETECTIVE. That's very clever, my lady.

LADY M. Clever! I've lost my only son. It's like losing my sight. Clever!

DETECTIVE. [Stubbornly] I'm sorry. But——

COL. ROLAND. By the Lord, Inspector, I should have thought you more of a man!

DETECTIVE. [Drily] Man enough to do my duty, Colonel.

COL. ROLAND. Duty! Wantonly to make a show of this! You see what it means to Lady Morecombe! As for me —I can't tell you what my daughter is to me—to watch her disgraced! One's only daughter pilloried in the papers! The Public all agog! Those women who come and gloat! I'm told there's never a death or a divorce where there isn't a pack o' women in furs and feathers. And this is far worse than a divorce. There was the poor fellow lying dead—when she came in from her . . .

LADY M. Colonel Roland has served the country all his life; he's been wounded three times. And my son was gallantry itself! Do you want to smirch his memory before everybody?

DETECTIVE. [Moved] I'm sure I've every feeling for you both, my lady. These things come very hard on families. But aren't you making too much of it? A little private life in these days —what is it?

LADY M. [Like a little statue of dig- nity] We don't belong to these days. We ought to have been dead. Enough! Colonel Roland, he means to do it; nothing we can say will stop him!

DETECTIVE. [Quickly] The Law, my lady, not me. Get me that letter, and it may turn out different.

LADY M. In our belief, neither had the letter.

DETECTIVE. [Shrugging his shoulders] Take my word for it, one of them had. Well, we've the best part of a day to get it still. Good morning!

The DETECTIVE bows first to one and then to the other; but neither makes a sign. He makes a vexed movement of his head and goes out. There is a moment's silence.

COL. ROLAND. Has the girl got it?

LADY M. No; I'm sure she was speaking the truth.

COL. ROLAND. Anne is positive.

LADY M. We're in a net. Colonel Roland, haven't you influence enough to stop this?

COL. ROLAND. I? I'm nobody. On the shelf. I'll try my lawyers, but for the life of me I don't see what they can do.

LADY M. Try! Try everything! Forgive me for what I said!

COL. ROLAND. I know—I know! My poor friend!

He takes her hand and puts it to his lips, passes on and goes out into the hall.

LADY MORECOMBE, left alone, moves restlessly. Hearing the outer door close, she goes to the window, slightly draws back the curtain, and watches his departure, then stands gazing at the armchair, with her hand to her forehead.

ANNE comes in from Right. She has on a hat and carries a dressing-bag. Seeing her, LADY MORECOMBE drops her hand, and reins back from the chair.

ANNE. I am going to my father's. You will like to be alone here.

LADY M. I can leave instead.

ANNE. No. It's Colin's house.

[She is moving on.

LADY M. Wait! Was it your doing that you were apart?

ANNE. No.

LADY M. You loved each other w you married.

ANNE. We thought so.

LADY M. Were you the first to be faithful?

ANNE. It was not I who broke off life together.

LADY M. Were there scenes betw you?

ANNE. Never.

LADY M. Anne! Are you keeping a thing back?

ANNE. Nothing.

LADY M. Do you love this other m

ANNE. With all my heart.

LADY M. Did Colin love this girl?

ANNE. I can't tell you.

LADY M. Nobody can tell me anythi Oh! God! [Suddenly] I suppose are glad that he is gone?

ANNE. [Wincing] That's not fair. know it's not!

LADY M. The heart is never fair. you have none, perhaps.

ANNE. I have told you.

ACT III

Just before eleven o'clock the follo day.

*A waiting-room at the Coroner's C rather small, and furnished li railway station waiting-room fresher-looking, having wall green distemper, with a dad narrow oblong table stands pa to a long seat along the wall, Left. There are some chairs against the right-hand wall, which turns at a right angle, forward, forming an alcove in which, facing the audience, is the wide open doorway leading to lobby, public entrance, and Court. ted on the long seat are MR. ODIHAM and his DAUGHTER, and a little way from them, the maid ELLEN. At the top of the table, in a chair, sits LADY MORECOMBE, very still and alone. In the alcove and lobby is a bustle of figures, the pivot of which is the Coroner's CLERK, a moustachioed man in a gown.

ORONER'S C. Only those interested in ase.

ADY. [With aigrette] Oh! but we're interested. Can't you find us seats?

ORONER'S C. Witnesses?

ADY. [With aigrette, pushing for- a younger lady] Not exactly, but friend is a great friend of Mrs. combe.

RONER'S C. You can go and try, but Court's full.

ADY. [With aigrette] What a bore! e along, Ursula! We must get in.

PORTER. [FORMAN, showing his Press.

RONER'S C. All right—room at the I think.

The REPORTER stands a moment looking at the ODIHAMS; suddenly he sees LADY MORECOMBE beckoning with her black-gloved hand. He goes to her, standing Right of table.

PORTER. [With a little involuntary Quite! Quite!

[He goes out through the throng. COLONEL ROLAND and ANNE stand by the table, Right Forward. He makes a motion of the hand to MR. ODIHAM, and bows to LADY MORECOMBE.

MAN. [With THREE LADIES, at the door] I'm from the Air Ministry—could you manage to get us in?

CORONER'S C. [Glancing at the card] I'll see, Sir. . . . Now, then, please, only witnesses in this room. [He shepherds out figures by the door, then turns to those in the body of the room] All witnesses?

COL. ROLAND. I'm with my daughter —Mrs. Morecombe.

CORONER'S C. Oh! Very good. [To LADY MORECOMBE] And you, Madam?

LADY M. My son——

CORONER'S C. Indeed! [Respectfully] Ahem! I don't know if you wish to—er —view the proceedings, Madam? If so, I shall be happy to have a chair put for you.

LADY M. [Standing up] Yes. I will come.

CORONER'S C. [Leading] This way then, Madam.

LADY M. [Avoiding ANNE, but looking up into COLONEL ROLAND'S face] Nothing, I suppose?

He shakes his head.

LADY M. Courage!

COLONEL ROLAND nods, and she goes out, following the CLERK.

The room is now empty, but for the ODIHAMS, the MAID, ANNE, COLONEL ROLAND, and a CONSTABLE standing in the open doorway. FIGURES are still bustling outside in the entrance lobby.

COL. ROLAND. Sit down, my dear.

ANNE sits Right of the table, and idly reaches for the paper, turning it over blankly as one does at the dentist's. COLONEL ROLAND stands grasping the back of her chair, gnawing his moustache. The DETECTIVE appears in the doorway with a bit of paper in his hand. He moves quickly in a little and takes in the FIVE FIGURES, of whom ODIHAM alone notices him —with a muttered "The blanky blank!" Then, moving back, he speaks to the CONSTABLE.

DETECTIVE. [In a low voice] The three women—see they don't flit. I've got the officer, and the two doctors, that's the lot.

The CONSTABLE nods.

DETECTIVE. Right, then! I'll come for them. [He goes.

ANNE. [Suddenly turning] Don't come with me, Dad—please!

COL. ROLAND. Let you go alone, child? Impossible!

ANNE. Please, please! Father! I can't bear it, if you're there.

COL. ROLAND. My dear, I must see they treat you——

ANNE. I shall be all right, Dad—really I shall. I'll be a thousand times worse if you come. Please!

[She takes one of his buttons and twists it.

COL. ROLAND. [Muttering] Those harpies and cats—those writing monkeys—feasting on it!

ANNE. So long as you don't see, I shan't care.

COL. ROLAND. D'you think I'll not be seeing, if I stay here? I'll see every bit of it, as plain as your face.

ANNE. Nothing's so bad as it seems beforehand. [With a smile] Really and truly, I shall be all right.

COLONEL ROLAND turns abruptly away, marches up, down, and puts his hand on her shoulder.

COL. ROLAND. So be it, then. I'll stay here, and God help me.

CONSTABLE. [Moving in a step from the door] The Coroner's taken his seat, ladies.

They look at him in silence. He moves back.

ODIHAM. Time 'e took something. Hangin' about! You'd think it was a ruddy first night—this! [To the MAID] I say, come down 'ere.

The MAID moves down beside the GIRL. ANNE and the COLONEL watch silently.

ODIHAM. She's not opened 'er mouth all mornin'. However's she goin' through with this? 'Ave you got a smellin' salt about yer?

The MAID shakes her head.

ANNE. [Going across] Take one of these.

ODIHAM. Thank you, Ma'am. A s in time saves nine.

CONSTABLE. Now, please, ladies.

ANNE. [Advancing towards DA Ellen!

The MAID takes the girl's arm.

ANNE. [To ODIHAM] We'll l after her, Mr. Odiham. [Taking GIRL's hand—firmly] Come! We m see it through!

The GIRL rises and goes betw them like a sleep-walker. CONSTABLE closes them in as pass through the door. The MEN stand as if at "Attention

ODIHAM shuffles to the table, t up the paper, goes back with his seat, sits down with it on knee, rubs his hand across eyes, gives a sort of gulp, says.

ODIHAM. This Chelsea lot's pretty stuff. Wouldn't say but what they'll this afternoon.

The COLONEL starts, then m and sits on the table, facing HAM.

OL. ROLAND. Ah! They'll be a good

A short silence. They listen. Then ODIHAM takes out a pipe.
DIHAM. D'you think I could 'ave a

OL. ROLAND. I shouldn't think so.
DIHAM. Well, I must chance it. Can't
I it 'ere without. [Filling his pipe] daughter's a rare-plucked one,

L. ROLAND. Not since I cut my wis-teeth.
DIHAM. Ah! Public life! It's a put-b.
The COLONEL'S head goes round as if he heard a sound. ODIHAM, too, stays, pipe in hand, as if listening. They relax.

L. ROLAND. The beauty!
DIHAM. Well, you can't say but what lo like to see other people put gh it. What would you 'ave done, Colonel, with a show like that before yer very eyes?

COL. ROLAND. Run like a hare.

ODIHAM. [Shaking his head] Nao! Not when it come to the point. You'd 'a stood watchin' like the others, till your eyes dropped out. It's human nature to want to see all there is.

COL. ROLAND. I never would go to a bull-fight.

ODIHAM. [Meditatively] And yet you must 'ave seen a lot of blood in your time. [Pause, while they listen] Excuse me, but 'ave you a match?

The COLONEL produces a box of matches.

ODIHAM. Thank you.

[ODIHAM lights his pipe and blows a puff or two.

COL. ROLAND. What's that?

[They listen.

ODIHAM. I fancy it was a car. Some of them cars make very 'uman noises.

COL. ROLAND. Torturing women!

ODIHAM. [Puffing] Colonel, what made the Major do it? D'you think there was another woman in it?

COL. ROLAND. [Making an impatient movement] Do you take him for a Mormon?

ODIHAM. Well, there must ha' been 'ot stuff somewhere, to make him bust the boiler like that.

COL. ROLAND. God only knows why a man takes his own life!

ODIHAM. Ah! 'E 'as to know a lot.

CONSTABLE. [Moving from the door] No smoking in there, please.

ODIHAM removes his pipe and lays it on the seat. The CONSTABLE moves back.

ODIHAM. The Law wants plumbin', don't it? 'Tain't 'uman.

They listen.

ODIHAM. [Suddenly] Well, I can't stick it 'ere without a smoke. [He rises] I think I'll go and 'ang about outside, Colonel.

COLONEL ROLAND nods. ODIHAM passes him, goes out, and is seen speaking to the CONSTABLE in the lobby. The COLONEL sits down at the table with his back to the alcove, resting his head on his hands.

CONSTABLE. [Close to the door, speaking to a newcomer] Whom do you want, Sir?

The newcomer comes in—he is seen to be DARREL.

DARREL. Mrs. Morecombe.

CONSTABLE. The widow? She's in Court now, but she'll be down before long, I daresay. If you'll wait in here? Perhaps I could get word for you of whether she's been taken yet? [He receives a coin] I'll do it, Sir.

DARREL. Thank you.

He comes in; strung up to the last pitch of intensity, he walks, unseeing, across to the long seat, picking up from it the paper, dropping it again, and passing up, Back, to the head of the table, where he stands looking towards the alcove. COLONEL ROLAND has remained motionless, with his head on his hands. DARREL becomes conscious of him, and involuntarily covers the lower part of his face with his hand.

CONSTABLE. [Reappearing] They've just got through with her, Sir.

COL. ROLAND [Coming out of his stillness] With whom?

CONSTABLE. The widow, Sir. As she found the body, they took her first. [To DARREL] Sometimes witnesses comes out, and sometimes they stays—you can't tell.

The COLONEL stares at him without replying. The CONSTABLE steps back into the lobby; the COLONEL, turning, becomes half-conscious of who DARREL is, gets up and moves a step or two towards him.

DARREL. [Answering his look] Yes—I am. Colonel Roland, I suppose?

COL. ROLAND. [Drawing himself up] You have much to answer for.

DARREL. If it hadn't been for you, Sir, we should have gone off long ago.

COL. ROLAND. Do you suppose that I should wish an affair to be clandestine?

DARREL. No; but Anne——

COL. ROLAND. Why didn't you have the manliness to insist?

DARREL. [Hotly] I see no manliness in forcing the woman you love. She couldn't bear to hurt you.

COL. ROLAND. Then you should h waited till I was out of the way.

DARREL. Yes, Sir; but we are in l

COL. ROLAND. That's no excuse dishonour.

DARREL. Morecombe and she w quite estranged before I knew her.

COL. ROLAND. Is that true?

DARREL. Absolutely.

COL. ROLAND. Um! What are you ing to do now?

DARREL. Marry her—take her abr at once. I'd have cut off my hand to s her that—[He jerks his head towa the door] How long has she been the DARREL. Anne! Darling!

ANNE just shakes her head and d not answer, her lips quiver; expression is that of one who been through, without giving u something too much for nerves. She sits without mo ment, staring before her.

COL. ROLAND. Shall we go, my de [No so

DARREL. Anne! Speak!

ANNE. [Shakes her head] I—ma be wanted—again.

COL. ROLAND. By the Lord—it's much!

DARREL sinks on one knee kisses her hand. No movem He gets up abruptly and sta interrogating the COLONEL.

COL. ROLAND. Water, Anne?

ANNE. Nothing.

DARREL makes another impul movement, but the COLONEL b ons him, and they move up to head of the table.

WALD. Only just reached me.

NE. Too late.

WALD. What—— he DETECTIVE has entered, followed by the CONSTABLE.

ECTIVE. [Brusquely] Now, Sir, s this? You've got a letter?

SWALD hands the letter. The DE- TECTIVE compares the handwriting on the envelope with that of other letters, then opens it and reads swiftly.

ECTIVE. My God! Come with me, e leads out, and OSWALD follows. The CONSTABLE goes back to his place in the doorway.

REL. Who was that?

COL. ROLAND. Morecombe's best man.

ANNE has turned to the table, and is sitting with her forehead on her hand.

COL. ROLAND. Speak to her now!

He moves up the room and stands with his back turned. DARREL goes to the front end of the table and bends over her.

DARREL. Anne!

ANNE. Who minds being skinned? Do I show? Am I bleeding? Their eyes!

[Stir in the lobby.

CONSTABLE. [Moving in] The Sergeant's sent down to say you won't be required further, Ma'am. [Moves out.

DARREL. Come, Anne, come—out of this!

ANNE. [Turning up her face with closed eyes] Put my mask on, Geof—it's slipped!

DARREL. [Touching her face] Darling!

[He takes her arm and leads her out.

COL ROLAND. [Spinning round and coming quickly down] Begad, I'd like um at the end of a pistol!

[He levels his hand as if to fire.

CONSTABLE. Beg pardon, Sir?

COL. ROLAND. [Conscious of the comic] Not you, my man.

CONSTABLE. Anything I can get for you, Sir?

COL. ROLAND. Yes—human nature with its mouth open. [He goes out.

The CONSTABLE'S mouth opens; rolling his eyes, he looks round the empty room as if for damage done, adjusts a chair, takes up the paper, folds it; crosses to the far side and comes on ODIHAM'S pipe, takes it up rather as if he were arresting somebody, holds it out, looks at it, examining it as if it were a piece of evidence, then places it in his side pocket and buttons it up. Then, with a final look round he takes the paper and returns towards the door.

ODIHAM'S VOICE. [Outside] Take her out in the air. Shan't be a tick; I left my pipe.

He comes in and crosses to the long bench. The CONSTABLE regards him with an unmoved face.

ODIHAM. [Puzzled] 'Ere's where I left it. [To the CONSTABLE] Seen a pipe?

CONSTABLE. What sort o' pipe?

ODIHAM. Briar—bit gone in the stem.

CONSTABLE. Any marks on it?

ODIHAM. Marks? What d'you think? Tattooed on the left forearm? Just a pipe.

CONSTABLE. [Producing pipe] This the article?

ODIHAM. That's it!

CONSTABLE. By rights I ought to hand it in at Scotland Yard.

[He seems to weigh the pipe.

ODIHAM. Aoh! I shouldn't like you to be wastin' your time over me. [Holding out a bob] 'Ow's that?

CONSTABLE. [Taking the bob] A pipe's a man's friend.

ODIHAM. [Taking the pipe] Ah! about the only one 'e 'as. 'Ave you got a light?

The CONSTABLE hands him a box of matches and ODIHAM lights his pipe.

ODIHAM. Well, you 'aven't too cheery a job among the bodies—So long!

The CONSTABLE'S mouth opens, but ODIHAM has hurried out.

The CONSTABLE puts the bob away and steps out into the lobby. His voice is heard.

CONSTABLE. Now then, make way for the Jury, there! In here, gentlemen. You'll find all in order for considering your verdict. In here.

He comes back into the doorway. And the JURY pass him one by one; eight decent men fresh from a painful scene, and divided in expression between relief and responsibility. The FOREMAN, a veterinary surgeon's assistant, has a letter in his hand.

CONSTABLE. [Moving in after them] Got everything you want, gentlemen?

FOREMAN. Yes, thank you.

The CONSTABLE goes out and closes the door.

FOREMAN. We might as well sit down while we're thinking it over.

FOUR JURYMEN sit on the long seat, Left; THREE on chairs to Right of table. The FOREMAN sits at the head of the table.

FOREMAN. Well, gentlemen, we're clear, I suppose, that deceased came his death on Monday night last betw eight and nine o'clock, in his own h at Kensington?

There is a general assent.

FOREMAN. That's agreed then. N did he take his own life? That's the ond question we have to answer.

2ND JURYMAN. [Next on Left of F MAN—a greyheaded man in a s way of business] Can't be a doubt a that, after the letter, and what the tors said. [Pause.]

FOREMAN. Anyone who has a do give it a voice, please. [No voi We're agreed, then. He took his life. Now, what was his state of n when he took it? That's the third q tion before us.

3RD JURYMAN. [Second on Right FOREMAN—a goggle-eyed commer traveller] Ah! It'll take a bit of swerin', in my opinion. I'd like that ter read again, Mr. Foreman. It painful letter, and I'd like it read ag

HE FOREMAN'S voice has been distinctly husky during the reading of the last words, and an audible sniff has been heard from the 3RD JURYMAN. In fact, all the JURY-MEN have shown signs of discomfort, except the youngest, almost a boy, and the 6TH JURYMAN, who have listened unmoved.

You can't honestly say there's in it you or I couldn't have written. He's got everything exact, even to the split with his wife.

6TH JURYMAN. Ah! We needn't think about that lady.

3RD JURYMAN. No better than she should be, I should say.

5TH JURYMAN. Well, there was his own affair with the girl.

2ND JURYMAN. Pity they brought that in, in my opinion. The Coroner was right to stop that evidence, when he got the letter. After all, the poor fellow's gone.

6TH JURYMAN. Ah! I rather think that 'tec put his foot in his mouth, there.

4TH JURYMAN. Saved a faint, anyway, stopping her evidence—never saw a girl so white; and I've had some in my shop.

FOREMAN. We must keep to the point—his sanity.

6TH JURYMAN. He was sane enough when he took the girl to Richmond, anyway.

5TH JURYMAN. The day before—you can't count that.

7TH JURYMAN. The letter was the last thing he did; we needn't go further back than that.

FOREMAN. To my mind, gentlemen, the important words are the "slowly creeping on me again." As a Vet, I can tell you that a dog knows when he's going mad. And you may take it from me that as soon as he knows it, you've got to destroy him—practically he's mad already. Is a man still sane when he feels insanity creeping on him? That's the real question.

6TH JURYMAN. If he was insane when he wrote that letter, we're all as mad as 'atters.

7TH JURYMAN. There it is, you see: the Coroner warned us not to bring him in of unsound mind unless we truly felt he was.

6TH JURYMAN. Ah! that gentleman—full of his own position! Did he pay any attention to that question I asked him? Not 'e!

3RD JURYMAN. [Suddenly] Hero in the war! I remember that flight of 'is perfectly. And there he lies—poor feller!

5TH JURYMAN. I'm thinking of his family.

6TH JURYMAN. We're not concerned with the widder in this case; she 'as 'er consolations.

5TH JURYMAN. His mother hasn't.

6TH JURYMAN. Ah! That was the little one in black.

FOREMAN. There's always someone to be hurt. Well, gentlemen, it must be one thing or the other. [A silence.

7TH JURYMAN. I can't see a madman using the words "off his chump."

3RD JURYMAN. Why not? It's a very 'andy expression.

7TH JURYMAN. I think if a man was mad, he wouldn't use slang.

2ND JURYMAN. Some men'd use slang in their graves. [To his neighbour—the boy, 8TH JURYMAN] What do you say?

8TH JURYMAN. [Startled] I? Oh! Mad.

4TH JURYMAN. Mr. Foreman, I'd like to say a word for the Coroner. I thought him very fair; and on the whole I should say he was against Insanity.

6TH JURYMAN. Too many insane verdicts lately; that's what's the matter with him. We'll vote independent of that gentleman.

FOREMAN. Very well! I'll take a vote. . . . Those in favour of unsound mind hold up their hands.

His own, and those of the 2ND, 3RD, 5TH, and 8TH JURYMEN are held up.

FOREMAN. Contrary?

Those of the 7TH and 4TH are held up. The 6TH does not hold up his at all.

6TH JURYMAN. I thought so; not agreed—we want a little more discussion. They've brought us away from our business—let 'em wait for us.

7TH JURYMAN. Honestly, I don't see how he could have written that letter if he'd been insane at the time of writing.

4TH JURYMAN. I really think gentlemen, we should follow the Coroner, with his experience.

6TH JURYMAN. Well, I don't.

5TH JURYMAN. [Heatedly] Then why didn't you hold up your hand?

6TH JURYMAN. Wait and see.

FOREMAN. [Calming them] Now, gentlemen, please. If you'd like to have my views. I've been on a Coroner's Jury before. In my opinion there's always a doubt in these cases, and it does no ha to anyone to give the benefit of it to deceased. That's human nature, and man nature's the best guide, after Who can tell to a tick when 'a ma over the edge? I don't see what t want to ask the question for at Where and when did a man die? Did die by his own hand? Yes. But what his state of mind? No. Sound or sound, he's dead. In this case he t us himself he was mad, or on the p of it. The benefit o' the doubt, gen men.

4TH JURYMAN. Mr. Foreman, I th you're right, after all.

2ND JURYMAN. Certainly he is. common sense. Speaking from the bu ness point of view: am I going to d deal with a man who writes a le like that? Course I'm not. That's plain test.

7TH JURYMAN. Well, if you put that way—I'm sure I don't want to inhuman.

6TH JURYMAN. He was as sane you or me when he wrote that letter.

FOREMAN. Do I understand that follow the Coroner, after all, Sir?

6TH JURYMAN. Not much! Unso mind, every time.

FOREMAN. We're agreed then. The ceased took his own life, in his house, between eight and nine in evening, on Monday last, when of sound mind. Shall we offer an exp sion of sympathy with his family?

6TH JURYMAN. Not the widder—fine it to his mother.

FOREMAN. Well, perhaps that'll the case better. [General assent.] C along then, gentlemen. We'll go and give it them.

[They file

The CONSTABLE comes in, loo over the room as if for ano pipe. LADY MORECOMBE co in.

LADY M. Officer!

CONSTABLE. Madam!

LADY M. Can I see the reporters fore they go?

CONSTABLE. I'm afraid it's not in book, Madam, for any witness——

LADY M. I was not a witness.

CONSTABLE. Ah! I remember—you're deceased's mother. I don't know, I'm e, Madam. It's not in my depart- nt.

[He stands stock.

ADY M. I know that. [She puts a r into his hand] I only want you to me the first who comes down.

ONSTABLE. Well, I see no reason, am, why you shouldn't see the Press, ne private person to another.

ADY M. Then please——!

ONSTABLE. I will, Ma'am; very glad o you the service. [He goes out.

LADY MORECOMBE moves to the end of the table and stands trembling, working her lips. The CONSTABLE returns, followed by the REPORTER, FORMAN.

ONSTABLE. This is the first down, am. Lady wants to see you, Sir.

He withdraws. The REPORTER moves towards LADY MORECOMBE.

EPORTER. Yes. Lady Morecombe? se me, I'm in a hurry.

DY M. I've been rude to you, I'm d. Please forgive me.

EPORTER. Oh! Our backs are broad, c you.

DY M. As a human being in dis- . I beg you: please don't put that nto your report!

EPORTER. [Affected] Lady More- e, I—I must hand it in; but I'll y ask them not to mention her. I ay they won't; her evidence didn't r as it turned out. You left before verdict. It's "Unsound mind," if any consolation to you.

NSTABLE [Appearing] Here's an- for you, Madam. Press Associa-

REPORTER. [From just within the way] What is it?

DY M. My son's name, Sir. The —

REPORTER. Oh! That's all right, m. The Coroner's just said she 't be mentioned.

ORTER. Thank the Lord! I'm so Lady Morecombe!

ADY MORECOMBE hides her face, overcome for the first time. The 2ND REPORTER, with a sound of sympathy, follows the 1ST out.

LADY MORECOMBE has turned to the wall, Left, weeping silently behind her handkerchief. THREE LADIES and the MAN from the Air Ministry have come into the alcove.

THE MAN. Well, the show's over. I've sent for the car.

1ST LADY. I'd no idea it'd be so frightfully interesting, John.

2ND LADY. I've always wanted to see a case.

3RD LADY. Never was so thrilled in my life as when that girl——

2ND LADY. Oh! The wife's evidence was much the most exciting——

1ST LADY. She was rather wonderful, I thought. It must have been a nasty jar to have to——

3RD LADY. There's nothing like real life, after all. Beats the theatre hollow. Only it was much too short.

THE MAN. Of course the verdict was tosh. A man isn't insane when he knows what he's doing.

1ST LADY. But I thought Juries always said "Insane" as a matter of course?

3RD LADY. Wasn't the Coroner amusin'? So professional!

2ND LADY. Well, poor man, what else could he be?

THE MAN. Morecombe's a real loss.

3RD LADY. It was a piece of luck the letter only coming like that—all the drama was in seeing the witnesses——

THE MAN. Pretty rough on his wife, and that girl!

2ND LADY. Oh! Well, bad luck, of course. Still, that was the really exciting part.

1ST LADY. Thanks awfully, John, for bringing us down. It was too thrilling!

THE MAN. Hsssh!

A sudden silence comes over them; they have become aware of the black figure of LADY MORECOMBE standing close by, looking at them.

3RD LADY. Er— The car must be there by now!

Like a bunch of frightened poultry they fluster through the doorway and are lost in the throng outside.

LADY M. [To herself—very low] The Show is over.

Curtain.

ESCAPE

AN EPISODIC PLAY IN A PROLOGUE AND TWO PARTS

le Park at night. Summer. The Row with its iron railing, footwalk, seats, trees and bushes behind. A WOMAN, or GIRL (you can't tell), is sitting alone, in dim radiance from lamps unseen to Right and Left. Her painted mask is not unattractive, her attitude slack and uneasy. A PLAIN CLOTHES MAN passes Right to Left, glances at her inviting him and increases his pace. By the expression on her face as he approaches and recedes, it is easy for him to see what she is. TWO PEOPLE pass without glancing at her at all—they are talking of what "he said to me" and "I said to him." Then nobody passes, and, powdering her nose, she seems preparing to shift along, when from the Left, MATT DENANT appears strolling. He is a young man, tallish and athletic, dressed as if he has been racing in hot weather; he has a pair of race glasses and a cigar. The GIRL shifts forward on her seat as he approaches. He is going by when she looks suddenly up and says in a low voice: "Good evening!" He halts, looks at her, gives a little shrug, carries his hand to his hat, and answering, "Good evening!" is moving on when she speaks again.

RL. Have you a match?

She is holding out a cigarette; he stops and hands her his cigarette lighter.

RL. [Fingering the lighter] Gold?

ATT. Brass.

RL. Have one?

[Offering her cigarette case.

MATT. Thanks, I'm smoking.

He shows her his cigar; resting his foot on the seat and dangling his race glasses.

GIRL. Been racing?

MATT. Goodwood.

GIRL. I went to see the Jubilee this year.

MATT. And what did you back?

GIRL. Everything that didn't win. It's rotten when you don't back winners.

MATT. Don't you like the horses?

GIRL. They look pretty.

MATT. Prettiest things in the world.

GIRL. Pretty as women?

MATT. Saving your presence.

GIRL. Do you mean that?

MATT. Well, you get a woman once in a way that can arch her neck.

GIRL. You don't like women—that's clear.

MATT. Not too much.

GIRL. [Smiling] You speak your mind, anyway.

MATT. If you ask me, they've got such a lot of vice about 'em compared with horses.

GIRL. And who puts vice into them?

MATT. I know—you all say men, but d'you believe it?

GIRL. [With a laugh] Well, I don't know. Don't men put vice into horses?

MATT. [Struck] M'yes! [Sitting down] All the same, there's nothing wilder than a wild horse—I've seen 'em out West.

GIRL. There's nothing so wild as a wild, wild woman.

A momentary silence while they stare at each other.

MATT. Women haven't the excuse of horses—they've been tame since Eve gave Adam his tea.

GIRL. Um! Garden of Eden! Must have been something like Hyde Park—there was a prize cop there, anyway.

MATT. D'you come here often?

GIRL. [Nodding] Where else can one go? They're so particular now.

MATT. They do seem to keep you on the run.

GIRL. What are you—soldier?

MATT. Once upon a time.

GIRL. What now?

MATT. Thinking of being a parson.

GIRL. [Laughs] You've got money of your own, then?

MATT. A little.

GIRL. [With a sigh] If I had money of my own, d'you know what I'd do?

MATT. Get rid of it.

GIRL. Just what I wouldn't. If ever I got myself dependent on you men again, [Very grimly] shut my lights off.

MATT. Not like the lady under laughing gas.

GIRL. What was the matter with her?

MATT. Kept shouting, "I don't want to be a free, independent, economic agent! I want to be loved."

GIRL. She was wrong—No, sir! Get my head under a second time? Not much! But we can't save—don't make enough. So there you are! It's a good bit worse than it used to be, they say——

MATT. The ordinary girl more free and easy now, you mean?

GIRL. [Grimly] The ordinary girl?

MATT. Well, you don't call yourself ordinary, do you?

The GIRL sits quite still and doesn't answer.

MATT. Sorry! Didn't mean to hurt you.

GIRL. Give me the fellow that does: he doesn't hurt half so much. But you're quite right. [Bitterly] There isn't much excuse for us, now.

MATT. Aren't we getting a bit solemn?

GIRL. The gay girl—eh? They say you get used to anything: but I'll tell you—you never get used to playing the canary when you don't feel like it.

MATT. Ah! I always sympathised with canaries—expected to sing, and so permanently yellow.

GIRL. It was nice of you to sit down and talk.

MATT. Thanks; it's all secondary ed cation.

She slides her hand along to h with a card.

GIRL. Here's my address; you mi come and see me now and then.

MATT. [Twiddling the card—amu and embarrassed] On verra!

GIRL. What's that?

MATT. An expression of hope.

GIRL. [Mouth opening] Ow! H about now?

MATT. Thanks—afraid not—due so where at ten.

GIRL. Another?

MATT. No.

GIRL. You don't like me, I believe.

MATT. [With a shrug] Oh! Don't s that. You're original.

GIRL. Original sin.

MATT. There are worse things, guess.

GIRL. You bet! There's modest wo If that isn't worse! Not that this i pretty life. It's just about as rotten it can be.

MATT. How did you get into it?

GIRL. Cut it out! You all ask that, a you can take it from me you never told. Well! I belong to the oldest p fession in the world! That isn't t either—there's an older.

MATT. Not really.

GIRL. The cop's. Mine wouldn't e have been a profession but for them.

MATT. Good for you!

GIRL. It isn't good for me. Look in Bow Street on Monday morning.

MATT. To see 'em shoot the sitt pheasant?—no, thanks. The Law i exactly sporting. Can't be, I supp if it's got to keep the course clear.

GIRL. They might wait till one ma oneself a nuisance.

MATT. Ever been run in?

GIRL. [With a look, and a decis Um! Not yet! [Suddenly] What ca do? If we don't make a sign, who' know us?

MATT. That's delightful.

GIRL. Clean streets!—that's the Clean men! That'd be better!

MATT. And then where'd you be?

GIRL. [Passionately] Not here!

MATT. [After staring at her] kettle and the pot. What! Give me ses and dogs, all the time.

IRL. I've got a cat.
[ATT. Persian?
IRL. [Nodding] A real beauty. [Sudly] Wouldn't you like to come and him?
He shakes his head, rises, takes his glasses, and holds out his hand. She is going to take it—then draws her hand back sharply, frowning and biting her lips. He gives a shrug, salutes, and moves on. She catches at his sleeve, misses it, sits a second, then rises and follows. Unseen by her, the PLAIN CLOTHES MAN has reappeared, Left. He moves swiftly and grasps her arm just as she is vanishing Right. The GIRL gives a little squeal as he draws her back towards the seat. She resists.
IRL. Who are you?
LAIN CLOTHES MAN. Plain clothes.
And, as she still resists, he tries to calm her by a slight twist of the arm.
IRL. You brute—you brute!
LAIN CLOTHES MAN. Now then—tly, and you won't get hurt.
IRL. I wasn't doing anything.
LAIN CLOTHES MAN. Oh! no, of se not.
IRL. [Looking after MATT] I wasn't,
l you; and he'll tell you so too!
MATT has reappeared, Right.
IRL. Won't you? You talked to me
our own accord?
ATT. I did. Who may you be?
AIN CLOTHES MAN. [Showing his
] This woman accosted you. I've rved her carefully, and not for the time.
ATT. Well, you've made a blooming
r. We had a chat, that's all.
AIN CLOTHES MAN. I saw her ac-
you. I saw her try to detain you—
I've seen her do it before now.
ATT. I don't care what you've seen re now—you can't arrest her for
You didn't see it this time.
AIN CLOTHES MAN. [Still holding GIRL and looking at MATT steadily] I know perfectly well the woman accosted you—and you'd better keep out of this.

MATT. Let the girl go, then. You're exceeding your duty.

PLAIN CLOTHES MAN. What do you know about my duty? It's my duty to keep the park decent, man or woman. Now then, are you going to clear off?

MATT. No, I'm going to stay on.

PLAIN CLOTHES MAN. All right then, you can follow us to the station.

MATT. Mayn't two people talk! I've made no complaint.

PLAIN CLOTHES MAN. I know this woman, I tell you. Don't interfere with me, or I shall want you too.

MATT. You can have me if you let the girl go.

PLAIN CLOTHES MAN. Now look here, I'm being very patient. But if you don't stop hindering me in the execution of my duty, I'll summon assistance and you'll both go to the station.

MATT. Don't lose your hair—I tell you, on my honour, this lady did not annoy me in the least. On the contrary——

PLAIN CLOTHES MAN. She was carrying on her profession here, as she's done before; my orders are to prevent that, and she's going to be charged. This is the third night I've watched her.

GIRL. I've never seen your face before.

PLAIN CLOTHES MAN. No, but I've seen yours—I've given you plenty of rope. That's enough, now—

[He puts his whistle to his mouth.

MATT. It's a rotten shame! Drop that girl's arm!

He lays his hand on the PLAIN CLOTHES MAN'S arm. The PLAIN CLOTHES MAN blows his whistle, drops the GIRL'S arm and seizes MATT.

MATT. [Breaking from him; to the GIRL] Run for it!

GIRL. Oh! no—don't fight! The police have got it on you all the time. I'll go with him.

MATT. [With fists up, keeping the PLAIN CLOTHES MAN at arm's length] Run, I tell you. He'll have his work cut out with me.

But the PLAIN CLOTHES MAN is spryer than he thinks, runs in and catches him round the body.

GIRL. Oh! Oh!

MATT. No, you don't!

In the violent struggle the PLAIN CLOTHES MAN'S bowler hat falls off. MATT emerges at arm's length again, squaring up.

MATT. Come on, then, if you will have it!

The PLAIN CLOTHES MAN rushes in. He gets MATT'S right straight from the shoulder on the point of the jaw, topples back, and goes down like a log.

GIRL. Oh! Oh!

MATT. Run, you little idot; run!

GIRL. [Aghast] Oh! he hit his head —on the rail! I heard the crack. See, he don't move!

MATT. Well, of course, I knocked him out. [He goes a step nearer, looking down] The rail—did he——?

GIRL. [Kneeling and feeling the PLAIN CLOTHES MAN'S head] Feel!

MATT. My God! That was a wump. I say!

GIRL. I told you not to fight. What did you want to fight for?

MATT. [Pulling open the PLAIN CLOTHES MAN'S coat, and diving for his heart] I can't feel it. Curse! Now we can't leave him. [Feeling for the heart] Good God!

GIRL. [Bending and snatching at his arm] Quick! Before anybody comes. Across the grass back there. Who'd know?

MATT. [Listening] I can't leave the poor devil like this. [Looking round] Take his hat; go and get some water in it from the Serpentine.

The GIRL picks up the hat and stands undecided.

GIRL. [Agonised] No, no! Come away! It's awful, this! Suppose—suppose he's dead! [She pulls at him.

MATT. [Shaking her off] Don't be a little fool! Go and get some water. Go on!

The GIRL wrings her hands, then turns and runs off Left, with the hat. MATT continues to kneel, rubbing the PLAIN CLOTHES MAN'S temples, feeling his pu listening at his heart.

MATT. I don't see how it's possil [With a gesture of despair he resu his efforts to revive the body. Sudde he looks up.]

TWO POLICEMEN have come fr the Right.

POLICEMAN. What's this?

MATT. I don't know. I'm a little afr he——

POLICEMAN. What! Who is [Looking at the face] Phew! One ours! [Bending, kneeling, putting back of his hand to the mouth] No breath! How did this happen?

MATT. [Pointing to the rail] knocked his head on that.

POLICEMAN. Where's his hat?

MATT. It fell off. Some one's gone get water in it.

POLICEMAN. Who?

MATT. A girl——

POLICEMAN. He blew his whistle. you hit him?

MATT. There was a row. He set me. I smote him on the jaw. He fell b and hit his head on the rail.

POLICEMAN. What was the about?

MATT. [Putting his hands to his he Oh! God knows. Original sin.

POLICEMAN. [To the other POLI MAN] Mate, stay with him. I'll get ambulance. [To MATT] And you—co with me!

The curtain falls.

PART I

EPISODE I

More than a year has passed. On prison farm, Dartmoor, in a he fog. The stone wall of the field r along the back (on the backclo and a stone wall joins it on Left. MATT DENANT and a fe convict are picking up the pota they have dug up earlier. They but dimly seen in the fog, flin the potatoes right and left into baskets between them. They speaking in low voices.

ATT. The poor blighter was dead, I got five years for manslaughter.

ELLOW CONVICT. Cripes! A cop! You e lucky not to swing, mate.

ATT. The girl stood by me like k. If she hadn't come forward——

ELLOW CONVICT. Lucky there, too. st of 'em wouldn't. They're too mor- scared. 'Ow much you got left to do?

ATT. Three years, if I behave like a ter saint.

[He stops and straightens himself.

ELLOW CONVICT. I got four. I say, 're a torf, yn't you?

ATT. Toff! [With a laugh] Item, Oxford accent; item, one objection eing spoken to like a dog.

ELLOW CONVICT. Hush! [Jerking his nb towards the wall, Right] Fog t prevent 'em hearin', blight 'em!

ATT. It's come up mighty sudden. nk it's going to last?

ELLOW CONVICT. After a wet spell— time o' year, when the wind's gone ts. They'll be roundin' us up in a ute, you'll see—and 'ome to Blighty. es 'em nervous—fog. That's when get the escapes.

ATT. No one's ever got away from , they say.

ELLOW CONVICT. There've been a l few tries, though.

ATT. Gosh! I'd like to have one.

ELLOW CONVICT. Don't you do it, . You want clothes, you want ey, you want a car, to give you a g's chance. And then they'd get you. moor's the 'ell of a place. I say, must 'ave hit that cop a fair knock!

ATT. Just an ordinary knock-out on jaw. It wasn't that. He landed the of his head on the Row rail. [He mes potato picking] Poor devil! He n't married, luckily.

LLOW CONVICT. Luckily? Well, you r know about that. But get 'im off chest, mate—'e wouldn't sit on —no more than an 'Un did in the . That's a good fair potato.

[Holding one up.

The figure of a WARDER is dimly seen coming along from the Right under the wall. He stops.

ARDER. No talking there! When ve finished that row, pick back the next and then stand by to fall in. [No answer from the CONVICTS] Hear me? Answer, can't you?

FELLOW CONVICT. Right, sir!

The WARDER'S figure is seen moving back.

FELLOW CONVICT. Nice man, ain't he? Wot'd I tell you? Early 'ome to tea.

MATT. [Very low] Like a dog! Three more years—like a dog!

FELLOW CONVICT. 'E's all right, reely. It's the fog. Fog makes 'em nervous; an' when a man's nervous I've always noticed 'e speaks like that.

MATT. Yes; well, I can't get used to it.

FELLOW CONVICT. Too particular, you torfs—get too much corn when you're two-year-olds.

MATT. [Sharp and low] You know the moor—where's Two Bridges?

FELLOW CONVICT. There—a mile.

MATT. And Tavistock?

FELLOW CONVICT. [Pointing right back] Seven. Guv'nor—don't do it. There ain't a chance in a million. You'll only get pneumonium in this stinkin' wet, and they'll have you into the bar- gain, sure as eggs—bread and water, cells, and the rest of it.

MATT. I got out of Germany.

FELLOW CONVICT. Out of Germany? Cripes! That was none so dusty!

MATT. They've got no dogs here now, have they?

FELLOW CONVICT. Don't fancy they 'ave. But, Guv'nor, the whole country- side round 'ere's agynst you. They don't like convicts. Funny, yn't it?

They have reached the end of the row, Left, and stop, stooping, with their heads close together.

MATT. Draw me a plan with this stick.

FELLOW CONVICT. Blimy! [Marking the earth] 'Ere's the main road, and 'ere's the cross road to Tavistock. 'Ere's the Inn at Two Bridges, and 'ere's Post Bridge. 'Ere's Bee Tor Cross, ten to twelve mile. Chagford up there, Moreton 'ampstead 'ere.

MATT. What's across the main road from Two Bridges?

FELLOW CONVICT. Moor. A long bit o' wood about 'ere; then 'Ambledon; then you drops into fields to Widecombe; then up, and more moor to Heytor and Bovey. [Pronounce BUVVY] There's rail at Bovey or Lustleigh, or Moreton or Tavistock, and much good that'll do you with everybody as eager to see you as if you was the Prince of Wyles! Out this way you got Fox Tor Mire—ruddy bad bog, that!

A moment's silence while MATT studies the chart in the soil.

WARDER'S VOICE. [Off] Hurry up with that last row—you two men!

[The fog grows thicker.

MATT. [Smearing out the chart with his foot] It's real thick now. Gosh! I'll have a shot!

They move back, Right, beginning the last row.

FELLOW CONVICT. [Jerking his thumb Left] There's another blighter thirty yards out on the wall there. 'E'll shoot.

MATT. I know. I'm going over that wall in the corner, and then along under his nose on the near side. Ten to one he'll be looking out on the off side in this fog. If that chap there [Jerking his head, Right] doesn't spot me, I'll get by.

FELLOW CONVICT. You're mad, Guv'nor. They'll shoot at sight. And if they don't see you—in ten minutes I'll have finished this row, an' they're bound to know you're gone. You 'aven't the chance of a cock-louse.

MATT. All right, friend, don't worry! A bullet'd be a nice change for me. If I don't get one—I'll give 'em a run for their money.

FELLOW CONVICT. Well, if you must go, mate—Strike the main road and run that way. [Pointing] In this fog they'll 'ave to take us back before they dare start after you. You'll find a scrap of a wood a bit beyond the river on the left side. Get into it and cover yourself with leaves till it's dead dark. Then you'll still be close to the road and you can myke shift in a stack or something till the morning. If you go wandering about the moor all night in this fog, you won't get nowhere, and you'll be done in stiff before dawn.

MATT. Thanks. Sooner the better, now—— Never stop to look at a fence. Next time the steam's full on. [Puts some potatoes in his pocket] Pomm crus—sauce Dartmoor. Can one these raw? I ate turnips in Germany FELLOW CONVICT. Never tried, Gu nor. Tyke this.

[He holds out a slice of bre

MATT. Thanks awfully. You're a go chap.

FELLOW CONVICT. Wish you lu Wish I was comin' too, but I 'aven't g the pluck, an' that's a fact.

MATT. Now! Turn your head t other way and keep it there. Rememb me to Blighty. So long!

He moves three steps away from FELLOW CONVICT, pauses a fe seconds, then suddenly, stoopi low, runs to the wall, Left, and over it like a cat. In the mini of silence that follows, one can s the CONVICT listening.

FELLOW CONVICT. Went over to th wall, sir.

WARDER. [Appearing] He's not the Now then! Where is he?

FELLOW CONVICT. No use arstin' t I don' know where he is.

WARDER. Come with me. [He marc sharply along the wall back, towards Left. Halting] Convict! Out there! A swer! Warder! You, Williams! Any passed you? Lost a man here!

VOICE OF SECOND WARDER. No on passed.

FIRST WARDER. Sharp, then! There man gone!

SECOND WARDER appears on the of the wall.

SECOND WARDER. He must ha' got past

COND WARDER. Leave some for me,

FIRST WARDER. Don't 'ear nothing.
[He is about to put the flask to his mouth again.
SECOND WARDER. Thought I heard a scraping noise. Shall I show a glim?
FIRST WARDER. Better not!
[They listen.
SECOND WARDER. There's ponies round here.
FIRST WARDER. This fellow was a toff.
SECOND WARDER. Um! Captain in the War.
FIRST WARDER. Him that killed the 'tec in Hyde Park. He's a sporty beggar. Got blood in him. That's the worst sort when it comes to an escape—they run till they drop.
SECOND WARDER. Man of education—might have had more sense than to run for it. He must know he can't get off.
FIRST WARDER. There's a spirit in some of these higher class chaps you can't break. D'you know that lawyer in the left wing—embezzlement? That chap gives me the creeps. He's got the self-possession of an image.
SECOND WARDER. I'm sorry for some of these fellows, but I'm damned if I'm ever sorry for a gentleman. They ought to know better than to get themselves here. And, as you say, they've got the devil's brass.
FIRST WARDER. Still—up on the ladder and down with a whump—it hits 'em harder than it does the others.
SECOND WARDER [Yawning] Wish I was in bed! [Startlingly] There it is again! [They listen] It'll be a pony. A warder's life's about the limit. If it wasn't for the missus, I'd sooner sweep streets.
FIRST WARDER. I've got used to it, barring a circus like this. The devil himself couldn't get used to that. It's only fit for the movies.
SECOND WARDER. I believe you. Did you see that picture with Duggie in it? 'Ow'd you think 'e does that roof business? We got some pretty tidy cat burglars, but I don't believe there's one could do what he does.
FIRST WARDER. Well, I'll tell you. I think he has spring heels; and I notice his hands are very blurry in the picture. I believe he holds a rope, and they take that out afterwards, by some process.

SECOND WARDER. Never thought o' that! But when he falls and catches on that ledge?

FIRST WARDER. That's an optical deception. Some of those movie jossers ought to be in prison, the way they deceive the public.

SECOND WARDER. I never saw anything on the screen I liked better than "My Old Dutch"! That fair got me. I took the missus, and I tell you there wasn't a dry eye about the pair of us.

FIRST WARDER. Charlie knocks me. I feel a better man after I've seen 'im. Now, why is that?

SECOND WARDER. 'E's very 'uman. Must make a pot of money.

FIRST WARDER. I'm wet through—give me another drain. [Gurgling sounds] If I catch that chap, you'll 'ave to stop me quick, or I'll manhandle him for sure.

SECOND WARDER. Same here. We'd better toss up which stops the other. Call!

FIRST WARDER. 'Eads.

SECOND WARDER. Which is it? Throw a glim.

The FIRST WARDER throws from an electric torch the first light of the scene. Their two faces, on the footlight side of the road, are seen close together over the coin.

SECOND WARDER. Tails—You've lost. [The glim is dowsed] 'Ow do we stand, then? Do I stop you, or do you stop me?

FIRST WARDER. You stop me.

SECOND WARDER. No. I won. That means I get the go at him. Lawd Gawd! what a night! Just feel if that rope's all right across the road.

FIRST WARDER. It's taut. Bit too low, though—ought to catch him mid-thigh by rights.

SECOND WARDER. You trust me, old hoss; if it catches 'im as high as that, he stops and goes off sideways, or turns and runs back. It should catch him just below the knee. Then, ten to one he goes over, and we're on to him before he can get up. He'll be goin' a good bat, reme ber. You'll find me on 'is 'ead when come to stoppin' me.

FIRST WARDER. To think we ca even smoke. D'you hold with givin' p oners tobacco, Williams?

SECOND WARDER. On the whole, I It sweetens 'em, and that's better for I'd give 'em two pipes a week, and s 'em if they gave a warder any trou I've got one or two fellers I'm quite fo of. I'd be glad for 'em to have a sm every day. Listen! [They listen. In whisper] Footsteps! They are!

FIRST WARDER. Yes.

SECOND WARDER. [Still in a whisp Look here, mate! Just before he g to the rope, I'll throw the light into face, then dowse it sharp. He'll start run forward and go head foremo Stand by! [They list

FIRST WARDER. He's comin' on! Su pose it isn't him?

SECOND WARDER. Must chance th I'll throw the light as I say——

EPISODE III

Thirty-two hours have passed. A b room at an Inn on the moor. Du with streaks of daylight coming from two curtained windows, ba opening on to a long balcony. tween them a bed juts into room. Right, forward, a dressi table with chair. Left, back, a wa stand. Left, forward, a door o ing inwards. At foot of the bed chair with a woman's underg ments thrown on it. A dressi gown over the footrail of the bed, some slippers on the left side of the bed. A SHINGLED LADY asleep in the bed. Knocking on the door,

t.

ADY. [Sleepily] Come in!
A MAID enters with a can of hot water, which she places on the washstand, Left.
IAID. 'Alf past seven, madam.
ADY. [Yawning] What sort of day?
IAID. Foggy still. Taking a bath, lam?
ADY. Yes. Oh! My husband's com- back this evening. I'm to be moved c to the double room.
IAID. Yes, madam; they told me.
She has drawn aside the curtains, Left, and now moves round and draws back the curtains, Right.
AID. That escaped convict, madam; haven't got him yet.
ADY. No? How thrilling!
AID. It's the fog. He's been out ly two days. They say it's the young who killed the detective in Hyde k, that made such a fuss.
ADY. Oh? That Captain Denant! I ember. It might have been worse,
AID. Of course they'll catch him—no ever gets off.
ADY. Don't they?
AID. Oh! no, madam! It wouldn't r do.
ADY. I should have thought in fog this——
AID. You see, they got to eat and clothes. That's where they're ht.
ADY. [Yawning] This horrible fog! e can't ride or fish, or even walk. l I get up, or shall I——?
AID. [Rather coldly] Just as you se, madam.
ADY. [With a laugh] Well, I sup- I'd better.
AID. I'll turn the bath on.
ADY. Thank you.
The MAID goes out, and the LADY, in her pyjamas, emerges from bed, feels for her slippers, and puts on her dressing-gown. She goes to a window, and looks out.
It is a French window, and slightly open on a short hook.
LADY. Ugh! What a day!
Taking sponge and bath towel from the washstand, she goes to the door and out. As soon as the door is shut there is a commotion where the bed touches the wall, and from behind the window curtain MATT DENANT cautiously emerges, glances quickly round, and stretches himself. He looks haggard, sodden, and crumpled, and has his boots in his hand.
MATT. [Muttering] A lady! Dash it! I must get out!
He goes to the window and looks cautiously out, then recoils, drawing in his breath with a hiss. Then, after once more glancing round the room, he steps to the door.
LADY'S VOICE. [Off] I simply can't take cold baths!
MATT flattens himself against the wall, so that he will be behind the door if it is opened. And suddenly it is.
LADY'S VOICE. [In doorway] Let me know when the water's hot, please.
MAID'S VOICE. [Off] Yes, madam.
The LADY re-enters, and passing the door knob from her right hand to her left behind her as she naturally would, closes it without seeing MATT, and crosses to the dressing-table, where she sits down and takes up a brush to brush her shingled hair. MATT moves quickly to the door, and has his hand on the handle, when his image passes into the mirror. The LADY drops the brush, and faces round with an exclamation on her open mouth.
MATT. Hush! It's quite O.K.
LADY. Who—how—what d'you mean by coming into my room?
MATT drops the door handle, turning the key in the lock.
MATT. [In a low voice] Really, I'm most frightfully sorry.
Suddenly the fact that he is the escaped convict dawns on her.
LADY. You're the escaped——

She starts up to go to the window and call for help; but stops at the gestures he makes.

MATT. I wonder if you'd mind awfully speaking pianissimo.

LADY. [Tensely] What made you come in here? How did you get in?

MATT. I've been under the bed for hours. You see, I couldn't tell it was a lady.

LADY. D'you mean my hair?

MATT. Oh no! I couldn't see that.

LADY. I didn't snore?

MATT. No; but that's not an infallible test of sex. I didn't either, or you'd have heard me.

LADY. D'you mean to say you went to sleep?

MATT. I'm afraid I did. Of course, if I'd known—— [A pause.

LADY. Well, as you're a gentleman, aren't you going?

MATT. I'd simply love to. But where?

LADY. Really, I can't tell you.

MATT. Look at me! What can one do in these togs?

LADY. D'you expect me to lend you some?

MATT. Hardly. But I'd be eternally grateful if you'd give me something to eat.

LADY. [Opening a drawer and taking out some chocolate] This is pretty cool, you know. I ought to ring and hand you over.

MATT. Yes. But—you look such a sport.

LADY. [Subtly flattered] I know who you are. Your name's in the paper. But do you realise my position?

MATT. Afraid I only realise my own.

LADY. If I don't hand you over, how on earth are you going to get out of here without being seen?

MATT. Might I have that chocolate?

LADY. [Taking it from the dressing-table drawer] It's only local.

MATT. That won't deter me. I've been forty hours on a piece of bread and two raw potatoes. [He takes the chocolate, bites some off, and puts the rest in his pocket] Would you mind frightfully if I drank some water?

LADY. Of course not.

MATT goes over to the washstand. When his back is turned she springs to action, but instead going to door or window; rapi conceals underneath the b clothes the corsets and und clothes flung on the chair at t foot of the bed, then returns the dressing-table. MATT is drin ing deeply.

MATT. [Turning] That's good. Ev had the hunted feeling? [She shak h · head] Well, don't! A coursed ha is nothing to it. Oh! I am so jolly sti LADY. [Thrilled in spite of herse Do you know you're only three mil from the Prison?

MATT. I do. The first night I meant get near Exeter by morning, and whe d'you think I was? A mile from whe I started. I'd been ringing. That's wh you do in fog. Is that a razor?

LADY. [On stilts] My husband Why? [As MATT takes it up] N There's a limit, Captain Denant. Y can't have a weapon.

MATT. No. Of course! But would y mind awfully if I shaved? You see, I this [Passes his hand over his chin] haven't an earthly, even if I could g clothes. There's nothing more attra tive than a three days' beard. [Wh speaking he has lathered himself wit out a brush] I'm a very quick shav It takes me three minutes. I can do in thirty-two and a half strokes.

LADY. [Gasping] Well, I never— Have you nearly been caught?

MATT. [Between scraping motions the razor] Twice I've been within twe ty feet of the hounds——

LADY. Hounds!

MATT. Human! Just out of their jav [Groans] D'you know anything frightful as a shave like this?

LADY. Well, really——

MATT. I mean except, of course, having it.

LADY. How did you get in here?

MATT. You see, I did so want a c night, so I hid up and waited till eve light was out. I tried to get in bel and couldn't; then I made a boss s at the corner of the balcony and on my back—— Did you feel a sort earthquake? No? I did. When I got o that, I had another shot at a pillar a

She indicates a towel; he steeps it in water and wipes his face.

MATT. D'you mind if I put on my

[He stoops and puts them on.

ADY. So you actually slept under re?

MATT. Alas! I did.

ADY. Well! It's about the limit.

MATT. Will be if I get clear—no one has.

ADY. Tell me, Captain Denant, were-you at Harcheston with my brother e used to talk of a Matt Denant, who an awfully good runner.

MATT. Quite likely. I was at school an awful lot of brothers. What was name?

ADY. No. That won't do.

MATT. You're right. Never tell a con-anything he can tell anybody else.

ADY. I really don't see how I can you.

MATT. Nor do I, worse luck!

ADY. I read your trial.

MATT. [Standing up] And you think bad lot, of course. [Bitterly] D'you

DY. Well, Captain Denant, what

MATT. You've been most awfully kind don't want to impose on you; but
'll never get out of here as I am.

LADY. Why not?

MATT. [Jerking his head towards the window] They're too thoughtful. There's a picket out there.

The LADY turns to the window and looks out; then she turns to MATT and finds him smiling.

MATT. No! No, I wasn't scared. One doesn't give one's own kind away.

LADY. I don't know that. Go and try some of those other rooms. Try the couple next door to me.

A knock on the door. BOTH stand alert.

LADY. Yes?

VOICE OF MAID. [Off] The bath water's hot now, madam.

LADY. All right. Thank you. [Her finger is on her lips] D'you think she could hear us?

MATT. Hope not. [Going close] Thanks most awfully. You don't know how decent it's been after a year in there, to talk to a lady. I won't leave any traces.

LADY. What are you going to do?

MATT. Wait till he's looking the other way, sneak along the balcony, drop at the end, and bolt for it again.

LADY. Are you still a good runner?

MATT. Pretty fair, if I wasn't so stiff.

LADY. [After a long look at him] No! Look here! When I go to my bath I'll make sure there's no one. If I don't come back, slip down the stairs, they're almost opposite. In the hall, hanging, you'll find my husband's old Burberry and fishing basket, rod, and fishing hat; a long brown Burberry, with stains, and flies in the hat. Put them on and go out of the front door; the river's down to the left. Can you fish? [At his nod] You'd better, then. The bathroom's not that side, so I shan't see you. But—whistle "Lady, be good," if you know it.

MATT. Rather! It's the only tune that's got into prison. Well, I can't thank you—you're just a brick!

[He holds out his hand.

LADY. [Taking it] Good luck! [She passes him to the door] Wait a second! [Getting a flask from drawer] Take this. If you see anyone looking at you—drink! Nothing gives one more confidence in a man than to see him drinking.

MATT. Splendid! What are you going to say to your husband?

LADY. Um! Yes! He comes to-night. Well, if he doesn't like it, he'll have to lump it. Oh! And these two pounds. It's all I've got here.

She has taken two pounds out of her bag lying on the dressing-table.

MATT. [Moved] By George! I think you're sublime!

LADY. I'm afraid I doubt it.

MATT. If I'm caught, I shall say I pinched everything, of course; and if I get clear, I'll——

LADY. Oh! don't bother about that! Get behind the door now.

MATT gets behind the door, and she opens it and goes out. After a moment she returns.

LADY. All clear!

Then, closing the door behind her, she goes. MATT takes a look round the room to see that he has not left any trace, and moves softly to the door. His hand is on the handle, when it is opened by the MAID; he has just time to shrink behind it while she stands looking curiously round the room, as if for somebody or something.

LADY'S VOICE. [Off] Ellen! D'you mind going and getting me the suit I sent down to dry last night?

MAID. [Starting] Yes, madam.

[She goes, closing the door.

MATT has just time for a breath of relief when it is opened again and the LADY reappears.

LADY. [Seeing him breathless] This is a bit hectic. [In a whisper] Now! Quick!

MATT dives past her. She stands a moment, hustles out her underclothing from under the bedclothes, then drawing the door to, goes to the window, opens it a little wider, and stands there listening. In half a minute the faint strains of "Lady, be good," whistled, are heard.

LADY. [Waving a stocking like a hat. Under her breath] Gone away!

Whistling "Lady, be good," she crosses jauntily towards the door meeting the MAID, who is coming in with the dried suit. Continuing to whistle, she passes him with a roll of the eyes, leaving the MAID in three minds as

EPISODE IV

Seven hours have passed. Dartmoor. An open space of fern and grass, above the river and away from tripper

MATT, who has been working along the river all the morning, is squatting with his catch beside him—some eight smallish trout. He is eating the last of his chocolate and drinking diligently from the already empty flask. The more so as an OLD GENTLEMAN in Lovat tweeds is straying towards him. MATT begins taking his rod to pieces.

OLD GENTLEMAN. [Approaching from Left] Afternoon! Cleared up too well for you, I'm afraid.

MATT. Yes, it's a bit bright now.

OLD GENTLEMAN. Best eating in the world, those little brown chaps. Except perhaps the blue trout in the Tirol "Blaue forellen" with butter and potatoes, and a bottle of Voslauer Goldeck eh?

MATT. My Golly, yes!

[He looks wolfishly at his trout.

OLD GENTLEMAN. [Eyeing him askance] Very foggy this morning. Worst point about the moor, these fogs. Only good for convicts—um?

MATT. [Subduing a start] Escaped you mean? But they never get clear, I believe.

OLD GENTLEMAN. No, I'm told; but they try, you know—they try. I've often wondered what I should do if I blundered into an escaped convict.

MATT. Yes, sir; bit of a problem.

OLD GENTLEMAN. [Sitting down his overcoat] Between the Law and one's gentlemanly instincts—if it's ge manly to dally with a felon—I won-

MATT. [Warming to the subject] A

MATT. I was out West ranching when war broke out.

OLD GENTLEMAN. Indeed! Judging by films, escaping justice is still fashble there. I think I prefer a more led country.

MATT. Personally, I've got rather a plex. Escaped from Germany in the OLD GENTLEMAN. Did you? How very

MATT. If you want to get thin. It's a

OLD GENTLEMAN. I imagine not, inpolice are very like ourselves; and —most of us haven't got discretion, and the rest haven't got morals. The young man didn't complain, I think. D'you happen to recollect?

MATT. [With an uneasy look] So far as I remember, he said she was an intellectual.

The OLD GENTLEMAN has taken out a cigar-case and is offering it.

OLD GENTLEMAN. Smoke?

MATT. Thanks very much. I've got into a bad habit of coming out without tobacco. [They bite and light cigars.

OLD GENTLEMAN. I suppose one might run across that convict fellow any moment. It would be a little like meeting an adder. The poor thing only wants to get away from you. And yet, if you don't break its back, ten to one it'll bite a dog. I had two dogs die of snake-bite. It's a duty, perhaps—what do you say?

MATT. Probably. But I don't always do mine.

OLD GENTLEMAN. Oh! don't you? I'm so glad of that. Neither do I.

MATT. Do you know that prison? It's a bad style of architecture.

OLD GENTLEMAN. No. The fact is, I've had the misfortune in my time to send a good many people to prison. And in those days I did make a point of seeing a prison now and then. I remember I used to give my Juries a pass to go and see where they sent their fellow-beings. Once I tested whether they went to look round or not, and out of three Juries—no, it was four—how many do you think had had the curiosity?

MATT. None.

OLD GENTLEMAN. Isn't that a little cynical? [With his sideway bird-like glance] No, it was—one. Ha!

MATT. Who'd want to go into a prison? I'd as soon visit the Morgue. The bodies there aren't living, anyway.

OLD GENTLEMAN. They tell me prisons are much improved. They've introduced a human feeling.

MATT. Have they? Splendid! What was the date of that?

OLD GENTLEMAN. [His eyes busy] They've abolished the arrows, anyway. And I believe they don't shave their heads now. Do you know any convicts?

MATT. [With a wriggle] I? No. Only one.

OLD GENTLEMAN. Indeed! And is he interesting.

MATT. The most interesting chap I know.

OLD GENTLEMAN. Ha! Suppose this escaped convict suddenly turned up here? [Jerking his thumb towards MATT] What should you do?

MATT. Run like a hare.

OLD GENTLEMAN. Dear me, yes. I think it would depend on whether anyone was about. Human nature is very —er—sensitive. D'you find this climate bracing? Dartmoor has quite a reputation.

MATT. Overrated—I think.

OLD GENTLEMAN. You know it well?

MATT. No; this is my first visit.

OLD GENTLEMAN. And will you be here long?

MATT. Hope not.

OLD GENTLEMAN. Beautiful spot—Dartmoor!

MATT. I prefer Two Bridges.

[Putting up his rod and whistling "Lady, be good."

OLD GENTLEMAN. Ah! What fly have you been using?

MATT. Just a tag.

OLD GENTLEMAN. I've not fished for years. [As MATT suddenly passes his hand over his brow under his hat] Anything the matter?

MATT. Afraid I shall have to abandon your excellent cigar. I've enjoyed it, but I'm smoking on a rather empty stomach.

He looks ruefully at the unsmoked portion of his cigar, and pitches it away.

OLD GENTLEMAN. Dear me! Yes. I remember that feeling coming over me once at the Royal Academy banquet—just before I had to make a speech. [Another of his birdlike glances] Tobacco must be one of the great deprivations in prison, I always think. Didn't you find that so in—in—Germany?

MATT. [Breathing rather fast and completing the dismantlement of his fishing rod] Oh! we got tobacco now and then.

OLD GENTLEMAN. And empty sto achs too, I'm afraid.

MATT. Yes.

OLD GENTLEMAN. One never ceases be grateful to those who endured su things. [Offering his cigar case] W you try again after tea? These mo teas with cream and jam.

MATT. [Taking it] Well, thank y sir. I shall down him next time.

MATT is now ready for departu for he has been getting increa ingly uneasy with this O GENTLEMAN. He takes up basket and lays the fish with it.

OLD GENTLEMAN. Well [Getting u I must be getting on too. It's been ve pleasant. I've enjoyed our little tal At my time of life one doesn't often g new sensations.

OLD GENTLEMAN. Good-bye, Capta Denant— [MATT starts] I hope you have a pleasant journey, especially as one seems to have noticed our litt chat.

MATT. [Staring at him] D'you mi frightfully telling me how you spott me?

OLD GENTLEMAN. Not at all! Fir the way you looked at your trout—sh I say—er—wolfishly? And then—forgi me—your legs.

MATT. [Drawing up his Burberry o contemplating his legs] Yes. I hop you'd think I was a leader of fashio OLD GENTLEMAN. And there was a other thing—your obvious sympat with yourself.

MATT. That's a prison habit, s You're not allowed to sympathise w other people, for fear of contaminati them. Before I got into quod I don't member ever feeling sorry for mys But I doubt if I shall ever again sorry for anyone else.

hour has passed. On the Moor; a high spot.

R TRIPPERS, two men and two women, disgorged from a Ford car, are picnicking. One of the men, about fifty, in blue clothes, has a Merchant Service look and a concertina; the other looks more like a shopkeeper, and is perhaps fifty-five. His wife is a stout woman, about forty, of mellow appearance. The other woman is the shopkeeper's sister, dried-up and spinsterish. Their clothes are of a suitable nature—some feathers. They are all eating heavily.

IFE. Captain, you're a prophet—iderin' what it was when we left ›urton. I call this lovely! [Eats.

APTAIN. Takes a bit o' weather to ·mox a sailor, ma'am. [Drinks.

IFE. "You trust the Captain," I said inkem this morning, didn't I, fath- I' knew, you see; [archly] my corns ·n't shootin'.

STER. That's not very nice, ·y.

IFE. Why not? I'd like to see some ·who 'asn't corns, if the truth was ·n. 'Ave another of these cut rounds, ·y, and cheer up. Father, don't you ·ny more cream—your eyes are yel-

SHOPKEEPER. When I first came to Devonshire I could put away 'alf a pound o' cream at a meal.

WIFE. Yes, and it spoiled your temper for life.

SHOPKEEPER. Am I bad-tempered, Dolly?

SISTER. So-so, James.

SHOPKEEPER. What do you say, Captain?

CAPTAIN. You keep it for your wife, my boy. Outside the bosom of your family you're a perfect cherub.

WIFE. Captain, you're an' 'opeless Benedick.

CAPTAIN. Bachelor born, ma'am.

WIFE. With a wife in every port, eh?

SISTER. Oh! That reely isn't nice, Fanny; so old-fashioned, too.

CAPTAIN. Is it, ma'am?

WIFE. Now, Captain, don't go shockin' Dolly. Oh! There's an insect on my skirt! I never seen one like it.

SHOPKEEPER. Kill it, then.

WIFE. Why?

SHOPKEEPER. Always kill what you don't know.

WIFE. [Flipping it off] It's only a biddle—poor thing! Give us a tune, Captain.

The CAPTAIN draws a long blast from his concertina.

WIFE. Hallo! 'Oo's this?

MATT, in Burberry, with rod and basket, has appeared Left, and stands lifting his hat.

MATT. Afternoon! Wonder if you could put me right for Bovey?

SHOPKEEPER. Bovey! That's a goodish step—matter of twelve miles, I should say.

MATT. My Lord! Not really!

SHOPKEEPER. You go down the 'ill, through Ponsworthy to Widecombe, and up the 'ill, turn to the left, and ask again.

MATT. I see. Will there be anyone to ask?

SHOPKEEPER. I shouldn't think so.

CAPTAIN. Had any sport, sir?

MATT. [Opening the basket] Eight, rather small.

WIFE. My! Don't they look nice! Such good eatin', too.

MATT. Would you like them, ma'am?

WIFE. [With affected restraint] I'm sure it's very good of you.

CAPTAIN. Don't you miss the chance, Mrs. Pinkem; nothing like moor trout, with a moor appetite.

SISTER. [Distantly] I'm sure it's most kind, from a stranger.

WIFE. [Suddenly] Well, I don't know, if you're so obliging. 'And me the Daily Mail, Father. I'll wrap 'em up; and thank you very much. I quite appreciate it.

MATT. That's splendid! [He hands them] Turned out quite nice, hasn't it? Have you come far?

SHOPKEEPER. From Ashburton—ten mile.

MATT. Heard anything there of the escaped convict?

SHOPKEEPER. What about it? Haven't looked at the paper last day or two.

WIFE. Another escape!——oh, my!

MATT. Rather! He got off in the fog, night before last.

SISTER. I always hate to think of one of those dreadful men at large. You can't sleep in your bed.

CAPTAIN. Don't you get too excited, ma'am. Think of the choice 'e's got.

WIFE. [Scanning the paper] Why! It's the man that killed the poor detective in 'Yde Park! That villain! It says 'ere they nearly got him—twice.

MATT, who is eyeing them closely, eyes a loaf even more closely, and tries to manœuvre into a position to annex it.

SHOPKEEPER. I 'ope everybody's helping to catch him. He must be a regular desperado. That was a bad case. I never believed the girl.

SISTER. I should think not, indeed!

SHOPKEEPER. Nor the young man neither. They were up to no good there. They tell me those London parks are in a proper state.

CAPTAIN. They ain't a Sunday School, that's certain.

WIFE. Fie, Captain!

SISTER. [Acidly] I believe some people quite sympathised with him. Fancy!

MATT. Well, if you won't think it too eccentric, I did, for one.

SHOPKEEPER. You!—Why?

MATT. I thought he had devilish ha luck.

SHOPKEEPER. Ah! there's always a fu made about the Law. You can't ev 'ang a woman for murderin' her 'usba without a lot of 'ysterical nonsen Look at that case not long ago—the was a petition as long as your arm.

CAPTAIN. I remember. The you chap was a steward. I don't recall t Hyde Park case.

WIFE. Why! the detective arrest one o' those women this young man h been sittin' with—a gentleman he w too—and if he didn't 'it him an' break 'ead, an' kill 'im, poor man!

CAPTAIN. Then why didn't they stri him up?

MATT. The jury found it was a qua rel, not an attempt to evade arrest. B sides, in falling the detective hit h head on the iron railing of the Ro and the doctors said he died of the co cussion.

SHOPKEEPER. That didn't ought have got 'im off. He hit the man. If 'adn't 'it him, 'e wouldn't have fallen.

MATT. Exactly! Brilliant! But if t detective hadn't seized him, he would have hit him.

SHOPKEEPER. Well! I'd 'ave hung 'i

WIFE. Don't be so bloodthirsty, Fat er!

SHOPKEEPER. Well, I would. Hitti an officer for doing his duty. Sitting wi a woman in the Park, too! He only g off because he was quality.

MATT. Don't you think that's a s perstition?

The SHOPKEEPER glares at him, t decides that he is a gentlem and therefore prejudiced, and o snorts slightly.

SISTER. Did they punish the woma

MATT. What for, ma'am?

SISTER. I'd keep them shut up; th they wouldn't tempt young men—the pies!

MATT. [Unexpectedly] Oh! God!

They all stare at him. Then SHOPKEEPER fatuously breaks silence.

SHOPKEEPER. Can't say I was e tempted by a woman.

MATT. No, you've got a Ford car

. D'you find them good in this sort country?

SHOPKEEPER. [Distantly] I do, sir.

MATT. Do they get up these hills?

SHOPKEEPER. I should think so. I'd age to catch any convict with my car.

MATT. Would you? [A thought strikes] Splendid!

WIFE. Well, I think we ought to be in' 'ome. 'And me the teapot, Cap- . Now, Dolly! Never mind those o' cake and bread—they're no good. leave the deebris. I'd like to be in re dark, with a convict loose like . He might come prowlin' round, in' things up.

MATT with a secret movement pockets some scraps.

ATT. Good afternoon! Hope you'll y the trout.

[He moves away out of the picture.

IFE AND CAPTAIN. Good afternoon od afternoon, sir!

MATT salutes and vanishes, Right.

STER. Here, Fanny! Did you see pocket the scraps?

IFE. No! Why, he's a gentleman— 't you hear his sniffy way o' talkin'?

STER. I saw him with my own eyes o bits of cake and a round.

[Sound of a car being started.

IOPKEEPER. I say! [Jumping up] it's 'e doin' with the Ford?

APTAIN. Hi, there! You, sir!

IOPKEEPER. He's got in. Hi!

STER. The villain!

L. Hi! hi! hi!

Sounds of a levanting car, and a halloed "So long!"

The TWO MEN run out of the pic- ture.

an hour has passed. An open space with the moor rising from it.

AN in plus fours and his WIFE are returning from a walk. The WIFE as stopped and is moving her foot measily.

IFE. I've got something in my shoe, p.

AN. What?

WIFE. I've got something in my shoe.

MAN. [In front, stopping too] Take it off, then. [Goes back to her] Hold on to me.

WIFE. [Taking off shoe and shaking it] It isn't in the shoe—it's inside the stocking.

MAN. You can't sit down here; the ground's still wet.

WIFE. There—feel.

MAN. Yes, I can feel it.

WIFE. [Standing on one leg] Well! Hold me.

He holds her and she has slipped her stocking off when there is the sound of an approaching car.

MAN. Look out! Here's a car!

WIFE. [Letting her skirt fall and standing on one leg] Bother!

[Sound of the car stopping.

MAN. Hallo! He's coming to speak to us.

The WIFE bends and slips the shoe on hurriedly, but her dress is short. She holds the stocking behind her.

MATT. [Appearing] Beg your pardon, sir, but can you direct me to Bovey?

MAN. Afraid we're strangers. Pity you didn't ask as you came through Widecombe.

MATT. Well, but it's up this hill, anyway, isn't it?

MAN. Must be, I think. That's the way to Heytor Rock.

MATT. Oh! Can you see the promised land from there?

WIFE. Yes. You go up the hill and turn to the right, then to the left through a gate.

MATT. And ask again, I suppose. [Preparing to leave] Thanks very much.

MAN. Fine place, the moor, sir. Splendid air.

MATT. [Drily] Oh! Splendid. So dry and clear!

WIFE. [With a giggle] Yes, the fog was awful yesterday.

MAN. They say Bovey's pretty.

MATT. Yes, I've some aunts there. Good place for aunts.

WIFE. [Laughing] What makes a good place for aunts?

MATT. Oh! not too stirring. Awfully good knitting there, I believe.

MAN. Ha! That's good. Ha!

MATT. I must get on, or I shall be late for tea. So I whizz past Heytor rocks——?

WIFE. Yes, and come down on the church.

MATT. Thanks very much. My aunts are close there, I know. Good afternoon.

He lifts his hat discreetly and goes, Right. The MAN and WIFE gaze after him.

WIFE. What a nice young man!

MAN. That was good about aunts. Ha! [Sound of car moving on] Now for your stocking!

WIFE. [Bending down and taking off her shoe] I should think he was County, wouldn't you?

MAN. [Holding her from behind] Um! Only "County" would drive such a shockin' bad car.

WIFE. He saw my leg and kept his eyes off it. I thought that was charming of him.

MAN. Fellow-feelin'; he had some shockin' leg gear on himself.

WIFE. [Turning stocking inside out] See, there it is—a beastly little three-cornered bit of grit. Extraordinary how they get in——

MAN. [Suddenly] Look out! Here's a constable on a bike.

The WIFE drops her skirt and stands balancing again, the stocking in her hand. A very hot CONSTABLE appears, wheeling a bicycle.

CONSTABLE. Zeen convict pass?

MAN. [Astonished] Convict? No.

CONSTABLE. Zeen anybody?

MAN. Only a car.

CONSTABLE. What zort of car?

MAN. Ford, I think.

CONSTABLE. Whu was in it?

MAN. A man.

CONSTABLE. What zort of man?

MAN. Oh!—er—a gentleman.

CONSTABLE. How d'yu know?

MAN. By his voice.

WIFE. He spoke to us.

CONSTABLE. What d'e zay?

MAN. Asked the way to Bovey.

CONSTABLE. Ha! What 'ad 'e on?

MAN. Long Burberry and a hat li mine; he was quite all right.

CONSTABLE. [Mopping his face] W
'e? Bovey—yu zay?

WIFE. Yes, he had some aunts there he was going to tea with them.

CONSTABLE. [Deeply] Aunts in B

WIFE. We told him to go by Heyt rocks. Wasn't that right?

CONSTABLE. Well, yu've directed t escaped convict.

MAN. [Alarmed] No, really! But tell you——

WIFE. He was quite charming.

CONSTABLE. Was 'e? 'Ow much start
'e got?

MAN. Oh! not five minutes. Of cours
I didn't know—I should never have—

CONSTABLE. [Muttering and mopping
This plaguey 'ill!

MAN. Hadn't you better telephone
Bovey?

CONSTABLE. [Smartly] Bovey! Wh
d'yu suppose he spoke to 'ee? Becau

MAN. A convict's a convict; you ca play about with the Law.

WIFE. Well, we have, that's one co fort. That constable didn't keep his e off my leg.

AN. I suppose you'd have had me nto a row with the police!
IFE. Don't be silly, Philip! You n't get angry because your nerves rattled. No, don't hold me, I can t on perfectly by myself.
[She stands wobbling on one leg, and pulls the stocking on.
AN. The brass of that chap—talking t his aunts!
IFE. You thought it very funny, he did.
AN. If I'd known——
IFE. Oh! Yes, if you'd known—you 'd an ounce of original sin in you. k goodness, I have.
AN. Where? I've never——
IFE. No, I don't keep it for you.
AN. Hallo! He's coming back.
FE. Who? The constable?
AN. No—that chap—the convict.
Sounds of car.
FE. Hooray!
N. What do you mean—hooray? am I to do? This is infernal.
FE. [Maliciously] Run out and stop of course.
N. [On one leg and the other] He'd ver me. These chaps are desper-

FE. Well, I will, then; and warn f the constable.
N. You won't!—Hallo! He's stop- That's worse. What the devil shall now?
he WIFE laughs. Sounds of car stopping. MATT reappears.
TT. Awfully sorry, but my car l. There's another way round, isn't ? Through Widecombe, to the —I saw a road?
N. Um! Well—I—er——
FE. Yes, but I shouldn't advise you e it.
TT. Must, I'm afraid. My car d to back down the hill.
N. I'm afraid—er—that I—er—to——
FE. My husband means that there's stable in Widecombe. [Pointing.
TT. Yes. [Looking back under his I see him.
FE. So you'd better go on up.
TT. There are two up there, you Ay car's very sensitive.

WIFE. Oh, dear!
MAN. Joan! [Resolutely] Now, sir, that constable's been talking to us. The game's up. If you don't mind, I'll take that car. He says it isn't yours.
MATT. [Stepping back] You know that's most frightfully true. But then—it isn't yours either.
MAN. Well, just let's argue it. I'm afraid you're helpless.
MATT. What do you take me for?
MAN. Why—er—the escaped convict, if you know what I mean.
MATT. Oh! Well—even so, I've still got a kick in me. I see your point of view, of course; but unfortunately I've got my own.
MAN. After that constable, I simply can't play about with it.
MATT. Look here! I've got a brain-wave. Let's all go into Widecombe in the car?
MAN. Ah! thanks very much; I thought you'd be sporting.
MATT. You see, if you're with me, I shall get through Widecombe all right, and I'll drop you just on the far side.
MAN. But——! What? No—that won't——
MATT. It's all right. You take me in custody into Widecombe—you can't help it if I whizz through and shoot you out. I want to make it easy for you, and I hope you want to make it easy for me.
MAN. Why should I? An escaped convict!
MATT. What do you call yourself?
MAN. What! Just an average man.
MATT. D'you mean to say the average man isn't a sportsman?
MAN. Yes. But I've had warning. I'm up against it.
WIFE. I'll come in the car. If you're with a lady, you'll get through without being spotted.
MATT. Splendid! Thanks ever so! Will you get in?
MAN. Joan!
MATT. Put yourself in my position, sir——
MAN. Look here! I ought to be knocking you down and sitting on your head, if you know what I mean.
MATT. [Squaring up] Well, any little thing you've got to do, please do it quickly.

MAN. Well I mean—that's very crude.

WIFE. [Ironically] Oh! no, Philip! Oh, no!

MAN. Well, suppose you let me drive.

MATT. Why should I? I stole the car. Now, madam, shall we start?

WIFE. [Winding her scarf round her face] Right-o!

MAN. This is monstrous! Look here, sir, you seem to think——

MATT. I'll tell you what I think—[Grimly] I've been in purgatory too long, and I'm going to get out, and you're not going to stop me, if you know what I mean.

MAN. I jolly well am!

WIFE. Philip!

MAN. I'm not going to have it. If you won't surrender, I shall tackle you.

MATT. [Dangerously] Oh!

[He takes a spanner out of his pocket.

WIFE. [Stepping between them—to MATT] D'you know, I think you'd better go on.

MATT. I think so, too. Sorry to be a boor and bring out a thing like this. [Tapping the spanner] But I'm not playing, you see. [Sombrely] The life we live spoils our sense of humour! Goodbye, Ma'am, I'm very grateful to you.

[He turns and vanishes.

MAN. Look here! You're not going like that—I'm damned if you are! Stop!

WIFE. Masterly, Philip! Masterly! [Sound of a car starting] Run! My dear! Run! It's all right. You'll be too late.

MAN. You really are——

They stand looking at each other as the sound of the car fails slowly, and

An hour has passed. A road on the edge of the moor. MATT, who has been kneeling by his car which has broken down, raises himself to see the figure of a dismounted foxhunter coming towards him.

FOXHUNTER. Engine trouble? [M nods] Well, she hasn't got away f you, like my beast. Come across a n loose?

MATT. Afraid not.

FOXHUNTER. Never rains but it po Positively first car I've met, and she's in trouble.

MATT. [Taking in the FOXHUN who is obviously a young man of own species] Seen the convict, sir?

FOXHUNTER. No, but they've all b keeping their eyes peeled.

MATT. Aha! So have I.

FOXHUNTER. [With some dista Not a pastime I care for—shan't vi holloa if I see him.

MATT. Why not? Can't have despe dos loose on the moor. Safety first!

FOXHUNTER. But this poor devil gentleman.

MATT. Nothing like a gentleman being unsafe.

FOXHUNTER. [With increasing pleasure] What! Poor draggled b with the whole pack at his heels—d gerous!

MATT. [Grinning] Fox at bay!

FOXHUNTER. Fox we killed to was digested in two minutes by watch.

MATT. Have hounds gone home?

FOXHUNTER. Yes; they went on o Mare unshipped me at the edge of a —went in plump, and got away whil was collecting myself.

MATT. [Eyeing mudstains] I Well, I'd change places with you. [G ing at car] This is the least attract Ford I ever drove.

FOXHUNTER. Your own?

MATT. No; belongs to some frie They said I might take a run on moor and look for the convict.

FOXHUNTER. [Grinning] Good for convict! Been fishing too?

MATT. No. Camouflage.

FOXHUNTER. [With increasing pleasure] Gosh! You really are out m hunting?

MATT. I say—you're not the con by any chance?

FOXHUNTER. I? What the—— good sir, should I tell you if I were

EPISODE VIII

Half an hour has passed.

In a gravel pit on the edge of the moor are a wheel-barrow, with a pick in it, and MATT lying on his face, apparently asleep, waiting for dark.

From Right comes the figure of a LABOURER. He is a burly great fellow with a shovel. Seeing the recumbent figure, he stands still, gazing. Then, turning, he goes back whence he came. MATT, who has been conscious of this visitor, gathers himself to spring up and rush away. Then he takes a resolution and lies down again in the same attitude, as if asleep. The LABOURER returns, followed by another LABOURER as big as himself. The FIRST LABOURER clears his throat.

MATT. [Sitting up with his feet under him] Well, my men! What's the matter with you?

FIRST LABOURER. Beg pardon, zurr. We'm lukin' for th' escaped convict. We 'ad a zort of a thought as yu med be 'err.

MATT. Did you? That's pretty good! And now you see I'm not, suppose you apologise?

FIRST LABOURER. [Cautiously] 'Course, ef we knu 'u'm yu werr——

MATT. Whom do you work for?

FIRST LABOURER. Varmer Brownin'. Tes 'is grazin' yere.

MATT. I'll see Farmer Browning. It's funny, but I don't altogether like being taken for an escaped convict.

FIRST LABOURER. Yas, I rackon as 'ow yu'd better zee Maester Browning. George, goo and vind Maester. 'E'm in th' orchard long across.

The SECOND LABOURER goes off, Left.

FIRST LABOURER. We'm 'ad nues o' this joker, yu zee. Zeemingly 'e pinched a car and we'm found it just back along in the ditch. 'Tes the zame old car, tu.

MATT. What on earth's the car to do with me?

FIRST LABOURER. A don' zay nothin' 'bout that. Maester'll know when 'e comes.

MATT. I'll go and meet him.

[He makes as if to rise.

FIRST LABOURER. No, yu zett therr.

MATT. Now, look here, my friend! Do I talk like a convict?

FIRST LABOURER. Can't zay, never 'eerd none. They'm town folk, I rackon —mos'ly.

MATT. Well, I was bred in the country, like you. What wages do you get here?

[He pulls the flask out of his pocket, whistling "Lady, be good."

FIRST LABOURER. Waal, ef yu'm the convict, yu'm a cule customer arter that.

MATT. But why on earth should you think I'm the convict? I'm just a fisherman staying at Lustleigh. [He takes a pull at the empty flask] You're making a fool of yourself, you know.

FIRST LABOURER. [Scratching his head] Ef so be as yu'm what yu zay yu be, wot d'you goo vur to 'ide yere?

MATT. Hide? I was having a nap out of the wind, before walking home.

FIRST LABOURER. This joker 'ad a fishin'-rod wi' un, tu.

MATT. The convict? Bosh!

FIRST LABOURER. Not zo much bosh, neither.

MATT. Look you, my man, I've had enough of this. [He stands up suddenly. The LABOURER steps back and lifts his shovel. But at this moment the FARMER and SECOND LABOURER step into the picture from Left, accompanied by a LITTLE GIRL of thirteen or so, who has been riding.

FARMER. Now then, now then! That'll du, Jim. Yu there, on my land, kindly give me yure name, and account for yureself. There's a rough customer about, with a fishin'-rod, same as yu.

MATT. Mr. Browning?

FARMER. Ay! that's my name.

MATT. Mine's Matthew. Captain Matthew. I'm staying at the Inn at Lustleigh. There's some very absurd mistake. This good trusty dog thinks he's treed a convict.

FARMER. [Impressed by MATT's accent and air, and the flask in his hand] Well, sir, when there's these escapes the moor, we 'ave to be careful. 'Lizabeth, yu run along.

The LITTLE GIRL does not mo but remains spellbound.

FARMER. Constable's just been in nues from Widecombe of the car der, and the man that pinched it 'a long brown coat, a fishin'-rod, and an like yurn.

MATT. If the constable's here s you'd better take me to him.

FARMER. No, rackon I'll ask 'im step over 'ere. George, run and fe constable, he'm down along by thi car.

MATT. Now, Mr. Browning—dash all!—you ought to know better th this!

FARMER. Oh! I daresay yu'm a ge tleman, but so's this convict, seemin Leastways he'm a captain. Perhaps 'll tell me the name o' the innkee where yu'm stayin' at Lustleigh?

MATT. Has he got a name? I had noticed.

FARMER. No; nor the name of the I neither, maybe?

MATT. The Red Lion.

FARMER. Ha!

MATT. Well, it ought to be.

FARMER. And per'aps yu'll show the clothes yu've got on.

MATT. [Taking a resolution] Well own up.

LITTLE GIRL. Oh!

FARMER. I thowt yu'd come to it.

MATT. [Lowering his voice] Be spo ing. Give me a show!

FARMER. Now yu know I can't that; what's the yuse of askin'?

MATT. Well, I've had forty-ei hours' freedom, and given them a g run. You haven't a cigarette?

FARMER. I don't smoke them thin Jim, got a fag for this gentleman?

FIRST LABOURER brings out a pac of cigarettes which he holds

MATT takes one and lights it from a match sheltered in the horny hands of the LABOURER, who then retires again, Right, with the shovel.

ATT. Thanks very much!

[He sits on the wheelbarrow. There ensues a silence. The LITTLE GIRL steals up to MATT.

TLE GIRL. [Holding out a small] Would you mind giving me your raph?

RMER. Miss 'Lizabeth!

TLE GIRL. Well, I've only just be- -I have to ask anybody at all thrill-

TT. When you're an old woman be able to say you met Murderous —Mr. Browning, you won't give chance?

RMER. Aid and abet a convict? No, aptain!

TT. Vermin, eh? [Looking round Well, you see, I've gone to earth. t hold with digging foxes out?

RMER. I du, the varmints!

TT. Ah! Well, you may thank your you were never in prison.

RMER. No, an' I 'ope I'll never du i' to putt me there.

TT. Take care you don't have bad that's all.

RMER. Bad luck? I reckon a man as a man can think he's havin' gude f he don't swing for it.

TT. [Sombrely] I meant the poor r no harm.

TLE GIRL. Have you really killed a

TT. Not yet.

RMER. [Removing the pick from rrow] Yu struck the blow, and he f't. What's more, so far as I re- er, he was duin' his duty, same as uin' mine.

He looks intently at MATT, as if warning him not to try another blow.

MATT. You needn't be afraid; there's a child here. If there weren't! I hope you'll see that my friend here [Pointing to the LABOURER] has the reward for my capture.

FARMER. 'E can 'ave it; I don' want no reward for duin' my duty.

MATT. [Nodding gravely] That's lucky! I appreciate your excellent intentions, Mr. Browning. Glad to have met you! Good-bye!

He leaps from the barrow, and with a twist like a footballer evading a tackle, is past him and away to the Left. The LITTLE GIRL claps her hands.

FARMER. [Astonished] The varmint! Hi! Jim! Arter 'im!

The LABOURER utters a sort of roar and starts running. The FARMER is about to follow.

LITTLE GIRL. Oh! Mr. Browning!

FARMER. Well?

LITTLE GIRL. Oh! nothing.

FARMER. Darn!

[He follows out, running, Left. The CONSTABLE and SECOND LABOURER come hurrying from Right.

CONSTABLE. Gone! Which way, Missy?

LITTLE GIRL. [With distant blankness] I don't know.

CONSTABLE. Come on, then!

[He and the LABOURER go out, Left running.

LITTLE GIRL. Oh! I do hope he gets off! Oh!

EPISODE IX

A few minutes have passed.

*In the parlour of a cottage of gentility are two maiden ladies—*MISS GRACE, about forty-seven, brewing tea at a little table before the fire, Right, and MISS DORA, much younger, still dressed in hunting togs, standing at the open French window. Back.

MISS DORA. There's such a glow on the Cleave, Grace. Most lovely red. We killed. Everybody was looking out for that escaped convict.

MISS GRACE. Did you see him?

MISS DORA. No, thank goodness. Poor hunted wretch!

MISS GRACE. If you think hunted things are poor, why do you go hunting?

MISS DORA. Foxes hunt and expect to be hunted.

MISS GRACE. So do convicts. Sympathy's wasted on them. Tea, Dora.

MISS DORA. This isn't a common convict. It's that Captain Denant, you remember——

MISS GRACE. Oh!—not likely to forget the row we had about his case. Well! it served him right!

MISS DORA. [Going to the table and sitting down. Looking steadily at her sister] For a good woman, Grace, you know—you're awfully hard.

MISS GRACE. Tea-cake, please. I like consistency.

MISS DORA. [Deeply] I think you're right.

MISS GRACE. [Surprised] How?

MISS DORA. It is a shame to hunt a fox—much better to shoot it.

MISS GRACE. There'd soon be no foxes. Don't get that bee into your bonnet here. What with rabbits, and chained dogs, you've set the farmers by the ears as it is. Wait till we go to Bath. You can have as many bees as you like there.

MISS DORA. I shan't hunt any more.

MISS GRACE. Then you're very foolish, if you enjoy it. Will you come over to the Service with me this evening?

MISS DORA. D'you know what I wish you'd say, Grace? "I shan't go to church any more."

MISS GRACE. I wish to God, Dora, you'd give up free thought!

MISS DORA. I wish to God, Grace, you'd give up religion.

MISS GRACE. You only hurt the vicar by it.

MISS DORA. [Shaking her head] He's too good a sort to mind.

MISS GRACE. You're too perverse for anything. I've only to say something and you set your will to the opposite.

MISS DORA. My dear, my will is n ing to yours. I haven't the ego for MISS GRACE. [Coldly] You mean egoistic? Thank you.

MISS DORA. Sorry, Grace.

SS GRACE. Then I think it should been nothing, sir, considering the on you've placed my poor sister in.

SS DORA. [Hotly] Poor sister! e, you——!

ATT. When you're hunted all you of is the next move.

SS DORA. I'm afraid you're awfully

ATT. Thanks, I'm getting my wind I feel like kissing the hem of your ent.

SS DORA. It hasn't got one. Wasn't her mad to escape?

ATT. I don't think so. It's shown me decent people can be.

SS DORA. Did they ill-treat you?

ATT. Oh! no, the treatment's all —a trifle monotonous.

SS DORA. Listen! [They listen. shouting] Where are you making

ATT. No plan. They're no good. It's battle—you change 'em before you m.

SS DORA. I read who you were in apers.

ATT. Oh! yes, I'm in big print? k you most awfully. I'll clear out

SS DORA. No, wait! [At the cur- I'll be back in a minute.

ATT. Naturally. She's splendid.

MISS GRACE. If you don't want to involve her——

MISS DORA. [Reappearing through the curtains] I think I can hide you.

MISS GRACE. Dora!

MATT. No, no! It's not good enough. I can't let you——

MISS DORA. [Turning on her sister] I'm going to, Grace.

They speak together in rapid tones.

MISS GRACE. Not in this house.

MISS DORA. It's as much my house as yours. You need have nothing to do with it.

MISS GRACE. [Drawing her from the window] At least you haven't broken the law yet. And you're not going to now.

MISS DORA. I can't bear to see a soldier and a gentleman chased by a lot of chawbacons.

MISS GRACE. [With a glance at MATT] Dora, you mustn't. It's wrong and it's absurd.

MISS DORA. [Heated] Go upstairs. If I have to refer to you, I'll say you've seen nothing. And so can you.

MISS GRACE. [Her voice rising] You expect me to tell lies!

MATT, unseen in the heat of this discussion, makes a motion of despair and slips out of the window.

MISS DORA. I'm going to hide him, I tell you. Captain——[Suddenly turning to MATT she sees that he is no longer there] Where is he?

The TWO SISTERS stand silent, blankly gazing about them.

MISS DORA. Did he go by the door or the window?

MISS GRACE. I don't know.

MISS DORA. Didn't you see him?

MISS GRACE. I did not. [At the expression on her sister's face] I say I did not.

MISS DORA looks behind the window curtain, then cautiously out of the window, then recoils before the CONSTABLE, who comes in heated and breathless, followed by the FARMER and the FIRST LABOURER, who stops outside.

CONSTABLE. Beg pardon, Miss. We've lost un. He'm a fair twister. Maybe he doubled back. We'll 'ave a luke over, if

MISS DORA. He can't be in the house.

MISS GRACE stands pursing her lips.

FARMER. We med 'ave a luke, Miss, after that. 'E'm a proper varmint.

Without waiting for further permission, the two pass through the room and go out, Left. The TWO SISTERS stand looking at each other.

MISS DORA. I won't have him caught!

[She moves towards the door.

MISS GRACE. [Seizing her sister's skirt] Stop! I tell you!

MISS DORA. Let go!

MISS GRACE. I shall not. You're crazy. What is it to you?

MISS DORA. Let go, Grace!

MISS GRACE. You can't help him without breaking the law.

MISS DORA. Will you let me go, Grace? I shall hit you.

MISS GRACE. Very well. Hit me, then!

The TWO SISTERS clinch, and for a moment it looks as if there were to be a physical struggle between them. There are sounds of approach.

MISS DORA. Let go!

They unclinch, and wait for the door to open. Re-enter the FARMER and CONSTABLE.

FARMER. Well, he'm not yere; that's certain for zure.

CONSTABLE. [Between the two] You're quite sure, Miss, yu saw 'im over that wall? [A tense moment.

MISS DORA. Quite!

MISS GRACE has drawn her breath in with a hiss.

FARMER. And not seen un since?

MISS DORA. No.

FARMER. Nor yu, Miss?

MISS DORA stares at her sister.

MISS GRACE. [Throwing up her head, and with a face like a mask] No.

FARMER. [Picking up MATT'S hat, left by him as he fled] 'Ere, what's this, then?

MISS DORA. [Recovering] That? An old hat of my brother's that I use sometimes.

FARMER. 'Tis uncommon like the one that varmint was wearin'.

MISS DORA. Is it? Those fishing [illegible] are all the same. [Taking the hat] H you tried the orchard, Mr. Browni

No time has passed. In the vestry o village church lighted by an lamp, where, at the back, surpli and cassocks are hanging on pe door, Right, leads to the churchy and an open door, Left, into church. There is no furniture exc a chair or two, and a small t with a jug on it against the w "up" from the door, Left.

The stage is empty, but almost at o the PARSON enters from the chur carrying some overpast Harv decorations, which he places on table. He is a slim, grizzle-hai brown, active, middle-aged m with a good, lined, clean-sho face, and a black Norfolk jack obviously a little "High" in his o trine. He pours water from a j into two large vases, humming: for the wings—for the wings dove!" Then carrying the v one in each hand, he goes back the church. The door on the Ri is opened and the hunted, hatless MATT slips in, closing the door behind him. He stands taking in the situation, crosses to the open door opposite, spies the PARSON, and, recoiling, blots himself out behind a cassock. His face, peeping out, is withdrawn as the PARSON returns, this time literally singing: "O for the wings—for the wings of a dove!" Taking off his coat, he prepares to hang it on a peg and take a cassock, and as he reaches the highest note, he lifts the cassock from in front of MATT and starts back.

ARSON. Hullo!

ATT. Sanctuary, sir!

ARSON. What d'you mean? Who are

MATT opens his Burberry.

ARSON. Oh! [That "Oh!" is some- more than astonishment; it has in accent of dismay, as if the speaker confronted by his own soul] The ed convict! You oughtn't to have in here.

ATT. Then where, sir? In old days Church——

MATT makes a move towards a door.

ARSON. Wait a minute! [He has up his coat and put on the cassock, to strengthen the priest within I think I read you were that Cap- Denant who——

MATT stares at him and there is a silence.

ATT. Death isn't as much to us who in the war, as it is to you.

ARSON. I know; I was there.

ATT. Padre?

ARSON. [Nodding] Where have you from?

ATT. House of the two ladies over . Left them fighting over me. Could- and that—not worth it.

ARSON. [With a little smile] Yes, Miss Dora wanted to keep you and Miss Grace to throw you out. H'm? And yet Miss Dora doesn't come to church, and Miss Grace does. Something wrong there; or is it something right? [He stares at MATT] Are they after you?

MATT. Full cry.

PARSON. Sanctuary? If I were a Roman. Sometimes wish I were.

MATT. More logical.

PARSON. More powerful. This is a situation I've never had to face, Captain Denant.

MATT. Well, sir, I'm just about done. If you could let me rest a bit, that's all I ask.

PARSON. My dear fellow! Sit down! [He pulls a chair forward] I'll lock the door. [He does so; then, as MATT looks up at the window, which is in the fourth wall] No, they can't see in. I expect you're very hungry too.

MATT. [Sitting] No, thanks—beyond it. You know that feeling, I bet?

PARSON. [Shaking his head] I'm afraid we of the Church lead too regular lives.

MATT. Not at the Front? It was pretty rife there.

PARSON. No, I'm ashamed to say—not even at the front.

While speaking, he is evidently pondering and torn.

MATT. [Suddenly] Well, Padre, how does it look to you? Giving me up?

PARSON. [Moved] Padre! [He takes a turn and comes to a sudden halt in front of MATT'S chair] As man to man—who am I to give you up? One poor fellow to another! [Shaking his head] I can't help you to escape, but if you want rest, take it.

MATT. [Suddenly] Wonder what Christ would have done!

PARSON. [Gravely] That, Captain Denant, is the hardest question in the world. Nobody ever knows. You may answer this or that, but nobody ever knows. The more you read those writings, the more you realise that He was incalculable. You see—He was a genius! It makes it hard for us who try to follow him. [Gazing at MATT, who is sitting forward with his elbows on his knees and his head on his hands] Very tired?

MATT. Gosh! I didn't think one could feel so tired. My joints have gone on strike. I was a three-mile runner, too.

PARSON. Were you? Good man!

MATT. It's the strain here. [Touching his head] If they get me and I have to go back! Odd! I didn't feel it half as much when I was escaping from Germany.

PARSON. Did anyone see you come in here?

MATT. Can't have—they'd have been in on my heels.

PARSON. Who's after you?

MATT. Villagers—and a constable.

PARSON. My villagers—and here am I——

MATT. [Standing up] By George, yes, Padre! It's too bad, I'll clear out.

PARSON. [Putting his hand on his shoulder and pressing him back into the chair] No, no! Rest while you can. You've asked for sanctuary. I don't know that I've the right to turn you out of here. I don't know—anyway I can't. Take your time. I have a little brandy here. Sometimes we get a faint in church—[He takes a bottle and a little glass from the corner cupboard] Drink it down.

MATT. [Drinking it off. Pulling out the flask] I say—I wonder if you'd return this for me; it's empty—to that name and address. [He takes a tailor-sewn label out of his pocket] I ripped it off this Burberry. You might say "with unending gratitude." But please don't give that name away.

PARSON. No, no; I'll see to it. [Pockets it] Tell me! What made you escape?

MATT. Stick a bob-cat in a cage and open the door by mistake; and see what happens. [Looking at the PARSON'S face] Oh! Yes, I know what you mean—but I've paid my scot long ago.

PARSON. Didn't you have a fair trial?

MATT. You can't "try" bad luck.

PARSON. All bad luck?

MATT. Well, I oughtn't to have hit him, of course; original sin, you know; but for an ordinary knockout six weeks is about all you'd get; and I got four years more for that Rotten Row rail. Yes, I think I was perfectly entitled to have a shot.

PARSON. If you're quiet in your o mind—that's the only thing.

MATT. Well, you needn't wor Padre. I shall be caught all right.

PARSON. [With a smile] I'm worrying about that. Cæsar can lo after himself, he has the habit. Wh bothers me is my own peace of mind don't like the thoughts that keep risi in it. You led a company in the war. A I lead——

MATT. Your parishioners—um?

PARSON. Yes. [Nodding] When you gone—shall I be entitled to have be silent about you without telling th that I have been silent? Am I entitled refrain from helping the Law with letting them know it? If I let them kn it, can I keep what little influence I n possess? And is it right for a parson go on where he has no influence? Tha my trouble, Captain Denant.

MATT. Trapped, by George!

[He springs towards the casso and blots himself out.

The PARSON has gone again to the door.

ARSON. [Rather sharply] What is :?

'OICE OF CONSTABLE. Open the door, ir, please!

ARSON. Who is it?

'OICE OF CONSTABLE. Constable, Zurr; ı please.

The PARSON with a gesture of distress, opens the door. Enter the CONSTABLE, the FARMER, the TWO LABOURERS, and the BELLRINGER.

ARSON. I told you, Thomas, I could no one till after Service.

ELLRINGER. Yes, Zurr; but Constable ought you ought to know as 'ow I a man enter 'ere a while back.

[He looks round.

ARSON. What's all this, Constable?

)NSTABLE. 'Tis th' escaped convict, . We'm after 'e. These tu men yere d 'e down to the old gravel-pit. 'E 'em the slip, an' we chased un to ladies' 'ouse yonder, wherr 'e gave ıe goo-by again; and Tammas says w a man come in 'ere as sounds perly like the varmint. You ben 'ere Zurr?

ARSON. An hour, at least.

)NSTABLE. Front door's locked, but I men in the porch. Be 'ee sure as 's no one in the church?

ARSON. [Moving towards the ch door] I don't know whether you the right to search a holy place; look for yourselves, as quietly as can, please.

He stands at the church door to let them pass.

They go, with the exception of the BELLRINGER, who has remained by the vestry door. The PARSON crosses to him.

RSON. You can go, too, Thomas, and here.

The BELLRINGER, with uneasy eyes and motions, crosses under the compulsion of the PARSON'S glance.

RSON. [Hardly moving his lips] quick!

But as he speaks, the FARMER reappears in the church doorway; the PARSON has just time to make a warning gesture, MATT just time to blot himself out again.

PARSON. Well, Browning?

FARMER. 'Eem not therr; 'tes zo bare's me 'and, 'Eem a proper twisty customer for sure, but we'll get 'e yet.

[His eyes rest suspiciously on the PARSON'S face.

PARSON. [With a forced smile] He got away from you, then, did he?

FARMER. Aye! 'E can run an' twist like a rabbit. He'm a desperate foxy chap. What's behind they cassocks?

PARSON. [Still with that forced smile] I'll look, Browning.

He moves to the cassocks, and, from the middle, takes a look behind them, but to the Left only. And at this moment they all return from the church and he turns to them.

CONSTABLE. Thank 'ee, Zurr; 'e'm not yere, Tammas. Yu made a fule of us zeemin'ly.

BELLRINGER. [Stammering] I zeed mun come in 'ere; I zeed mun wi' these eyes—I did zurely.

PARSON. [Looking at his watch] Service, Thomas. Go and ring the bell. [To the CONSTABLE] I'm afraid I must ask you to go too, please, unless you would all like to stay for Service.

A certain length of face becomes apparent.

CONSTABLE. [Opening the door and beckoning the MEN out] My juty, Zurr, ef yu'll excuse us.

PARSON. That's all right, Constable.

FARMER. [Suddenly] Jest a minute, Vicar, Yu'll pardon me askin', but are yo zartun zure as yu'm not zeen this joker?

PARSON. [Drawing himself up] What is it you are asking me?

FARMER. I'm askin' yu on yure honour as a Christian gentleman, whether or no yu've zeen the escaped convict?

After a moment's intense silence.

PARSON. I——

MATT. [Stepping out without the Burberry] Certainly he's not. Sorry, sir, I was hidden there. [Holding up his hands] I surrender, Constable.

FARMER. Woi! The varmint! Got un! Worry, worry, worry!

PARSON. Be quiet in this place; and go out—You shame God!

Astonished at this outburst, they slink out, leaving MATT, Centre, in the grip of the CONSTABLE. The PARSON is on his Left.

MATT. [To the PARSON] Forgive me, sir! Oughtn't to have come in here. It wasn't playing cricket.

PARSON. No, No! That you have do —that you have done.

MATT. It's one's decent self one ca escape.

SCENE I

six o'clock of a November evening, in KEITH DARRANT'S study. A large, dark-curtained room where the light from a single reading-lamp falling on Turkey carpet, on books beside a large armchair, on the deep blue-and-gold coffee service, makes a sort of oasis before a log fire. In red Turkish slippers and an old brown velvet coat, KEITH DARRANT sits asleep. He has a dark, clean-cut, clean-shaven face, dark grizzling hair, dark twisting eyebrows.

curtained door away out in the dim part of the room behind him is opened so softly that he does not wake. LARRY DARRANT enters and stands half lost in the curtain over the door. A thin figure, with a worn, high-cheekboned face, deep-sunk blue eyes and wavy hair all ruffled—a face which still has a certain beauty. He moves inwards along the wall, stands still again and utters a gasping sigh. KEITH stirs in his chair.

ITH. Who's there?

RRY. [In a stifled voice[Only I—y.

ITH. [Half-waked] Come in! I was p.

[He does not turn his head, staring sleepily at the fire.

The sound of LARRY'S breathing can be heard.

ITH. [Turning his head a little] , Larry, what is it?

LARRY comes skirting along the wall, as if craving its support, outside the radius of the light.

ITH. [Staring] Are you ill?

LARRY stands still again and heaves a deep sigh.

KEITH. [Rising, with his back to the fire, and staring at his brother] What is it man? [Then with a brutality born of nerves suddenly ruffled] Have you committed a murder that you stand there like a fish?

LARRY. [In a whisper] Yes, Keith.

KEITH. [With vigorous disgust] By Jove! Drunk again! [In a voice changed by sudden apprehension] What do you mean by coming here in this state? I told you—— If you weren't my brother——! Come here, where I can see you! What's the matter with you, Larry?

With a lurch LARRY leaves the shelter of the wall and sinks into a chair in the circle of light.

LARRY. It's true.

KEITH steps quickly forward and stares down into his brother's eyes, where is a horrified wonder, as if they would never again get on terms with his face.

KEITH. [Angry, bewildered—in a low voice] What in God's name is this nonsense?

He goes quickly over to the door and draws the curtain aside, to see that it is shut, then comes back to LARRY, who is huddling over the fire.

KEITH. Come, Larry! Pull yourself together and drop exaggeration! What on earth do you mean?

LARRY. [In a shrill outburst] It's true, I tell you; I've killed a man.

KEITH. [Bracing himself; coldly] Be quiet!

LARRY lifts his hands and wrings them.

KEITH. [Utterly taken aback] Why come here and tell me this?

LARRY. Whom should I tell, Keith?

I came to ask what I'm to do—give myself up, or what?

KEITH. When—when—what——?

LARRY. Last night.

KEITH. Good God! How? Where? You'd better tell me quietly from the beginning. Here, drink this coffee; it'll clear your head.

[He pours out and hands him a cup of coffee. LARRY drinks it off.

LARRY. My head! Yes! It's like this, Keith—there's a girl——

KEITH. Women! Always women, with you! Well?

LARRY. A Polish girl. She—her father died over here when she was sixteen, and left her all alone. There was a mongrel living in the same house who married her—or pretended to. She's very pretty, Keith. He left her with a baby coming. She lost it, and nearly starved. Then another fellow took her on, and she lived with him two years, till that brute turned up again and made her go back to him. He used to beat her black and blue. He'd left her again when I met her. She was taking anybody then. [He stops, passes his hand over his lips, looks up at KEITH, and goes on defiantly] I never met a sweeter woman, or a truer, that I swear. Woman! She's only twenty now! When I went to her last night, that devil had found her out again. He came for me—a bullying, great, hulking brute. Look! [He touches a dark mark on his forehead] I took his ugly throat, and when I let go——

[He stops and his hands drop.

KEITH. Yes?

LARRY. [In a smothered voice] Dead, Keith. I never knew till afterwards that she was hanging on to him—to h-help me. [Again he wrings his hands.

KEITH. [In a hard, dry voice] What did you do then?

LARRY. We—we sat by it a long time.

KEITH. Well?

LARRY. Then I carried it on my back down the street, round a corner, to an archway.

KEITH. How far?

LARRY. About fifty yards.

KEITH. Was—did anyone see?

LARRY. No.

KEITH. What time?

LARRY. Three in the morning.

KEITH. And then?

LARRY. Went back to her.

KEITH. Why—in heaven's name?

LARRY. She was lonely and afraid. was I, Keith.

KEITH. Where is this place?

LARRY. Forty-two Borrow Squ Soho.

KEITH. And the archway?

LARRY. Corner of Glove Lane.

KEITH. Good God! Why, I saw i the paper this morning. They were t ing of it in the Courts! [He snatches evening paper from his armchair, runs over it and reads] Here it is ag "Body of a man was found this morn under an archway in Glove Lane. F marks about the throat grave suspici of foul play are entertained. The b had apparently been robbed." My G [Suddenly he turns] You saw thi the paper and dreamed it. D'you un stand, Larry?—you dreamed it.

LARRY. [Wistfully] If only I Keith!

KEITH makes a movement of hands almost like his brother's

KEITH. Did you take anything f the—body?

LARRY. [Drawing an envelope f his pocket] This dropped out while were struggling.

KEITH. [Snatching it and read "Patrick Walenn"—Was that his na "Simon's Hotel, Farrier Street, don." LARRY. [Simply] Yes. You must k what I ought to do. I didn't mean t him, Keith. I love the girl—I love What shall I do?

KEITH. Love!

EITH. When did you leave the girl
?

ARRY. About seven.

EITH. Where did you go?

ARRY. To my rooms.

EITH. Fitzroy Street?

ARRY. Yes.

EITH. What have you done since?

ARRY. Sat there—thinking.

EITH. Not been out?

ARRY. No.

EITH. Not seen the girl? [LARRY s his head] Will she give you

ARRY. Never.

EITH. Or herself—hysteria?

ARRY. No.

EITH. Who knows of your relations her?

ARRY. No one.

EITH. No one?

ARRY. I don't know who should,

EITH. Did anyone see you go in

RRY. [Angered] Yes, a girl like

LARRY shakes his head.

KEITH. Nor leave in the morning? You can't be certain.

LARRY. I am.

KEITH. You were fortunate. Sit down again, man. I must think.

He turns to the fire and leans his elbows on the mantelpiece and his head on his hands. LARRY sits down again obediently.

KEITH. It's all too unlikely. It's monstrous!

LARRY. [Sighing it out] Yes.

KEITH. This Walenn—was it his first reappearance after an absence?

LARRY. Yes.

KEITH. How did he find out where she was?

LARRY. I don't know.

KEITH. [Brutally] How drunk were you?

LARRY. I was not drunk.

KEITH. How much had you drunk, then?

LARRY. A little claret—nothing!

KEITH. You say you didn't mean to kill him?

LARRY. God knows.

KEITH. That's something.

LARRY. He hit me. [He holds up his hands] I didn't know I was so strong.

KEITH. She was hanging on to him, you say?—That's ugly.

LARRY. She was scared for me.

KEITH. D'you mean she—loves you?

LARRY. [Simply] Yes, Keith.

KEITH. [Brutally] Can a woman like that love?

LARRY. [Flashing out] By God, you are a stony devil! Why not?

KEITH. [Dryly] I'm trying to get at truth. If you want me to help, I must know everything. What makes you think she's fond of you?

LARRY. [With a crazy laugh] Oh, you lawyer! Were you never in a woman's arms?

KEITH. I'm talking of love.

LARRY. [Fiercely] So am I. I tell you she's devoted. Did you ever pick up a lost dog? Well, she has the lost dog's love for me. And I for her; we picked each other up. I've never felt for another woman what I feel for her—she's been the saving of me!

KEITH. [With a shrug] What made you choose that archway?

LARRY. It was the first dark place.

KEITH. Did his face look as if he'd been strangled?

LARRY. Don't!

KEITH. Did it?

LARRY bows his head.

KEITH. Very disfigured?

LARRY. Yes.

KEITH. Did you look to see if his clothes were marked?

LARRY. No.

KEITH. Why not?

LARRY. [In an outburst] I'm not made of iron, like you. Why not? If you had done it——!

KEITH. [Holding up his hand] You say he was disfigured. Would he be recognisable?

LARRY. [Wearily] I don't know.

KEITH. When she lived with him last —where was that?

LARRY. In Pimlico, I think.

KEITH. Not Soho?

LARRY shakes his head.

KEITH. How long has she been at this Soho place?

LARRY. Nearly a year.

KEITH. Living this life?

LARRY. Till she met me.

KEITH. Till she met you? And you believe——?

LARRY. [Starting up] Keith!

KEITH. [Again raising his hand] Always in the same rooms?

LARRY. [Subsiding] Yes.

KEITH. What was he? A professional bully?

LARRY nods.

KEITH. Spending most of his time abroad, I suppose.

LARRY. I think so.

KEITH. Can you say if he was known to the police?

LARRY. I've never heard.

KEITH turns away and walks up and down; then, stopping at LARRY'S chair, he speaks.

KEITH. Now listen, Larry. When you leave here, go straight home, and stay there till I give you leave to go out again. Promise.

LARRY. I promise.

KEITH. Is your promise worth a thing?

LARRY. [With one of his flash] "Unstable as water, he shall not exc

t eleven o'clock the following night in WANDA'S room on the ground loor in Soho. In the light from one close-shaded electric bulb the room s but dimly visible. A dying fire urns on the left. A curtained win-low in the centre of the back wall. A door on the right. The furniture s plush-covered and commonplace, with a kind of shabby smartness. A couch, without back or arms, tands aslant, between window and ire.

his WANDA is sitting, her knees rawn up under her, staring at the mbers. She has on only her night-own and a wrapper over it· her are feet are thrust into slippers. Her hands are crossed and pressed ver her breast. She starts and looks p, listening. Her eyes are candid nd startled, her face alabaster pale, nd its pale brown hair, short and quare-cut, curls towards her bare eck. The startled dark eyes and the aint rose of her lips are like colour-taining on a white mask.

teps as of a policeman, very meas-red, pass on the pavement outside, nd die away. She gets up and steals o the window, draws one curtain side so that a chink of the night is een. She opens the curtain wider, ill the shape of a bare, witch-like ree becomes visible in the open pace of the little Square on the far ide of the road. The footsteps are eard once more coming nearer. WANDA closes the curtains and ranes back. They pass and die again. She moves away and stands looking down at the floor between door and couch, as though seeing something there; shudders; covers her eyes; goes back to the couch and sits down again just as before, to stare at the embers. Again she is startled by noise of the outer door being opened. She springs up, runs and turns out the light by a switch close to the door. By the dim glimmer of the fire she can just be seen standing by the dark window-curtains, listening.

There comes the sound of subdued knocking on her door. She stands in breathless terror. The knocking is repeated. The sound of a latch-key in the door is heard. Her terror leaves her. The door opens; a man enters in a dark, fur overcoat.

WANDA. [In a voice of breathless relief, with a rather foreign accent] Oh! it's you, Larry! Why did you knock? I was so frightened. Come in! [She crosses quickly, and flings her arms round his neck. Recoiling—in a terror-stricken whisper] Oh! Who is it?

KEITH. [In a smothered voice] A friend of Larry's. Don't be frightened.

She has recoiled again to the window; and when he finds the switch and turns the light up, she is seen standing there holding her dark wrapper up to her throat, so that her face has an uncanny look of being detached from the body.

KEITH. [Gently] You needn't be afraid. I haven't come to do you harm—quite the contrary. [Holding up the keys] Larry wouldn't have given me these, would he, if he hadn't trusted me?

WANDA does not move, staring like a spirit startled out of the flesh.

KEITH. [After looking round him] I'm sorry to have startled you.

WANDA. [In a whisper] Who are you, please?

KEITH. Larry's brother.

WANDA, with a sigh of utter relief, steals forward to the couch and sinks down. KEITH goes up to her.

KEITH. He's told me.

WANDA. [Clasping her hands round her knees] Yes?

KEITH. An awful business!

WANDA. Yes; oh, yes! Awful—it is awful!

KEITH. [Staring round him again] In this room?

WANDA. Just where you are standing. I see him now, always falling.

KEITH. [Moved by the gentle despair in her voice] You look very young. What's your name?

WANDA. Wanda.

KEITH. Are you fond of Larry?

WANDA. I would die for him!

A moment's silence.

KEITH. I—I've come to see what you can do to save him.

WANDA. [Wistfully] You would not deceive me. You are really his brother?

KEITH. I swear it.

WANDA. [Clasping her hands] If I can save him! Won't you sit down?

KEITH. [Drawing up a chair and sitting] This man, your—your husband, before he came here the night before last—how long since you saw him?

WANDA. Eighteenth month.

KEITH. Does anyone about here know you are his wife?

WANDA. No. I came here to live a bad life. Nobody know me. I am quite alone.

KEITH. They've discovered who he was—you know that?

WANDA. No; I have not dared to go out.

KEITH. Well, they have; and they'll look for anyone connected with him, of course.

WANDA. He never let people think I was married to him. I don't know if I was—really. We went to an office and signed our names; but he was a wicked man. He treated many, I think, like me.

KEITH. Did my brother ever see him before?

WANDA. Never! And that man first went for him.

KEITH. Yes. I saw the mark. Have you a servant?

WANDA. No. A woman come at nine in the morning for an hour.

KEITH. Does she know Larry?

WANDA. No. He is always gone.

KEITH. Friends—acquaintances?

EITH. [Under his breath] You said ne comes but Larry.

'ANDA. Yes, and you have his keys. if it is Larry! I must open!

KEITH shrinks back against the wall. WANDA goes to the door.

ANDA. [Opening the door an inch] ' Please? Who?

A thin streak of light from a bull's-eye lantern outside plays over the wall. A Policeman's voice says:

"All right, Miss. Your outer door's open. You ought to keep it shut after dark, you know."

ANDA. Thank you, sir.

The sound of retreating footsteps, of the outer door closing. WANDA shuts the door.

ANDA. A policeman!

ITH. [Moving from the wall] ! I must have left that door. [Sud—turning up the light] You told ey didn't know you.

ANDA. [Sighing] I did not think lid, sir. It is so long I was not out town; not since I had Larry.

KEITH gives her an intent look, then crosses to the fire. He stands there a moment, looking down, then turns to the girl, who has crept back to the couch.

TH. [Moved and restless] You must know what Larry is. He'll never stick to you.

WANDA. [Simply] He will, sir.

KEITH. [Energetically] The last man on earth to stick to anything! But for the sake of a whim he'll risk his life and the honour of all his family. I know him.

WANDA. No, no, you do not. It is I who know him.

KEITH. Come, now! At any moment they may find out your connection with that man. So long as Larry goes on with you, he's tied to this murder, don't you see?

WANDA. [Coming close to him] But he love me. Oh, sir! he love me!

KEITH. Larry has loved dozens of women.

WANDA. Yes, but——

[Her face quivers.

KEITH. [Brusquely] Don't cry! If I give you money, will you disappear, for his sake?

WANDA. [With a moan] It will be in the water, then. There will be no cruel men there.

KEITH. Ah! First Larry, then you! Come now. It's better for you both. A few months, and you'll forget you ever met.

WANDA. [Looking wildly up] I will go if Larry say I must. But not to live. No! [Simply] I could not, sir.

KEITH, moved, is silent.

WANDA. I could not live without Larry. What is left for a girl like me—when she once love? It is finish.

KEITH. I don't want you to go back to that life.

WANDA. No; you do not care what I do. Why should you? I tell you I will go if Larry say I must.

KEITH. That's not enough. You know that. You must take it out of his hands. He will never give up his present for the sake of his future. If you're as fond of him as you say, you'll help to save him.

WANDA. [Below her breath] Yes! Oh, yes! But do not keep him long from me —I beg!

[She sinks to the floor and clasps his knees.

KEITH. Well, well! Get up.

There is a tap on the windowpane.

KEITH. Listen!

A faint, peculiar whistle.

WANDA. [Springing up] Larry! Oh, thank God!

She runs to the door, opens it, and goes out to bring him in. KEITH stands waiting, facing the open doorway.

LARRY enters with WANDA just behind him.

LARRY. Keith!

KEITH. [Grimly] So much for your promise not to go out!

LARRY. I've been waiting in for you all day. I couldn't stand it any longer.

KEITH. Exactly!

LARRY. Well, what's the sentence, brother? "Transportation for life and then to be fined forty pounds"?

KEITH. So you can joke, can you?

LARRY. Must.

KEITH. A boat leaves for the Argentine the day after to-morrow; you must go by it.

LARRY. [Putting his arms around WANDA, who is standing motionless with her eyes fixed on him] Together, Keith?

KEITH. You can't go together. I'll send her by the next boat.

LARRY. Swear?

KEITH. Yes. You're lucky—they're on a false scent.

LARRY. What!

KEITH. You haven't seen it?

LARRY. I've seen nothing, not even a paper.

KEITH. They've taken up a vagabond who robbed the body. He pawned a snake-shaped ring, and they identified this Walenn by it. I've been down and seen him charged myself.

LARRY. With murder?

WANDA. [Faintly] Larry!

KEITH. He's in no danger. They always get the wrong man first. It'll do him no harm to be locked up a bit—hyena like that. Better in prison, anyway, than sleeping out under archways in this weather.

LARRY. What was he like, Keith?

KEITH. A little yellow, ragged, lame, unshaven scarecrow of a chap. They were fools to think he could have had the strength.

LARRY. What! [In an awed voi
Why, I saw him—after I left you night.

KEITH. You? Where?

LARRY. By the archway.

KEITH. You went back there?

LARRY. It draws you, Keith.

KEITH. You're mad, I think.

KEITH. Swear?

LARRY. I swear.

KEITH. Remember, nothing! Good ght!

LARRY. Good night!

KEITH goes.

LARRY sits down on the couch and stares at the fire. The girl steals up and slips her arms about him.

LARRY. An innocent man!

WANDA. Oh, Larry! But so are you. hat did we want—to kill that man? ever! Oh! kiss me!

LARRY turns his head. She kisses his lips.

WANDA. I have suffered so—not ein' you. Don't leave me again— n't! Stay here. Isn't it good to be gether?—Oh! Poor Larry! How tired u look!—Stay with me. I am so fright- ed all alone. So frightened they will ke you from me.

LARRY. Poor child!

WANDA. No, no! Don't look like that!

LARRY. You're shivering.

WANDA. I will make up the fire. Love e, Larry! I want to forget.

LARRY. The poorest little wretch on od's earth—locked up—for me! A lit- wild animal, locked up. There he es, up and down, up and down—in his ge—don't you see him?—looking for place to gnaw his way through—little ey rat. [He gets up and roams about.

WANDA. No, no! I can't bear it! Don't ghten me more!

He comes back and takes her in his arms.

LARRY. There, there!

[He kisses her closed eyes.

WANDA. [Without moving] If we could sleep a little—wouldn't it be nice?

LARRY. Sleep?

WANDA. [Raising herself] Promise to stay with me—to stay here for good, Larry. I will cook for you; I will make you so comfortable. They will find him innocent. And then—Oh, Larry!—in the sun—right away—far from this horrible country. How lovely! [Trying to get him to look at her] Larry!

LARRY. [With a movement to free himself] To the edge of the world—and —over!

WANDA. No, no! No, no! You don't want me to die, Larry, do you? I shall if you leave me. Let us be happy! Love me!

LARRY. [With a laugh] Ah! Let's be happy and shut out the sight of him. Who cares? Millions suffer for no mortal reason. Let's be strong, like Keith. No! I won't leave you, Wanda. Let's forget everything except ourselves. [Suddenly] There he goes—up and down!

WANDA. [Moaning] No, no! See! I will pray to the Virgin. She will pity us!

She falls on her knees and clasps her hands, praying. Her lips move. LARRY stands motionless, with arms crossed, and on his face are yearning and mockery, love and despair.

LARRY. [Whispering] Pray for us! Bravo! Pray away!

Suddenly the girl stretches out her arms and lifts her face with a look of ecstasy.

LARRY. What?

WANDA. She is smiling! We shall be happy soon.

LARRY. [Bending down over her] Poor child! When we die, Wanda, let's go together. We should keep each other warm out in the dark.

WANDA. [Raising her hands to his face] Yes! oh, yes! If you die I could not—I could not go on living!

Curtain.

SCENE III

TWO MONTHS LATER

WANDA'S room. Daylight is just beginning to fail of a January afternoon. The table is laid for supper, with decanters of wine.

WANDA is standing at the window looking out at the wintry trees of the Square beyond the pavement. A newspaper BOY'S voice is heard coming nearer.

VOICE. Pyper! Glove Lyne murder! Trial and verdict! [Receding] Verdict! Pyper!

WANDA throws up the window as if to call to him, checks herself, closes it and runs to the door. She opens it, but recoils into the room. KEITH is standing there. He comes in.

KEITH. Where's Larry?

WANDA. He went to the trial. I could not keep him from it. The trial—— Oh! what has happened, sir?

KEITH. [Savagely] Guilty! Sentence of death! Fools!—idiots!

WANDA. Of death!

For a moment she seems about to swoon.

KEITH. Girl! girl! It may all depend on you. Larry's still living here?

WANDA. Yes.

KEITH. I must wait for him.

WANDA. Will you sit down, please?

KEITH. [Shaking his head] Are you ready to go away at any time?

WANDA. Yes, yes; always I am ready.

KEITH. And he?

WANDA. Yes—but now! What will he do? That poor man!

KEITH. A graveyard thief—a ghoul!

WANDA. Perhaps he was hungry. I have been hungry; you do things then that you would not. Larry has thought of him in prison so much all these weeks. Oh! what shall we do now?

KEITH. Listen! Help me. Don't let Larry out of your sight. I must see how things go. They'll never hang this wretch. [He grips her arms] Now, we must stop Larry from giving himself up. He's fool enough. D'you understand?

WANDA. Yes. But why has he not come in? Oh! If he have, already!

KEITH. [Letting go her arms] My God! If the police come—find me here —— [He moves to the door] No, he wouldn't—without seeing you first. He's sure to come. Watch him like a lynx. Don't let him go without you.

WANDA. [Clasping her hands on her breast] I will try, sir.

KEITH. Listen! [A key is heard in the lock] It's he!

LARRY enters. He is holding a great bunch of pink lilies and white narcissus. His face tells nothing. KEITH looks from him to the girl, who stands motionless.

LARRY. Keith! So you've seen?

KEITH. The thing can't stand. I'll stop it somehow. But you must give me time, Larry.

LARRY. [Calmly] Still looking after your honour, Keith?

KEITH. [Grimly] Think my reasons what you like.

WANDA. [Softly] Larry!

LARRY puts his arm round her.

LARRY. Sorry, old man.

KEITH. This man can and shall get off. I want your solemn promise that you won't give yourself up, nor even go out till I've seen you again.

LARRY. I give it.

KEITH. [Looking from one to the other] By the memory of our mother, swear that.

LARRY. [With a smile] I swear.

KEITH. I have your oath—both of you—both of you. I'm going at once to see what can be done.

LARRY. [Softly] Good luck, brother.

KEITH goes out.

WANDA. [Putting her hands on LARRY'S breast] What does it mean?

LARRY. Supper, child—I've had nothing all day. Put these lilies in water.

She takes the lilies and obediently puts them into a vase. LARRY pours wine into a deep-coloured glass and drinks it off.

LARRY. We've had a good time, Wanda. Best time I ever had, these last two months; and nothing but the bill to pay.

WANDA. [Clasping him desperately] h, Larry! Larry!

LARRY. [Holding her away to look at er] Take off those things and put on a ridal garment.

WANDA. Promise me—wherever you o, I go too. Promise! Larry, you think haven't seen, all these weeks. But I ave seen everything; all in your heart, ways. You cannot hide from me. I new—I knew! Oh, if we might go way into the sun! Oh! Larry—couldn't e? [She searches his eyes with hers—en shuddering] Well! If it must be ark—I don't care, if I may go in your ms. In prison we could not be to-ether. I am ready. Only love me first. on't let me cry before I go. Oh! Larry, ill there be much pain?

LARRY. [In a choked voice] No pain, y pretty.

WANDA. [With a little sigh] It is a ty.

LARRY. If you had seen him, as I ave, all day, being tortured. Wanda, we all be out of it. [The wine mounting his head] We shall be free in the ark; free of their cursed inhumanities. hate this world—I loathe it! I hate its od-forsaken savagery; its pride and nugness! Keith's world—all righteous ill-power and success. We're no good ere, you and I—we were cast out at rth—soft, will-less—better dead. No ar, Keith! I'm staying indoors. [He ours wine into two glasses] Drink it p!

Obediently WANDA drinks, and he also.

LARRY. Now go and make yourself eautiful.

WANDA. [Seizing him in her arms] h, Larry!

LARRY. [Touching her face and hair] hanged by the neck until he's dead—for hat I did.

WANDA takes a long look at his face, slips her arms from him, and goes out through the curtains below the fireplace.

LARRY feels in his pocket, brings out the little box opens it, fingers the white tabloids.

LARRY. Two each—after food. [He ughs and puts back the box] Oh! my girl! [The sound of a piano playing a faint festive tune is heard afar off. He mutters, staring at the fire] Flames—flame, and flicker—ashes.

"No more, no more, the moon is dead,
And all the people in it."

He sits on the couch with a piece of paper on his knees, adding a few words with a stylo pen to what is already written.

The GIRL, in a silk wrapper, coming back through the curtains, watches him.

LARRY. [Looking up] It's all here—I've confessed. [Reading] "Please bury us together. Laurence Darrant. January 28th, about six p.m." They'll find us in the morning. Come and have supper, my dear love.

The girl creeps forward. He rises, puts his arm round her, and with her arm twined round him, smiling into each other's faces, they go to the table and sit down.

The curtain falls for a few seconds to indicate the passage of three hours. When it rises again, the lovers are lying on the couch, in each other's arms, the lilies strewn about them. The girl's bare arm is round LARRY'S neck. Her eyes are closed; his are open and sightless. There is no light but firelight.

A knocking on the door and the sound of a key turned in the lock. KEITH enters. He stands a moment bewildered by the half-light, then calls sharply: "Larry!" and turns up the light. Seeing the forms on the couch, he recoils a moment. Then, glancing at the table and empty decanters, goes up to the couch.

KEITH. [Muttering] Asleep! Drunk! Ugh!

Suddenly he bends, touches LARRY, and springs back.

KEITH. What! [He bends again, shakes him and calls] Larry! Larry!

Then, motionless, he stares down at his brother's open, sightless eyes. Suddenly he wets his finger and holds it to the girl's lips, then to LARRY'S.

KEITH. Larry!

He bends and listens at their hearts; catches sight of the little box lying between them and takes it up.

KEITH. My God!

Then, raising himself, he closes his brother's eyes, and as he does so, catches sight of a paper pinned to the couch; detaches it and reads.

KEITH. "I, Laurence Darrant, about to die by my own hand confess that I——"

He reads on silently, in horror; finishes, letting the paper drop, and recoils from the couch on to a chair at the dishevelled supper table. Aghast, he sits there. Suddenly he mutters.

KEITH. If I leave that there—my name—my whole future!——

[He springs up, takes up the paper again, and again reads.

KEITH. My God! It's ruin!

He makes as if to tear it across, stops, and looks down at those two; covers his eyes with his hand; drops the paper and rushes to the door. But he stops there and comes back, magnetised, as it were, by that paper. He takes it up once more and thrusts it into his pocket.

The footsteps of a Policeman pass, slow and regular, outside. His face crisps and quivers: he stands listening till they d away. Then he snatches the pap from his pocket, and goes pa the foot of the couch to t fire.

KEITH. All my—— No! Let hi hang!

He thrusts the paper into the fi stamps it down with his fo watches it writhe and blacke Then suddenly clutching his hea he turns to the bodies on t couch. Panting and like a m demented, he recoils past the he of the couch, and rushing to t window, draws the curtains a throws the window up for a Out in the darkness rises t witch-like skeleton tree, where dark shape seems hanging. KEI starts back.

KEITH. What's that? What——!

[He shuts the window and dra the dark curtain across it aga

KEITH. Fool! Nothing!

Clenching his fists, he draws hi self up, steadying himself with his might. Then slowly he mov to the door, stands a second li a carved figure, his face hard stone.

Deliberately he turns out the ligh opens the door, and goes.

The still bodies lie there before t fire which is licking at the la blackened wafer.

A FARCICAL MORALITY
IN THREE SCENES

SCENE I

fternoon, on the departure platform of an Austrian railway station. At several little tables outside the buffet persons are taking refreshment, served by a pale young waiter. On a seat against the wall of the buffet a woman of lowly station is sitting beside two large bundles, on one of which she has placed her baby, swathed in a black shawl.

WAITER. [Approaching a table where- sit an English traveller and his wife] wo coffee?

ENGLISHMAN. [Paying] Thanks. [To is wife, in an Oxford voice] Sugar?

ENGLISHWOMAN. [In a Cambridge oice] One.

AMERICAN TRAVELLER. [With field- lasses and a pocket camera—from an- ther table] Waiter, I'd like to have you et my eggs. I've been sitting here quite while.

WAITER. Yes, sare.

GERMAN TRAVELLER. Kellner, bezah- n!

His voice is, like his moustache, stiff and brushed up at the ends. His figure also is stiff and his hair a little grey; clearly once, if not now, a colonel.

WAITER. Komm' gleich!

The baby on the bundle wails. The mother takes it up to soothe it. A young, red-cheeked Dutchman at the fourth table stops eating and laughs.

AMERICAN. My eggs! Get a wiggle on ou!

WAITER. Yes, sare.

[He rapidly recedes.

A LITTLE MAN in a soft hat is seen to the right of tables. He stands a moment looking after the hurrying waiter, then seats himself at the fifth table.

ENGLISHMAN. [Looking at his watch] Ten minutes more.

ENGLISHWOMAN. Bother!

AMERICAN. [Addressing them] 'Pears as if they'd a prejudice against eggs here, anyway.

The ENGLISH look at him, but do not speak.

GERMAN. [In creditable English] In these places man can get nothing.

The WAITER comes flying back with a compote for the DUTCH YOUTH, who pays.

GERMAN. Kellner, bezahlen!

WAITER. Eine Krone sechzig.

The GERMAN pays.

AMERICAN. [Rising, and taking out his watch—blandly] See here. If I don't get my eggs before this watch ticks twenty, there'll be another waiter in heaven.

WAITER. [Flying] Komm' gleich!

AMERICAN. [Seeking sympathy] I'm gettin' kind of mad!

The ENGLISHMAN halves his newspaper and hands the advertisement half to his wife. The BABY wails. The MOTHER rocks it. The DUTCH YOUTH stops eating and laughs. The GERMAN lights a cigarette. The LITTLE MAN sits motionless, nursing his hat. The WAITER comes flying back with the eggs and places them before the AMERICAN.

AMERICAN. [Putting away his watch] Good! I don't like trouble. How much?

He pays and eats. The WAITER stands a moment at the edge of the platform and passes his hand across his brow. The LITTLE MAN eyes him and speaks gently.

LITTLE MAN. Herr Ober!

The WAITER turns.

LITTLE MAN. May I have a glass of beer?

WAITER. Yes, sare.

LITTLE MAN. Thank you very much.

The WAITER goes.

AMERICAN. [Pausing in the deglutination of his eggs—affably] Pardon me, sir; I'd like to have you tell me why you called that little bit of a feller "Herr Ober." Reckon you would know what that means? Mr. Head Waiter.

LITTLE MAN. Yes, yes.

AMERICAN. I smile.

LITTLE MAN. Oughtn't I to call him that?

GERMAN. [Abruptly] Nein—Kellner.

AMERICAN. Why, yes! Just "waiter."

The ENGLISHWOMAN looks round her paper for a second. The DUTCH YOUTH stops eating and laughs. The LITTLE MAN gazes from face to face and nurses his hat.

LITTLE MAN. I didn't want to hurt his feelings.

GERMAN. Gott!

AMERICAN. In my country we're very democratic—but that's quite a proposition.

ENGLISHMAN. [Handling coffee-pot, to his wife] More?

ENGLISHWOMAN. No, thanks.

GERMAN. [Abruptly] These fellows—if you treat them in this manner, at once they take liberties. You see, you will not get your beer.

As he speaks the WAITER returns, bringing the LITTLE MAN'S beer, then retires.

AMERICAN. That 'pears to be one up to democracy. [To the LITTLE MAN] I judge you go in for brotherhood?

LITTLE MAN. [Startled] Oh, no!

AMERICAN. I take considerable stock in Leo Tolstoi myself. Grand man—grand-souled apparatus. But I guess you've got to pinch those waiters some to make 'em skip. [To the ENGLISH, who have carelessly looked his way for a moment] You'll appreciate that, the wa he acted about my eggs.

The ENGLISH make faint motion with their chins and avert thei eyes.

AMERICAN. [To the WAITER, who i standing at the door of the buffet] Wait er! Flash of beer—jump, now!

WAITER. Komm' gleich!

GERMAN. Cigarren!

WAITER. Schön! [He disappears

AMERICAN. [Affably—to the LITTL MAN] Now, if I don't get that flash o beer quicker'n you got yours, I shall ad mire.

GERMAN. [Abruptly] Tolstoi is ncth ing—nichts! No good! Ha?

AMERICAN. [Relishing the approach of argument] Well, that is a matter o temperament. Now, I'm all for equality See that poor woman there—very humble woman—there she sits among us with her baby. Perhaps you'd like to locate her somewhere else?

GERMAN. [Shrugging] Tolstoi is sen timentalisch. Nietszche is the true phi losopher, the only one.

AMERICAN. Well, that's quite in the prospectus—very stimulating party—old Nietch—virgin mind. But give me Leo [He turns to the red-cheeked YOUTH] What's your opinion, sir? I guess by your labels you'll be Dutch. Do they reac Tolstoi in your country?

The DUTCH YOUTH laughs.

AMERICAN. That is a very luminous answer.

GERMAN. Tolstoi is nothing. Ma should himself express. He must push—h he must be strong.

AMERICAN. That is so. In America we believe in virility; we like a man t expand. But we believe in brotherhoo too. We draw the line at niggers; but w aspire. Social barriers and distinctions we've not much use for.

ENGLISHMAN. Do you feel a draught

ENGLISHWOMAN. [With a shiver o her shoulder toward the AMERICAN] do—rather.

GERMAN. Wait! You are a young peo ple.

AMERICAN. That is so; there are n flies on us. [To the LITTLE MAN, who has been gazing eagerly from face t

?] Say! I'd like to have you give us r sentiments in relation to the duty nan.

The LITTLE MAN fidgets, and is about to open his mouth.

MERICAN. For example—is it your ion that we should kill off the weak diseased, and all that can't jump nd?

ERMAN. [Nodding] Ja, ja! That is ing.

ITTLE MAN. [Looking from face to
] They might be me.

The DUTCH YOUTH laughs.

MERICAN. [Reproving him with a
] That's true humility. 'Tisn't gram-
. Now, here's a proposition that gs it nearer the bone: Would you out of your way to help them when as liable to bring you trouble?

ERMAN. Nein, nein! That is stupid.

ITTLE MAN. [Eager but wistful] I'm id not. Of course one wants to—— re was St. Francis d'Assisi and St.
en l'Hospitalier, and——

MERICAN. Very lofty dispositions.
ss they died of them. [He rises]

iter, where to h—ll is that flash of

ERMAN. Cigarren!

AITER. Komm' gleich!

[He vanishes.

NGLISHMAN. [Consulting watch]
in's late.

NGLISHWOMAN. Really! Nuisance!

A station POLICEMAN, very square and uniformed, passes and repasses.

MERICAN. [Resuming his seat—to GERMAN] Now, we don't have so h of that in America. Guess we feel e to trust in human nature.

ERMAN. Ah! ha! you will presently there is nothing in him but self.

ITTLE MAN. [Wistfully] Don't you
ve in human nature?

MERICAN. Very stimulating question.

[He looks round for opinions.

The DUTCH YOUTH laughs.

ENGLISHMAN. [Holding out his half of the paper to his wife] Swop!

His wife swops.

GERMAN. In human nature I believe so far as I can see him—no more.

AMERICAN. Now that 'pears to me kind o' blasphemy. I believe in heroism. I opine there's not one of us settin' around here that's not a hero—give him the occasion.

LITTLE MAN. Oh! Do you believe that?

AMERICAN. Well! I judge a hero is just a person that'll help another at the expense of himself. Take that poor woman there. Well, now, she's a heroine, I guess. She would die for her baby any old time.

GERMAN. Animals will die for their babies. That is nothing.

AMERICAN. I carry it further. I postulate we would all die for that baby if a locomotive was to trundle up right here and try to handle it. [To the GERMAN] I guess you don't know how good you are. [As the GERMAN is twisting up the ends of his moustache—to the ENGLISHWOMAN] I should like to have you express an opinion, ma'am.

ENGLISHWOMAN. I beg your pardon.

AMERICAN. The English are very humanitarian; they have a very high sense of duty. So have the Germans, so have the Americans. [To the DUTCH YOUTH] I judge even in your little country they have that. This is an epoch of equality and high-toned ideals. [To the LITTLE MAN] What is your nationality, sir?

LITTLE MAN. I'm afraid I'm nothing particular. My father was half-English and half-American, and my mother half-German and half-Dutch.

AMERICAN. My! That's a bit streaky, any old way.

The POLICEMAN passes again.

AMERICAN. Now, I don't believe we've much use any more for those gentlemen in buttons. We've grown kind of mild—we don't think of self as we used to.

The WAITER has appeared in the doorway.

GERMAN. [In a voice of thunder] Cigarren! Donnerwetter!

AMERICAN. [Shaking his fist at the vanishing WAITER] That flash of beer!

WAITER. Komm' gleich!

AMERICAN. A little more, and he will join George Washington! I was about to remark when he intruded: In this year of grace 1913 the kingdom of Christ is quite a going concern. We are mighty near to universal brotherhood. The colonel here [He indicates the GERMAN] is a man of blood and iron, but give him an opportunity to be magnanimous, and he'll be right there. Oh, sir! yep!

The GERMAN, with a profound mixture of pleasure and cynicism, brushes up the ends of his moustache.

LITTLE MAN. I wonder. One wants to, but somehow—— [He shakes his head.

AMERICAN. You seem kind of skeery about that. You've had experience, maybe. I'm an optimist—I think we're bound to make the devil hum in the near future. I judge we shall occasion a good deal of trouble to that old party. There's about to be a holocaust of selfish interests. The colonel there with old-man Nietch—he won't know himself. There's going to be a very sacred opportunity.

As he speaks, the voice of a RAILWAY OFFICIAL is heard in the distance calling out in German. It approaches, and the words become audible.

GERMAN. [Startled] Der Teufel!

[He gets up, and seizes the bag beside him.

The STATION OFFICIAL has appeared; he stands for a moment casting his commands at the seated group. The DUTCH YOUTH also rises, and takes his coat and hat. The OFFICIAL turns on his heel and retires, still issuing directions.

ENGLISHMAN. What does he say?

GERMAN. Our drain has come in, de oder platform; only one minute we haf.

ALL have risen in a fluster.

AMERICAN. Now, that's very provoking. I won't get that flash of beer.

There is a general scurry to gather coats and hats and wraps, during which the lowly WOMAN is seen making desperate attempts to deal with her baby and the two large bundles. Quite defeated, she suddenly puts all down, wrings h hands, and cries out: "Herr Jes Hilfe!" The flying procession tu their heads at that strange cry

AMERICAN. What's that? Help?

[He continues to r

The LITTLE MAN spins round, ru es back, picks up baby and bun on which it was seated.

LITTLE MAN. Come along, good wo an, come along!

The WOMAN picks up the oth bundle and they run.

The WAITER, appearing in the do way with the bottle of be watches with his tired smile.

Curtain.

SCENE II

A second-class compartment of a corri carriage, in motion. In it are sea the ENGLISHMAN and his WIFE, posite each other at the corridor e she with her face to the engine, with his back. Both are somew protected from the rest of the tr ellers by newspapers. Next to sits the GERMAN, and opposite h sits the AMERICAN; next the AM ICAN in one window corner is se ed the DUTCH YOUTH; the oth window corner is taken by the G MAN'S bag. The silence is o broken by the slight rushing no of the train's progression and crackling of the English newspape

AMERICAN. [Turning to the DUT YOUTH] Guess I'd like that wind raised; it's kind of chilly after that run they gave us.

The DUTCH YOUTH laughs, goes through the motions of ra ing the window. The ENGLI regard the operation with unea irritation. The GERMAN opens bag, which reposes on the cor seat next him, and takes out book.

AMERICAN. The Germans are gr readers. Very stimulating practice. read most anything myself!

The GERMAN holds up the book that the title may be read.

AMERICAN. "Don Quixote"—fine book. Americans take considerable stock old man Quixote. Bit of a wild-cat—we don't laugh at him.

GERMAN. He is dead. Dead as a sheep. good thing, too.

AMERICAN. In America we have still te an amount of chivalry.

GERMAN. Chivalry is nothing—sentitalisch. In modern days—no good. nan must push, he must pull.

AMERICAN. So you say. But I judge r form of chivalry is sacrifice to the. We allow more freedom to the indual soul. Where there's something e and weak, we feel it kind of noble give up to it. That way we feel eled.

As he speaks there is seen in the corridor doorway the LITTLE MAN, with the WOMAN'S BABY still on his arm and the bundle held in the other hand. He peers in anxiously. The ENGLISH, acutely conscious, try to dissociate themselves from his presence with their papers. The DUTCH YOUTH laughs.

GERMAN. Ach! So!

AMERICAN. Dear me!

LITTLE MAN. Is there room? I can't a seat.

AMERICAN. Why, yes ! There's a seat one.

LITTLE MAN. [Depositing bundle out, and heaving BABY] May I?

AMERICAN. Come right in!

The GERMAN sulkily moves his bag. The LITTLE MAN comes in and seats himself gingerly.

AMERICAN Where's the mother?

LITTLE MAN. [Ruefully] Afraid she left behind.

The DUTCH YOUTH laughs. The ENGLISH unconsciously emerge from their newspapers.

AMERICAN. My! That would appear e quite a domestic incident.

The ENGLISHMAN suddenly utters a profound "Ha, ha!" and disappears behind his paper. And that paper and the one opposite are seen to shake, and little squirls and squeaks emerge.

GERMAN. And you haf got her bundle, and her baby. Ha! [He cackles drily.

AMERICAN. [Gravely] I smile. I guess Providence has played it pretty low down on you. It's sure acted real mean.

The BABY wails, and the LITTLE MAN jigs it with a sort of gentle desperation, looking apologetically from face to face. His wistful glance renews the fire of merriment wherever it alights. The AMERICAN alone preserves a gravity which seems incapable of being broken.

AMERICAN. Maybe you'd better get off right smart and restore that baby. There's nothing can act madder than a mother.

LITTLE MAN. Poor thing, yes! What she must be suffering!

A gale of laughter shakes the carriage. The ENGLISH for a moment drop their papers, the better to indulge. The LITTLE MAN smiles a wintry smile.

AMERICAN. [In a lull] How did it eventuate?

LITTLE MAN. We got there just as the train was going to start; and I jumped, thinking I could help her up. But it moved too quickly, and—and left her.

The gale of laughter blows up again.

AMERICAN. Guess I'd have thrown the baby out to her.

LITTLE MAN. I was afraid the poor little thing might miss her.

The BABY wails; the LITTLE MAN heaves it; the gale of laughter blows.

AMERICAN. [Gravely] It's highly entertaining—not for the baby. What kind of an old baby is it, anyway? [He sniffs] I judge it's a bit—niffy.

LITTLE MAN. Afraid I've hardly looked at it yet.

AMERICAN. Which end up is it?

LITTLE MAN. Oh! I think the right end. Yes, yes, it is.

AMERICAN. Well, that's something. Maybe you should hold it out of window a bit. Very excitable things, babies!

ENGLISHWOMAN. [Galvanised] No, no!

ENGLISHMAN. [Touching her knee] My dear!

AMERICAN. You are right, ma'am. I opine there's a draught out there. This baby is precious. We've all of us got stock in this baby in a manner of speaking. This is a little bit of universal brotherhood. Is it a woman baby?

LITTLE MAN. I—I can only see the top of its head.

AMERICAN. You can't always tell from that. It looks kind of over-wrapped up. Maybe it had better be unbound.

GERMAN. Nein, nein, nein!

AMERICAN. I think you are very likely right, Colonel. It might be a pity to unbind that baby. I guess the lady should be consulted in this matter.

ENGLISHWOMAN. Yes, yes, of course—I——

ENGLISHMAN. [Touching her] Let it be! Little beggar seems all right.

AMERICAN. That would seem only known to Providence at this moment. I judge it might be due to humanity to look at its face.

LITTLE MAN. [Gladly] It's sucking my finger. There, there—nice little thing—there!

AMERICAN. I would surmise in your leisure moments you have created babies, sir?

LITTLE MAN. Oh! no—indeed, no.

AMERICAN. Dear me!—That is a loss. [Addressing himself to the carriage at large] I think we may esteem ourselves fortunate to have this little stranger right here with us. Demonstrates what a hold the little and weak have upon us nowadays. The colonel here—a man of blood and iron—there he sits quite ca'm next door to it. [He sniffs] Now, this baby is ruther chastening—that is a sign of grace, in the colonel—that is true heroism.

LITTLE MAN. [Faintly] I—I can see its face a little now.

All bend forward.

AMERICAN. What sort of a physiognomy has it, anyway?

LITTLE MAN. [Still faintly] I don't see anything but—but spots.

GERMAN. Oh! Ha! Pfui!

The DUTCH YOUTH laughs.

AMERICAN. I am told that is not uncommon amongst babies. Perhaps could have you inform us, ma'am.

ENGLISHWOMAN. Yes, of cours only—what sort of—— LITTLE MAN. They seem all over —— [At the slight recoil of everyo I feel sure it's—it's quite a good b underneath.

AMERICAN. That will be ruther d cult to come at. I'm just a bit sensiti I've very little use for affections of epidermis.

GERMAN. Pfui!

He has edged away as far as can get, and is lighting a cigar.

The DUTCH YOUTH draws his back.

AMERICAN. [Also taking out a cig I guess it would be well to fumigate t carriage. Does it suffer, do you think LITTLE MAN. [Peering] Really, don't—I'm not sure—I know so li about babies. I think it would have nice expression—if—if it showed.

AMERICAN. Is it kind of boiled lo ing?

LITTLE MAN. Yes—yes, it is.

AMERICAN. [Looking gravely rou I judge this baby has the measles.

The GERMAN screws himself sp modically against the arm of ENGLISHWOMAN'S seat.

ENGLISHWOMAN. Poor little thi Shall I——? [She half ri

ENGLISHMAN. [Touching her] no—— Dash it!

AMERICAN. I honour your emoti ma'am. It does credit to us all. Bu sympathise with your husband too. measles is a very important pestile in connection with a grown woman.

LITTLE MAN. It likes my finger a fully. Really, it's rather a sweet baby

LITTLE MAN. No-o; they're dark, most black.

GERMAN. Gott! Typhus!

He bounds up on to the arm of ENGLISHWOMAN'S seat.

AMERICAN. Typhus! That's quite indisposition!

The DUTCH YOUTH rises sudde

and bolts out into the corridor. He is followed by the GERMAN, puffing clouds of smoke. The ENGLISH and AMERICAN sit a moment longer without speaking. The ENGLISHWOMAN'S face is turned with a curious expression—half pity, half fear—towards the LITTLE MAN. Then the ENGLISHMAN gets up.

NGLISHMAN. Bit stuffy for you here, , isn't it?

He puts his arm through hers, raises her, and almost pushes her through the doorway. She goes, still looking back.

MERICAN. [Gravely] There's noth- I admire more'n courage. Guess I'll nd smoke in the corridor.

As he goes out the LITTLE MAN looks very wistfully after him. Screwing up his mouth and nose, he holds the BABY away from him and wavers; then rising, he puts it on the seat opposite and goes through the motions of letting down the window. Having done so he looks at the BABY, who has begun to wail. Suddenly he raises his hands and clasps them, like a child praying. Since, however, the BABY does not stop wailing, he hovers over it in indecision; then, picking it up, sits down again to dandle it, with his face turned towards the open window. Finding that it still wails, he begins to sing to it in a cracked little voice. It is charmed at once. While he is singing, the AMERICAN appears in the corridor. Letting down the passage window, he stands there in the doorway with the draught blowing his hair and the smoke of his cigar all about him. The LITTLE MAN stops singing and shifts the shawl higher to protect the BABY'S head from the draught.

MERICAN. [Gravely] This is the sublime spectacle I have ever en- ed. There ought to be a record of

The LITTLE MAN looks at him, wondering.

AMERICAN. You are typical, sir, of the sentiments of modern Christianity. You illustrate the deepest feelings in the heart of every man.

The LITTLE MAN rises with the BABY and a movement of approach.

AMERICAN. Guess I'm wanted in the dining-car. [He vanishes.

The LITTLE MAN sits down again, but back to the engine, away from the draught, and looks out of the window, patiently jogging the BABY on his knee.

SCENE III

An arrival platform. The LITTLE MAN, with the BABY and the bundle, is standing disconsolate, while travellers pass and luggage is being carried by. A STATION OFFICIAL, accompanied by a POLICEMAN, appears from a doorway, behind him.

OFFICIAL. [Consulting telegram in his hand] Das ist der Herr.

They advance to the LITTLE MAN.

OFFICIAL. Sie haben einen Buben gestonlen?

LITTLE MAN. I only speak English and American.

OFFICIAL. Dies ist nicht Ihr Bube?

[He touches the BABY.

LITTLE MAN. [Shaking his head] Take care—it's ill.

The man does not understand.

LITTLE MAN. Ill—the baby——

OFFICIAL. [Shaking his head] Verstehe nicht. Dis is nod your baby? No?

LITTLE MAN. [Shaking his head violently] No, it is not. No.

OFFICIAL. [Tapping the telegram] Gut! You are 'rested.

[He signs to the POLICEMAN, who takes the LITTLE MAN'S arm.

LITTLE MAN. Why? I don't want the poor baby.

OFFICIAL. [Lifting the bundle] Dies ist nicht Ihr Gepäck—pag?

LITTLE MAN. No.

OFFICIAL. Gut. You are 'rested.

LITTLE MAN. I only took it for the poor woman. I'm not a thief—I'm—I'm——

OFFICIAL. [Shaking head] Verstehe nicht.

The LITTLE MAN tries to tear his hair. The disturbed BABY wails.

LITTLE MAN. [Dandling it as best he can] There, there—poor, poor!

OFFICIAL. Halt still! You are 'rested. It is all right.

LITTLE MAN. Where is the mother?

OFFICIAL. She comm by next drain. Das telegram say: Halt einen Herrn mit schwarzem Buben and schwarzem Gepäck. 'Rest genteman mit black baby und black—pag.

The LITTLE MAN turns up his eyes to heaven.

OFFICIAL. Komm mit us.

They take the LITTLE MAN towards the door from which they have come. A voice stops them.

AMERICAN. [Speaking from as far away as may be] Just a moment!

The OFFICIAL stops; the LITTLE MAN also stops and sits down on a bench against the wall. The POLICEMAN stands stolidly beside him. The AMERICAN approaches a step or two, beckoning; the OFFICIAL goes up to him.

AMERICAN. Guess you've got an angel from heaven there! What's the gentleman in buttons for?

OFFICIAL. Was ist das?

AMERICAN. Is there anybody here that can understand American?

OFFICIAL. Verstehe nicht.

AMERICAN. Well, just watch my gestures. I was saying [He points to the LITTLE MAN, then makes gestures of flying] you have an angel from heaven there. You have there a man in whom Gawd [He points upward] takes quite an amount of stock. You have no call to arrest him. [He makes the gesture of arrest] No, sir. Providence has acted pretty mean, loading off that baby on him. [He makes the motion of dandling] The little man has a heart of gold.

[He points to his heart, and takes out a gold coin.

OFFICIAL. [Thinking he is about to be bribed] Aber, das ist zu viel!

AMERICAN. Now, don't rattle me! [Pointing to the LITTLE MAN]. M[an] [Pointing to his heart] Herz [Pointi[ng] to the coin] von Gold. This is a flow[er] of the field—he don't want no gentlem[an] in buttons to pluck him up.

A little crowd is gathering, inclu[ding] the TWO ENGLISH, the GE[R]MAN, and the DUTCH YOUTH.

OFFICIAL. Verstehe absolut nichts [taps the telegram] Ich muss mein d[uty] do.

AMERICAN. But I'm telling you. T[his] is a white man. This is probably t[he] whitest man on Gawd's earth.

OFFICIAL. Das macht nichts—gut no gut, I muss mein duty do.

[He turns to go towards the LITT[LE] MAN.

AMERICAN. Oh! Very well, arr[est] him; do your duty. This baby has t[yp]hus.

At the word "typhus" the OFFICI[AL] stops.

AMERICAN. [Making gestures] Fir[st] class typhus, black typhus, schwarz typhus. Now you have it. I'm kind sorry for you and the gentleman in b[ut]tons. Do your duty!

OFFICIAL. Typhus? Der Bub'—baby hat typhus?

AMERICAN. I'm telling you.

OFFICIAL. Gott im Himmel!

AMERICAN. [Spotting the GERMAN the little throng] Here's a gentlem[an] will corroborate me.

OFFICIAL. [Much disturbed, and sig[nal]ing to the POLICEMAN to stand cle[ar] Typhus! Aber das ist grässlich!

AMERICAN. I kind o' thought yo[u] feel like that.

OFFICIAL. Die Sanitätsmachi[ne] Gleich!

A PORTER *goes to get it. Fr[om] either side the broken half-mo[on] of persons stand gazing at t[he] LITTLE MAN, who sits unhapp[ily] dandling the BABY in the cent[re]

OFFICIAL. [Raising his hands] W[as] zu thun?

AMERICAN. Guess you'd better isol[ate] the baby.

A silence, during which the LIT[TLE] MAN is heard faintly whistli[ng] and clucking to the BABY.

OFFICIAL. [Referring once more to gram] "'Rest gentleman mit black y." [Shaking his head] Wir must de tleman hold. [To the GERMAN] Bitte, n Herr, sagen Sie ihm, den Buben niedersetzen.

[He makes the gesture of deposit.
ERMAN. [To the LITTLE MAN] He : Put down the baby.

The LITTLE MAN shakes his head, and continues to dandle the BABY.

FFICIAL. You must.

The LITTLE MAN glowers, in silence.

NGLISHMAN. [In background—mutng] Good man!

ERMAN. His spirit ever denies.

FFICIAL. [Again making his gesture]
r er muss!

The LITTLE MAN makes a face at him.

FFICIAL. Sag' Ihm: Instantly put n baby, and komm mit us.

The BABY wails.

ITTLE MAN. Leave the poor ill baby
: alone? Be—be—be d——d to you!

MERICAN. [Jumping on to a trunk—s enthusiasm] Bully!

The ENGLISH clap their hands; the DUTCH YOUTH laughs. The OFFICIAL is muttering, greatly incensed.

MERICAN. What does that bodycher say?

ERMAN. He say this man use the v to save himsel' from arrest. Very rt—he say.

MERICAN. I judge you do him an inice. [Showing off the LITTLE MAN a sweep of his arm] This is a white
. He's got a black baby, and he won't e it in the lurch. Guess we would all noble, that way, give us the chance.

The LITTLE MAN rises, holding out the BABY, and advances a step or two. The half-moon at once gives, increasing its size; the AMERICAN climbs on to a higher trunk. The LITTLE MAN retires and again sits down.

MERICAN [Addressing the OFFI-] Guess you'd better go out of busi-and wait for the mother.

FFICIAL. [Stamping his foot] Die
ter sall 'rested be for taking out baby mit typhus. Ha! [To the LITTLE MAN] Put ze baby down!

The LITTLE MAN smiles.

OFFICIAL. Do you 'ear?

AMERICAN. [Addressing the OFFICIAL] Now, see here. 'Pears to me you don't suspicion just how beautiful this is. Here we have a man giving his life for that old baby that's got no claim on him. This is not a baby of his own making. No, sir, this is a very Christ-like proposition in the gentleman.

OFFICIAL. Put ze baby down, or ich will gommand someone it to do.

AMERICAN. That will be very interesting to watch.

OFFICIAL. [To POLICEMAN] Dake it vrom him.

The POLICEMAN mutters, but does not.

AMERICAN. [To the GERMAN] Guess I lost that.

GERMAN. He says he is not his officier.

AMERICAN. That just tickles me to death.

OFFICIAL. [Looking round] Vill nobody dake ze Bub'?

ENGLISHWOMAN. [Moving a step—faintly] Yes—I——

ENGLISHMAN. [Grasping her arm] By Jove! Will you!

OFFICIAL [Gathering himself for a great effort to take the BABY, and advancing two steps] Zen I gommand you ——[He stops and his voice dies away] Zit dere!

AMERICAN. My! That's wonderful. What a man this is! What a sublime sense of duty!

The DUTCH YOUTH laughs. The OFFICIAL turns on him, but as he does so the MOTHER of the BABY is seen hurrying.

MOTHER. Ach! Ach! Mei' Bubi!

Her face is illumined; she is about to rush to the LITTLE MAN.

OFFICIAL. [To the POLICEMAN] Nimm die Frau!

The POLICEMAN catches hold of the WOMAN.

OFFICIAL. [To the frightened WOMAN.] Warum haben Sie einen Buben mit typhus mit ausgebracht?

AMERICAN. [Eagerly, from his perch] What was that? I don't want to miss any.

GERMAN. He say: Why did you a baby with typhus with you bring out?

AMERICAN. Well, that's quite a question.

He takes out the field-glasses slung around him and adjusts them on the BABY.

MOTHER. [Bewildered] Mei' Bubi—Typhus—aber Typhus? [She shakes her head violently] Nein, nein, nein! Typhus!

OFFICIAL. Er hat Typhus.

MOTHER. [Shaking her head] Nein, nein, nein!

AMERICAN. [Looking through his glasses] Guess she's kind of right! I judge the typhus is where the baby's slobbered on the shawl, and it's come off on him.

The DUTCH YOUTH laughs.

OFFICIAL. [Turning on him furiously] Er hat Typhus.

AMERICAN. Now, that's where you slop over. Come right here.

The OFFICIAL mounts, and looks through the glasses.

AMERICAN. [To the LITTLE MAN] Skin out the baby's leg. If we don't locate spots on that, it'll be good enough for me.

The LITTLE MAN fumbles out the BABY'S little white foot.

MOTHER. Mei' Bubi!

[She tries to break away.

AMERICAN. White as a banana. [To the OFFICIAL—affably] Guess you've made kind of a fool of us with your old typhus.

OFFICIAL. Lass die Frau!

The POLICEMAN lets her go, and she rushes to her BABY.

MOTHER. Mei' Bubi!

The BABY, exchanging the warmth of the LITTLE MAN for the momentary chill of its MOTHER, wails.

OFFICIAL. [Descending and beckoning to the POLICEMAN] Sie wollen den Herrn accusiren?

The POLICEMAN takes the LITTLE MAN'S arm.

AMERICAN. What's that? They goin' to pinch him after all?

The MOTHER, still hugging her BABY, who has stopped crying, gazes at the LITTLE MAN, who sits dazedly looking up. Suddenly she drops on her knees, and with her free hand lifts his booted foot and kisses it.

AMERICAN. [Waving his hat] Hurrah! [He descends swiftly, goes up to the LITTLE MAN, whose arm the POLICEMAN has dropped, and takes his hand.] Brother, I am proud to know you. This is one of the greatest moments I have ever experienced. [Displaying the LITTLE MAN to the assembled company.] I think I sense the situation when I say that we all esteem it an honour to breathe the rather inferior atmosphere of this station here along with this little friend. I guess we shall all go home and treasure the memory of his face as the whitest thing in our museum of recollections. And perhaps this good woman will also go home and wash the face of our little brother here. I am inspired with a new faith in mankind. Ladies and gentlemen, I wish to present to you a sure-enough saint—only wanting a halo, to be transfigured. [To the LITTLE MAN] Stand right up.

The LITTLE MAN stands up bewildered. They come about him. The OFFICIAL bows to him, the POLICEMAN salutes him. The DUTCH YOUTH shakes his head and laughs. The GERMAN draws himself up very straight, and bows quickly twice. The ENGLISHMAN and his WIFE approach at last, two steps, then, thinking better of it, turn to each other and recede. The MOTHER kisses his hand. The PORTER returning with the Sanitätsmachine, turns it from behind, and its pink shower, goldened by a ray of sunlight, falls around the LITTLE MAN'S head, transfiguring it. He stands with eyes upraised to see whence the portent comes.

AMERICAN. [Rushing forward and dropping on his knees] Hold on just a minute! Guess I'll take a snapshot of this miracle. [He adjusts his pocket camera.] This ought to look bully!

scene is the sitting-room and veran-dah of Her bungalow.

room is pleasant, and along the back, where the verandah runs, it seems all window, both French and casement. There is a door right and a door left. The day is bright; the time morning.

SELF, dripping wet, comes running along the verandah, through the French window, with a wet Scotch terrier in her arms. She vanishes through the door left. A little pause, and LADY ELLA comes running, dry, thin, refined, and agitated. She halts where the tracks of water cease at the door left. A little pause, and MAUD comes running, fairly dry, stolid, breathless, and dragging a bull-dog, wet, breathless, and stout, by the crutch end of her en-tout-cas.

ADY ELLA. Don't bring Hannibal in know where she's put Edward!

AUD. [Brutally, to HANNIBAL] Bad Bad dog!

HANNIBAL snuffles.

ADY ELLA. Maud, do take him out! him up. Here! [She takes out a handkerchief] No—something ger! Poor darling Edward! [To NIBAL] You are a bad dog!

HANNIBAL snuffles.

AUD. Edward began it, Ella. [To NIBAL] Bad dog! Bad dog!

HANNIBAL snuffles.

ADY ELLA. Tie him up outside. Here, my scarf. Where is my poor treas- [She removes her scarf] Catch! ear's torn; I saw it.

HANNIBAL snuffles.

AUD. [She ties the scarf to his col- He smells horrible. Bad dog—get- into ponds to fight!

LADY ELLA. Tie him up, Maud. I must try in here.

Their husbands, THE SQUIRE and THE RECTOR, come hastening along the verandah.

MAUD. [To THE RECTOR] Smell him, Bertie! [To THE SQUIRE] You might have that pond drained, Squire!

She takes HANNIBAL out, and ties him to the verandah. THE SQUIRE and RECTOR come in. LADY ELLA is knocking on the door left.

HER VOICE. All right! I've bound him up!

LADY ELLA. May I come in?

HER VOICE. Just a second! I've got nothing on.

LADY ELLA recoils. THE SQUIRE and RECTOR make an involuntary movement of approach.

LADY ELLA. Oh! There you are!

THE RECTOR. [Doubtfully] I was just going to wade in——

LADY ELLA. Hannibal would have killed him, if she hadn't rushed in!

THE SQUIRE. Done him good, little beast!

LADY ELLA. Why didn't you go in, Tommy?

THE SQUIRE. Well, I would—only she——

LADY ELLA. I can't think how she got Edward out of Hannibal's awful mouth!

MAUD. [Without—to HANNIBAL, who is snuffling on the verandah and straining at the scarf] Bad dog!

LADY ELLA. We must simply thank her tremendously! I shall never forget the way she ran in, with her skirts up to her waist!

THE SQUIRE. By Jove! No. It was topping.

LADY ELLA. Her clothes must be ruined. That pond—ugh! [She wrinkles her nose] Tommy, do have it drained.

THE RECTOR. [Dreamily] I don't remember her face in church.

THE SQUIRE. Ah! Yes. Who is she? Pretty woman!

LADY ELLA. I must get the Vet. to Edward. [To THE SQUIRE] Tommy, do exert yourself!

MAUD re-enters.

THE SQUIRE. All right! [Exerting himself] Here's a bell!

HER VOICE. [Through the door] The bleeding's stopped. [They listen] Shall I send him in to you?

LADY ELLA. Oh, please! Poor darling!

LADY ELLA prepares to receive EDWARD. The SQUIRE and RECTOR stand transfixed. The door opens, and a bare arm gently pushes EDWARD forth. He is bandaged with a smooth towel. There is a snuffle —HANNIBAL has broken the scarf, outside.

LADY ELLA. [Aghast] Look! Hannibal's loose! Maud—Tommy. [To THE RECTOR] You!

The THREE rush to prevent HANNIBAL from re-entering.

LADY ELLA. [To EDWARD] Yes, I know—you'd like to! You shall bite him when it's safe. Oh! my darling, you do——

[She sniffs. MAUD and THE SQUIRE re-enter.

LADY ELLA. Have you tied him properly this time?

MAUD. With Bertie's braces.

LADY ELLA. Oh! but——

MAUD. It's all right; they're almost leather.

THE RECTOR re-enters, with a slight look of insecurity.

LADY ELLA. Rector, are you sure it's safe?

THE RECTOR. [Hitching at his trousers] No, indeed, Lady Ella—I——

LADY ELLA. Tommy, do lend a hand!

THE SQUIRE. All right, Ella; all right! He doesn't mean what you mean!

LADY ELLA. [Transferring EDWARD to THE SQUIRE] Hold him, Tommy. He's sure to smell out Hannibal!

HE SQUIRE. Braces.

ADY ELLA. Oh! Yes. We ought to them to dinner, Tommy.

HE SQUIRE. Ah! Yes. Wonder who are?

THE RECTOR and MAUD reappear.

HE RECTOR. Really very good of her end her husband's——I was—er——

AUD. That'll do, Bertie.

THEY see HER returning along the verandah, followed by a sandy, red-faced gentleman in leather leggings, with a needle and cotton in his hand.

ERSELF. Caught the doctor just start- So lucky!

ADY ELLA. Oh! Thank goodness!

OCTOR. How do, Lady Ella? How do, re?—how do, Rector? [To MAUD] v de do? This the beastie? I see. e! Who'll hold him for me?

ADY ELLA. Oh! I!

HERSELF. D'you know, I think I'd better. It's so dreadful when it's your own, isn't it? Shall we go in here, Doctor? Come along, pretty boy!

[She takes EDWARD, and they pass into the room, left.

LADY ELLA. I dreaded it. She is splendid!

THE SQUIRE. Dogs take to her. That's a sure sign.

THE RECTOR. Little things—one can always tell.

THE SQUIRE. Something very attractive about her—what! Fine build of woman.

MAUD. I shall get hold of her for parish work.

THE RECTOR. Ah! Excellent—excellent! Do!

THE SQUIRE. Wonder if her husband shoots? She seems quite—er—quite——

LADY ELLA. [Watching the door] Quite! Altogether charming; one of the nicest faces I ever saw.

THE DOCTOR comes out alone.

LADY ELLA. Oh! Doctor—have you? —is it——?

DOCTOR. Right as rain! She held him like an angel—he just licked her, and never made a sound.

LADY ELLA. Poor darling! Can I——

[She signs towards the door.

DOCTOR. Better leave 'em a minute. She's moppin' 'im off. [He wrinkles his nose] Wonderful clever hands!

THE SQUIRE. I say—who is she?

DOCTOR. [Looking from face to face with a dubious and rather quizzical expression] Who? Well—there you have me! All I know is she's a first-rate nurse —been helpin' me with a case in Ditch Lane. Nice woman, too—thorough good sort! Quite an acquisition here. H'm! [Again that quizzical glance] Excuse me hurryin' off—very late. Good-bye, Rector. Good-bye, Lady Ella. Good-bye!

[He goes. A silence.

THE SQUIRE. H'm! I suppose we ought to be a bit careful.

JARVIS, flyman of the old school, has appeared on the verandah.

JARVIS. [To THE RECTOR] Beg pardon, sir. Is the little dog all right?

MAUD. Yes.

JARVIS [Touching his hat] Seein' you've missed your train, m'm, shall I wait, and take you 'ome again?

MAUD. No.

JARVIS. Cert'nly, m'm.

[He touches his hat with a circular gesture, and is about to withdraw.

LADY ELLA. Oh, Jarvis—what's the name of the people here?

JARVIS. Challenger's the name. I've driven 'em in, my lady.

THE SQUIRE. Challenger? Sounds like a hound. What's he like?

JARVIS. [Scratching his head] Wears a soft 'at, sir.

THE SQUIRE. H'm! Ah!

JARVIS. Very nice gentleman, very nice lady. 'Elped me with my old mare when she 'ad the 'ighsteria last week—couldn't 'a' been kinder if they'd 'a' been angels from 'eaven. Wonderful fond o' dumb animals, the two of 'em. I don't pay no attention to gossip, meself.

MAUD. Gossip? What gossip?

JARVIS. [Backing] Did I make use of the word, m'm? You'll excuse me, I'm sure. There's always talk where there's newcomers. I takes people as I finds 'em.

THE RECTOR. Yes, yes, Jarvis—quite—quite right!

JARVIS. Yes, sir, I've—I've got a 'abit that way at my time o' life.

MAUD. [Sharply] How long have they been here, Jarvis?

JARVIS. Well—er—a matter of three weeks, m'm.

A slight involuntary stir.

JARVIS. [Apologetic] Of course, in my profession I can't afford to take notice of whether there's the matter of a ring between 'em, as the sayin' is. 'Tisn't 'ardly my business like.

A silence.

LADY ELLA. [Suddenly] Er—thank you, Jarvis; you needn't wait.

JARVIS. No, m'lady! Your service, sir—service, m'm. [He goes. A silence.

THE SQUIRE. [Drawing a little closer] Three weeks? I say—er—wasn't there a book?

THE RECTOR. [Abstracted] Three weeks—I certainly haven't seen them in church.

MAUD. A matter of a ring!

LADY ELLA. [Impulsively] Oh, bother! I'm sure she's all right. And if she is I don't care. She's been much too spl did.

THE SQUIRE. Must think of the lage. Didn't quite like the doctor's w of puttin' us off.

LADY ELLA. The poor darling ov his life to her.

THE SQUIRE. H'm! Dash it! Y Can't forget the way she ran into t stinkin' pond.

MAUD. My dear Ella! "What does matter!" We've got to know.

THE RECTOR. We do want light.

THE SQUIRE. I'll ring the bell.

[He rings. They look at each ot aghast.

LADY ELLA. What did you ring Tommy?

THE SQUIRE. [Flabbergasted] C knows!

MAUD. Somebody'll come.

THE SQUIRE. Rector—you—you've to——

MAUD. Yes, Bertie.

THE RECTOR. Dear me! But—e what—er—How?

THE SQUIRE. [Deeply—to himse The whole thing's damn delicate.

The door right is opened and a M appears. She is a determined-lo ing female. They face her in lence.

THE RECTOR. Er—er—your master not in?

THE MAID. No. 'E's gone up to L don.

THE RECTOR. Er—Mr. Challenger think?

THE MAID. Yes.

HE RECTOR. Yes! Er—quite so!

HE MAID. [Eyeing them] D'you it—Mrs. Challenger?

HE RECTOR. Ah! Not precisely——

HE SQUIRE. [To him in a low, demined voice] Go on.

HE RECTOR. [Desperately] I asked ause there was a—a—Mr. Challenger sed to know in the 'nineties, and I ight—you wouldn't happen to know long they've been married? My nd marr——

HE MAID. Three weeks.

HE RECTOR. Quite so—quite so! I ll hope it will turn out to be——Er—nk you——Ha!

ADY ELLA. Our dog has been fighting the Rector's, and Mrs. Challenger ued him; she's bathing his ear. 're waiting to thank her. You in't——

HE MAID. [Eyeing them] No.

[She turns and goes out.

HE SQUIRE. Phew! What a gorgon! ay, Rector, did you really know a llenger in the 'nineties?

HE RECTOR. [Wiping his brow] No.

HE SQUIRE. Ha! Jolly good!

ADY ELLA. Well, you see!—it's all it.

HE RECTOR. Yes, indeed. A great re-!

ADY ELLA. [Moving to the door] I t go in now.

HE SQUIRE. Hold on! You goin' to 'em to—to—anything?

ADY ELLA. Yes.

AUD. I shouldn't.

ADY ELLA. Why not? We all like look of her.

HE RECTOR. I think we should punish selves for entertaining that uncharie thought.

ADY ELLA. Yes. It's horrible not hav- the courage to take people as they

HE SQUIRE. As they are? H'm! How you till you know?

ADY ELLA. Trust our instincts, of rse.

HE SQUIRE. And supposing she'd ied out not married—eh!

ADY ELLA. She'd still be herself, dn't she?

AUD. Ella!

THE SQUIRE. H'm! Don't know about that.

LADY ELLA. Of course she would, Tommy.

THE RECTOR. [His hand stealing to his waist] Well! It's a great weight off my——!

LADY ELLA. There's the poor darling snuffling. I must go in.

She knocks on the door. It is opened, and EDWARD comes out briskly, with a neat little white pointed ear-cap on one ear.

LADY ELLA. Precious!

SHE HERSELF comes out, now properly dressed in flax-blue tinen.

LADY ELLA. How perfectly sweet of you to make him that!

SHE. He's such a dear. And the other poor dog?

MAUD. Quite safe, thanks to your strop.

HANNIBAL appears at the window, with the broken strop dangling. Following her gaze, they turn and see him.

MAUD. Oh! There, he's broken it. Bertie!

SHE. Let me! [SHE seizes HANNIBAL.

THE SQUIRE. We're really most tremendously obliged to you. Afraid we've been an awful nuisance.

SHE. Not a bit. I love dogs.

THE SQUIRE. Hope to make the acquaintance of Mr. —— of your husband.

LADY ELLA. [To EDWARD, who is straining] Gently, darling! Tommy, take him.

THE SQUIRE does so.

MAUD. [Approaching HANNIBAL] Is he behaving?

She stops short, and her face suddenly shoots forward at HER hands that are holding HANNIBAL'S neck.

SHE. Oh! yes—he's a love.

MAUD. [Regaining her upright position, and pursing her lips; in a peculiar voice] Bertie, take Hannibal.

THE RECTOR takes him.

LADY ELLA. [Producing a card] I can't be too grateful for all you've done for my poor darling. This is where we live. Do come—and see——

MAUD, whose eyes have never left those hands, tweaks LADY ELLA'S dress.

LADY ELLA. That is—I'm—I——

HERSELF looks at LADY ELLA in surprise.

THE SQUIRE. I don't know if your husband shoots, but if——

MAUD, catching his eye, taps the third finger of her left hand.

THE SQUIRE. —er—he—does—er—er——

HERSELF looks at THE SQUIRE surprised.

MAUD. [Turning to her husband, repeats the gesture with the low and simple word] Look!

THE RECTOR. [With round eyes, severely] Hannibal!

[He lifts him bodily and carries him away.

MAUD. Don't squeeze him, Bertie!

[She follows through the French window.

THE SQUIRE. [Abruptly—of the unoffending EDWARD] That dog'll be forgettin' himself in a minute.

[He picks up EDWARD and takes h out. LADY ELLA is left staring.

LADY ELLA. [At last] You musn think, I—— You musn't think, we— Oh! I must just see they don't let E ward get at Hannibal.

[She skims awa

HERSELF is left staring after LA ELLA, in surprise.

SHE. What is the matter with them? The door is opened.

THE MAID. [Entering and holding o a wedding-ring—severely] You left th m'm, in the bathroom.

SHE. [Looking, startled, at her finge Oh! [Taking it] I hadn't missed Thank you, Martha.

THE MAID goes.

A hand, slipping in at the caseme window, softly lays a pair braces on the window-sill. SH looks at the braces, then at t ring. HER lip curls.

SHE. [Murmuring deeply] Ah!

DEFEAT

A TINY DRAMA

DURING THE GREAT WAR. EVENING

empty room. The curtains drawn and gas turned low. The furniture and walls give a colour-impression as of greens and beetroot. There is a prevalence of plush. A fireplace on the Left, a sofa, a small table; the curtained window is at the back. On the table, in a common pot, stands a little plant of maidenhair fern, fresh and green.

er from the door on the Right, a GIRL and a YOUNG OFFICER in khaki. The GIRL wears a discreet dark dress, hat, and veil, and stained yellow gloves. The YOUNG OFFICER is tall, with a fresh, open face, and kindly eager blue eyes; he is a little lame. The GIRL, who is evidently at home, moves towards the gas jet to turn it up, then changes her mind, and going to the curtains, draws them apart and throws up the window. Bright moonlight comes flooding in. Outside are seen the trees of a little Square. She stands gazing out, suddenly turns inward with a shiver.

OUNG OFF. I say; what's the mat- You were crying when I spoke to IRL. [With a movement of recovery] nothing. The beautiful evening— 's all.

OUNG OFF. [Looking at her] Cheer

IRL. [Taking off hat and veil; her is yellowish and crinkly] Cheer up! are not lonelee, like me.

OUNG OFF. [Limping to the window oubtfully] I say, how did you—how you get into this? Isn't it an awfully eless sort of life?

GIRL. Yees, it ees. You haf been wounded?

YOUNG OFF. Just out of hospital today.

GIRL. The horrible war—all the misery is because of the war. When will it end?

YOUNG OFF. [Leaning against the window-sill, looking at her attentively] I say, what nationality are you?

GIRL. [With a quick look and away] Rooshian.

YOUNG OFF. Really! I never met a Russian girl.

The GIRL gives him another quick look.

YOUNG OFF. I say, is it as bad as they make out?

GIRL. [Slipping her hand through his arm] Not when I haf anyone as ni-ice as you; I never haf had, though. [She smiles, and her smile, like her speech, is slow and confiding] You stopped because I was sad, others stop because I am gay. I am not fond of men at all. When you know—you are not fond of them.

YOUNG OFF. Well, you hardly know them at their best, do you? You should see them in the trenches. By George! They're simply splendid—officers and men, every blessed soul. There's never been anything like it—just one long bit of jolly fine self-sacrifice; it's perfectly amazing.

GIRL. [Turning her blue-grey eyes on him] I expect you are not the last at that. You see in them what you haf in yourself, I think.

YOUNG OFF. Oh, not a bit; you're quite out! I assure you when we made the attack where I got wounded there wasn't a single man in my battalion, who wasn't an absolute hero. The way they went in—never thinking of themselves—it was simply ripping.

GIRL. [In a queer voice] It is the same too, perhaps, with—the enemy.

YOUNG OFF. Oh, yes! I know that.

GIRL. Ah! You are not a mean man. How I hate mean men!

YOUNG OFF. Oh! they're not really—they simply don't understand.

GIRL. Oh! You are a babee—a good babee—aren't you?

The YOUNG OFFICER doesn't like this, and frowns. The GIRL looks a little scared.

GIRL. [Clingingly] But I li-ke you for it. It is so good to find a ni-ice man.

YOUNG OFF. [Abruptly] About being lonely? Haven't you any Russian friends?

GIRL. [Blankly] Rooshian? No. [Quickly] The town is so beeg. Were you at the concert before you spoke to me?

YOUNG OFF. Yes.

GIRL. I too. I lofe music.

YOUNG OFF. I suppose all Russians do.

GIRL. [With another quick look at him] I go there always when I haf the money.

YOUNG OFF. What! Are you as badly on the rocks as that?

GIRL. Well, I haf just one shilling now.

She laughs bitterly. The laugh upsets him; he sits on the window-sill, and leans forward towards her.

YOUNG OFF. I say, what's your name?

GIRL. May. Well, I call myself that. It is no good asking yours.

YOUNG OFF. [With a laugh] You're a distrustful little soul, aren't you?

GIRL. I haf reason to be, don't you think?

YOUNG OFF. Yes. I suppose you're bound to think us all brutes.

GIRL. [Sitting on a chair close to the window where the moonlight falls on one powdered cheek] Well, I haf a lot of reason to be afraid all my time. I am dreadfully nervous now; I am not trusding anybody. I suppose you haf been killing lots of Germans?

YOUNG OFF. We never know, unless it happens to be hand to hand. I have come in for that yet.

GIRL. But you would be very glad you had killed some.

YOUNG OFF. Oh, glad? I don't thi so. We're all in the same boat, so f as that's concerned. We're not glad kill each other—not most of us. We our job—that's all.

GIRL. Oh! It is frightful. I expect haf my brothers killed.

YOUNG OFF. Don't you get any ne ever?

GIRL. News? No indeed, no news anybody in my country. I might not h a country; all that I ever knew is go fader, moder, sisters, broders, all; ne any more I shall see them, I suppo now. The war it breaks and breaks, breaks hearts. [She gives a little sna Do you know what I was thinking wh you came up to me? I was thinking my native town, and the river in moonlight. If I could see it again would be glad. Were you ever hon seeck?

YOUNG OFF. Yes, I have been—in trenches. But one's ashamed—with the others.

GIRL. Ah! Yees! Yees! You are comrades there. What is it like for here, do you think, where everybo hates and despises me, and would ca me and put me in prison, perhaps.

[Her breast heav

YOUNG. OFF. [Leaning forward a patting her knee] Sorry—sorry.

GIRL. [In a smothered voice] You the first who has been kind to me for long! I will tell you the truth—I am Rooshian at all—I am German.

YOUNG OFF. [Staring] My dear g who cares? We aren't fighting agai women.

GIRL. [Peering at him] Another m said that to me. But he was thinkin his fun. You are a veree ni-ice b I am so glad I met you. You see good in people, don't you? That is first thing in the world—because—th is really not much good in people, know.

YOUNG OFF. [Smiling] You are dreadful little cynic! But of course are!

IRL. Cyneec? How long do you think ould live if I was not a cyneec? I uld drown myself to-morrow. Per- there are good people, but, you I don't know them.

OUNG OFF. I know lots.

IRL. [Leaning towards him] Well —see, ni-ice boy—you haf never in a hole, haf you?

OUNG OFF. I suppose not a real hole.

IRL. No, I should think not, with face. Well, suppose I am still a girl, as I was once, you know; and took me to your mother and your rs and you said: "Here is a little nan girl that has no work, and no ey, and no friends." They will say: ! how sad! A German girl!" And will go and wash their hands.

THE OFFICER is silent, staring at her.

IRL. You see.

OUNG OFF. [Muttering] I'm sure e are people.

IRL. No. They would not take a Ger- , even if she was good. Besides, I t want to be good any more—I am a humbug; I have learned to be bad. n't you going to kees me, ni-ice boy?

[She puts her face close to his. Her eyes trouble him; he draws back.

OUNG OFF. Don't. I'd rather not, if don't mind.

She looks at him fixedly, with a curious inquiring stare.

OUNG OFF. It's stupid. I don't know ou see, out there, and in hospital, s different. It's—it's—it isn't mean, know. Don't come too close.

IRL. Oh! You are fun—— [She s] Eesn't it light? No Zeps to-night. en they burn—what a 'orrible death! all the people cheer. It is natural. you hate us veree much?

OUNG OFF. [Turning sharply] Hate? n't know.

IRL. I don't hate even the English— spise them. I despise my people too; more, because they began this war. I know that. I despise all the peo- Why haf they made the world so rable—why haf they killed all our —hundreds and thousands and mil- of lives—all for noting? They haf e a bad world—everybody hating, and looking for the worst everywhere. They haf made me bad, I know. I believe no more in anything. What is there to believe in? Is there a God? No! Once I was teaching little English children their prayers—isn't that funnee? I was reading to them about Christ and love. I believed all those things. Now I believe noting at all—no one who is not a fool or a liar can believe. I would like to work in a 'ospital; I would like to go and 'elp poor boys like you. Because I am a German they would throw me out a 'undred times, even if I was good. It is the same in Germany, in France, in Rooshia, everywhere. But do you think I will believe in Love and Christ and God and all that—— Not I! I think we are animals—that's all! Oh, yes! you fancy it is because my life has spoiled me. It is not that at all—that is not the worst thing in life. The men I take are not ni-ice, like you, but it's their nature; and —they help me to live, which is something for me, anyway. No, it is the men who think themselves great and good and make the war with their talk and their hate, killing us all—killing all the boys like you, and keeping poor people in prison, and telling us to go on hating; and all these dreadful cold-blooded creatures who write in the papers—the same in my country—just the same; it is because of all of them that I think we are only animals.

The YOUNG OFFICER gets up, acutely miserable. She follows him, with her eyes.

GIRL. Don't mind me talkin', ni-ice boy. I don't know anyone to talk to. If you don't like it, I can be quiet as a mouse.

YOUNG OFF. Oh, go on! Talk away; I'm not obliged to believe you, and I don't.

She, too, is on her feet now, leaning against the wall; her dark dress and white face just touched by the slanting moonlight. Her voice comes again, slow and soft and bitter.

GIRL. Well, look here, ni-ice boy, what sort of world is it, where millions are being tortured, for no fault of theirs, at all? A beautiful world, isn't it? 'Um-bog! Silly rot, as you boys call it. You say it is all "Comrades" and braveness out there at the front, and people don't think of themselves. Well, I don't think of myself veree much. What does it matter? I am lost now, anyway. But I think of my people at 'ome; how they suffer and grieve. I think of all the poor people there, and here, who lose those they love, and all the poor prisoners. Am I not to think of them? And if I do, how am I to believe it a beautiful world, ni-ice boy?

He stands very still, staring at her.

GIRL. Look here! We haf one life each, and soon it is over. Well, I think that is lucky.

YOUNG OFF. No! There's more than that.

GIRL. [Softly] Ah! You think the war is fought for the future; you are giving your lives for a better world, aren't you?

YOUNG OFF. We must fight till we win.

GIRL. Till you win. My people think that too. All the peoples think that if they win the world will be better. But it wil. not, you know; it will be much worse, anyway.

He turns away from her, and catches up his cap. Her voice follows him.

GIRL. I don't care which win. I don't care if my country is beaten. I despise them all—animals—animals. Ah! Don't go! I will be quiet now.

He has taken some notes from his tunic pocket; he puts them on the table and goes up to her.

YOUNG OFF. Good night.

GIRL. [Plaintively] Are you really going? Don't you like me enough?

YOUNG OFF. Yes, I like you.

GIRL. It is because I am German, then?

YOUNG OFF. No.

GIRL. Then why won't you stay?

YOUNG OFF. [With a shrug] If you must know—because you upset me.

GIRL. Won't you kees me once?

He bends, put his lips to her forehead. But as he takes them away she throws her head back, presses her mouth to his, and clings to him.

YOUNG OFF. [Sitting down sudden] Don't! I don't want to feel a brute.

GIRL. [Laughing] You are a fun boy; but you are veree good. Talk me a little, then. No one talks to n Tell me, haf you seen many Germ prisoners?

YOUNG OFF. [Sighing] A good mar

GIRL. Any from the Rhine?

YOUNG OFF. Yes, I think so.

GIRL. Were they veree sad?

YOUNG OFF. Some were; some we quite glad to be taken.

GIRL. Did you ever see the Rhine? will be wonderful to-night. The moo light will be the same there, and Rooshia too, and France, everywher and the trees will look the same as he and people will meet under them a make love just as here. Oh! isn't stupid, the war? As if it were not go to be alive!

YOUNG OFF. You can't tell how go it is to be alive till you're facing dea You don't live till then. And when whole lot of you feel like that—and a ready to give their lives for each oth it's worth all the rest of life put t gether.

He stops, ashamed of such sentime before this girl, who believes nothing.

GIRL. [Softly] How were y wounded, ni-ce boy?

YOUNG OFF. Attacking across op ground; four machine bullets got me one go off.

GIRL. Weren't you veree frighten when they ordered you to attack?

He shakes his head and laughs.

YOUNG OFF. It was great. We d laugh that morning. They got me mu too soon, though—a swindle.

GIRL. [Staring at him] You laughe

YOUNG OFF. Yes. And what do y think was first thing I was conscio of next morning? My old Colonel ben ing over me and giving me a squee of lemon. If you knew my Colonel you still believe in things. There is som thing, you know, behind all this ev After all, you can only die once, and it's for your country—all the better!

Her face, in the moonlight, with i tent eyes touched up with blac has a most strange, other-world look.

GIRL. No; I believe in nothing, not even in my country. My heart is dead.

YOUNG OFF. Yes; you think so, but it isn't, you know, or you wouldn't have been crying when I met you.

GIRL. If it were not dead, do you think I could live my life—walking the streets every night, pretending to like strange men; never hearing a kind word; never talking, for fear I will be known for a German? Soon I shall take to drinking; then I shall be "Kaput" veree quick. You see, I am practical; I see things clear. To-night I am a little emotional; the moon is funny, you know. But I live for myself only, now. I don't care for anything or anybody.

YOUNG OFF. All the same, just now you were pitying your folk at home, and prisoners and that.

GIRL. Yees; because they suffer. Those who suffer are like me—I pity myself, that's all; I am different from your English women. I see what I am doing; I do not let my mind become a turnip just because I am no longer moral.

YOUNG OFF. Nor your heart either, for all you say.

GIRL. Ni-ice boy, you are veree obstinate. But all that about love is embog. We love ourselves, noting more.

At that intense soft bitterness in her voice, he gets up, feeling stifled, and stands at the window. A newspaper boy some way off is calling his wares. The GIRL*'s fingers slip between his own, and stay unmoving. He looks round into her face. In spite of makeup it has a queer, unholy, touching beauty.*

YOUNG OFF. [With an outburst] No; I don't only love ourselves; there is more. I can't explain, but there's something great: there's kindness—and—and——

The shouting of newspaper boys grows louder, and their cries, passionately vehement, clash into each other and obscure each word. His head goes up to listen; her hand tightens within his arm—she too is listening. The cries come nearer, hoarser, more shrill and clamorous; the empty moonlight outside seems suddenly crowded with figures, footsteps, voices, and a fierce distant cheering. "Great victory—great victory! Official! British! 'Eavy Defeat of the 'Uns! Many thousand prisoners! 'Eavy Defeat!" It speeds by, intoxicating; he leans far out, waving his cap and cheering. He turns to rush down into the street, strikes against something soft, and recoils. The GIRL stands with hands clenched, and face convulsed, panting. All confused with the desire to do something, he stoops to kiss her hand. She snatches away her fingers, sweeps up the notes he has put down, and holds them out to him.

GIRL. Take them—I will not haf your English money—take them.

Suddenly she tears them across, lets the bits flutter to the floor, and turns her back on him. He stands looking at her leaning against the plush-covered table, her head down, a dark figure in a dark room, with the moonlight sharpening her outline. Hardly a moment he stays, then makes for the door. When he is gone, she still stands there, her chin on her breast, with the sound in her ears of cheering, of hurrying feet, and voices crying: "'Eavy Defeat!" stands in the centre of a pattern made by the fragments of the torn-up notes, staring out into the moonlight, seeing not this hated room and the hated Square outside, but a German orchard, and herself, a little girl, plucking apples, a big dog beside her; and a hundred other pictures, such as the drowning see. Then she sinks down on the floor, lays her forehead on the dusty carpet, and presses her body to it. Mechanically, she sweeps together the scattered fragments of notes, assembling them with the dust into a little pile, as of fallen leaves, and dabbling in it with her fin- gers, while the tears run down her cheeks.

GIRL. Defeat! Das Vaterland Defeat! . . . One shillin'!

Then suddenly, in the moonlight, she sits up, and begins to sing wit all her might: "Die Wacht a Rhein." And outside men pas singing: "Rule, Britannia!"

THE SUN

A SCENE

The Girl sits crouched over her knees on a stile close to a river. A Man with a silver badge stands beside her, clutching the worn top plank. The Girl's level brows are drawn together; her eyes see her memories. The Man's eyes see The Girl; he has a dark, twisted face. The bright sun shines; the quiet river flows, the cuckoo is calling; the mayflower is in bloom along the hedge that ends in the stile on the towing-path.

The Girl. God knows what 'e'll say, im.

The Man. Let 'im. 'E's come too ite, that's all.

The Girl. He couldn't come before. m frightened. 'E was fond o' me.

The Man. And aren't I fond of you?

The Girl. I ought to 'a waited, Jim; ith 'im in the fightin'.

The Man. [Passionately] And what bout me? Aren't I been in the fightin' earned all I could get?

The Girl. [Touching him] Ah!

The Man. Did you——?

[He cannot speak the words.

The Girl. Not like you, Jim—not like ou.

The Man. Have a spirit, then.

The Girl. I promised him.

The Man. One man's luck's another's oison.

The Girl. I ought to 'a waited. I ever thought he'd come back from the ghtin'.

The Man. [Grimly] Maybe 'e'd better ot 'ave.

The Girl. [Looking back along the ow-path] What'll he be like, I won- er?

The Man. [Gripping her shoulder] aisy, don't you never go back on me, or should kill you, and 'im too.

The Girl looks at him, shivers, and puts her lips to his.

The Girl. I never could.

The Man. Will you run for it? 'E'd never find us.

The Girl shakes her head.

The Man. [Dully] What's the good o' stayin'? The world's wide.

The Girl. I'd rather have it off me mind, with him home.

The Man. [Clenching his hands] It's temptin' Providence.

The Girl. What's the time, Jim?

The Man. [Glancing at the sun] 'Alf past four.

The Girl. [Looking along the towing-path] He said four o'clock. Jim, you better go.

The Man. Not I. I've not got the wind up. I've seen as much of hell as he l. ., any day. What like is he?

The Girl. [Dully] I dunno, just. I've not seen him these three years. I dunno no more, since I've known you.

The Man. Big or little chap?

The Girl. 'Bout your size. Oh! Jim, go along!

The Man. No fear! What's a blighter like that to old Fritz's shells? We didn't shift when they was comin'. If you'll go, I'll go; not else.

Again she shakes her head.

The Girl. Jim, do you love me true?

For answer The Man takes her avidly in his arms.

The Girl. I ain't ashamed—I ain't ashamed. If 'e could see me 'eart.

The Man. Daisy! If I'd known you out there, I never could 'a stuck it. They'd 'a got me for a deserter. That's how I love you!

The Girl. Jim, don't lift your hand to 'im! Promise!

The Man. That's according.

The Girl. Promise!

THE MAN. If 'e keeps quiet, I won't. But I'm not accountable—not always, I tell you straight—not since I've been through that.

THE GIRL. [With a shiver] Nor p'raps he isn't.

THE MAN. Like as not. It takes the linch pins out, I tell you.

THE GIRL. God 'elp us!

THE MAN. [Grimly] Ah! We said that a bit too often. What we want we take, now; there's no one else to give it us, and there's no fear'll stop us; we seen the bottom of things.

THE GIRL. P'raps he'll say that too.

THE MAN. Then it'll be 'im or me.

THE GIRL. I'm frightened.

THE MAN. [Tenderly] No, Daisy, no! The river's handy. One more or less. 'E shan't 'arm you; nor me neither.

[He takes out a knife.

THE GIRL. [Seizing his hand] Oh, no! Give it to me, Jim!

THE MAN. [Smiling] No fear! [He puts it away] Shan't 'ave no need for it like as not. All right, little Daisy; you can't be expected to see things like what we do. What's life, anyway? I've seen a thousand lives taken in five minutes. I've seen dead men on the wires like flies on a flypaper. I've been as good as dead meself a hundred times. I've killed a dozen men. It's nothin'. He's safe, if 'e don't get my blood up. If he does, nobody's safe; not 'im, nor anybody else; not even you. I'm speakin' sober.

THE GIRL. [Softly] Jim, you won't go fightin' in the sun, with the birds all callin'?

THE MAN. That depends on 'im. I'm not lookin' for it. Daisy, I love you. I love your hair. I love your eyes. I love you.

THE GIRL. And I love you, Jim. I don't want nothin' more than you in all the world.

THE MAN. Amen to that, my dear. Kiss me close!

The sound of a voice singing breaks in on their embrace. THE GIRL starts from his arms, and looks behind her along the towing-path. THE MAN draws back against the hedge, fingering his side, where the knife is hidden. The song comes nearer:

"I'll be right there to-night,
Where the fields are snowy white;
Banjos ringing, darkies singing,
All the world seems bright."

THE GIRL. It's him!

THE MAN. Don't get the wind up Daisy. I'm here!

The singing stops. A man's voice says: "Christ! It's Daisy; it's little Daisy 'erself!" THE GIRL stands rigid. The figure of a soldier appears on the other side of the stile. His cap is tucked into his belt, his hair is bright in the sunshine; he is lean, wasted brown, and laughing.

SOLDIER. Daisy! Daisy! Hallo, old pretty girl!

THE GIRL does not move, barring the way, as it were.

THE GIRL. Hallo, Jack! [Softly] I got things to tell you!

SOLDIER. What sort o' things, this lovely day? Why, I got things that'd take me years to tell. Have you missed me Daisy?

THE GIRL. You been so long.

SOLDIER. So I 'ave. My Gawd! It's a way they 'ave in the Army. I said when I got out of it I'd laugh. Like as the sun itself I used to think of you, Daisy, when the crumps was comin' over, and the wind was up. D'you remember that last night in the wood? "Come back and marry me quick, Jack." Well, here I am—got me pass to heaven. No more fightin' no more drillin', no more sleepin rough. We can get married now, Daisy. We can live soft an' 'appy. Give us a kiss, my dear.

THE GIRL. [Drawing back] No.

SOLDIER. [Blankly] Why not?

THE MAN, with a swift movement steps along the hedge to THE GIRL'S side.

THE MAN. That's why, soldier.

SOLDIER. [Leaping over the stile] 'Oo are you, Pompey? The sun don't shine in your inside, do it? 'Oo is he, Daisy?

THE GIRL. My man.

SOLDIER. Your—man! Lummy! "Taffy was a Welshman, Taffy was a thief!"

Well, mate! So you've been through it, oo. I'm laughin' this mornin' as luck vill 'ave it. Ah! I can see your knife.

THE MAN. [Who has half drawn his nife] Don't laugh at me, I tell you.

SOLDIER. Not at you, not at you. [He ooks from one to the other] I'm laughin' t things in general. Where did you get , mate?

THE MAN. [Watchfully] Through the ng.

SOLDIER. Think o' that! An' I never as touched. Four years an' never was ouched. An' so you've come an' took my irl! Nothin' doin'! Ha! [Again he ooks from one to the other—then away] Vell! The world's before me! [He ughs] I'll give you Daisy for a lung rotector.

THE MAN. [Fiercely] You won't. I've ook her.

SOLDIER. That's all right, then. You eep 'er. I've got a laugh in me you can't ut out, black as you look! Good-bye, ttle Daisy!

THE GIRL makes a movement towards him.

THE MAN. Don't touch 'im!

THE GIRL stands hesitating, and suddenly bursts into tears.

SOLDIER. Look 'ere, mate; shake 'ands! don't want to see a girl cry, this day f all, with the sun shinin'. I seen too nuch of sorrer. You and me've been at ne back of it. We've 'ad our whack. Shake!

THE MAN. Who are you kiddin'? You ever loved 'er!

SOLDIER. [After a long moment's ause] Oh! I thought I did.

THE MAN. I'll fight you for her.

[He drops his knife.

SOLDIER. [Slowly] Mate, you done your bit, an' I done mine. It's took us two ways, seemin'ly.

THE GIRL. [Pleading] Jim!

THE MAN. [With clenched fists] I don't want 'is charity. I only want what I can take.

SOLDIER. Daisy, which of us will you 'ave?

THE GIRL. [Covering her face] Oh! Him!

SOLDIER. You see, mate! Put your 'ands down. There's nothin' for it but a laugh. You an' me know that. Laugh, mate!

THE MAN. You blarsted——!

THE GIRL springs to him and stops his mouth.

SOLDIER. It's no use, mate. I can't do it. I said I'd laugh to-day, and laugh I will. I've come through that, an' all the stink of it; I've come through sorrer. Never again! Cheerio, mate! The sun's a-shinin'! [He turns away.

THE GIRL. Jack, don't think too 'ard of me!

SOLDIER. [Looking back] No fear, my dear! Enjoy your fancy! So long! Gawd bless you both!

[He sings, and goes along the path, and the song:

"I'll be right there to-night
Where the fields are snowy white;
Banjos ringing, darkies singing—
All the world seems bright!"

fades away.

THE MAN. 'E's mad.

THE GIRL. [Looking down the path with her hands clasped] The sun has touched 'im, Jim!

SCENE: The stage of a theatre

PUNCH AND GO

A LITTLE COMEDY

"Orpheus with his lute made trees
And the mountain tops that freeze. . . ."

Action continuous, though the curtain is momentarily lowered according to that action.

The Scene is the stage of the theatre set for the dress rehearsal of the little play: "Orpheus with his Lute." The curtain is up and the audience though present, is not supposed to be. The set scene represents the end section of a room, with wide French windows, Back Centre, fully opened on to an apple orchard in bloom. The Back Wall with these French windows, is set only a few feet from the footlights, and the rest of the stage is orchard. What is visible of the room would indicate the study of a writing man of culture. In the wall, Stage Left, is a curtained opening, across which the curtain is half drawn. Stage Right of the French windows is a large armchair turned rather towards the window, with a book rest attached, on which is a volume of the Encyclopedia Britannica, while on a stool alongside are writing materials such as a man requires when he writes with a pad on his knees. On a little table close by is a reading-lamp with a dark green shade. A crude light from the floats makes the stage stare; the only person on it is* MR. FORESON, the stage manager, who is standing in the centre looking upwards as if waiting for someone to speak. He is a short, broad man, rather blank, and fatal. From the back of the auditorium, or from an empty box, whichever is most convenient, the producer, MR. BLEWITT VANE, a man of about thirty-four, with his hair brushed back, speaks.

VANE. Mr. Foreson?

FORESON. Sir?

VANE. We'll do that lighting again.

FORESON walks straight off the stage into the wings Right. A pause.

VANE. Mr. Foreson! [Crescendo] Mr. Foreson.

FORESON walks on again from Right and shades his eyes.

VANE. For goodness sake, stand by! We'll do that lighting again. Check your floats.

FORESON. [Speaking up into the prompt wings] Electrics!

VOICE OF ELECTRICS. Hallo!

FORESON. Give it us again. Check your floats.

The floats go down, and there is a sudden blinding glare of blue lights, in which FORESON looks particularly ghastly.

VANE. Great Scott! What the blazes! Mr. Foreson!

VANE. [Crescendo] Mr. Foreson!

FORESON. [Re-appearing] Sir?

VANE. Tell Miller to come down.

FORESON. Electrics! Mr. Vane wants to speak to you. Come down!

VANE. Tell Herbert to sit in that chair.

* NOTE.—If found advantageous for scenic purposes, the section of room can be changed to a broad verandah or porch with pillars supporting its roof.

FORESON walks straight out into the Right wings.

VANE. Mr. Foreson!

FORESON. [Re-appearing] Sir?

VANE. Don't go off the stage.

ELECTRICS. Yes, Mr. Vane?

VANE. Look!

ELECTRICS. That's what I'd got marked, Mr. Vane.

VANE. Once for all, what I want is the orchard in full moonlight, and the room dark except for the reading-lamp. Cut off your front battens.

ELECTRICS withdraws Left. FORESON walks off the stage into the Rig't wings.

VANE. Mr. Foreson!

FORESON. [Re-appearing] Sir?

VANE. See this marked right. Now, come on with it! I want to get some beauty into this!

While he is speaking, HERBERT, the call boy, appears from the wings Right, a mercurial youth of about sixteen with a wide mouth.

FORESON. [Maliciously] Here you are, then, Mr. Vane. Herbert, sit in that chair.

HERBERT sits in the armchair, with an air of perfect peace.

VANE. Now! [All the lights go out. In a wail] Great Scott!

A throaty chuckle from FORESON in the darkness. The light dances up, flickers, shifts, grows steady, falling on the orchard outside. The reading lamp darts alight and a piercing little glare from it strikes into the auditorium away from HERBERT.

VANE. [In a terrible voice] Mr. Foreson.

FORESON. Sir?

VANE. Look—at—that—shade!

FORESON mutters, walks up to it and turns it round so that the light shines on HERBERT'S legs.

VANE. On his face, on his face!

FORESON turns the light accordingly.

FORESON. Is that what you want, Mr Vane?

VANE. Yes. Now, mark that!

FORESON. [Up into wings Right] Electrics!

ELECTRICS. Hallo!

FORESON. Mark that!

The blue suddenly becomes amber

VANE. My God!

The blue returns. All is steady. HERBERT is seen diverting himself with an imaginary cigar.

VANE. Mr. Foreson.

FORESON. Sir?

VANE. Ask him if he's got that?

FORESON. Have you got that?

ELECTRICS. Yes.

VANE. Now pass to the change. Take your floats off altogether.

FORESON. [Calling up] Floats out.

[They go out.

VANE. Cut off that lamp. [The lamp goes out] Put a little amber in your back batten. Mark that! Now pass to the end, Mr. Foreson.

FORESON. Sir?

VANE. Black out!

FORESON. [Calling up] Black out!

The lights go out.

VANE. Give us your first lighting—lamp on. And then the two changes. Quick as you can. Put some pep into it. Mr. Foreson!

FORESON. Sir?

VANE. Stand for me where Miss Hellgrove comes in.

FORESON crosses to the window.

VANE. No, no!—by the curtain.

FORESON takes his stand by the curtain; and suddenly the three lighting effects are rendered quickly and with miraculous exactness.

VANE. Good! Leave it at that. We'll begin. Mr. Foreson, send up to Mr Frust.

He moves from the auditorium and ascends on to the stage, by some steps stage Right.

FORESON. Herb! Call the boss, and tell beginners to stand by. Sharp, now!

HERBERT gets out of the chair, and goes off Right.

VANE. Mr. Foreson.

FORESON. [Re-appearing] Sir?

VANE. I want Props.

FORESON. [In a stentorian voice] Props!

A rather moth-eaten man appears through the French windows.

VANE. Is that boulder firm?

PROPS. [Going to where, in front of the back-cloth, and apparently among the apple trees, lies the counterfeitment of a mossy boulder; he puts his foot on it] If you don't put too much weight on it, sir.

VANE. It won't creak?

PROPS. Nao.

[He mounts on it, and a dolorous creaking arises.

VANE. Make that right. Let me see that lute.

PROPS produces a property lute.

While they scrutinise it, a broad man with broad leathery clean-shaven face and small mouth, occupied by the butt end of a cigar, has come on to the stage from stage Left, and stands waiting to be noticed.

PROPS. [Attracted by the scent of the cigar] The Boss, sir.

VANE. [Turning to PROPS] That'll do, then.

PROPS goes out through the French windows.

VANE. [To FRUST] Now, sir, we're all ready for rehearsal of "Orpheus with his Lute."

FRUST. [In a Cosmopolitan voice] Orphoos with his loot!" That his loot, sir. Vane? Why didn't he pinch something more precious? Has this high-brow curtain-raiser of yours got any "ep" in it?

VANE. It has charm.

FRUST. I'd thought of "Pop goes the Weasel" with little Miggs. We kind of want a cocktail before "Louisa Loses," sir. Vane.

VANE. Well, sir, you'll see.

FRUST. This your lighting? It's a bit off the spiritool side. I've left my glasses. Unless I'll sit in the front row. Ha'f a minute. Who plays this Orphoos?

VANE. George Fleetway.

FRUST. Has he got punch?

VANE. It's a very small part.

FRUST. Who are the others?

VANE. Guy Toone plays the Professor; Vanessa Hellgrove his wife; Maude Hopkins the faun.

FRUST. H'm! Names don't draw.

VANE. They're not expensive, any of them. Miss Hellgrove's a find, I think.

FRUST. Pretty?

VANE. Quite.

FRUST. Arty?

VANE. [Doubtfully] No. [With resolution] Look here, Mr. Frust, it's no use your expecting another "Pop goes the Weasel."

FRUST. We-ell, if it's got punch and go, that'll be enough for me. Let's get to it!

He extinguishes his cigar and descends the steps and sits in the centre of the front row of the stalls.

VANE. Mr. Foreson?

FORESON. [Appearing through curtain, Right] Sir?

VANE. Beginners. Take your curtain down.

He descends the steps and seats himself next to FRUST. The curtain goes down.

A woman's voice is heard singing very beautifully Sullivan's song: "Orpheus with his lute, with his lute made trees and the mountain tops that freeze," etc.

FRUST. Some voice!

The curtain rises.

In the armchair the PROFESSOR is yawning, tall, thin, abstracted, and slightly grizzled in the hair. He has a pad of paper on his knee, ink on the stool to his right and the Encyclopedia volume on the stand to his left—barricaded in fact by the article he is writing. He is reading a page over to himself, but the words are drowned in the sound of the song his wife is singing in the next room, partly screened off by the curtain. She finishes, and stops. His voice can then be heard conning the words of his article.

PROFESSOR. "Orpheus symbolised the voice of Beauty, the call of life, luring us mortals with his song back from the graves we dig for ourselves. Probably the ancients realised this neither more nor less than we moderns. Mankind has not changed. The civilised being still hides the faun and the dryad within its broadcloth and its silk. And yet——" [He stops, with a dried-up air—rather impatiently] Go on, my dear! It helps the atmosphere.

The voice of his wife begins again, gets as far as "made them sing" and stops dead, just as the PROFESSOR'S pen is beginning to scratch. And suddenly, drawing the curtain further aside,

SHE appears—much younger than the PROFESSOR, pale, very pretty, of a Botticellian type in face, figure, and in her clinging cream-coloured frock. She gazes at her abstracted husband; then swiftly moves to the lintel of the open window, and stands looking out.

THE WIFE. God! What beauty!

PROFESSOR. [Looking up] Umm?

THE WIFE. I said: God! What beauty!

PROFESSOR. Aha!

THE WIFE. [Looking at him] Do you know that I have to repeat everything to you nowadays?

PROFESSOR. What!

THE WIFE. That I have to repeat——

PROFESSOR. Yes; I heard. I'm sorry. I get absorbed.

THE WIFE. In all but me.

PROFESSOR. [Startled] My dear, your song was helping me like anything to get the mood. This paper is the very deuce—to balance between the historical and the natural.

THE WIFE. Who wants the natural?

PROFESSOR. [Grumbling] Ummm! Wish I thought that! Modern taste! History may go hang; they're all for tuppence-coloured sentiment nowadays.

THE WIFE. [As if to herself] Is the Spring sentiment?

PROFESSOR. I beg your pardon, my dear; I didn't catch.

WIFE. [As if against her will—urged by some pent-up force] Beauty, beauty!

PROFESSOR. That's what I'm trying to say here. The Orpheus legend symbolises to this day the call of Beauty! [He takes up his pen, while she continues to stare out at the moonlight. Yawning] Dash it! I get so sleepy; I wish you'd tell them to make the after-dinner coffee twice as strong.

WIFE. I will.

PROFESSOR. How does this strike you! [Conning] "Many Renaissance pictures especially those of Botticelli, Francesca and Piero di Cosimo were inspired by such legends as that of Orpheus, and we owe a tiny gem-like Raphael 'Apollo and Marsyas' to the same Pagan inspiration."

WIFE. We owe it more than that—rebellion against the dry-as-dust.

PROFESSOR. Quite! I might develop that: "We owe it our revolt against the academic; our disgust at 'big business,' and all the grossness of commercial success. We owe——" [His voice peters out.

WIFE. It—love.

PROFESSOR. [Abstracted] Eh?

WIFE. I said: We owe it love.

PROFESSOR. [Rather startled] Possibly. But—er—[With a dry smile] I mustn't say that here—hardly!

WIFE. [To herself and the moonlight] Orpheus with his lute!

PROFESSOR. Most people think a lute is a sort of flute. [Yawning heavily] My dear, if you're not going to sing again, d'you mind sitting down? I want to concentrate.

WIFE. I'm going out.

PROFESSOR. Mind the dew!

WIFE. The Christian virtues and the dew.

PROFESSOR. [With a little dry laugh] Not bad! Not bad! The Christian virtues and the dew. [His hand takes up his pen, his face droops over his paper, while his wife looks at him with a very strange face] "How far we can trace the modern resurgence against the Christian virtues to the symbolic figures of Orpheus, Pan, Apollo, and Bacchus might be difficult to estimate, but——"

During those words his WIFE has passed through the window into the moonlight, and her voice rises, singing as she goes: "Orpheus with his lute, with his lute made trees . . ."

PROFESSOR. [Suddenly aware of something] She'll get her throat bad.

[He is silent as the voice swells in the distance] Sounds queer at night—— H'm!

He is silent—Yawning. The voice dies away. Suddenly his head nods; he fights his drowsiness; writes a word or two, nods again, and in twenty seconds is asleep.

The Stage is darkened by a black-out. FRUST'S voice is heard speaking.

FRUST. What's that girl's name?

VANE. Vanessa Hellgrove.

FRUST. Aha!

The stage is lighted up again. Moonlight bright on the orchard; the room in darkness where the PROFESSOR'S figure is just visible sleeping in the chair, and screwed a little more round towards the window. From behind the mossy boulder a faun-like figure uncurls itself and peeps over with ears standing up and elbows leaning on the stone, playing a rustic pipe; and there are seen two rabbits and a fox sitting up and listening. A shiver of wind passes, blowing petals from the apple-trees.

The FAUN darts his head towards where, from Right, comes slowly the figure of a Greek youth, holding a lute or lyre which his fingers strike, lifting out little wandering strains as of wind whinnying in funnels and odd corners. The FAUN darts down behind the stone, and the youth stands by the boulder playing his lute. Slowly, while he plays, the whitened trunk of an apple-tree is seen to dissolve into the body of a girl with bare arms and feet, her dark hair unbound, and the face of the PROFESSOR'S WIFE. Hypnotised, she slowly sways towards him, their eyes fixed on each other, till she is quite close. Her arms go out to him, cling round his neck, and their lips meet. But as they meet there comes a gasp and the PROFESSOR with rumpled hair is seen starting from his chair, his hands thrown up; and at his horrified "Oh!" the stage is darkened with a black-out.

The voice of FRUST is heard speaking.

FRUST. Gee!

The stage is lighted up again, as in the opening scene. The PROFESSOR is seen in his chair, with split sheets of paper round him waking from a dream. He shakes himself, pinches his leg, stares heavily round into the moonlight, rises.

PROFESSOR. Phew! Beastly dream! Boof! H'm! [He moves to the window and calls] Blanche! Blanche! [To himself] Made trees—made trees! [Calling] Blanche!

WIFE'S VOICE. Yes.

PROFESSOR. Where are you?

WIFE. [Appearing by the stone with her hair down] Here!

PROFESSOR. I say—I—I've been asleep—had a dream. Come in. I'll tell you.

She comes, and they stand in the window.

PROFESSOR. I dreamed I saw a—faun on that boulder blowing on a pipe. [He looks nervously at the stone] With two damned little rabbits and a fox sitting up and listening. And then from out there came our friend Orpheus playing on his confounded lute, till he actually turned that tree there into you. And gradually he—he drew you like a snake till you—er—put your arms round his neck and —er—kissed him. Boof! I woke up. Most unpleasant. Why! Your hair's down!

WIFE. Yes.

PROFESSOR. Why?

WIFE. It was no dream. He was bringing me to life.

PROFESSOR. What on earth——?

WIFE. Do you suppose I am alive? I'm as dead as Eurydice.

PROFESSOR. Good heavens, Blanche, what's the matter with you to-night?

WIFE. [Pointing to the litter of papers] Why don't we live, instead of writing of it? [She points out into the moonlight] What do we get out of life? Money, fame, fashion, talk, learning? Yes. And what good are they? I want to live!

PROFESSOR. [Helplessly] My dear, I really don't know what you mean.

WIFE. [Pointing out into the moonlight] Look! Orpheus with his lute, and nobody can see him. Beauty, beauty, beauty—we let it go. [With sudden passion] Beauty, love, the spring. They should be in us, and they're all outside.

PROFESSOR. My dear, this is—this is—awful. [He tries to embrace her.

WIFE. [Avoiding him—in a stilly voice] Oh! Go on with your writing!

PROFESSOR. I'm—I'm upset. I've never known you so—so——

WIFE. Hysterical? Well! It's over. I'll go and sing.

PROFESSOR. [Soothingly] There, there! I'm sorry, darling; I really am. You're hipped—you're hipped. [He gives and she accepts a kiss] Better? [He gravitates towards his papers] All right, now?

WIFE. [Standing still and looking at him] Quite!

PROFESSOR. Well, I'll try and finish this to-night; then, to-morrow we might have a jaunt. How about a theatre? There's a thing—they say—called "Chinese Chops," that's been running years.

WIFE. [Softly to herself as he settles down into his chair] Oh! God!

While he takes up a sheet of paper and adjusts himself, she stands at the window staring with all her might at the boulder, till from behind it the faun's head and shoulders emerge once more.

PROFESSOR. Very queer the power suggestion has over the mind. Very queer! There's nothing really in animism, you know, except the curious shapes rocks, trees and things take in certain lights—effect they have on our imagination. [He looks up] What's the matter now?

WIFE. [Startled] Nothing! Nothing!

Her eyes waver to him again, and the FAUN vanishes. She turns again to look at the boulder; there is nothing there; a little shiver of wind blows some petals off the trees. She catches one of them, and turning quickly, goes out through the curtain.

PROFESSOR. [Coming to himself and writing] "The Orpheus legend is the—er—apotheosis of animism. Can we accept——"

His voice is lost in the sound of h

WIFE'S voice beginning again "Orpheus with his lute—with hi lute made trees——" It dies in sob. The PROFESSOR looks u startled, as the curtain falls.

FRUST. Fine! Fine!

VANE. Take up the curtain. Mr. Fore son?

The curtain goes up.

FORESON. Sir?

VANE. Everybody on.

He and FRUST leave their seat and ascend on to the stage, o which are collecting the fou Players.

VANE. Give us some light.

FORESON. Electrics! Turn up you floats!

The footlights go up, and the blu goes out; the light is crude as a the beginning.

FRUST. I'd like to meet Miss Hell grove.

She comes forward eagerly and tim idly. He grasps her hand.

FRUST. Miss Hellgrove, I want to sa I thought that fine—fine.

Her evident emotion and pleasur warm him so that he increases hi grasp and commendation.

FRUST. Fine. It quite got my sof spots. Emotional. Fine!

MISS H. Oh! Mr. Frust; it means s much to me. Thank you!

FRUST. [A little balder in the eye, an losing warmth] Er—fine! [His eye wan ers] Where's Mr. Flatway?

VANE. Fleetway.

FLEETWAY comes up.

FRUST. Mr. Fleetway, I want to say I thought your Orphoos very remarkable Fine.

FLEETWAY. Thank you, sir, indeed—s glad you liked it.

FRUST. [A little balder in the eye] There wasn't much to it, but what there was was fine. Mr. Toone.

FLEETWAY melts out and TOONE i precipitated.

FRUST. Mr. Toone, I was very pleased with your Professor—quite a character-study.

TOONE bows and murmurs.

FRUST. Yes, sir! I thought it fine. His eye grows bald] Who plays the at?

MISS HOPK. [Appearing suddenly be- ween the windows] I play the faun, Mr. ust.

FORESON. [Introducing] Miss Maude pkins.

FRUST. Miss Hopkins, I guess your vn was fine.

MISS HOPK. Oh! Thank you, Mr. ust. How nice of you to say so. I do enjoy playing him.

FRUST. [His eye growing bald] Mr. reson, I thought the way you fixed t tree was very cunning; I certainly . Got a match?

He takes a match from FORESON, and lighting a very long cigar, walks up stage through the French windows followed by FORESON, and examines the apple-tree.

The two Actors depart, but MISS HELLGROVE runs from where she has been lingering, by the curtain, to VANE, stage Right.

Miss H. Oh! Mr. Vane—do you ık? He seemed quite—— Oh! Mr. ne [Ecstatically] If only——

'ANE. [Pleased and happy] Yes, yes. right—you were splendid. He liked He quite——

Miss H. [Clasping her hands] How derful! Oh, Mr. Vane, thank !

She clasps his hands; but suddenly, seeing that FRUST is coming back, flits across to the curtain and vanishes.

The stage, in the crude light, is empty now save for FRUST, who, in the French windows, Centre, is mumbling his cigar; and VANE, stage Right, who is looking up into the wings, stage Left.

ANE. [Calling up] That lighting's right now, Miller. Got it marked fully?

ECTRICS. Yes, Mr. Vane.

ANE. Good. [To FRUST who is com- down] Well, sir? So glad——

RUST. Mr. Vane, we got little Miggs ontract?

VANE. Yes.

FRUST. Well, I liked that little pocket piece fine. But I'm blamed if I know what it's all about.

VANE. [A little staggered] Why! Of course it's a little allegory. The tragedy of civilisation—all real feeling for Beauty and Nature kept out, or pent up even in the cultured.

FRUST. Ye-ep. [Meditatively] Little Miggs'd be fine in "Pop goes the Wea-sel."

VANE. Yes, he'd be all right, but——

FRUST. Get him on the 'phone, and put it into rehearsal right now.

VANE. What! But this piece—I—I ——!

FRUST. Guess we can't take liberties with our public, Mr. Vane. They want pep.

VANE. [Distressed] But it'll break that girl's heart. I—really—I can't——

FRUST. Give her the part of the 'tweeny in "Pop goes."

VANE. Mr. Frust, I—I beg. I've taken a lot of trouble with this little play. It's good. It's that girl's chance—and I——

FRUST. We-ell! I certainly thought she was fine. Now, you 'phone up Miggs, and get right along with it. I've only one rule, sir! Give the Public what it wants, and what the Public wants is punch and go. They've got no use for Beauty, Allegory, all that high-brow racket. I know 'em as I know my hand.

During this speech MISS HELLGROVE is seen listening by the French window, in distress, unnoticed by either of them.

VANE. Mr. Frust, the Public would take this, I'm sure they would; I'm convinced of it. You underrate them.

FRUST. Now, see here, Mr. Blewitt Vane, is this my theatre? I tell you, I can't afford luxuries.

VANE. But it—it moved you, sir; I saw it. I was watching.

FRUST. [With unmoved finality] Mr. Vane, I judge I'm not the average man. Before "Louisa Loses" the Public'll want a stimulant. "Pop goes the Weasel" will suit us fine. So—get right along with it. I'll go get some lunch.

As he vanishes into the wings, Left, MISS HELLGROVE covers her face with her hands. A little sob escaping her attracts VANE'S attention. He takes a step towards her, but she flies.

VANE. [Dashing his hands through his hair till it stands up] Damnation!

FORESON walks on from the wings, Right.

FORESON. Sir?

VANE. "Punch and go!" That superstition!

FORESON walks straight out into the wings, Left.

VANE. Mr. Foreson!

FORESON. [Re-appearing] Sir?

VANE. This is scrapped. [With savagery] Tell 'em to set the first act of "Louisa Loses," and put some pep in it.

He goes out through the Fren windows with the wind still in hair.

FORESON. [In the centre of the stag Electrics!

ELECTRICS. Hallo!

FORESON. Where's Charlie?

ELECTRICS. Gone to his dinner.

FORESON. Anybody on the c tain?

A VOICE. Yes, Mr. Foreson.

FORESON. Put your curtain down.

He stands in the centre of the sta with eyes uplifted as the curt descends.
